It must have been gratifying to the great violinist to receive the kind of an ovation which marked his appearance on the stage. His tremendous mastery of his art, rich maturity, tonal beauty and technical freedom were never better demonstrated than in his magnificent performance of Tschaikowsky's "Concerto" which has long been associated with his career. Mitropoulos, and the members of the orchestra, evidently stirred by the significance of the occasion, gave a splendid accompaniment.

Dimitri Shostakovich has long been a figure of importance and controversy at home and abroad. To many musicians, the composer of the First and Fifth Symphonies is a man of genius. The Tenth carried the same conviction to many of his listeners in spite of the feeling that the first movement, Moderato, was too long. By way of contrast, the second, Allegro in Scherzo mood, was extremely short. The third, Allegretto — Largo — Allegretto — is the cream of the entire work, and if the Andante — Allegro seems somewhat long, it may be because of the bulk carried by the first movement. The work is definitely mature in spirit, workmanship and artistry. Another praiseworthy point is its freshness and originality, that is, Shostakovich has escaped from certain characteristic patterns that have had the effect of cliches in some of his works. The Symphony will stand frequent repetitions in order for its listeners to get down to bedrock in what this Soviet composer really has to offer. Mitropoulos gave it devoted care and a brilliant interpretation for which his many admirers may well be grateful. He opened the program with Kabalevsky's "Overture Colas Bruegnon".

Shostakovich's Latest Symphony

By JOHN D. MOLLESON

Dmitri Shostakovich's tenth and latest symphony, Op. 93, has been swiftly recorded and is available in two versions by two fine orchestras within a year of its world premiere.

Listeners will decide if it deserves such immediate attention. Baptismal hearings of the two disks indicate that the work will wear well. Though it is not instantly captivating, and is occasionally dreary, it has power and a commanding stature and it seems to improve with repeated listening.

The symphony is well played in both recordings. One of them, the Concert Hall release ($5.95), presents the orchestra and conductor who introduced the work in Russia: the Leningrad Philharmonic and Eugene Mravinsky. The Columbia recording ($5.95) is by Dimitri Mitropolous and the New York Philharmonic, the musicians who gave the music its American premiere, on Oct. 14, in Carnegie Hall.

From the standpoint of musical interest, the Russian version seems superior. More color is extracted from the instruments, particularly from the remarkable Leningrad woodwinds and brasses. The Russian conductor, perhaps because the composer was at hand, appears to have a keener grasp of the moods of the score. Mr. Mitropolous turns in a splendid performance, but he and his musicians do not match the Russians in capturing the symphony's flavor and bite.

The sound of the Russian orchestra, imported on a Leeds magnetic tape, compares well with the fine engineering of the Columbia disk. The symphony has been praised in Russia, but has also been condemned as impulsive, irritating, negative and "remote from the feelings and emotions of the overwhelming majority of the Russian people." Not every one will like it here either, but it is solid and serious music, persuasively performed.

Symphony No. 29 (K. 201) .....Mozart

The Philharmonic Chamber Ensemble opened its fourth season on Saturday night, when it gave the first of three concerts it is presenting at the Lexington Avenue Young Men's and Young Women's Hebrew Association. To see that the series got off to a good start, twenty-eight members of the New York Philharmonic-Symphony, including the conductor, Dimitri Mitropoulos, took part.

Following its custom, the ensemble presented a program of unconventionally scored works that called for varying numbers of performers and gave different artists a chance to show what they could do with leading parts. It began with a Milhaud work for three performers and ended with Mozart's Symphony No. 29, which had twenty-three instrumentalists. In between came an octet and two types of quintets.

Drucker Plays with Skill

The member of the orchestra who got the greatest chance to shine was the clarinetist, Stanley Drucker, who joined the Philharmonic six years ago, when he was only 19 years old. The former "baby" of the orchestra was the clarinetist in Weber's Quintet for Clarinet and Strings, and shine he did. The work is an adorable one and Mr. Drucker played the difficult clarinet part with musicianship, gusto and skill. The applause was so demanding that he had to take two solo bows, in addition to those he took with the string players in the quintet.

The other quintet of the evening was a première—Quinete for Winds by Josef Alexander, a twenty-three-minute work for flute, clarinet, oboe, bassoon and horn. It had its fair share of brief ideas, but the tonal texture was thick and one section was hardly to be distinguished from another. Because on first hearing it did not seem very coherent, its length began to make it tedious. The audience was cordial, though, and called the composer to his feet to acknowledge its applause.

Mr. Mitropoulos led the works that needed the greatest number of performers, the Two Pieces for String Octet of Shostakovich, and the Mozart symphony. His men were on their mettle and they played with the same care and skill in these larger ensemble works as they did in the smaller ones. One came away with a fresh sense of how many excellent individual musicians there are in the big orchestra, which is one of the city's major prides.

Philharmonic Premiere

By Francis D. Perkins

Both a premiere and a debut were features of yesterday afternoon's concert of the Philharmonic - symphony Orchestra in Carnegie Hall, where Roy Harris' "Symphonic Epigram" opened the program under Dimitri Mitropoulos' direction. Van Cliburn, winner of this year's Leventritt Foundation award, made his first New York public appearance as soloist in Tchaikovsky's Piano Concerto in B flat minor. Mr. Mitropoulos, closing the first part of his share of the Philharmonic season, also offered Mendelssohn's "Reformation" Symphony and Dvorak's "Carneval" Overture.

Mr. Harris' "Epigram" was commissioned by Broadcast Music, Inc., to honor the twenty-fifth season of the Columbia Broadcasting System's presentation of the Philharmonic on the air. The composer has skillfully paid musical tribute both to the broadcasters and the number of years, the former in a basic opening figure and the latter in the metrical scheme. He also considers the emotions aroused by the orchestra and by events in general during nearly a quarter century. A definite expressive atmosphere, as well as structural deftness and knowledge of orchestraal resources, appears in this six minute work. Drawbacks were a rather too pervasive heaviness of mood and a somewhat indeterminate close. The reception was very cordial, and Mr. Harris was called to the stage.

Mr. Cliburn, who has won various honors during the last two of his nineteen years, has a remarkable talent. The notable vigor, which is a striking but not exclusive feature of his playing, was made evident at the outset. This and his technical prowess were imposingly displayed in passages such as the octave runs in the first movement. The work's outspoken measures were proclaimed with brilliance and climactiv impact. Auspiciously, he did not display his pianistic energy in the wrong places; his dynamic shading and interpretative treatment were also appropriate in the more intimate and romantic episodes of the concerto. In a few phrases, a melodic outline seemed emphasized at the expense of detail, but clarity of medium was otherwise characteristic. Mr. Mitropoulos and the orchestra gave admirable performances of the Mendelssohn and Dvorak works.

Chamber Ensemble

Dimitri Mitropoulos directed groups of the New York Philharmonic Chamber Ensemble in a program of its fourth concert season at the Y. M. H. A. Saturday night, featuring the first performance of Josef Alexander's Quintet for Winds and a colorful performance of Milhaud's Sonata for Two Violins and Piano.

William Nowanski and Max Weiner were well matched as the duo, and Leonid Hambro was his subtle and skillful self as pianist. The work demonstrated that a pair of violins with piano makes a more satisfactory structure than solo fiddle, the latter alignment (despite classic precedent) always seeming more a marriage of convenience than of complementary or affinitive kind.

Josef Alexander's Quintet is most skillfully written from the point of view of instrumental virtuosity, but its "dissonance at all costs" texture left one with the wish that the composer had remembered the melodic capacities of his instruments as well. Shostakovich's "Two Pieces for String Octet" reveals the more venturesome composer of Op. II, and Dimitri Mitropoulos invoked nuance and lovely tone from his eight players. Weber's Clarinet Quintet Op. 34, with Stanley Drucker's brilliant solo, and Mozart's 29th Symphony made the second half of the evening.

The Philharmonic performers appear in a new light in these chamber concerts; gone is the weight and organized precision of mass discipline, giving place to the more individualized precision and the endearing, intimate communicativeness of chamber music at its best. One cannot but admire the busy conductor who, despite his duties on one of the world's most taxing podiums, finds time and enthusiasm for this music for its own sake.

Philharmonic-Symphony Opens Season

The opening concert of the season of the Philharmonic-Symphony, Oct. 7, at Carnegie Hall, featured Act I of Wagner's "Die Walkuere," with Astrid Varnay, soprano, Ramon Vinay, tenor, and Luben Vichey, bass. It was an exciting performance that received an ovation from the large, enthusiastic audience. No doubt there were many who missed the action on the stage that one would witness at the opera house, but on the other hand, the dynamic orchestral performance, so persuasively presented by Dimitri Mitropoulos, was of exceptional calibre. The voices were appealing, and to this listener, Mr. Vichey seemed to be of outstanding quality both in voice and interpretation. It is interesting to note that the opening selection, Weber's "Der Freischuetz," was one of the first recordings made by the Philharmonic for Columbia Records in 1917, and it also launched their initial nationwide broadcast over CBS Radio 25 years ago. The second selection was Mr. Mitropoulos' own arrangement of Bach's Fantasia and Fugue in G minor. It was intriguing to hear an orchestral transcription that did not sound like an imitation of an organ, but rather made the most of its own sonorities and its own vivid coloring. The opening Fantasia, particularly, was huge and grand, and filled the hall with magnificent sound.

The second Sunday afternoon concert of the Philharmonic - Symphony, Oct. 17, included Kabalevsky's Overture "Colas Breugnon," Tschaikowsky's Suite No. 1 in D Minor and Tschaikowsky's Violin Concerto. Mischa Elman was the soloist and the orchestra was under the direction of Dimitri Mitropoulos. Except for the substitution of the Tschaikowsky Suite for the Shostakovich Tenth Symphony, this was, in essence, a repetition of the Thursday night program, and it was again performed with warmth and musicianship.—WALTER F. 'Symphonic Epigram'

A new work and a new pianist were heard at yesterday afternoon's Carnegie Hall program of the Philharmonic conducted by Dimitri Mitropoulos.

The new work was Roy Harris' "Symphonic Epigram," commissioned by Broadcast Music, Inc., in tribute to the twenty-five year association of the Columbia Broadcasting System with the Philharmonic-Symphony.

Mr. Harris has built his work around a theme involving the notes C, B and S ("S" equals "Es" in German, which means E flat). There are other such tie-ups in the "Epigram," none of which need concern us here. The music is a competent "pièce d'occasion," brassy and rhythmically hearty, not very memorable melodically, but short and to the point. Mr. Harris was present to take his bows.

Van Cliburn, a 19-year-old pianist from Kilgore, Tex., was the new soloist. He undertook the Tchaikovsky Concerto in B flat minor, and he played it with a big, percussive attack that dominated the orchestra. Spirit and enthusiasm were present, plus a commanding technique, a good degree of musical excitement and a certain degree of musical rawness.

Mr. Cliburn's immaturities, however, were secondary to his natural facility for playing the piano and his instinctively big style. His career will be watched with interest.

Also on the program were Mendelssohn's "Reformation" Symphony and Dvorak's "Carneval' Overture.

Young Texas Pianist Shows Best of West

A 19-year-old Texas pianist named Van Cliburn won a rousing ovation as soloist in Tschaikowsky's b-flat minor concerto on the Philharmonic program in Carnegie Hall yesterday afternoon.

The newcomer, a tall, thin lad with blond hair, was brought back to the stage for repeated bows after one of the most spectacular performances of the keyboard classic in recent seasons.

Winner of the Leventritt Award—and many prizes before that—young Cliburn played in the grand tradition. He combined a giant technique with a remarkable control of tone and an exciting grasp of dramatic suspense.

This is one of the most genuine and refreshing keyboard talents to come out of the West—or anywhere else—in a long time. Van Cliburn is obviously going places, except that he plays as if he had already been there.

Yesterday the Philharmonic celebrated its 25th season of Sunday broadcasts. To commemorate the occasion Roy Harris wrote a brief but deeply felt "Symphonic Epigram," with which Dimitri Mitropoulos opened the program.

Besides giving Mr. Cliburn fervid support in the Tschaikowsky Concerto, Mr. Mitropoulos added to the afternoon's excitement with masterly readings of Mendelssohn's "Reformation" symphony and Dvorak's "Carneval" overture.

A Red Tenth

IT'S TO BE hoped that a reviewer won't be investigated by any committee or agency for paying tribute to Soviet Russia's greatest living composer, 48-year-old Dmitri Shostakovitch, whose new (December, 1953) Symphony No. 10 in E minor was heard in its premiere American performance in mid-October at Carnegie Hall.

Whatever the role and integrity of the arts under a totalitarian regime, the fact remains that Shostakovich, often in the Red doghouse for musical "deviations" which are meaningless to Western ears, has composed 10 big symphonies and numerous other works in his relatively short life, and is one of the world's noted men of music, perhaps the greatest now alive. His new symphony is of major stature.

Four days after its first performance (which won great critical praise), the New York Philharmonic-Symphony Orchestra under Dimitri Mitropoulos repeated it for the recording microphones at Columbia's studios (formerly a church). For sound, the results are magnificent.

What one chooses to hear in this music, which Shostakovitch has said is an effort to express the thoughts of all "peace-loving people," is, perhaps, another matter.

Points of Criticism

The work has been criticized as overly gloomy, monotonous and deficient in motivation. This reviewer certainly did not find it so. To be sure, it reflects the oppressive spirit which seems to pervade the entire world, but it is relieved by bursts of energetic and original musical thought.

The interpretation by Mitropoulos is sometimes jerky and uneven, but his widely celebrated ability to wring organ-like tones from his men is ever evident. The finale seems to revert to scenes of youth, and if that is Shostakovitch's answer to the desires of "peace-loving people," it is a solution which all of us would welcome but realize is impossible of attainment—and as such is really an unconscious indictment of the hopeless regime under which the composer prospers so hugely.

This reviewer was deeply stirred and stimulated by it, both for sound and content, as he was (to a lesser extent) by these other fine new recordings:

Walter Piston's Symphony No. 3, Howard Hanson conducting the Eastman-Rochester Symphony Orchestra (Mercury); crisp and compelling, brilliant sound.

Gustav Holst's "The Planets," Sir Malcolm Sargent conducting the London Symphony Orchestra (London); first-rate musical work of engaging content; in addition a hi-fi showpiece.

CONDUCTOR'S WORLD

Opera Is Indispensable to a Maestro Of Balanced Gifts, Says Mitropoulos

By OLIN DOWNES

THERE will be uncommon interest in Dimitri Mitropoulos' first appearance as opera conductor at the Metropolitan Opera on Wednesday evening. He will direct Richard Strauss' "Salome." Later, in January, he will be heard in Verdi's "Masked Ball."

Mr. Mitropoulos' penchant for dramatic music has been manifest in his performances of operas in concert form as music director of the Philharmonic-Symphony. Also, in the summer intervals between his Philharmonic-Symphony engagements, Mr. Mitropoulos has conducted opera at various European theatres and festivals. But these have been far from his only experience of opera, which began with his years as "chor-repetiteur" at the Berlin State Opera, between 1920 and 1925. There he laid the indispensable foundation of opera conducting at the time when, a 1919 graduate from the Athens Conservatory, he also was studying composition and the piano with Ferruccio Busoni in the German capital.

We asked Mr. Mitropoulos to compare the two phases of the musical art, the symphonic and the operatic, and what he considered the conductor's opportunities of achievement in each.

Mr. Mitropoulos agreed with every symphonic conductor we have questioned on the subject, that no conductor can arrive at maturity and authority in orchestral interpretation if he has not had in youth a course of sprouts in the musical theatre. There the "chor-repetiteur" gets experience in everything that has to do with a music director's task. He not only accompanies chorus and ballet at rehearsals, and goes over their parts with the solo singers, but "doubles" in everything, from the celesta in the orchestra to the bells backstage. He does the spade-work for many a performance for which a senior leader gets the cash and publicity. He learns his trade the hard and thorough way.

First Chance

The young conductor's first chance with the baton may be, say, on a Saturday night, in half a double bill of "Cavalleria Rusticana" and "Pagliacci." He probably will conduct without rehearsal, pinch-hitting for the man who had the rehearsals and has gone sick. It is catch-as-catch-can with him. All this gives him quickness and presence of mind, control of unpredictable situations that arise in even the best performances. He acquires a sure and flexible beat, apt for the quick changes of tempo or the unforeseen caprices of singers and the dramatic accentuation of the movement on the stage. At long last he reaches the conductor's chair and the manifold responsibilities of leadership; and if he has it in him, is launched upon his career.

So much was Mr. Mitropoulos' summary of the indispensability of opera in a conductor's cosmos. He then turned to the later perspectives of the conductor's task.

"What I am about to say," he continued, "may be unorthodox, but I think it is true. There are more opportunities for original thinking in the interpretation of opera than in symphonic music—at least the symphonic music of the standard repertory.

Fixed Rules

"You must realize this: In the domain of the symphony you, the conductor, are an intruder! The symphonic form has its more or less fixed rules of tempo, dynamics, and so forth. If you make an effort to alter the style of that symphony in the way that a later age might find agreeable and acceptable to its consciousness you distort, or are said to distort, the message of the composer.

"Don't misunderstand me. I need hardly say that the great symphonic interpretation is an achievement of the noblest and most difficult kind. Every great performance of a symphonic masterpiece means a vital and supremely artistic accomplishment. With opera you are faced with as great or greater a challenge. We can begin with the fact that it is entirely impossible to accomplish even a nearly perfect performance of an opera. If you achieve four-fifths of a good show you are doing very well, if only in view of the multiplicity of human factors in the production of an opera.

"Interpreting it, you find yourself in a greatly widened range of expression. You have much more opportunity than in the concert hall to follow your own promptings and ideas of effect. Then there is the particularly challenging difficulty of flexible, coherent, varied and unified presentation. You are to persuade hundreds of other musicians to bring your conception of the composer's and dramatist's ideas into being. The difficulties are enormous, but fascinating and rewarding in a degree that can only appeal irresistibly to the musician with any degree of dramatic blood in his veins."

Opera vs. Symphony

We asked him if he didn't think the opera repertory more limited and hence more wearing, in the long run, than symphonic music. He shook his head.

"There are certainly fewer operas that have gained their established position in the standard repertory than there are overtures and symphonies. But there is inexhaustible opportunity for discovery and fresh inspiration in those operas that have endured and that exert an irresistible appeal to the public.

"There are the Wagner operas alone—a lifetime of study. Similarly the masterpieces of Mozart. The operas of Verdi are an entire literature. Other products of the French, Italian, German and Russian schools are as different as 'Freischuetz,' 'Barber of Seville,' 'Manon'—or that other 'Manon Lescaut' of Puccini, and his other great works. I place in the modern field 'Boris Godunov' and 'Khovantchina,' as well as the Strauss of 'Salome' and 'Elektra,' and the Berg of 'Wozzeck.'

"There is enough there for twenty lifetimes of conducting, and I have mentioned but a part of the total. And a musician cannot exclude any of the great musical forms from his experience. Look at Pierre Monteux, who has made history in symphony and opera, and also ballet. You may be sure that his experience in each of these directions has enriched his capacities in all of them. There is no greater or lesser musical form to study. There is only greater or lesser music."

Dimitri Mitropoulos Re-Engaged As Musical Director of the New York Philharmonic-Symphony

The Board of Directors of the New York Philharmonic-Symphony Society announced the re-engagement of Dimitri Mitropoulos as Musical Director of the Society for the 1955-56 season at a recent meeting.

Maestro Mitropoulos was first introduced to Philharmonic-Symphony audiences during the 1940-41 season, and, during the following decade, was guest conductor with the Orchestra. He was appointed regular conductor for the 1950-51 season, and the 1955-56 season will mark his 5th year as Musical Director of the Society.

The Board of Directors also announced the re-engagement of Bruno Walter, George Szell and Guido Cantelli as guest conductors for the Philharmonic-Symphony.

Next season will be the 33rd anniversary of Dr. Walter's American debut with the New York Symphony, which in 1928 was merged with the Philharmonic orchestra. George Szell will observe his tenth season as Musical Director of the Cleveland Orchestra during the 1955-1956 season; with the exception of two seasons, Mr. Szell has been a regular guest conductor of the Philharmonic - Symphony since 1944-45. Guido Cantelli will return to the orchestra for his fifth year as guest conductor.

MOZART FESTIVAL WITH DR. WALTER

At the suggestion of Maestro Mitropoulous, the Board of Directors also engaged Pierre Monteux as guest conductor of the Philharmonic in celebration of his 80th birthday. In presenting his request to the Board, the Philharmonic's Musical Director said, "In my opinion, what could be more suitable tribute to this distinguished artist than an invitation from America's oldest orchestra?" Mr. Monteaux conducted the Philharmonic during the 1944-45 season for two weeks.

At the same meeting the Directors announced that Bruno Walter has accepted an invitation to conduct a two-week Mozart Festival in early 1956 in commemoration of the 200th anniversary of the birth of the composer. The Festival will include a performance of the Requiem.

Met's Opera-Ballet Wins High Applause

Solov Premiere's Original Work, Christel Goltz Debuts In 'Salome'

By PAUL R. ALLERUP

New York, Dec. 16 (INS) — General manager Rudolf Bing and the enthusiastic staff he has gathered around him poured heart, courage, skill and imagination into a new kind of evening at the Metropolitan Opera last night — a double bill half opera and half ballet.

The ballet portion of the program marked the world premiere of an original work, "Vittorio", by the Met's brilliant young choreographer-dancer, Philadelphia-born Zachary Solov, who fitted his dance and his plot to music by Verdi.

For the second and opera half of the evening, Bing presented Richard Strauss's stirring "Salome", featuring the renowned German-born soprano, Christel Goltz, in her Met debut.

And finally, this evening of great event brought to the podium for his Metropolitan Opera debut Dimitri Mitropoulos, musical director of the New York Philharmonic Symphony.

Solov, dancing himself for the first time at the Met in one of 'Vittorio's" major roles, has been ballet master at the old house since 1951 when he moved from Broadway musicals, The Ballet Theater and T. V. to redirect the dances for "Fledermaus". Since then he has won high laurels for the new life he has pumped into the Met's ballet.

"Vittorio", starring Mia Slavenska as prima ballerina, brought into play all the grace and rhythm of the fine ballet company Solov has constructed, and provided a pleasant 45 minutes of action. It missed, to this reviewer, at least, being a complete fulfillment of Solov's evident talent. But it was smooth going and easy on the eye, marred only by one almost ludicrous 2-woman duel that set the audience to tittering even as both antagonists slumped to almost simultaneous deaths.

"Vittorio" is a welcome innovation at the Met, will deserve its scheduled repeats, and perhaps encourage Bing and Solov to try for bigger things. Slavenska, Solov, Yurek Lazowski, Jean Lee Schoch and Judith Younger all danced competently in non-taxing roles, with admirable support by the Corps de Ballet.

Mitropoulos, one of the most vigorous conductors in the business, directed both the ballet and "Salome" with his customary crispness and pinpoint control, and was welcomed by the Met audience with a fervor that even his Philharmonic faithful would have found it hard to equal.

Miss Goltz was preceded to the Met stage by a reputation not only for her singing but for her dancing. As a one-time dancer, it was s'd, she'd put on a "Dance of the Seven Veils" such as the staid Met hadn't seen. It was a lively dance all right, but more abrobatic than pretty. One wished that Solov, somehow, might do something about it.

Miss Goltz handled the difficult arias with an easy familiarity but a lack of great excitement. A first night on such a stage and in such a place is a hard thing, however, and if Miss Goltz did not engender the heat that Bulgaria's Ljuba Welitch did in a similar debut a few years ago, it may have been Mme. Welitch was such a stunning surprise, whereas this new "Salome" had tough advance notices to live up to.

Philharmonic-Symphony Concerts

Raya Garbousova, violoncellist of the first order, was soloist with the Philharmonic-Symphony, Oct. 28, with Dimitri Mitropoulos conducting. Miss Garbousova lent her talents to Couperin's "Pieces en Concert," arranged by Paul Bazelaire, and Rieti's Concerto for Violoncello and Orchestra, No. 2 (world premiere). The latter sounded like an interesting work in the modern idiom, but it would take further hearings to give proper judgment. Possibly the outstanding performance of the evening was Mr. Mitropoulos' conducting of the Vaughan Williams Symphony No. 4, in F minor. This work is very different from the composer's other creations, stark, dissonant, turbulant. As it was presented on this occasion, it had an emotional appeal that wrung wild applause from the audience at its conclusion. In short, it was wonderful! Also heard on the program were Schumann's Overture to "Julius Caesar," and a vivid interpretation of the "Dance of the Seven Veils" from Strauss' "Salome."

There was some brilliant piano playing by Pietro Scarpini when he played Prokofieff's Piano Concerto No. 2 with the Philharmonic-Symphony, Mitropoulos conducting, Nov. 4, at Carnegie Hall. This was Mr. Scarpini's debut in this country, but he has appeared in many parts of Europe. The balance of the program was orchestral, including Milhaud's orchestration of Couperin's Prelude and Allegro, "La Sultane"; Schumann's Second Symphony; and the American premiere of Skalkotas' "Greek Dances." Mr. Mitropoulos was especially communicative in the Schumann Symphony.

Jim Fassett, well-known for his intermission comments during the Philharmonic-Symphony Sunday afternoon broadcasts, gave informal explanations during the Philharmonic's initial offering of the season in the Young Peoples concert series, Nov. 20. Mr. Fassett explained how storm sounds and fire are produced for radio and TV, and then Wilfred Pelletier and the Orchestra gave the musical versions with excerpts from Rossini's "William Tell" Overture, Beethoven's "Pastorale" Symphony, and Wagner's "Magic Fire Music" from "Die Walkure." It was made clear to the youngsters the music didn't imitate the real sounds, but evoked the feeling of the real storm or fire through the imaginative writing of a great composer. Another feature of the program was the playing of 13-year-old violinist Robert Notkoff, who performed the second and third movements of the Mendelssohn Violin Concerto.

Zino Francescatti's lilting tone came forward to enhance a well thought out and nimble reading of Mendelssohn's Violin Concerto on Nov. 11, when he was soloist with the Philharmonic-Symphony. The program included Brahms' Symphony No. 2 in D major. Through both works it was a pleasure to hear the ever richer sonority of this orchestra, which appears to be reaching higher peaks as the season progresses. The program opened with a reading of Brahms' Variations on a Theme of Haydn.—W.H.S.

Van Cliburn Plays Tschaikowsky Concerto

The debut of the young American pianist Van Cliburn, who performed Tschaikowsky's Piano Concerto No. 1 with dazzling tone and total command of the piano, was the feature of the Nov. 14 concert of the Philharmonic Symphony. While there is still place for greater musical maturity, Van Cliburn can look forward to a big career, for he has all the attributes of a great artist. At this same concert, Dimitri Mitropoulos conducted the world premiere of Symphonic Epigram by Roy Harris. The music was pleasing, but inconsequential. The program also included first-rate performances of Mendelssohn's Reformation Symphony and Dvorak's Carneval Overture.—A.S.

An extremely exciting, if, on the stage side of the business, excessively and unnecessarily raw presentation of Strauss' "Salome" was given last night at the Metropolitan, with a new Salome in the person of Christel Goltz. Dimitri Mitropoulos also made his first appearance in the Metropolitan Opera House as the conductor and a well-nigh incomparable interpreter of the score.

And if one is to mention the most spectacular features of this performance in their logical order of precedence, the first feature, of overwhelming power, was the orchestra.

Mr. Mitropoulos knows this score, obviously, backward, forward and sideway, and can play with it, so far as the technique of its conducting is concerned. There he has no obstacles to his freest flights of imagination and dramatic emphasis. Long before last night he had shown his penchant for music drama in concert performances of a number of operas, including Richard Strauss' "Elektra," in concert form at the Philharmonic-Symphony concerts. His achievements as a symphonist stood him in good stead last night, for the score of "Salome," theatrical as it is, is a symphonic conception. But one would also say that Mr. Mitropoulos was born for the opera house.

Despite its theatrical maturity, and the fact that it is a first-class libretto closely following Wilde's drama, the opera "Salome" is a symphonic poem that tells the story of the entire drama, in outline and in detail, with the instruments. Last night the orchestra was the supreme dramatist. It was incandescent with color and emotional intensity, with that special incandescence that is one of Mitropoulos' special characteristics. There was astonishing clarity and distinctness of detail yet an irresistible current of music that flows swiftly forward from the rise to the fall of the curtain.

In the voice of Miss Goltz, and her immensely dramatic temperament, the opera had a Salome worthy to ride the storm of Strauss' orchestration and to imbue the vocal part with all sorts of plangent dramatic effect. The voice has range and strength and lavish color. Miss Goltz knows how to vary these colors and to make her text of the utmost significance. She is, however, by no means the perfect singer, in tone emission and even intonation, by reason of the fact that she will on occasion tear the tone to pieces for a dramatic effect.

Everything is done, so to speak, at third gear. Nothing is left to the imagination. And the paroxysms of Salome, rushing continuously about the stage, whirling her skirts, flopping down upon the cistern, rolling off it on the floor, soon become unconvincing, repetitious, and even annoying. Particularly and unnecessarily repellent in last night's stage presentation was the high visibility of the decapitated phophet's head, vulgar and disgusting. And certain elements of Miss Goltz' impersonation paralleled this feature.

Paul Schoeffler's Jochanaan was superbly sung, with fine tone and noble declamation and unnecessary stiffness of bearing—there was little of the prophet's fanaticism in the sight of him. But the outstanding impersonation of the male roles was Ramon Vinay's Herod, not easily to be forgotten for the effect of the vocal declamation and the boldly original picture of the neurotic king.

Mitropoulos Leads Met 'Salome'; Ballet 'Vittorio' on a Double Bill

By HARRIETT JOHNSON

Having always agreed with those who believe that a conductor makes an opera, I rejoice that the Metropolitan Opera's first performance of "Salome" since 1952, brought with it last night the debut of a great operatic maestro, Dimitri Mitropoulos.

Another asset arrived with him, Christel Goltz, the German soprano, daughter of circus acrobats and herself trained as a dancer, who sang the title role.

Following the ballet, "Vittorio," the Strauss' masterpiece brought the evening to a thrilling conclusion, calling to mind the kind of excitement which must have accompanied the days when Toscanini was in the pit.

Conducting both ballet and opera with effortless mastery from memory, Mitropoulos, before the Met proscenium, seemed more at home than in much more familiar Carnegie Hall. At the opera's conclusion, both he and Goltz received a militant, prolonged ovation, and they both well deserved their glory.

The combination of Goltz, voluptuous in voice, body and action, on-stage, with Mitropoulos leading the orchestra so that every note had communicative fire and dramatic impact, was a union to remember. And the burning was infectious. The beauty, ecstacy, horror, depravity, anger and nobility, which came from the orchestra, inspired the rest of the cast as well, who sang with varying degrees of vocal skill, but consistently with histrionic fervor.

There was a macabre intensity about the entire performance, backed by Herbert Graf's uninhibited, realistic staging. Its impact left this listener tense but deeply moved.

Miss Goltz sang and danced with a seering, demoniac energy which built to white heat and retained its pulsation until the final note. Her voice on occasion didn't quite meet the demands in sheer volume, but this was unimportant

CHRISTEL GOLTZ
As Salome

in a performance which was remarkable for vocal beauty and dramatic realizati .

Among the oth principals, Brian Sullivan was outstanding as Narraboth and Blanche Thebom made an impressive Herodias. Paul Schoeffler, as John the Baptist, acted more impressively than he sang, and Ramon Vinay lacked the commanding vocalism and imperious bearing necessary for Herod.

But most important, Mitropoulos, the hero of the evening, suffused the horrendous stage business with continuous musical glory. May he live long, thus inspired.

By FRANCES HERRIDGE

For the first time in many years, the Metropolitan Opera is allowing ballet to perform in its own right rather than as an adjunct to opera. The result so far is "Vittorio," Zachary Solov's 45-minute story dance which had its premiere last night at the Met, sharing the program with "Salome."

Although the occasion was more revolutionary than the ballet itself, Solov, who is dance director of the opera, has concocted a good show, and Rudolph Bing has backed him to the hilt. Esteban Frances has provided a rich set and lavish costumes for the company of about 50. The Verdi music, arranged by Julius Burger, could not have been more sensitively played than under Dimitri Mitropoulos, the real star of the evening.

"Vittorio," enjoyable for some of the dancing, is a disappointing creation after so much tender care. The story is as melodramatic and nonsensical as an old-fashioned opera plot. An imperious princess, danced with feline daring by Mia Slavenska, tries to force Vittorio to marry her. But he is already in love with the sweet Judith Younger. After a number of close calls, he escapes the princess, but only because his protector, a wild gypsy woman, stabs her in a duel. Jean Lee Schoch as the gypsy, incidentally, dances like quicksilver.

Solov has unraveled this foolishness with some admirable ballet—classic enough to delight the traditionalists, but with an offbeat impulse that is freshly modern. The tempo of the phrases is adeptly varied. Solov handles his groups well and gives his leads solos which reveal some character as well as technique. He himself dances the title role with astonishing elan for one who has been more director than performer of late years.

The fact remains, however, that "Vittorio" is no earth shaker, nor even first-rate concert work, just a glorious enlargement of the kind of ballet already familiar to opera goers.

Edward Caton and Yurek Lazowski add dramatic color as guest artists. The Verdi excerpts are appropriately romantic and melodramatic.

'Salome':

Sensation At the Met

By MILES KASTENDIECK

WHAT DIMITRI MITROPOULOS did with the score of Strauss's "Salome" and what Christel Glotz did in the role of Salome made last night at the Metropolitan the most sensational in Rudolf Bing's regime.

In making their Metropolitan debuts, they both played with such abandon that the audience burst into thunderous applause in a high pitch of excitement.

Seldom, if ever, has this tremendous music of Strauss been so penetratingly set forth, so searingly played, and so fully realized. The Metropolitan orchestra outdid itself for Mitropoulos in conveying the feverishness, the horror, and the impact of this work. Together they made a magnificent score sound tremendous.

Miss Glotz gave the most uninhibited, untamed performance of the heroine since Herbert Graf first staged "Salome" for the Met before the last war.

Her wild portrayal of the neurotic teenager qualified her as more actress than singer though the latter part of her performance revealed a voice of thrilling potentialities. With this performance she set a standard for stage action toward which all young opera singers can aspire.

As a result of the scorching intensity of these major performances together with the Herodias of Blanche Thebom and the Herod of Ramon Vinay, this hour and a half on the great terrace of Herod's palace could be considered the most depraved picture yet created in Metropolitan presentations of this opera.

Miss Thebom gave the most completely integrated portrayal of the evening, depicting a truly terrifying woman. Perhaps because his voice did not carry so forcefully as it should, Vinay's Herod was all the more decadent.

Dignity in Role

If Miss Glotz grew excessive in her actions at times, Paul Schoeffler expressed all the dignity becoming the role of Jochanaan, the Prophet, through inaction and finely disciplined singing. The other roles were well-handled as usual though not always distinctively.

The world premiere of a new ballet "Vittorio" by Zachary Solov began the evening somewhat embarrassingly. Insofar as it exhibited the Ballet Troipe as an increasingly accomplished group, it served its purpose. Its silly story, however, featuring a duel between two girls, almost wrecked it.

Mia Slavenska showed off her technical accomplishments to advantage. Solov proved himself a good dancer. Jean Lee Schoch caught attention for her performance as the gypsy. The best part of the show was the rhythmic verve of Mitropoulos's conducting in music by Verdi.

Thunder

Richard Strauss's lurid "Salome" almost never fails as a vehicle for a first-rate conductor with a flair for the dramatic. At the Metropolitan Opera, it launched George Szell in 1942, Fritz Reiner in 1949. Last week it served the same purpose for Dimitri Mitropoulos, music director of the New York Philharmonic-Symphony. At the Met this season as a guest conductor for "Salome" and Verdi's "The Masked Ball," Mitropoulos has conducted opera in Europe and opera in concert form at Carnegie Hall, but never before at the Met. He belongs there more often. The audience hailed him at the start and saluted him at the finish with thunderous applause.

To heighten his superb orchestral effects, Maestro Mitropoulos had a worthy dramatic partner in Christel Goltz as Salome. A German soprano who has starred all over Europe in recent years, Miss Goltz has an upper register that soared over the thunder and lightning that Strauss put into his score. She moves easily, perhaps because she began her career as a dancer. But in her vaulting of steps and in her spectacular fall, she was also reminiscent of her parents and aunt, onetime Barnum & Bailey acrobats. Those who remembered 1949 and Ljuba Welitch's incredibly decadent characterization of Oscar Wilde's depraved little monster thought Miss Goltz lacked conviction. But the audience gave her an ovation that all but broke Rudolf Bing's new rule against solo curtain calls.

"Salome" was not the only novelty of the Met evening. As a curtain raiser, it offered its first full-length ballet in seven years, starring its ballerina, Mia Slavenska, and its choreographer-dancer, Zachary Solov. Titled "Vittorio," it has music by Verdi in an orchestration that included bits and pieces of little-known tunes that might well stay little known. It featured a grand-opera-style plot that was hopelessly confused and went on and on for 45 minutes.

That the Met should feature its own company in full-length ballets is to be desired. But "Vittorio" merely provides a way to dine leisurely and get to the opera house at 9, in time for "Salome."

New Ballet Premieres At Metropolitan

By ROBERT COLEMAN

(Reprinted from yesterday's late edition)

Having scored several rousing successes with opera this season at the Metropolitan, impresario Rudolf Bing thought it about time that he do something to restore ballet to a high estate there. So he engaged ballerina Mia Slavenska and commissioned Zachary Solov, the company's choreographer, to do a new work.

Young Solov has set the tragic piece, "Vittorio," to music by Verdi, in an adaptation and arrangement by Julius Burger. It had its premiere at the Met Wednesday evening before a large, expectant and enthusiastic audience. It would be pleasant to report this morning that the latest addition to the august organization's dance wing is worthy of the honor, but it isn't.

THE LIBRETTO of "Vittorio" has to do with a fiery princess from the Isle of Spain, who comes to the court of Montefiore to marry its Duke. Finding him too senile for her taste, she flies into a rage, assaults the venerable fellow and insists upon having his handsome grandson instead.

When things look right bad for the house of Montefiore, La Magalina, a good fairy of a gypsy, fights a duel with the invader in which both are killed. Thus the Duke's grandson is free to wed a charmer of his own choice. That duel, by the way, had more than a few of the first-nighters chuckling.

Since Miss Slavenska is one of the world's leading ballerinas, it is regrettable that Solov hasn't been able to create a role up to her distinguished talents. For most of the three scenes, she makes eccentric, menacing, forward steps about the stage. Only in the third canto does she have a variation that shows off her ad-

Dimitri Mitropoulos, eminent conductor of the New York Philharmonic-Symphony, was an excellent advocate of the score. And Esteban Frances has designed huge, handsome settings and colorful costumes.

More rewarding was the "Salome" which followed. Interest centered on the debut of Christel Goltz in the title role. Miss Goltz has a powerful voice, a little shrill in the earlier passages but quite lush in the later ones. She didn't spare her hips in the dance of the seven veils.

PAUL SCHOEFFLER was an impressive Jochanaan. If some of his tones seemed a bit muffled, they were coming from inside a well, and Mitropoulos was raising the orchestra to high pitches of excitement.

It was an interesting bill. The "Salome," despite flaws, was stirring. As for "Vittorio," it represented a beginning toward better things for the Met's balletomanes.

'Salome':

Second Triumph

By MILES KASTENDIECK

THAT intensity of interpretation, which made Strauss' "Salome" so vividly depraved a week ago at the Metropolitan, created the same feeling in its second performance last night.

Not only Dimitri Mitropoulos in the pit and Christel Goltz on stage but the whole cast saw to that. For the Met, the show is a sellout.

As perhaps the first truly choreographic singing-actress in this role, Miss Goltz suits much of her movement to the musical phrase. Her portrayal of thwarted passion and childish tantrums has both credible action and forceful characterization. It is certainly one of the most provocative in years.

In her singing, however, what was credited to debut nervousness last time turned out to be too many infocused notes on this occasion. Her performance is less distinguished for its vocalism than for its acting.

The principals remained the same. Some of the perplexing stage direction, like the parade of the Seven Veils advertising the dance, also remained the same.

Conductor: Dimitri Mitropoulos

Christol Goltz, who last night made her Metropolitan Opera debut, together with conductor Dimitri Mitropoulos, is without question the maddest Salome I have ever seen or heard. At the very outset of Strauss' sizzling masterpiece she made it clear to all and sundry that she views the girl as a demented and feral firebrand, and, thereafter, as if to substantiate her position, she produced a barrage of attitudes that symbolized perfectly lustful craving come alive. She snarled and growled and tore at her clothes. Like a tormented beast she leaped in the air, crawled on the ground, grovelled, spit, bared her teeth. Her every move was lathed to fit a chilling plan that could not in its impact fail to send shivers through a stone. For Christel Goltz, with all her overplaying, full well understands the fascination that is ever a handmaiden of evil. As Salome she plyed her violent trade with a hurtling thrust that, I suspect, would have withered even Strauss himself.

Also Miss Goltz can sing—loudly, ringingly and with the clarity of cut crystal. Last night her voice boomed, soared above the orchestra, peered always through the thick and luminous instrumental colors invented by the composer. And though it is impossible—owing to the nature of Strauss' treacherously high and screaming melodic lines—to describe with accuracy the quality of Miss Goltz' soprano, it is apparent that she has sufficient stamina and resonance to deal with any work in the repertory. In sum, then, she has lived up to advance reports if not actually exceeded them. Miss Goltz is a singing acress of feverish, almost unholy intensity.

The glories dispensed by a Salome, of course, are largely dependent on the performance in the pit, and in this regard Mr. Mitropoulos proved what has long been perfectly clear—that his talent for dramatic expression finds a surging outlet in opera that is not readily available in the symphonic literature. No one in his archestra did he hold back (except, properly, at the work's tension-creating beginning), and he urged sonorities and waves of sound from his crew that were downright blistering in their heat. If the reading of the occasion was a sample of what the Philharmonic-Symphony maestro can do with music in the theater then it is devoutly to be wished that he no longer confine his talents to the concert hall.

Appearing for the first time in their roles, both Blance Thebom and Ramon Vinay were able to paint, in action and song, a genuine three-dimensional portrait of figures that are frequently no more than mobile statues. Mr. Vinay Herod was a furtive and frightened Herod, Miss Thebom's Herodias as howling and sarcastic shrew. In every way the two added mightily to the gruesome mise-en-scene. So also did the Messrs. Suliva and Schoeffler who were throughout in majestic vocal condition. All told the performance was a bulldozer with enough compressed force to blow the Met sky high.

A reliable informant has just phoned to report that the cast at the opera's conclusion was called upon for over twenty encores. I can well believe it.

Music

New 'Salome' Cheered at Met

By LOUIS BIANCOLLI.

An overpowering performance of Strauss' "Salome" brought a Metropolitan audience to its feet cheering, and lingering after the curtain fell.

The main cause was a fiery little lady named Christel Goltz who made her debut in the big house as the lust-maddened heroine of Strauss' one-act horror opera.

Responsible for the over-all impact of the performance was Dimitri Mitropoulous, also making his Metropolitan debut as an opera conductor of electrifying power.

I don't recall when an audience set up such a clamorous outcry as last night's did when the piling ferocity of Strauss' frenzied masterpiece finally ceased.

Pent-Up Applause.

It was the collective release of pent-up feeling growing steadily from the spectacle of savage obsession portrayed by a woman born of the theater with a phenomenal gift of vocal expression.

Parallel with that portrayal was the seething volcano of Mr. Mitropoulos' orchestra, mirroring the sex-crazed Salome's gathering drive with a vivid force seldom equaled and never surpassed at the Met in recent decades.

There was, too, the magnificent herodias of Blanche Thebom—her greatest artistic triumph to date—the slashing neurotic impact of Ramon Vinay's impersonation of Herod, the grave strength of Paul Shoeffler's Jochanaan.

Add the unwavering focus and continuity of Herbert Graf's splendid stage direction. They all combined into an unforgettable opera experience and a great night in the theater.

Hit as Salome.

But the sensation of the evening was Mme. Goltz, a European singer of growing fame in the more morbid, twisted, tormented roles of modern opera.

Whatever she may be like in less clinical studies, she is one hell-cat of a Salome—a wicked, wilful, feet-stamping, robe-tossing delinquent unleased in an arena of distorted passion.

The hammering restlessness of the woman mounted in a crescendo of frenzy, till even the "Dance of the Seven Veils" became not so much impure revelation as pure acceleration.

The voice was perfect for the part—clear, firm, with a glint of steel that ran through the Strauss' seven-ply orchestra like a rapier.

Special Ballet.

The opera was bracketed last night with the inauguration of a new policy—a special, full-length ballet, "Vittorio," devised by Zachary Solov to early opera music by Verdi and burdened with a dense plot of Renaissance intrigue.

The ballet was over-long, diffuse, and in scenes like the sword-duel between two women, even embarrassing. But the set and costumes were gorgeous and the dancing of Mr. Solov and Mia Slavenska were a saving grace.

"Vittorio" was soon forgotten, however, in the dynamo that was Strauss and Mitropolous and Christel Goltz.

Super Salome

While the snare drums sizzled and the crowd gasped, two girls in tights stood on eight-foot pedestals a stage width apart, one with an end of a wire about her neck, the second holding the other end with her teeth. A man mounted the slack wire, stretched himself out flat-backed and flipped himself over and over. The gymnasts were Germany's famed Goltz Trio, making its successful rounds of the U.S. vaudeville circuit 40 years ago. Last week Christel Goltz, the wire walker's 34-year-old daughter, made her U.S. debut as another kind of acrobat: at New York's Metropolitan Opera she zoomed through the high, precarious passages of Richard Strauss's Salome.

Soprano Goltz whirled, rolled and jumped across the stage as if she were trying to revive her father's old act. As Herod's stepdaughter, she covered more mileage on foot, belly and back than any Salome in memory. But she gave an overpowering impression of the willful, depraved teen-ager, from her disheveled entrance to her final kisses on the lips of John the Baptist's severed head. Soprano Goltz (a strikingly versatile singer with a repertory of 116 roles, ranging from Musetta to Elektra) is most famous for her appearances in Richard Strauss's operas in Vienna, and last week she proved why. She sang the fiendishly hard music with complete mastery and with silvery smoothness, even when her voice had to pierce through the orchestra's loudest blasts.

Perhaps the only thing wrong with Salome was the "Dance of the Seven Veils," which was about five veils too long. It is musically insipid in an otherwise brilliant score, and Soprano Goltz, though originally trained as a ballet dancer, did not make it seem any better as she determinedly stripped to her white petticoat. Otherwise, Salome emerged as the great opera it is, its nervous, passionate music brilliantly conducted by another newcomer to the Met, the New York Philharmonic-Symphony's Dimitri Mitropoulos. With his long arms and shiny bald head making him look like a gnome in the orchestra pit, he turned the Met orchestra into a raging, powerful instrument that swept the action along at peak excitement.

Mitropoulos at Metropolitan

By Miles Kastendieck
New York

Dimitri Mitropoulos made his Metropolitan Opera debut under auspicious circumstances by conducting Richard Strauss's "Salome." Not only is he temperamentally suited to interpret this work, but his manner of conducting helps admirably to convey the nature of it. The performance under his direction became tremendously powerful, even emotionally exhausting because of the impact of the score and such a realization of it.

The magnificence of the music, searingly played by the Metropolitan Opera Orchestra, did not, however, dim the debut of Cristel Goltz in the title role. As a singer, actress, and dancer she fused all the elements of the role into an amazingly integrated portrayal, matching the playing of the orchestra with the brilliance of her performance.

Her concept of the teen-age heroine is that of an uninhibited, willful girl who will have her way, stamping her feet, staging a childish tantrum, shrieking in rage, and being sensual enough to be considered almost an untamed animal. All this borders on the sensational; yet her portrayal has been so carefully worked out as to be logically acceptable. It demands much of acting ability which she appears to have in abundance, to say nothing of choreographic sense in all her stage movement.

Potentialities

If she qualifies more as an actress than as a singer, not her voice so much as its production restricts her. She has a voice full of potentialities. She does not appear to focus her tones clearly enough to achieve the exactness of note necessary to make her part articulate in the more frenzied pages of the first half of the score. Her notes flow more truly in the lyrical portions of the final pages.

The first appearance of Blanche Thebom as Herodias found her giving a memorable account of this terrifying woman. Her portrayal was the most completely realized of the cast. Ramon Vinay as Herod gave a good account of himself in the role but not a distinguished one vocally. The combination of performances, however, created the most decadent atmosphere since Herbert Graf restaged the opera well over a decade ago.

The world première of "Vittorio," a new ballet by Zachary Solov, marked both the recognition of his contribution to the Metropolitan Opera ballet in recent years and the policy of Rudolf Bing to strengthen every department. Decked out sumptuously in operatic splendor, it made a colorful curtain-raiser.

The dancing was up to the new standard at the Metropolitan. Only the ballet itself failed to live up to expectation. Its story, proved too absurd for the first-night audience.

Technical Assurance

Mia Slavenska and Mr. Solov danced the leading roles with technical assurance. The work introduced an interesting talent in Jean Lee Schoch who danced the role of a gypsy. The whole show gained value from its décor and from the rhythmic propulsion of Mr. Mitropoulos who made the most of the various bits of Verdi pieced together to compose a full ballet score.

A good singing cast and the conducting of Pierre Monteux made the revised production of Massenet's "Manon" acceptable, but no more. The stage direction was poor. With Victoria de los Angeles singing the title role, Cesare Valletti as Des Grieux, and Fernando Corena as Lescaut, the principal roles had good voices and the supporting singers complemented them nicely. Still the over-all impression suggested that "Manon" has little distinction as an opera today.

Some fine singing made most welcome the return of the operatic twins fondly known as "Cav and Pag." The casts included Zinka Milanov, Lucine Amara, Richard Tucker, Mario Del Monaco, Robert Merrill, and Frank Guarrera. Making an unscheduled appearance as Madame Butterfly, Dorothy Kirsten unexpectedly celebrated the ninth anniversary of her Metropolitan debut. She sang most persuasively and impressively.

Verdi's "Don Carlo" returned after a season's absence to win favor anew, though the performance did not quite equal in quality those of recent memory.

Anderson's Met Debut Thrilling

By LOUIS BIANCOLLI.

The first thing to be said about last night's performance of Verdi's "The Masked Ball," at the Metropolitan, is that it was worthy of the occasion and the lady who honored the house with her debut.

It was as if Dimitri Mitropoulos, the singers, the chorus the orchestra, and everybody else in the production had resolved to make it a tribute to Marian Anderson — to what she symbolized as an artist as the first Negro singer to make her debut at the Met.

There can have been few moments in Metropolitan history so dramatic as those preceding the opening of the second scene of the first act last night. That was where Miss Anderson would appear as Ulrica, the deep-toned fortune teller.

• Miscue Builds Suspense.

Mr. Mitropoulos' orchestra played the prefatory phrases, and suddenly the drama doubled. Because of a miscue of some kind, the curtain didn't move. There was an awkward silence. Mr. Mitropoulos repeated the prelude.

Still no action on the stage —only a motionless curtain. A man weaved through the orchestra and Mr. Mitropoulos stooped to listen. There was a moment's pause, and the prelude got going again. By then the suspense in the house was tense, heightened by uneasiness.

Finally the curtain parted, and a roar of applause and "bravos!" went up. Standing over a steaming cauldron, reading the future for her gathered companions, was a woman of imposing dignity—Ulrica, otherwise Marian Anderson. The ovation, one of the warmest and most thrilling I have ever heard, continued for what seemed minutes.

Deep, Ample Voice.

Finally, Miss Anderson sang, and the voice welled up in all the warmth and sincerity of this generous artist. It wasn't the voice of 10 or 15 years ago; but it was still the deep, ample voice of a gifted artist who had only to be heard to be loved. And she made an impressive figure of Ulrica, too.

There was another ovation at the end of the first act, but the house rule against solo bows prevented the crowd from giving Miss Anderson the full benefit of its feelings. Zinka Milanov, after trying in vain to force Miss Anderson to stay out alone, threw her arms around her and kissed her.

Mr. Mitropoulos conducted a magnificent performance. Here was another testimonial of the management's wisdom in bringing this vitalizing musical personality into the house. He turned "The Masked Ball" into a jewel box of the most dazzling melodic and harmonic gems. All through the opera gleamed and glittered with a living luster.

Praise for the Cast.

There can be only praise for the cast—for the warm-toned Amelia of Zinka Milanov; the utterly delightful and brilliant Oscar of Roberta Peters (her debut as a boy); the polished Renato of Leonard Warren, the smooth-voiced Riccardo of Richard Tucker.

Herbert Graf is to be congratulated on another triumph of staging, and Kurt Adler's unique way with a chorus was everywhere evident.

But it was still Marian Anderson's night — the night a gracious and distinguished American opened one more door for her people.

Miss Anderson Makes Debut at Metropolitan

By PAUL AFFELDER

An event long overdue took place at the Metropolitan Opera House last evening. Marian Anderson, making her debut as the fortune teller, Ulrica, in Verdi's opera, "Un Ballo in Maschera," became the first Negro to sing with the company.

For Miss Anderson, it was the realization of a long-cherished dream; for many other artists of her race, it meant the opening of a door heretofore barred to some notable singers, several of whom were in last night's audience.

The part of Ulrica is usually not the most important role in the opera. She appears in only one scene—the second scene in Act 1—but that role and that scene became the focal point of last evening's performance. As if to heighten the drama, the conductor, Dimitri Mitropoulos, made two false starts before the curtain finally went up on this scene. Owing to a faulty light cue, he got all the way through the prelude, and when nothing happened, started over again. Ultimately realizing what had happened, he stopped midway through the piece when he heard stagehands still hammering frantically backstage.

After a brief delay, the prelude began again, but when the curtains parted to reveal Miss Anderson occupying a central position on the stage, the progress of the opera was again interrupted by a prolonged storm of welcoming applause.

Impressive Debut

The Philadelphia-born contralto sang her lines with her customary dignity. One could attribute a certain shakiness in her voice to the tremendous emotional impact of the occasion; still, there was considerably more drama and animation in her singing than we have heard her produce on the concert stage. She was at her best in her middle register, yet she managed to produce a number of those deep tones for which she has been so famous.

Altogether, it was an impressive debut, particularly since she had never before sung on any operatic stage. The many curtain calls at the end of the act testified to the audience's enthusiasm.

Though it was Marian Anderson's night, she was not the whole show. In the first place, the opera itself was something of a novelty, not having been presented here for nearly seven years. Secondly, its performance was especially notable from the vocal standpoint.

Richard Tucker was in glorious voice as Riccardo, and Zinka Milanov was also in her very best form as Amelia. Their artistry reached many a high point, both in their several solos and in their melodious second act duet. Leonard Warren was immensely warm and sonorous as Renato, and Roberta Peters made the extensive part of the page, Oscar, a brilliant tour de force, though she was singing it for the first time. Another distinctive "first" was Calvin Marsh's Silvano, while Nicola Moscona and Norman Scott, as the two conspirators Samuel and Tom, were excellent in every way.

"A Masked Ball" was also the first Italian opera that Mr. Mitropoulos has conducted here, and he did a generally convincing job, even though his tempo seemed a bit slow at times.

Naturally, an opera with a title like this requires some dancing, and Zachary Solov had the Met's Corps de Ballet weaving some lovely choreographic patterns as a decorative background to the final dramatic scene. Herbert Graf's staging was adequate, if a trifle pedestrian in spots.

Even though Verdi originally intended that the opera be set in Sweden, it seemed a little incongruous for the Met to place the work there, in view of the fact that the composer was obliged to shift both his plot and characters to Colonial Boston. But then, there are other incongruities in this work, and besides, Mstislav Doboujinsky's sets and Ladislas Czettel's costumes, designed for earlier Met performances, looked quite handsome.

Most important of all, a new era may have opened at the world's foremost opera house last night. If other prominent Negro artists are admitted, it may prove to be a great era indeed.

Met Hails Marian Anderson

First Negro to Sing at Opera Scores Major Triumph

NEW YORK (AP)—Amid applause and cheers —and a few tears—American contralto Marian Anderson last night became the first of her race to sing with the Metropolitan Opera.

And the warm welcome given the first Negro singer in the Met's 70-year history proved but the prelude to an artistic success by the famed concert performer. Critics were unanimous in praise of her voice, heard in the second scene of

Act I of Verdi's "Un Ballo in Maschera" (The Masked Ball).

As the curtain rose on the second scene, there was Miss Anderson as Ulrica, stirring her witch's caldron.

The audience broke into a tremendous ovation. Orchestra conductor Dimitri Mitropoulis stopped the playing until the demonstration was over.

OVERCOMES NERVOUSNESS

After a slight hint of nervousness, the full voice heard by hundreds of thousands since the singer's Town Hall debut in 1926 soared to its accustomed richness.

It was the attainment of what Miss Anderson has called an "impossible dream"—a dream she first had as a child in her native Philadelphia.

Miss Anderson came to this peak of her 29-year career understandably nervous.

Had she not showed any reaction to the emotional impact of the evening, she'd not have been human, so intense and so electric was the atmosphere created by the sell-out audience.

For the first appearance of the woman possessed of what Arturo Toscanini once described as "a voice that comes once in a century," manager Rudolf Bing assembled a masterful cast to surround his new star—Richard Tucker, Leonard Warren, Roberta Peters and Zinka Milanov.

Tremulousness in Miss Anderson's voice at first endeared her all the more to the listeners, ranging from the Duchess of Windsor and Margaret Truman to many of the Met's own stars who also came to listen, and to elevator operators, secretaries, waitresses and businessmen.

At the end of the second act there was a noticeable hush in the audience until the singers took their curtain calls. There is a new policy at the Met that no one takes solo curtain calls.

Then there were repeated waves of "bravos" and hand-clapping as Miss Anderson took her bows with other members of the cast.

Soprano Milanov and Miss Anderson next appeared on the stage alone. Miss Milanov threw her arms around Miss Anderson and kissed her. This brought a tremendous new demonstration.

MOTHER IN AUDIENCE

In the audience sat Mrs. Anna Anderson of Philadelphia, mother of Miss Anderson; the contralto's sisters, Alyse Anderson and Mrs. Ethel De Priest, and the singer's husband, Orpheus H. Fisher.

Backstage in Miss Anderson's dressing room after the second scene the singer's mother threw her arms around her daughter, kissed her and said, "We thank the Lord."

Miss Anderson, happy but restrained, thanked all those at the Met who had given her "nothing but encouragement."

Asked if she was ready to assume a second operatic role, Miss Anderson quietly replied:

"First, I must learn to sing this one better."

In her role as the Negro sorceress, a phrase in her lines was omitted—without the singer's knowledge.

It was the judge's derogatory remark about the sorceress' Negro race: "Abbietto sangue de' Negri"—a reference to "vile blood."

STATI UNITI

La rappresentazione al Metropolitan del «Ballo in maschera» di Verdi il mese passato, fu notevolmente più un intreccio di fatti che un'opera. Con tutta la fanfara che accompagnò i fatti importanti, la prima apparizione di Marian Anderson nel ruolo di «Ulrica» ebbe luogo. A sua volta Dimitri Mitropoulos sul podio, non solo ha comunicata la drammatica intensità dello spartito, ma dal canto suo animò lo spettacolo così da farne dell'insieme uno degli elementi più notevoli di questa serata memorabile. Il suo tocco pieno d'autorità e il suo fine senso del ro spiegarono la sotterranea eccitazione che percorse la esecuzione.

Miss Anderson, che da lungo tempo è un idolo del pubblico dei concerti e che ha magnificamente rappresentato la sua razza dovunque essa è apparsa, è un risultato brillante per la direzione del Metropolitan, che ha ingaggiata questa grande artista, certo saremmo stati più lieti se questa cantante avesse calcato il palcoscenico del Metropolitan venti anni fà, quando era all'inizio della sua carriera. Miss Anderson era circondata da un «cast» eccellente; Zinka Milanov come Amelia, Leonard Warren come Riccardo e principalmente Richard Tucker come Renato furono notevoli nelle loro parti. Roberta Peters come il paggio Oscar, usò la sua giovanile figura e il suo buon timbro di voce nel modo più completo. Ma di nuovo per maestria e vivacità dobbiamo rivolgerci all'interpretazione dello spartito, lirica, scintillante, vulcanica, che ne ha dato il direttore Mitropoulos.

Opera: 'Masked Ball'

Miss Anderson Sings With a Rich Voice

By OLIN DOWNES

HISTORY was made last night when Marian Anderson, the famous Negro contralto, as one of the fruits of her distinguished career, sang for the first time in the Metropolitan Opera House and for the first time in opera on any stage.

Miss Anderson's role was that of Ulrica in Verdi's "Un Ballo in Maschera" ("Masked Ball." It is a short but highly dramatic part, one that requires a dramatic personality as well as sumptuous singing. Miss Anderson received a thunderous ovation from the whole house when the curtain rose upon the second scene of the first act, showing Ulrica, the sorceress, stirring her magic brew, while the crowd on the stage regarded her with broken exclamations of awe and reverence.

She proceeded with her first aria, the "Ridell'a bisso." The passage suited well the dark and rich color of the voice, as the simplicity and eloquence of Miss Anderson's singing graced the song. At first, no doubt under the special tensions of the occasion, including the newness of the dimensions and vibrancies of the Metropolitan stage, she wavered a little in pitch. There was accompanying evidence of vacillation and unevenness of breath support in these measures. But before the air was finished the singer had demonstrated the same musicianship and instinct for dramatic communication that she had long since demonstrated on the concert stage.

As the act proceeded and the voice warmed it gained in sonority and concentrated resonance. The first aria lies more comfortably for the voice in its middle register than the second one, the "E lui," which asked more of range and dramatic delivery than the first.

Indeed, the two passages, the first in the dark tonality of C minor, the second in the brighter and more militant major key, significantly supplement each other. Miss Anderson drove this contrast home, at the same time that her voice took on its normal resonance and emotional appeal.

The climax of this scene was Ulrica's powerful, unaccompanied phrase that prophesies Riccardo's death—not by a known enemy, "No-perman d'un amica"—but by the hand of a friend. These words were sung with such meaning that they made the whole scene. There was no moment in which Miss Anderson's interpretation was commonplace or repetitive in effect. In Ulrica's one half-act, by her native sensibility, intelligence, and vocal art, Miss Anderson stamped herself in the memory and the lasting esteem of those who listened.

There is no doubt that repeated appearances in this part and familiarity with the details of its dramatic action will give her unconditional authority and certainty of touch and expression that only experience can bring. At the end of the act the audience would not have enough of Miss Anderson, recalling her again and again before the curtain. Other leading members of the cast, appearing with her, made evident their gratification of Miss Anderson's success.

The performance was a fine one throughout in Richard Tucker's singing of the Riccardo role; in Leonard Warren's Renato—the voice that equips him ideally for the delivery of the famous "ri tu" of the last act; in the exhilarating certainty and effectiveness of Roberta Peters' Oscar, the page—a page equipped not only with voice, but also, may we say, with limbs such as all the women pages appareled as men should display in operaland.

Utterly magnificent was Zinka Milanov's Amelia, grand in manner, gesture, vocal sweep and glory of tone. Then there were the conspirators, the Sam and Tom of Nicola Moscona and Norman Scott, accomplished vocalists and for the nonce comedians who could have been even freer and more Rabelaisian in their jeering laughter—"Ah, ha, ha"—at Renato, confronted with his apparently guilty wife.

One does not ask why, when it had been specifically decided that the production would restore the Verdi plot to its original place, which was the Stockholm of the murdered Gustavus III, that the program kept the old silly names of Sam and Tom for the conspirators of history, Count Warting and Count de Horn, and why Gustavus was not so identified on the list instead of "Riccardo," governor of the Boston that Verdi had to name to please the censors when the opera was first produced.

But again, for all-around mastery and vividness that suffused not only the orchestra but also every detail of the performance, commend us to Mr. Mitropoulos' lyrical, blazing, volcanic interpretation of the score. The theatre is evidently in his blood. A few of his tempi erred, perhaps, on the slow side, but who that heard will ever forget the torrent of orchestral tone that swept the voices and the drama itself forward on its crest, yet ignored no minor issue or detail of the whole?

Gala Performance

Verdi's "Masked Ball," revived last night at the Metropolitan Opera, encountered difficulties even before it was first performed. The censors objected to the assassination of a monarch, therefore the locale and the protagonists had to be shifted to a faraway American colony whose governor could be slain without planting subversive ideas in the minds of royal subjects. Perhaps the original version should now be restored, but it really matters little. True, a bad libretto was made even worse, but whether Mr. Tucker's Riccardo be the King of Sweden or Governor of Massachusetts, Verdi makes him a man wrestling with his conscience.

Riccardo was in fine voice and realized—as did the others—that Verdi's vocal flourishes must be taken unblushingly and without apology. Only thus can their true dramatic force be realized. Mr. Tucker was just as efficient in the fast, almost buffa-like staccatos of "Ogni cura," as in the elegantly lilting "Canzona," or in the wide-ranging ariosos.

Renato is one of the well realized characters in the opera. When the trusting friend of Riccardo discovers what appears as betrayal, he changes from devoted companion to aroused foe. Mr. Warren carefully avoided developing this into the insane jealousy of Otello, and instead conveyed, very ably, and with subtle variations in vocal timbre, fluctuating desires toward vengeance and toward pity. But he is also master of the grand manner—the wondrous aria "Eri tu" evoked a storm of applause.

Zinka Milanov, who sang Amelia, had a difficult role. As a rule Verdi lavishes particular care on his heroines, who are often stronger and more complicated characters than his heroes. But owing to the poorly spaced libretto, Amelia is somewhat pale as a dramatic figure. In half of the opera she does not really come to grips with her own tragic situation, and it is difficult to make a whole woman out of her. Yet much very beautiful music is allocated to her even in this earlier part.

Nevertheless, if the singer holds her own until the impassioned duet with Riccardo in the second act, a plausible personage emerges from the scene. Then in the third act, when Amelia pleads with her husband, she really comes to life as an operatic creature. This is Verdi's very own territory and he does not fail to overwhelm us with compassion.

Neither did Miss Milanov. She sang her earlier arias with a wonderful feeling for the musical line, but later infused this clear and euphonius singing with the heartrending accents of a doomed woman. There seemed to be no limit to the range of her soaring high notes.

It was a pleasure to see Marian Anderson, the distinguished Negro contralto, on our great operatic stage; an honor—and a privilege for us—long overdue. Hers too is a very difficult role which calls for an ample voice and good control of the widely separated vocal regions, both of which she supplied freely. Miss Anderson, who was acclaimed with frenetic applause, is to be commended especially for the excellent part she took in the complicated ensembles. These call for a great deal of experience which, of necessity, she could not have had. But a great artist always prevails.

There are some dramatically overdrawn and almost distracting personages in this work, such as Oscar, the page. They are "distracting" because they get a larger share of important music than their role in the drama justifies. However, Miss Peters did not take notice of the inconsistencies and proceeded to sing brilliantly. She was invaluable in the ensembles, where she was in charge of the topmost voice and often carried the burden.

Messrs. Marsh, Moscona, Scott, De Paolis and McCracken joined the principals in a truly gala performance; a term that should be saved for such occasions.

It was Mr. Graf who had perhaps the most difficult assignment in the performance of "Ballo." Musically, this opera is equally as great as the three famous ones that mark Verdi's middle period, but the dramatic construction offers mere tableaux until the issues are drawn. The stage director wisely let the music take its course and did not attempt to read into the plot and action more than is there. In this he showed good judgment and taste.

Mr. Mitropoulos seems to be made to officiate in the pit. "Masked Ball" is overflowing with music that is more exacting than that demanded by Verdi's earlier scores. The many finely wrought introductions to acts and scenes received particular care, and one of them was played three times. This was owing to some crossed signals, but since each one of the repetitions proved to be better than the previous one, there is no need for objection.

The conductor's greatest achievement was the tight yet flexible command of the ensembles. He had the game in his own hand throughout the evening and the result was a lively, taut, and authoritative performance.

Marian Anderson Makes History at Metropolitan

By ROBERT COLEMAN

(Reprinted from Saturday's late edition.)

History was made at the Metropolitan Opera House last evening, when Marian Anderson became the first Negro artist ever to sing opera on its venerable stage. Impresario Rudolf Bing chose the role of Ulrica, the fortune teller in "The Masked Ball," for her debut.

In the past 29 years, Miss Anderson has become a popular and beloved concert contralto. Her rich voice has thrilled hundreds of thousands of music-lovers throughout the nation. Naturally, when word came that she was finally to appear at the Met, her admirers stormed the box-office there.

TICKETS VANISHED from the racks like snowflakes under a warm sun. Brokers were offered sums that would pay your apartment rent for a month or two for a pair of the precious ducats. Miss Anderson and "The Masked Ball" became the "hottest ticket in town."

It was like the annual opening of the season at the Met Friday evening. Lines of disappointed Anderson fans were turned away. Crowds jammed the sidewalks and streets out front. As one pushed through the throngs into the lobby, voices rang out: "Have you got an extra ticket? What do you want for it? I'll reach!"

But the desperate were overly optimistic. For no one wanted to part with his priceless pasteboards. Inside, there was a veritable fashion parade, for this was an event long to be remembered.

Now, this is not going to be a review in the usual sense. It couldn't, and shouldn't, be. For Miss Anderson was under a great strain, with history riding on her distinguished shoulders. It must have been a terribly taxing, but nevertheless gratifying, occasion for her. Few artists have ever made a bow at the Met under more trying circumstances.

WE THOUGHT she acquitted herself with credit. She had poise and assurance. If she was not at her vocal peak, that was quite understandable in view of the fact that she was entering a new medium and forecasting a new era. Her admirers gave her a tremendously enthusiastic ovation, one that came from their hearts.

In honor of Miss Anderson's initial appearance at the Met, Bing surrounded her with a gilt-edged cast. Zinka Milanov, Richard Tucker and Leonard Warren were outstanding in other roles. It was as if they were singing in tribute to their new associate. Roberta Peters also used her coloratura to advantage.

Dimitri Mitropoulos, who made an auspicious bow as a Met conductor with an electrifying reading of "Salome" recently, again demonstrated what an asset he is to the staff of batoneers.

But this is all beside the point, which is that it was Miss Anderson's night at the Met. It was a culmination of more than a quarter of a century of achievement for her. It meant that because of her magnificent contributions to American music, the doors of the world's greatest opera house would henceforth be open to other gifted artists of her race. We can think of no one more worthy of that honor.

Marian Anderson Makes Met Debut

Famed Negro Contralto Scores A Triumph

By PAUL R. ALLERUP
International News Service Staff Writer

NEW YORK, Jan. 8.—Marian Anderson and the Metropolitan Opera joined Friday night in making American operatic history when the world-acclaimed contralto made her debut at the venerable old house—the first Negro ever to sing there.

It was an occasion few who were there will forget. Supercharged with an excitement and expectancy that flicked like an imp through the huge auditorium, touching everyone—audience, musicians, singers and even the stage hands.

Besides marking Marian Anderson's debut at the Met, her appearance as Ulrica the sorceress in Verdi's "The Masked Ball" actually marked her debut on the operatic stage in a career that has taken her to three continents as concert singer and soloist.

A Dream Comes True

It was the attainment of what she has called an "impossible dream"—a dream she first had as a child in her native Philadelphia.

The usually calm contralto came to this peak of her 29-year career understandably nervous, and the nervousness showed just a little in her opening phrases.

Had she not showed any reaction to the emotional impact of the evening, she'd not have been human. So intense and so electric was the atmosphere created by the sell-out audience. Many of them were of her own race, whose triumph this was, too.

For the first appearance of the woman possessed of what Arturo Toscanini once described as "a voice that comes once in a century." Manager Rudolf Bing assembled a masterful cast to surround his new star — Richard Tucker, Leonard Warren, Roberta Peters, Zinka Milanov, and on the conductor's podium was Dimitri Mitropoulos.

Ovation Greets Her

Marian Anderson's role was not a starring one. She has one scene, a thrilling one, the second scene of Act One.

When the curtain went up on the scene, and she was the gypsy Ulrica, stirring her green-smoking cauldron of magic brew, the audience's pent-up excitement burst loose. For minutes the applause thundered, while Mitropoulos stood immovable and the musicians sat silent.

Finally, the ovation ended, Mitropoulos raised his baton, the music began, and at this moment, as her voice poured through the vastness that has heard the giant voices of almost a century, Marian Anderson fulfilled her life's hope.

Welcome From Milanov

As noted, there was tremulousness in her voice, which endeared her all the more to the listeners, ranging from the Duchess of Windsor and Margaret Truman to many of the Met's own stars who also came to listen, and to elevator operators, secretaries, waitresses, businessmen and all the people who make a city.

When the curtain fell, there was only a scattering of applause as the crowd waited for the curtain calls. When Marian Anderson, with the other featured singers, came back on stage, the thunder and shouts rolled out again.

There was call after call, until at last she and Zinka Milanov came out alone. The soprano impulsively threw her arms around the newcomer, and there was another terrific demonstration.

Marian Anderson In Debut at Met

Marian Anderson, famous Negro contralto, took the Met's audience by storm in her debut last Friday in Verdi's "Un Ballo in Maschera" (Masked Ball)—but it was a social rather than artistic triumph.

Probably that had to be expected. There were obvious extenuating circumstances for Miss Anderson's nervousness and the unsure tone of her voice. Her Met debut—the first Negro singer to attain that distinction—obviously was a tremendous emotional trial.

Singer Was Nervous

The fact remains, however, that the opera's second scene—the only one in which the gypsy Ulrica appears—failed to click until toward the end when Miss Anderson seemed to have overcome her nervousness. However, the dramatic potentialities of the scene, even under the inspired and intense guidance that Conductor Dimitri Mitropoulous brought to the performance, never were fully caught.

It will be of interest to take another look at the opera after Miss Anderson has portrayed the role of Ulrica a few times. Until then there remains a suspicion that the highly dramatic quality of Miss Anderson's voice may not be matched by an equal acting ability and therefore may lose rather than gain effectiveness on stage.

The contrast between her performance and such proven troopers as ZZinka Milanov, Roberta Peters, Richard Tucker and Leonard Warren was quite striking. The most charitable attitude is to write this off to Miss Anderson's lack of operatic experience and her emotional strain last Friday. H. L.

MYRA HESS SOLOIST WITH PHILHARMONIC

Domenico Cimarosa, who lives today almost entirely through his opera, "Il Matrimonio Segreto," composed a stage work named "Il Fanatico per gli Antichi Romani" in 1777. It had to wait until last night to receive its first performance from the New York Philharmonic-Symphony.

Dimitri Mitropoulos conducted the score, a typical example of the elegant, empty writing of many composers working in Mozart's time. The thematic material is pleasant but lacks imagination and is virtually devoid of personality. There is, however, a good-natured, bubbling quality about the piece.

The Roussel Symphony in G minor is no stranger hereabouts, and is by way of being a specialty of the Boston Symphony. Mr. Mitropoulos conducted this energetic score with much relish for its sonority, hurling tremendous volumes of tone through Carnegie Hall in the climactic sections, of which there are several.

Much interest attached to Dame Myra Hess' performance of the Brahms D minor Piano Concerto. Usually Dame Myra is heard in Mozart or Beethoven, and she has not often presented this work. She played it as though she hadn't heard or read that the concerto is supposed to be for men only.

She addressed herself to the music with considerable force, sounding out the heroic themes with a strongly assertive quality. There was nothing "womanly" about her playing.

Except that Dame Myra did not pound. She never does. Last night she drew a rich tone from the piano that was a superb vehicle for the rich keyboard writing. Her interpretation was that of an experienced artist and in the second movement, wondrously lyrical. H. C. S.

CONCERTS AND RECITALS

By Francis D. Perkins

Mitropoulos Conducts

Dimitri Mitropoulos, who had completed his successful sojourn at the Metropolitan Opera House two days before, returned to the Philharmonic-Symphony Orchestra's conductorship with last night's concert in Carnegie Hall. Brahms's Piano Concerto in D minor, with Dame Myra Hess as the soloist, occupied the major portion of the program; it followed Domenico Cimarosa's little known overture to "Il Fanatico per gli Antichi Romani" and Albert Roussel's Third Symphony, in G minor.

This, it was noted, was Dame Myra's twenty-eighth appearance with the Philharmonic; the concerto had been her choice when she first played with this orchestra twenty-three years ago. Yesterday's interpretation of a work whose length is matched by its musical content and expressive resources was eminently satisfying; it told of entire understanding of the music in its internal and external aspects, a disclosure of its full emotional range and an equally comprehensive dynamic span. With intimacy of mood, there was also the requisite largeness of scale for Brahms' more outspoken measures; the tone, both in sonorous climaxes and in quieter episodes, was persuasively musical. The orchestral playing under Mr. Mitropoulos also revealed expressive sympathy.

The orchestral performance also showed awareness of the differences of style between the concerto and the eighteenth and twentieth century works heard earlier in the evening. This is the first time that the Cimarosa overture had figured in a Philharmonic program; its melodic freshness entitles it to further hearings. The Roussel Symphony, which has not been neglected since its premiere in Boston in 1930, gave an impression of musical conciseness, ample melodic invention and an effective variety and contrast of bright and darker emotional and tonal hues; it had a brilliant, clearly wrought and revealing performance by Mr. Mitropoulos and his musicians.

Chamber Ensemble

The Philharmonic Chamber Ensemble presented a concert Saturday night at the Y. M. H. A. Auditorium that continued with vast success the high cultural traditions it has established in the short space of four seasons. The group, whose size varies according to the explicit demands of the music, culls its members from the ranks of the New York Philharmonic-Symphony, thereby enabling orchestral instrumentalists to appear in the unaccustomed role of soloist. Once provided the opportunity to display their virtuosity that temperament, the men outdo themselves to mold performances that reveal fully their own skills and simultaneously reflect glory on their orchestra.

That, at any rate, was the impression created on this occasion. For its program the ensemble chose Mozart's Quartet for flute, violin, viola and cello, Dohnanyi's Suite, Op. 10; Paul Creston's Suite, Op. 56 (which was given its world premiere), Ravel's Sonata for violin and cello and Stravinsky's Octet, the latter conducted by Dimitri Mitropoulos.

Throughout, the readings were technicaly adroit, the balances well considered and the sonorities rich and effulgent. As orchestral players, it was to be expected that the group navigates comfortably in the seas of differing musical styles, but the degree of expressive understanding which the ensemble invariably demonstrated was extraordinary, to say the least. According to a printed statement, the concert was designed as a memorial to Alma Morgenthau, a commissioner and patroness of chamber music. That great lady, one is convinced, would have been proud of the Philharmonic's achievement.

Mr. Creston's new Suite for piano, viola and flute in no single way represents him at his best. It is overlong, lacking in melodic ingenuity, and its thematic elaborations are pale and finicky. Despite an expert performance—with the composer himself at the piano—the Suite quite failed to yield more than the scantest pleasure.

WORDS and MUSIC

By Harriett Johnson

Mennin Symphony; Serkin's Brahms

Peter Mennin's Sixth Symphony, given its New York premiere by the Philharmonic-Symphony last night in Carnegie Hall, is a work by an expert craftsman with significant ideas as well.

Though Mennin will not reach his 32d birthday until May 17, his maturity as a composer of symphonies belies his youth. It is evident that his closeness to the symphonic form is a deeply-felt compulsion, evidenced by the spontaniety and inevitability with which he devolops his themes.

Mennin once said to me that for practical purposes he might like to write music more popular in idiom than his symphonies, but that he just couldn't. "I don't feel music that way," he concluded.

The Sixth Symphony was commissioned by the Louisville Symphony and first performed by this ensemble in November, 1953.

It is a work of relatively big dimensions, taking about 25 minutes to play; and it is not easy to absorb upon first hearing. The composition appears to have a lofty quality, both architecturally and emotionally speaking, but Dimitri Mitropoulos, who conducted, overplayed the orchestra so much during the first and last movement, that the ear was exhausted by the bombast. At the end I wasn't sure of anything but that I had heard too many climaxes. As a result, no climax made its full point.

Mitropoulos was dynamic, as usual, and conducted brilliantly without score.

Fortunately, the "Andante" of the Brahams Second Piano Concerto in B Flat Major is the kind of piece which can only be played with repose. The listeners were able to breathe easily during its progress. Rudolf Serkin, pianist, who looks like a bundle of gyrating nerves and muscles at the keyboard, played the gigantic work magnificently, a performance which was enhanced by having one's eyes closed.

Serkin not only possesses in abundance the technical virtuosity necessary for this piece but he feels the phrasing so intensely and with such sympathy that the result is a melodic synthesis of tonal beauty and profound understanding.

Mitropoulos collaborated in a performance which was well integrated so far as ensemble and soloist were concerned.

Symphony Adds Laurel For Mennin

By LOUIS BIANCOLLI.

The Sixth Symphony of an enormously gifted young American composer was given a brilliant New York premiere by Dimitri Mitropoulos and the Philharmonic in Carnegie Hall last night.

The composer, who was on hand for the well-merited ovation, was 31-year-old Peter Mennin of Erie, Pa., first heard from in 1945 when he walked off with the George Gershwin Memorial Award.

Sharing the spotlight with him last night was Rudolf Serkin, who presented his own credentials by way of Brahms' Second Piano Concerto, and very persuasive credentials they were.

Mr. Mitropoulos gave the Mennin score the kind of reading that is the only answer to a composer's prayers—it had the ring of absolute conviction all through, the fervor that put the conductor not one removed from the composer, but right there as his other self.

Fresh Classic.

It is an impressive piece of music, this Sixth Symphony—just as Mr. Mennin's previous scores have been. It has a solid foundation, a sure classical grip, and yet an exhilarating sense of freshness, too.

Here and there Mr. Mennin reminds you of other composers—the relentless momentum of the modern Russians, the fluid rhythms of Debussy and Ravel, the gathering inner tension of Hindemith.

But mostly he remains Peter Mennin, a composer with an idiom of his own, a mastery of the orchestra, and an incredible restlessness.

That was my one misgiving about the music last night. There was little true repose. Energy built up in giant swirls and motion equaled energy in a ceaseless, headling lunge.

Even the slow sections were restless with turmoil and tension, which is all right up to a point even in an adagio sostenuto. But relaxation has to set in somewhere.

Restless Music.

It was an exciting composition, confident of direction and dramatic in the way it swept up themes and fragments of themes in its restless plunge. If only Mr. Mennin had come up for air.

Mr. Mitropoulos joined Mr. Serkin in a strong and eloquent rendering of the Brahms concerto. Here, too, there was tension, but tension set off by a restful and haunting lyricism.

The program opened in lighter vein with the "Wedding of Comacho" overture, a brief interlude of Mendelssohn's 16th year which contains a little bit of everybody including a genius in the making.

Sonorous Evening

ONE may disagree with Mr. Mitropoulos on this or that, but whenever he comes back to take over his orchestra one is glad to observe a musician in action who not only conducts but has a positive conception of the music he performs. Now last night in Carnegie Hall he may have been a little over vigorous, but the quality of the music had something to do with that; at any rate, he carried out a scheme that was planned from beginning to end.

Mr. Mennin's Sixth Symphony, first performed by the Philharmonic Orchestra on this occasion, is a young man's music—confident and optimistic. Mr. Mennin knows the metier and handles his material with facility and fluency. His contrapuntal technique seems to be the result of a natural bent; it is not the "barbed wire" variety, nor is it a device, rather an idiom. Another attractive feature of this music is its avoidance of little diversionary effects.

The symphony is hard and lean. Only primary colors are used in the orchestra but the large patches thus created are pretty well ordered. The dynamic scheme is just as simple—relentlessly mounting toward a climax. The first movement impressed me as a strong piece even though austere.

Simplicity and sustained melodic writing characterize the second movement. Again the colors were stark except for a little poetic pleading by the oboe, but after a while the big climaxes were back and the movement did not afford a good contrast to the preceding one.

The intensity of mood and sound continued unabated in the last movement. This gifted young composer has plenty of good ideas and can write nicely drawn lines, but he always wants to get there fustest with the mostest of instruments, and by the end I longed for a little relaxation.

Still, there is good reason to believe that eventually Mr. Mennin will discover that drums, cymbals, and other noise makers should be kept in a safe deposit box until needed for exceptional occasions.

Brahms' second piano concerto is a friendlier work than the dark and hard-won D minor. But the symphonic penchant is still there, in fact, Brahms added a fourth movement, a bona fide scherzo, a rather unusual feature in a concerto, and he goes far afield in exploiting it symphonically.

Mr. Serkin is born to this music. He looks like the "scholarly" pianist, and he can be a bit angular, but he has a warm romantic soul and his temperament is admirably suited to Brahms. Pianistic technique he possesses in abundance, but he does not flaunt it and goes to work with earnest devotion.

On the whole the concerto was hard driven and exceedingly rhythmical. Coming on the heels of the rather noisy Mennin symphony I found myself surfeited with sonorities. Well, perhaps this full-bodied music needs to be nudged along in such manner, on the other hand, the lovely horn solos that provide the sunshine were somewhat lost in the melee. But, then, I often wonder whether these two concertos can ever be made fully palatable. Every square inch in the score is filled with black notes, and the pianist too is up to his elbows in thick music. At any rate, since we've got them we must learn to live with them; perhaps a complete about-face, a mellow and toned-down performance could bring them closer to us.

Peter Mennin, whose Symphony No. 6 was given its New York premiere last night.

Philharmonic-Symphony:

Hail Mennin Music

By MILES KASTENDIECK

DIMITRI MITROPOULOS and the Philharmonic-Symphony gave a brilliant concert in Carnegie Hall last night. Some of the brilliance came out of the first New York performance of Mennin's Sixth Symphony. A great deal radiated from the Brahms B-flat Piano Concerto with Rudolf Serkin as soloist.

For the 31-year-old American composer, his sixth symphonic effort indicates a maturing talent still burning brightly. It has, in fact, reached a point where stern disciplinary action should be taken.

There was enough material in three movements to make two symphonies.

The need for simplification became evident in the first movement. He became so busily engaged contrapuntally that the work sounded far too busy. The strength of the meditative slow movement diminished as it progressed. Again in the third, an excess of notes and noise tended to distract rather than to hold the listener.

While individuality characterizes the score, a strong influence of contemporary Russian composers permeates the music. The overall impression of its worth may be attributed in part to the amazing skill with which Mitropoulos presented the score, from memory as usual.

The performance of the Brahms fairly crackled with static electricity. Serkin played with this effusive vitality, rhythmic urge, and dramatic accent. His excessive incandescence was so remarkably balanced by lyrical sensitivity that one bows to sheer genius at the piano. As often before, Serkin emerged from this performance a phenomenal pianist.

Conductor and orchestra, caught up in the general excitement, attained an intensity of communication as breathless as it was soothing.

It had indicated how bright and alert it was at the start of the concert with a winning performance of Mendelssohn's seldom-heard overture "The Wedding of Camacho," which for all its derivative nature proclaimed his genius at 16.

Philharmonic Plays Gould 'Show Piece'

Morton Gould's "Show Piece for Orchestra" received its first New York performance when it was presented by Dimitri Mitropoulos and the Philharmonic—Symphony on Saturday evening in Carnegie Hall.

The work, about twenty minutes long, is slick, superficial and has all the permanence of an ice cube in a glass of hot water. Mr. Gould's ability to orchestrate is well known, and "Show Piece" is full of novel sounds and effects. That is about all. The partiality that Mr. Mitropoulos has shown for Mr. Gould's music through the years is hard to explain.

John Corigliano, the concertmaster of the orchestra, was soloist in a sweet, small-scaled performance of the Sibelius Violin Concerto. Also on the program was Schumann's Second Symphony, distinguished by a beautifully planned and delivered slow movement. Schumann never spoke more eloquently and elegiacally than in this movement, and Mr. Mitropoulos' interpretation pointed up the message without overstressing it. H. C. S.

The Philharmonic

Two specialties marked the Saturday night concert by Dimitri Mitropoulos and the New York Philharmonic-Symphony: the performance by concertmaster John Corigliano of Sibelius' D Minor Concerto for violin and orchestra, and a first New York playing of Morton Gould's "Show Piece for Orchestra." Schumann's C Major Symphony, No. 2, headed up the evening.

Mr. Corigliano's reading of the Sibelius Concerto was, in general, more devoted to the work's lyrical aspects than to the opportunities it provides for semi-bravura expression. It was a sweet and cleanly performance, a bit attenuated in its first movement tempo, but possessed of good energy. And the final Allegro was a model of verve and fire. Mr. Mitropoulos' accompaniment, too, was controlled and well calculated as a firm background for solo passages and a mountain of sound in the climaxes.

Since the "Show Piece" was commissioned by Columbia Records to help demonstrate contemporary recording techniques, it puts the cart quite naturally behind the horse and devotes itself to an exposition of orchestrational devices. The composer has cast the work in a theme and variations form, but the texture is so laden with instrumentation for its own sake that the ear's reaction is to an aural thesaurus of orchestration rather than to music as such.

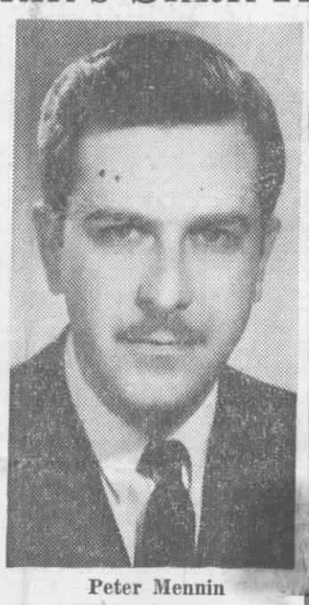
Music: Mennin's Sixth Has Premiere

Symphony Performed by Philharmonic

PHILHARMONIC-SYMPHONY, Dimitri Mitropoulos conducting, Rudolf Serkin, pianist. At Carnegie Hall.
Overture, The Wedding of Camacho, Mendelssohn
Symphony No. 6 (first N. Y. performance) ..... Mennin
Piano Concerto No. 2 ..... Brahms

By OLIN DOWNES

DIMITRI MITROPOULOS, conducting the concert of the Philharmonic-Symphony last night in Carnegie Hall, had the initiative to open the program with the early, little known and, it would appear, little valued overture of Felix Mendelssohn to "The Wedding of Camacho."



The product of the 16-year-old Mendelssohn, it is delightful music, fresh, spontaneous, and poetical, too. There are pages of symphonic padding, but it is not perfunctory. There is the clear influence of Weber, and there is the romantic spirit of the early nineteenth century. And there is music, living music.

It has not the perfect form of the incomparable overture to "A Midsummer Night's Dream," which came only a year later. But it is beauty, and fancy and genius. Mr. Mitropoulos conducted the overture delightfully, too.

Peter Mennin's Sixth Symphony was played for the first time in New York. It is a busy and lively symphony, full of zip and elan; the work of a young man of 32, who has enough and to spare of the yeast of his years. The form is in the broad sense of the word traditional, but the ideas profounded in the introduction are originally treated in the pages and movements that follow.

The structural scheme is elaborately worked out. The most brilliant movement and the one that rushes most spontaneously to its conclusion is the first. The second is more reflectively composed, and could be analyzed interestingly throughout its length. The finale is the cor ollary of the opening movement, brilliant, fugacious, and mostly loud. This characteristic is found elsewhere and too often in the symphony, which needs more of dynamic contrast, more of balance and poise as well as excitement.

Peter Mennin

Serkin Piano Soloist at Carnegie Hall

Personally speaking, we would like to see a style more selective and concentrated. Mr. Mennin has already written six symphonies; he has time now to take his time and write them less lavishly and with more conciseness in the many years before him. The vigor of his expression, the force of his harmonic style, will doubtless remain with him. The symphony had a warm welcome. The composer was repeatedly called back to the stage with Mr. Mitropoulos, who had put all his interpretive power into the performance.

The concert ended with an unforgettable performance of the Brahms B flat piano concerto with Rudolf Serkin as the soloist, and Mr. Mitropoulos as his splendid coadjutor. The first two movements of this concerto are respectively mountainous and demoniac, and so they were played. Beauty of piano tone cannot invariably be expected in that vast brute of the piano part of what is actually a first movement of a symphony for piano and orchestra. The performance here was properly rugged and lyrical by turns, passionate and of a noble architecture.

The tonal beauty came with slow movement, which held the audience silent and absorbed from the first note to the last, and in the finale, which had every grace and caprice of the music that is so captivating in its light and shadow, pensiveness and laughter. Ever and anon is the Hungarian twist that gives added charm to this movement of never-ending invention and play of thought.

Here Mr. Serkin was inimitable. And here, especially, the conductor and pianist collaborated as one in the most felicitous treatment of the finale that we can remember.

Music: Menuhin and Philharmonic

He Plays Concertos of Bartok and Brahms

PHILHARMONIC-SYMPHONY, Dimitri Mitropoulos conducting; Yehudi Menuhin, violinist. At Carnegie Hall.
Vocalise ..... Rachmaninoff
Violin Concerto ..... Bartok
Violin Concerto ..... Brahms

By HOWARD TAUBMAN

THERE are easier ways of making a living as a violin soloist than taking on the the kind of assignment Yehudi Menuhin attempted with the New York Philharmonic-Symphony at Carnegie Hall last night. Mr. Menuhin could have played either of the two concertos he undertook and earned his evening's fee. The Bartók and Brahms concertos are both massive, challenging affairs, and a violinist who performs one has plenty to do.

The problems that the two concertos pose are strikingly different—technically and musically. The two works require markedly different orientations. The Bartók is a strongly personal product of our own century, filled with dissonance and startling rhythms. It often pits a bristling solo violin against a turbulent, violent orchestra, and at other times it gives the soloist subdued, affecting passages to sing. The Brahms, as every one knows, is a glowing, spacious work of late romanticism.

Both conectros need a big interpreter, even if their musical styles are far apart in spirit. One had the feeling last night that Mr. Menuhin was more comfortable with the Brahms style. He understood the Bartók approach, and he tackled the music with drive and intensiity. But if this work is to come off with all its power, it must be played with a kind of controlled ferocity that one imagines a Paganini to have had.

Yehudi Menuhin

Mr. Menuhin knew perfectly well what was wanted, but when he drove too hard, he had a tendency to force the tone and to fall into impurities of pitch. In the slow movement, with its affecting theme and variatoins, the violinist played full command of his r sources. The result was suavit of tone and a persauasive pro jection of the music.

The Brahms concerto was accomplished in a way that showed Mr. Menuhin's experience adn knowledge of its tradition. It may be that he continued to push too hard here and there to be an interpreter in the grand manner, but the essential understanding was there.

Dimitri Mitropoulos was the conductor, and he and the Philharmonic did their share in the concertos with authority and polish. Mr. Mitropoulos, who has deep sympathies for omdern idioms, conducted the difficult Bartók work with tremendous virtuosity. The opening Rachmaninoff Vocalise, so simple and expressive in its old-fashioned way, was played most agreeably. It served to ease the audience into the exacting world of Bartók.

ORCHESTRA TOURS

Three American Ensembles Will Travel In Europe and Asia This Year

By HOWARD TAUBMAN

ONE becomes so inured to fine words being followed by no deeds that it comes as a delightful shock to note how rapidly the International Exchange Program has turned plans into action. In the few months since I. E. P. decided to expand its activities, it has performed what amounts almost to a miracle.

It is now established that three major symphony orchestras, representing the highest standards in American performance, will be crossing the seas this year. The Philadelphia and New York Philharmonic - Symphony Orchestras will play in Europe, and the Symphony of the Air, once Arturo Toscanini's N. B. C. Symphony, will travel in Asia. Not since 1940 when the N. B. C. Symphony led by Mr. Toscanini and the All-American Youth Orchestra headed by Leopold Stokowski toured in South America has there been anything like the concentrated export set for 1955.

And the end is not in sight. Robert C. Schnitzer, general manager of I. E. P., who has shown energy and imagination in getting these tours arranged, was observing the other day that there are other plans in the study stage.

Extensive Program

The orchestral tours are only part of an extensive program to show our friends in other lands that we have an active artistic life. It has finally been recognized in high quarters in Washington that the battle for men's minds and hearts can be waged on the cultural front. Indeed, the cultural front means a great deal to other peoples. The Russians have been busy in this area since the end of World War II.

The United States has not been inert. I. E. P. has been functioning since 1949, but the program has been a spasmodic affair. Now it has the blessings of the government and even some financial support from it. There is an awareness of how important this activity can be, and I. E. P., which is administered by the American National Theatre and Academy (ANTA), is doing a good job of implementing the policy.

The tours of the three orchestras are excellent steps in the right direction. It is true that some of the ports of call made by the New York and Philadelphia ensembles will be in centers where American orchestras have been heard before. But there is always the chance of reaching new listeners. In addition, some of the places visited will be seeing and hearing an American orchestra in the flesh for the first time.

Itineraries

Let us glance at the itineraries. The Philharmonic will start in Edinburgh early in September, where it will play for six successive nights during the festival. Dimitri Mitropoulos, Guido Cantelli and George Szell will conduct two concerts each. Then the orchestra will play in the Netherlands, Belgium, Germany, France, Switzerland, Italy and Greece, and will wind up the tour with two concerts in London. Mr. Mitropoulos and Mr. Cantelli will divide the conducting duties after Edinburgh.

The two final concerts in London, by the way, should be on the agenda. They are in effect, a belated correction of a bad situation that occurred in 1951. That year the New York Philharmonic went to Europe and played fourteen concerts in Edinburgh and then came home. Under the terms of its agreement with the Edinburgh Festival, the Philharmonic could not play anywhere in Britain except at the festival. But London was outraged at the thought that a leading American orchestra had come all the way to the United Kingdom and did not play in the capital.

The Philadelphia Orchestra, conducted by Eugene Ormandy, will lead off an American Salute to France with three concerts in May. Then it expects to appear in Belgium, Portugal, Spain, Italy, the Netherlands, Switzerland, Austria, West Germany, Finland and Sweden.

The Philadelphia and New York orchestras will appear in some of the same cities, just as there will be unduplicated stops. The result is that we are casting a wide net in Europe, and where both orchestras play, it should only buttress our claim that we have an abundance of fine symphonic ensembles.

In Far East

The Symphony of the Air, starting in May, will play in five Japanese cities—Tokyo, Nagoya, Osaka, Kobe and Kyoto. Then it will go on to give concerts in such widely dispersed centers as Seoul, Taipei, Hong Kong, Manila and Honolulu. It will also play programs for American military personnel. A. Strok is booking the tour.

This orchestra does not have a permanent conductor. For the tour it has invited two gifted American leaders to share the podium, Walter Hendl of the Dallas Symphony and Thor Johnson of the Cincinnati Symphony.

These tours are not subsidized from beginning to end by I. E. P. The funds made available to I. E. P. are being made to go a long way. In the case of the New York Philharmonic, I. E. P. provides transportation for the orchestra to and from London. The rest of the tour is a Philharmonic responsibility. The other orchestras are traveling on schemes that divide responsibility along similar lines.

If all goes well, these tours should prove to be rewarding for us and for our friends abroad. They should not be allowed, however, to become a big thing for 1955 only. A cultural program should be a permanent part of our foreign policy even if, should such a happy day come, hot and cold wars cease to be.

CONCERTS

Yehudi Menuhin

Bela Bartok and Johannes Brahms each composed only one violin concerto; Yehudi Menuhin played both of them with the Philharmonic - Symphony Orchestra last night in Carnegie Hall. The musicians conducted by Dimitri Mitropoulos devoted the first few minutes of the program to Rachmaninoff's orchestral version of his own Vocalise. They played it sonorously and expressively, although the melody seemed a little too opulently stated at times.

In this juxtaposition, the two violin concertos were well contrasted. The Bartok work has had several performances since the Philharmonic, with Tossy Spivakovsky, first brought it to us in 1943. Melodic and dissonant elements are well balanced and likewise the solo and the orchestral scores; it has a well organized form and a variety of often shifting rather than long maintained moods. There are swift, animated episodes and lyrically reflective ones; the former hint, but do not emphasize, the influence of the late noted Hungarian composer's nationality. An occasional vagueness of melodic contour and a touch of dourness in some of the spirited episodes were elements in an impression which the reviewer had rather not consider as final in an interesting, sometimes tantalizing work.

Mr. Menuhin, who triumphed over the Bartok concerto's technical exactions, played it also with interpretative discernment and apparent understanding; the justness of the dynamic proportion of the orchestral part of the music under Mr. Mitropoulos' leadership was admirable. Early in the Brahms work there was a slight edge in the noted violinist's tone, but this soon vanished, and thenceforth his performance had its customary appeal. His interpretation was expressively discerning and revealing, disclosing both the generally large and spacious scale of the work and its more intimate measures; there were more than the usual changes of pace in the first movement, but yet these seemed authentic and in character. Here again, the orchestra's performance was notable for its proportion and its expressive sympathy; the soloist, conductor and ensembles were partners in a well attained artistic purpose.

BENEFACTOR

Dimitri Mitropoulos has proved a good friend to the music department of the State University of Iowa. Twice he has gone out to appear as a piano soloist with the university symphony orchestra, under James Dixon. This year he is going out to lead the orchestra.

On May 26 he will conduct it in the Berlioz Requiem. The choral forces will be supplied by the university's chorus, and the local orchestra will be supplemented by a number of off-campus musicians who have asked for the experience of playing under Mr. Mitropoulos.

Yehudi Menuhin

Yehudi Menuhin was soloist in the Brahms D major Concerto with Dmitri Mitropoulos Saturday night when the Philharmonic offered a program resplendent in rich fare for modernists.

Milhaud's "Suite Provencale," the world premiere of the Gershwin Award-winning piece, "On a Quiet Theme," by Kenneth Gaburo, and Prokofieff's massive "Scythian Spring" encompassed Brahms on every side: Mr. Menuhin stood tranquilly amid this barrage of twentieth century idioms, and evoked once again from the Brahms the beauty and joyousness that since childhood he has always discovered there, and revealed to us.

The freshness and unique purity of his playing is exhilarating; no other violinist has such speaking eloquence in the tone alone, for it stems from a delicate poise of elements—conscious and subconscious, technical and intuitive, that is getting very rare in an age where, rather than risk the vulnerability of this intangible fusion, our young performers are settling for an intellectual athleticism. Yet it is this very wholeness that enables him to speak intelligently from the heart and reach—as he ever has, the heart of audiences.

Young Mr. Gaburo does not appear to speak from the heart, but he does speak subtly and colorfully from a cultivated and tasteful mind. His "Quiet Theme" seemed more a texture than a theme but the little work revealed great promise in Mr. Mitropoulos' shimmering performance. P. G-H.

Joint Concert March 30

Philharmonic to Introduce Organ at Riverside Church

By Ann Elizabeth Price

Dimitri Mitropoulos and the New York Philharmonic-Symphony Orchestra will move into the nave of the Riverside Church March 30 for a concert to introduce the church's new pipe organ to the public.

For the performance five front pews on either side of the center aisle will be removed in order to accommodate the 110-man orchestra on a platform extending from the top step of the chancel.

And as the first notes of the full symphony orchestra combine with the sonority of the giant Riverside organ, history will be made in the world of sacred music, according to Virgil Fox, church organist.

Mr. Fox, a young virtuoso who has won acclaim for organ concerts in London, Paris, Berlin and Leipzig, said that the Riverside Church organ, under construction for two years, will be the largest (10,000 pipes, 180 stops) in any New York City church and "one of the first five organs in the world."

In an interview yesterday, he and the Rev. Dr. Robert J. McCracken, minister, and Miss Roberta Bailey, assistant to Mr. Fox, showed visitors the console of the instrument. The entire organ has been under construction at the Aeolian-Skinner factory in Boston at a conservatively estimated cost of $100,000.

Dr. McCracken declared that the instrument will create the "atmosphere for worship" at the church. He explained that this meant "every kind of atmosphere—reverence, exaltation—matching the varied moods of the human soul."

The organ has four divisions above the rear galleries, at 121st St., and seven sections at the triforium level above the chancel, where the console is situated, on the 122d St. side. Thus Mr. Fox can control and play antiphonal music on ranks of pipes from approximately a block away.

Pipes range in height from thirty-two feet to the size of a stubby pencil. The double organ combines both Baroque pipes, for clarity, and the Romantic type, for softness. From an unusually small five-manual console, Mr. Fox can sound trumpets, English horns, French horns, flutes, oboes and cellos.

The difficulty of where to put the overflow crowd for the Philharmonic concert, at 8:30 p. m. March 30, and a recital by Mr. Fox at 8:30 p. m. March 25, is a major one now besetting the organ dedication committee, headed by Robert E. Bondy. The cost of the Philharmonic concert has been underwritten by anonymous church contributors, he said, and the performance is being presented without cost.

However, there are only 2,500 seats in the pews. The committee expects to direct late-comers to the assembly hall and gymnasium downstairs and the Riverside Chapel.

At the Metropolitan

By Marion Bauer

Rudolf Bing, General Manager of the Metropolitan Opera Association, announced on Jan. 21 that there will be three new productions during the 1955-56 season, which opens with "Les Contes d'Hoffmann" on Nov. 14. Pierre Monteux is announced as conductor; Cyril Ritchard will stage the production according to Rolf Gerard's scenic and costume designs.

Thomas Schippers, 24-year-old conductor from Kalamazoo, Mich., has been engaged by the Metropolitan. Mr. Schippers will make his debut with the second new production, Donizetti's "Don Pasquale."

In celebration of the 200th anniversary of Mozart's birth, Bruno Walter has been engaged as the conductor of the third new production, "The Magic Flute," with Herbert Graf as director of the staging, and Harry Horner as designer of the settings and costumes.

Mitropoulos' Metropolitan Debut

A sensational success was achieved by the double bill at the Metropolitan on Dec. 15 when several "firsts" were registered. Dimitri Mitropoulos made his debut as an operaconductor. For the first time in many years an elaborate production of a ballet was presented and a new Salome, Christel Goltz, appeared; Blanche Thebom and Raymond Vinay appeared for the first time as Herodias and Herod.

I have seldom witnessed at the Metropolitan such an ovation as the ballet and the opera aroused. Mitropoulos was greeted heartily when he appeared at the opening of the evening. He was called to the stage after both performances and shared with the cast, including the debutante Salome, in the curtain calls that reached the amazing number of twenty.

Throughout, Mitropoulos showed a master hand. Of course, it was in the Strauss opera that he showed his genius, for he squeezed out of the score every ounce of music and effect, and the musicians in the pit followed him to the last drop. It was a sensational reading, musicianly, dramatic, intense and absorbing, to say nothing of what happened on the stage. Naturally, interest centered on Christel Goltz, the young German soprano making her American debut. She has a voice of wide range and power which, after a few minutes, settled down and lost its tremolo. It was equal to all the demands made by Strauss on the vocalist, who has little respite as to high range and fortissimo singing throughout. Miss Goltz played the role as a very young girl which Salome was. She was tempestuous, unbridled, vulgar and vital throughout. A certain restlessness and angularity of movement were disturbing. There was no feeling that, as Mary Garden once said about the role, "After all, Salome was a princess," but this Salome took the audience by storm, and it will be interesting to see how Miss Goltz will handle other roles.

Herod and Herodias were splendidly sung and interpreted by Vinay and Miss Thebom. The role of the young Syrian, Narraboth, was magnificently sung by Bryan Sullivan. Paul Schoeffler was a dignified and rich-voiced Jochanaan.

Preceding "Salome" was the new ballet by Zachary Solov, "Vittorio," to the music of Verdi, adapted and arranged by Julius Burger. This ballet, in three scenes, called for a large company which, thanks to its expert proficiency, presented a work that stood up alongside of other ballets of the same type. That is, it was elaborately mounted, is operatic in feeling, "a voiceless Italian-style opera," Walter Terry called it in the Herald Tribune. As choreographer, Mr. Solov has created some brilliant dance episodes, Spanish in flavor and dramatic in intention. He himself as the premier danseur, is incomparable. Mia Slavenska, appearing as the Princess of the Isle of Spain, was in every way the star, perfect in technique, style and plastic. As ballets go, it was difficult to know whether the role of Vittorio's former nurse was actually a human being or the character of a fairy, but what difference does that make. The role was excellently danced and interpreted by Jean Lee Schoch, and Judith Younger as Vittorio's sweetheart was charming and graceful.

Marian Anderson in Debut

Verdi's "Masked Ball" came back on Jan. 7 with the added news interest of the debut of Marian Anderson with Dimitri Mitropoulos in the pit. Miss Anderson has the opulence of voice, dignity, presence and audience experience to make her appearance on the stage of the Metropolitan an outstanding event in the role of Ulrica. This was a propitious debut.

The second performance took place on Jan. 22 with Zinka Milanov singing Amelia with utmost beauty. Ricardo was impressively played and sung by Richard Tucker, Renato was played by Josef Metternich whose big scene in Act III was perfectly done both vocally and dramatically. Jean Madeira sang the role of Ulrica with intensity and superb voice. Roberta Peters was charming as Oscar. Mitropoulos conducted with insight and the orchestra rarely has sounded so beautiful. The entire performance, with the nice setting by Matislav Doboujinsky and the clever staging by Herbert Graf does credit to the Metropolitan Opera.—A.S.

Philharmonic Slates 43 Soloists

Four instrumentalists will be heard with the Philharmonic Symphony Orchestra for the first time next season, according to 1955-'56 plans announced yesterday. These are Wilhelm Backhaus, seventy-one-year-old pianist; Giovanni Bagarotti, violinist, and Ivry Gitlis, Israeli violinist, and Ventsislav Yankoff, pianist, who are both to make their first American tours. In all, forty-three musicians will appear as soloists during the season, which runs from Oct. 20 to April 29.

Dimitri Mitropoulos will conduct for twelve weeks. Bruno Walter will conduct March 1 to 11; Pierre Monteaux, Nov. 17 to 27; George Szell Dec. 1 to 25, and Guido Cantelli, Dec. 29 to Jan. 22 and March 15 to April 8. Andre Kostelanetz will coduct a special series on four Saturday nights, and Franco Autori will be in charge on two Saturdays. Wilfred Pelletier will again direct the young people's concerts. Special events include a Mozart program with Rudolf Serkin as piano soloist for the opening of the season; Mozart's "Requiem" under Bruno Walter and, early in the season, Act III of Wagner's "Goetterdaemmerung" under Mr. Mitropoulos.

Mitropoulos To Conduct Group of 350

— Dimitri Mitropoulos, conductor of the New York Philharmonic Symphony orchestra, will direct some 350 musicians from the combined State University of Iowa Symphony orchestra and chorus in a presentation of the "Requiem" by Hector Berlioz May 26 in the SUI fieldhouse.

The "Requiem" is performed very rarely because of the large number of musicians needed and the space required for presenting the volume of sound called forth in several passages of the work, according to Himie Voxman, head of the SUI music department.

"This is likely to be the only presentation of the "Requiem" in the Midwest for several years," Voxman estimates. For this reason, and because of the unusual opportunity to perform under the direction of the noted New York conductor, a number of musicians in neighboring cities have asked to take part in the May concert, Voxman says.

Four brass bands will be formed to join the enlarged SUI orchestra and chorus for the presentation, Voxman says.

The Berlioz Requiem was composed in 1837 for presentation at a commemorative service for heroes of the Revolution of 1830. Postponed for political reasons, it was performed later the same year at a service of public mourning for the French soldiers who fell in the Algerian Campaign of October, 1837.

Berlioz regarded the composition as his most outstanding work, writing about it in his later years: "If I were threatened with the burning of all my works except one, it is for the 'Requiem' that I would ask for mercy."

Mitropoulos will be making his third appearance on the SUI campus in directing the Berlioz composition. Twice previously he has performed as piano soloist with the SUI Symphony orchestra, playing under the baton of James Dixon, now conductor of the orchestra. Dixon was then a student of conducting under the late Philip G. Clapp, longtime head of the SUI music department and conductor of the orchestra.

CONCERTS AND RECITALS

PHILHARMONIC-SYMPHONY

CARNEGIE HALL
Concert last night. Conductor: Dimitri Mitropoulos. Soloists: The Sauter-Finegan Band. The program:
Suite Provencale.....Darius Milhaud
Concerto for Jazzband and Symphony Orchestra.....Rolf Liebermann
(First New York Performance)
Symphony No. 3, in E flat ("Eroica"), Beethoven

The applause following Milhaud's "Suite Provencale" had subsided. Suddenly at stage left there appeared a splotch of red, then another and another still. In less than a minute all the dabs had converged and there seated in the midst of Carnegie Hall was the Sauter-Finnegan Band attired in dinner jackets of fire-engine hue and prepared to play music of fire-engine intensity. The occasion was the New York premiere of Rolf Liebermann's Concerto for Jazzband and Symphony Orchestra, with Dimitri Mitropoulos and the somberly garbed Philharmonic-Symphony as the remaining participants. All told, it should have been a good show. Unfortunately, it wasn't.

Mr. Liebermann's Concerto is perhaps best described as an attempt to introduce the procedures of the Baroque concerto grosso into those regions usually inhabited by jazz. The work, in eight movements, alternates between the polished sounds available to the symphony orchestra and the coarser, more uproarious ones common to jazz bands composed largely of ringing brasses. And this, precisely, is what makes the novelty a failure. It takes precious little ingenuity to see-saw from one sonority region to another, and the effect, when it is accomplished, is at best discommoding. The ear is no sooner bathed in a symphonic lull than it is jarred into awakening with sounds such as Jericho's walls knew well.

Indeed, save for one episode, a mambo-finale, the work is no Concerto for Orchestra and Jazzband at all. It is simply a study in resonance contrasts, nothing more. The information implied by the title, therefore, is false, since Mr. Liebermann has not solved the tacky problem confronting any composer of a concerto—that of discovering a homogeneous sonority for soloist and orchestra against which contrasts may be used for the element of highlight.

It is, of course, a matter of speculation whether a jazz-plus-symphony blend is feasible or desirable. The basic characters of the two being inimical, it is rather unlikely that they shall ever be joined in more than a shot-gun wedding. But some interest might surely be evoked by an attempt to bring into a state of union two media which share at least the generic tools and methods of music. That attempt, so far as I know, has not yet been made. Mr. Liebermann, at any rate, has not made it.

A side element of significance in the composer's concerto, however, is its traffic with atonality, specifically of the twelve-tone brand. To his credit, Mr. Liebermann has an uncanny gift of making atonal passages sound wondrously fresh and melodic. His symphonic interludes, a distillation of Scriabin and Berg, though rigorously patterned do not betray their discipline, and are, in fact, quite spontaneously evolved. This, under the strictures of twelve-tonitis, represents a considerable achievement. And the jazz band's music, too, is atonally conceived, though here one is less impressed owing to jazz' natural tendency to wander away from a central key and flirt ferociously with others distantly located. The concerto, in sum, may be ticked off as an experiment gone awry. It may, perhaps, lead to grand things in the future; for certainly it is a beginning rather than an end.

The piece's performance was a shower of virtuoso sparks. Mr. Mitropoulos, normally something of an acrobat on the podium, found in Liebermann's concerto reason to lurch, gyrate, whirl and swoon. But make no mistake—at every moment he had both ensembles firmly under his superb control. This also was the case in Milhaud's jolly, open-air "Suite Provencale," which received a vigorous reading seeded with charm. And to judge by a single hearing, the Sauter-Finnegan outfit can jump with the best of them.

Francescatti With the Philharmonic

ZINO FRANCESCATTI tucked his fiddle under his c'. Saturday evening and proceeded to present superlative readings of the Chausson "Poème" and Lalo's "Symphonie Espagnole" with the Philharmonic-Symphony.

Dimitri Mitropoulos conducted the program and worked in perfect accord with the violinist. It would be hard to overpraise this pair of performances. The Chausson had a pure, singing line, and Mr. Francescatti, without ever once trying to push his bow through the strings, was able to achieve the lyricism of the score. In the Lalo work there were, of course, more pyrotechnics, which the violinist handled with his usual effortless attack.

The evening opened with the first American performance of Paul Emile Ladmirault's "Variations des Airs de Biniou." Ladmirault, a French musician who died in 1944, composed, in these variations, a short (about five minutes), pleasant, nationalistic exercise.

Mr. Mitropoulos included also Roussel's sturdy Symphony No. 3 to round out an evening of French music.

With a noted French violinist, Zino Francescatti, as soloist, the Philharmonic - Symphony Orchestra played French music Saturday night under Dimitri Mitropoulos' direction in Carnegie Hall. The evening began with the first American performance of Paul Emile Ladmirault's "Variations sur des Air de Biniou," whose Breton composer died ten years ago. A biniou is a Breton type of bagpipe, and its timbre was well suggested in this brief, tuneful and not instrumentally overdressed series of dances.

Mr. Francescatti was heard in Chausson's "Poème" and Lalo's "Symphonie Espagnole," minus the latter's often omitted third movement. His playing was technically deft and tonally ingratiating in both of these contrasted works. In the "Poème" he fully realized its meditative lyric romanticism and an essential sentiment which should not and did not lapse into sentimentality.

In the finale of the Lalo work a little additional elan in Mr. Francescatti's playing would not have been amiss, but in general his interpretation of the work had spirit and momentum as well as virtuosity, discerning musicianship and satisfying range of color.

The work, however, in addition to the remarkable Mahleresque orchestration, has memorable emotional force within its spacious boundaries; the lyricism of the andante is a poetic interlude from the dramatic inexorability of the marching first and last movements.

This impression of drama was especially notable in the finale; vigorous and driving assertion, which seems on the point of triumph, ends in defeat. The dramatic quality of the music and the realization of its succession of moods was a major feature of the intent performance, which found the orchestra in admirable form in a work calling for the highest orchestra skill. Orchestral virtuosity, but in a much lighter vein, was called for and received by the Gould work, which the Philharmonic had introduced to us in February.

Augmented by the 90-odd members of the Philharmonic-Symphony Bearcats, the 18-piece Sauter-Finegan Orchestra gave a charge to the P.-S. subscribers last night at Carnegie Hall, with its exuberant delivery of Rolf Liebermann's "Concerto for Jazzband and Symphony Orchestra." The stick man was Dimitri Mitropoulos.

Some of the customers were doubtful, some disapproving; but the majority applauded the musicians at length, recalling Mitropoulos to the stand again and again.

Serious Stuff

Liebermann, a Swiss on the serious kick, has written a 17-minute work in which the symphonic group alternates, for the most part, with the jazz outfit. He has given the composition unity by adhering to a strict 12-tone technique. In so doing, he has sacrificed spontaneity or the development of any distinctive jazz themes, and has relied instead on characteristic rhythms and voicings.

Thus, after a whispering symphonic introduction, the jazz band began to jump; after another symphonic interlude, the Sauter-Finegan bunch adopted a lazy tempo against which an alto sax succeeded, in its mournful way, to suggest the blues; another interruption, and boogie-woogie was approximated; a final interlude by the symphonists, and the jazz band began to set up some Afro-Cuban rhythms that piled on each other to become a rousing mambo. A loud, staccato chord, right on the beat, brought the work to an end.

He Got to Them

Liebermann cannot be said to have contributed much to any particular form of music with his concerto; but he did stir his listeners, which is the most you can ask of any composer. And the conductor, as well as all the boys in the band, both bands, did an excellent job.

It was fun watching Mitropoulos, a conductor whose body, from the waist up, responds gracefully to the curves and rhythms of the music he conducts. Leading jazz made his shoulders twitch and his neck jerk. With no long, elegant lines to the music, his body was frozen from the neck down and he found little to do with the stick in his right hand. He used his other hand solely to bring in new instruments. But, man, he jumped in the head.

The "Eroica" Symphony, by Beethoven, a square from way back, closed the concert.

Music: Philharmonic and Sauter-Finegan? Cool!

Mitropoulos Directs Liebermann Work

PHILHARMONIC-SYMPHONY. Dimitri Mitropoulos conducting. Sauter-Finegan Band. At Carnegie Hall.
Suite Provencale.....Milhaud
Concerto for Jazz Band and Symphony Orchestra (first New York performance).....Liebermann
Symphony No. 3.....Beethoven

By HOWARD TAUBMAN

THEY weren't doing the mambo in the aisles at Carnegie Hall last night, but they might have been. Up on the podium Dimitri (call him the cool maestro) Mitropoulos was making up for this omission by leading and swaying with a mambo beat.

Things were different at last night's New York Philharmonic - Symphony concert for about twenty minutes. In that interval the Sauter-Finegan Band, in smart red jackets to contrast with the white ties and tails of the Philharmonic men, joined the symphony orchestra for the first New York performance of Rolf Liebermann's Concerto for Jazz Band and Symphony Orchestra.

Mr. Liebermann is a 44-year-old Swiss composer who had an opera introduced at last summer's Salzburg Festival. He uses twelve-tone rows and other advanced devices. In fact, he employs a twelve-tone row in this concerto, perhaps to prove to conservatives in his audiences that the thing won't bite.

Actually, followers of the twelve-tone system, with their emphasis on rhythmic experiments, are not so far apart from practitioners of progressive jazz as one might think. Mr. Liebermann's concerto, which has been done with success in Europe and in Chicago, proves that a twelve-tone row can be used with flexibility and imagination in a jazz environment.

The least interesting parts of this piece are those devoted to the symphony orchestra. The introductory movement, an adagio, in which the thematic material and a color scheme are set forth, is rather drab in spirit. There is more to provoke the ear in the penultimate section, again for the symphonic group alone, where instruments are alloted a note at a time in an arresting pattern.

Mr. Liebermann's score comes to life in the sections where the jazz band gets into the act—in a jump, a blues and the final mambo. The concluding section in particular has enough git-up-an'-git to excite even a recalcitrant listener. Here the jazz band and orchestra whip things up as all kinds of gongs, gourds and percussion equipment beat out an insistent, sensuous rhythm.

The cool Dimitri led the Philharmonic and the Sauter-Finegan band as if this stuff were bread and butter to him. The way he kept the mambo movement taut and flexible suggested that he has not been contemplating Beethoven alone in his spare time. The Philharmonic boys held up their end of it with spirit. As for the Sauter-Finegan gang, this was their milieu. This is a band that loves to fool around with unusual sound effects, and in the mambo it was perfectly at home.

A word should be said for Leonid Hambro, who played the piano part. Mr. Hambro, who belongs normally to the longhair set, carried the burden of a boogie-woogie movement like one to the manner born. His piano-playing was authentic, and so was the way in which he pounded out the rhythm with his left foot.

The Philharmonic audience seemed to relish the concerto. It gave the performers a thunderous hand. A few undoubtedly were disaffected. One old-time subscriber was heard muttering, "Pure night club, that's what it is!" But others yelled "Bis!" Maybe these were ringers. There were young people in the upper reaches of the house who began to applaud when the red-coated jazzmen came out. Perhaps they had boned up on the long-hair terminology for this event.

If the Liebermann concerto and the Sauter-Finegan band exposed a Philharmonic audience to the bounce and vigor of jazz, the Philharmonic and its conductor returned the compliment by giving the visitors from the short-haired world a taste of Milhaud and Beethoven. The "Suite Provencale," played brilliantly, began the evening with a modern's view of old Provence tunes and rhythms. And then there was the "Eroica" to show what music at its noblest and grandest could achieve.

Honor Mitropoulos With Music Degree

By LOUIS BIANCOLLI

There will be a new doctor in the house at Carnegie Hall Thursday night.

Shortly before the Philharmonic concert, in a brief ceremony in the Green Room, Dimitri Mitropoulos will receive an honorary degree of Doctor of Music.

The degree will be conferred by the New York College of Music in "recognition of Mr. Mitropoulos' services in promoting contemporary music."

The early presentation will be made because the Philnarmonic director will not be in New York for the school's commencement exercises in June.

One can only applaud the decision of New York's oldest music conservatory. In singling out Mr. Mitropoulos it has made a significant choice and honored itself in the making.

At a time when modern music is receiving a spanking in certain circles, it is a salufary thing to have a doctorate conferred on such a man for such a reason.

Contemporary music has gained much from this restless musician and scholar. Since his youth Dimitri Mitropoulos has been one of its most loyal friends.

Espousal of the neglected or misunderstood composer early became a cardinal principle of Mr. Mitropoulos' artistic creed.

Promoted Modern Music.

Few conductors have shown his ceaseless interest in the most advanced modernism. Still fewer have given that interest such practical, life-giving expression.

Conductors are crucial to the public acceptance of new music. They are its first promoters, and they are likely to be the first targets of indignant dissent.

They are great gamblers in this sense. They may back the wrong composer. They may mistake competence or extravagance for genius. They may alienate subscribers.

That is part of the job of the courageous custodian of repertory—to make way for the new, even at the risk of discarding nine-tenths of it after one hearing.

An orchestral repertory must be hospitable at all times to new voices. Even if only one out of ten proves lasting, it is worth the gamble. Only time and trial are the final test.

Composer's Spokesman.

Mr. Mitropoulos has had the rare faculty of identifying himself completely with the composer's aims. He has been the composer's spokesman and advocate, his other self.

And this conviction was always sincere and deep. With many modern classics it almost alone sufficed to arouse sympathetic response in the public.

One likes to feel that in conferring the degree the New York College of Music had other conspicuous merits and achievements of Mr. Mitropoulos in mind.

There is his amazing versatility in the many schools and idioms of all periods; his stupendous performances this season at the Metropolitan Opera House; his whole attitude toward music.

This is an attitude governed by genuine humility at the shrine of a great art. It is a faith in the fellowship of music and its equality of dignity, however humble the role.

It will be a little hard to imagine anyone addressing this friendly servitor of music as "Dr. Mitropoulos."

Mahler's 'Sixth' Monumental

By LOUIS BIANCOLLI.

Mahler's Sixth Symphony was given a powerful and exciting performance by Dimitri Mitropoulos and the Philharmonic Symphony in Carnegie Hall last night.

The audience was far from large — what with the weather, the holidays and, let's face it, Mahler. But what it lacked in size it made up for in resounding bravos and prolonged applause.

If Mahler is still something of a problem in American symphonic circles, his Sixth Symphony is almost the prize-winning problem child of the whole repertory.

Composed in 1906, this monumental score waited over 40 years for an American premiere, and then it was only because of Mr. Mitropoulos that we heard it—and it is still this perfect Mahlerite who pleads its case.

Great Symphony.

One would suppose it was an easy case to plead. This is a great symphony by any yardstick — great in its length, great in its craftsmanship, great in its wealth of music.

It is a good deal longer than the average symphony, and a good deal different in its emotional and thematic scheme. It abides by a law and a logic of its own, and as such it is overwhelming.

On its own merits it is a symphony that is endlessly absorbing. There are passages fiery with drama, passages of a shattering despair, and priceless moments of calm affirmation.

While tragic in some of its most arresting pages, the symphony is far from morbid or neurotic. At its core it is rich and romantic and wholesome. There is menace, cruel and corrosive, but life faces up bravely to it.

Pulses With Life.

Mr. Mitropoulos' reading clinched the case for the symphony. It was warm and intense, pulsing with life-giving insight, a marvel of absorption in the ideas and ideals of a spurned genius.

The symphony was bracketed with Morton Gould's "Show Piece for Orchestra", aptly titled for showing what a virtuoso orchestra can do and what Mr. Gould can do to keep it both busy and happy.

The music is smart and animated, flashing with surprises and brisk with good cheer. While originally used to demonstrate advanced recording technique, it also demonstrates Mr. Gould's rare gift for the light touch.

Mahler's Sixth Playe at Carnegie Hall

PHILHARMONIC - SYMPHONY, Dimitri Mitropoulos conducting. At Carnegie Hall.
Show Piece for Orchestra.....Gould
Symphony No. 6 .....Mahler

By HOWARD TAUBMAN

DIMITRI MITROPOULOS evidently believes that Mahler's Sixth Symphony is a work of towering stature. He conducted it in its American première in 1947 and he returned to it last night at Carnegie Hall even though he must know that at least part of the public resists these lengthy symphonies.

And Mahler's sixth is a long stretch of music. To accommodate it comfortably, Mr. Mitropoulos was obliged to fix the intermission between the second and third movements. The curtain raiser, Morton Gould's "Show Piece," was too short to justify a long break, and the Mahler symphony is so extended that a respite in the middle gives one an opportunity to recoup one's powers of concentration.

Mr. Mitropoulos led the New York Philharmonic-Symphony Orchestra in a performance of enormous power and conviction. It is doubtful that much more can be done by any performers to make a work persuasive.

There are pages that call for tremendous virtuosity on the part of all hands. Perhaps the greatest amount of virtuosity is demanded of the conductor, and Mr. Mitropoulos met the requirements with immediate gusto. He conducted this great hulk of a score from memory, and made the most of its opportunities for dramatic effects.

It is almost platitudinous to say that Mahler's thematic material cannot carry the weight of his grandiose ideas, but the judgment must be repeated. Only in the slow movement does one feel that matter and manner are truly and searchingly joined. This movement contains much that is affecting. Of course, there are other places in the symphony that are striking to the ear. But even with an intermission in the middle of the symphony, as one listens to the long final movement, one thinks, "How long, how long?"

Dimitri Mitropoulos

One was impressed by a kinship between the Mahler and Gould works, even though the former was the work of a deeply serious and greatly gifted man touched with genius and the latter is a pièce d'occasion by a slick craftsman. Both works qualify as music for a hi-fi age.

The Gould piece came into being because this is a hi-fi age. It was written last year on commission of Columbia Records, and its aim is to set the ears of the hi-fi bird dogs trembling with ecstasy. It exploits all sorts of ranges and timbres, from the highest to the lowest, and it is obvious that if you have this piece on a disk you don't need a test record to show the remarkable fidelity of your hi-fi set-up. Incidentally, the Philharmonic in the flesh sounded better than a record would.

Mahler composed his symphony in the first decare of this century, but in his score there are such things as hammer blows, cowbells (real ones) and a solo for tuba, not to mention a rich variety of colors in all the ranges of the instruments. Mahler was not thinking of the hi-fi gadgeteers. He wasn't the kind of man who would have given them a thought if they had existed. But this score would make them happy if they had the staying power.

WORDS and MUSIC

By Harriett Johnson

Mahler's 'Sixth' by Philharmonic

Gustave Mahler's Sixth Symphony, seldom heard, and the last of the composer's ten works in this form to be recorded, was performed by the Philharmonic- Symphony last night in Carnegie Hall, Dimitri Mitropoulos conducting. Sometimes called the "Tragic," and once described as portraying "explicit pessimism" in which "death is seen in its most terrifying aspects," the "Sixth" was given its American premiere by Mitropoulos and the Philharmonic in December, 1947.

Taking well over an hour to perform, and scored for an immense orchestra which includes eight horns, cow-bells and hammer, the symphony in addition is (for Mahler) dissonant and difficult to digest. The work contains little of his exultation, and almost none of his penchant for soaring melodies or lyrical ecstasy. The single exception is the second movement, the "andante moderato."

Being a Mahler devotee, I feel fervently grateful to Mitropoulos for his courage in performing the symphony which has little in it that will satisfy those who come to concerts for relaxation or diversion in the conventional sense.

Morton Gould First

In appreciating the conductor's remarkable gifts and his convictions, however, one must also deal with his idiosyncrasies, and these sometimes strike me as more negative than exhibiting mere provocation.

To put, for instance, Morton Gould's "Show Piece for Orchestra," as the curtain raiser on the program, was, in my opinion, about tops in bad judgment. Brilliantly orchestrated, but superficial in content and not easy to digest, plus being largely bombastic in its sound and jumpy in its rhythmic movement, the piece would best fit into a jaunty evening at the Lewisohn Stadium or as atmosphere for a high-tension movie.

Furthermore, while we marvel at Mitropoulos' phenomenal memory, conducting the Mahler without score, at the same time, he led his ensemble with such tension and with such lack of repose even in the lyric sections that the structure of the work, complex at best, was obscured in a succession of screaming sounds and climaxes.

There were many empty seats at the beginning of the concert and many more after the intermission which came between the first and last movements of the symphony. In building his programs, our dynamic maestro should try to remember that his personal taste and powers of absorption are a long way removed from those of most of his audience. In his biased enthusiasm he may hurt more than help the art which, in many respects, he serves so nobly.

Carnegie Concert Hailed

By MILES KASTENDIECK

MAHLER'S SIXTH SYMPHONY made another dramatic bid for understanding and appreciation in Carnegie Hall last night. In a dynamic performance by Dimitri Mitropoulos and the Philharmonic-Symphony, it unfolded its unique brand of soul-searing with relentless power of statement allied with forceful power of conviction. Mitropoulos emerged as a vital interpreter of Mahler's music.

Striking out with commanding energy at the start, Mahler has undoubtedly poured much of himself and his beliefs into this notable work.

Inescapable Logic

Though it may not reflect the musical logic of the German mind, it has inescapable logic of its own, a fact clarified in Mitropoulos's insight into its meaning.

Last night the cumulative effect of the music was to leave an impression of inexorable drive. Whether this be fate or immutable law or a pessimistic outlook on life makes little difference. It adds up to one man's commentary stated in no uncertain terms and not without mockery in the course of exposition.

Listeners may accept this music only as commentary and hear the score objectively. Some may be more deeply touched and find it something to live through subjectively with Mahler. Whatever the reaction, the symphony grows in interest and in value on acquaintance.

A Shrewd Idea

Mitropoulos chose to divide the performance by presenting two movements before the intermission and two after it. This was a shrewd idea. The habitual disparagement about the length of the work disappeared automatically. Though the continuity may have been broken, both orchestra and audience gained by being fresher for the sardonic Scherzo and tragic affirmation of the finale.

Gould's "Show Piece for Orchestra" opened the program. It was an unfortunate choice both because of the nature of the work and its ineffectual character. More acoustically contrived than musically inspired, it suffered total eclipse at the hands of the Mahler which made it appear more trifling than it is. Offering hardly any musical nourishment, it undoubtedly will be serviceable to hi-fi fans.

Both works put the orchestra on its toes. It fared well, not without a mishap or two, but with special merit in the brasses.

By LOUIS BIANCOLLI.

The choice of "Arabella" as the season's American premiere was not a happy one from the standpoint of provocative novelty. Yet it was given a fine production; a case of being all dressed up and, musically speaking, not having anywhere to go.

'Salome' Compensation.

But what magnificent compensation there was in the return of "Salome" to the repertory! This was Strauss, the old magician of modern opera, and in Dimitri Mitropoulos he found the perfect spokesman.

Mr. Mitropoulos was just as eloquent a spokesman for Verdi in the sumptuous revival of "The Masked Ball." Indeed, the Philharmonic director's debut at the Metropolitan was one of Mr. Bing's proudest accomplishments of the season.

Gershwin Prize Work

The Philharmonic concert at Carnegie Hall Saturday night featured the premiere of this year's Gershwin Prize-winning work, the "Sinfonia Sacra" of twenty-one-year-old Ramiro Cortes.

Dimitri Mitropoulos gave the work a polished performance and its three sections, Kyrie, Sanctur and Dies Irae, make an impressive mark from so youthful a pen. There is real individuality in the music, a strong, clear mood and intention and an independent way of achieving it. The frequent use of spare open intervals, with widely spaced scoring, brings effects of tranquillity and grandeur, while contrapuntal writing seems both spontaneous and ingenious. Organically the young man has still things to learn in how to make his thematic material precipitate his crises rather than relying on his instrumental media to do it; but this is a technique that grows from within after the techniques from without are mastered.

A group of Greek Dances by the comparatively unknown composer Nikos Skalkottas made a dynamic concert item in Mr. Mitropoulos' hands; bright and fresh in his materials, this composer brings the real bones of his native folk music to the symphonic genre. His forms evolve direct from the idiosyncracies of the curious, emphatic tunes he uses, and his orchestration dramatizes these forms.

Philharmonic Performs Cortez' Prize Work

RAMIRO CORTEZ, 21-year-old composer who won the tenth annual George Gershwin Memorial Award, was on hand when the New York Philharmonic-Symphony presented his prize-winning "Sinfonia Sacra." Dimitri Mitropoulos conducted the score on Saturday evening in Carnegie Hall.

Mr. Cortez, Texas-born, is a scholarship student at the University of Southern California. His "Sinfonia Sacra," a three-movement work lasting about thirteen minutes, moves with considerable technique and assurance.

It is objective, fairly nonmelodic (though several stretches attempt a line of a melodic nature), and highly rhythmic. In general philosophy and treatment, it follows the style that William Schuman and Peter Mennin represent, being composed with a taut line and considerable nervous energy. It is the product of a really talented young composer.

The audience received the work kindly; and when Mr. Cortez made his bow the audience, looking upon his young face, doubled its applause.

Other works on the program were Weber's "Freischuetz" Overture, the "Greek Dances" by Nicholas Skalkottas, and Shostakovich's Symphony No. 10.

Philharmonic Symphony One of the outstanding events of this year's concert season in Phoenix will be the appearance on April 27 of the New York Philharmonic Symphony Orchestra under leadership of Dimitri Mitropoulos. Concert will be given at Montgomery Stadium. For his concert here, Mitropoulos has chosen works of two of the great German romantic composers, Brahm's "Second Symphony," and Carl Maria Von Weber's "Overture of the Freischuetz." Always searching for new and modern music and great talents, the maestro will bring to Phoenix Morton Gould's "Show Piece for Orchestra." Also on the Phoenix program will be the music of Nicholas Skalkottas. "Greek Dances" represent old Greek folklore and historical events of different provinces of Greece. The orchestra is being brought to Phoenix by Mrs. Archer E. Linde for the benefit of the Phoenix Symphony fund. The concert begins at 8:30 p.m. and tickets are available at the Linde Box Office at Dorris-Heyman's.

Greek-American Maestro Bears Rich Musical Gifts

By JOHN FINLAYSON

The American of Greek extraction who comes to Detroit a week from tomorrow as head of the touring New York Philharmonic Orchestra shares with the orchestra musical gifts more formidable than any in the United States.

He is lean and wiry Dimitri Mitropoulos, bald-headed mystic, devoted to his musicians and worshipped by them; a conductor of phenomenal memory, a dynamo of energy at the podium and a lonely recluse away from it.

The orchestra, which is making its initial stop at Masonic Auditorium on its first cross-country tour in 34 years, is the nation's oldest musical institution.

VENERABLE HISTORY

When it started in 1842 the great Tschaikovsky was just two years old, Brahms, 9, Wagner, 29, and Mendelssohn, 33. In 1892 it settled down at Carnegie Hall, its concert home ever since, and in 1928, soon after Arturo Toscanini began his memorable tenure, the Philharmonic merged with the 50-year-old New York Symphony which had risen to fame under Walter Damrosch.

In addition to the conductors mentioned its roster has included the most renowned names in the musical world: Dr. Bruno Walter, Igor Stravinsky, George Szell, Sir John Barbirolli, Leopold Stokowski and Artur Rodzinski.

The son of an Athen's leather merchant, Mitropoulos put on an incredible display when he first appeared in this country as guest conductor of the Boston Symphony. Staid Boston audiences, used to the lesser histrionics of the famed Serge Koussevitsky, cheered his acrobatics and the musical know-how that went with them.

SAINTLY LEADER

Mitropoulos moved on to New York and Philadelphia to great public and critical acclaim. Musicians marveled at his techniques and his saintly leadership.

Unlike most conductors he never loses his temper. He has made it a practice to memorize the names of the musicians who play under him. His off-hours are often shared with them.

In 1937 he was signed by the burgeoning Minneapolis Symphony Orchestra, replacing Eugene Ormandy who became conductor of the Philadelphia Orchestra. When he left it 12 years later to become co-conductor with Leopold Stokowski of the the Philharmonic, it had achieved a top place among the nation's orchestras.

In Minneapolis he lived in a sparsely furnished residential hotel and spent much of his spare time watching double-bill movies in sidestreet theaters. Westerns were his favorites. He eschewed the drawing rooms of Minnesota hostesses.

In Manhattan he followed the same program of austerity. He turned down engraved invitations, preferring a convenient hamburger emporium where he presided in black turtle-neck sweater.

Deeply religious, he is said to have given away much of his richness to help students of religion and art. Inside his shirt he wears a crucifix and a medallion of the Virgin Mary. Yet he seldom attended church in Minneapolis. When he did his choice was the largest Presbyterian church in the city. The minister was his friend.

PROGRESSIVE TASTES

His musical programming is, however, anything but conservative. He championed many modern composers and taught his audiences to appreciate such unorthodox masters as Krenek, Berg and Schoenberg.

Mitropoulos' musical memory is considered second only to that of Toscanini. He kept the complete scores of more than 50 symphonies — some 20,000,000 notes—in his head at all times, conducting both rehearsals and performances without scores.

Now close to 60 years of age, Mitropoulos was named full conductor of the Philharmonic in 1950.

. . . musiclovers will remember that a few seasons ago Dimitri Mitropoulos of the New York Philharmonic Symphony came to Davenport to appear as piano soloist with the Tri-City Symphony orchestra in a post-season concert directed by James Dixon of the music department of the State University of Iowa. He also appeared as soloist with the University Symphony on two occasions and this year is going to appear as guest conductor with the orchestra. On May 26 he will conduct the orchestra in the Berlioz "Requiem" with the University choral groups and a number of off-the-campus musicians who have asked for the experience of playing under Mr. Mitropoulos.

N.Y. Philharmonic-Symphony to Introduce Shostakovich 10th

Announcement that the New York Philharmonic-Symphony Orchestra has chosen the Tenth Symphony of Shostakovich as one of its selections for its concert here in Santa Barbara on Sunday afternoon, May 1, has occasioned much interest, according to the Community Arts Music Association, sponsors of this history-making music event.

With the creation of his Tenth Symphony, Shostakovich separates himself from the category of composers who created nine symphonies, including Beethoven, Bruckner, and Mahler.

The present work is the first new symphony by Shostakovich in nearly eight years. It was first performed in Leningrad on Dec. 17, 1953, under direction of Eugene Mravinsky.

Creative Mission

The composer has described his work as one in which he has tried to express the "thoughts and aspirations of our contemporaries;" of people who ardently love peace, who resist the drift to war, who regard man's mission on earth to be creative, not destructive.

Dimitri Mitropoulos, musical director of the Philharmonic-Symphony Orchestra of New York, who will conduct here, declared that whatever the universal acceptance of the Shostakovich thesis, the argument in its behalf must be valued in terms exclusively musical. Its first performance created a "lively" difference of opinion, but there is general agreement that in his 48th year the composer has taken on a theme of wide application and general significance.

Mitropoulos describes the Symphony No. 10 as reasonably traditional. Written in four movements, the first is an ample symphonic design, with a slow introduction followed by a main movement in brisker tempo. Movement two is a scherzo, compact and energetic.

The third movement is slow, then slower, with some interesting elements of procedure. The finale begins in slow tempo, but proceeds at a headlong pace thereafter.

Call to Nobler Purpose

The philosophic essence of the work would seem to be concentrated in movement three, Mitropoulos stated, which begins allegretto, with a theme of folkish, narrative quality, developed in the strings, by imitations. In the course of the movement, quotations from both the first and second movements are utilized. At what might be regarded as a moment of indecision, a solo horn enters with a call to nobler purposes. The strings answer with a likeness of the motto with which the work began. From this emerges the main Largo portion of what Shostakovich terms a "nocturne."

The New York Philharmonic-Symphony is bringing the Tenth Symphony to the West Coast for its first performances. "It is a thrilling musical event to bring a first-time symphony of such major importance," Mitropolous stated. "The fact that there is apt to be 'controversy' over this number is one of which we are fully aware, but because this music is composed in our present day, by one of the world's foremost authors of music, is reason enough to introduce it to music-hungry audiences who are interested in both the old and the new."

Shostakovich is known in America probably by a total of five works, despite the quantity credited to his name, Mitropolous concluded.

Pioneering Record

The New York Philharmonic has pioneered and moulded this country's cultural life, in its 113 years, and has presented many of the fine modern compositions together with the traditional. Its concert here will be a 2:30 matinee on Sunday, May 1, at the Granada Theater.

Life Magazine stated recently in a picture-story devoted to the Philharmonic, "This magnificent orchestra, through influence and longevity, has achieved a unique position as the greatest single institution in U.S. musical history."

Reports that there are no seats left for the New York concert are erroneous, the Community Arts Music Association office stated yesterday. Although the Granada seating accommodates only some 1,600, there are about 500 seats yet available. A large mail order has been received from the Tri Counties.

WORDS and MUSIC

By Harriett Johnson

Beethoven's Ninth by Philharmonic

The Philharmonic-Symphony began its closing week last night in Carnegie Hall with a program which had triumph as its keynote and, which, in performance, did justice to its theme. As music goes, the concert ranked with the most exciting of the year, beginning as it did with the world premiere of a work for orchestra, chorus, and bass solo, "The Glory Around His Head," by Jan Meyerowitz, and closing with Beethoven's Ninth Symphony.

Meyerowitz takes his text from a work by the Negro poet, Langston Hughes, a version of the Crucifixion story. According to the composer's explanation, he was inspired to unite the "poet's world" with his own memories of suffering and persecution during World War II in "Homage to the greatest Symbol of Suffering and victorious Survival."

In attempting to set the poignant, childlike simplicity of Hughes' words, which retell the excruciating story with powerful realism, Meyerowitz gave himself a challenge which he has met amazingly well.

His music, for the most part, is built from folklike melody, woven into a complex structure that is fortunately never defeated by its own intricacy. The fifth section, "My Body and My Blood," expressed a haunting beauty through variations upon a melody which moved the heart as much as the piercing words of the text. The following section, "The Crucifixion and the Glory," rose to its own glories of counterpoint and fugue but never lost its emotional impact. A fascinating maze of orchestral and vocal sound built consistently to a tremendous climax.

The Westminster Choir sang magnificently throughout the cantata, while Dimitri Mitropoulos conducted with superb command and dynamism.

Program Repeated Sunday

Mitropoulos also outdid himself in conducting the "Ninth," particularly in the first and last movements. The finale was a masterpiece of integration plus thrilling sound in content and performance. The choir and soloists all sang from memory, while, of course, the conductor, as usual, was without score. At the evening's conclusion the bravos were loud and recurring, and justly so. The Philharmonic-Symphony itself is closing its season with glory around its head.

The final concert of the season will be Sunday at 2:30, when both the Meyerowitz and Beethoven works will be repeated. The excelllent soloists were Paul Smith for the cantata, and Frances Yeend, Martha Lipton, David Lloyd and Mack Harrell for the symphony.

Philharmonic-Symphony:

Triumphant Ending

By MILES KASTENDIECK

DIMITRI MITROPOULOS took one of the triumphal ways out of an orchestral season by presenting Beethoven's Ninth Symphony with the Philharmonic-Symphony in Carnegie Hall last night. This work, forever a stirring experience yet usually a problem in performance, unfolded in that customary way. This time it was the Westminster Choir which provided the note of exultation to give the music its fullest meaning.

The choir radiated the joy of which it sang. Its precision matched Mitropoulos's precise way with the orchestra, its brilliance complemented that of the musicians. What its singing reflected, that the orchestral performance suggested, only at times was an intensity of feeling as communicative in expression as it was in execution. This was one of its notable appearances with the Philharmonic.

Difficult Lot

The quartet of soloists, Frances Yeend, soprano; Martha Lipton, mezzo-soprano; David Lloyd, tenor, and Mack Harrell, baritone, fared creditably, more accurately than some, less expressively than others. Theirs is a thankless role, for Beethoven has made their lot a difficult one at best.

It was the Scherzo Movement that received the finest interpretation. Its impact was tremendous, so much more so than the mysterious First Movement which had its mystery plucked out last night because mastery of detail overpowered mood. Some parts of the finale might also be cited, mostly because of the responsiveness of the Westminster Choir.

A World Premiere opened the program: Meyerowitz's "The Glory Around His Head" —Cantata of the Resurrection. It is a forceful work. Meyerowitz has risen to the challenge of Langston Hughes' text, used a solo bass voice effectively, and written especially well for chorus. The score may not capture the full emotion of the subject-matter, but it has been knowingly put together and artfully fashioned.

The choir, Paul Smith, bass, and the orchestra gave it a fine performance. As usual, Mitropoulos showed his remarkable skill in molding its course.

The Glory Around His Head, cantata of the Resurrection (first performance). Meyerowitz
Symphony No. 9 ..... Beethoven

By OLIN DOWNES

THE final Thursday night concert of the New York Philharmonic - Symphony Society, which took place last night in Carnegie Hall, began with the first performance anywhere of Jan Meyerowitz' work for chorus and orchestra, "The Glory Around His Head," and concluded with Beethoven's Ninth Symphony. Dimitri Mitropoulos conducted.

The chorus was composed of Frances Yeend, soprano; Martha Lipton, contralto; David Lloyd, tenor; Mack Harrell, baritone, and the Westminster Choir.

Mr. Meyerowitz' score, originally constructed, dramatic in feeling, unconventional in its entire approach to its subject, made a strong impression upon the audience. It is called by the composer "A Cantata of the Resurrection." The poem is by Langston Hughes. It describes the Crucifixion and the Resurrection with passionate commentary.

The result is a work of singular texture, of which the harmony is sometimes modern yet austere and medieval in its feeling. The prelude, which begins with a trumpet chorale motif set in an irregular meter, has the flavor of something mystical and of the Christian past. But it would be more appropriate to speak of the "moyen age" flavor of the music as reflecting religious feeling itself, finding instinctively the religions and folk of the past.

Sometimes the form is that of solo narration with dramatic rejoinder by the full chorus; sometimes it is like an old virelai, such as the "ballata" passages given to the women's voices. In the strictly musical sense the finale combines rondo and fugue, "into which the chorale-theme of the introduction is woven."

There is also canonic treatment of the opening chorale theme and other motifs, and passages of lyric and sensuous beauty. The integration of these various elements is extremely interesting and on the whole convincing. The universality and humanity of the theme unify the music.

"The composer's memories of war and persecution—united," in the musician's words, "in a homage to the greatest Symbol of Suffering and Victorious Survival." This writer will need more than one hearing of this very interesting score to arrive at a detached estimate of its values. It is enough for the present to record the hearing of music with a profile of its own, and a desire to hear it as soon as possible again.

Frances Yeend

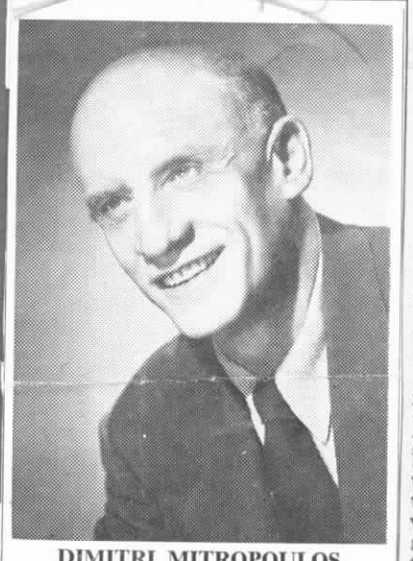
We admired the performance of this work, both by the orchestra and the Westminster Choir, considerably more than we did Mr. Mitropoulos' performance of Beethoven's titanic symphony. It was brilliant and dramatic enough, though, we thought, overdriven in the choral finale.



But the first movement was small scale, communicating in its tonal dimensions the impression created by looking at something far off through the small end of the opera glass. The elemental power was not there; the lyrical phrases had not the grand curve and emotion that are theirs by right. The passage of the return to the "exposition" part of the movement, over the thundering drums and clamorous brass, was a moment that Mr. Mitropoulos made properly wild and dramatic, but the proportions of the movements as a whole were obscured, their heroic line and elemental power minimized.

The scherzo was fast enough, but not strong enough in the accentuation that gives every note its special force and substance. It was hurry rather than power. The trio was certainly too fast for the necessary contrast of color and spirit to be present.

The quartet of soloists made an excellent ensemble. And there were shouts and stampings for this conclusion of the concerts, as there were bravos and long-continuing applause, for Mr. Meyerowitz' cantata, with the composer bowing his acknowledgment from the stage.

Philharmonic to Present Concert In Minneapolis

The New York Philharmonic-Symphony, which has been featured on the CBS Radio Network for the past 25 years, will present a concert program in Minneapolis on May 17 as part of its five-week cross-country tour.

The orchestra, which is directed by Dimitri Mitropoulos, former Minneapolis Symphony conductor, will appear at Northrup Auditorium on the University of Minnesota campus in a University Artists Course program.

The Philharmonic tour started April 18 and will continue through May 22 with 31 concerts in 29 cities. Although the orchestra is on the road, its regular radio concerts will continue to be heard each Sunday at 1:30-3 p. m. on WCCO Radio.

Before leaving New York, the orchestra transcribed five programs in Carnegie Hall to be broadcast Sunday, April 24, through May 22.

Philharmonic Glitters In a Gem-Studded Setting

By LOUIS BIANCOLLI.

If the individual hero of last night's Philharmonic program in Carnegie Hall was Dimitri Mitropoulos, its collective hero was the Westminster choir.

The maestro was, as usual, in inspiring form, spanning with equal mastery the jagged modernism of a new cantata by Jan Meyerowitz and the cosmic breadth of Beethoven's Ninth Symphony.

For its part, the Westminster was fairly startling in what seemed a newfound power. Like my colleagues, I have always regarded this group as among the first three and often the very first of the country's choruses.

Impact of the Unexpected.

But frankly I wasn't prepared for last night's demonstration of massed brilliance. The combined tone in fortissimo burst like sudden sunlight till you felt human voices could reach no further.

The phenomenon was perhaps even more striking in Mr. Meyerowitz's Resurrection cantata than in the Beethoven symphony. There one is partly—or at least hopefully—attuned to the splendors to come.

But the cantata was a new piece of music, a world premiere; new, moreover in the wholly unregimented processes of modernism. There was no telling what lay ahead.

So, when the big moments came, they struck with the impact of the unexpected. At such points the chorus sang as if it had never climbed such heights and never worked up quite such stunning volume of fresh tone.

A Whodunit in Quality.

It made it doubly hard to decide whether Mr. Meyerowitz had indeed written a stirring new cantata or the chorus was simply outdoing itself in making it appear so.

In any case, it is an arresting score, packed with telltale flashes of originality and a driving attraction for the folk-line incantations of Langston Hughes' poetic text. It is almost raw in its mood of rampant anguish.

The work bears the title, "The Glory Around His Head," and is dedicated to the memory of Mrs. Alma Morgenthau a memorial that proved as reverent in the performing as in the writing last night.

For the Beethoven symphony Mr. Mitropoulos had the aid of four sensitive artists—Frances Yeend, Martha Lipton, David Lloyd, and Mack Harrell—not to mention that other community artist —the Philharmonic.

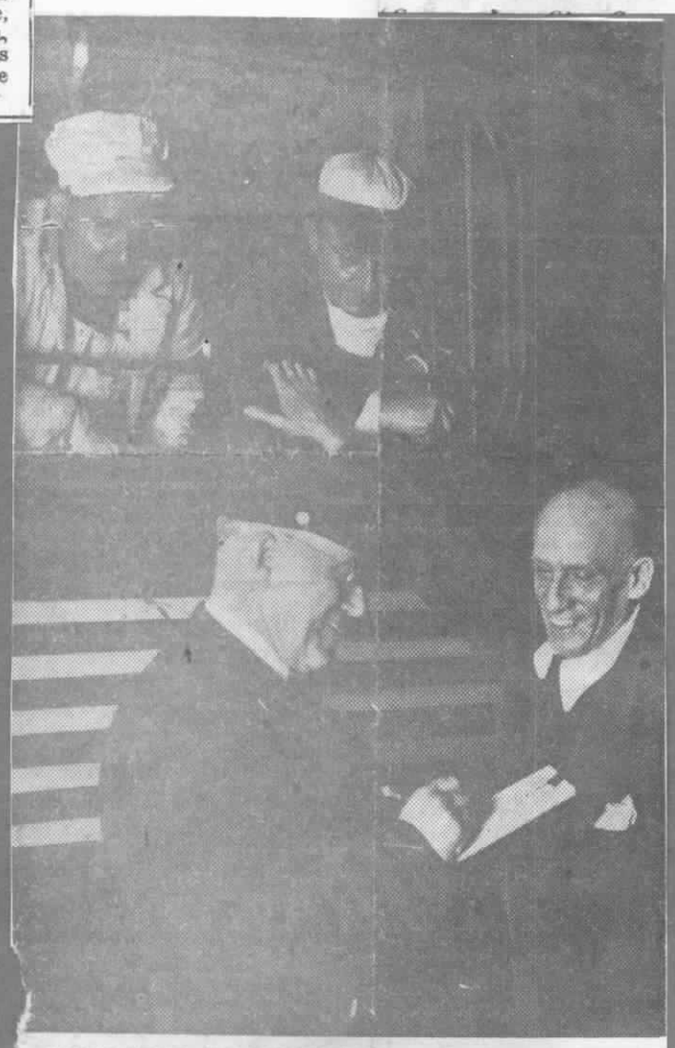
Philharmonic-Symphony



The Philharmonic-Symphony Orchestra, under the direction of Dimitri Mitropoulos, closed this season's Thursday evening series at Carnegie Hall yesterday with Beethoven's Ninth Symphony. The Westminster Choir, which sang in this work's triumphally closing finale, also took part in the music which had its first performance at the beginning of the concert, Jan Meyerowitz' "The Glory Round His Head," subtitled "Cantata of the Resurrection." Frances Yeend, Martha Lipton, David Lloyd and Mack Harrell were the soloists in the symphony, and Paul Smith sang the cantata's solo passages.

Mr. Meyerowitz completed his cantata two years ago; this first performance was dedicated to the memory of the late Mrs. Alma Morgenthau. The text, by Langston Hughes, comments on the Passion, the Crucifixion and the Resurrection in simple, direct and often poignant language, and the composer has reproduced these qualities in music which projects and enhances the words. His style here varies from pungent dissonance to melody which, at certain points, had a remote suggestion of a Negro spiritual; it carried out throughout his and the poet's expressive intentions.

The choir trained by Dr. John Finley Williamson sang with admirable spirit, unity and emotional conviction both in the twenty minute long cantata and the Beethoven finals. Mr. Mitropoulos and his musicians played the symphony with constant interpretative earnestness and some variations in expressive penetration. The performance did not seem really cogent until the mighty instrumental outburst midway in the first movement. There were many admirable features after that, particularly when the music was most proclamative. The swift stride and momentum of the scherzo were compelling; the tenderness and meditation was often, if not fully revealed. The performance of the finale was generally impressive in its pacing and momentum, and the conductor did not hurry the choral passages.

Traditionally, the vocal solos in the Ninth Symphony are taxing, but this impression of exaction was less apparent than usual. Miss Yeend, while her tones did not always seem effortless, performed her share with unusual and effective strength. Miss Lipton was in good voice. Mr. Lloyd dealt well with his principal solo passage—if the tenor's music here after the entrance of the chorus is hardly heard, this is due to the scoring. Mr. Harrell gave a strong and well phrased interpretation of the opening recitative. The singers used Schiller's original German text.

ORCHESTRA SEASON

Philharmonic Year, Closing at Carnegie Today, Marked by Eclectic Programs

By OLIN DOWNES

THE New York season of the Philharmonic - Symphony Society ends with this afternoon's concert in Carnegie Hall. In a period of approximately seven months the orchestra has given the enormous number of 152 concerts, thirty-one of them out of town. This evening the orchestra departs on a transcontinental tour, its first in thirty-four years. The tour opens tomorrow in Detroit. It proceeds through the Middle West and then, via Tucson and Albuquerque, to the West Coast, which it traverses from San Diego to Portland and Seattle. The orchestra will return to this city by way of a concert in Minneapolis, where Dimitri Mitropoulos was conductor of the Minneapolis Symphony Orchestra from 1937 till the period of his present engagement as conductor of the New York Philharmonic-Symphony.

This year will be a spectacularly busy one for the orchestra's members. Its first tour will be westward. Its second, following the Stadium concerts here, will carry it eastward overseas. This is the orchestra's third international tour, following its first of 1930 and its second one of 1951.

Repertory of Tour

The repertory on these tours will be made from the works the orchestra has played this season. These included seven world premières—Cortes' "Sinfonia Sacra" (1955 Gershwin Award Winner), Gabura's "On a Quiet Theme" (co-winner of the 1954 Gershwin Award); Roy Harris' "Symphonic Epigram," Meyerowitz's "The Glory Around His Head," Rieti's Second 'Cello Concerto, Richard Rodger's "Victory at Sea" and Villa-Lobos' 'Cello Concerto No. 2.

These were the five American premières: Bonporti's Concerto Grosso No. 8, Ladmirault's "Variations sur des Airs de Biniou;" Marinuzzi's "Fantasia quasi Passacaglia," Skalkotta's "Greek Dances," and Shostakovich's Tenth Symphony. New York premières were those of Boris Blacher's "Variations on a Theme of Paganini," Caamano's Suite for Strings, Morton Gould's "Show Piece for Orchestra," Liebermann's "Jazz-band Concerto," Mennin's Sixth Symphony; Walter Piston's Toccata and Toch's "Circus Overture."

Works new to the Philharmonic-Symphony programs were Bach's Organ Concerto No. 1, Bartók's Andante From "Deux Portraits" and "Deux Images," Cimarosa's Overture "Il Fanatico per gli Antichi Romani," Ghedini's "Pezzo Concertante," Gossec's Symphony in D, Howard Hanson's Concerto for Organ, Strings and Harp, Haydn's Symphony No. 96, Jongen's "Symphonie Concertante," Luening's "Symphonic Fantasia No. 2," Richard Rodgers' Songs and Waltzes, Sowerby's "Medieval Poem," Walton's "Fanfare," and Widor's Allegro moderato from the Symphony No. 6.

Beethoven led with thirteen works performed; Brahms followed with twelve, Mozart with ten, Wagner with six and Mendelssohn with five. Four works of each of the following composers were performed: Bach, Bartók, Gershwin, Haydn, Prokofieff, Ravel, Johann Strauss, Richard Strauss and Tchaikovsky.

Well-Balanced

In our opinion this was a well-balanced offering of a properly eclectic repertory. Mr. Mitropoulos took the lead in the production of new works for which he is equipped by temperament and inclination. He also had the most concerts of the season—forty-two — at his disposal, therefore the most room for the inclusion of novelties in his lists. Bruno Walter's memorable performance of the Brahms Requiem was but one of some singularly revealing and communicative performances of works, including scores of Bruckner and Mahler, of which he, as perhaps no other conductor now before the public, is capable of revealing interpretation. Guido Cantelli, who had twenty-five of the 100 subscription concerts, again advanced scores by classic Italian masters as well as a representative array of modern works. George Szell's programs were of his own making, and of a wide range of musical literature. His superb reading, the best we have ever heard, of Janacek's "Symphonietta" was one of the highlights of the season.

It is only natural and customary that of the new works heard at these concerts the novelties that proved valuable, or likely to remain for long in the repertory, were few. Two that stood out most prominently in this observer's view were Shostakovich's Tenth Symphony, and Howard Hanson's Organ Concerto—a work of unconventional and original concept, admirably carried out. There was much discussion of Shostakovich's latest work: we consider it his strongest and most substantial composition in the symphonic form to date.

It is noteworthy that of the ninety-five composers performed during the season, forty-two are contemporaries, with Americans in the lead. Twenty-two of these Americans are American-born or resident here; twenty of them are foreign-born or resident abroad.

There have been renewed complaints that in the season past, insufficient attention was paid to American composers. It is to be said that today the American composer has more opportunities —speaking, let us say, in terms of the last thirty years—than he had ever dreamed of in the first quarter of this century. At that time there was certainly a stricter choice of American works selected by our orchestras for public performance, and nowhere near the readiness to perform scores of experimental and often immature workmanship that there is today. So many are these opportunities that it is hard to believe that any really meritorious score by a native son or daughter would be rejected by musical organizations anxious to discover new music—or old music, for that matter—that would interest the concert-going public.

No Favoritism

Whether any of the contemporary figures who are now prominent and welcomed by the majority of the musical public will loom larger in history's record, when fifty more years have passed, than the central figures of the earlier epoch is to be doubted. The nation is a ferment of creative energies and quests, bound to produce significant fruit, more significant, we believe, in the future than is now either practically or psychologically possible. But one thing is evident. The American composer has no cause to feel that he is overlooked on the grounds of his nationality or favoritism extended by conductors of our main symphony orchestras in preferring contemporary music from overseas.

Piles Of Odds And Ends Are Gathered When New York Philharmonic Takes Trip

NEW YORK, April 17.—(AP)—When the New York Philharmonic Symphony travels, it travels with piles and piles of odds and ends besides music and instruments.

In the nine-car train that sets out tomorrow night, right after the season's last regular concert here, to carry the orchestra on its first coast-to-coast tour in 34 years—

One man will take his bicycle so he can see the sights whenever the daylight stops are long enough.

There'll be packs of playing cards and chess sets.

A lot of the orchestra players—and also conductor Dimitri Mitropoulos himself—take along their own coffee pots, and some carry thermos bottles.

Some of the fonder husbands and fathers fix up their roomettes with pin-up snapshots of wife and children.

Four enormous wardrobe trunks will hold the afternoon and evening dress of the 107 musicians. Management takes care of these "uniforms" but the men must look out for street clothes—and you can tell the Philharmonic special whizzing through the country or parked in the railroad yards by the nylon shirts hanging in the Pullman windows to dry, and dry again and again from here to Detroit, to Kansas City, to Albupuerque, to Los Angeles, to Portland, and so on to a total of 30 United States and Canadian cities.

"Any dogs, cats or parrots?"

"No!" is the emphatic reply in one voice of the two managers who are making the trip, Bruno Zirato and George F. Judd Jr.

Going along also will be the wives and children of two conductors, Guido Cantelli and Franco Autori—Mitropoulos is a bachelor; two librarians; two stage hands, with four more to be hired at every stop; the orchestra personnel manager, a member of the press department, and a souvenir-book man.

Six Pullmans will be home to these people from tomorrow through May 22. They'll have a coach for playroom, and a baggage car for dress clothes, instruments, scores. The train crew has a car of its own, and a diner is added when the schedule requires it.

"All across the country," says Zirato, "Greek restaurants watch for Greek-born Mitropoulos and prepare their best dishes for him. The men themselves eat well. When we get to a city I'm sometimes tipped off to a good new restaurant, but when I reach it I find a dozen players already there ahead of me.

"Some of them save their money. They buy a loaf of bread and cheese, and prepare espresso coffee for breakfast or a light lunch."

"It's a distance of almost 10,000 miles," says Judd. "And it's a job. I began work on it more than a year ago. It's even a problem for Pullman—think of having more than 200 sheets a day, for instance. Then there's laundry, for which we arrange 12-hour service in hotels where possible."

This Philharmonic trip, which goes as far west as San Francisco, plus the orchestra's fall trip to Europe and as far east as Athens, will carry the orchestra about half way around the world.

Do the men like it? "They love it," says Zirato. "It gives them more work, peps them up, they always play their best."

The N. Y. Philharmonic-Symphony wound up its 113th season in N. Y. Sunday afternoon (17) and left that night for a five-week $230,000 transcontinental tour of the U. S. Management expects to break even on the tour. Although figures aren't all in, it also believes it will wind the season with the same deficit as of a year ago, namely around $250,000. Considering increased expenses, like hiked pays, this isn't bad.

There was a decrease in subscriptions for the '54-'55 season of about $21,000, but single sales' upbeat during the year almost made that up. Execs said privately that audience complaints were about the same. There were beefs about the skedding of contemporary music, while composers on the other hand complained that not enough American music was played. As one official put it: "People would come to the boxoffice, ask the length of the modern work, and if it was any longer than 10 minutes they wouldn't buy tickets."

Orch will be back from its U. S. tour in late May. In September it will fly to Europe for its first Continental tour since 1930. It will play 26 concerts abroad prior to returning for the opening of its 114th season in Carnegie Hall Oct. 21. Fall tour will open with a week of six concerts at the Edinburgh Festival. Dates will follow in Holland, Belgium, France, Austria, Germany, Switzerland, Italy and Greece, winding with two concerts in London Oct. 4-5.

Overseas tour is expected to cost about $250,000. The ANTA International Exchange Program is contributing about $50,000, and the State Dept. made a special request for the orch to play Vienna and Berlin for propaganda reasons. Basil Peter Goulandris, a Greek-American philanthropist, is providing travel expenses to Greece and concert costs there for two dates, with all the proceeds from two Athens programs to be put towards a fund to build a much-needed concert hall in that city. The orch's musical director, Dimitri Mitropoulos, hails from Greece. He last appeared there as a conductor in 1938.

GIANT IN MUSIC FIELD

AUDIENCE IS DAZZLED BY THE NEW YORK PHILHARMONIC.

The 104-Piece Orchestra Presents a Monumental Program, Including the Brahm's Second Symphony.

Making a spellbinding Kansas City debut last night at the Music Hall, the New York Philharmonic-Symphony orchestra won a tremendous ovation from a big audience that found the Brahms Second Symphony exciting and a Chabrier encore a display of fiery orchestral virtuosity.

Dimitri Mitropoulos, the conductor, returned a half dozen times after the encore to acknowledge the applause and bravoes. He clung firmly to the plan of a single extra number at the close, because the 104-man ensemble is on tour.

Reluctantly, the 2,400 dazzled listeners filed out, animatedly discussing the orchestra's delicately plastic style, the tonal transparency and the massive sonority of its strings.

To Break Closing Cadence.

The Brahms symphony was the after-intermission treat, which Mr. Mitropoulos and the orchestra infused with an appropriate lightness of spirit, especially the opening movement which sometimes is made to sound ominous. The individuality of the inner moving parts was a revelation. This felicitous symphony, happiest in its moods of the four Brahms wrote, was brought with irresistible impetus to a great closing cadence that won acclaim.

Some memorable moments were before the climax, however. For example, the serenity of the grave melody by the cellos in the slow movement, and a representation of Brahms's lovable side in the delicate, gracious structure of the scoring in the third movement, where the music gently caresses.

The Chabrier extra was not one of that composer's best known pieces, but it was performed with such dynamic drive by Mitropoulos and his musicians that it was a fitting program finale. It was "Fete Polonaise" from the opera, "Le Roi L'a Dit" (The King Has Said It).

From a Rachmaninoff Song.

In the first half of a splendid program, the audience was delighted by the "Freischutz" overture by Weber and was entranced by Rachmaninoff's "Vocalise," originally a song and later orchestrated by the composer at the request of the late Serge Koussevitzky.

Disporting its best style of musical braggadocio, the orchestra lived up to the title of Morton Gould's "Show Piece." The conductor, sometimes in sardonic mood, but most often facetious, brought the orchestra through the episodes of tune-up, theme, scene, march, serenade and toccata to a turbulent finale.

If Gould had in mind asking for effects beyond the powers of an orchestra to achieve, the Philharmonic-Symphony was versatile enough to defeat such a purpose. The audience, hearing it for the first time in live performance, liked the wit and novel effect. The applause was hearty and prolonged. The genial, happy conductor granted an encore. The march section, one of the liveliest of the six, was repeated.

Mitropoulos directs with a baton, altogether from memory. His slightest gesture is most eloquent of what he wants. Poetic episodes are his special dish. His orchestra arrangement puts the thirty-four violinists flanking the podium, in front of twelve cellists to the conductor's left, twelve violists to his right, the nine string basses behind the woodwinds and brasses. The massive effect of the huge string section is impressive.

But most impressive of all is the incredible beauty of the orchestra's sound. C. B. N.

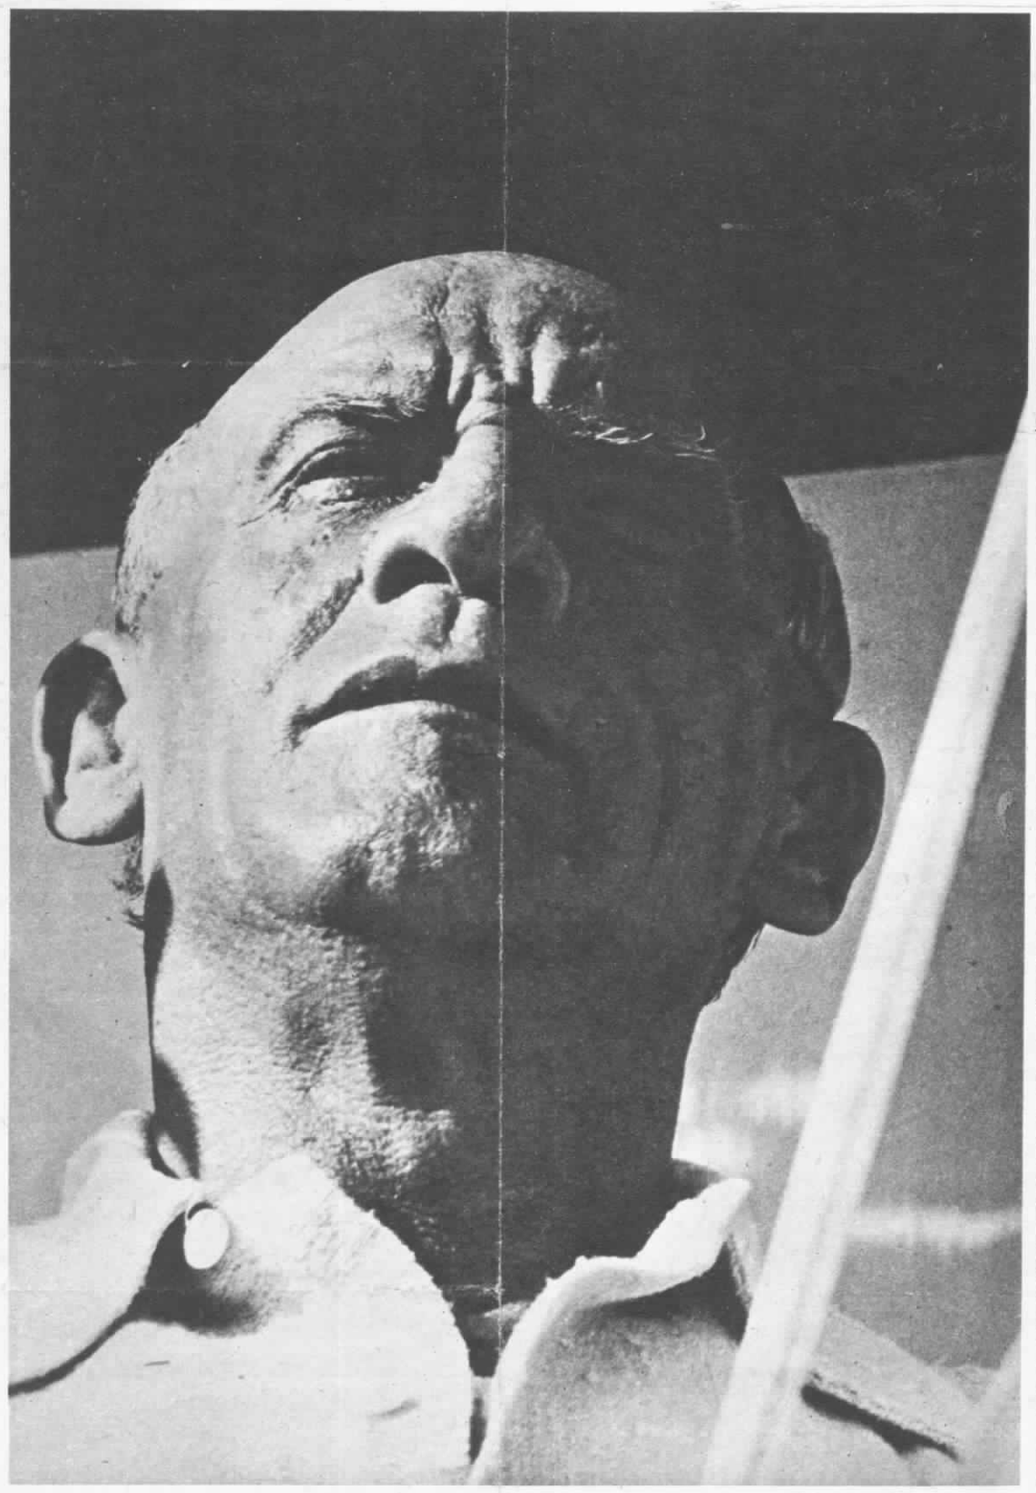
KANSAS CITY concert audiences are known around the country, among the artists and performers generally, as being rather frigid and non-demonstrative . . . An ovation here is a rarity and a sure sign that the performance that brings it on is little short of magnificent or sensational . . . So Dimitri Mitropoulos and the New York Philharmonic-Symphony can be especially gratified at the audience demonstration Thursday night at the Seufert sponsored concert . . . It was a spontaneous outburst, as spontaneous as was the conductor's direction and the orchestra's response in the Brahms symphony that brought on the demonstration.

The Music Hall stage was barren, completely stripped of curtains or backdrop, for this concert . . . The orchestra's size made full utilization of the stage space a necessity, and the sonority of the massed strings was not swallowed by the lofty spaces above, without a shell to project the sound.



Mitropoulos says he has lost any attachment he may have felt toward Athens, his birthplace; his whole allegiance now is to the United States, his land by adoption . . . Yes, he likes to visit Europe whenever possible, because of the deep appreciation for music there that extends down to about everyone, from millionaire to peasant.

This country is less advanced in music appreciation than such centers of creative music as Germany, Italy, or Russia, the New Yorker believes, and the time is not here yet for state aid for the arts. . . . For the time, at least, America's music is mostly paid for by the wealthy, he said, and enjoyed by the wealthy. . . . It hasn't yet reached the roots, or the common man, Mitropoulous declares. . . . And this is unfortunate, for cultural things rather than material things are timeless and eternal.

Dimitri Mitropoulos, Athenian-born conductor of the Philharmonic-Symphony Orchestra of New York, is a fervent champion of living music and living musicians. Endowed with a fantastic memory that enables him to conduct the most complex of compositions without a score, he lives on music and one meal a day. His personal magnetism together with his deep dedication to his art have created recorded performances that are truly the sound of genius. Dimitri Mitropoulos has chosen to record exclusively for Columbia Records.

Thousands Hear Symphony

Phoenix Thrilled By Mitropoulos

By JOIE DAVIDSON

Thousands of persons last night crowded Montgomery Stadium to hear a concert by the Philharmonic-Symphony Orchestra of New York conducted by Dimitri Mitropoulos. Capacity of the stadium is approximately 9,650 and most of the hard, uncomfortable seats were filled.

The New York Philharmonic is so well known to so many persons there is little need to comment on the superb quality of their performances.

SUFFICE to say, seldom does one hear an orchestra in which artistic refinement is so well defined. This musical body has mastered what is at once the basic and the ultimate glory of achievement in an orchestra—that of playing as one single mighty instrument.

Mitropoulos is a superb showman and a seasoned musician. He conducts with his entire body, yet there is not a superficial movement as he interprets the score with fluidity and rhythmical precision.

Presented on last night's program were the Overture to Von Weber's "Der Freischuetz"; Morton Gould's Show Piece For Orchestra; Greek Dances by Nicholas Skalkottas; and Symphony No. 2 by Brahms. Of these the Gould and Skalkottas were new to Phoenix audiences.

THE GREEK Dances were published only last year, approximately five years after the untimely death of Skalkottas. The dances are based on the folk lore of various areas of Greece. They do not reveal themselves wholly on the first hearing, but Mitropoulos makes an impressive introduction to a composer, now dead, who has only his music to speak for him and his beliefs.

During his lifetime, Skalkottas's so-called advanced idioms did not find favor in his native country, but today they place him among the rank of modern composers whose music is worthy of study.

Morton's Gould's Show Piece For Orchestra lives up literally to its title. It is of no particular beauty, but it does illustrate in an exaggerated pattern, the various potential tonal qualities of orchestral instruments. It is replete with harsh cacophonies, muted effects, elaborate rhythms and colors.

LAST night's concert marked a rare highlight in Arizona music seasons. But it also pointed up two sharp contrasts in Phoenix: One, that this city has become important enough to attract really significant performers, and two, that there is no place to put those performers after they've come.

One shudders to think of the beauty that was missed in last night's program by interference from honking cars, whistles, a multiplicity of other outside noises. A lot of people paid money to hear some of the finest available "live music," and they heard only about half the music that was created.

This is better than none at all, but it still points up a shameful need in Phoenix. How soon, one wonders, are some of the city fathers going to do something about a proper auditorium?

Last night's performance was sponsored by Mrs. Archer E. Linde with the Phoenix Symphony Association.

THE SOUNDING BOARD

New York Orchestra Plays in Pasadena

(Reprinted from yesterday's late editions)

BY ALBERT GOLDBERG

As has happened with increasing frequency of late, Pasadena got ahead of Los Angeles by offering the first Southern California appearance in 34 years of the Philharmonic-Symphony Orchestra of New York in the Civic Auditorium last night. Dimitri Mitropoulos conducted and the occasion was further enlivened—if that is the word—by the West Coast premiere of Shostakovich's Tenth Symphony.

As everyone is fully aware, the Philharmonic-Symphony is one of the nation's finest orchestras. It boasts woodwind, brass and string soloists of the first order of artistry and it is a superbly integrated ensemble, though in the over-all view it has perhaps a less distinctive character than such highly individualized groups as the Boston and Philadelphia orchestras.

Hand in Glove

And it played hand in glove with every intention of Mr. Mitropoulos, who, possibly for that reason, was less demonstrative in action than he sometimes is, and who seems to have returned to the baton as an instrument of expression.

The program began with a sprightly account of the overture to Kabalevsky's "Colas Breugnon," which displayed aptly the clean strings and well-balanced winds and brass. Brahms' Variations on a Theme by Haydn followed, read discreetly in a serious style shorn of all undue excess or exaggeration and encased in tone of warm and glowing quality.

Greek Dances

For a secondary novelty there were four Greek Dances by Nicholas Skalkottas, a Greek composer who died in 1949 at the age of 45. Each section relates to various regions of Greece or its folklore, and the set as a whole is a bright and expert essay in the symphonic handling of folk tunes, rhythmically alert, slightly Oriental in coloring, and generally suggestive of Enesco in instrumental treatment.

Shostakovich's Tenth is a long and prevailingly cheerless piece. Since proper Soviet artists are apparently expected to regard the present as well as the future in hopeful fashion, the dour character of the music sent the Union of Soviet Composers into a three-day huddle when the work was first performed in Leningrad in 1953, and they finally cleared their colleague of subversive intentions by cataloguing the symphony as an "optimistic tragedy."

Repetitious

But the real tragedy lies in the fact that a composer of Shostakovich's gifts cannot do more than repeat himself aimlessly in a Tenth Symphony. All the familiar trademarks are again in evidence: the snaky twistings and turnings of commonplace melody that arrives nowhere, the trite rhythms, the portentous woodwind solos that portend nothing, the remarkable clarity of sound, the skill in orchestration.

It is simply the work of a composer who is the master of his idiom but who can find nothing new or pertinent to say. Whether this is a personal or a political problem is anyone's guess. One thing is certain, however — Shostakovich has not advanced himself by his Tenth Symphony.

Mr. Mitropoulos conducted it as if he believed in it implicitly, which was proper, and the orchestra played it with a great flourish of brilliance and intensity.

N.Y. Philharmonic 'Perfection' Given Standing Ovation

By HENRY J. SELDIS

Santa Barbarans who filled the Granada Theater yesterday afternoon shared a musical experience not soon to be forgotten. They were aroused to a standing ovation as an inspired conductor led a superbly balanced orchestra in a challenging program.

To say that the local debut of the Philharmonic Symphony Orchestra of New York, under the baton of Dimitri Mitropoulos, was auspicious would be an understatement. It gave us a glimpse at orchestral perfection and interpretive genius employed to the brilliant presentation of four totally different musical works.

Not that the program was not controversial. Both unregenerated romanticists and dogmatic atonalists will undoubtedly quarrel with much of the afternoon's climactic work, Shostakovich's Tenth Symphony, while even ardent admirers of Mendelssohn might agree that his "Reformation" Symphony does not rank among his most inspired works.

Aside from Propaganda

Any serious consideration of Shostakovich's latest symphony cannot include the composer's propagandistic ideas contained in his statement that it was written "to express the thoughts and aspirations of our contemporaries," particularly, he goes on to say, the thoughts of "people who ardently love peace, who resist the drift to war, who regard man's mission on earth to be creative, not destructive." Neither has the critical rebuttal that the work expresses man's struggle against loneliness, and specifically Shostakovich's creative struggle against the isolation of totalitarianism, any bearing on the analysis or appreciation of this music.

The greatness of Shostakovich's mature work lies in its ability to appeal to the mind as well as the ears of the listener who can follow throughout the lengthy work the absolute logic of its architecture and the inherent power of its narrative.

Work of Distinction

There has been a dearth of important symphonic works in our century, perhaps because many contemporary composers have turned imaginatively and inventively to the exploration of new sounds and new tonal combinations, expressed in compositional manners which did not allow for the preoccupation with the statement and the manipulation of themes which a masterful symphonic composer must have. Among the few important symphonic compositions which have reflected the turbulence of our time as well as its challanging modernity, Shostakovich's Tenth Symphony is a work of great distinction.

Its first movement is the longest and most cheerless. It expresses both contemplative melancholy and anguished lament. The lyric theme introduced by the clarinet is one of the statements which can be followed throughout the work.

The almost unbearable intensity and the phonetic fury of the brief second movement tosses woodwind, brass and percussion sections into a tour de force which is in drastic contrast to the more pastoral first movement.

Triumphant Conclusion

In the third movement we find parts of the melodic ideas of the first movement transformed and expressed in an almost incongruous waltz rhythm. The finale, with its martial strains and its increasing tempo, brings the symphony to a triumphant conclusion. Not enough can be said of the seemingly effortless and completely controlled manner in which this virtuoso orchestra handled the complexities of this new work or for Maestro Mitropoulos's phenomenal memory which allowed him to remember and convey the most subtle nuances of this challenging score without having to refer to it.

The second major work on the program was Mendelssohn's Symphony No. 5 in D Major, the "Reformation" Symphony. Written by the 21-year-old composer to celebrate the Tercentennary of the Augsburg Conference in 1830, it does not match the dynamic spirit of the church revolution it intends to salute. Previous performances of this work have often led me to agree with the Paris conductor who refused to play the work at Mendelssohn's request because it was "tedious and derivative."

With Forcefulness

Mitropoulos, however, imbued the work with a forcefulness which it always seemed to lack and used it to great advantage to display the phenomenal tonal brilliance of his orchestra's woodwind, brass and string sections. He has molded soloists of the highest caliber into one magnificent instrument.

Once more it was demonstrated that the work's literal intent and its quotations from Luthern liturgical music, as well integrated as they are, do not provide its musical highlight, found in the airy and lyrical second movement which is Mendelssohn at his romantic best. Again the ensemble performed faultlessly and spiritedly, winning a well-deserved ovation.

The program began with a lusty rendering of Kabalevsky's theatrical overture to "Colas Breugnon." It became evident during this very first selection that Mitropoulos has finally gained such complete rapport with his orchestra that his well-known podium acrobatics are no longer necessary. This change was evidenced also by his return to the use of a baton and to the truly relaxed movements which marked his leadership through even the most bombastic passages.

A standing ovation at the end of the memorable program netted an encore for the audience which was rewarded with a colorful rendition of Verdi's "La Forza di Destino" overture.

To bring this world famous orchestra to Santa Barbara took vision and deficit financing. Both were provided by the Community Arts Assn. to whom this city is indebted for this important cultural contribution.

Here is a famous tourist, acting like a tourist: Buying newspapers, magazines, chewing gum and candy at every rail stop. The purchaser, whose hair is thinning slightly, happens to be Dimitri Mitropoulos, now leading the world famous New York Philharmonic-Symphony society's orchestra on a nation-wide tour. He will conduct a Milwaukee concert May 19 at the Auditorium. On May 18 the orchestra will play at the University of Wisconsin stock pavilion under Guido Cantelli.

Town Chatter

Famed Conductor Enjoys Party

By LITTI PAULDING

The sun beamed down through the clouds Sunday, which was May Day, on the crowds streaming into the Granada Theater for the concert by the Philharmonic Symphony Orchestra of New York.

The golden rain of the day before was music to the ears of Santa Barbarans and county residents, so it was a happy crowd that went inside the town's first skyscraper to hear the great music played by the oldest orchestra in America, and the third oldest in the world. It was quite a May Day in Santa Barbara, not to be forgotten in this music-loving place.

Athens-born Dimitri Mitropoulos, the famous orchestra, was given an musical director and conductor of ovation, a true Santa Barbara one from the heart.

Old friends who knew him in New York, Paris and most of the capitals of the world, greeted the maestro after the concert. The greetings were said in several different languages.

A Ranch Party

Old New York friends of the maestro, the Francis Minturn Sedgwicks, hurried him off after the concert to their ranch, Rancho Laguna de San Francisco, in Santa Ynez Valley for cocktails and supper.

There was a small calvacade of cars following with other friends and orchestra personnel. It was a beautiful drive over San Marcos Pass to the higher reaches of Santa Ynez Valley. Conductor Mitropoulos said the valley was the loveliest he had ever seen. He loved the Sedgwick ranch house too.

After his long ride, he was refreshed with a bit of brandy and ready to relax and talk with the guests.

The supper included game chicken with bread sauce and a special rice dish. The master called the bread sauce a poem.

The conversation veered around to Carnegie Hall—"will it be torn down, and where will the New York orchestra go?"

Floyd Blair of Oyster Bay, N.Y., president of the Philharmonic Symphony Society, and decorated by nearly every government, had some answers. So did others in the group. The Philharmonic Orchestra could buy Carnegie Hall for four and one-half millions. It could move to a new site by the American Museum of Natural History, or it could move to the new Music Center being planned. The last is probably what will happen, it was forecast.

Enjoying the Party

Also enjoying the late afternoon party at the Sedgwick Ranch was George Judd, assistant manager of the orchestra. The Victor Bryants of Midland School in Santa Ynez Valley came. Also there were Dr. and Mrs. Demorest Davenport, Stefan and Mrs. Krayk, Mrs. Constance Wash of Ojai, Mrs. Horace Gray, Mrs. Francis V. Lloyd, Mr. and Mrs. Charles A. Storke, Mrs. Normon S. Wright, Provost Clark Kuebler and Paul Kolyn.

The orchestra will tour Europe this summer and fall making one-night stands in famous cities, opening at the Edinburgh Music Festival with Dame Myra Hess as soloist and Mitropoulos as conductor the first night.

Bruno Zirato, manager of the orchestra, lunched Sunday with Margaret Mallory and Ala Story at Margaret's home. Judith Anderson, a friend of his for 20 years, brought him to the luncheon. Later they all attended the concert.

The orchestra will play in Mitropoulos's native Athens Oct. 1 and 2, according to Mr. Zirato. The concert is made possible by Basil Goulandris, a Greek-American philanthropist. He will pay the plane passage of the group from Naples to Athens and pay all the concert expenses in order that all receipts from the two concerts may go toward building a concert hall in Athens.

ΜΙΑ ΑΠΟΚΑΛΥΠΤΙΚΗ ΣΥΝΕΝΤΕΥΞΙΣ ΜΕ ΤΟΝ ΜΕΓΑΛΟ ΜΑΕΣΤΡΟ

Δ. ΜΗΤΡΟΠΟΥΛΟΣ: «Ἡ μουσικὴ εἶνε πολυτέλεια κατάλληλη γιὰ λαοὺς χωρὶς βιοτικὲς ἀνάγκες»

ΜΕΓΑΛΥΤΕΡΟΣ ΣΥΓΓΡΑΦΕΥΣ: ΚΑΖΑΝΤΖΑΚΗΣ. — ΑΓΙΟΣ ΠΟΥ ΛΑΤΡΕΥΩ: ΑΓΙΟΣ ΦΡΑΓΚΙΣΚΟΣ. — Η ΕΛΛΑΔΑ ΔΕΝ ΕΙΝΑΙ ΑΠΛΟ ΤΑΞΙΔΙ...

Δίδομεν σήμερον κατωτέρω τὸ δεύτερον μέρος τῆς ἐξαιρετικὰ ἐνδιαφερούσης συνεντεύξεως, ποὺ παρεχώρησεν ὁ διάσημος Ἕλλην ἀρχιμουσικὸς Δημήτρης Μητρόπουλος στὸν ἔκτακτο συνεργάτη μας κ. Γ. Μπουκουβάλα, ποὺ ἐπεσκέφθη τελευταίως τὶς Ἡνωμένες Πολιτεῖες.

Ἡ ἀποκαλυπτικὴ συνομιλία μὲ τὸν διάσημο μαέστρο φθάνει τώρα στὸ θέμα τῆς εὐαισθησίας τοῦ ἀμερικανικοῦ κοινοῦ. Καὶ ὁ Δημήτρης Μητρόπουλος λέγει:

— «Μὴ ζώην μετ' ἀμουσίας...», ἔγραφε τὸν 5ον αἰῶνα ὁ Εὐριπίδης. Ὅμως καὶ τοῦτο βεβαιώνει τὸν σκληρὸ κανόνα πὼς ἡ μουσικὴ εἶναι μία πολυτέλεια, ποὺ μόνον λαοὶ ποὺ ἔχουν λύσει τὶς βιοτικές τους ἀνάγκες, μποροῦν ἄνετα νὰ ἐπιτρέψουν στὸν ἑαυτό τους. Μὴ φοβᾶσθε πὼς θὰ λείψουν οἱ ἀνθρώπινες ἀγωνίες καὶ ἀνησυχίες, ὅταν ἔχουν ὅλοι οἱ ἄνθρωποι ψωμὶ νὰ φᾶνε κι' ἕνα ζεστὸ κρεβάτι νὰ κοιμηθοῦν. Καὶ ἡ Ἀμερικὴ τὰ ἔχει πετύχει αὐτά, κι' ἔχει κάνει μιὰ τεράστια προσπάθεια γιὰ τὴν μουσικὴ ἀγωγὴ τοῦ λαοῦ της.

— Σᾶς ρώτησα, μαέστρο, γιὰ τὴν εὐαισθησία τοῦ ἀμερικανικοῦ κοινοῦ καὶ τὴν ποιοτική της σχέσει μὲ τὴν Εὐρωπαϊκή.

— Βέβαια, ἡ Εὐρωπαϊκὴ εὐαισθησία ἔχει μιὰ προκαλλιέργεια καὶ μιὰ παράδοσι. Στὶς φλέβες της τρέχει τὸ μουσικώτατο αἷμα τόσων μεγάλων δασκάλων... Ἡ Ἀμερικὴ εἶναι ἀκόμα, κατ' οὐσίαν, στεῖρα καὶ μένει ἕνας διψασμένος δέκτης ἀρίστων προθέσεων, πρὸς τὸ παρόν. Ὡστόσο, ἡ βαθύτερη κατανόησις τῆς μουσικῆς μένει πάντα γιὰ τὸ μικρὸ κοινό, γιὰ τοὺς λίγους, καὶ στὴν Ἀμερικὴ καὶ στὴν Εὐρώπη. Τὶς περισσότερες φορές, καὶ τὸ κοινὸ αὐτὸ καὶ οἱ κριτικοὶ ἀκόμα, γιὰ ἕναν ἀνεγνωρισμένο καλλιτέχνη ἔχουν «παρτὶ πρίς». Ἕνας μεγάλος θὰ μποροῦσε νὰ παίξῃ καὶ λάθη, σίγουρος πὼς θὰ τὸν... χειροκροτήσουν! Βεβαίως, ὅμως, ὅταν κορῳδεύῃ τὴν συνείδησί του, δὲν θάναι στ' ἀλήθεια μεγάλος. Γι' αὐτὴν εἶναι ποὺ δουλεύω σκληρά. Δὲν θέλω νὰ τὴν προδώσω. Ἐδῶ, στὴν Ἀμερική, σοῦ ζητοῦν καὶ στὴν τέχνη μαζικὴ παραγωγή. Ἂν εἶσαι πολὺ εὐσυνείδητος, ἢ πρέπει νὰ τὰ ἀφήσῃς, ἢ πρέπει νὰ δώσῃς καὶ ποιότητα.

— Ποιὰ εἶναι, μαέστρο, τὰ αἰσθήματά σας προτοῦ διευθύνετε;

— Ὤ! Τὰ πράγματα εἶναι πολὺ ρεαλιστικά. Δὲν ἔχω κανένα ἰδιαίτερο αἴσθημα ἢ συγκίνησι. Τὸ κέφι μου ἐξαρτᾶται ἀπὸ τὸ στομάχι μου, ἀπὸ τὸ πρωϊνό μου ξύπνημα, ἀπὸ ἀσήμαντες μικρολεπτομέρειες... Ὅταν ἀρχίσω νὰ διευθύνω, τότε συνέρχομαι καὶ μετὰ τὸ τέλος τῆς ἑρμηνείας εἶμαι ἤρεμος καὶ γαληνεμένος.

— Θὰ θέλατε νὰ μοῦ πῆτε, κ. Μητρόπουλε, τὶ διαβάζετε καὶ ποιὸν ποιητὴ ἢ συγγραφέα προτιμᾶτε;

— Νὰ σᾶς πῶ. Θαύμαζα τὸν Τόμας Μὰν καὶ τὸν Ρίλκε. Τώρα, ὅμως, ξέρω πὼς ὁ μεγαλύτερος ἴσως ποιητὴς καὶ συγγραφέας στὴν ζωὴ εἶναι ὁ Νῖκος Καζαντζάκης. Ἔχω διαβάσει ὅλα του τὰ βιβλία. Ἕνα ἀπὸ τὰ καλύτερα νομίζω ὅτι εἶναι «Ὁ Καπετὰν Μιχάλης». Μοῦ λέτε πὼς σκέπτεται νὰ γράψῃ τὸν τρίτο Φάουστ. Ἀνώτερος, ὅμως, κι' ἀπὸ τὸν Φάουστ, εἶναι ὁ Ἐμπεδοκλῆς — ἡ μεγάλη αὐτή, ἡ σχεδὸν θεϊκὴ μορφὴ τῆς Ἑλληνικῆς ἀρχαιότητας. Τὸ ἔργο ποὺ ἄφησε μισὸ ὁ Χέντερλιγκ. Πέστε τού το ἐκ μέρους μου. Ἂν καὶ θὰ τῶχει μόνος του σκεφθῆ. Δὲν μπορεῖ...

— Ποιὰ εἶναι ἡ γνώμη σας γιὰ τὸν Ἀλ. Σβάϊτσερ, στὸν ὁποῖον ὁ Καζαντζάκης χάρισε τὸν «Ἅγιο Φραγκίσκο» του;

— Λατρεύω τὸν Ἅγιο Φραγκίσκο. Εἶναι ὁ Ἅγιός μου. Ὁ Σβάϊτσερ εἶναι, ἀναμφισβήτητα, μιὰ μεγιστη μορφὴ κι' ἕνας ἀληθινὰ ἐξαιρετικὸς καὶ εὐχάριστος ἄνθρωπος, ποὺ νομίζω, ὅμως, ὅτι χάνεται γιὰ τὸν κόσμο. Καί, δυστυχῶς, χάρις σὲ μιὰ παραξενιά του, δὲν εἴχαμε τὴν χαρὰ νὰ τὸν ἀκούσουμε νὰ παίζῃ Μπάχ, ὅταν ἦταν ἐδῶ, πρόπερσι. Ἀρνήθηκε καὶ νὰ παίξῃ καὶ ν' ἀκούσῃ σὲ ὄργανο διαφορετικὸ ἀπ' αὐτὸ ποὺ ἔπαιζε ὁ ἴδιος ὁ Ἰωάννης Σεβαστιανός!...

— Μαέστρο, ἔχετε νοσταλγίες;

— Πιστέψτε με, ἂν μοῦλεγαν νὰ ξαναγινόμουν νέος, θ' ἀρνιόμουν. Ἡ πικρὴ γεῦσις ποὺ ἀφήνουν ὅλοι οἱ ἐφηβικοὶ πόθοι καὶ τὰ ἐπιδερμικὰ ἐρεθίσματα, μοῦ θυμίζουν τὰ νειάτα μου. Δὲν ἐπιθυμῶ νὰ τὰ ξαναζήσω. Ὄχι! Τὰ μισῶ μαζὶ μὲ κάθε τι ποὺ μοῦ τὰ θυμίζει...

— Δὲν σκέπτεσθε ἕνα ταξίδι στὴν Ἑλλάδα;

— Ἀκοῦστε: Πρῶτα - πρῶτα δὲν εἶναι ἡ καταλληλότερη ὥρα νὰ ἀφήσω τὴν ἡγετικὴ θέσι ποὺ μοῦδωσαν στὴν Ἀμερική. Κι' ἔπειτα, ἡ Ἑλλάδα δὲν μπορεῖ νὰ εἶναι μιὰ σύντομη, ἁπλῆ ἐπίσκεψις γιὰ μένα.... Ἡ Ἑλλάδα εἶναι ἀγάπημα. Εἶναι Δημητσάνα. Λείπω ἀπὸ τὸ 1930. Νομίζετε πὼς μπορῶ νἄρθω καὶ νὰ φύγω σὰν ξένος; Ὄχι. Ὅταν θἄρθω στὴν Ἑλλάδα, δὲν θἄρθω σὰν τουρίστας. Μοῦ λέτε νὰ μείνω μιὰ ἑβδομάδα, νὰ διευθύνω τὴν «Ἐνάτη», στὸ θέατρο Ἡρώδου. Ἡ «Ἐνάτη» δὲν εἶναι γιὰ κανέναν καὶ περισσότερο γιὰ μένα, μιὰ ὑπόθεσις οὔτε μιᾶς, οὔτε δυὸ ἑβδομάδων. Τώρα πρέπει νὰ προετοιμάσω τὴν Ὀρχήστρα γιὰ τὴν Εὐρωπαϊκὴ περιοδεία. Ὅπως εἶχα ἀποκαλύψει πάλι πρῶτα σὲ σᾶς, στὴν μεγάλη αὐτὴ τουρνέ θἄρθουμε γιὰ δυὸ μόνον συναυλίες καὶ στὴν Ἑλλάδα. Καὶ θὰ κλάψω πατῶντας τὸ χῶμα... (τὶ παράξενο ποὺναι αὐτὸ τὸ χῶμα...) καὶ δὲν θἄθελα νὰ ξαναφύγω, ἂν δὲν ἤμουν δεμένος μὲ τόσες σκληρὲς ὑποχρεώσεις... Δῶστε ἀπὸ τὰ ἀγαπημένα μου «Νέα» τοὺς χαιρετισμούς μου σ' ὅλους τοὺς Ἕλληνες. Θ' ἀνταμωθοῦμε μὲ τὸ καλὸ ὕστερα ἀπὸ λίγους μῆνες στὴν Ἀθήνα.

Ἦταν μιὰ ἀπὸ τὶς τελευταῖες συναυλίες τῆς «Μετροπόλιταν» ποὺ τὸν εἶδα γιὰ τελευταία φορά. Εἶχαν περάσει δέκα λεπτὰ ἀπὸ τότε ποὺ γύρισε ἀπὸ τὴν σκηνή, μετὰ τὴν δέκατη ἐνθουσιώδη ἀνάκλησί του, ἀπὸ ἑξῆντα χιλιάδες παραληροῦντος κοινοῦ, καὶ τὸ θέατρο ἐσείετο ἀπὸ ἕνα ρυθμικὸ Μά - έ - στρό... Καὶ οἱ θεαταί, ὄρθιοι, δὲν ἔλεγαν νὰ φύγουν...

ΜΙΑ ΑΠΟΚΑΛΥΠΤΙΚΗ ΣΥΝΕΝΤΕΥΞΙΣ ΜΕ ΤΟΝ ΜΕΓΑΛΟ ΜΑΕΣΤΡΟ

Δ. ΜΗΤΡΟΠΟΥΛΟΣ: «Δίνομαι μέ ἔρωτα φλογερό, σάν ἕνας παθητικός ἐραστής, ὅταν διευθύνω»

ΕΝΑ ΒΑΡΙΑ ΑΡΩΜΑΤΙΣΜΕΝΟ ΔΩΜΑΤΙΟ, ΜΕ ΑΓΙΟΡΕΙΤΙΚΟΥΣ ΣΤΑΥΡΟΥΣ, ΕΙΚΟΝΕΣ ΤΟΥ ΑΓΙΟΥ ΦΡΑΓΚΙΣΚΟΥ ΤΗΣ ΑΣΣΙΣΗΣ ΚΑΙ ΤΗΝ ΒΙΒΛΟ —

Ὁ ἔκτακτος συνεργάτης τῶν «Νέων» κ. Γ. Μπουκουβάλας μᾶς ἀπέστειλε ἀπὸ τὴν Νέαν Ὑόρκην τὴν δημοσιευομένην κατωτέρω ἐκτάκτου ἐνδιαφέροντος συνέντευξιν μὲ τὸν διάσημον ἀρχιμουσικὸν Δημήτρην Μητρόπουλον.

Τὸν συνήντησα ἐνῶ ἔφευγε, ὕστερα ἀπὸ μιὰ δοκιμὴ τῆς Φιλαρμονικῆς στὴν αἴθουσα τοῦ «Κάρνεγκι Χώλ». Χωρὶς νὰ σταθῇ, μοῦ ἀρνήθηκε ἀδιάφορα καὶ ψυχρὰ κάθε συζήτησι. «Δὲν ἔχω καιρὸ νὰ δῶ οὔτε τοὺς Ἀμερικανοὺς δημοσιογράφους...» εἶπε κι' ἔφυγε βιαστικά, σφιχτὰ στὸ μπράτσο μιᾶς νέας γυναίκας — νομίζω Γερμανίδας — ποὺ τὸν περίμενε πολὴν ὥρα δίπλα μου μέσα στὴ σκοτεινὴ αἴθουσα τῶν δοκιμῶν...

Τὸ πατριωτικό μου φιλότιμο ἅναψε καὶ κάθησα ἀμέσως καὶ τοῦ ἔγραψα ἕνα γράμμα ποὺ δὲν ἦταν καθόλου... τρυφερό.

Τὴν ἄλλη μέρα καὶ τὴν ἑπομένη πῆρα ἐπανειλημμένα μηνύματα ἀπὸ τὴν γραμματέα του. Στὸ τέλος, ἔμαθα ὅτι ὁ μαέστρος μὲ ζητεῖ νὰ γευματίσουμε μαζί...

Στὴ μιὰ τὸ μεσημέρι τῆς ἑπομένης μὲ περίμενε στὸ ξενοδοχεῖα του «Μεγάλο Βορεινὸ» δίπλα στὸ Κάρνεγκι Χώλ, στὸν 57ο δρόμο, ὅπου κρατάει τὸ τελευταῖο μοναχικὸ διαμερισμα. (Σ' αὐτὸν τὸν ἀπρόσιτο χῶρο δὲν φθάνει κανεὶς θόρυβος, οὔτε κἂν ψίθυρος, ἐνῶ ἡ τηλεφωνήτρια τοῦ ξενοδοχείου σὲ παραπέμπει μηχανικὰ στὸ νούμερο Τραφάλγκαρ, κυρία Ρήντ...).

Μὲ παρεκάλεσε ν' ἀνεβῶ ἐπάνω χρησιμοποιῶντας τὸ ἀτομικό του ἀσανσὲρ. Μοῦ ἄνοιξε καὶ μπῆκα σ' ἕνα βαρειὰ ἀρωματισμένο, σ' ἕνα ἀπόλυτα καλλιτεχνικὸ δωμάτιο ποὺ δὲν μπαίνει ἄνθρωπος...

Πίσω ἀπ' τὸ κεφάλι τοῦ μαέστρου καθὼς πῆρε τὴ θέσι του, στέκει μιὰ λάμπα, ποὺ φωτίζει τὸ ἀναλόγιο... Ἀπ' αὐτὴν κρέμονται, μὲ ἀλυσίδες, δυὸ παλιοὶ Ἀγιορείτικοι σιδερένιοι σταυροί, ὁ ἕνας πιὸ μεγάλος ἀπὸ τὸν ἄλλο καὶ σὲ διαφορετικὸ ὕψος. Τελείως πίσω του, στὸν τοῖχο, τρεῖς Ἅγιοι Φραγκίσκοι. Ἕνας τοῦ Γκρέκο, ἕνας παλιότερος σὲ πριμιτὶφ στὺλ καὶ ἕνας ἄλλος σὲ μινιατούρα ἀπὸ κόκκαλο.

Στὸ ἀναλόγιο εἶναι ἕνας ἀπὸ τοὺς τρεῖς χοντροὺς τόμους τοῦ «Μπάλο ἴν μάσκερα» τοῦ Βέρντι. Πάνω στὸ γραφεῖο του, ἕνα χρονόμετρο ρολόϊ ποὺ σπάνια τὸ μεταχειρίζεται, ἕνα διαπασῶν καὶ χαρτιά. Στὴν ἄλλη γωνία ἕνα πιάνο μὲ μικρὴ οὐρὰ κι' ἀπάνω μιὰ... Βίβλος. Τὴν βρῆκα ἀνοιχτὴ στὶς Προφητείες τοῦ Σαμουήλ.

Ὁ Μαέστρος τελείωσε τὸ ἁπλούστοτο ντύσιμό του φορώντας ἕνα μαῦρο σκουφί. Δὲν εἶχα καθήσει καλὰ ὅταν, μ' ἐπλησίασε γελαστός, μ' ἔπιασε ἀπ' τὸ μπράτσο καὶ μὲ πῆρε βιαστικά, ζητώντας μου συγγνώμη γιὰ τὴν πρώτη του συμπεριφορά:

— Ἀκοῦστε. Δὲν εἶμαι σκληρὸς οὔτε ἀπότομος. Εἶμαι πολὺ εὐαίσθητος. Γι' αὐτὸ ἀκριβῶς αἰσθάνομαι τὴν ἀνάγκη νὰ θωρακίζωμαι. Χρειάζομαι μιάν... αὐτοάμυνα. Χίλιοι ἄνθρωποι τὴν ἡμέρα μοῦ σπάζουν τὴν συγκέντρωσι ποὺ εἶναι τόσο ἀναγκαία γιὰ τὴν συνεχῆ μελέτη μου. Ἔτσι, ἀναγκάζομαι νὰ φαίνωμαι κάποτε σκληρός, χωρὶς νὰ εἶμαι. Καὶ συνήθως παρεξηγοῦμαι... Πᾶμε τώρα νὰ φᾶμε καὶ νὰ τὰ ποῦμε. Θὰ σᾶς ἀπαντήσω σ' ὅ,τι μὲ ρωτήσετε.

Μὲ ὠδήγησε σ' ἕνα μικρὸ μισοῦπόγειο Ἑλληνικὸ μαγαζί. Καθήσαμε σὲ μιὰ γωνιά, ἀρχίζοντας μ' ἐλιὲς καὶ κουκιὰ καὶ εὐχόμενοι μὲ μπροῦσκο μαῦρο κρασί. Τὸ ἀφεντικὸ εἶχε κι' ὅλας πλησιάσει τὸν «Μαέστρο του» κι' ἔπαιρνε τὴν παραγγελία.

— Μὴ σᾶς φανῇ ὅτι τρώω πολύ. Αὐτὸ εἶναι τὸ φαΐ γιὰ ὅλη μου τὴν ἡμέρα. Δὲν ξανατρώω. Καὶ τώρα, σᾶς ἀκούω.

— Θὰ εἴχατε τὴν καλωσύνη νὰ μοῦ πῆτε ποῦ βρίσκεται τὸ μυστικὸ τῆς μοναδικῆς αὐτῆς μαεστρίας σας γιὰ τὴν ὁποία εἴσαστε ὁ δημοφιλέστερος ἄνθρωπος στὴν Ἀμερική;

— Δὲν ὑπάρχει κανένα μυστικό. Δίνομαι μὲ ἔρωτα φλογερό, ὑποφέροντας ἀφάνταστα τὴν ὥρα τῆς ἑρμηνείας, ἀκριβῶς σὰν ἕνας παθητικὸς ἐραστής... Αὐτὸ εἶναι ὅλο! Κι' ἔπειτα ἀγαπῶ τοὺς μουσικούς μου. Ἐγὼ τὴν ἀγάπη αὐτὴ τὴν νοιώθω σὰν σεβασμό. Σκέπτομαι τὴ φτώχεια τους, τὶς ἀτομικές τους στεναχώριες, κάθε τους δυσκολία. Κάποιος ἀπόφε μπορεῖ νὰ μὴν κοιμήθηκε καλά, κάποιος μπορεῖ νὰ εἶχε στεναχώριες μὲ τὴ γυναῖκα του ἢ νὰ ἄρρωστο τὸ παιδί του, κάποιος μπορεῖ νὰ ξύπνησε κακόκεφος... Δὲν προσταθῶ νὰ τοὺς ὑποτάξω στὴ θέλησί μου, ἀλλὰ τοὺς πείθω φιλικὰ κάθε φορά, ποὺ ἀποτείνομαι στὸν καθένα προσωπικά. Κι' ἔτσι κάνουν αὐτὸ ποὺ τοὺς ζητῶ αὐθόρμητα... Βέβαια, τὸ ἐρωτικὸ πάθος δὲν εἶναι ἀναγκαῖο γιὰ τὸ ἀποτέλεσμα. Στὴν Ἀμερικὴ μάλιστα, αὐτὴ ἡ ἀτομικὴ θυσία, ἡ ἀτομικὴ αὐτὴ προσφορά, θεωρεῖται ἐκζήτησι καὶ ὑπερβολή.

— Πῶς ἀντιμετωπίζετε τὸ θέμα τῆς ἑρμηνείας;

— Καθὼς ἄρχισα νὰ σᾶς λέω, ἡ ἑρμηνεία εἶναι ἕνα τραγικὸ γεγονός. Δίνεσαι γιὰ νὰ ζωντανέψῃς μιὰν ἄλλη ζωὴ — τοῦ δημιουργοῦ. Κι' ἂν τὸ δόσιμο αὐτὸ εἶναι ἀληθινὸ κι' ἔχει μαζὶ εὐαισθησία κι' ὅλη τὴ φαντασία ποὺ χρειάζεται, τότε πετυχαίνεις νὰ τὸν ἀναστήσῃς. Καὶ μαζὶ μὲ τὴν τελευταία νότα ἔχει ἐκπνεύσει ἡ δικιά σου ζωὴ καὶ σὲ κάθε ἐπανάληψη ζῆς μιὰ καινούργια λιγόχρονη φλογισμένη ζωή, ἕναν ἔρωτα κι' ἕναν θάνατο...

— Πῶς ἀντιμετωπίζετε τοὺς νέους συνθέτες;

— Ἀκοῦστε με: Ἔρχονται καὶ μὲ βρίσκουν κάθε μέρα πλῆθος Σουηδοί, Ὁλλανδοί, Ἄγγλοι κι' Ἀμερικανοὶ νέοι συνθέτες ποὺ μὲ παρακαλοῦν νὰ δῶ τὰ ἔργα τους. Τὸ κάνω εὐχαρίστως. Πράγματι, βρίσκω πολλὰ ἀπ' αὐτὰ καλογραμμένα. Ἀκόμα κι' ἐνδιαφέροντα. Δὲν μπορῶ ὅμως νὰ τοὺς ἱκανοποιήσω. Στὶς πατρίδες τους, σίγουρα θὰ τὰ διηύθυνα. Γιὰ ἕνα ὅμως παγκόσμιο κοινό, τὰ προσόντα ποὺ ἔχουν δὲν εἶναι ἀρκετά. Ἔχω μεγάλη εὐθύνη ἀπέναντι σ' αὐτὸ τὸ κοινό. Χρειάζονται ἔργα ποὺ νὰ ξεπερνᾶν τὰ ἐθνικὰ σύνορα. Κι' αὐτά, εἶναι πολὺ λίγα. Ἕνα τέτοιο Ἑλληνικὸ ἔργο εἶναι τοῦ Σκαλκώτα. Βρῆκα ἐπίσης ἐνδιαφέροντα τὰ ἔργα νέων καθὼς τοῦ Γ. Σισιλιάνου καὶ τοῦ Μίκη Θεοδωράκη.

New York Orchestra in West

By C. Sharpless Hickman

Los Angeles

Concerts provided by the New York Philharmonic-Symphony Orchestra here have shown that our Los Angeles Philharmonic, by comparison, lacks qualities it should have to represent adequately the third city in the nation.

Visits in recent years by the Philadelphia, the N.B.C., the Boston Symphony, and the French National Radio Orchestras have caused dissatisfaction of a like sort.

Hearing the Philadelphia's brilliance, the N.B.C.'s tenseness, the Boston's warmth, and the French orchestra's subtlety—and then the New York's blending all these qualities—arouses even steadfast adherents from their complacency.

Two Programs

The Pasadena Civic Auditorium concert, arranged by Elmer Wilson, and the Shrine Auditorium concert in Los Angeles, promoted by our Philharmonic's sponsors, the Southern California Symphony Association, were conducted by Dimitri Mitropoulos and Guido Cantelli, respectively.

Mr. Mitropoulos, in his adventurous Pasadena program, offered, for new works, the Tenth Symphony of Shostakovitch and the delightful Greek Dances of Nico Skalkottas. Also heard were Brahms's Haydn Variations, in a benighly relaxed reading; and Kabalevsky's "Colas Breugnon" Overture.

The Tenth Symphony finds the maturing Shostakovitch minimizing his more obvious idiosyncrasies. The core of the 50-minute work is its moving 20-minute opening section, with contrasts of pastoral beauty and constructive energy. The second movement is a brief, frenetic dance for spinning strings, against which the brasses intone more slowly. The third movement has an Oriental flavor, with a lovely English horn obbligato. The Finale is more typical Shostakovitch, with bassoon triplets, up-curling flute passages, quick-step rhythms, almost approaching movie "chase" music, and searing string attacks.

Mr. Cantelli, in his Los Angeles program, gave a remarkable interpretation of Ravel's setting of Moussorgsky's "Pictures at an Exhibition," wondrously mirroring the title. His treatment, however, of the First Symphony of Brahms sacrificed depth for speed and inner majesty for outward theatricalism.

Wallenstein Concerts

The impression made by Mitropoulos was one of imagination, disciplined by mature intelligence and scrupulous musicianship. Cantelli impressed by a more youthful verve and force, and a theatrical flair not yet reined in by maturity. The orchestra under both conductors proved to be superbly drilled, rich-toned, blessed by mellow brasses, and wondrously responsive to direction.

ORCHESTRA IN WEST

Philharmonic Impresses In Coast Appearances

By ALBERT GOLDBERG

LOS ANGELES.

As the fourth major Eastern orchestra to display its accomplishments to the West Coast in recent years, the New York Philharmonic-Symphony Orchestra was recently as warmly received by southern Californians as the Philadelphia Orchestra had been in 1948, the N. B. C. Symphony in 1950 and the Boston Symphony in 1954.

Box-office figures give some indications of the orchestra's reception in southern California. At the first appearance, in the Pasadena Civil Auditorium on April 28, Dimitri Mitropoulos conducting, 2,825 of the theatre's 2,968 seats were sold. The next night, in Los Angeles' mammoth Shrine Auditorium, under the auspices of the Southern California Symphony Association, Guido Cantelli faced an audience of 6,200, which practically represents a sell-out.

Rain—the thing for which southern California yearns the most but which always terrifies the inhabitants nearly as much as the H-bomb—held Mr. Cantelli's San Diego concert to some 2 000 auditors, as against Russ Auditorium's 2,400 capacity. But Mr. Mitropoulos' Santa Barbara matinee on May 1 found the 2,000 seats of the Granada Theatre occupied. Statistics concerning the orchestra's northern California concerts in Fresno and San Francisco indicate equally favorable turnouts.

New to Coast

In Pasadena, Mr. Mitropoulos—using a baton, and in a markedly more restrained mood than usual—introduced Shostakovich's Tenth Symphony and Skalkottas' Greek Dances to the West Coast and devoted the remainder of his time to Kabalevsky's "Colas Breugnon" overture and the Brahms-Haydn variations. The Shostakovich stirred up bravos from the ordinarily staid Pasadena public, but impressed this listener as being even more synthetic and repetitive of familiar formulas than one had gathered from the recorded performances.

Mr. Cantelli, in contrast to Mr. Mitropoulos, was considerably more active in deportmen at his Los Angeles concert tha he had been in a New York appearances we had observed. However, he kept undue theatricalism from his conducting until the final movement of Brahms' First Symphony, which until then had been strongly lyrical in the Toscanini Italianate vein. The audience approved uproariously of everything, including the overture to Rossini's "The Siege of Corinth," Samuel Barber's Adagio for Strings and the Ravel-Mussoourgsky "Pictures at an Exhibition."

This listener found the orchestra in both concerts a magnificent instrument, with first-desk artists of prime ability, the whole lacking only a little in the individual quality that distinguishes such ensembles as the Boston and Philadelphia orchestras.

Dissent

But Patterson Greene, music critic of The Los Angeles Examiner, wrote:

"It may be that the New York organization would sound better playing in Philharmonic Auditorium and would sound better than our own Philharmonic Orchestra. But in the Shrine, possibly because of the acoustical conditions, it sounded rather inferior to our home team. Lacking were the massiveness, the balance and the brilliance to which we have become accustomed."

This might seem like chauvinism, yet in San Diego, where the New York Philharmonic played in Russ Auditorium, as does the Los Angeles Philharmonic on its visits to that city, Bruno David Ussher of The San Diego Evening Tribune said he preferred the "French horns, flutes and trumpets of the Los Angeles Philharmonic. Such comparisons invited themselves and resulted in a pleasant pride in a southern Californian."

Since Mr. Cantelli omitted the Barber composition from his San Diego program, Constance Hereshoff of The San Diego Union was moved to hope that when the New York Philharmonic returned it would play "at least one work by a living composer, possibly an American."

Differences

Maurice Faulkner of The Santa Barbara Star found fault with the orchestra's intonation, and heard muddled passages in rapid string and woodwind passages and wrong notes in horn unisons. But Henry J Seldis, writing in The Santa Barbara News-Press, thought that the orchestra "gave us a glimpse of orchestral perfection and interpretative genius employed in the brilliant presentation of four totally different musical works."

In San Francisco, where Mr. Mitropoulos repeated his Pasadena program, Alfred Frankenstein of The Chronicle felt that the conductor "placed heavy emphasis on triviality in making up the program." But later, Mr. Frankenstein found it to be "an immediately rewarding experience to hear in the flesh an ensemble whose strings are always in tune and whose horns are no cause for uneasiness."

Mitropoulos Welcomed Back

By JOHN H. HARVEY

Some 5,000 persons gave Dimitri Mitropoulos a roaring welcome Tuesday night as he returned to Northrop Memorial auditorium at the head of the New York Philharmonic - Symphony orchestra.

It is six years since that emotion-charged evening when he took his leave of the Minneapolis Symphony orchestra and the local audience to take over musical direction of the Philharmonic.

There was plenty of emotion in the air Tuesday night, too, but it was of the happy variety. Mitropoulos himself, dynamic as ever, strode quickly onstage, beaming. A storm of applause broke and the audience began to rise, but he cut short the demonstration by launching quickly into the National Anthem.

Prolonged applause followed thereafter at the end of every number on the program, but the maestro always insisted on sharing all bows with his colleagues of the orchestra.

There was considerable justice in this, for while a great deal of the applause was an expression of regard for Mitropoulos personally, the qualities of the orchestra aroused the greatest of admiration.

This was the first time we in this part of the country have had live contact with this great organization. And great it is in every department, in every position and as a musical entity.

The mellowness, sweetness, body and richness of the string choir formed the particularly outstanding feature. Aside from that, the sounds of the Philharmonic are not overwhelmingly superior to those of the Minneapolis orchestra. But the apparent ease with which the sounds roll out without tension, the feeling of power only half used, are characteristics in sharp contrast to our local orchestra.

Obviously the orchestra was in fine spirits and was bent on doing its best on their conductor's old home ground. The clarity of overall sound, the deftness of the playing and the vitality of response—hair-triggered yet relaxed—were things to marvel at.

Opening number was Kabalevsky's merry little "Colas Breugnon," overture — Glinka with a touch of Till Eulenspiegel—and it was given a sharp-focused, bounding performance.

Mendelssohn, an old specialty with Mitropoulos, provided the second number, the fifth, or "Reformation" symphony. About the most pretentiousness and stuffiness to be found in any Mendelssohn work is in this symphony, and that's not terribly much. Mitropoulos and the orchestra gave it clean outlines, considerable grandeur and fine motive force and never let its high seriousness become heavy seriousness.

About all I can say in praise of Shostakovitch's tenth symphony is that it has masterful orchestration and that it was given a whale of a performance. It is doubtful whether any other conductor or orchestra could show deeper understanding of its architecture and expressive details and set forth the music to better advantage.

Yet I can find nothing in it that Shostakovitch has not done in previous symphonies—and done better. It is simply a dull, long-winded harangue.

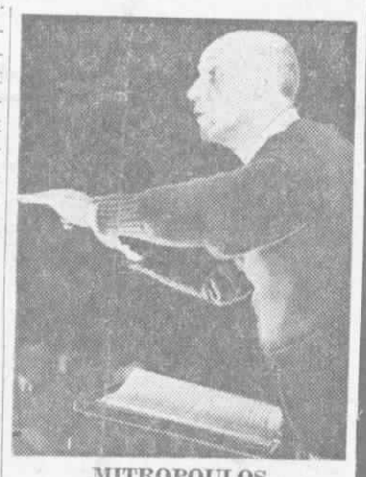
Crowds Cheer Maestro in Triumphant Return

★ Minneapolis still has a possessive feeling, and a devoted one, toward Dimitri Mitropoulos, who came back last night after six years to conduct his touring New York Philharmonic - Symphony orchestra in Northrop auditorium. An overflow audience that shouted and cheered in a standing ovation welcomed "home" the former leader of the Minneapolis Symphony.

The concert, final event in the University Artists course, vividly revived memories of that shaking, quivering figure who used to quicken the pulse, and whose music, now as then, was such a warm and intense expression, full of fire and fury, and with such a wide and high reach.



Mitropoulos uses a baton now, but nothing else has much changed—except for a greater mastery of his instrumental forces and his conceptions of the music he plays.

The program started off with a whirlwind effect in Kabalevsky's "Colas Breugnon" overture—a dashing work with martial blare and high velocity and offbeat rhythms, a "warm-up" the conductor tossed off with fine bravura and with which the orchestra proved immediately its skill as one of the world's finest.

The Mendelssohn "Reformation" symphony followed — among other things, a reminder of Mitropoulos' fondness for the early romantics while he was here, also his predilection for music of religious reference. It was initiated with solemn summons of the brass and attained in its progress many high summits of grandeur and power.

After intermission the audience had its first hearing of Dmitri Shostakovitch's latest symphony, his Tenth, which Mitropolous introduced in New York this past season.

Shostakovitch in this new work seems to be a composer who has worked outside the currents of latterday composition in the western world, for it seems largely in the romantic tradition, is a "linear" work with little contrapuntal element and at times seems padded and repetitious.

MITROPOULOS
There were cheers

Yet there are impressive and even thrilling episodes in it that only Shostakovitch could have produced — such as that weirdly agitated and mischievous second movement with its machinegun drums, blare of trumpets and shrilling violins.

It was a performance of seething brilliance, and while I'm not at all sure the work is as important as it sounds, I'm dead certain that the interpretation it got was as near perfection as it will likely ever receive. Mitropoulos was recalled again and again after the close of the program proper, and to an audience that refused to go home he then offered two contrasting encores — Rachmaninoff's "Vocalise" and the overture to Verdi's "La Forza del Destino."

'Requiem' Is Great Artistic Achievement

By Donald Key.

IOWA CITY—The musical genius of Dimitri Mitropoulos created an incomparable fine arts event as he conducted more than 350 musicians in a performance of Berlioz' majestic "Requiem" here Thursday night.

As the final note faded away 8,000 listeners in the Iowa field house burst into a five-minute ovation that was climaxed by a standing salute to the great maestro of the New York Philharmonic and to the magnificent performance he commanded from the University of Iowa Symphony orchestra and chorus.

Meet Challenge.

Berlioz' "Mass for the Dead" is a grandiose and expansive work, rarely performed because it requires such a large personnel. But for Mitropoulos and the musicians, this was a challenge met by a reverent and devoted approach to the work as a whole.

Whenever the maestro conducts, notation and cadence are completely subordinated to the major concern of producing great music and beautiful sound. This he instills in the performers he is directing, no matter how many or how dispersed, an unlimited musicianship and dedication to the artistic achievement.

From the soft, melodic beginning of the "Introit and Kyrie", he drew beautiful color and shading from the many voices and instruments. It was a production of gorgeous sound, balanced to perfection and controlled with expressive and masterful guidance.

Superb Music.

Tender pianissimos grew, through long crescendos, to rich and full high points in tone production. There was no glare from chorus or orchestra, only superb music, subdued or enveloping.

This was most impressive when the off-stage brass choirs entered during the "Sequence" section. Here indeed the music seemed to surround the audience with golden echo from various locations in the huge hall.

All of this was accomplished with amazing precision and professional quality.

Best singing by the large double chorus, trained by Prof. Herald Stark, came in "Red tremendae" and "Quaerens me", the latter a splended knitting of voices.

Chorus Expressive.

The orchestra, rehearsed by Mitropoulos' protege, James Dixon,, was most expressive in the "Domine, Jesu Christe", which begins with plaintive chant and builds to numerous lovely contrasts in color and mood.

But all sections were magnificently performed. "Lacrymosa", last number on the first half of the program, was inspirational. Listeners seemed to sit transfixed while the rich music grew to beautiful heights, broke into haunting song, then subsided and was rebuilt to a warm climax.

The "Sanctus" was sung by Tenor David Lloyd above women's chorus background. His dark quality and fine musicianship excellently fitted the reverent approach as did his mastery of phrasing and covered high register.

In all, it was a production of rare magnitude and conception—blended by a maestro whose incomparable genius on the podiums produces great artistry and great music.

"ORCHESTRAS SYMBOLIZE CITIES' CULTURE," said New York Philharmonic Conductor Dimitri Mitropoulos (left) in answering a question on the value of community symphonies. Hearing his views, above, are Himie Voxman (center), head of the University of Iowa music department, and James Dixon, protege and pupil of the maestro. Mitropoulos also said that over-emphasis of mechanical devices such as TV and Hi-Fi "denies life."

When you go out into the world, your mission should not be to make more money and to acquire a position of power, but to be useful to your neighbor. That way you can approach more closely this utopia, as I said. I ask your forgiveness for the drastic words "loving your neighbor"—you do not have to love him, exactly, but you have to consider him and contribute something in your community so that you will do something out of yourself for the sake of helping others. Thus, I think, we can achieve a better world. This is the only way we can save people from becoming frustrated and bitter."

Der Athener ‚Hippolytos'

Menschenschicksal zwischen Aphrodite und Artemis

DrHK. Auch Euripides wurde von den Neugriechen zelebriert. Auch Leben und Tod des Kranzbringers Hippolytos vollzog sich als dramatische Feier. Die Szene ist hier vor dem Königspalast in Troizen, und Kl. Kleonis, der Raumgestalter bei „König Oedipus", brauchte seinen Architekturrahmen nur um einiges abzuwandeln, um den Vorgängen Hintergrund zu geben. Der große und hohe Stil wurde auch diesmal eingehalten. Dennoch war vieles anders. Ja, gerade die Inszenierung erhellte nahezu schlagartig, welch große Kluft zwischen Aischylos und Sophokles da und Euripides hier seit jeher besteht. Die „Hippolytos"-Aufführung, mit der das griechische Maigastspiel ausklang, hatte eine Tendenz zum Farbigen, ja zum Barocken. Sie schob gewisse theatralische Faktoren vor das Kultische. Auch schien es, als ob im Dekor, in der aufwendigeren Spielart, in der liturgischen Weise der Gesänge gewisse Einflüsse von Byzanz walteten . . .

Es ist wohl eine vergebliche Mühe, den Wesensunterschied des letzten antiken Tragikers hinwegdisputieren zu wollen. Euripides steht vollauf in der Welt des Zweifels. Die Ebene, auf der seine Figuren spielen, ist nicht mehr die des Mythos allein. Sie neigt sich bereits zum Privaten hin. Der Psychologismus bricht ein, auch bei den Göttern. Sie sind bei Euripides nicht mehr die hohen Mächte, deren Zorn oder Huld der Mensch als erhabene Gewalten erfährt, sondern fast schon theatralisch gesetzte Zeichen, allegorische Figuren gleichsam, die als Mittel zur Auslösung der Handlung dienen. Artemis, die am Schluß des „Hippolytos" erscheint, ist der „Deus ex machina" der Barockoper, und die Art, in der D. Ach. Rondiris, der Regisseur der Aufführung (bekanntlich bis vor kurzem noch Intendant des Nationaltheaters Athen) sie und am Anfang Aphrodite auf hohem Podest vor dunklem Nachthimmel ins strahlende Licht rückte, war bei aller Faszination keine mythische Aufhöhung, sondern theatralische Figuration, barocke Glorie . . .

Das Wort „Barock" nimmt sich im Zusammenhang mit der Antike seltsam aus. Aber Euripides bedeutet, bei aller Größe und Eigenart seiner Dichtung, doch schon die Dämmerung des antiken Dramas. Nicht nur die Rede wird bei ihm beweglicher, nicht nur drängt er, wie etwa der große Botenbericht im Hippolytos zeigt, auf expressive Bildlichkeit — er macht auch die Psyche seiner Figuren farbig. Die gleichsam monologischen Äußerungen der in Liebe zu ihrem Stiefsohn entbrannten Phaidra oder des das weibliche Geschlecht hassenden, ganz seiner Jagd- und Pferdeleidenschaft frönenden Hippolytos sind innere Aufschließungen von Menschen, die schon jenseits von Göttern existent sind, oder aber nur noch der Gottheit anhängen, mit der sich ihr jeweils erkorenes Idol symbolhaft, besser allegorisch verbindet . . . Die Regie von Rondiris trieb auch dieses Psychologisierende sehr deutlich ins Bild, im Effektausbruch, in der jagenden Gebärde, im sehr überlegt entwickelten und gesteigerten Pathos.

Der Hippolytos-Stoff ist der gleiche, den später Racine in seiner „Phädra" gestaltet hat und den noch in jüngster Zeit Bernard von Brentano in seinem im Wiesbadener Kleinen Haus aufgeführten Schauspiel aufgegriffen hat. Auf den deutschen Bühnen fehlt das Euripides-Stück, obwohl gute Übersetzungen vorliegen, so von Wolde und neuerdings von Buschor. So mochte die griechische Gastaufführung für viele die erste Bekanntschaft mit dieser Tragödie schenken. Auch dieses Drama führt das Nationaltheater Athen an sich im Freien auf. Rondiris schuf seine Inszenierung für das Epidauros-Theater. Die Umsetzung in den geschlossenen Raum erfolgte eigens anläßlich des Athener Besuchs von Bundeskanzler Adenauer. Mehr noch als beim „König Oedipus" spürte man diesmal diese Herkunft von der Freilichtbühne . . . Alles hatte den Zug nach Ausladendem, nach Weiträumigkeit, auch der Sprachklang tendierte in seiner Dimension zuweilen noch dahin. Die fehlende Naturkulisse wurde freilich wesentlich wettgemacht durch die ungemein ausgewogene gleichsam essentielle Beleuchtung. Es gab Szenenmomente von geradezu magischer Bildkraft — einer Bildkraft, wie wir sie auch bei unseren heimischen Aufführungen gern erleben möchten.

Mehr als beim „Oedipus" tritt beim „Hippolytos", wie die Griechen ihn spielten, auch die Musik hervor. D. Mitropoulos, der berühmte griechische Dirigent, hat sie geschrieben — ein ganzes Opus von differenzierter moderner Prägung und fesselnder Eigenart, das unter der Stabführung von G. Lykoudis wiederum die Staatskapelle hinter der Szene musizierte. Die Chorlieder werden sämtlich gesungen — unisono, in Gebärdungen und mit einem Bewegungsstil der sichtlich die Herkunft von der Palucca-Schule verrät. Tatsächlich war die Choreographin Lukia Schülerin der Palucca, sie wirkte drei Jahre in Dresden und weilte dann später in Amerika, bevor sie in Athen ihre Arbeit aufnahm. Auch die Choreographie der „Orestie", mit der das Nationaltheater Athen ursprünglich kommen wollte, stammt von ihr. Die edlen Bewegungen der sechzehn Frauen von Troizen und ihrer Chorführerin (Th. Kalliga), die flutende Einbeziehung in die Szene, die bedeutungsvolle Art, wie sie die einzelnen Auftritte beschirmten oder in sie eingriffen — all dies ließ die stark stilisierenden Tendenzen dieser Choreographin deutlich werden. Dieser Stilisierung hatte wohl auch die Wiederholung bestimmter Formen und Gangweisen zu dienen.

Die Schauspielerleistungen zeigten zum andernmal, daß Theaterspiel bei den Griechen nicht bloß Sache des Berufs, sondern leidenschaftlicher Hingabe ist . . . Zwischen den leuchtenden Erscheinungen der Aphrodite (K. Panaghiotou) und der Artemis (Al. Katseli), die ihren Zwist an den Menschen austragen, stehen eben diese Menschen in ihrer fast schon modern anmutenden Individuation: Die ausdrucksvoll gebärdete Phaidra der dunkel-schönen El. Verghis und der olympisch edle, selbstsichere, Kraft und Elan der Jugend ausstrahlende Hippolytos des Al. Alexandrakis. Th. Kotsopoulos war der Theseus, von königlicher Würde noch im Ausbruch des Zorns. St. Vokovitsch sprach mit Leidenschaft die Kunde vom scheuenden Gespann und Sturz des Hippolytos. Ant. Moustaka mimte die alte Amme. B. Kanakis war der Diener. Der tiefe Eindruck der Aufführung äußerte sich wiederum in langanhaltenden stürmischen Ovationen. In der großen Mittelloge war als Gast auch diesmal der griechische Botschafter zugegen. Für ihn und das gesamte Athener Ensemble gab im Anschluß an die Vorstellung die Landesregierung einen Empfang im Kloster Eberbach, wobei Kultusminister Hennig in seiner die Gäste feiernden Rede den lebhaften Wunsch nach Wiederkehr, und dann mit der „Orestie" und der „Antigone", aussprach.

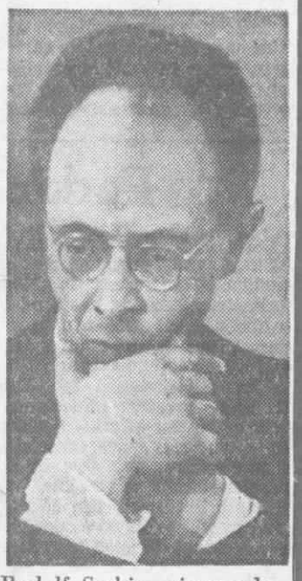
Mitropoulos Conducts

Beethoven Program Opens 38th Stadium Concert Season

By Jay S. Harrison

The native tempest and tumult that inevitably accompanies all all-Beethoven programs was decidedly in evidence last night on Convent Ave. as the Stadium Concerts began its thirty-eighth successive season at City College's Lewisohn Stadium.



Dimitri Mitropoulos was maestro of the evening and Rudolf Serkin appeared as soloist in the "Emperor" Concerto, which was neatly framed on either side by the "Prometheus" Overture and the "Eroica" Symphony.

As befits a gala evening, some 19,000 listeners were on hand to lend support to the notable open-air enterprises, which was further glamorized by musical and political celebrities piled three deep in reserved places of high honor. It was, all told, an opening wanting only bright fireworks to thrust it into the realm of the genuinely spectacular.

This was accomplished, moreover, despite the rather tepid temperature that marked the night's music making as a whole. The "Prometheus" Overture began studiously, sombrely, at a tempo calculated to set off handsomely the work's peltering main theme and subsequent blithe development. As is ever the character of Stadium performance the balance between orchestral choirs underwent, in the process of amplification, some woeful peculiarities, and on this account idle accompaniment figures, meant to fatten the harmonic texture, were frequently in evidence to the clear disadvantage of more significant material; but in the main the acoustical hazards of the amphitheater were throttled to a minimum.

As a result, Mr. Serkin's tone emerged cleanly, though through the loudspeaker it could scarcely be said to possess the range of colors which the pianist normally conceals in his fingers. The performance itself was a hale and substantial one, crowned with no especial distinction. As usual, Mr. Serkin bore grandly a talent that mysteriously imparts to his readings a feeling of facility and ease, for which reason his work gave off a rare blend of mellowness, candor and eloquence. One felt comfortable in confronting Mr. Serkin's "Emperor" views, expecting no untoward excitations and receiving none to discharge this happy complacency. And since the circumstances of Stadium performance do not permit the final degrees of refinement, only the grasping and greedy coul dask for more.

For his part, Mr. Mitropoulos provided a stark and granitic interpretation of the "Eroica" that was in every phrase roughly hewn and chiseled. And this treatment is not inappropriate to the demands of the work, which for all its length is tight of muscle and nowhere flabby. Simply stated, the conductor follows a method which requires that isolated specks of drama be found with which to enkindle the entire composition. He finds them, too, though sometimes at the expense of continuity and grace. Last night the "Eroica" rippled with a power brash in the extreme. Thus heard, the symphony flashes with life.

Rudolf Serkin, piano soloist at Lewisohn Stadium last night.

During the intermission Mrs. Charles S. Guggenheimer, chairman of Stadium Concerts, Inc., made a brief address and introduced Deputy Mayor Henry Epstein, who officially christened the series. In the course of her talk, Mrs. Guggenheimer spoke of the "wonderful, glamorous" programs that lie ahead in the next six weeks. And who is there so bold as to doubt her words?

All-Beethoven Program Opens Lewisohn Season

By LOUIS BIANCOLLI.

One of the largest opening night crowds—19,000 strong—welcomed in the 38th season of Lewisohn Stadium concerts last night.

It was a perfect opening in every sense. The weather was ideal for outdoor symphonics. Few local retreats could have offered cooler relaxation than the Stadium last night.

The Stadium Symphony Orchestra was in excellent form. So was Rudolf Serkin as piano soloist in the "Emperor" concerto of Beethoven. And Dimitri Mitropoulos was his dynamic and inspiring self on the podium.

And of course there was "Minnie, the only name to which Mrs. Charles S. Guggenheimer answers among friends, and she was among 19,000 of them last night.

Greetings from 'Minnie.'

"Hello, everybody!" she chirped hospitably into the mike, only to bring on the first round of laughter by asking: "Is this thing on?"

She outlined the week's programs, ending with Thursday's—"That is Mr. Mitropoulos' last night," she said with an unintended note of solemnity in her voice. This prompted more good-natured merriment.

"What's the matter with you tonight?" she said, "because I don't feel a bit amusing." She appealed for more contributions to meet the Stadium's mounting costs, and then introduced the deputy mayor, Henry Epstein.

Patron Saint.

"These concerts are a tribute to New York as the cultural center of America," said Mr. Epstein, "and Minnie is their patron saint."

The all-Beethoven program opened with a firmly knit reading of the "Prometheus" overture and ended with an "Eroica" that unfolded with the impact of high drama.

In between, Mr. Serkin discoursed the mellow beauty of Beethoven's Fifth Piano Concerto.

Lewisohn Stadium:

Nature Music

By MILES KASTENDIECK

DIMITRI MITROPOULOS tried to present the most challenging program of the week at Lewisohn Stadium last night, but a downpour curtailed his noble plan.

Before the orchestra could complete the second movement of Vaughan-Williams' Fourth Symphony, the concert was abruptly terminated as audience and musicians sought immediate shelter. The symphony will be played again tonight when Michael Rabin is scheduled to appear as soloist in the Brahms Violin Concerto.

Those present witnessed a display of rolling thunderheads and brilliant lightning that achieved remarkable atmospheric affinity with the first movement of the symphony.

Symphonic Duet

Then in the second movement when the kettle drums were silent, nature's battery of thunder entered surreptitiously to create a symphonic duet. The effect was unexpectedly dramatic, not quite what Vaughan-Williams had in mind but strangely in character.

The program opened with Weber's overture to "Der Freischutz" but could not close with the Shostakovich Tenth Symphony as originally designed. That outcome was a pity since both works stand as significant contributions to the contemporary musical scene.

Music: Series at Stadium Begins

Beethoven's Music and Serkin Are on Hand

By HOWARD TAUBMAN

ALL'S well that begins well, the Stadium Concerts people may feel this morning. The season's opening last night was one of the most cheerful in the thirty-eight-year history of outdoor music at Lewisohn Stadium.

There were 19,000 persons on hand, one of the largest opening-night gatherings in the history of the series. There was the Stadium Symphony Orchestra, which is substantially the New York Philharmonic under a summertime name. There was Dimitri Mitropoulos, the Philharmonic musical director, to conduct, and Rudolf Serkin, one of the great pianists of our day, to be the soloist.

Far from least, there was a program of Beethoven, represented by two of his mightiest works—the "Emperor" Concerto and the "Eroica" Symphony. After all, if you like music of this caliber, there is no use staying home with your television set; there is hardly any good music to speak of on it, and almost never a program of this kind.

The opening-night ceremonies were brief. Before the symphony began, Mrs. Charles S. Guggenheimer, chairman of Stadium Concerts since the beginning, in 1918, spoke. She thanked everybody who had come out and urged one and all to come often. She thanked all those in government and business who had helped the series. She added that the guarantee fund for this season was still $21,000 short of its quota, and asked for contributions.

Henry Epstein, Deputy Ma

Henry Epstein, Deputy Mayor, then came forward to speak for the absent Mayor Wagner. He hailed the concerts and paid a tribute to Mrs. Guggenheimer, which was greeted by applause. The chairman of the concerts kissed the Deputy Mayor, and they walked off arm in arm.

After the curtain-raiser, Beethoven's "Prometheus" Overture, Mr. Serkin and the orchestra joined in an affecting performance of the "Emperor" Concerto. The pianist did not seek to magnify the proportions of his interpretations to achieve an out-of-doors conception. He played with subtlety and nuance. The style was big when it needed to be, but it was also delicate and poetic. This was mature, artistic playing, with not a splashy touch. It was, in effect, a compliment to the taste of the large crowd.

Mr. Mitropoulos and the orchestra companioned Mr. Serkin in the same vein. Then they proceeded to a large-voiced performance of the "Eroica," which is surely as big as all out-of-doors, no matter what proportions are set for it.

Some improvements have been made in the accoustical set-up. The echo is hardly noticeable except in fortissimo passages. Whatever the engineers have done, they have sacrificed some resonance to cut down the echo, and on balance they are probably right.

There were fewer planes than usual. Only a handful flew so close as to be obnoxious, although there were rumors of others in the distance. The night was fair; the air was soft; the house was full. All the Stadium needs is six weeks of such weather and audiences; maybe this is the year of good things for music as well as peace.

Cloudburst Halts Concert At Stadium

A sudden downpour ended last night's Stadium concert midway in Vaughan Williams' Fourth Symphony and brought on a wild dash for cover among assembled Stadiumites. Many were drenched.

There still two movements to go of the Williams symphony, besides the whole of Shostakovich's Tenth Symphony. The latter was to have been a Stadium premiere. Weber's "Der Freischuetz" overture opened the program.

Stadium Concert:

Lyrical Start

(Photo in Picture Section)

By MILES KASTENDIECK

ONE OF THE LARGEST CROWDS in years to attend a Stadium Concert opening greeted Dimitri Mitropoulos and the Stadium Symphony Orchestra in Lewisohn Stadium on the campus of City College last night.

That the 19,000 people were lured by an all-Beethoven program is quite possible. Their intent listening was quite noticeable during the soft lyrical passages of the evening's music. They gave the impression that they knew and loved such sure-fire works as the "Emperor" concerto and the "Eroica" symphony, and took special pleasure in hearing them "come alive" again.

The first appearance in 15 years of Rudolf Serkin as the piano soloist undoubtedly attracted the crowd, too. Always a unique keyboard personality, Serkin played the "Emperor" characteristically. There was magic in his fingers last night as well as brilliance.

19,000 on Hand to Greet Opening of Stadium Season

By HENRY BECKETT

The 1955 Lewisohn Stadium season opened last night with a concert of heroic proportions as regards program, performance and audience. Beginning with Beethoven's "Prometheus" overture, named for the Titan who helped the gods and brought fire and arts to men, it included the spacious "Emperor" Piano Concerto and the "Eroica," reputedly the composer's own favorite among his symphonies.

Dimitri Mitropoulos, the illustrious Philharmonic musical director, had before him many of that orchestra's players in conducting the Stadium Symphony. And as soloist there was the profoundly gifted Rudolf Serkin.

They were applauded by an audience of 19,000, made up largely of persons who have been listening to good music for years and know what is first-rate when they hear it.

Stadium Jammed for Stirring All-Beethoven Program

By HARRY RAYMOND

The Lewisohn Stadium opened its 38th summer concert season Monday featuring a magnificent performance by Rudolf Serkin of Beethoven's Concerto for Piano and Orchestra in E-flat major, No. 5, which continues to bear the ironic title of "Emperor." Dimitri Mitropolos directing the Stadium Symphony Orchestra and Serkin at the piano keyboard gave more than 18,000 persons who filled the huge outdoor stadium an evening of music that will long be remembered.

SERKIN

Mitropolis conducted an all-Beethoven program, opening with the short Overture to "Prometheus." This was followed by the Concerto No. 5 and a thrilling playing of the Symphony in E-flat major, No. 3, "Eroica."

It has been a mystery to me why our concert programers continue to list Beethoven's Piano Concerto No. 5 as the "Emperor." Beethoven, who was artistically part of the tide of the Great French Revolution, never conceived of such a title. He was the musical castigator of emperors, kings and everything that went with the imperial court.

It is well known how he angrily tore up his dedication of his "Eroica" Symphony to Napoleon, denouncing him as the man who "will trample the rights of man underfoot" when Napoleon set himself as emperor and dictator. It is true that some musical royalist inscribed "Emperor" on the score after Beethoven gave it the simple title of "Grand Concerto for Piano and Orchestra." It is high time, I believe, that we discontinue to besmirch this grand work of music with a title inscribed on it by an ignoramus and reactionary.

In the long solo parts of the concerto Senkin displayed an artistry seldom displayed these days by a pianist. He played the difficult candenzas in a rousing rapsodic vein and gave to the second movement a remarkable hymn-like quality crying out for the brotherhood of man. All the vast triumph which Beethoven wrote into the final rondos was given power and authority by Serkin and the orchestra.

One thing that marred this fine concert was the constant buzzing overhead of transport planes. It turned out that everytime the orchestra reached a pianissimo section, huge planes with searchlights roared above the Stadium on their way to LaGuardia Field drowning out the music. This has long been a problem at the Stadium summer concerts. But I believe it is one that can be solved if the City Commissioner of Marine and Aviation really got on the job and negotiated to have the incoming and outgoing planes routed a reasonable distance to the north or south of the Stadium.

There are other interferences, too. The constant loud honking of auto horns on the streets outside the Stadium is extremely annoying to an audience listening to a fine symphony orchestra. I don't know what these car drivers are honking about anyhow unless they want to attract attention to the fact that they own a car.

This incessant auto horn tooting is nerve shattering anywhere in the city and it is unnecessary: It is a downright scandal for the city administration, which has declared its support of the Stadium concerts to permit loud auto horn tooting in the vicinity of the Stadium during the course of a concert. I'm for taking a tip from Paris which has outlawed the blare of a car horn altogether.

But in spite of this unnecessary interference, the Stadium concerts which will run through to July 30 this year, are the most important current cultural event in New York City.

Concert Sparkles At Stadium

By LOUIS BIANCOLLI.

The two stars of last night's Stadium concert were Michael Rabin, who made the violin talk, and Dimitri Mitropoulos, who made the orchestra talk.

Six thousand Stadiumites heard the maestro conduct one of the most stirring performances to date of Vaughan Williams' Fourth Symphony. And they heard the 19-year-old magician of the bow do as much for the Brahms Concerto.

Proudest listener of all last night was a beaming gentleman in the third stand of the first violin section. He was George Rabin, a Philharmonic veteran of 30 years, and father of Michael.

Father Takes Bow.

At the end of the Brahms Concerto, while young Rabin was being rousingly applauded by the crowd, Mr. Mitropoulos had the senior fiddler of the family rise and take a bow. Father and son were doing fine last night.

Mr. Rabin's reading of the Brahms classic was young with glow and warmth and joy and a good deal more than young in its mature sense of line and direction. There is a ripening intellect at work here.

This lad's growth has been sure and steady since his debut several years ago. He launched out early on a path of glory and has been heading that way ever since. Two Paganini caprices were added as encores last night.

Mr. Mitropoulos paid young Rabin the perfect compliment by conducting an accompaniment worthy of a high-grade spinner of the solo line. Violin and orchestra merged into a single unit of poetic power.

Shattering Impact.

The Williams symphony was shattering in its jagged impact. The music is some sort of black vision, of chaos to come or bitter rebellion against logic itself. Williams got something bad out of his system with this symphony.

Much easier on the nerves was Milhaud's arrangement of the Prelude and Allegro from Couperin's "La Sultane"—a bland summer breeze compared to Williams' savage symphonic twister.

Michael Rabin, nineteen-year-old violinist, was last night's soloist at the Lewisohn Stadium, where he played Brahms' Concerto in D major with the orchestra under Dimitri Mitropoulos' direction. The Philharmonic-Symphony conductor had originally planned to offer more Brahms, the Second Symphony, in the first half of the program after the opening Prelude and Allegro from Couperin's "La Sultane," as arranged by Darius Milhaud. But, since he had not got much beyond the first movement of Ralph Vaughan Williams' Fourth Symphony, in F minor, in Tuesday's rained-out program, he substituted that notable English work.

In a public career that has already spanned five years, Mr. Rabin is regarded as one of the most promising members of the rising generation of violinists. Yesterday's performance also spoke remarkably well for his present and his future. It revealed his now well known technical prowess, with a tone of consistently appealing quality not weighty nor yet tenuous capable of both substantiality and delicacy. His technical skill was objectively employed, with artistic seriousness and an auspicious degree or realization of the expressive resources of the music. While there was room for further expressive penetration, this was noteworthy for an artist of his age.

The orchestral part of the performance was sympathetic and well co-ordinated, but both in this and in the solo passages there seemed to be an occasional loss of momentum in some of the measures in which the pace lessened. Mr. Rabin played the Joachim cadenza in the concerto, and added two Paganini solo caprices as encores. At the end of the concerto Mr. Mitropoulos shook hands with the young soloist's father, George Rabin, who is one of the orchestra's violinists, and called him to the front to share the applause.

In the Vaughan Williams symphony Mr. Mitropoulos and the orchestra brought out the rather austere energy which marks much of the work; the contrast between this vein and the brooding, withdrawn meditation which is also apparent in the first movement was convincingly expressed. They also realized the symphony's remarkable structural craftsmanship, but at times, mainly in the andante and the finale, the expressive range of the interpretation seemed narrower than that provided by the score.

Redcoats' Trojan Horse Slips Jazz Into Stadium

By LOUIS BIANCOLLI.

Close to 11 last night Dimitri Mitropoulos sat alone on the stage of the Lewisohn Stadium, listening to a jazz band.

Down below a dozen youngsters were jitterbugging, and all over the stadium heads were swaying and feet tapping to the syncopated strains.

A Trojan Horse had slipped into the stadium.

It had all begun innocently enough. Mr. Mitropoulos, very much the dignified maestro, had run off beautiful renderings of a Kabalevsky overture and Schumann's 2nd Symphony.

18 in Red Jackets.

Intermission had come and gone. So had Morton Gould's "Show Piece for Orchestra."

Then the gates had opened to the intruders—18 men in red formal jackets, noiselessly filing on stage after the orchestra had seated itself.

These were the Sauter-Finnegan ensemble—the "Soloist" of Rolf Liebermann's "Concerto for Jazz Band and Orchestra."

They looked harmless enough, in their fancy dress and placid poker faces. For a while they even kept in the background with their trumpets and trombones and drums.

Trumpets Get Hot.

Gradually, they moved in. Their trumpets became hotter and hotter, the drums faster and bolder. Between them and the Maestro the orchestra remained an unruffled sea.

The Maestro seemed to have gone over to the enemy camp completely. His back, head, and arms quivered to the beat of drums and the blare of brasses.

A crowd that had drunk in the soft beauty of Schumann, broke into wild applause and cheering. Jazz had conquered.

Lewisohn Symphony:

Jive Wows 'Em At the Stadium

By MILES KASTENDIECK

BY WAY OF NOVELTY a jazz band made its debut at Lewisohn Stadium last night. The Sauter-Finegan Orchestra joined the Stadium Symphony Orchestra in Liebermann's Concerto for this rare combination. Then Sauter-Finegan took over, won the audience with their clever "Play Suite," and played on for about another half hour.

No one in the audience followed their performance more avidly than Dimitri Mitropoulos himself. He responds to jive as he does to the lilt of Kabalevsky and Schumann. Sitting on stage during the "jam session," he followed the alternating conducting of Sauter and Finegan with obvious enjoyment.

The give and take of brass and strings in the Liebermann came through best in the final "Mambo" that is an infectious piece. The other seven movements of the work verge on artificiality, especially when mixed up with twelve-tone stuff.

The concerto was coupled with Gould's "Show Piece for Orchestra" as it had been when first introduced with the Philharmonic-Symphony last season. Gould's music stood the test of repetition much better. It has not only more substance but more genuine flavor.

Mitropoulos made an astute choice in beginning the concert with Kabalevsky's overture to "Colas Breugnon." It set the rhythmic keynote for the evening. Schumann's second Symphony contributed its share of vitality, too, but the performance as a whole would have profited with a bit more joyousness. Some of its tempered sound suggests that adjustment of the amplification has softened the orchestral brilliance.

Jazz Band and Symphony Join for Stadium Premiere

By Francis D. Perkins

The red-coated members of the Sauter-Finegan Orchestra joined the white-coated Stadium Symphony musicians last night at the Lewisohn Stadium for the local outdoor premiere of Rolf Liebermann's Concerto for Jazz Band and Symphony Orchestra under Dimitri Mitropoulos' direction. The guest jazz ensemble then had the stage to itself for the "Play Suite" by its directors, Ed Sauter and Bill Finegan, who alternated as conductors, and a postlude of encores. Mr. Mitropoulos and the Stadium players prefaced these novelties with Kabalevsky's "Colas Breugnon" Overture, Schumann's Second Symphony and Morton Gould's "Show Piece for Orchestra."

Mr. Liebermann's concerto was introduced to New York by the same conductor and jazz ensemble, and nearly the same orchestra, in a Philharmonic concert last March. Its Swiss composer has described it as an attempt to bring the current dance forms into art music. The attempt did not seem particularly convincing. The alternation and, less often, the combination of the sonorities of the symphony and the jazz orchestras were interesting and quite often effective, but the musical ideas conveyed in these sonorities were usually not memorable. The most striking episode was the closing Mambo, which had an imposing, percussive and impelling rhythmic force.

Mr. Mitropoulos, who was fully at home in this music, became a listener for the "Play Suite," which, judging by its opening section, was persuasive and faithful to its title. Mr. Gould's work, new to these concerts, also fulfills the implication of its title; it is deftly wrought, if not musically very substantial.

The orchestra was in good form for the somewhat routined tunefulness of the Kabalevsky overture and for the Schumann Symphony. The audience kept its seats during the regular program, but a few of its younger members rose to dance during the Sauter-Finegan men's jazz postlude.

Sou'wester Douses Stadium With Rain, Forces Mitropoulos, Orchestra to Refrain

Last night's concert at Lewisohn Stadium offered a superb electrical display but somewhat unsatisfactory conditions for outdoor music listening.

The few hardy music lovers who ventured up to the Stadium last night saw lowering black clouds lit up by occasional lightning flashes, and a lurid band of light, low on the horizon, of the sort which generally precedes the advent of a sou'wester.

Dimitri Mitropoulos and the Stadium Symphony performed the "Freischuetz" Overture without mishap, and began Vaughan Williams' F minor Symphony. A note on one listener's program, next to the slow movement of the symphony, read: "Wind SW; rising; DM looking over his shoulder." As well Mr. Mitropoulos might; the lightning flashes by then were almost continuous.

Then the storm struck, a genuine sou'wester; first a quick patter of rain, then more, finally a sharp slashing downpour like the stream from a firehose. The genteel stadium audience, scrambling for the exits, took time to applaud. Mr. Mitropoulos acknowledged it with a wave of his baton and the concert was over.

Rain checks will be honored at tonight's concert, at which Michael Rabin will be violin soloist. Tentative plans late last night called for repeating the Vaughan Williams symphony at tonight's concert. J. B.

Music: Jazz Concerto

First Performance of Liebermann Work at Stadium Led by Mitropoulos

THE principal feature of last night's concert by Dimitri Mitropoulos and the Stadium Symphony Orchestra at Lewisohn Stadium was the first performance there of Rolf Liebermann's "Concerto for Jazz Band and Symphony Orchestra."

The Liebermann work, performed by the Philharmonic-Symphony during its regular winter season, is an odd mixture of incongruous elements. It utilizes the full symphony orchestra, a small contrasting jazz ensemble like the "Concertino" of the Handelian concerto grosso, and jazz idioms manipulated according to the severe technique of the twelve-tone system.

It is hardly necessary to add that weird and wonderful sounds occasionally result. On the whole, the concerto is a brash, energetic, good-natured piece that appeared to delight the Stadium audience.

Earlier, Mr. Mitropoulos led the Stadium Symphony in a performance of the Schumann Symphony in C Major, which, in one listener's opinion, did not do full justice to the hauntingly beautiful slow movement. Elsewhere, though, it was music-making on a high level of competence.

The program also offered Kabalevsky's "Colas Breugnon" Overture and Morton Gould's "Showpiece for Orchestra." Last of all, the Sauter-Finegan Band made a solo appearance in "Play Suite," the joint work of Messrs. Sauter and Finegan. J. B.

NEW YORK PHILHARMONIC-SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA

Opening Concert

BY OUR MUSIC CRITIC

The New York Philharmonic-Symphony Orchestra has been here before and so its letter of introduction. "Show Piece," by Morton Gould, was unnecessary. The work's title was an apt enough description of the music, whose ostensible object was to "show off the full range of orchestral timbres and sonorities" for record reproduction purposes—a publicity stunt, in fact. Mr Gould's variations made all the usual noises and a lot more besides, with everything that opens and shuts, and scratches and snorts, having a go, but, considering how hard all the band was working, the net result was energetic but surprisingly dreary, except for the passages in imitation, or parody, of Britten and of Prokofiev. It seemed an awful waste of this splendid orchestra's time to bother with an exercise in sound owning so little musical content.

How placid, and how infinitely satisfying by comparison, was Beethoven's Third Piano Concerto that came next—a very able performance that gained a warmly lyrical lustre from the beautiful playing of Dame Myra Hess.

But when the New York orchestra had something formidable to get its teeth into, like Vaughan Williams's Fourth Symphony that concluded last night's Usher Hall concert, then one saw its true metal—or heard its true brass. This had a terrific performance, with that kind of disciplined ferocity that it is only possible to whip up with a really big and well-mannered orchestra. Casting back in my mind to a comparable one, I traced it to August 27, 1951, when Mitropoulos conducted this symphony on the occasion of the orchestra's opening concert at that year's Festival.

Apart from the conductor's own intensely felt response to the monolithic forcefulness of the music, the secret of yesterday's experience—and it was an experience—lay in the contribution of the strings, all 64 of them with an unusually strong proportion of violas and 'cellos. With that magnificent stream of bowed sound at his command, Mitropoulos could expand the symphony's oases of lesser tension, could maintain a balance of forces and achieve a remarkable clarity of texture. Despite the rough-hewn nature of much of the scoring, one heard yesterday far more of the inner workings than is normally possible, even at the climaxes.

Last Monday, we had Walton's "Belshazzar's Feast." Yesterday, we had Vaughan Williams's 4th Symphony. Perhaps it is just as well the Festival is on its last lap. A third such "causerie du Lundi" would imperil the foundations of the Usher Hall.

A night of brilliance from 102 men

By CECIL SMITH

A WISP of a man sent a charge of electricity through an orchestra of 101 men in the Usher Hall last night, and the Edinburgh Festival had its most festive evening so far.

The wiry, eagle-bald conductor was Dimitri Metropoulos. The orchestra was the Philharmonic-Symphony of New York, returning to Edinburgh after a lapse of four years.

When the capacity audience gave an ovation to the Greek-American conductor and his players at the end of the concert, Anglo-American relations had one of their happiest moments.

Raised roof

Mr. Metropoulos had planned the programme as a hands-across-the-sea gesture It presented English and American music on an equal and companionable footing.

After the patriotic preliminaries of "God Save the Queen" and "The Star-Spangled Banner," an American work—Morton Gould's "Showpiece for Orchestra"—led off. Then Dame Myra Hess, a frequent guest in the orchestra's New York concerts in Carnegie Hall, played Beethoven's Third Concerto.

Finally, conductor and orchestra raised the roof in a staggering performance of Vaughn's Williams' Fourth Symphony.

From start to finish of the evening, the New York Philharmonic was a dazzling ensemble. Its dash and brilliance and accuracy and sumptuous beauty of tone practically wiped away all memory of the earnest, but imperfect orchestras that have preceded it in the past fortnight.

All in tune

Unlike the other orchestras, it can really play pianissimo, with a tone that loses none of its glowing life when it becomes soft. Played loud or soft, every part is transparently clear and wonderfully in tune. You can still hear the contributions of all the strings and woodwinds when the brass rises to a mighty climax of sonority.

Gould's "Showpiece" was written for recording—to show how effectively high fidelity engineerng can put on wax the entire range of orchestral sound and colour, from the lowest notest to the highest overtones. It is a fabulously clever piece to trick scoring, demonstrating just about everything an orchestra can do, and making particularly jolly effects in the brass and percussion departments.

The orchestra turned it into a display of fireworks. The final section, in particular, set the nerve-ends tingling with intricate, jazzy cross rhythms scattered through the whole orchestra.

Having shown the tinsel among its wares, the orchestra next offered pure gold. The accompaniment of the concerto was caressingly adjjusted to the unspectacular style of Dame Myra.

A masterpiece

But it was the Vaughn Williams symphony that swept the audience away in a whirlwind of enthusiasm. In this case the composer deliberately wrote music that is harsh, raw, and almost angry.

Mr. Metropoulos did not spare the audience, and gave the music a brutal power and driving impulse that were irresistible. He made us understand why this particular symphony is the one of Vaughn Williams six that has been internationally acclaimed as a masterpiece.

If Mr. Metropoulos's fellow conductors, Guido Cantelli and George Szell, sustain the excitement with which the New York Philharmonic's visit began, we are embarking upon a memorable week of concerts.

MITROPOULOS THUNDERS TO A GREAT CLIMAX

By PERCY CATER

A STORM of "Bravos" greeted the New York Philharmonic-Symphony Orchestra in Edinburgh's Usher Hall last night, after the final brass-bound discords of Vaughan Williams's Fourth Symphony.

The New York men had shown the top of their form in this work, a magnificent challenge to the display of their powers.

No more exciting concert-end can be imagined than the shattering climax to which Mitropoulos drove the sound mass under his command. The symphony, packed and possessed with devilish force, had been presented with a harsh vividness that kept the audience taut.

New sounds

Mitropoulous, who complimented us gracefully by choosing as his concert's peak a symphony of our greatest composer, had made an admirable selection all round for the first of the orchestra's six Festival programmes.

Our honoured pianist Dame Myra Hess played the Beethoven No. 3 after the New York artists had offered, as a hors d'œuvre, something typically American. This was the "Show Piece for Orchestra," by Morton Gould.

Mitropoulos

This composer knows exactly where the sounds come from in an orchestra.

In fact, in this piece, which is as slick as paint, he has contributed a lot of new ones to the vocabulary.

Only brass-players acutely aware of the jazz tradition could muster the feverish syncopation he demands. He produces moments where you just sit back and hold your breath. While you hold it everybody in the orchestra is sawing at, blowing at or hitting something. Cheers, Gould!

Mitropoulos is as full of go as ever. In the Gould he would have had his men go faster had this been within human capacity. He had a baton last night, a tiny stick. Usually his hands are enough, but this was a special event.

In the Vaughan Williams symphony he quivered, he demanded, he seemed to beseech. One arm flailed, the left hand made the darts and snatchings that mean that he wants an effect in a hurry.

All its art

The orchestra certainly trooped forth all its art for the Vaughan Williams: The Witches' Sabbath atmosphere of the Scherzo had a frightful intensity. But the whole thing was portrayed with immense skill and judgment in its full majesty of hate and fury.

The Beethoven Concerto was a nice interlude between modern smartness and dire philosophy. Dame Myra Hess played it felicitously. She chose a small dynamic range, in which the runs rippled and the arpeggios shaped themselves charmingly. The slow movement was given a remarkable spaciousness.

But Mitropoulos tactfully stimulated the concerto's accompaniment as occasion served and all went happily.

The Body-Line Conductor

ONE of the last of the big orchestras to come before us at this Festival the Philharmonic-Symphony Orchestra of New York—made its bow in the Usher Hall last night under Dimitri Mitropoulos, with "Show Piece," a work written by the American composer Morton Gould to the commission of the Columbia Record Company.

It was originally designed to exploit all the frequencies of "Hi-Fi." This it no doubt does very successfully. It also reminded us with, so to speak, a bang of this orchestra's virtuosic capacities.

Tour de Force

Myra Hess was the soloist in Beethoven's Third Piano Concerto. Her sensitive performance — admirably accompanied by Mr Mitropoulos—won her a tremendous ovation.

The tour de force of the programme was, however, the Fourth Symphony of Vaughan Williams.

This personification of stress and violence lies very much up Mr Mitropoulos's musical street. Scoreless, he conducted it literally with his whole body: even knees, spine, and shoulder.

He is an exciting conductor to watch, at any rate from the audience side. He is also a highly effective one, as this quite startling brilliant performance showed.

Evening News Edinburgh 9-6 THE

A Thunderous Start By The New York 'Phil'

Edinburgh Evening News

Stupendous, colossal, gigantic, terrific—a thrilled capacity audience in the Usher Hall, Edinburgh, last night, almost ran out of superlatives in the pleasure of welcoming back to the Edinburgh Festival scene that great symphonic Goliath, the New York Philharmonic Orchestra.

The American orchestra, which made a memorable Edinburgh debut at the 1951 Festival, has included this year's Edinburgh Festival in an extensive, but concentrated five weeks' tour of Europe during which they are to give 26 concerts in 14 cities.

The 1951 engagement cost the Edinburgh Festival Society something in the region of £50,000. For this year's Festival, however, Edinburgh is having the financial advantages of a tourist class booking. In the interests of cultural exchange with Europe, a sum of 50,000 dollars is being contributed by the United States Gove ment towards the entire cost of the tour.

There are to be three conductors for the six concerts the orchestra are giving this week to complete the 1955 Festival series.

The orchestra's permanent conductor, Dimitri Mitropoulos, started off the series with an exhilarating display of musical slapstick — a show piece for orchestra by Morton Gould, which had its first performance in May last year. That was followed by the haunting beauties of Beethoven's Third Piano Concerto, with the inco...parable Dame Myra Hess as soloist, and then the strident ferocities of Vaughan Williams' Fourth Symphony.

DRAMATIC POWER

The magnificent proportions of the New York Philharmonic Orchestra have possibly no equal, but there are times when they suggest the dynamic power and momentum of some musical automaton.

Some such impression was created by the tremendous forces unleashed in the Vaughan Williams symphony.

Mitripoulos has acquired a miniature baton since he was last in Edinburgh, but he still dispenses with score and depends to what seems a dangerous degree on the thoroughness of his orchestra's training.

At times there is no perceptible beat, but from the merest flick of a finger every member of the orchestra seems to know precisely what is expected of him.

The dramatic climaxes in the Vaughan Williams symphony were achieved with an electrifying blaze of dissonant brass, with the strings screaming their fury. It was playing of tremendous dramatic intensity—playing of a standard such as could only be attained by a force of such virtuosity as the New York orchestra.

A GLORIOUS JUMBLE

Morton Gould's "Show Piece," which opened the programme, was commissioned by a gramophone company to show what degree of near-perfection has been attained in the reproduction of orchestral sounds. It made a fascinating introduction to the individual components of an orchestra which claims to have equipment second to none. Castanets, tambourine, gourd, stopped horns, muted brass — everything was thrown into this glorious jumble.

With the percussion sections in full blast, there was a close resemblance to what one would expect to hear in a busy shipbuilding yard. Mitroupolos worked it all up to an explosive climax.

Dame Myra Hess may not have the dynamic range which makes for the most majestic of Beethoven interpretation, but for sheer loveliness of tone she is in a class by herself. Her playing in the Third Concerto was music right from the heart. The largo had a gossamer delicacy and beauty.

Mitroupolos had no difficulty in accommodating his feeling for the music to suit the soloist, and at the conclusion of an exquisitely shaped performance showed his own admiration by bestowing kisses on the soloist's hands. The audience thundered their approval and delight.

Dundee 9-6-55 EVENING DISPATCH,

A strident New York Phil. makes its bow

Stridently, with complete assurance, the Philharmonic-Symphony Orchestra of New York made its bow to the Festival at the Usher Hall last night It played three works—the first a post-war display of technicalities, the third a brilliant pre-war fit of the blues, the middle one a throw-back to decency and order in musical form.

It was a concert definitely to be seen as well as heard. The first offering was Showpiece for Orchestra, by Morton Gould—and thank heaven for the programme note! Without it we would have been lost, bewildered, if not driven to the verge of insanity. With the programme all was well. We sat back amused, for it was all a question of frequencies. Columbia commissioned the piece to show the quality of its "hi-fi" reproduction of the full range of orchestral timbres. Gould sprang to his task with gusto and the result is a work which displayed the astonishing virtuosity of the New York orchestra.

The orchestra's permanent director, Dimitri Mitropoulos, conducted, and an extraordinary affinity with his players was soon apparent. He does not flog. Sparing of gesture, he will abandon a phrase that has started well to prepare for the next. His attitude seems to be in effect: "Come, gentlemen, you know this piece as well as I do. Let us work together and achieve perfection."

He accompanied, sympathetically and with understanding, the middle work—Beethoven's Third Piano Concerto, with Myra Hess as soloist. The orchestra was never overpowering and the slow movement was a joy to absorb again.

Vaughan Williams's Fourth Symphony is not everybody's cup of tea. It is harsh; dissonance abounds. It seems to reflect a soul in torture. Violence is triumphant, says Mr Salter's programme note—but is it? Sufficient to say that the work evoked no answering response in this writer's heart—but music is essentially personal. There was, however, intense admiration for the superlative skill of a brilliant orchestra. Beg, buy or you can or steal a ticket to hear it this week.—B.

THE GLASGOW HERALD, SEPTEMBER 6,

New York Players' Brilliant Opening

FROM OUR MUSIC CRITIC

The American composer Morton Gould's show piece for orchestra reintroduced the Philharmonic Symphony Orchestra of New York to the Usher Hall and the Edinburgh Festival last night. That was perhaps its only claim to fame. Written for a "hi-fi" demonstration record designed to show off "the full range of orchestral timbres and sonorities," it was perhaps a résumé of the composer's "creative" career, no doubt all very clever but doubtfully worthy the time and trouble of rehearsal.

The New Yorkers comprise outstanding instrumentalists, whose individual brilliance is absorbed and fused into a corporate brilliance that — on last night's showing — makes them the orchestral personality of this year's Festival. With the minimum of effort — a few almost hypnosis-inducing passes — their conductor, Dimitri Mitropoulos, secured from them an accompaniment to Beethoven's Third Piano Concerto of a perfection that was marred only momentarily by out-of-step violins.

The soloist was Myra Hess. Hers was a lovely performance, of exquisitely dreamlike quality in the slow movement, of virility mellowed by mature artistic experience elsewhere.

Vaughan Williams's Symphony No. 4 in F minor, completing the programme, demanded, and got, more dynamic conducting. The troubled meanderings of the andante moderato had perhaps too much substance, too firmly drawn lines, but how the brass—trombones just a little bit sluggish at times—revelled in the brutal stridencies of Vaughan Williams's thrilling score; and what qualities of colour contrast, with perfection of ensemble, strings, and woodwind added to this overwhelmingly powerful performance.

NEW YORK ORCHESTRA'S FESTIVAL CONCERT

ARTISTRY AND TECHNICAL PROWESS

FROM OUR SPECIAL CORRESPONDENT

EDINBURGH, SEPT. 6

The last orchestra to appear at Edinburgh this year took the platform at the Usher Hall last night; the New York Philharmonic-Symphony Orchestra was playing for Mr. Dimitri Mitropoulos, who will share the last six concerts with Mr. Cantelli and Mr. Szell.

The orchestra has been heard before at the Edinburgh Festival; it played here in 1951, when it established itself as a virtuoso body with an adaptable but not supremely sympathetic style, and most memorably gave a whirlwind reading of Vaughan Williams's F minor symphony under Mr. Mitropoulos. The same symphony was included in the programme last night when it was balanced by a recent American work, the two modern works being separated by a classical concerto.

In one sense the programme was cleverly designed, for each item displayed the orchestra in a fresh light. The American work was Morton Gould's "Showpiece for Orchestra," which was composed to demonstrate and test high fidelity orchestral recording. The piece would be negligible if it were not so rowdy as to be inescapable: it consists of a theme and variations, whose singular lack of musical invention the composer attempts to disguise in a shower of orchestral fireworks—some of them are colourful, as fireworks are, and several of them tumultuously brash, clusters of squibs and jumping crackers; there are some piquant tone-clusters, but the total impression is one of animation without impulse, as in those embarrassing scenes at the cinema when members of the cast grin, posture, and exclaim at one another in the hope of communicating irrepressible enthusiasm for some project which they and we know to be entirely tedious.

TREMENDOUS VOLUME

This was, however, a Showpiece inasmuch as it revealed the orchestra's capacity for producing bright, open sound at a tremendous volume, its precision in rhythmically or metrically intricate music, and its steely surface polish. The strings produce a spacious but impersonal sound, the brass can whoop to riotously vulgar effect; the woodwind does not excel by the highest international standards, partly because its timbre as a choir offers no really distinctive characteristic.

So far, then, the impression was a shade disappointing. Enthusiasm remained obstinately dormant through Beethoven's C minor piano concerto. Dame Myra Hess, the soloist, takes a dignified, well-tempered view of the work, and her reading is as beloved as it is familiar. This time it seemed less than satisfying: there is much that is rugged, even uncouth, in the work, and its stretches of nobility and lyricism, in the Adagio or at the beginning of the first development, for example, are less impressive when that element of earthy humanity, not to say bad manners, is missing by contrast—it is as though one were to play Leporello as a cultured gentleman. What emphasized this shortcoming in Dame Myra's often endearing performance was the restraint emanating from the orchestra as it kept faith and friendship with its respected soloist: there was a lack of emotional rapport, and a spasmodic rash of inaccuracy and imprecision.

AN EXPERIENCE REPEATED

And so we waited for the symphony. Had memory gilded the impress of that performance four years ago? Expectation was keen, but it was not disappointed. Mr. Mitropoulos shot his long arms into the air, and seemed to have untied Aeolus's sack; gusts of fierce sound swirled round the hall, keen, brilliant, frightening sound, superbly drilled and opulent for all its power.

Here for the first time in the evening we had the artistry as well as the technical prowess of the orchestra. Open tone, such as it favours, seems to suit this symphony, for the distant quietness at the beginning of the Andante and the generous second subject of the finale sounded no less apt or effective than the savage and menacing textures which dominate the work. Mr. Mitropoulos understands the tenderness and joy as well as the clangour of this symphony; he presented it as a grand and challenging entity, not only because he conducted the movements without intervening pauses but because he forced his audience to grasp the remorseless logic with which the musical thought unfolds. The F minor symphony of Vaughan Williams is not a mere jeremiad, the performance maintained; pessimism is a negative state of mind, but this interpretation was positive beyond all doubt.

TRIUMPH ABROAD FOR MITROPOULOS

Conductor and Philharmonic Call Forth High Praise at Festival in Edinburgh

By STEPHEN WILLIAMS

Special to The New York Times.

EDINBURGH, Scotland, Sept. 5—The New York Philharmonic-Symphony Orchestra blazed into the Edinburgh Festival in a triumphal entry tonight with its first concert at the Usher Hall. It was a great night.

Dimitri Mitropoulos is one of those conductors who might have gathered great names for themselves in international melodrama. He acts all the time most vividly; he acts the scenes suggested by the music. Now he cowers as before the blow in front of an oncoming crescendo; now he seems to shrivel in despair; then he gathers himself for a retaliatory attack. Shall this composer defeat him? Never! And he hurls himself at the orchestra, unchaining "Jove's dread rattling thunder" and glowing with a fierce aspect of victory.

This style of writing is not, of course, music criticism as it is accepted nowadays; but I have not the slightest shame in spilling it out, since it is the kind of reaction that Dimitri Mitropoulos' fine dramatic frenzy inescapably compels.

However, in Beethoven's Concerto No. 3 in C minor, with Dame Myra Hess as soloist, Mr. Mitropoulos became a different being altogether. His force was disciplined, his gestures were softened and subdued and he adopted an air of submissive gallantry.

The concerto was a kind of merciful breathing space between two strenuous conflicts. It gave us pause to let the tumult and the shouting die and to nerve ourselves for the savage home truths of the Vaughan Williams symphony.

Artistic Cooperation

It was a most beautiful, tranquil and gracious performance: chivalrous, friendly and full of that artistic cooperation that, however often one fancies it, always brings the thrill of tears to the eyes.

This symphony No. 4 of Vaughan Williams is a startling work: an explosion, so one feels, of blasting scorn against an age drifting to inanity and insanity that the composer could not reconcile with the bravery of the spacious and dignified times in which he had grown to manhood.

All this was pitched and hammered at us in this stupendous performance tonight.

The concert began with a "Showpiece for Orchestra" by Morton Gould. This is a showpiece, and the composer is honest in so naming it. It is a theme with variations and it does its business in "playing the orchestra in."

EDINBURGH, Scotland, Sept.

Critics here have decided that Dimitri Mitropoulos and Guido Cantelli are among the most demonstrative and spectacular conductors who ever have shocked and shaken the traditional Scottish reserve. And Messrs. Mitropoulos and Cantelli have won all hearts, for the traditional Scottish reserve loves to be shocked and shaken—especially at festival times.

Sharp Distinction

The critics, of course, have drawn a sharp distinction between them. As an Edinburgh musician said tonight, "Mitropoulos is like a brilliant actor, Cantelli like a brilliant dancer." It is a judicious distinction.

For example, anyone who heard and saw the wonderfully eloquent performance of the "Daphnis and Chloe" second suite tonight need never watch the ballet again. The ballet was there: it was danced for us with persuasive, undulating, cajoling movements by Mr. Cantelli himself.

Philharmonic Flies Today For Europe Concert Tour

The New York Philharmonic-Symphony Orchestra is leaving for Europe this afternoon for its first Continental tour in twenty-five years. Under the sponsorship of the State Department and the American National Theater and Academy, the orchestra will present twenty-six concerts in fifteen European cities.

Dimitri Mitropoulos, musical director and permanent conductor, will accompany the orchestra in its departure from Idlewild Airport today. During the tour he will take the Philharmonic, America's oldest orchestra and the third oldest in the world, to his native Athens. It will be the conductor's first visit to his homeland in more than seventeen years.

The orchestra performed at the Edinburgh Festival during the summer of 1951 and will return this month for a series of six concerts. Eighteen other performances are scheduled in Holland, Belgium, Germany, France, Switzerland, Italy and Greece, with two final concerts at London. Six European cities will be hearing the orchestra for the first time.

Two planes carrying the 120 musicians and accompanying personnel will leave Idlewild at 7 p. m. A third plane will bring their 18,000 pounds of baggage. Included in the eighty-five cases of instruments and equipment will be everything from harps to the tam-tam, a percussion device.

Accompanying the flight will be Floyd G. Blair and his son, David. Mr. Blair, in addition to being president of the Philharmonic-Symphony Society, is vice-president of the First National City Bank of New York. Other members of the board of directors are already in Europe and will be on hand to hear the orchestra's concerts in several cities.

Several members of the orchestra who preferred to travel by ship have left for Europe and will join the tour there. George Szell, who will conduct two concerts in Edinburgh, and Guido Cantelli, who will also conduct in Edinburgh and will share the podium duties with Mr. Mitropoulos throughout the remainder of the trip, will join the ensemble in Europe.

The Philharmonic is due for a colorful send-off today. A Scottish bagpipe band from the Band of Thistle Gildry Piping School will serenade the departing musicians at the stage entrance to Carnegie Hall at 4 p. m. and again at Idlewild Airport.

Porträt eines Dirigenten

Dimitri Mitropoulos, der heute die New-Yorker Philharmoniker in Wien dirigiert

BILD TELEGRAF 6.9.55

Statt Mönchskutte wählte er Frack

Dimitri Mitropoulos dirigiert auch im Kino — aber nur in New York

Am 12. und 13. September wird Dimitri Mitropoulos mit seinem Orchester zum erstenmal nach Wien kommen. Das Wiener Publikum wird in ihm einen bedeutenden, faszinierenden Dirigenten kennenlernen. Einen Dirigenten, der für den modernen Musikertyp der „Neuen Welt" ebenso typisch ist wie für das Virtuosentum der Romantik, dessen modernisierte Ausgabe er zu sein scheint.

Eigentlich hätte er Mönch werden sollen. Schon sein Großvater war Priester der griechisch-orthodoxen Kirche gewesen, und sein Großonkel gar Erzbischof. Aber da das griechische Kirchenritual die Verwendung von Musikinstrumenten verbietet, erwies sich die Leidenschaft für die Musik doch als stärker, und der 1896 in Athen geborene Dimitri Mitropoulos wurde Dirigent.

Sieben Jahre war er alt, als er zum erstenmal die weißen und schwarzen Tasten eines Klaviers berührte, fünf Jahre später trat er ins Konservatorium von Athen ein, weitere zwei Jahre später begann er zu komponieren. Saint-Saens ermunterte ihn, sich zu vervollkommnen, als er im Alter von 23 Jahren eine Oper geschrieben hatte. Doch Mitropoulos drängte es zur praktischen Ausübung seines Berufes. Über Brüssel kam er nach Berlin zu Busoni, dann, 1921, als Korrepetitor an die Berliner Staatsoper, deren zweiter Dirigent er bald darauf wurde. Drei Jahre später kehrte er heim — als Chef des Athener Symphonieorchesters.

Damals war Mitropoulos ein guter Dirigent, dem man eine Weltkarriere prophezeite. Die Propheten behielten recht. 1938 bis 1949 blieb er in Minneapolis, nicht ohne in ganz Amerika Gastspiele zu absolvieren. Seit 1940 wurde er immer wieder von den New-Yorker Philharmonikern verpflichtet. 1950 gelang dann der letzte Schritt nach „oben": er wurde Assistent von Stokowsky und schon ein Jahr später Chef der New-Yorker Philharmoniker. Damit war der Gipfelpunkt einer großen Karriere erreicht.

Mitropoulos hat seither in der halben Welt dirigiert. Sämtliche Festspiele Europas überbieten sich in Anträgen, wenn es gilt, ihn als Gast zu gewinnen. Er gilt als Prototyp des modernen Dirigentenvirtuosen, der neben der klassischen Literatur vor allem die Moderne pflegt. Berühmt wurde seine New-Yorker „Wozzeck"-Aufführung und die „Salome", die er an der „Met" einstudierte. Sein größtes Experiment: Zwei Wochen hindurch brachte ein Broadway-Kino statt Filmen viermal täglich (!) ein Konzert der New-Yorker Philharmoniker. Erfolg: etwa tausend neue Abonnenten für die Carnegie Hall. Für Mitropoulos ein Beweis seiner Theorie: „Es ist die Musik, die zählt; Zeit und Ort spielen keine Rolle!"

Eine Apotheose der Perfektion: Mitropoulos und seine New-Yorker

Mit Spannung sah man hier in Wien dem Gastspiel der New-Yorker Philharmoniker entgegen. Eine Reihe berühmtester Dirigenten, die von Gustav Mahler bis zu Toscanini reicht, hat mit diesem ältesten und führenden Orchester Amerikas gearbeitet und es zu einem der besten der Welt gemacht. Und es hat für die Wiener immer einen prickelnden Reiz, an so einem vielgerühmten Klangkörper die Qualität des heimatlichen, des „Hausorchesters" zu messen, um sich dann schließlich beruhigt sagen zu können, daß an anderen Orten wohl anders, aber nicht besser Musik gemacht wird als in Wien.

Seit fünf Jahren ist der aus Griechenland gebürtige Dimitri Mitropoulos der ständige Leiter der New-Yorker Philharmoniker, und es ist geradezu frappierend, in welchem Maße Dirigent und Orchester zu einer Einheit geworden sind. Alle Eigenheiten dieses Musikbesessenen (und es sind deren nicht wenige), seine Übersensibilität, die sich in fortwährender agogischer und dynamischer Spannung kundgibt, sein ekstatischer Hang zum Espressivo, der selbst die kleinsten Phrasen zu explosiven Höhenpunkten führt, werden von den Musikern mit überwältigender Perfektion klanglich realisiert. Im Musizieren Mitropoulos' sind die verschiedenen Lautstärken nur als Funktionen spürbar: kaum einmal ist ein Piano etwas in sich Ruhendes, es ist fast immer nur die Vorbereitung zur nächsten Stufe, die wieder zur folgenden führt, und so fort bis zum rauschendsten Fortissimo, das wiederum — mit Ausnahme der Schlüsse — nicht als Ziel, sondern als rückwärtsweisender Höhepunkt wirkt.

Diese eruptive, spannungsgeladene Art des Musizierens setzte mit der einleitend gespielten Ouverture zu Verdis Oper „Die Macht des Schicksals" die überzeugendste Leistung an den Beginn des Konzertes. Auch die Eigenart der Zweiten Symphonie von Robert Schumann, ihre romantische Zerrissenheit, ihr Auf und Ab der Stimmungen fand in Mitropoulos einen glänzenden Anwalt: hier schienen sich zwei verwandte Geister zu grüßen. Befremdlicher mutete naturgemäß die Interpretation der Zweiten Symphonie von Johannes Brahms an: durch die agogischen und dynamischen Freiheiten, die das Musizieren des Dirigenten auszeichnen, bekamen auch die lyrischesten, versponnensten Partien dieses Werkes etwas fiebrig Vibrierendes, und die Poesie zog sich in unhörbare Tiefen zurück.

Nichtsdestoweniger und zu Recht zeigte sich das Publikum vom Können und von der Klangpracht des Orchesters und von der faszinierenden Persönlichkeit des Dirigenten begeistert.

VIENNA IS VISITED BY PHILHARMONIC

New York Orchestra Plays to Large Audience, Which Gives It 6 Curtain Calls

By JOHN MacCORMAC
Special to The New York Times.

VIENNA, Sept. 12—The New York Philharmonic-Symphony Orchestra, which last appeared in Vienna twenty-five years ago under Arturo Toscanini, was conducted in the first of two concerts here tonight by Dimitri Mitropoulos. Although prices of seats were about three times as high as the Vienna State Opera charges, the large hall of the Vienna Konzerthaus was packed by an audience that included President Theodore Koerner of Austria. The orchestra and its conductor received six curtain calls.

The interest of tonight's audience seemed to be divided almost equally between the performance of the orchestra and that of its conductor. Vienna is used to mannerisms of orchestra leaders, but those of its citizens who were here tonight seemed to be fascinated by the techniques Mr. Mitropoulos used to convey his will to his players. One member of the audience commented he was like "Fuertwaengler with St. Vitus' Dance."

The performance opened with an intensely dramatic rendition of the overture to Verdi's "La Forza del Destino." This was followed by Robert Schumann's Symphony No. 2 in C major and by a bravura rendering of Brahms' popular Symphony No. 2 in D major, which brought the curtain calls and an encore.

After that the orchestra was transported to Grinzing, where the members drank the new wine as many musicians had done before them as guests of their colleagues, the Vienna Philharmonians.

Die New-Yorker Philharmoniker

Kleine Kulturgeschichte eines großen Orchesters

Zu den Wiener Konzerten des Orchesters am 12. und 13. September im Wiener Konzerthaus.

Es war der 2. April 1842, als die New-Yorker Philharmoniker gegründet wurden. Amerika hatte gerade die Tage der Pioniere hinter sich und der Krieg mit Mexiko, bei dem es um Texas ging, war noch nicht geführt. New York zählte damals kaum 400.000 Einwohner und hatte 15 Theater; die Amerikaner lasen Cooper und Poe, und Washington Irving befand sich als amerikanischer Gesandter auf dem Wege nach Spanien.

In diesem Jahr 1842 war Mozart schon ein halbes Jahrhundert tot, Beethoven war vor 15 und Schubert vor 14 Jahren gestorben. Tschaikowskij war erst zwei, Brahms neun Jahre alt. Wagner sah der Aufführung seiner Oper „Der fliegende Holländer" entgegen und in Rom hatte der 29jährige Giuseppe Verdi seinen ersten Erfolg mit der Oper „Nabucco" gefeiert. Schumann beendete eben seine erste Symphonie und Chopin bereitete sich auf einen Sommer mit George Sand vor.

Als an diesem 2. April 1842 eine Gruppe von Musikern am Unteren Broadway zusammentraf, war die Zeit reif, daß auch Amerika sein erstes Symphonieorchester bekommen sollte. Sie kamen zusammen, um „über die Durchführbarkeit der Gründung einer Gesellschaft von Berufsmusikern" zu beraten, „die ihren Sitz in der Stadt haben und deren Aufgabe die Pflege von Instrumentalmusik sein sollte sowie die Aufführung einer bestimmten Anzahl von Konzerten jährlich von wesentlich höherem Niveau als sie je in der Stadt zu hören gewesen waren".

Das waren die Anfänge der New-Yorker Philharmonischen Gesellschaft, die ohne Unterbrechung bis zum heutigen Tage besteht. Ihr Gründer, erster Präsident und erster Dirigent war Ureli Corelli Hill, und ihr erstes Konzert fand im folgenden Winter, am 7. Dezember 1842, nur wenige Monate nach dem Debüt der Wiener Philharmoniker, statt. Seither haben die New-Yorker Philharmoniker wirtschaftliche Notzeiten, Finanzkrisen und sechs Kriege überdauert, aber nur einmal — anläßlich der Ermordung Präsident Lincolns — wurde ein Konzert verschoben und einmal eines infolge des Todes Präsident Franklin D. Roosevelts abgesagt. Während der 113 Jahre ihres Bestehens hielten sie in zehn verschiedenen Konzertsälen ihre regelmäßigen Konzerte ab. 1891 wurde dann die Carnegie Hall eröffnet und im folgenden Jahr zogen die Philharmoniker in das Haus ein, das seither ihr künstlerisches Heim gewesen ist.

Sie gelten heute als das beste Orchester Amerikas. Diese Weltgeltung haben sie durch Generationen von großen Dirigenten und Komponisten erhalten. Richard Strauß, Felix Weingartner, Gustav Mahler, Igor Strawinski und Ottorino Respighi führten mit ihnen eigene Werke auf und später Darius Milhaud, Virgil Thomson, Heitor Villa-Lobos und andere Vertreter der modernen Musik. Stokowski, Furtwängler, Toscanini und Bruno Walter waren die großen Erzieher der New-Yorker Philharmoniker; Clemens Krauß, Otto Klemperer, Artur Rodzinski, John Barbirolli, Charles Munch, Eugene Ormandy und viele andere standen wiederholt vor ihnen auf dem Pult. Seit 1951/52 ist Dimitri Mitropoulos ihr ständiger Leiter. Er hat sie unzählige Male zu triumphalen Erfolgen geführt.

Die New-Yorker Philharmoniker sparten nicht mit ihrem Dank an die Großen der Musik. Zahlreich sind die Ehrenmitgliedschaften, die das berühmte Orchester verliehen hat. Spohr, Wagner, Mendelssohn, Liszt, Raff, Rubinstein und Dvorak waren u. a. Ehrenmitglieder der New-Yorker Philharmoniker, ferner die Sängerinnen Jenny Lind, Henriette Sontag und Marietta Alboni. Als erstes US-Staatsoberhaupt erhielt Präsident Coolidge die Ehrenmitgliedschaft, als zweites Harry S. Truman im Jahre 1946.

Lange ehe die Vereinten Nationen ihr Hauptquartier in New York errichteten, besaß die Stadt in ihrem Philharmonischen Orchester eine Art Vereinter Nationen. Das berühmte Ensemble ist nämlich ein Musterbeispiel für den oft zitierten amerikanischen „Schmelztiegel". Von den insgesamt 108 Orchestermitgliedern sind 68 in den USA geboren und 40 in anderen Staaten — unter diesen gibt es übrigens auch zwei Musiker österreichischer Abstammung. Besonders stark vertreten ist Rußland mit zehn Musikern, Italien mit sieben, Deutschland mit fünf und Ungarn mit vier Orchestermitgliedern. Der Konzertmeister des Orchesters, John Corigliano, ist Amerikaner italienischer Abkunft. Er bekleidet seinen Posten seit 1943 und spielt ein kostbares Instrument, das Carlo Bergonzi 1716 in Cremona gebaut hat und das einst Paganini gehörte.

Alle diese Männer — jeder einzelne von ihnen ist ein Künstler mit Konzertreife — arbeiten in bester Harmonie miteinander. Aber so groß ihr Gleichklang als Musiker ist, so verschieden sind sie als Persönlichkeiten. Fast jeder von ihnen hat „Nebentalente" und Hobbys. Vor allem als Maler haben sich die New-Yorker Philharmoniker vielfach so erfolgreich betätigt, daß alljährlich eine eigene „Philharmonische Ausstellung" stattfindet. Unter den Hobbys der Musiker rangiert Schach an erster Stelle, gefolgt vom Photographieren. Ein Musiker ist ein leidenschaftlicher Koch, ein anderer spielt meisterhaft Tennis und ein dritter ist ein vorzüglicher Bildhauer. Sehr verbreitet ist die Sammlerleidenschaft. Gesammelt werden Instrumente, Schallplatten, Manuskripte, Notenerstausgaben, Porzellan, Münzen und Briefmarken. Auch in der Tischlerei, bei der Gartenarbeit und beim Holzschnitzen finden die Philharmoniker Entspannung. Einer von ihnen hat eine neue Tomatensorte gezüchtet, und ein anderer ist in seiner Freizeit damit beschäftigt, einen bei einem Brand vernichteten Wald wieder aufzuforsten.

In Kürze wird das berühmte Orchester nun im Rahmen seiner Europatournee in drei Flugzeugen (und mit 85 Koffern) in Wien eintreffen. Es ist sein erster Aufenthalt in der österreichischen Hauptstadt seit der unvergessenen Tournee unter Toscaninis Leitung in den dreißiger Jahren. Wenn dann am 12. und 13. September die New-Yorker Philharmoniker unter der Leitung von Dimitri Mitropoulos ihre zwei Konzerte im Wiener Konzerthaus geben, wird Wien Gelegenheit haben, die Bekanntschaft mit einem Orchester zu erneuern, das in Amerika Musikgeschichte gemacht hat.

Mitropoulos dirigierte Wiener Erstaufführung einer Schostakowitsch-Symphonie

Zweites Gastkonzert des Philharmonischen Orchesters New York, Dienstag abend im Großen Konzerthaussaal, unter Leitung von Dimitri Mitropoulos. Programm: Werke von Couperin-Milhaud, Mendelssohn (V. Symphonie) und Schostakowitsch (X. Symphonie — Erstaufführung).

Das gestrige Konzert bestätigte den am Vortag gewonnenen Eindruck: die New-Yorker Philharmoniker sind ein exzellentes Orchester, dessen besondere Eigenart im Klang liegt. Die schmetternden Blechblasinstrumente ähneln den bei amerikanischen Militärkapellen gebräuchlichen, und sie bewirken auch die bestürzende Kraft und Aggressivität der Forteausbrüche, bei denen der Orchesterklang hart, schneidend, grell, aber niemals brutal wird. Im Gegensatz dazu sind Holzbläser und Streicher meist weich, singend im Ton und ohne jedes Forcieren, und die Geiger haben die wienerische Art des lebendigen Musizierens — organisches und nicht mechanisches Ensemblespiel.

Die Frage, ob die amerikanischen Gäste besser oder schlechter seien als unsere Wiener Orchester, ist müßig. Auf alle Fälle ist der Sicherheitsfaktor ihres Spiels größer, und ihr Fortissimo ist viel lauter als unseres. Das war für die Wiedergabe der (neuen) zehnten Symphonie von Dimitri Schostakowitsch besonders wichtig, deren Erstaufführung Höhepunkt, wenn auch nicht Hauptsache des gestrigen Konzertes war.

Diese Symphonie steht im Tschaikowsky-e-moll und ist dieser melancholischen Tonart würdig. Sie steckt voll genialer Ideen, deren Ausarbeitung meist konventionell, uninteressant und langatmig ist. Da gibt es bukolische Holzbläserthemen, schwärmerische, träumerische Partien, zarte Stimmungsbilder, alles sehr deutlich, breit und umständlich ausgeführt. Schwermut und Pathos, auf den gemeinsamen Nenner des sozialistischen Realismus gebracht. Dazwischen aber stehen, vor allem in den schnellen Teilen, Partien von großer Originalität, in der messerscharfen, pedallosen Schostakowitsch-Manier instrumentiert: im endlosen und recht unorganischen ersten Satz ein lärmender Marsch, dann der ganze zweite Satz, der mit seinen schrillen Holzbläserpassagen wie ein technisierter Hexenritt wirkt, im dritten Satz eine ordinäre Jahrmarktsmusik, die in das manierliche Scherzo einbricht, und im Finale ein paar parodistische Stellen.

Das ganze Stück besitzt gewiß Ernst, Haltung und Eigenart. Aber es interessiert nur stellenweise, weil es sich so lange Zeit hindurch ständig wiederholt. Im allgemeinen ist der Stil des russischen Komponisten gleichgeblieben. Er wird sich wahrscheinlich nur mit der Parteilinie ändern.

Dimitri Mitropoulos, der sein Programm wieder mit nervenerregender Hochspannung erfüllte und sogar ein Museumstück wie Mendelssohns Reformationssymphonie interessant machte, stand auch gestern im Mittelpunkt stürmischer Ovationen, die Zugaben von Boccherini-Rachmaninoff und Kabalewsky erzwangen. Im übrigen haben wir unserer gestrigen Kritik nichts hinzuzufügen: beide Konzerte der New-Yorker Gäste waren ein sensationelles Ereignis. Wien dürfte außerdem einen Dirigentenliebling mehr haben...

Mitropoulos schwang den Stab zu musikalischer Koexistenz-Uebung

Im Gegensatz zu ihrem ersten Auftreten stand der zweite Abend der New-Yorker Philharmoniker im Zeichen eines völlig unkonventionellen Programms. Doch vor eingehenderer Besprechung dieses Programms verdient das Orchester als solches noch eine eigene Würdigung. Dabei kommen weniger die technischen Qualitäten der 108 Musiker in Betracht, die sich selbstverständlich auf dem höchsten Niveau bewegen. Was mehr interessierte, war der spezifische Klangcharakter dieser Orchestervereinigung. Man kann sie in dieser Hinsicht vielleicht zwischen die Wiener und die Berliner Philharmoniker hinstellen: der warme, satte Klang der Streicher, ihr Aufblühen und ihr schönes Atmen weisen in die Richtung des Wiener Orchesters; der helle, schmetternde Glanz der Blechbläser erinnert eher an die Berliner.

Dimitri Mitropoulos

Mit zwei von Darius Milhaud für großes Orchester bearbeiteten Sätzen Couperins begann der Abend in der ruhigen Ausgeglichenheit und dem festlichen Leuchten barocker Musikübung. Als musikalische Rarität folgte darauf die Fünfte Symphonie „Die Reformation" von Felix Mendelssohn-Bartholdy. Sie wird nach dieser „amerikanischen" Ausgrabung — zumindest in Wien — wohl wieder in ihre verdiente Vergessenheit zurücksinken. Immerhin lohnte sich an diesem Werk die Beobachtung, daß hier einer der formgewandtesten Meister gerade in der formalen Gestaltung versagte.

Die abschließend gespielte Zehnte Symphonie von Dimitri Schostakowitsch ist das, was man in der Malerei einen „heroischen Schinken" nennt. Nach seiner ideologischen Abweichung, die ihn in seiner kammermusikalischen „Neunten" in die Nähe Hindemiths und Strawinskys geführt hatte, ging der russische Komponist in sich, übte marxistisch-leninistisch-stalinistische Selbstkritik und komponierte zum Beweis seiner inneren Wandlung unter anderem seine Zehnte Symphonie, technisch glänzend ausgeführt, mit dick aufgetragenen Farben, gewaltigen Schlagzeugexplosionen, rhythmischen Bläserexzessen und jauchzenden Streicherekstasen — das Ganze durchtränkt von viel "russischer Seele" à la Tschaikowsky. Kraft, Kraft, Kraft! schreit es im Orchester. Aber es ist eine quälende Kraft, unter deren fanatischen Lärmausbrüchen eine interessante Komponistenpersönlichkeit begraben wurde.

Es entbehrt sicher nicht eines gewissen Reizes, daß ausgerechnet die New-Yorker seit zwei Jahren diese geistige Bankrotterklärung des sozialistischen Realismus in der Musik immer wieder aufführen. Es lebe die Koexistenz! Allerdings gibt das Werk des Russen dem Dirigenten und dem Orchester großartige Möglichkeiten, ihr Licht leuchten zu lassen, und man kann es den Amerikanern mit ihrer Freude an technischer Perfektion nicht verdenken, daß sie dieser Versuchung unterlegen sind.

Das Publikum jubelte Mitropoulos und seinen Musikern begeistert zu, es bekam Zugaben, und man trennte sich mit dem gegenseitigen Wunsch nach einer baldigen Wiederbegegnung.

ARTISTIC RENAISSANCE IN MODERN GREECE

By PETER GRADENWITZ

ATHENS.

WHEN Dimitri Mitropoulos and the New York Philharmonic-Symphony come to Greece this fall, they will play for a country with a multicolored musical life, a country that in music—as in literature and the arts—begins again to fill an important role between East and West, the ancient and the new. Like her neighbors Turkey and Israel, Greece is in the midst of an artistic renaissance, and her rising national school of composers is making interesting contributions to the growing repertory of Eastern-Mediterranean music.

The musical life centered in Athens has no distinctive features of it own. The city has a symphony orchestra, and most of its members also serve the radio symphony. Three local conductors lead the concerts in turn, and guest conductors appear from time to time. There is an opera company, though operatic performances are not frequently organized. There exist several music schools, headed by composers of different trends, and there is much enmity between these institutes.

Musicologists are active in various fields—folklore research, study of the Byzantine tradition, etc.—but the university has no chair in musicology. The American Embassy sometimes arranges chamber concerts, and renowned soloists include Greece in their travels. The orchestra usually plays the standard repertory. But contemporary music, including that of Greek composers, is frequently heard on the radio, which has recently been enlarged and its services improved.

Various aspects of creative music and musical research fascinate the student of the contemporary scene. It is in Greece that the ancient Byzantine tradition of music still exercises a powerful influence. Ancient melodies and musical systems have been guarded by some secluded communities. A great stir was caused by the recent discovery, in a monastery on Mount Athos in the north, of a collection of ancient popular ballads. A musicologist succeeded in transcribing them. They were subsequently performed by the Athens radio and included in a Greek ballet show.

Pure ancient Greek folk music is rarely found today except with the minstrels in the mountains. Widely discussed is the popular music known as Rebetika; this is urban music developed in the taverns. Purists think this is hybrid and not genuine folk music, but many composers approach it seriously and use it in their works.

Conglomerate Form

The Rebetika, of which a long-play record has just been issued in Europe, seems to be a conglomeration of ancient elements (Byzantine and popular Greek) and modern entertainment style. It is distinguished by its exotic chromaticism and augmented intervals and by the instrumental colors of the mandolin-like buzuki and the baglamas, a stringed instrument of Oriental origin.

Of modern Greek composers, only one has begun to gain a place in the European repertory. He is Nikos Skalkottas, whose Greek dances have figured in the programs of the New York Philharmonic.

Skalkottas was one of the white hopes of the Schoenberg school. He was born in 1904 and studied in Germany. He returned to Athens in 1933 and led a secluded life there until his untimely death in 1949.

Hardly known to musicians, except to a small circle of friends, Skalkottas sketched and completed his works in self-sought seclusion and in an almost feverish haste. The list of his compositions includes about a hundred works, many of them of big dimensions, written between 1929 and 1949.

Skalkottas often used tunes of the Rebetika type in his works particularly in the theme-and-variations movements in chamber and orchestral works. Most of his compositions were written in the dodecaphonic style, and when he used a simple diatonic theme (as in the Piano Trio of 1938), Skalkottas added the missing notes in the harmonic accompaniment. Most of the music of Skalkottas is highly dramatic. The works of his last years are of a somber quality.

Prolific Composer

Among the older generation of composers, the most prolific and best known is Manolis Kalomiris, director of the National Conservatory and chairman of the League of Greek Composers. A Greek composer educated in Germany is Antiochos Evangelatos, head of the music department of the Athens broadcasting station and conductor of its orchestra.

Most interesting are the works of the younger generation. Important among these are Yannis Constantinidis, who has drawn freely upon popular Greek songs of the various regions and of the Greek Isles; Mikis Theodorakis, who is now in France on a Greek Government scholarship and whose ballet music "Greek Carnival" shows real talent; and Manos Hadjidakis, whose music is of a singularly attractive freshness and considerable rythmic impact.

DIMITRI MITROPULOS

Die Berliner Festwochen beginnen am Sonnabend. Als Auftakt geben am Donnerstag und Freitagabend die New-Yorker Philharmoniker zwei Konzerte. Sie kommen mit ihrem Dirigenten: Dimitri Mitropulos.

Neben den großen Alten — Toscanini, Bruno Walter — gehört Mitropulos jetzt zu den Sensationen des Konzertsaals. Es ist bei ihm wie bei Toscanini: schon wenn er aufs Podium kommt, noch bevor er einen Takt hat erklingen lassen, fühlt sich das Publikum seltsam elektrisiert:

Es fühlt den Fanatiker, Mystiker. Aus welcher Welt mag er kommen?

Der seltsame Mann wurde (vor 59 Jahren) in Athen geboren. Zwei seiner Onkel waren Mönche. Ein Großvater Priester. Ein Großonkel Erzbischof der griechisch-orthodoxen Kirche.

Natürlich sollte auch Dimitri Priester werden. Ja, Dimitri selbst wollte! Er war selig, wenn er seine Onkel im Kloster auf dem heiligen Berg Athos besuchen durfte.

Selig war er aber auch, wenn er Musik hörte.

So wendete er sich ganz der Musik zu. Lernte überall — auch in Berlin bei Busoni. War bis 1925 Korrepetitor an der Berliner Staatsoper — dann Dirigent in Paris, lange in Athen, 1936 in Boston — und schließlich in New York.

Doch: die Musik, die er macht, scheint, immer streitbar, für Gott gemacht zu sein — nicht nur die Klassiker, sondern, nun gerade, die Modernen. Etwa wenn er — gleichzeitig das Orchester dirigierend — ein Klavierkonzert von Prokofieff am Flügel hämmert.

Sein privates Leben ist asketisch.

Kein Wunder: die Musik erschöpft ihn völlig — und so hat nichts anderes Raum in ihm.

Orchester in glänzendem Blechpanzer

Begeisterungsstürme um New-Yorker Philharmoniker und Dimitri Mitropoulos

Erstes Gastkonzert des Philharmonischen Orchesters New York, Montag abend im Großen Konzerthaussaal, unter Leitung von Dimitri Mitropoulos. Programm: Werke von Verdi (Ouvertüre zu „Die Macht des Schicksals"), Schumann (II. Symphonie) und Brahms (II. Symphonie).

Die Wiener Philharmoniker sind das beste Orchester der Welt und der beste Dirigent ist Karajan. In Wien.

Daß diese von lokalpatriotischer Seite oftmals getroffenen Feststellungen nur solange ihre Gültigkeit bewahren, als wir unter uns bleiben, bewies schon kürzlich das Philadelphia-Orchestra und bewies gestern das Philharmonische Orchester aus New York. Sein erstes Wiener Konzert war ein Triumph, eine Sensation, ein Ereignis. Ein Glück für Karajan (wenn auch beschämend für den Ruf Wiens als sogenannte Musikstadt), daß sein Stammpublikum nicht anwesend war. Sonst wäre es nämlich draufgekommen, daß es anderswo auch noch faszinierende Zauberer des Taktstocks gibt.

Da ist also Dimitri Mitropoulos, ein großer, hagerer Mann mit auffallend langen Armen, die nervös vorstoßen, durch die Luft sausen, Einsätze markieren. Die Linke modelliert meist den Klang, „formt" die Nuancen, glättet und wühlt auf, während die Rechte den Taktschlag andeutet. Aus den Bewegungen dieses Dirigenten, dessen Willenskraft und Intensität während des ganzen Abends spürbar bleiben, lassen sich eine ungewöhnliche künstlerische Energie und fanatische Genauigkeit ableiten. Genauigkeit im Sinne des persönlichen Konzepts allerdings und nicht so sehr im Sinne des Komponisten.

Mitropoulos tut aber nichts, das unverantwortlich gegenüber dem Notentext wäre. Er hat eine fast naive Neigung für Crescendowirkungen und wendet sie an, wo er außerordentliche Effekte erzielen will. Er will das oft — fast zu oft. Und außerdem gehört er zu jenen Sündern, die vor Höhepunkten regelmäßig das Tempo verändern. Täte das ein anderer, wär's ein grober Verstoß. Bei ihm ist es persönliche Note. Dafür entschädigen unendlich viele Vorzüge, darunter vor allem die Fähigkeit, einen Satz gleichsam in einem Atemzug auszusprechen und aus einem Orchester ein Maximum an klanglicher Differenziertheit und Brillanz herauszuholen. Letztere wurde bei der stürmisch geforderten Zugabe (aus de Fallas „Dreispitz") zu einer bis an die Grenze des Erträglichen gesteigerten, aufpeitschenden Klangorgie genützt.

Das Programm selbst war eher konventionell erstellt. Schumanns „Zweite" ist farblos und anämisch. Hier führte Mitropoulis seine Spezialität vor: wie man aus einem schwachen Stück starke Wirkungen erzielen kann, indem man ihm mit Ausnützung aller Effektmöglichkeiten und, wenn es sein muß, sogar Retuschen zu Leibe rückt. Wird auch der so erzielten Wirkung die Naivität Schumanns geopfert — es gibt keine Langeweile. Verdi und Brahms profitierten ohne Opfer; sie waren vollendet gespielt, wobei es ganz gleichgültig ist, ob bei anderer Gelegenheit Furtwängler da mehr und Böhm dort weniger schnell, gefühlvoll oder laut waren.

Apropos laut — wir haben noch nie ein Orchester gehört, daß so laut und gleichzeitig so empfindsam spielen kann. Hinter seinem strahlenden, glänzenden und makellos gearbeiteten Blechpanzer fühlen sich die Streicher geborgen, auch dank ihrer perfekten Virtuosität und des blühenden, innigen Klanges. Besonders kostbar die Holzbläsergruppe, in der jeder einzelne Musiker von besonders erlesener Qualität ist. Der Charakter dieses New-Yorker Orchesterspiels, auf das wir anläßlich des heutigen Konzertes nochmals zurückkommen werden, entspricht jedenfalls viel mehr dem Wiener Geschmack als die eher etwas nüchterne Perfektion aus Philadelphia

IN HEMD UND SANDALEN studiert Dimitri Mitropoulos seine Partituren. Der berühmte griechisch-amerikanische Dirigent leitete gestern abend im Konzerthaus das erste Gastkonzert der New-Yorker Philharmoniker, dem heute ein zweiter Abend mit neuem Programm folgen wird.

Zwei Abende mit den New-Yorker Philharmonikern im Konzerthaus

Schostakowitsch und andere Seltenheiten

Amerika ist von Oesterreich etliche tausend Kilometer und etwas darüber entfernt. Wie weit das eigentlich ist, wird so recht anschaulich, wenn Musiker von drüben kommen, um uns hüben etwas vorzuexplizieren, das wir auf kürzerem Weg schon längst hätten haben können. Außer mit sich selbst, machten die New-Yorker Philharmoniker und ihr Dirigent Dimitri Mitropoulos das Wiener Publikum noch mit einer Musik bekannt, die in der Musikweltstadt Wien seit längerer Zeit schon auf der Verlustliste des Kalten Krieges steht.

Nicht länger betrogen sind wir nun um die Zehnte Symphonie von Dmitri Schostakowitsch. Sie erfuhr durch die New-Yorker eine ihrer Bedeutung entsprechende Darstellung. Seit ihrer ersten Aufführung hat sie leidenschaftliches Für und Wider entfacht. Ihrer erregenden Besonderheiten wegen ist das ganz verständlich: ohne daß mit Tradition gebrochen würde, ist sie voll großer und seltener Eigenart. Die vier sehr ausgeprägt kontrastierenden Sätze eint enger thematischer Zusammenhang; gewaltige Gegensätze und die ursprünglichste Kraft der Erfindung, die sich denken läßt, spinnen in wunderbarer Weise eine unendliche Variation. Wenn das Beispiel der Meisterschaft eines einzelnen Schule zu machen imstande wäre, dürfte man einen neuen, zukunftsträchtigen Typus Musik prophezeien: da schafft nicht die Form das Geschehen, sondern das Geschehen die Form; keine Konventionen beengen das freie Ausschwingen aller musikalischen Gedanken. Die Grenzen der Tonalität werden erreicht, doch nie überschritten. Keiner der Heutigen handhabt wie Schostakowitsch derart wissend und souverän die Intervallspannungen: sie, die kleinsten Bausteine, formen die musikalische Materie dieses Meisterwerkes. Schon ihretwegen kann er nicht auf Tonalität verzichten, wiewohl für Schostakowitsch die Tonalität ebensowenig wie die Form irgendwelchen Konventionen verpflichtet ist. Und das sind seine Worte: „Es mag bequem und sicher sein, ausgetretenen Pfaden zu folgen, aber das ist langweilig, uninteressant und nutzlos."

Mit der Darstellung dieses Werkes allein hätten sich die Erwartungen, die nach dem Festwochen-Gastspiel des Philadelphia-Orchesters recht hochgeschraubt waren, erfüllt gehabt. Möglicherweise gefallen den Wienern die New-Yorker Philharmoniker sogar besser. Ihr Klangideal liegt den Wienern zweifellos näher, was aber (glaube ich) kein Grund ist, ihnen den Vorzug zu geben, obwohl ich die Differenziertheit und den Nuancenreichtum des Orchesters und die Phrasierungskunst jedes einzelnen Musikers gern anerkenne. Die Ouvertüre zu Verdis „Die Macht des Schicksals" oder Manuel de Fallas „El amor brujo" war hinreißend gespielt — und das ist nicht allein die Schuld des Dirigenten. Auch daß die von Milhaud bearbeitete Musik Francois Couperins oder eine völlig unbekannte Frühsymphonie Mendelssohns namens „Reformation" (eine Gelegenheitsarbeit, die ihren Anlaß zur Entstehung, die „Gelegenheit" nämlich, kaum verleugnet) glatt gehen würde, war zu erwarten — und auch, daß es mit Brahms' Zweiter Symphonie nicht so ganz klappen würde. Für uns Hiesige stammt nun einmal die Musik Brahms nicht von Schumann oder Mendelssohn, sondern von Beethoven ab (es scheint dies eine Art von Geheimwissen zu sein) — auch werden die ersten drei Sätze hierzulande ein wenig schneller und möglichst ohne Rubato gespielt. Ob Schumanns ebenso herrliche wie seltene Zweite Symphonie (C-dur) den Tücken der eigenen Instrumentation oder den Instrumentationsretuschen zum Opfer fiel, ist schwer zu sagen. Dennoch war erkennbar, daß in diesem kostbaren Werk fast ein Jahrhundert Musikgeschichte gespeichert ist: im Rückblick auf Schubert, im Vorwegnehmen des Brucknerschen Adagios. Ergreifend ist Schumanns ganz und gar unzeitgemäße Sehnsucht nach der reinen Polyphonie.

Dimitri Mitropoulos gehört zur Gilde der „Magier" des Taktstockes (auf den er nicht, wie viele andere amerikanische Dirigenten, verzichtet).. Natürlich liebt er den maximalen Effekt — allein die Wahl seiner Orchesterzugaben würde es beweisen —, das ist das südliche Temperament. In dessen Ausbrüchen erschöpft sich aber seine „Magie" gar nicht, seine Suggestionskraft ist nicht weniger wirksam. Er erinnert mitunter an einen Dresseur — dennoch bergen die Momente, wo er fast zu dirigieren aufhört und das Orchester sich selbst überläßt, genug an Gefahren.

Hätten die Eintrittspreise sich in vernünftigen Grenzen gehalten — beide Konzerte wären ausverkauft gewesen. k—h—f

Mitropoulos dirigiert sein Orchester

Triumphaler Erfolg der New-Yorker Philharmoniker

Zunächst sei mit freudiger Genugtuung vermerkt, daß Wien das Reiseziel des ältesten und traditionsreichsten Orchesters der Neuen Welt wurde. Die Vermutung, diese überaus willkommene Besuchsfahrt mit der wiedererlangten Bedeutung Wiens als Musikzentrum in Zusammenhang zu bringen, dürfte kaum von der Hand zu weisen sein.

Will man mit der Vorstellung eines Höchstmaßes an technischer Fertigkeit den Begriff der Zivilisation, mit dem einer sinnvoll und ausdrucksgesättigten Interpretation den der Kultur verbinden, so verfügen die New-Yorker Philharmoniker über beides in paritätischer Ausgewogenheit. Ihr Spiel ist von virtuoser Perfektion, ohne in der Ausübung der Virtuosität einen Selbstzweck zu erblicken. Anderseits befähigt sie gerade die Superiorität im Technischen zu einer Werkdeutung, in der nichts Fragment bleibt, vielmehr der Wille allein für die Tat genommen werden muß, die jedes improvisatorische Element ebenso ausschaltet wie die Gefahr einer Routine meidet, von der manches berühmte Orchester — Wien konnte sich hievon vor wenigen Wochen überzeugen — nicht frei ist. Die New-Yorker verfügen vor allem über jene Homogenität des Klanges, auf die der an den Wiener philharmonischen Klangcharakter gewohnte Hörer besonderen Wert legt. Das kantilene Aufblühen der vom italoamerikanischen Konzertmeister John Corigliano geführten Geigen wirkt ebenso berückend wie der Flötenton, der martialische Klang der Posaunen und der satte, dunkelschattierte der Celli. Befremdend fürs erste wie bei den meisten Orchestern aus Übersee tönt die Oboe, ungewohnt auch der sehr helle Klang der Trompeten, deren „Mechanisierung" zwar vor dem gefürchteten „Gicksen" bewahrt, aber auch für das Kreszendieren des Tones eine leichte Hemmung darstellt. Für das vorbildliche Zusammenspiel der Instrumentalgruppen, für den prachtvollen Gesamtklang indes reicht kein Wort des Lobes hin.

In dieser Konstatierung liegt bereits ein großer Teil der Meriten, welche Dimitri Mitropoulos, der berühmte Dirigent der Körperschaft, für sich in Anspruch nehmen darf. Sein Musizieren ist das eines großen, universellen Künstlers, der nicht krampfhaft nach originellen Auffassungen sucht, sondern vorbehaltlos dem Geist, dem Stil des Werkes dient. In den Äußerlichkeiten der Stabführung begegnen wir Züge, die an manche seiner großen Vorgänger und Kollegen gemahnen. Wenn die linke Hand des Dirigenten, auf das Herz weisend, zur Intensivierung der melodischen Phrase lädt, glaubt man Toscanini vor sich zu haben. Die Entfesselung virtuoser Effekte durch weitausholende Gebärden vollzieht sich im Bravourstil de Sabatas. Und dennoch handelt es sich hiebei keineswegs um Kopien, sondern um glückhafte Synthesen, um das Vielseitige, das Zusammenfassende einer überragenden Dirigentenkunst.

Das Programm des Abends enthielt bestbekannte Werke: Verdis Ouvertüre zu „Die Macht des Schicksals", Schumanns C-dur-, Brahms' zweite Symphonie. In der Wahl der Stücke zeigt sich sichtlich das Bestreben, die Qualitäten des Orchesters von den verschiedensten Gesichtspunkten aus zu beleuchten. Der Vortrag der hinreißend gespielten Verdi-Ouvertüre mit den richtigen Rubati, der schneidenden Rhythmik, der Farbigkeit des Melos, war ein Spiegelbild echtester, italienischer Operndramatik. Schumanns 2. Symphonie erklang in vollendeter Klarheit, die diesem, in schwerer Krankheit konzipierten Stiefkind der Schumannschen Muse besonders nottut, da es vor allem infolge seines schwächeren Finales stellenweise als Argument gegen Schumann als Symphoniker herangezogen wird. Aus den vielen prachtvollen Einzelheiten der Darstellung sei auf die Transparenz der Fugattostellen im Adagiosatz besonders hingewiesen. Hier allerdings läßt sich ein Einwand nicht unterdrücken, der schon anläßlich der seinerzeitigen Salzburger Aufführung der gleichen Symphonie erhoben wurde und dem sehr raschen Tempo gilt, welches Mitropoulos diesem eminent romantischen von Lenauscher Melancholie durchwehten Stück angedeihen ließ. Die in bestem authentischen Brahms-Stil gespielte D-dur-Symphonie sollte das Programm beenden. Orkanartige Beifallsstürme erzwangen als Zugabe von südlicher Glut durchpulste Klänge De Fallas, die in atemloser Bravour dargebracht, mit verdoppeltem Blech- und Holzbläsern ausgestaltet, den triumphalen Abschluß einer denkwürdig erstrangigen, künstlerischen Manifestation bildeten.

Erstes Konzert der New-Yorker Philharmoniker

Triumph mit de Falla

Dem sanften Saisonauftakt einer von Volkmar Andreae und den auch bei unsicherem Wetter ambitionierten Symphonikern auf dem Heiligenstädter Pfarrplatz gestalteten Serenade folgte sogleich glänzender Höhepunkt im Konzerthaus: mit Dimitri Mitropoulos an der Spitze präsentierten sich die New-Yorker Philharmoniker dem Wiener Publikum. Es ist ein Ensemble nach dem Geschmack unserer Zuhörer: für herzhaftes, kräftig konturierendes Musizieren bei untadeliger technischer Perfektion hatten die Wiener stets eine liebenswerte Schwäche; sie ziehen solche Orchester zumeist rein virtuosen Ensembles, wie wir es etwa im Philadelphia-Orchester kennengelernt haben, spontan vor. Kräftig zupackendes Blech, spritzige, allen Anforderungen spielend gewachsene Holzbläser und ein diszipliniertes Streicherkorps — bemerkenswerterweise in der „alten", angeblich überholten Aufstellung gruppiert! —, eine stets wache Klangfreudigkeit, die sich im Forte am wohlsten fühlt und doch niemals übertreibt: das wären vielleicht die vorstechendsten Charakteristika der New-Yorker Gäste.

Ihr Dirigent Mitropoulos ist eine faszinierende Erscheinung. Daß er, nachdem er die Festgäste mit den Hymnen begrüßt hatte, eine Verdi-Ouvertüre an die Spitze des Programms stellte, erscheint uns als keineswegs zufällig angeordnet: Mitropoulos ist Dramatiker bis in die Fingerspitzen. Seine ungewöhnliche Intensität, die sich nicht allein in der antreibenden und nur mit der Linken modellierenden Zeichengebung manifestiert, sein Hang zum steten Espressivo, zu unablässigen Temporückungen sind nicht zu übersehen. Seine Interpretationen erhalten den Reiz des ungemein Lebendigen, ja stets Aufwühlenden und mitunter fast Revolutionären. Erstaunlich, mit welcher Selbstverständlichkeit Mitropoulos bei diesem Grundkonzept der naheliegenden Versuchung zu übersteigertem Pathos mit unerbittlichem Zwang zum Realistischen widersteht. Wir haben in ihm eine vitale und eigenwillige Persönlichkeit kennengelernt, der wir immer wieder, vor allem auch am Opernpult begegnen möchten. Wir sagen Mitropoulos auch Dank für die Programmgestaltung, die Schumanns II. Symphonie berücksichtigte, von der wir wissen, daß Pfitzner sie sehr geliebt und bevorzugt hat. Ihr reicher Inhalt, in fast nervöser Art nur lose geordnet, braucht freilich einen Interpreten, der sich bemüht, in die vielen heiklen Probleme einzudringen, die ihrer Realisierung so oft im Wege stehen. Ungewohnt war uns die Auffassung des Dirigenten von der II. Symphonie von Brahms. Es wäre jedoch billig, das Hergebrachte nur aus Bequemlichkeit höher einzuschätzen: gewisse Bedenken gegen zahlreiche Uebersteigerungen im Ausdruck können freilich nicht unterdrückt werden, da sie auch bei freier Auslegung nicht mit dem Hinweis auf die Vorschriften der Partitur begründet werden können. Gewaltig ,aber war die als Abschluß gebotene Zugabe: de Fallas Musik schlug in dieser sprühenden, überschäumenden Interpretation wie ein Explosivkörper in den Saal, auflodernde Ovationen auslösend.

Couperin — Mendelssohn — Schostakowitsch

Der zweite Abend der New-Yorker Philharmoniker war gleich dem ersten Auftreten des berühmten Orchesters ein denkwürdiges Ereignis — nicht so sehr der gewählten Werke als der interessanten Eigenart der Interpretationen wegen. Diese robuste Art des Musizierens, die sich scheinbar nur unwillig zu einem klingenden Piano versteht und dennoch eine Skala vielfältiger Klangwirkungen zu produzieren vermag, erschwert jeden Vergleich mit einem anderen Ensemble. Das ist ein bedeutender Vorzug und besagt, daß die New-Yorker Philharmoniker, zumindest unter der Stabführung von Dimitri Mitropoulos, ein unverwechselbares „Gesicht" besitzen, das sich deutlich abzeichnet und das dem Zuhörer in der Erinnerung haften bleibt.

Schon bei der Wiedergabe der beiden von Milhaud „gepanzerten" Sätze Couperins bekannten sich die Gäste nachdrücklich zu „ihrer Vortragsweise", sie taten es mit bezwingender Selbstverständlichkeit und überzeugendem Impetus. Mendelssohns „Reformationssymphonie", die formale Mängel ins Ausgedinge des Musiklebens verwiesen haben, wurde so gestaltet, daß sie von Wagner zu kommen und nicht Wagner anzukündigen schien. Mitropoulos erwies sich dabei als Meister der Disposition auf weite Sicht: er konnte getrost umfassende Bögen spannen, da sich alle Orchestermitglieder das Konturieren auch kleinster Einzelheiten mit peinlicher Genauigkeit angelegen sein ließen und es daher — wie ja auch am Vortag bei der Aufführung der II. Symphonie von Schumann — zu keinerlei Ausfällen, zu keinem Nachlassen der Intensität kam. Die X. Symphonie von Schostakowitsch, der wir zum ersten Male begegneten, bringt den Rückfall des großen russischen Komponisten in einen Kraft- und Kolossalstil, der auch glänzende Einfälle gnadenlos und lärmend überwalzt. Ein effektvolles Werk, gewiß, aber auch eine Komposition mit Längen und Schwächen in der Ausarbeitung, die sich am ehesten im zweiten Satz zur Höhe der Meisterschaft erhebt. Das Publikum dankte wieder mit enthusiastischem Beifall, der mit zwei virtuos „hingelegten" Zugaben (eine „Vokalise" von Rachmaninoff und eine Ouvertüre Kabalewskis) zu herzlichen und anhaltenden Ovationen gesteigert wurde.

NEUES OESTERREICH 14. SEPTEMBER 1955

Kunst

New-Yorker Philharmo

Am Ende der vorigen Saison stand die Begegnung mit dem Philadelphia-Orchester. Am Beginn der neuen Konzertsaison präsentieren sich dem Wiener Publikum (soweit es die maßlos erhöhten Preise zu zahlen imstande ist) jene New-Yorker Philharmoniker, deren Ruhm ebenso legendär ist wie jener unseres philharmonischen Orchesters und deren Tradition genau bis in jene Zeit zurückreicht, da bei uns Otto Nicolai mit dem Hofopernorchester die erste philharmonische Akademie durchführte.

Seit 1950 steht Dimitri Mitropoulos an der Spitze des New-Yorker Orchesters. Seine vorjährigen Salzburger Festspielkonzerte sind unvergessen, die Faszination beim ersten Wiener Konzert war um nichts geringer. Schon der optische Eindruck hat magische Wirkung: gelingt es doch seiner beredten Zeichensprache, die sich nicht auf das übliche Schlagrepertoire beschränkt, sondern mitunter sogar mit jeder Faser des Körpers (Furtwängler und Kreuzberg in einer Person) quasi pantomimisch ausdeutet und mit tänzerischer Konzentration, mit vergeistigtem Fanatismus zugleich nach innersten musikalischen Gesetzmäßigkeiten phrasiert, die symphonische Form in ihrem Aufbau, in ihren Spannungen und Steigerungen auch sichtbar zu machen. Das mag an sich nicht Aufgabe des Dirigenten sein; im Falle Mitropoulos ist es das glücklich-seltene Phänomen einer in dieser Hinsicht jedenfalls einmaligen Persönlichkeit. Das Orchester wird von solcher geradezu szenischen Gestik gepackt und zu Höchstleistungen emporgerissen, es entwächst materieller Enge und kann seine Kraft ganz im Dienste der Interpretation verströmen.

Die New-Yorker Philharmoniker brillieren nicht nur durch ihre technische Vollendung, nicht nur durch ihren vorbildlichen Ensemblegeist und durch ihre selbstlose Disziplin, die sie alles Können gefügig in die Hand des Dirigenten legen läßt: sie haben auch jene volle, warme Rundung des Klanges, die uns beim Philadelphia-Orchester abgegangen ist, auch jene gewisse Freiheit in ihrem Spiel, die wir an unseren europäischen Orchestern schätzen, sie haben jene Homogenität in den Klangflächen, die an Orgelregister erinnert, und wie auf einer Orgel gestatten sie auch dem Dirigenten zu registrieren. Die Intensität der Tongebung (bis zum schmerzenden Fortissimo) duldet keinen Widerspruch: Vernunftgründe werden fortgerissen in der Klangfülle des überhitzten Espressivo.

Der erste Abend hatte durch die Anwesenheit zahlreicher Persönlichkeiten des kulturellen und öffentlichen Lebens auch äußerlich den ihm zukommenden repräsentativen Glanz, und Mitropoulos unterstrich ihn noch durch das Abspielen der österreichischen und der amerikanischen Hymne vor Konzertbeginn.

Mit Verdis „Macht-des-Schicksals"-Ouvertüre war man gleich im klaren darüber, wo die Stärke von Mitropoulos und seinem Orchester liegt, und man konnte es in dem durch den stürmischen Beifall als Zugabe erzwungenen „Dreispitz" von De Falla noch besser erkennen: hinreißende rhythmische Exaktheit, Präzision in der Ausführung agogischer und dynamischer Vorschriften, dramatische Wirksamkeit.

Schumanns Zweite mit ihren verzweifelten Ausbrüchen und dem schließlichen Durchringen zu einer eher bitteren Fröhlichkeit im Finale hat Mitropoulos schon in Salzburg dirigiert. Hier bleibt noch zu ergänzen, daß er dieses gewiß spröde Werk, das nur zu leicht unter den Händen des Dirigenten in Einzelstimmungen zerfällt, wie aus einem Guß darstellt, überschattet von tiefer Resignation, aber umgekehrt auch klanglich in plastischer Farbigkeit glühend. Genial mißverstanden wurde freilich die sonnige „Wörthersee"-Symphonie von Brahms, bei der Mitropoulos den pastoralen Beginn zur langsamen Einleitung einer Schicksals- oder Glaubenskampfsymphonie umdeutete: die Zweite von Brahms als Elfte von Beethoven. So wird die innere Ruhe dieses D-dur-Werkes durchsetzt mit dräuender Kontrapunktik, denn Mitropoulos weiß die Register gegeneinander abzuwägen und wie kaum ein anderer im Gleichgewicht zu halten, jede Note hat ihre Funktion im Gesamtbau, allerdings nicht immer jene Funktion, die ihr der Komponist zuweist. Nur: wenn man sieht, wie Mitropoulos bis in die Sprachmelodie jedes thematischen Bogens hineinhört, ist man sogar geneigt, auch die Möglichkeiten einer solchen Auffassung in Erwägung zu ziehen.

Alles in allem ein herrliches Konzert, in dem die Spannung (und welche Spannung!) keine Sekunde nachließ. Der große Konzerthaussaal war, besonders nach De Falla, von einhelliger Begeisterung erfüllt.

Critics Extol Philharmonic and Mitropoulos, Who Also Leads Second Concert

By JOHN MacCORMAC
Special to The New York Times.

VIENNA, Sept. 13—The music critics of Vienna delivered themselves of paeans of praise today for the New York Philharmonic-Symphony Orchestra and its conductor, Dimitri Mitropoulos.

"Mitropoulos and his New Yorkers: an apotheosis of perfection," was the caption over Wiener Kurier's review. Its critic described last night's performance here as "eruptive music filled with tension." Bild-Telegraf declared that the "first Vienna concert of the New York Philharmonic Orchestra was a triumph, a sensation, an event" and commented that the "technique of this New York orchestra corresponds much more closely to the taste of Vienna than rather the sober perfection from Philadelphia."

Die Weltpresse's Max Graf said that the orchestra followed its strong-willed conductor, who "presents music in so clear and blinding a light that not a speck of dust can gather on the classical form and performs it as if it had been composed by strong and contemporary spirits."

In its second and last concert tonight the orchestra presented for the first time in Vienna Dmitri Shostakovich's Tenth Symphony. It was conducted by Mr. Mitropoulos with all the fire, force and intensity that has made him so notable an interpreter of contemporary classics. The verdict of tonight's audience seemed to be that if anything could make modern music popular in Vienna it would be the way it was played tonight.

VIENNA, Sept. 13 (AP).—Another capacity audience at the Vienna Konzerthaus tonight gave an enthusiastic ovation to the New York Philharmonic Symphony Orchestra and conductor Dimitri Mitropoulos at their second and final concert here.

Critics described the occasion as "the most brilliant start" of the year's historic musical season here featuring the reopening of the Vienna State Opera House Nov. 5.

Mr. Mitropoulos' dynamic interpretation of Shostakovich's Tenth Symphony, a Vienna premiere, brought storms of applause and six curtain calls. He had to conduct two encores.

Auch Amerika hat Tradition

Die New-Yorker Philharmoniker unter Mitropoulos im Konzerthaus erfolgreich

Daß der Rang eines Orchesters, selbst wenn es sich aus weltbekannten Virtuosen zusammensetzte, nicht ausschließlich von seinen technischen Qualitäten bestimmt wird, dafür haben die New-Yorker Philharmoniker, die jetzt auf ihrer Europareise unter Dimitri Mitropoulos im Konzerthaus ihren ersten großen Erfolgsabend hatten, nachdrücklichen Beweis erbracht. Die Gäste, aufs freundlichste begrüßt, siegten in einem ganz anderen Sinn: durch ausgesprochenen Charakter. Charakter aber setzt Tradition voraus. Mögen jüngere Klangkörper — etwa, um bei ihren amerikanischen Kollegen zu bleiben, das kürzlich erst hier gehörte Philadelphia-Orchester — an Perfektion und Spontanität ihnen da und dort den Rang ablaufen: das Jahrhundert Musikkultur nimmt den New-Yorkern keiner weg. Im Feuer, das wärmt und nicht nur elektrisch funkelt; in der Seele der einzelnen Instrumentengruppen, die, stark besetzt und nach guter alter Weise aufgestellt, plastisch und individuell zur Geltung kommen; vor allem aber in dem jeder Massenverflachung entgegengesetzten Stil, wie er sich nur aus persönlichstem Kontakt der Einzelelemente untereinander ergibt — darin ist jer Tradition beschlossen, die auch d Entscheidende gewesen sein moch was uns den Gästen diesmal mit s ehrlicher Sympathie begegnen lie

Die Streicher haben Wärme (auc die zweiten Geigen wirken ni nebensächlich), Celli und Bässe be sondere kantable Geschmeidigkeit im Holz schalmeit eine herrliche Oboe, die erste Klarinette klingt für unser Ohr etwas grell, obschon ihr Spieler ein Meister genannt werden muß; Hörner wunderbar, das übrige Blech oft von orgelhafter Pracht und Geschlossenheit, wenn auch in den Einsätzen eine erhöhte Präzision denkbar wäre.

All diese Eigenschaften kennt Mitropoulos so genau wie eine Mutter ihr Kind, und er weiß sie, gleich dieser, zur Erziehung und guten Tat zu lenken und zu nützen. Von seiner rein äußerlich manchmal an Furtwängler gemahnenden Gestik fällt besonders das Formvermögen der Linken auf, aus deren Beredsamkeit alles kommt: Gesang, Steigerungen, Rubati; die Rechte gehört dem Rhythmus, der Kopf der Architektur, die bedeutend und klar zur Geltung kommt. Das Intellektuelle scheint der Metaphysik übergeordnet, eine sonderbare Vermischung von Inbrunst und routiniert weltmännischer Eleganz gibt dieser Dirigentengestalt faszinierende Prägung.

Nach den beiden Volkshymnen (die uns im Vortrag mehr denn eine Höflichkeitsgeste angesprochen haben) eröffnete Verdis Ouvertüre zur „Macht des Schicksals" als unverbindliche wirkungsvolle Intrada. Daß uns Schumanns C-dur-Symphonie, diese seit Weingartner hier sträflich vernachlässigte, wundervoll tiefe, bis ins Herz deutsche Musik, als Gastgeschenk von den Amerikanern beschert wurde, dafür sagen wir, beschämt, Dank. Gewiß ließ sich darin manches anders, inniger, versonnener denken — begreiflicherweise; aber warten wir mit Kritik, bis uns ein heimischer Dirigent eine ähnliche gute und mit Liebe studierte Aufführung bringt! Brahms' „Zweite" erblühte als eine Vision der Wörther-See-Landschaft, an den Ufern des Ontariosees geträumt, breit gesungen, der westlichen Weite entsprechend freizügiger als gewohnt, stets aber groß und edel. Das Publikum, das von Stück zu Stück mit wachsender Anteilnahme und Begeisterung mitgegangen war, brachte den Gästen stürmische Ovationen. Und wurde belohnt: mit Musik aus de Fallas „Dreispitz" erklang eine Zugabe von solcher Rasanz der atemraubenden Orchestervirtuosität, daß das Heimgehen schwerfiel und die Spannung auf den zweiten Abend mächtig gesteigert wurde.

KUNST UND KULTUR

Die New-Yorker Philharmoniker

Die New-Yorker Philharmoniker haben eine alte Tradition. Man merkt es, ohne daß es eines besonderen Hinweises darauf bedürfte: man merkt es vor allem an der Intensität und geradezu kontinentaleuropäischen Wärme des Streicherklanges, an der inneren Beweglichkeit des ganzen Ensembles, an dem Reichtum seiner Zwischentöne. Das sind Dinge, die ein Orchester nicht ohne weiteres erwerben kann. Die New-Yorker Philharmoniker unterscheiden sich dadurch, wohl auch durch eine etwas freiere Auffassung von Disziplin und technischer Perfektion, sehr von dem Philadelphia-Symphonieorchester, das heuer während der Festwochen in Wien gastierte. Was sie mit diesem typisch amerikanischen Orchester gemeinsam haben, ist ihre naive Freude an Lautstärkeextremen, für die unsere Säle entschieden zu klein sind. Im übrigen sind alle Proportionen genau aufeinander abgestimmt und nicht einmal das häufige Tempo rubato stört das Konzept, in dem der Geist der Romantik seinen reinsten Niederschlag gefunden hat.

Ein besonderes Kunststück, das die New-Yorker Philharmoniker unter der Leitung von Dimitri Mitropoulos vollbringen, besteht darin, daß sie unter Verzicht auf besondere Kunststücke Musik sinnfällig gliedern, verborgenste Spannungen spürbar machen, Steigerungen und Höhepunkte vollständig ausnützen. Stücke, die selbst in konservativen Liebhaberzirkeln kaum noch gespielt werden, wie die Zweite Symphonie von Schumann und die Fünfte von Mendelssohn, die sogenannte Reformationssymphonie, werden dadurch, für kurze Zeit, wieder lebendig und interessant. Und die Zweite von Brahms ist ein einziges Abenteuer. Sogar die Ouvertüre zu Verdis Oper „Die Macht des Schicksals" und eine Pièce von Couperin, Präludium und Allegro „Le Sultan" in einer prunkvollen romantisierenden Orchesterfassung Milhauds, kann man sich in der grundmusikalischen, auf das Wesentliche gerichteten Darbietung der New-Yorker Gäste gut und gern gefallen lassen.

Die Zehnte Symphonie von Schostakowitsch, am Schluß des zweiten Abends, ist indessen für alle ziemlich strapaziös. Potemkinsche Dörfer, in Noten gesetzt. Viel Fassade, nichts dahinter. Im ersten Satz hebt sich's, E-Moll, aus brucknerisch-mystischen Streichertiefen zu schwindelnden Choralhöhen empor, ohne daß in engerer musikalischer Beziehung das geringste vorgeht. Und bis zu den qualvollen Jahrmarktsbelustigungen des Finales ist es eine gar weite Reise, die durch ein Allegro barbaro (zweiter Satz) geringe Abwechslung erfährt. Weit und breit keine Spur organischen Zusammenhanges und logischer Entwicklung. Verlegenheitskontrapunkte, Gewaltmärsche. Gefesselte Phantasie. Eine Tragödie.

New-Yorker Philharmo

Der starke Eindruck des ersten Abends vertiefte sich: dieses Orchester ist wirklich ein Wunder an technischer Sicherheit, klanglicher Fülle, Farbigkeit des Ausdrucks und Schönheit der Tongebung, und Dimitri Mitropoulos ist einer der wenigen Dirigenten, die den zersprühenden Reichtum funkelnder Details einem geistig-architektonischen Prinzip einzuordnen vermögen.

So freute man sich bei Milhauds bereits aus Salzburg geläufiger Couperin-Bearbeitung wieder über die feingestuften Klangwerte, über die selbstverständliche Präzision, über die Homogenität der einzelnen Instrumentengruppen, die ja gerade hier im Sinne barocker Organistik eingesetzt werden. Man freute sich auch über die satte Lautstärke, die nicht aus mißverstandener Stiltreue asketisch im großen Konzertsaal kammermusikalisch flüstert. Weniger freute man sich über jene Stellen, wo des Guten etwas zu viel getan wurde, so daß mancher dynamische Effekt kolossalisiert wurde, was besonders in Mendelssohns so gut wie verschollener „Reformations-Symphonie" auffiel, einem hochinteressanten Werk übrigens, das nachdrücklich in Erinnerung ruft, daß sein Komponist nicht mehr zu den verbotenen Meistern zählt und außer der bei Serenadenkonzerten gern gespielten „Sommernachtstraum"-Ouvertüre auch noch etliche andere schöne und gehaltvolle Musik geschrieben hat. Geradezu verblüffend wirkt in dieser seiner fünften Symphonie, deren Programm nicht glaubenskämpferische Auseinandersetzung, sondern eher die Apotheose auf die Reformation an sich enthält, die „Parsifal"-Stelle im ersten Satz, während das Finale mit dem Choral „Eine feste Burg" fast in Bruckner-Nähe reicht. Mitropoulos hatte den Mut, die Patina zu entfernen, und siehe, als der klischierte „Lieder-ohne-Worte"-Komponist abfiel, blieb eine jugendlich-frische, kraftvolle Musik ohne epigonale Süße und Flachheit.

Als Erstaufführung brachte Mitropoulos die Zehnte Symphonie von Schostakowitsch: Überraschungen birgt sie kaum, auch Substanz, echte, bleibende Substanz sucht man mühselig zusammen. Aber gemacht ist sie großartig, von der lapidaren Thematik über die theatralischen Durchführungen (immer mit einem Auge ins Publikum!) bis zur brillanten Instrumentation, die besonders im zweiten Satz ein konzertantes Furioso entfesselt. Das Werk beginnt in tiefer Niedergeschlagenheit, es behält den schmerzlichen Zug auch bis zuletzt bei, denn der gewichtlose Beginn des Final-Allegros vermag mit seiner bewußten Lustigkeit kaum die Schatten der grüblerischen, langsamen Einleitung mit ihren in der Unendlichkeit langgedehnter Streicherakkorde verlorenen Soli zu verdrängen. Auch die Unerbittlichkeit im ersten Satz, die sich kompromißlos emporsteigert, trägt nichts zur Aufhellung bei. Die Gedankenverknüpfung geschieht in konventioneller Art, nur gelegentlich blitz aus eigentlich akademischer Formung der Esprit des Genialen auf. Der Schluß wird grandios hingestellt, die Schlagzeugbatterie trägt das ihre zum Endsieg bei.

Das Publikum im großen Konzerthaussaal reagierte mit stürmischem Beifall für Mitropoulos und seine Musiker. Wir lieben unsere Philharmoniker, wir haben in unseren Symphonikern ein Ensemble, das international bestehen kann. Wir beabsichtigen nicht, zwei grundverschiedene Musizierauffassungen gegeneinander auszuspielen. Aber das Gastspiel der New-Yorker Philharmoniker hat jedenfalls einen neuen Standard moderner Orchesterkultur geprägt. Nachmachen wäre schlecht, aber Nachdenken wäre gut. Wir zögern nicht, unserer Begeisterung ungeschmälert Ausdruck zu geben und hoffen auf ein baldiges Wiederbegegnen.

Zweiter Mitropoulos-Abend

Erstaufführung der X. Symphonie von Schostakowitsch

Eine sehr fesselnde, die ausgetretene Heerstraße üblicher Programmbildung meidende Vortragsfolge setzten die New-Yorker Philharmoniker am zweiten und leider letzten Abend ihres Gastspiels im Konzerthaus ihrem Auditorium vor. Nach der Hausmannskost des Vortages gab es Delikatessen, die teils frisch zubereitet, teils den Konservenbüchsen entnommen wurden. Zu letzteren gehört Mendelssohns hierzulande wenig bekannte „Reformationssymphonie" (Toscanini dirigierte sie vor zwanzig Jahren in Salzburg für den amerikanischen Rundfunk). Gewissen antiromantischen Tendenzen der letzten Jahrzehnte fielen zunächst die Symphonien der Romantiker zum Opfer. Erst in jüngerer Zeit erinnerte man sich wieder, daß Mendelssohn nicht bloß ein Violinkonzert und die „Sommernachtstraum"-Ouverture, Schubert nicht allein zwei, sondern mehrere Symphonien geschrieben hat, und dieser Reformation der Ansichten dankt man wohl auch wieder die Begegnung mit der Reformationssymphonie. Sie leidet, gemessen an ihren italienischen und schottischen Schwestern, im ersten Satz, der das in Wagners „Parsifal" als Glaubensmotiv verwendete sogenannte „Dresdner Amen" zitiert, ein wenig an Blutarmut, nicht aber in den lyrischen Teilen und keineswegs in dem groß angelegten Finale, dessen Choralapotheose direkt auf Bruckner hinweist.

Komplizierter ist die andere an diesem Abend zu Gehör gebrachte Symphonie, der Zahl nach die zehnte des genialen Russen Dimitri Schostakowitsch. Ein packendes, wenn auch bei erstem Anhören nicht leicht eingängiges, offenkundig aus einer labilen seelischen Verfassung entstandenes Werk unvermittelter Gegensätze. Einer tief melancholischen Einleitung folgt ein blechgepanzertes Allegro von rhythmisch und klanglich ungeheurer Wucht. Ein Kritiker hat nach der Erstaufführung von Tschaikowskijs „Pathétique", deren Scherzo als Kosakenattacke bezeichnet. Er würde das Allegro von Schostakowitsch als Explosion einer Atombombe definieren. Auch in den beiden Schlußsätzen des überdimensionierten Werkes gibt es Langatmiges neben Schönem. Oft lockert sich der straffe symphonische Bau, an seine Stelle treten kammermusikalische Episoden. Homophone Streicherstellen, Ritornelle der Bläser, erwecken den Eindruck der Nachdenklich-, ja des Gelähmtwerdens. Schonungslos überinstrumentierten Momenten folgen solche, die in zartestem Pianissimo verhauchen. Die Beziehung zum Stil Mahlers ist unverkennbar, nicht bloß in einzelnen Klangfarben, wie etwa in dem von Solovioline und Gong getragenen Ausklang des Allegretto, sondern auch in der Struktur der Themen, die sich bisweilen der Romantik der „Wunderhorn"-Lieder verschreiben. Wiewohl der Komponist es an Selbstzucht fehlen läßt und die Ohren des Hörers wiederholt eine Saunakur durchmachen läßt, ist diese Symphonie der Phantasie entsprossene Musik und nicht im Zwang einer bestimmten Schulrichtung konstruierte Schreibtischarbeit. Indem sie rückwärtsblickend vorschreitet, erbringt sie den Beweis, daß zu Unrecht verdrängte musikalische Grundgesetze wieder ihre Lebensberechtigung anmelden.

Die Aufführung war abermals von jener unübertrefflichen Güte, wie sie, ganz simpel ausgedrückt, nur einem erstklassigen Dirigenten und einem wunderbaren Orchester gelingt. Abermals stand man im Bann der Gestaltungskraft Mitropoulos', der unendlich differenzierten Phrasierung des Dirigenten, die in der Sorge für den Gesamtaufbau kein Detail außer acht läßt. Abermals bewunderte man das New-Yorker Bläserkorps, welches sich an diesem Abend nicht über Arbeitslosigkeit zu beschweren hatte, und die Präzision und Klangfülle, die das Spiel des Plenums auszeichnen. Dieses Lob läßt sich auch auf den Vortrag einer von Milhaud instrumentierten Suite Couperins ausdehnen, in der das Orchester zu einer tönenden Riesenorgel wurde. Desgleichen auch die Zugaben: Die Transkription eines Boccherini-Themas durch Rachmaninow sowie einen virtuosen „Reißer" Kabalewskis. Asketisch Veranlagte mögen angesichts des etwas bunten Charakters der Vortragsfolge ein wenig erstaunt gewesen sein. Sie vermittelte indes eine Fülle hochwertigster künstlerischer Eindrücke. Es ist zu hoffen, daß dieses Eliteorchester nicht wieder ein Vierteljahrhundert verstreichen lassen wird, bevor es sich den Wiener Musikfreunden vorstellt.

Seite 8 ÖSTERREICHISCHE NEUE TAGESZEITUNG

Sie haben ihr Versprechen bestens

Großartiger Abschlußabend der New-Yorker Philharmoniker mit Schosta

Das zweite Auftreten der New-Yorker Philharmoniker brachte die Erfüllung des am Vorabend so eindrucksvoll gegebenen Versprechens. Ein Galakonzert. Sowohl für das große Publikum, das seiner Begeisterung in mächtigen Wogen Ausdruck verlieh und sich nach dem anspruchsvollen Programm noch zwei Zugaben erzwang, als auch für den kritischen Musiker, der sich dabei rückhaltlos freuen und wohlfühlen konnte. Mitropoulos ist ein betörend kluger Kopf, und sein Wissen um Steigerungen hatte die Werkfolge geradezu raffiniert angelegt. Ueber Bearbeitungen kann man unterschiedlich denken. Daß Milhauds Einrichtung des Couperinschen Präludiums und Allegros „La Sultan" ein wirkungsvolles Stück ist und den klangsinnlich hochgebildeten modernen Musiker mit Liebe dem schönen alten Meisterwerk zugetan erweist, steht außer Zweifel. Bleibt nur die Stilfrage offen, ob die delikate Substanz das neuzeitliche orchestrale Aufgebot rechtfertigt oder gar notwendig macht. Mendelssohns „Reformationssymphonie", in der das auch von Wagner im „Parsifal" zitierte „Dresdener Amen" und der Choral „Ein' feste Burg" zu bedeutsamen Bausteinen werden, hört man heute nur noch selten. Und man muß auch sagen, daß sie gegenüber der „Italienischen" oder der „Schottischen" den Stempel des Epigonalen zu Schaden des Mendelssohnschen Personalstils deutlicher empfinden läßt. Aber gerade hier offenbaren sich Vorzüge und Eigenart des Dirigenten, sein nie erlahmender geistiger Höhenflug, die Zusammenschau und der in die Augen springende Farbensinn von höchster Subtilität, in hellem Lichte.

Der Schwerpunkt des Abends lag in der Erstaufführung von Dimitri Schostakowitsch' 10. Symphonie in e-moll. Wir können nur immer wiederholen, daß uns mit diesem Komponisten (wie auch mit dem Oeuvre seines Landsmannes Chatschaturian) jener Weg gebahnt erscheint, auf dem ein Weiter- und Emporschreiten der neuen Musik aus den Niederungen des Experiments möglich ist. Was diese Musik so sehr auszeichnet, ist ihre gesunde, an den Grundelementen der Tonalität und des einprägsamen Melos festhaltende Kraft, die von Schönberg, Strawinskij und Hindemith das Wichtigste gelernt hat, nämlich wie man es macht, das eigene Gesicht zu wahren! Das (wie vieles von Schostakowitsch) überreiche, bisweilen überlange Werk entwickelt seinen komplizierten Organismus aus den einfachsten Zellen, löst aus der lethargischen Meditation des Eingangs zwei Mittelsätze von gegensätzlicher Pracht und Originalität und gipfelt in einem Schluß, in dessen wilder Größe sich das Antlitz eines Erdteils entschleiert. Immer wieder im Bann der schroffen, doch (wie bei den großen Meistern) innerlich logischen Kontraste, einer Orgiastik, die oft genau bis an die Grenze des Erträglichen gesteigert ist, empfinden wir das Fremde doch so vertraut wie... „Wie das Leben", sagte ein junges Menschenkind nachher zu mir. Zart und voll, grell und dunkel und — mitreißend.

Eine tiefe Verbeugung vor der Leistung Mitropoulos', der hier sein aus geheimnisvoll unterirdischen orientalischen Quellen gespeistes Ingenium in voller, doch stets von stählerner Selbstzucht regierter Entfesselung ausleben konnte; Hut ab vor der großartigen Tat des Orchesters, das, nun mit dem Saal bereits vertraut, in all seinem freien Schwung und der so schönen, so gar nicht „amerikanischen" Natürlichkeit uns richtig ins Herz spielte.

Der Gastbesuch war ein Gewinn auf allen Linien, und die Mienen der Gäste ließen über die Freude an dem Kontakt keinen Zweifel. Mitropoulos strahlte.

U. S. Orchestra Wins Ovation at Berlin

Berlin, Sept. 15 (AP)—The New York Philharmonic Orchestra scored a triumph tonight at its first Berlin concert since 1930.

A sellout audience of 1,800 gave the orchestra and conductor Dimitri Mitropoulos a standing ovation.

Afterward, Mitropoulos exclaimed:

"Everywhere we go we are wonderfully received."

He surprised the audience by opening the concert with a rousing rendition of Deutschland Lied, more commonly known as Deutschland Ueber Alles.

AUX BEAUX-ARTS

L'orchestre Philharmonique de New-York

Il y a vingt-cinq ans « The Philharmonic-Symphony Society of New-York » terminait brillamment aux Beaux-Arts la saison des grandes auditions symphoniques sous la direction de l'inoubliable Toscanini. Le même orchestre ouvrait cette année la série des manifestations artistiques par le concert donné mercredi sous la conduite de son éminent directeur musical Dimitri Mitropoulos, né à Athènes en 1896 et Américain d'adoption.

D'abord pianiste et compositeur, D. Mitropoulos s'est ensuite consacré définitivement à l'orchestre. Après avoir été bon nombre d'années chef permanent de l'orchestre d'Athènes, il commença sa carrière américaine en 1930 à la tête du « Boston Symphony ». De 1937 à 1949 il fut directeur musical au Minneapolis Symphony. C'est au cours de la saison 1940-1941 qu'il fut pour la première fois au pupitre de direction du « New-York Philharmonic Symphonic», dont il est depuis 1951-1952 le directeur musical.

Plus que tout autre, l'Orchestre philharmonique de New-York, fondé en 1842, servit aux Etats-Unis la cause de la musique.

La réputation qu'il s'est acquise n'a rien de surfait. Il est rare d'entendre une phalange plus disciplinée, plus cohérente soit dans l'élan, soit dans l'extrême délicatesse. C'est un gigantesque instrument dont chaque groupe instrumental représente une touche maniée avec maîtrise par son chef. Le quatuor à cordes est étonnant de clarté et de consistance. Les « bois » sont la poésie, les cuivres sont chauds et vigoureux, parfois hardis, jamais vulgaires.

A ces qualités de sonorités s'associent une technique et une expression aussi remarquables.

Sous l'impulsion de M. Mitropoulos, l'ensemble chante et frémit comme si une âme l'animait.

Que les thèmes s'étayent, se croisent, se répondent — quelle que soit l'œuvre exécutée — la clarté en reste inaltérable. Chaque note, chaque timbre a son rôle et son éloquence.

C'est ainsi que « Le Freischutz op. 77 », ouverture pour orchestre de Weber, nous a paru rajeuni avec ses gradations, ses accentuations, ses oppositions recherchées et subtiles.

La « Symphonie en ré majeur op. 73 n. 2 », de Brahms, traduisit la grâce, l'élégance, la légèreté, le lyrisme des différents mouvements, notamment dans le premier et le dernier, les plus beaux de l'œuvre.

La Symphonie en si bémol majeur n. 5 op. 100, de Prokofieff, fut un prodige de précision. On en admirait la solide architecture, la substance mélodique, si curieusement ponctuée par la percussion, l'originalité des formules, l'association des timbres, la diversité des effets.

On était étonné, mais séduit et gagné notamment dans le troisième mouvement, où l'intensité du lyrisme est émouvante.

L'exécution de cette œuvre extraordinaire déchaîna des applaudissements chaleureux et prolongés, auxquels D. Mitropoulos répondit par deux bis : « Vocalises », de Rachmaninoff, et un extrait d'une œuvre de Kabalewski.

Le passage du Philharmonic Symphonic et de son éminent chef laissera aux auditeurs de Bruxelles un souvenir durable.

LA NATION BELGE

A la Philharmonique

The Philharmonic Symphony Orchestra of New York

Voici donc que 25 ans après son premier concert en Belgique, le célèbre orchestre Philharmonique de New-York, placé sous la magistrale direction de son chef permanent, Dimitri Mitropoulos, a donné mercredi soir, sous les auspices de la Philharmonique, dans la grande salle Henry Lebœuf, du Palais des Beaux-Arts, son 5.451ème concert depuis sa fondation en 1842. Cet unique concert de gala qui ouvrait de façon éclatante la saison musicale 1955-1956 était placé sous le patronage de S. Exc. M. Frédérick Alger, ambassadeur des Etats-Unis, en Belgique, et il était honoré de la présence de la reine Elisabeth.

Dès le début de la soirée, le nombreux et élégant public qui assista à cette imposante manifestation musicale fut fixé sur la valeur de The Philharmonic Symphony Orchestra, sur son homogénéité, sa discipline, le talent de tous les instrumentistes qui en font partie, qu'il s'agisse des cordes, des bois et des cuivres et aussi sur le puissant tempérament de musicien de M. Dimitri Mitropoulos, qui le conduit avec une autorité digne des plus vifs éloges et un sens musical basé à la fois sur l'intelligence et la sensibilité.

Trois œuvres importantes figuraient au programme : l'Ouverture du Freischütz, de Weber, la deuxième symphonie en ré majeur de Brahms et la cinquième symphonie en si bémol op. 100 de Serge Prokofieff. L'irréprochable exécution de ces partitions, suffisamment connues pour qu'il soit encore nésaire d'insister sur les beautés qu'elles contiennent valut à juste titre à l'orchestre Philharmonic de New-York et à son chef, un enthousiaste et mérité succès. On admira notamment dans l'Ouverture de Freischütz, de Weber, la mise en page de cette œuvre essentiellement romantique, son interprétation dépourvue de toute exagération et de toute emphase tandis qu'on prit plaisir à remarquer la sûreté technique, la virtuosité de l'ensemble des cordes. Les mêmes qualités apparurent encore dans l'interprétation de la belle symphonie en ré majeur de Brahms dont M. Dimitri Mitropoulos donna une exécution débordante de vie, d'enthousiasme mais sans négliger de mettre en pleine lumière la poésie si intense qui se dégage des mouvements lents. Ce fut d'un bout à l'autre du très beau travail que le public apprécia à sa juste valeur.

Quant à la cinquième symphonie de Prokofief, on y retrouve le solide métier de son auteur, son sens de la construction, l'originalité de ses idées musicales et de ses rythmes et, pour chaque mouvement M. Dimitri Mitropoulos qui est, répétons-le, un musicien racé, trouva l'expression qui leur convenait sans jamais songer à en altérer ou à en déformer la pensée créatrice. Ce fut en somme un très beau concert qui justifia une fois de plus la brillante réputation de The Philharmonic Symphony Orchestra of New-York et de son talentueux chef. Il se termina par deux «bis»: Vocalises, de Rachmaninoff et Colas Breugnon, de Kabalewsky.

La Philharmonique de New York à Bruxelles

"La Dernière Heure" du 16/9/55

C'est une séance très exceptionnelle qui vient d'ouvrir — bien tôt — la saison des concerts. La Philharmonique de New York est, en effet, un des premiers orchestres du monde et ses déplacements sont rares ; c'est aussi un des orchestres les plus anciens : il a plus de cent ans d'existence.

Malgré les renouvellements qu'il subit nécessairement, l'ancienneté d'un orchestre a une signification et la cohésion n'y est pas le résultat d'une discipline impérieuse obtenue par la sévérité de son dirigeant, elle est beaucoup plus une tradition, le résultat d'un coude à coude, elle est dans la conscience des musiciens plus que dans leur obéissance.

Dès lors, il y a un niveau de départ déjà très élevé sur lequel le chef d'orchestre peut s'appuyer pour aller au-delà, pour réclamer des nuances subtiles, pour faire sortir des détails souvent noyés, pour assouplir le tempo et souligner le déroulement des phrases expressives par un certain étalement ou la marche des passages rythmiques par une certaine pulsation, c'est-à-dire — dans l'ordre pratique — par un léger accellerando.

Tout cela c'est l'art du conducteur et M. Dimitri Mitropoulos le possède admirablement, mais l'art de l'interprète c'est le dosage de tous ces détails subtils, de toutes ces libertés qui, tout de même, ne peuvent sortir du cadre des intentions de l'auteur. Et M. Mitropoulos nous a surpris par son interprétation de la IIe Symphonie de Brahms où toutes les intentions étaient grossies à plaisir, comme s'adressant à des auditeurs peu subtils. Il n'a rien fait qui ne puisse se justifier par Brahms lui-même, encore que celui-ci finissait par être un peu travesti. Mais, peut-être y a-t-il une explication à tout cela, c'est qu'en Amérique les salles de concerts sont énormes et que, dès lors, un certain grossissement de tous les effets est nécessaire — tous les artistes savent cela — pour passer la rampe.

M. Mitropoulos n'a pas adapté comment changer d'ailleurs ? son interprétation à notre salle des Palais des Beaux-Arts, de même qu'il n'y a pas adapté la sonorité de son orchestre. Celle-ci est admirable, mais souvent trop puissante. Les cuivres sont merveilleux d'équilibre, de cohésion, de timbre, mais ils sont souvent — malgré la précaution prise de les placer de profil — envahissant et tous les vents d'ailleurs — par ailleurs parfaits — sont trop souvent tendus vers la puissance.

Une autre grande symphonie était inscrite au programme, la Ve de Prokofieff, où il ne nous semble pas que M. Mitropoulos ait mérité les reproches que nous lui faisions pour Brahms. Cela tient d'ailleurs à ce qu'il s'agit d'une musique plus simple. Elle traite — dit Prokofieff — de l'esprit de l'homme, mais ce n'est pas l'homme qui dit : « Etre ou ne pas être », — c'est un homme sans préoccupation métaphysique, un homme qui est dans la vie active et la vie collective. Pour être simple d'intention, la musique de Prokofieff n'en est pas moins subtile et riche de facture, c'est un modèle de maîtrise dans le discours et de maîtrise dans la technique. Il y a là une invention et une puissance qui sont d'un grand maître et la direction de M. Mitropoulos en a été prestigieuse, car il va sans dire que les quelques réserves que nous avons pu faire n'entament pas l'immense talent de ce grand conducteur.

Il y a en Amérique de grands orchestres et l'on y fait de la grande musique, mais il doit y régner un curieux esprit si l'on songe que ce beau concert — qui avait débuté par l'Ouverture du Freischütz, de Weber, s'est achevé par deux petits bis : une transcription d'une mélodie de Rachmaninoff et une pièce ultra-brillante de Kabalevsky. L'orchestre et son chef avaient bien assez prouvé et si le public a beaucoup applaudi, nous ne croyons pourtant pas qu'il aime ce genre de performance qui — pour nous — est venue tout à coup effacer tout ce qui avait précédé.

La reine Elisabeth a été applaudie à son arrivée et le concert s'est achevé par une réception bien sympathique, donnée par M. Philip De Sprouse, chargé d'affaires des Etats-Unis d'Amérique. — P.M.

BERLINER MORGENPOST

Die New Yorker Philharmoniker kamen gestern in Berlin an

ZUM ERSTENMAL nach acht Jahren landeten gestern auf dem Flughafen Tempelhof Maschinen der holländischen Fluggesellschaft KLM — mit Sondergenehmigung der Alliierten. In zwei Flugzeugen kamen 120 Mitglieder des New-Yorker Philharmonischen Orchesters, das gestern abend im Titania-Palast ein Konzert gab. Dirigent Dimitri Mitropoulos (Bildmitte) sagte bei der Begrüßung, daß dieser Besuch in Berlin für ihn fast ein Nach-Hause-Kommen bedeute, da er hier studiert habe. „Berlin war meine erste Liebe", meinte er.

New-Yorker Festwochen-Präludium

Drei Orchester rivalisieren in USA — so versichern Kenner des Landes — in vorderster Linie: das Bostoner, das Philadelphier und das New-Yorker Philharmonische Orchester. Die beiden ersten haben in Berlin bereits gastiert, die New-Yorker bilden jetzt mit ihren zwei Konzerten das Präludium zu den „Festwochen" (und die Berliner Zahlenlotterie hat durch ihre finanzielle Unterstützung das Gastspiel ermöglicht).

Das Programm ist eigenartig genug. Einem von Milhaud für Orchester bearbeiteten Prélude und Allegro von Couperin folgte die bei uns kaum aufgeführte Reformations-Symphonie von Mendelssohn, die mit ihrer Verarbeitung des Luther-Liedes „Ein' feste Burg" in die Nähe der Akademischen Festouvertüre von Brahms und der Vaterländischen Ouvertüre von Reger gehört. Von der empfindsamen Anmut, der elegischen Eleganz Mendelssohns ist weder im ersten Allegro, das an Wagners Holländer-Ouvertüre anklingt, noch in den folgenden Sätzen etwas zu merken, obwohl dieses Jugendwerk Mendelssohns nicht ohne einige genialische Blitze ist.

Die Symphonie gibt einem Orchester zu tun. Dimitri Mitropoulos, seit fünf Jahren Chef des Orchesters, an dessen Pult nahezu alle großen Dirigenten gestanden haben, holt aus der Symphonie und dem Orchester heraus, was nur eben aus einem in den Waffen äußerster Perfektion geradezu klirrenden Orchester herauszuholen ist. Mitropoulos geht auf den klanglichen Eklat, auf die furiose Entfesselung um jeden Preis aus. Seine dirigentischen Zeichen dienen nicht so sehr der Entwicklung der musikalischen Substanz, sie bilden oder formen nicht, sondern sie rütteln am Orchester und stoßen im jeweiligen Augenblick auf die Instrumentalgruppe nieder, die gerade am effektvollsten ins Treffen geführt werden kann, ohne vor groben Wirkungen haltzumachen.

In Prokofieffs schon bekannter 5. Symphonie, die mehr eine Ballettmusik als eine Symphonie ist, war es ähnlich. Mitropoulos scheut vor den schroffsten Kontrasten nicht zurück. Seine melodischen Linien sind nicht geformt, sondern geschleudert, und das Schlagwerk feiert Orgien.

Die Stimmung des Publikums, die durch die anstachelnde Art dieses uns ungewohnten Musikmachens sichtlich angeregt war, erreichte ihren Höhepunkt mit der Zugabe, einem Orchester-Furioso — niemand kannte es —, in dem das virtuose Können dieses Orchesters sich fast schon überschlug.

Audience in Brussels Cheers Mitropoulos and Symphony as Music Season Begins

Special to The New York Times.

BRUSSELS, Belgium, Sept. 14—The Philharmonic-Symphony Orchestra of New York scored a big success at the Palais des Beaux Arts here tonight in a brilliant opening of Brussels' music season.

The overture to "Der Freischutz" by Weber brought enthusiastic and prolonged applause. The other pieces, Brahms' Second Symphony and the Fifth Symphony of Prokofieff, brought even warmer bravos.

Some Belgian critics said that some portions of the Weber composition called for a more intimate interpretation than they received, but they gave unstinted praise for "an extraordinary performance by a very disciplined orchestra."

Queen Elisabeth of Belgium and members of the diplomatic corps were in the audience.

For the orchestra's conductor, Dimitri Mitropoulos, and for many other members the visit was a renewal of acquaintance with Brussels. The orchestra last performed here in 1930, when Arturo Toscanini was its conductor. In 1920 Mr. Mitropoulos was here to study, and in 1934 and 1935 he conducted here.

Brussels is the third city on the orchestra's European itinerary.

Dimitri Mitropoulos und seine amerikanischen Musiker in Berlin

Der Himmel Berlins zeigte ein graues Gesicht, als die „New-Yorker Philharmoniker" in Tempelhof ankamen, aber dafür strahlte Dimitri Mitropoulos, der Meisterdirigent von Weltruf, der „schönste Jugendjahre als Korrepetitor 1926 an der Staatsoper in dieser Stadt verlebte". Er entstammt einer Familie von geistlichen Würdenträgern und wollte selbst Mönch werden, aber die Musik hielt ihn in Bann. Als Pianist, Dirigent und Komponist wird er von dem musikfreudigen Publikum der ganzen Welt bewundert. Auf einer Europatournee dirigiert er die „New-Yorker" neunzehnmal, und zwischen Brüssel und London steht das Datum „Titania-Palast Berlin" zweimal im Programm. Die New-Yorker Philharmoniker sind das drittälteste Philharmonische Orchester der Welt und auf deutscher Tradition begründet. Alle großen Dirigenten, auch Bruno Walter, Otto Klemperer und Wilhelm Furtwängler, musizierten mit Dimitri Metropoulos, und nun begrüßt ihn und die amerikanischen Musiker Berlin als willkommene Gäste zu den Festspielwochen. Berliner Festwochen:

Stürmischer Dank

Deutsche Musik-Romantik amerikanisch

Wenn die Eindrücke des zweiten Konzertes, das die New-Yorker Philharmoniker in Berlin gaben, für die Hörer nachhaltiger und einheitlicher waren als die des ersten, so mag das zunächst am Programm gelegen haben. Webers märchenschöne „Freischütz"-Ouvertüre, Schumanns trotz gelegentlicher Dürre doch immer wieder herrlich aufblühende C-Dur-Symphonie und Brahms' naturnahe Zweite sind uns als kostbare Schöpfungen deutscher Musik-Romantik eng ans Herz gewachsen, und wir waren beglückt, sie einmal in einer technisch ganz vollkommenen Wiedergabe zu hören. Dann aber mag es auch sein, daß Orchester und Dirigent, nun schon mit dem Raume vertraut, sich mit der virtuosen Sicherheit ihres Spieles noch unbefangener entfalten konnten. Dieses Spiel zu rühmen, seine Genauigkeit, seinen Glanz, seinen unbeirrbaren Zusammenhalt zu beschreiben, ist nur mit Superlativen der Zustimmung möglich.

Mitropoulos muß mit seinen Künstlern unermüdlich geprobt haben, bis er das Ziel erreichte, jenen Zustand, bei dem der Dirigent nur noch zu steuern, nicht mehr zu rudern braucht. Man könnte Dutzende von Beispielen für die „Perfektion" der New-Yorker Musiker anführen. Zwei mögen genügen: die Einmütigkeit des aufstrebenden Geigenlaufs vor dem C-Dur-Fortissimotakt in der Coda der „Freischütz"-Ouvertüre und die atemraubende Streicherpassage im Scherzo der Schumannschen Symphonie.

Bei so viel virtuoser Vollkommenheit in den Leistungen der einzelnen Gruppen und im Zusammenspiel möchte man als Hörer gar nicht danach fragen, welcher Art die Beziehungen sind, die dieses Orchester und sein Dirigent zu dem haben, was hinter den Noten steht, wenn überhaupt, so wäre diese Frage am ehesten bei der wirkungsvoll vordergründigen, in eine glänzende Stretta mündende Aufführung der Brahmsschen Symphonie berechtigt, die bei uns mit dem unverlierbaren Erlebnis der Furtwänglerschen Deutung verknüpft ist.

Noch stürmischer als das erste Mal dankten die Hörer dem Dirigenten und seinem Orchester und empfingen als Gegengabe Verdis Ouvertüre zur „Macht des Schicksals" in einer großartig effektvollen Wiedergabe.

New-Yorker Philharmoniker: 2. Konzert

Das zweite Konzert der New-Yorker Philharmoniker hat den großen Erfolg des ausgezeichneten Orchesters und seines hinreißenden Dirigenten noch verstärkt. Wie am ersten Abend hat sich dieser Erfolg im Verlauf des Konzerts immer mehr gesteigert. Nach der fesselnden Novität des Konzerts, der zehnten Symphonie von Schostakowitsch, brauste der Beifall des begeisterten Wiener Publikums durch den Großen Konzerthaussaal, den niemand verlassen wollte, und nach der zweiten Zugabe — Kabalevskys rasanter Ouvertüre — wollte der Beifall gar nicht enden. Der Wunsch war allgemein, den Dirigenten des Konzerts, Dimitri Mitropoulos, wieder in Wien zu sehen, wo man eine solche geistige Intensität und eine solche fesselnde Dirigentenleistung gewiß dringend brauchen würde.

Nach einem stilvollen und pompösen Orchesterstück von Couperin, dem Darius Milhaud prunkvolle Orchesterfarben gegeben hatte, und der „Reformations-Symphonie" von Mendelssohn, die Mitropoulos aus der Mottenkiste herausnahm, um sie ins Licht des Tages zu hängen, war die neue Symphonie von Schostakowitsch das Hauptstück des Abends.

Mit diesem Werk ist Schostakowitsch nach seiner Neunten Symphonie, die heitere, brillante Musik gewesen ist — mehr ein Symphonie Scherzo, als eine Symphonie —, wieder zu dem schweren Freskostil seiner Siebenten und Achten Symphonie zurückgekehrt. Wie in einer Rhapsodie strömen in diesem Werk klagende, düstere, grelle Melodien frei dahin, Pathetisches wird von wilden Ausbrüchen gefolgt, die Orchesterfarben sind elementar, die Landschaft dieser Musik zerklüftet, die Farben fremdartig, das Ganze aber durch erlebtes Gefühl fesselnd und in der großartigen Aufführung der New-Yorker Philharmoniker und in der überlegenen und aufs äußerste gespannten Interpretation von Mitropoulos in jedem Moment aufregend und mitreißend.

Die Virtuosität des Orchesters und die Energie des Dirigenten haben sich hier in vollkommenster Art vereinigt. Orchester und Dirigent haben sich zur stärksten und lebendigsten Kunst zusammengeschlossen, die vom Wiener Publikum lebhaft empfunden und als großes Ereignis gefeiert worden ist.

Drei Wochen lang huldigt Berlin den Musen

Dieses Festival sollte das repräsentativste Europas sein – Vorschau auf das Programm

Berlin, 16. September

Wenn anderenorts die Festivalfahnen eingeholt, die Zugvögel der Kultur, die von geladenem Kunsttisch zu Kunsttisch in Europa reisten, schon längst wieder heimgekehrt sind, wenn Holland, Paris, Herford, Salzburg, Bayreuth, Besançon, Zürich, Wiesbaden, Wien, München, Wunsiedel und wie die, die Kunst strapazierenden Orte alle heißen, längst in den geregelten Alltagsbetrieb zurückgekehrt sind, dann kommt noch ein letzter Paukenschlag aus Berlin.

Berlin hat es schwerer. Die Stadt liegt abseits. In den goldenen Strom der Reisesüchtigen ist dieser Platz, trotz aller Anstrengungen, schwer einzubeziehen, wenn Edingburgh, die graue, feiernde Feste im Norden, beispielsweise, mühelos eine Viertelmillion Festivalbesucher aus tatsächlich aller Welt anziehen kann, so daß in der Stadt schiere dreißig Millionen Mark dabei kleben bleiben, so wissen die realistischen Schotten, warum sie feiern. Die Sache zahlt sich aus.

In Salzburg muß man zur Zeit des großen Jubilierens in der Getreidegasse in Fünferreihen antreten, um das Geburtshaus des göttlichen Mozart zu Gesicht zu bekommen. Auch da bringt Kunst Geschäft.

Berlin feiert, verglichen damit, idealistischer, abstrakter, einsamer, mehr um der eigenen Sache willen. Wenn hier die späten Fanfaren erklingen, ist die Zahl der freiwillig zugereisten, unsubventionierten Gäste zählbar. Diese Festwochen haben etwas Trotziges: Berlin will beweisen, daß Berlin — Berlin geblieben ist. Drei Wochen lang will man den alten, guten metropolistischen Zug an dieser Stelle wiederherstellen. Man will beweisen, daß man — trotz allem — noch da ist.

Und zweitens hatte dieses Festival, als man es vor fünf Jahren etablierte, sofort — wie eben alles hier — einen politischen Aspekt: 200 Kilometer hinter dem Eisernen Vorhang war man gesonnen, eine Dokumentation freier Kunstübung zu geben. An dieser Stelle eine möglichst bunte und attraktive Palette europäischer Darbietungen vorweisen, heißt, den benachbarten Menschen des Ostens, wo Kunst immer noch politische Programmusik ist, eine Hilfe, eine Attraktion, eine Hoffnung, vielleicht eine Tröstung geben. Berlins Festival darf nicht Kunst um der Kunst willen machen. Das unterscheidet diesen späten Auftrieb von allen anderen.

Das macht die Gestaltung des Programms auch schwieriger. Wenn ein Mensch sich aus Magdeburg, aus Brandenburg oder nur aus Ostberlin mit Opfern und Schwierigkeiten aufgemacht hat, muß er nachhaltig bedient werden. Künstlerische Pannen, anderswo leichter verzeihbar, schneller zu verwinden bleiben unter solchem Aspekt mißlich. Dieses Festival sollte das beste, das repräsentativste in Europa sein, läßt man sich auf das Wagnis schon einmal ein. Aber die Mittel und die Einnahmen sind hier rarer als an den anderen Jubelplätzen der Kunst. Der vitiose Zirkel macht den Veranstaltern seit fünf Jahren nicht geringe Kopfschmerzen.

Wie sieht das Programm der festlichen Tage vom 17. September bis zum 4. Oktober nun aus?

Gastspiele: An zwei Abenden zeigt die Mailänder Scala in der Oper Donizettis „Lucia di Lammermoor". Nach Holland, Österreich und der Schweiz beginnt das Shakespeare-Memorial-Theatre hier sein deutsches Gastspiel mit „King Lear" und „Much ado about nothing" („Viel Lärm um nichts"). Aus Paris bringt das Théâtre de l'atelier einen Anouilh. Ballettomanen lechzen schon jetzt nach den Darbietungen singhalesischer Tempeltänzer, die angezeigt sind.

Die Oper wartet mit einer Neuinszenierung des Verdischen „Othello" auf. Tatjana Gsovsky bereitet einen großen Ballettabend mit Tschaikowskijs „Dornröschen" vor. Webers „Oberon" wird nach langer Zeit in neuer Darstellung zu sehen sein. Dallapiccolas „Gefangener" kommt in den Konzertsaal der Musikhochschule.

Die beiden städtischen Bühnen bieten je zwei Premieren. Das Schillertheater: Schillers „Don Carlos" unter Sellner, Zuckmayers „Kaltes Licht" unter Barlog. Das Schloßparktheater: den „Silbersee" von Georg Kaiser und Kurt Weill und „Von Mensch zu Mensch", die Uraufführung einer „idealmaterialistischen Komödie" von Rawlings Stuart Jones. Da führt Rudolf Noelte Regie.

Das Haus der Freien Volksbühne wird Max Frischs „Chinesische Mauer" in der vom Autor überarbeiteten Fassung unter Professor Schuh erstaufführen. Im Hebbeltheater werden drei Autoren, denen Flüchtlings-Einakter in Auftrag gegeben waren, ihre Arbeiten vorzeigen: Joachim Tettenborn, Karla Höcker und Heinz Oskar Wuttig.

Die beiden Boulevardtheater, „Komödie" und Renaissancetheater warten mit zwei Premieren auf: hier wird man Maughams „Victoria" sehen, dort Curt Goetz in seiner Neubearbeitung des unverwüstlichen „Raubs der Sabinerinnen". Die „Tribüne", einst Geburtsstätte des Berliner Theaterexpressionismus, macht „christliches Theater" mit einer Hausmann-Uraufführung: „Der Fischbecker Wandteppich", mit Calderons „Leben ist Traum", mit Maulniers „Prozeß der Jeanne d'Arc" und einer Leserreihe christlicher Dramatik.

In den Konzertsälen sollen die New Yorker mit den Berliner Philharmonikern und dem RIAS-Symphonie-Orchester in klingenden Wettstreit treten. Mitropoulos, Karajan, Stiedry, Fricsay und Jochum dirigieren. Eine Reihe von Veranstaltungen wird sich mit dem „deutschen Osten" befassen. „Das Berliner Kulturgespräch" ist anberaumt.

Wie das Ganze am Ende klingen wird, bleibt abzuwarten. Die Attraktionen sind zum Teil im Vorgeschmack lecker, zu anderen bleibt ein einheitliches Thema, bleibt eigentlich ein Berliner Grundgedanke bei der zu erwartenden Anstrengung auch diesmal abwesend.

Aber wir wollen nicht vorgreifen. Diese Stadt rüstet sich, mit ihren besten Kräften und vielen, die sie von draußen angelockt hat, drei Wochen den Musen laut zu huldigen. In Berlin sind die Festwochen so etwas wie ein erweiterter Saisonbeginn geworden: Man soll wünschen daß der breite Aufklang der Spielzeit Echo findet und weiterklingt.

Virtuosen aus Übersee

Der erste Berliner Abend mit den New-Yorker Philharmonikern

Altestes amerikanisches Berufsorchester, haben sich die New-Yorker Philharmoniker, die seit 1928 mit den New-Yorker Sinfonikern vereinigt sind, zu einem Klangkörper von Weltruf entwickelt, und ihr Besuch in Berlin, der durch die finanzielle Hilfe der Berliner Zahlenlotterie ermöglicht wurde, bewies, daß dieser Ruf gerechtfertigt ist. Fast alle großen Dirigenten der Welt haben vor diesem Orchester, das übrigens schon einmal, nämlich 1930, in Berlin musizierte, gestanden, und seit 1950 leitet es der in Amerika heimisch gewordene 59jährige Dimitri Mitropoulos, ein Vollblutmusiker, der sich immer wieder auch für das zeitgenössische Schaffen einsetzt.

Zu uns kamen die New-Yorker mit einem vorwiegend rückschauenden Programm. Den ersten Abend eröffnete ein von Milhaud orchestriertes, in reichen, vielfach geteilten Streicherklang gebettetes Präludium und Allegro aus einer „La Sultane" betitelten Sonate von Couperin, ein Stück, das vor allem durch seine anmutige, edle Melodik fesselt. Mendelssohns Reformations-Symphonie, ein Neben- und Gelegenheitswerk des Komponisten, das 1832 in der Berliner Singakademie erklang, vermag uns selbst ein Orchester vom Rang der New-Yorker Philharmoniker nicht mehr ganz schmackhaft zu machen. Wir horchen wohl auf, wenn hier das „Dresdener Amen" erklingt, das Wagner später als Gralmotiv in seinem „Parsifal" verwendete, wir glauben in den einzelnen Sätzen die Kämpfe der Reformationszeit zu erkennen, die schließlich zum siegreichen Choral „Ein feste Burg ist unser Gott" führen, aber Mendelssohns romantischer Klassizismus hat keine Macht mehr über uns. Diese Musik ist nicht mehr lebensfähig.

Von hier bis zu Serge Prokofieffs kraftstrotzender, russisch unbekümmerter V. Symphonie ist ein weiter Weg. Der Komponist schuf sie 1944, also zehn Jahre nach seiner reumütigen Rückkehr in die russische Heimat, und man spürt, wie er sich in diesem Werke, das er für eines seiner bedeutendsten hält, bemüht, volkstümlich und „realistisch" zu musizieren. Vom üblichen symphonischen Schema weicht er ab und beginnt mit einem Andante. Dabei bevorzugt er überall breit ausladende, monologisierende Melodik, die sich einige Male tragisch aufbäumt. In den schnellen Sätzen, dem zweiten und vierten, herrscht ein grotesk buntes Treiben, das schließlich in einen Schlagzeugtumult mündet. Grell und raffiniert werden dabei die Orchesterfarben gegeneinandergesetzt.

Dimitri Mitropoulos erinnert in seiner nervigen, schüttelnden Art, zu dirigieren, von fern her an Furtwängler. Sein ganzer Körper scheint von den Wellen der Musik erfaßt zu sein. Hier offenbart sich ein ganz besonderes Pult-Virtuosentum, das nichts mehr mit pedantischer Taktschlägerei zu tun hat. Der Dirigent weiß den Nerv der Musik bloßzulegen. Er holt aus den einzelnen Gruppen den größten Effekt, er modelliert den Vortrag aufs feinste, und sein Orchester, prachtvoll erzogen, folgt in einem oft zauberhaften, nie auseinanderfallenden Rubato. Es ist eine Hundertschaft von erlesenen Virtuosen, die hier den Werken dient. Zu rühmen vor allem die Streicher, deren geschmeidiges, zuchtvolles Spiel Bewunderung erheischt. Der Eindruck der Bläser ist weniger günstig. Hier stört eine (durch die schwierige Akustik des Saales und vielleicht auch durch eine ungünstige Sitzordnung der Spieler bedingte) allzu grelle Tongebung des Bleches, der gegenüber die Holzbläser nicht recht zur Geltung kommen. Auch beim Zusammenklang des Orchesters blieben gelegentlich Wünsche offen. Vielleicht, daß es dem Dirigenten mehr auf die Einzelwirkung als auf die symphonische Zusammenschau ankommt.

Die Hörer spendeten von Anfang an sehr freundlichen Beifall und huldigten am Schluß den Künstlern so stürmisch, daß sich Mitropoulos zu einer Zugabe verstehen mußte. Das war ein scherzoartiges Stück von Kabalewski, eine geistreich bunt zusammengewebte Musik, die noch einmal den verschiedenen Gruppen des Orchesters Gelegenheit gab, virtuoses Können zu zeigen.

Ovationen für New Yorks Philharmoniker

Erstes Konzert unter Dimitri Mitropoulos im „Titania-Palast"

Es war ein guter Klang, mit dem die Berliner Festwochen angespielt wurden: im „Titania-Palast" gab am Donnerstag das berühmte New-Yorker Philharmonische Orchester unter seinem Dirigenten Mitropoulos das erste seiner beiden Berliner Konzerte. Fast überflüssig zu erwähnen, daß Parkett und Rang bis auf den letzten Platz von einem erwartungsvollen Publikum besetzt waren. Sehr herzlich wurden die amerikanischen Gäste begrüßt, Mitropoulos vor allem, der Berlin durch seine Studienjahre bei Petri und Busoni und durch erste aufsehenerregende Erfolge als Dirigent und Pianist verbunden ist.

Mit den beiden Nationalhymnen, der deutschen und der amerikanischen, die das Orchester stehen spielte, nahm das Konzert seinen Anfang. Zunächst Prélude und Allegro „La Sultane" von Couperin in einer Bearbeitung von Milhaud. Man ist fast betroffen von dem sanften Streicherklang, der mit den ersten Takten des Prélude aufblüht.

Interessant ist die Art, wie Mitropoulos dirigiert. Erinnert er schon in der Statur ein wenig an Furtwängler, so findet man auch in der Art der Kopfbewegungen, der Dirigiergesten, der weich-formenden linken Hand manche Parallele. Es erweist sich indes bald, daß hinter dieser äußeren Aehnlichkeit ein ganz anders gearteter Ausdruckswille liegt. Mitropoulos stellt starke Kontraste gegeneinander und steigert bis zu stärkster Klangmassierung ohne Rücksicht auf die akustischen Verhältnisse des Saales.

Fast eine „Novitat" war die Aufführung der D-dur-Sinfonie Nr. 5 op. 107 von Mendelssohn, die einige Jahrzehnte in Berlin nicht gespielt worden ist. Das Werk trägt den Untertitel „Reformationssinfonie", sein Kernstück ist der kunstvoll verarbeitete Choral „Ein feste Burg ist unser Gott". Die Sinfonie gehört zweifellos nicht zu den wesentlichsten Kompositionen Mendelssohns. Darüber konnte auch die blendende Wiedergabe nicht hinwegtäuschen. Am meisten in ihrem Element schienen sich Orchester und Dirigent in der Sinfonie Nr. 5 B-dur op. 100 von Prokofieff zu fühlen. Ein spätes Stück, das Prokofieff nach seiner Rückkehr in die russische Heimat und im Einklang mit den Forderungen der kulturpolitischen Instanzen geschrieben hat. Lediglich der tänzerisch beschwingte zweite Satz erinnert noch an den ehemaligen Avantgardisten. Die übrigen drei Sätze bleiben bewußt einfach, sind klar im Aufbau, aber raffiniert instrumentiert. Hier konnte das Orchester zeigen, was „drin" ist. Die Präzision ist nicht zu übertreffen. Blech und Hölzer bestechen durch Sicherheit und Klangschönheit, und der Elan, der unter Mitropoulos entfaltet wird, reißt das Publikum zu langen Beifallsstürmen hin, so daß mit einem Bravourstück von Kabalewsky noch ein virtuoser Trumpf draufgesetzt werden muß.

Ein Orchester von hohem Rang

Die ersten Festspielgäste: New Yorks Philharmoniker — Konzert im Titania-Palast

Das erste Konzert der New-Yorker Philharmoniker, die sich nach den noch in lebhafter Erinnerung stehenden Gastspielen der Bostoner und der Philadelphia-Sinfoniker im Titania-Palast vorstellten, spannte die Aufmerksamkeit der Hörer in dreifacher Hinsicht. Es galt, die Besonderheiten dieses Klangkörpers aufzuspüren, die Persönlichkeit des Dirigenten zu würdigen und die Struktur der Kompositionen zu erfassen; denn das Programm dieses Abends brachte keine Werke, die uns aus unserem Repertoire geläufig sind.

Daß man in dem New-Yorker Orchester Musiker von hohem Rang vereinigt fand, die auf ihren Instrumenten letzte technische Perfektion erreichen, war eine Erwartung, die nicht enttäuscht wurde. Dieser Klangkörper steht in seiner 114. Spielzeit; es war, wie das Programmheft registrierte, das 5452. Konzert, das wir hörten. Einem Orchester, das auf eine so lange Geschichte zurückblicken und seine Mitglieder aus einem großen Kreis starker Begabungen auswählen kann, fällt es nicht schwer, Leistungen von besonderer Qualität zu bieten. Seinen eigenen Stil herauszuhören, ist allerdings schwer, wenn man es nur unter einem einzigen Dirigenten hört. Nach dem Abend im Titania-Palast läßt sich nur sagen, wie es die Intentionen seines ständigen Dirigenten Dimitri Mitropoulos verwirklicht.

Dieser aus Griechenland stammende Orchesterleiter, desen Entwicklung entscheidend von dem reichen Musikleben Berlins in den Jahren nach dem ersten Weltkrieg mitgeprägt worden ist, zeigte sich als eine Herrschernatur, der den Musikern seinen Willen unerbittlich aufzwingt. Er bevorzugt den satten, durchbluteten Klang; sein Musizieren ist kräftig, lapidar und impulsiv, bisweilen sogar herb. Musikalische Formen sind ihm nicht in sich ruhende Gebilde, sondern Ausdruck emotionaler Kräfte. Das Schwelgen im Schönklang, das Auskosten subtiler ästhetischer Reize liegt ihm fern. Dementsprechend verlangt er dem Orchester nur selten ein wirkliches Pianissimo ab, wohl aber verwirklicht er an den Höhepunkten, die er, den Taktstock in die Linke nehmend, bisweilen mit geballter Faust dirigiert, ein grandioses Klangmaximum, das dank der Spielkultur seiner Instrumentalisten niemals roh wirkt.

Nach den vom Orchester stehend gespielten Nationalhymnen leitete ein von Milhaud mit klanglichen Glanzlichtern bereichertes „Präludium und Allegro" von Louis Couperin das Konzert ein. Es folgte die bei uns nur als Gelegenheitswerk gewertete, kaum noch aufgeführte Reformations-Sinfonie von Mendelssohn, für die der Luther-Choral „Ein feste Burg" wichtiges thematisches Material abgibt.

Nach der Pause erklang Prokofieffs Fünfte Sinfonie. Der russische Komponist will in ihr keine Tiefen aufreißen; er blendet in seine Partitur gefällige Modernismen ein; im ganzen gelangt er kaum zu einer so wesentlichen Aussage, wie man sie von einer Sinfonie erwartet. Es spricht für die dirigentischen Eigenschaften von Mitripoulus, daß er seine Hörer dennoch stark fesselte.

Das Berliner Publikum feierte das Orchester und seinen Leiter mit langen, herzlichen Ovationen und erhielt als Zugabe ein Effektstück von Kabalewsky.

Musik der Romantik

2. Konzert der New-Yorker Philharmoniker

Der zweite Abend der New-Yorker Philharmoniker im Titania-Palast brachte Werke der deutschen Romantik. Auch diesmal unterließ es Dimitri Mitropoulos nicht, eine im allgemeinen nicht sonderlich hoch eingeschätzte Komposition zu berücksichtigen, die C-Dur-Sinfonie (Nr. 2) von Schumann, und wieder wußte die vitale Interpretationskunst des griechisch-amerikanischen Dirigenten die Aufmerksamkeit der Hörer zu fesseln.

Bei den beiden anderen Werken des Abends bestanden Möglichkeiten zum Vergleich mit vielen Darbietungen. Daß in der „Freischütz"-Ouvertüre von Weber die Magie des romantischen Klanges im ersten Teil nicht ganz so erreicht wurde, wie wir sie empfinden, ist erklärlich; um so mitreißender gelang der Aufschwung im letzten Teil.

Eine in jeder Hinsicht gültige, in die Tiefe dringende, sorgsam nuancierte und die Einzelheiten kraftvoll und großzügig zusammenfassende Wiedergabe vermochten Mitropoulos und sein Orchester von der zweiten Sinfonie von Brahms zu bieten. Mit ihr lieferte der Dirigent, dessen unkonventionelle Gestik sich mehr an dem inneren Kraftstrom der Musik orientiert als an den äußeren Gegebenheiten des Partiturbildes, den Beweis, daß er zu den großen Meistern des Taktstocks gehört; hier konnten sich auch die Vorzüge des Orchesters noch einmal auf das schönste bewähren: die unvergleichliche Präzision des Zusammenspiels, die genaue Abstimmung des Klangbildes, der Elan, mit dem alle Musiker bei der Sache waren, führten zu einer Intensität des Musizierens, die die Hörer bis zum letzten Akkord in ihren Bann zwang.

Als Zugabe brachte Mitropoulos die Ouvertüre zu Verdis Oper „Die Macht des Schicksals"; er gab damit einen Begriff von seinen Fähigkeiten als Operndirigent. Faszinierender, aufrüttelnder, dramatischer kann dieses Werk nicht dargeboten werden. Das Publikum dankte in einmütiger Begeisterung mit langem Beifall.

Romantiker: amerikanisch

Abschied von den New Yorker Philharmonikern

0.20 Uhr, knapp zwei Stunden nach Konzertschluß im Titania-Palast, startete bereits das erste Flugzeug in Tempelhof, um die Instrumente des New Yorker Symphony-Orchesters nach Paris zu bringen. Am heutigen Morgen flogen die Orchestermitglieder dem Ziel ihres nächsten Konzertes zu. Beim Empfang nach dem Konzert sah man sie schon im Reiseanzug.

Zum Abschied hatten sie Werke der deutschen musikalischen Romantik gespielt. Sie waren samt und sonders von einem grellen, kalten Licht angestrahlt. Ohne Wärme des Herzens und des Klanges. „Lieben kann dich nur der Deutsche", rief Wagner einst dem toten Weber nach. Auf solche Liebe der „Freischütz"-Ouvertüre gegenüber mußte man verzichten. Auch auf die Poesie in Schumanns 2. Symphonie (C-dur) und auf die gewinnende Wärme in der 2. Symphonie von Brahms. Alles war sauber trainiert und mit glänzender Bravour exekutiert. Aber der Klang blieb stählern kalt, die Weite des mystischen Hintergrundes wollte sich nicht öffnen.

Mitropoulus hatte sich dabei den gedrängteren Raumverhältnissen des Titania-Palastes erkennbar angepaßt. Er dämpfte das schwere Blech und das Schlagzeug nach Möglichkeit. Dennoch blieb es bei verwegenen Tempoverschiebungen und dynamischen Übersteigerungen.

Reich war der Beifall. Er galt der routinierten Orchesterleitung und dem leidenschaftlichen künstlerischen Einsatz des Dirigenten. Als Dank für die Ovationen gab es zum Schluß noch eine stark dramatisch akzentuierte Aufführung zu „Die Macht des Schicksals" von Verdi.

Amerikas Furtwängler dirigierte

Gastspiel der New-Yorker Philharmoniker

Noch vor dem Beginn der diesjährigen „Berliner Festwochen" erlebten wir den Besuch des Philharmonischen Orchesters aus New York und damit einen Höhepunkt der festlichen Tage, der kaum übertroffen werden kann. Es war eine Art Gegenbesuch, denn im Frühjahr waren unsere Berliner Philharmoniker in New York zu Gast gewesen. Die Philharmoniker aus New York bilden mit denen aus Boston und Philadelphia die Spitzengruppe der drei besten Orchester Amerikas.

Diesen hohen Ruf fanden wir bei ihrem hiesigen Gastspiel bestätigt. Die Präzision ihres Spiels ist beispiellos. Nichts mißlingt, weil nichts dem Zufall des Augenblicks überlassen bleibt, und immer wird ein Maximum an schönem und vollem Klang erreicht. Ihre Streicher und Holzbläser erfüllen auch unsere höchsten Wünsche, während wir bei Hörnern und Blech von anderen Klangvorstellungen ausgehen. Im ganzen gibt es nur Worte der Bewunderung für dieses hervorragende Orchester. Dimitri Mitropoulos, ein gebürtiger Grieche, ist jetzt sein Chefdirigent und leitete auch die beiden Berliner Konzerte im Titania-Palast. Von ihm geht eine tiefe Erregung aus. Das Fortissimo kann nicht laut genug, das Zeitmaß nicht schnell genug sein. Er ist also ein Freund der Superlative. Wenigstens schien es so am ersten Abend, als er moderne Musik dirigierte. Erwarb er sich damit unsere Achtung, so unsere Liebe am zweiten Abend, als er Schumann und Brahms musizierte. Hier wurde verständlich, daß er jenseits des großen Wassers gelegentlich als der amerikanische Furtwängler bezeichnet wird. Daß er diese für uns teuere Erinnerung, im langsamen Satz der Schumann-Symphonie etwa, zu erwecken vermochte, ist das Schönste und Höchste, was wir über ihn sagen können.

1800 IN BERLIN APPLAUD NEW YORK PHLIHARMONIC

BERLIN, Sept. 16 (AP)—The ew York Philharmonic orchestra scored a triumph last night at its first Berlin concert since 1930. A sell-out audience of 1800 gave the orchestra and conductor Dimitri Mitropoulos a standing ovation.

He opened the concert with a rousing rendition of "Deutschlan Lied," more commonly known as "Deutschland ueber Alles," followed by "The Star Spangled Banner."

The main items on the program were the Fifth Symphonies of Mendelssohn and Prokofieff. Mendelssohn's melodic symphony was the better received.

Amerikaner mit deutscher Musik

Noch einmal die New-Yorker Philharmoniker im „Titania-Palast"

Das zweite Konzert der New-Yorker Philharmoniker im „Titania-Palast" war ausschließlich deutscher Musik gewidmet. Musizieren sie Weber, Schumann und Brahms anders als wir?

Natürlich reißt schon allein die technische Perfektion, mit der auch deutsche Sinfonik angegangen wird, zur Bewunderung hin. Das ist alles makellos im Klang und in der Präzision. Daß sich gleichwohl nicht der Eindruck des reinen virtuosen Effekts, den wir gewiß nicht unterschätzen wollen, in den Vordergrund drängt, dafür garantiert ein so impulsiver Dirigent wie Dimitri Mitropoulos, ein Mann der herrscherlichen Geste, vitaler Energie und eines überlegenen, geistig bestimmten Willens. Musik erlebt er als Kettenreaktion emotionaler Explosionen, und noch die Idylle eines Schumannschen oder Brahmsschen Adagios wird mit Energien aufgeladen, die selbst dem lieblichsten und innigsten musikalischen Panorama heroische Aspekte verleihen. Kein Wunder, daß die Freischütz-Ouvertüre zu einem spannungsreichen Drama wird: dem Aufmarsch dynamischer und rhythmischer Kontraste, und das Orchester aus lauter Virtuosen ist wendig genug, mit dem ekstatischen Temperament des Dirigenten im raschen Ansprung von Höhepunkten Schritt zu halten.

Erstaunlich übrigens auch, welche instrumentale Farbigkeit dieser Klangkörper Schumanns Zweiter Sinfonie, die sonst nicht gerade als orchestrales Paradestück gilt, entlockt. Die andere „Zweite", das Meisterwerk von Brahms, wird geradezu zum Lebenselixier, ein heller, kraftvoller, ermutigender Hymnus auf die Natur.

Ein gebanntes und elektrisiertes Publikum dankt immer wieder mit donnerndem Applaus für diese ungemein virtuose und künstlerisch mit außergewöhnlicher Ausdruckskraft legitim erregende musikalische Bekundung deutsch-amerikanischer Freundschaft am Vorabend der Berliner Festwochen. LM

Berlin bejubelt Mitropoulos

Meisterdirigent mit Spitzenorchester: New Yorks Philharmonie

Berlin, 18. September

Rund um den lichterstrahlenden Titaniapalast in der Steglitzer City stauen sich die Limousinen. Die weißen Verkehrspolizisten arbeiten aus Leibeskräften, dem Ansturm zu gebieten. Berlins bestes, neugierigstes, elegantestes Publikum bestaunt die Fülle der Globetrotter und Festspiel-Habitués, die auch dabeisein wollen. Noch haben eigentlich die Festwochen nicht angefangen, aber ihr Auftakt wird schwer zu überbieten sein.

Gegenbesuch aus New York. Im Winter waren die Berliner Philharmoniker mit Herbert von Karajan drüben. Jetzt empfängt Berlin die Philharmonic-Symphony Society of New York, das älteste Orchester der USA und eines der ältesten der Welt. Im Kriegswinter 1942 konnten die 103 Musiker mit den italienischen, deutschen, jüdischen, französischen, russischen, englischen und ungarischen Namen ihr hundertjähriges Bestehen feiern. Damals erschien eine ganze Gastparade von Dirigenten am Pult. Denn wer von den großen Kapellmeistern hätte es sich nicht zur Ehre angerechnet, vor dieser Elitemannschaft zu stehen? Die Reihe geht auf Anton Seidl, Walter Damrosch und Gustav Mahler zurück. Willem Mengelberg und Richard Strauß, Wilhelm Furtwängler und Arturo Toscanini waren dabei, und seit vielen Jahren macht Bruno Walter mit dem Orchester seine New Yorker Beethoven-Zyklen.

Unter Toscanini hat Berlin die Philharmonic-Symphony zum erstenmal erlebt. Es war im Mai 1930 bei den Kunstwochen. Der Eindruck ihres unvergleichlich präzisen, klanglich polierten Musizierens in der „Eroica" und in „Tod und Verklärung" und der tausendfältigen Differenzierung von Klangfarben in Debussys „La mer" wirkte damals als etwas völlig Unerhörtes. Man bestaunte ihn wie ein Wunder aus fernen Welten. Aber man kritisierte ihn auch. Es wurde von „Luxuskunst" gesprochen, von unheimlicher Kühle und Seelenlosigkeit.

Heute sind wir mit Klangphänomenen dieser Art vertrauter. Die Schallplatte hat sie uns nahegebracht; in den letzten Jahren waren die Symphoniker aus Boston und Philadelphia bei uns, und in Deutschland selbst sind nach 1945 einige Orchester entstanden, die im Klang diesen transatlantischen Präzisionsmannschaften nacheifern: die Rundfunkorchester in Hamburg, Baden-Baden und Berlin (RIAS).

Virtuosenleistung des einzelnen

Die New Yorker sind eine Synthese aus dem alten Typus, der auf Integration und dem neuen, der auf Perfektion bedacht ist. Die mechanische Vollendung des einzelnen Spielers ist Voraussetzung; ein Oboensolo tritt als Virtuosenleistung hervor, ein Klarinettenlauf fährt wie eine Rakete durch den Raum, das Forte der Trompeten, das Piano der Hörner ist makellos in sich. Aber das manuelle Können ist nur Rohstoff. Die Besonderheit gerade dieses Orchesters liegt in der absoluten Verschmelzung der Elemente. Das zeigt sich nicht nur in den Einzelgruppen, etwa im Einsatz einer Geigenkantilene, die von den 16 Pulten wie von einem einzigen Mann gespielt wird, sondern auch in den Übergängen. Kein Orchester, die Bostoner ausgenommen, ist zu solcher Kontrastierung der Klangfarben fähig; keines, die Philadelphia-Symphony ausgenommen, hat diesen Grad des Aufgehens in einem Krescendo oder Diminuendo erreicht.

Virgil Thomson, der Kritiker der New York Herald-Tribune, beklagte einmal, daß die Dirigenten dieses Orchesters zu häufig gewechselt haben und rügt den Konservativismus ihrer Programme, in denen moderne Werke seit Toscanini keinen Platz mehr fänden.

Seit 1951 Dimitri Mitropoulos an ihrer Spitze steht, hat sich beides geändert. Das Orchester hat sich zwar aus der Arbeit mit hundert Kapellmeister-Temperamenten die erstaunliche Anpassungsfähigkeit bewahrt, die es mit den Berliner und Wiener Philharmonikern teilt. Aber es ist obendrein Mitropoulos eigenes Instrument geworden.

Wunder an Temperament

Mitropoulos, Grieche, Jahrgang 1896, hat entscheidende Lehrjahre in Berlin verbracht. Er kam aus Brüssel zu Ferruccio Busoni, um sich den letzten Schliff als Pianist zu holen. Er korrepetierte jahrelang an der Staatsoper, bevor er sich ganz dem Taktstock verschrieb. Ein Wunder an Temperament, an Gedächtnis, an fakirhafter Konzentration auf das Wesentliche, machte er von Athen aus den Sprung nach Amerika. Boston, Minneapolis und New York sind die Stationen. 43jährig dirigiert er 14 Gastspiele mit dem New Yorker Orchester. Seither steht er drüben in der ersten Reihe.

Seine Berliner Programme sind kühn. Das erste, weil es nur aus wenig bekannten Dingen besteht; das zweite, weil es drei typische Werke einer Romantik bringt, die hierzulande als alleinige Domäne deutscher Dirigierkunst gilt. Und in beiden Aufgaben bewährt sich die Leistung Mitropoulos' so glanzvoll wie die des Orchesters. Als ich 1951 die Fünfte Symphonie Sergej Prokofieffs in Edinburgh von ihnen hörte, schien sie ein Mittel, einen neuen Darstellungsstil zu demonstrieren. Mitropoulos arbeitete auf heftige Kontraste; dem Fortissimo und Pianissimo opferte er dynamische Mittelwerte. Man spürt den fanatischen Willen, sich diesem Apparat völlig zu unterwerfen. Es war ein kämpferisches Dirigieren, bei dem der unerbittliche Wille des Mannes am Pult siegte.

Heute ist daraus ein gemeinsames Musizieren von hoher Vollendung geworden. Das Orchester ist Mitropoulos' Orchester, hat seinen Stil, sein Temperament übernommen. Mitropoulos verzichtet oft streckenweise ganz auf Taktgebung; die Hände modellieren den Klang, reißen plötzlich eine Phrase ab, zaubern ein Crescendo hervor. Seine Gestik hat manches von Furtwängler übernommen, ist aber von wohltuender Sparsamkeit und Ebenmäßigkeit.

Als sinfonische Gestaltung ragten aus den Programmen Mendelssohns Reformationssymphonie und die Zweite von Brahms hervor. Jene, in Deutschland zu Unrecht mißachtet und vergessen, wirkte wie eine Entdeckung. Diese erklang mit einer Intensität und Vielfarbigkeit des Klangs, wie man sie seit Furtwängler kaum gehört hat.

Schade, daß der triumphale Beifall an beiden Abenden durch Zugaben von Opernstücken quittiert wurde: Dimitri Kabalewskys „Cola Breugnon"- und Verdis „Forza-del-Destino"-Ouvertüre. Die Konzerte, denen auch der amerikanische Botschafter James B. Conant beiwohnte, waren musikalisch die bedeutendste Leistung, die Amerika nach dem Kriege zu uns herübergeschickt hat.

Erbe einer Generation

Philharmonic Symphonic Orchestra und Mailänder Scala in Berlin

Berlin, im Herbst

Die Berliner Festwochen, deren künstlerische Leistungen sonst eher gleichmäßig auf Oper, Schauspiel, Tanz und Konzert verteilt waren, gediehen in diesem Jahre etwas einseitig, aber nichtsdestoweniger eindrucksvoll vornehmlich zu Musikfestspielen. Im Konzertsaal und auf der Opernbühne fanden die wesentlichen, über Tag und Ort hinaus wirkenden Darbietungen statt; schon die Erneuerung von Georg Kaisers etwas abgestandener, kaum noch treffsicherer Sozialkritik („Silbersee") profitierte von der Musik. Ohne Kurt Weills aufreizend-aggressive Songs wäre das heute kaum noch „angekommen".

So konzentrierte sich schließlich das Interesse des kritischen Beobachters vor allem auf zwei bedeutsame Gastspiele. Zunächst erschien Dimitri Mitropoulos mit dem hochberühmten New York Philharmonic Symphonic Orchestra. Und da nun war ein, wie sich zeigte, arges Vorurteil zu überwinden, das die mit den Jahren grau und eitel gewordene musikkritische Zunft Europas mit sich schleppte: das Vorurteil von der „nur" präzisen, fast zirzensisch gedrillten Orchesterkunst der Amerikaner. Wir waren gewohnt, die musizierenden Amerikaner mit einer wohlwollenden Herablassung zu strafen; wir staunten zwar über die fast maschinelle Exaktheit ihres Spiels, über die perfektionierte Virtuosität der Solisten und Orchester, aber wir beruhigten uns bei dem Gedanken, daß ihnen die feineren Zwischentöne, die kaum wahrnehmbaren Nuancierungen unserer Orchester nicht geläufig seien; für die moderne, von Klang und Rhythmik lebende Musik schienen sie uns vortrefflich geeignet, das klassisch-romantische Erbe hingegen, so glaubten wir, ließe sich ohne das intuitive, nach innen gewandte Musizieren etwa der Wiener oder Berliner Philharmoniker nicht voll ausschöpfen.

Mit einem Weber-Schumann-Brahms-Abend haben Mitropoulos und die New Yorker diese Auffassung widerlegt; sie mochte für die kritische Einschätzung des Bostoner und Philadelphia Symphonie-Orchesters gerade noch ausreichen — die New Yorker sind damit nicht zu fassen; sie erwiesen sich gerade in der Wiedergabe der romantischen Werke als Meister eines nicht nur technisch makellosen, sondern gleichermaßen die verborgenen, unwägbaren Geheimnisse entschleiernden Musizierens. Da waren die himmelstürmenden, jäh aufglühenden Ekstasen und die sanft verschwebenden, kaum wahrnehmbaren Übergänge, die wir sonst nur von Furtwängler in gleicher Intensität gehört haben.

Diese Überraschung ist wohl nicht zuletzt Verdienst des Dirigenten Dimitri Mitropoulos, der von Furtwängler nicht nur die schüttelnd-unpräzisen Bewegungen, sondern auch die inwendig brennende Leidenschaft, die geistige Überlegenheit besitzt; spätestens nach dem ersten Satz der (bei uns so grob vernachlässigten) II. Schumann-Sinfonie wußte man, daß hier der eigentliche Nachfolger und Erbe einer Dirigentengeneration gefunden war, die man mit Furtwängler dahingeschieden glaubte. Es mag gerade für Berlin und die Berliner ein etwas melancholisch-schmerzliches Erlebnis gewesen sein, die Siegelbewahrer eines reinen, romantischen Orchesterspiels, so, wie man es hier etwas einseitig gepflegt und geehrt hat, jenseits des Ozeans zu entdecken; gleichwohl wird dieses Faktum künftig nicht mehr ignoriert werden können, es zählt und wirkt, mag es uns gefallen oder nicht.

Das andere, große künstlerische Erlebnis der Festwochen war das Gastspiel der Mailänder Scala — es war das erste seit etwa zwanzig Jahren in Deutschland. Auch an diesem Abend war manches Vorurteil zu revidieren, auch diese Aufführung zwang zur Überprüfung unzulänglich gewordener Maßstäbe.

Die Oper, hundertmal totgesagt und in jedem Jahr als der Krise erlegen gemeldet, triumphierte überwältigend; und zwar ausgerechnet mit Donizettis „Lucia". Dergleichen wird hierzulande nicht hoch eingeschätzt; man hält es für abgenutzt, überwunden, weil man dem Rausch der klaren, südlichen Melodie mißtraut, weil man die eherne Rhythmik der Chöre und die simple Orchesterführung für banal und wertlos hält. Wer so dachte, sah sich einer höchst unangebrachten, snobistischen Hochnäsigkeit überführt. Die Italiener demonstrierten die Gültigkeit dieser zwar primitiven, aber gleichwohl genial konzipierten Oper, die hier für eine ganze Stilepoche Zeugnis gab: für die große Gesangsoper Bellinis und Donizettis, für die romanische Musikromantik, die bei uns so stiefmütterlich am Rande der landesüblichen Opernrepertoires liegen gelassen wird.

Was die Italiener freilich an Stimmen mitgebracht hatten, entzieht sich der Beschreibung durch das Wort; diesen schmelzenden, schwellenden Glanz der Tenöre, die halsbrecherischen Koloraturen eines im Grund dramatischen Soprans muß man hören, charakterisieren kann man sie nicht. Alle Darsteller, vor allem aber die Primadonna Menneghini-Callas und der Tenor di Stefano zeigten zudem ein rasantes, elementares Spieltemperament; wer sieht, mit welch vitaler Leidenschaft hier Theater gespielt und gesungen wird, lernt verstehen, daß es für die Italienische Oper ein Regie-Problem in unserem Sinne einfach nicht gibt; Herbert von Karajan, der nicht nur zu den ersten Dirigenten der Scala gehört, sondern auch selbst Regie führt, konnte sich deshalb guten Gewissens auf szenische Andeutungen beschränken; das Wesentliche gaben die Darsteller selbst und offenbar von sich aus.

Der Beifall der Berliner nahm südliche Ausmaße an. Die Leute schrien, trampelten und warfen Blumen. Es war eine glanzvolle Bestätigung für die ungebrochene Lebenskraft der guten, alten Oper. G. G.

Souveräne Orchesterkunst

Erstes Gastspiel der New Yorker Philharmoniker im Titania-Palast

Nach den Symphonieorchestern aus Boston und Philadelphia kam nun das dritte der bedeutenden amerikanischen Orchester nach Berlin: das New Yorker Philharmonische Orchester. Es ist das älteste der drei und das älteste Berufsorchester Amerikas überhaupt, es ist noch unmittelbar aus der das Musikleben umschichtenden Bewegung hervorgegangen, die die Beethovensche Symphonie hervorrief; denn die endgültige Trennung von Liebhabern und Berufsmusikern, von Publikum und Podium, die Entwicklung der Interpretationskunst und der Orchestervirtuosität vollzogen sich in Europa wie in Amerika unter dem Anspruch der Beethovenschen Partituren, die ein erhöhtes Maß von Expression und Technik verlangten und Mittler und Aufnehmende wie die Partner eines Glaubensritus einander gegenüberstellten.

Es ist daher anzunehmen, daß die New Yorker Philharmoniker, die länger als ein Jahrhundert unter vielen Dirigenten höchsten Ranges gespielt und dabei doch durch die Kraft eines eingeborenen demokratischen Geistes ihre kollektive Eigenart ausgebildet und bewahrt haben, den amerikanischen Orchesterstil in seiner ursprünglichen und klassischen Form verkörpern. Wirklich trifft, das ist der erste Eindruck des Konzertes im Titania-Palast, auf sie das Schlagwort von der technischen Perfektion zu, durch das wir uns nun einmal das Musizieren jenseits des Ozeans zu charakterisieren gewöhnt haben. Die Streicher, unter denen neben den Violinen die herrlichen Violoncelli hervortreten, spielen mit ruhigem, schwebendem, von Ausdrucksakzenten unbelastetem Ton, die Holzbläser verschmelzen zu einer Einheit des Wohlklangs, die Blechbläser leisten Außerordentliches an Artikulation, Tonfärbung und Charakterisierung. Die eigentlichen Virtuosen aber sitzen am Schlagzeug; was Pauken und Trommeln, Becken und Xylophon an prasselnder und peitschender rhythmischer Energie, an schneidender Präzision und unheimlich dröhnender Elementarkraft hergeben, übersteigt jede Vorstellung. Das alles wird mit einer Souveränität geboten, die ihm den Anschein des Selbstverständlichen gibt und die im Hörer den Eindruck unbeteiligter Kühle hervorufen könnte. Aber diese Selbstverständlichkeit besagt nur, daß das Technische eben nur Voraussetzung ist. Denn oberhalb dieser Ebene beginnt die subtilere Leistung des Orchesters: das Musizieren, das mit derselben Souveränität, zwanglos, ohne Aufwand drastischer Ausdrucksmittel, aus einer wiederum fast mechanisch sicher wirkenden Gemeinschaftsfunktion besorgt wird.

Und: über dem Orchester steht ein Dirigent, der dieses vollkommene Instrument nicht nur als Instrument zu spielen, sondern als lebendigen, vibrierenden Organismus bis in seine letzten Fasern zu erregen, anzutreiben, außer sich zu bringen weiß. Dimitri Mitropoulos ist ein Musiker, in dem sich Geistesklarheit mit ekstatischem Temperament, fanatische Präzision mit der Glut eines heißen Herzens verbinden. Hager, asketischen Aussehens, auf gewinnende Eleganz des Auftretens verzichtend, wirkt er unmittelbar und augenblicklich durch die fast aggressive Gewalt seiner Persönlichkeit. Souveränität: zum drittenmal, nun zur Charakterisierung des Dirigenten, muß das Wort gebraucht werden. Es bezeichnet nicht nur sein Wesen, sondern auch seine Technik. Nur bei Wilhelm Furtwängler gab es diese Lockerheit der deutenden und weisenden Hände, diese schwingende Beweglichkeit des Körpers, diese Fähigkeit der minimalen Andeutung, diese provozierende Schlagkraft der Gesten; und wie bei jenem, ist das alles nicht eitles Schauspielertum, sondern bewußte, höchst verfeinerte Zeichensprache eines künstlerischen Willens von fast religiösem Ernst. Wenn nach dem Tode Furtwänglers und dem Rücktritt Toscaninis die Frage nach dem bedeutendsten Dirigenten neu zu stellen ist: neben Dimitri Mitropoulos werden nur ganz wenige Namen zur Diskussion gestellt werden können.

Daß diese Eindrücke an einem Programm demonstriert wurden, das kein einziges der üblichen, dankbaren Hauptwerke der Symphonik enthielt, war das Erstaunlichste des Abends. Milhauds Couperin-Bearbeitung „La Sultane", ein festliches Präludium, stellte die Gruppen der Streicher und Bläser klanggesättigt einander gegenüber. Mendelssohns Reformations-Symphonie, die mit der Choralfuge über das Lutherlied den Klang der alten protestantischen Kantorenkunst beschwören will und mit Anklängen auf Händel zurück- und, seltsamerweise, auf Wagners „Parsifal" vorausweist, erfuhr geradezu eine Auferstehung. Es erwies sich, daß auch ein weniger gewichtiges Meisterwerk den Aufwand einer höchstintensiven Wiedergabe lohnt, daß es durch eine solche Wiedergabe wesentliche Bedeutung gewinnt. Prokofieffs 1944 komponierte fünfte Symphonie, Dokument seines breit ausladenden, zum Massiven neigenden Spätstils birgt wenigstens in ihrem ersten und zweiten Satz genug Erfindung und elementare Kraft, dem Orchester und dem Dirigenten Möglichkeit zur Entfaltung äußerster Wirkungen zu bieten. Nur die Zugabe, ein von hämmerndem Schlagzeug getriebenes Effektstück des Russen Kabalewski, gehörte nach unseren Begriffen nicht in den Bereich des ernsten Konzertes. Ueber das zweite Konzert des Orchesters, das der deutschen romantischen Musik gewidmet war, wird weiter zu berichten sein. Werner Oehlmann

Das neue Bild der Romantik

Zweites Gastspiel der New Yorker Philharmoniker im Titania-Palast

Weber, Schumann, Brahms — drei Namen, die für den Begriff Romantik stehen. Der „Freischütz": das Raunen des dunklen Waldes, in dessen Hornpoesie die dämonischen, dumpfen Synkopen wie Schicksalsschläge fallen; die schon dem Schatten unheilvoll-tragischer Krankheit abgewonnene, beinahe etwas aufgesetzt wirkende, helle C-dur-Ritterlichkeit der zweiten Symphonie Schumanns, die eigentlich seine dritte und so ganz ein Kind schweifenden Eichendorffschen Geistes ist, und schließlich die D-dur-Symphonie von Brahms, darin die ausgreifende romantische Leidenschaft wie in sich zurückgenommen und in das klassizistische symphonische Gefäß gegossen erscheint, dessen Rundungen nicht mehr die großgeschwungenen Themen und Linien, sondern das sanfte Auf und Ab des kleinen Sekundenschrittes zeichnen diese drei Werke einer der spezifischsten Epochen deutschen Wesens, welche Zeichen würden sie annehmen unter den Händen eines Dirigenten, der auf klassischem Boden geboren, in Deutschland erzogen, aber in Amerika Wahlbürger wurde, und eines Orchesters von kosmopolitischer Struktur, das Gepflogenheit und Routine auf das Hochplateau äußerster technischer Vollkommenheit trieb?

Das zweite Konzert der New Yorker Philharmoniker unter Dimitri Mitropoulos im ausverkauften Titania-Palast, wie das erste durch die Unterstützung der Berliner Zahlenlotterie ermöglicht, gab Antwort auf diese Frage, die sich schon vor Monaten, bei der Bekanntgabe des Programms, aufgedrängt hatte. Eine Antwort von zukunftsträchtiger Bedeutung. Eine Antwort, an deren Anfang wieder einmal die (für viele wehmütige) Erkenntnis stand, daß mit Furtwängler der letzte Repräsentant eines romantischen Musizierens aus seelischer Gleichgestimmtheit, aus Intuition, aus „nationaler" — im großen, kulturgeschichtlichen Sinne — Wesensähnlichkeit unwiderruflich dahin ist. Die Werke aber sind da. Und wie sie uns fortan zu vermitteln sind, unter den Gegebenheiten einer Zeit, der das Finden einer neuen Anordnung der Werte Ratio, Individuum, Genie, Masse und Schöpfertum auferlegt ist, dafür war diese Wiedergabe der amerikanischen Gäste ein Beispiel. Es war, wie nicht anders zu erwarten, kein weiches, kein gefühliges, kein gemütvolles Bild der Romantik, wie es Schwind gemalt hat. Aber die Freischütz-Ouvertüre — wiewohl etwas zu unvermittelt „angesprungen", und die Hörner waren auch noch nicht ganz warm — hatte etwas von den kernigen Farben, den unabdingbaren Konturen eines Caspar David Friedrich, und der Schlußjubel hatte das echte Brio einer festlichen Opernöffnung, freilich dafür nicht die beglückte Seligkeit Agathes. Schumanns Symphonie gipfelte im Scherzo, bei dem die stupende Präzision des Spieles (Sonderlob für die zweiten Geigen), der inneren Fahrigkeit des Satzes auf wirklich „unheimliche" Weise entsprach, und in dem Adagio, dessen Espressivo eine Schmerzlichkeit von beklemmender Schlankheit und Unsinnlichkeit füllte.

Bei Brahms, dem das „Röntgenohr" Mitropoulos', die Neigung zu genauester Durchleuchtung des Stimmengewebes, zur Hervorhebung scheinbar nebensächlicher Phrasen außerordentlich zugute kommt, weil sie wirklich den Eindruck jener „herbstlichen Gespinste", die sich für unsere Vorstellung mit dem Stück verbinden, erweckt, stimmte alles: die Symphonie hatte die unablässige Spannung und doch alle Ruhe der Besinnlichkeit, sie hatte den großen inneren Glanz, die stille Heiterkeit des Allegrettos und den zu kühner Kehrausstimmung emporgesteigerten Schluß. Ein Brahms, ohne jede Sentimentalität, aber auch fern von jedem nur auf konzertante Perfektion gestellten virtuosen Snobismus. Ein Brahms ohne das Signum der Dekadenz des alternden Europa, der was seine Substanz betrifft, auf die Probe gestellt wurde in dem Feuer internationaler Orchesterartistik und internationaler Ansprüche — und siehe, er bestand. Der Beifall war stürmisch und wurde von den Gästen beantwortet mit der Zugabe der Ouvertüre zu Verdis „Macht des Schicksals", dargeboten mit dem unfehlbaren amerikanischen Können aus den Wurzeln alter italienischer Opernherrlichkeit.

Wir nehmen diesen Abschiedsgruß als den Beginn einer neuen Interpretationsära. Elisabeth Mahlke

Les mécomptes de l'obéissance

LA détente soumet l'hebdomadaire communiste, Les Lettres françaises, à des exercices de gymnastique, évidemment incommodes lorsqu'on a vécu de longues années dans la rigidité des mots d'ordre.

Tout arrive et le contraire de tout : c'est en effet un orchestre américain (« il peut sembler paradoxal que... ») qui a créé à Paris la X^e Symphonie de Chostakovitch — c'est l'orchestre philharmonique de New-York et son chef Dimitri Mitropoulos, le même ensemble qui, l'autre lundi, en une journée mémorable de travail, enregistrait dans les studios de Philips, avec Robert Casadessus au piano, la plus extraordinaire interprétation du Concerto n° 5 « l'Empereur » de Beethoven.

Ce n'est pas tout pour le malheur de nos communistes : ils n'ont pas reconnu dans la X^e Symphonie de Chostakovitch cette musique proprement du régime — inspirée par ses objectifs économiques et la férule du camarade Jdanov... Ce chef-d'œuvre (Paris lui a fait un succès triomphal et. Dimitri Mitropoulos parti, on peut juger de l'œuvre par l'enregistrement qu'a sorti cette semaine Philips) est étonnant : de la musique humaine, de l'angoisse intérieure, des conflits du cœur, du doute, du romantisme et pourtant, au finale, l'explosion de l'espérance.

Où est Jdanov ou ses commandements que Les Lettres françaises imprimaient comme un catéchisme ? C'est un jour faste pour nous de voir le grand artiste russe rejoindre le destin de l'art universel.

Orchestra Stirs Enthusiasm; Opera by Menotti Presented

By Rudolf Klein

Vienna

Americans have aroused a good deal of sympathetic interest through their cultural activities in Austria. Although their first offerings of the season were in no way connected with the impending withdrawal of the occupation forces, many Austrians nevertheless see in them a symbol of close contact between the Old World and the New, and a good omen as well.

The New York Philharmonic Symphony Orchestra, conducted by Dimitri Mitropoulos, was the occasion of such contact, and it stirred great enthusiasm in the Vienna Konzerthaus. It brought a program which was not one of those guaranteed in advance to win success. On the first evening, along with a Verdi overture and a work by Brahms, it offered a Schumann symphony which is almost never performed. On the second evening there was the seldom heard "Reformation" symphony by Mendelssohn, and Shostakovitch's Tenth Symphony. Yet the Viennese public was at once in rapport with the works and with the interpretation.

Similarity in Sound

The reason may be that the sound of this orchestra is much like that of our own groups. The Philadelphia Orchestra, which played here in the early summer under Ormandy's baton, notwithstanding its precision, its musicality, and its beauty of tone, perforce remained somewhat alien to us; for in its dark reverberations it was far removed from our methods. But the New York Philharmonic-Symphony met our taste and our love for bright, luminous, and well blended color. This is no comment on the objective value of color and timbre; it merely indicates the similarity of taste and viewpoint between our audiences and those in New York.

The similarity was apparent also in the way in which Mitropoulos presented romantic music. To be sure, not everything which he urged and effected met with our approval. Particularly in the Second Symphony, by Brahms, there was many a detail which diverged widely from Viennese tradition. Still, the way in which tension and élan were sustained, the continual variation of tempo and dynamics, the avoidance of mechanical rhythm, the singing phrases—all this and more corresponded so closely to our own ideals that the artistic kinship alone would have meant success.

Different Qualities

In addition, there were qualities which are not always evident in our orchestras. There was manifest a verve, a dramatic impetus, all too uncommon; a certain virtuoso expressiveness, too, and a grandezza, which in the interpretation of Spanish music (as an encore they played a piece by Falla), is both necessary and rare. Finally, the Philharmonic-Symphony men exhibited a joy in playing which seemed to laugh at the fatigue of a long tour.

In a comparison with the Viennese Philharmonic, the latter would perhaps have in its favor a more homogeneous structure in its sound pattern, and a loftier sound in its woodwinds and brass. One would call the New York orchestra the more brilliant, the more powerful, as well as the younger.

The second event of the season was the first performance of Gian-Carlo Menotti's "The Saint of Blecker Street." With this work the first independent season of the Vienna Volksoper opened. Up to now, this house, together with other theaters has served as a refuge for the ensemble of the Staatsoper, but inasmuch as the Stammhaus is shortly to be opened, it will return to its own direction and its own type of program.

LES NOUVELLES LI-

Musiciens américains à Paris

LES deux concerts du Philharmonic Symphony Orchestra de New York avaient de quoi piquer nos curiosités : l'orchestre, le plus ancien des U.S.A. (il est le résultat de la fusion de la Philharmonie, fondée en 1842, et du New York Symphony Orchestra), a vu se succéder à sa tête des maitres de réputation mondiale, qui l'ont amené à ce point de perfection auquel accèdent cinq ou six grandes formations entre lesquelles on serait bien embarrassé pour fixer une hiérarchie. Les chefs étaient Mitropoulos et Cantelli, l'un depuis longtemps consacré, l'autre presque au début d'une carrière à laquelle le patronage de Toscanini apportait une irrécusable caution.

Effectivement, Cantelli est un chef. Il a de l'autorité, un brio, un bras droit d'une précision sans défaut, ce qui rend plus acceptable le maniérisme d'une main gauche sans cesse en représentation : on la souhaiterait moins ostentatoire dans la simplette ouverture du Siège de Corinthe, de Rossini, qu'un tel orchestre jouerait sans bavures, moyennant une battue de mesure au départ, et deux ou trois indications en cours de route, pour accélérer ou ralentir. Au contraire, les très réelles qualités de Guido Cantelli ont eu leur plein effet dans l'Adagio pour cordes, de Samuel Barber, et surtout dans Les Tableaux d'une exposition, de Moussorgsky, rendus avec une vie, un éclat, une variété de coloris incomparables. Après la géniale transcription de Ravel, je m'explique mal celle qu'on nous a offerte, en bis, d'une page qui n'appelle pas spécialement l'orchestre, le fameux largo de Haendel, alias l'air Ombra mai fu, de l'opéra Xerxès : le répertoire symphonique n'est pas à tel point épuisé ! Le succès de la soirée a néanmoins été brillant.

Et pourtant, Mitropoulos, qui avait conduit la veille, rendait la partie difficile. Il est passé, jadis, par le stade que traverse aujourd'hui son jeune émule. C'est lui qui avait mis à la mode la direction sans baguette, dont il tirait grand parti, mais qui incline à tant de minauderies (tout ce que les médiocres en ont retenu). Or il a repris la baguette, et sa technique actuelle est une merveille de force et de sensibilité contenues, je dirais presque antispectaculaires, seul comptant le rendement musical.

Après l'ouverture du Freischütz et une rayonnante exécution du V^e Concerto de Beethoven (où Robert Casadesus joint à sa perfection classique de toujours une chaleur humaine nouvelle), il a dirigé la X^e Symphonie de Chostakovitch. L'œuvre est intéressante. C'est de la « musique à programme », avec ce que le genre comporte de libertés pour le compositeur et de sources de perplexité pour l'auditeur non prévenu, et même pour celui qui ne possède pas le détail de l'action ou du conflit sentimental représenté au cours des divers mouvements de la partition.

La donnée que Chostakovitch a traitée musicalement (ce qui lui eût été interdit il y a quelques années), c'est l'inquiétude de l'homme face à son destin, aux forces mauvaises qui s'opposent à son libre développement, aux contradictions de sa propre pensée. Les péripéties du drame psychologique expliquent des particularités de construction et d'orchestration savoureuses, mais insolites, et une certaine disparate dans les matériaux et le style où, parmi des filiations russes qui vont de soi, se font jour des tournures curieusement brahmsiennes.

Telle quelle, cette symphonie est pleine de musique, et Mitropoulos l'anime d'une vie intense. Il a obtenu un véritable triomphe, et a remercié son public en donnant, en bis, l'ouverture de Colas Breugnon, de Kabalevsky, une page de virtuosité orchestrale assez extérieure (proche parente des inspirations de Katchatourian), mais d'un dynamisme irrésistible.

Le disque de la semaine

Un très beau disque, en même temps qu'une prouesse d'enregistrement : en un temps record, profitant de la présence simultanée à Paris de Mitropoulos du N.Y. Philharmonic Symphony et de Robert Casadesus, la société Philips a édité le V^e Concerto de Beethoven exécuté au concert du 18 septembre (A.01.215 L).

LA MUSIQUE par René DUMESNIL

Le chœur mormon du Tabernacle
L'Orchestre philharmonique de New-York
D. Mitropoulos - Robert Casadesus
Chostakovitch

Un chœur de trois cent soixante-quinze voix, possédant un répertoire qui semble intarissable — le nombre des bis, généreusement accordés en fin de séance à un public si chaleureux qu'il paraissait décidé ne plus quitter la salle de Chaillot, le ître à l'évidence — et puis, ce qui pte avant tout, des qualités de musica- de souplesse, une discipline, une sûreté taque exemplaires, une direction remarble en la personne de M. J. Spencer mwall, voilà — et peut-être oublié-je elque chose — ce qui fit la conquête de elque trois mille auditeurs, ce qui épuise s épithètes laudatives et ôte au critique goût de faire quelques réserves, pourtant nécessaires. On doit regretter en effet que le programme n'ait point laissé part plus large aux grands classiques du chant choral et que l'accompagnement au piano, si discret fût-il, est quand même... indiscret pour des chœurs qu'on souhaiterait entendre a cappella. Ce sont les seules réflexions qui ne soient point un éloge pour ce chœur. Nul chevrotement, rien qui trouble la pureté des parties, et puis des pianissimi veloutés, murmure léger, transparent, et cependant nourri, comme si cette force contenue s'employait à rendre plus moelleuse la douceur ; ou, lorsque la musique l'exige, de grandes explosions ; ou encore les montées en crescendo grossissant par degrés insensibles et d'une puissance qu'on aurait dite sans limite, comme l'étendue des voix de soprani aussi justes et pleines dans l'aigu que dans le médium... Cela s'est manifesté dans le Bach, le Hændel et mieux encore dans une sorte de « spiritual » de R. Nathaniel Dett : Listen to the lambs, dans le cantique Glorious everlasting... Et l'on a applaudi miss Ewan Harbrecht, soprano soliste, qui chanta des airs de Hændel et de Beethoven d'une voix souple et joliment timbrée. Enfin M. Frank W. Asper joua le Choral en la mineur de Franck, hommage délicat dont l'intention fut parfois gâtée par les difficultés d'un instrument qu'il parut aborder sans avoir pu en connaître les particularités.

Le concert donné aux Champs-Elysées par l'Orchestre philharmonique de New-York nous a valu des satisfactions plus complètes, et d'abord la joie de revoir son chef Dimitri Mitropoulos tel que nous l'avons connu au pupitre de l'Orchestre Symphonique de Paris. Je garde souvenir d'une Tragédie de Salomé, en février 1932, si j'ai mémoire, qui nous montra un des chefs les meilleurs qu'on pût jamais connaître. C'est lui que nous avons retrouvé sans que ces vingt ans passés l'aient changé le moins du monde : c'est bien le même feu, le même pouvoir sur la troupe instrumentale, la même clarté sans sécheresse, les mêmes gestes sobres et précis. Positivement, Dimitri Mitropoulos semble « tenir dans ses mains » la centaine d'exécutants groupés devant lui sur la scène. Il l'a montré dans son interprétation de l'ouverture du Freischütz, dans la manière dont il accompagna le Concerto en mi bémol, opus 73, de Beethoven, dont la partie de soliste était confiée à Robert Casadesus ; dans la Dixième Symphonie de Chostakovitch, sur laquelle je reviendrai après avoir rendu justice à Robert Casadesus. Il ne semble pas possible d'interpréter aussi parfaitement ce concerto fameux en montrant toutes ses richesses, sans pourtant en faire étalage, mais au contraire avec cette simplicité, cette justesse de proportions, cette aisance qui donnent à chacune d'elles son exacte valeur. Il y a chez Robert Casadesus une puissance qui paraît sans limite et qu'l'instant d'après, se mue en douceur d'une délicatesse merveilleuse. Quel artiste ! Parmi les triomphes dont il est coutumier, l'ovation qui le salua dimanche doit rester dans son souvenir comme elle demeurera dans le nôtre.

La Dixième Symphonie (en mi mineur, opus 93) de Chostakovitch est la plus récente et probablement la meilleure qu'on lui doive, tant par la variété de son plan que par la qualité de l'orchestration. Peut-être aurait-elle gagné — comme quelques-unes de ses devancières — à être resserrée : la concision n'est pas la qualité dominante du musicien, qui depuis la mort de Prokofiev apparaît comme le chef de l'école russe. Chacun obéit à son tempérament, et il est vain de regretter — légèrement d'ailleurs — la prolixité de Chostakovitch, puisque, aussi bien, c'est un peu se plaindre d'une abondance de richesses : elles sont amplement distribuées au long des quatre mouvements de cette Dixième Symphonie. Le moderato par lequel elle débute est à lui seul un ouvrage important. On y suit les développements d'un thème interrogateur, exposé sourdement, et contre lequel se heurteront, non sans grand fracas, à de certains moments, deux autres motifs, l'un lyrique, le second rythmique, sur un temps de valse. Vers le second tiers de ce moderato, un crescendo d'une violence tragique se déchaîne, s'apaise, renaît, s'enfle encore et finalement s'éteint. L'effet est saisissant et le compositeur sait employer pour l'atteindre toutes les ressources de l'instrumentation, maniées de main de maître. Le scherzo (allegro) représente, dit la notice « le tourbillon des forces mauvaises contre lesquelles doit lutter l'homme d'aujourd'hui ». Il est ponctué de roulements de tambour — personne n'a jamais mieux que Chostakovitch, fait intervenir la caisse claire unie aux timbales — et l'on perçoit, ici et là, interrompant le déroulement des thèmes, ces espèces de ricanements sardoniques dont le compositeur aime émailler son discours. Un divertissement suit ; puis l'allegretto fait revenir le thème du premier mouvement, suivi d'un épisode confié au cor, et qui est un des passages les plus réussis de l'ouvrage. Le finale d'abord andante, va s'achever par une ronde dont le rythme se précipite et dont la sonorité s'enfle. On songe à la Grande Pâque russe, portée à la dixième puissance. Faut-il ajouter que l'orchestre en a donné une exécution si merveilleuse qu'il lui fallut accorder un bis. Ce fut — ai-je cru — l'ouverture du Colas Breugnon de Kabalevski, et ce fut un nouveau triomphe.

L'ORCHESTRE PHILHARMONIQUE DE NEW YORK

A force d'entendre de beaux orchestres, on en arrive à ne plus les distinguer. Disons donc de celui-ci qu'il est incomparable pour nous épargner la peine de le comparer ! Vraiment, il est superbe, d'une sonorité pleine et généreuse, techniquement parfaite, de la petite flûte à la contrebasse. Comment font ces orchestres voyageurs pour être toujours frais et dispos dès leur descente d'avion ?

Le soliste était Robert Casadesus. On peut interpréter différemment le V^e Concerto de Beethoven, mais non pas le mieux jouer, avec des sentiments mozartiens, qui retirent à l'œuvre un peu de sa puissance, mais lui ajoutent en grave.

Dimitri Mitropoulos appartient, on le sait, à la catégorie des chefs étincelants, frémissants, dont on ne comprend pas toujours que les orchestres puissent leur obéir avec tant de précision. Tout est aussi bien réglé en coulisses que sur la scène ; cela marche à merveille. En tout cas, le résultat est remarquable. Gros succès.

La X^e Symphonie de Chostakovitch est longue et inégale, avec de très bons moments de débauche rythmique et orchestrale. Dans son ensemble, je ne crois pas qu'elle marque un style ou une époque.

New York Symphony In Paris

Does Première Of Shostakovich

By Edmund J. Pendleton

Last night's rendezvous of the musical and social élite of Paris with New York's Philharmonic Orchestra in the Champs-Elysées Theater created a brilliant preseasonal event rare in the month of September. Elegant vesture, jewels against suit-tanned complexions—but still more striking, the quiet attention, the gleam in the eyes, the praise on the lips and the warmth of applauding hands which transformed the theater into a temple filled with worshipers.

Worshiping whom? What? Dmitri Mitropoulos? No, I think he would be angry if I called him an idol or a hero. Robert Casadesus? No, nor he. The orchestra? Not even. Whom, then. . . the Presence, and the Greeks had a name for it: Euterpe. And Mitropoulos, the prophet, will not allow us to forget our humanities.

Open With Weber

No virtuose, he. Prophet, with all the flesh and blood and brain and nerve and muscle and bone and fire with which to perform the sacred ceremony, with the aid of a hundred acolytes at his command. Prophet, re-creating the Presence and inviting us to commune with him.

The offering began with Weber's Overture to the Freischutz. With amazing string playing and woodwind commentaries, the spirit of this favorite old overture came vividly to life.

There followed Beethoven's Piano Concerto No. 5, performed with a unity of feeling and a perfection of which only a poet and a prophet would be capable.

For the first time in Paris, Shostakovich's Symphony No. 10 was then played. The opening movement, creating a gray, somber atmosphere, charged with emotion, expressed in the low strings, which Mitropoulos modeled with infinite delicacy, breaks out into an explosive conflict between the two themes and then subsides, sad, almost morbid, but beautiful.

The Scherzo is a thrilling whirlwind, effectively short, which runs up the spine. An Allegretto, major-minor in tone, is melodic and dance-like. The symphony ends with a bright, rapid movement filled with virtuoso passages for the various sections of the orchestra.

PHILHARMONIC WINS AN OVATION IN PARIS

Special to The New York Times.

PARIS, Sept. 18—Demonstrative French music lovers at the Theatre des Champs-Elysees tonight enthusiastically acclaimed the New York Philharmonic-Symphony Orchestra's first concert here in twenty-five years.

Led by its regular conductor, Dimitri Mitropoulos, the orchestra gave its new-found admirers some standard fare in the form of the Beethoven "Emperor" Concerto, then went on to what has become its specialty, Shostakovitch's new Tenth Symphony.

The concerto, sure-fire at any time, had extra insurance in the person of the noted French pianist, Robert Casadesus, as soloist. After intermission, a brilliant performance of the Shostakovich work was acclaimed by a full house that included United States Ambassador and Mrs. C. Douglas Dillon, former Premier and Mme. Paul Reynaud and leaders in the artistic, diplomatic, and social world here.

Mr. Mitropoulos took six bows and then yielded to an insisting audience by playing an encore, Kabalevsky's "Colas Breugnon" overture.

The last time the orchestra played here was in 1930, when Arturo Toscanini led it at the Opera House. Mr. Mitropoulos' last appearance in Paris was in 1934, when he conducted the old Staram Orchestra.

Avec une œuvre soviétique, l'Orchestre philharmonique de New-York a inauguré hier la saison musicale d'automne

L'ORCHESTRE philharmonique de New-York, dirigé par Dimitri Mitropoulos, a inauguré, hier soir, au Théâtre des Champs-Elysées, la saison musicale d'automne avec la première audition en Europe occidentale d'une œuvre soviétique : la « X^e Symphonie » de Chostakovitch.

Après le V^e Concerto de Beethoven, interprété par Robert Casadesus, Dimitri Mitropoulos détailla pour les Parisiens cette symphonie de Chostakovitch dont il avait donné la primeur aux New-Yorkais au début de l'année. De cette œuvre aux vastes proportions interprétée avec tant d'intelligence, Mitropoulos a fait ressortir plus l'aspect brillant que l'angoisse qui marque avant tout l'ouvrage. Chef exceptionnel, l'un des plus grands de ce temps, son autorité, sa fougue subjuguent l'orchestre aussi bien que le public. La salle, de Paul Reynaud à Arthur Rubinstein, lui fit une telle ovation qu'on dut bisser.

N.Y. Philharmonic Triumphs in Paris

Paris, Sept. 19 (Reuters)—The New York Philharmonic Orchestra received a triumphant reception Sunday night when it gave the first of two concerts at the Champs Elysees theatre here.

Prolonged applause followed its renderings of Weber's Freischutz Overture, Beethoven's Emperor Concerto and Shostakovitch's 10th Symphony. In the concerto, French pianist Robert Casadesus shared the applause with the orchestra, conducted by Dimitri Mitropoulos.

U. S. Ambassador Douglas Dillon and Mrs. Dillon, French ex-Premier Paul Reynaud and Mme. Reynaud, the Duke and Duchess of Noiallies and pianist Arthur Rubinstein were in the audience.

LA MUSIQUE, par Claude Rostand

L'Orchestre philharmonique de New York

avec Mitropoulos et Cantelli

PARIS, qui possède deux ou trois des meilleures orchestres du monde, est sans doute l'une des villes qui accueille le plus souvent et le plus chaleureusement les orchestres étrangers. A cela, on ne met pas toujours tout le discernement que l'on devrait, mais cette curiosité enthousiaste du public parisien est fort sympathique et permet de constater que tout de même, ici, on échappe à certaines routines.

Grâce au disque, l'Orchestre philharmonique de New York est une vieille connaissance, mais cette vieille connaissance ne nous honore pas souvent de sa visite. Aussi, bien que la saison musicale ne soit pas encore ouverte et que le public ne soit pas encore rassemblé, est-ce une foule nombreuse qui est allée écouter cette illustre phalange lors des deux concerts qu'elle donnait au théâtre des Champs-Elysées.

Avec les orchestres de Boston et de Philadelphie, entendus au cours de ces dernières saisons, les Etats-Unis nous envoyaient sans doute des ensembles de grand luxe et rodés à un entraînement instrumental prodigieux ; mais je ne crois pas qu'ils nous aient jamais envoyé un orchestre aussi profondément musicien. Un ensemble symphonique est, certes, ce qu'en fait son chef (et on le constatera ici une fois de plus, l'Orchestre philharmonique de New York nous ayant été présenté cette fois sous deux baguettes différentes), mais il possède cependant une personnalité, une physionomie souvent assez caractéristiques. Et ce qui m'a frappé au cours de ces deux concerts, c'est que si la perfection du détail instrumental n'est pas toujours absolue, si le caractère de virtuosité est moins éclatant, l'accent musical est plus fort, plus authentique, l'intonation expressive est moins mécanique et plus humaine, c'est plus l'esprit que la lettre qu'il semble s'efforcer de traduire dans ses exécutions. Cela devait précisément apparaître en dépit des différences de personnalité et de culture des deux chefs en question.

Dimitri Mitropoulos est, lui aussi, une vieille connaissance pour les Parisiens : aux environs de 1930, il avait dirigé un concert de l'O.S.P. au cours duquel il avait notamment conduit le 2e concerto de Brahms en en interprétant lui-même la partie de piano ; c'était là une erreur à l'égard de laquelle le public avait manifesté une sévérité très excessive, mais qui nous permettait de faire connaissance avec un tempérament musical d'une rare grandeur. Et j'avais toujours regretté depuis, que Mitropoulos ne reparût plus sur nos estrades. Il revient aujourd'hui, auréolé de sa carrière américaine, en pleine maturité, toujours aussi splendidement musicien, toujours aussi essentiellement antivirtuose. Dès les premières mesures, il s'impose comme l'un des rares artistes qui, après un aussi long séjour en Amérique, ne s'y est pas gâté.

Tout cela il l'a prouvé par la manière prestigieuse dont il a dirigé l'œuvre qui constituait le principal point d'intérêt de son programme : la première audition en France de la 10e symphonie de Chostakovitch. Je ne m'attarderai pas à parler de cette œuvre très décevante dans laquelle un musicien cependant suprêmement habile tel que Chostakovitch se laisse aller (d'abondance, hélas !) aux séduisantes facilités d'un jeu instrumental éblouissant, certes, mais formel, banal, gratuit, et surtout complètement creux. Exercice d'orchestre bien propre à mettre en valeur les qualités d'un ensemble symphonique, c'est là beaucoup de bruit pour rien : musique bien faite et faiblement pensée. On navigue entre des développements formels d'un académisme rassuré et rassurant (on sait toujours ce qui va arriver), et des suggestions poétiques dont la valeur ne dépasse guère celle d'une confortable musique de film documentaire. Le pompiérisme y est élevé, distingué : un Saint-Saëns qui aurait du tempérament. Tout y est en vue de l'effet extérieur. Une superbe « Campanella » pour orchestre. Mais ce genre de divertissement n'est divertissant que quelques minutes, à moins de s'appeler, Ravel ou Richard Strauss, car avec cette 10e symphonie de Chostakovitch on est en présence d'une œuvre dont les dimensions excessives laissent facilement voir tout ce que l'émotion a de factice et tout ce que l'ingéniosité a de ficelles.

La vertu de Dimitri Mitropoulos est précisément de faire que, si l'on n'y prête pas très attention, il arrive qu'en cours d'audition on puisse, au passage, se laisser prendre à ce factice et à certaines de ces ficelles. Il traduit tout cela en un style si beau, si pur, si authentique, avec une intonation tour à tour si subtilement délicate et si irrésistiblement véhémente, intense, que cela peut amener certains instants de distraction permettant de croire qu'il s'agit d'une musique vraiment « habitée ». Mais la plus petite seconde de réflexion a tôt fait de montrer que seul Mitropoulos l'habite.

Ce grand chef avait auparavant dirigé une admirable exécution de l'ouverture du Freischütz, ainsi que le 5e concerto de Beethoven dont Robert Casadesus était le soliste. Ce dernier n'est évidemment pas tout à fait l'homme de cette œuvre, lui à qui tant d'autres pages — même beethoviennes — sont très favorables. En dépit d'une sonorité un peu grêle et d'un phraser un peu court, il en a cependant donné une interprétation de style très élevée.

Le second concert était dirigé par Guido Cantelli, chef de trente-six ans, qui a l'air très content de lui à tous égards, et qui nous arrive précédé d'une fracassante publicité dont le moindre argument n'est pas le fait que Toscanini aurait désigné en lui son successeur devant l'Eternel. Est-ce la raison pour laquelle il y avait autant de chefs d'orchestre dans la salle ? De ma vie je n'avais vu dans la salle autant d'artistes venus écouter un confrère. J'en ai dénombré jusqu'à huit (de grandeur appréciable). Ils ont eu l'air de s'en retourner assez rassurés sur la concurrence possible du nouveau venu, car, de même que quelques autres personnes, ils l'ont jugé avec un dédain parfait.

Je dois avouer que je ne me sens pas aussi bien armé pour témoigner à l'égard de Cantelli d'une pareille sévérité. Ses enregistrements des symphonies de Brahms et de Schumann avaient, d'ores et déjà, fait beaucoup plus en sa faveur que la publicité un peu crispante de son manager n'a fait contre lui. Son programme ne le mettait guère en valeur : une ouverture de Rossini assez peu en relief, une 7e symphonie de Beethoven dirigée dans un style effectivement assez toscaninien ce qui n'est pas le rêve, un Adagio insignifiant de Barber, et les Tableaux d'une exposition qui lui permettaient cependant de se manifester avec plus de bonheur. Quoi qu'il en soit, l'accueil que l'on a fait à Guido Cantelli est d'une injuste fraîcheur. Il a cependant prouvé qu'il est un musicien de tempérament et de style, un chef possédant déjà une étonnante maîtrise de son art. Je miserais volontiers sur lui. Nous allons d'ailleurs avoir l'occasion prochaine de le juger de nouveau, puisqu'il revient sous peu à Paris pour y diriger l'orchestre de la Scala de Milan.

PHILHARMONIC GIVES A CONCERT IN BASLE

BASLE, Switzerland, Sept. 21 (Reuters)—The New York Philharmonic-Symphony Orchestra under Dimitri Mitropoulos gave the second concert of its Swiss tour here tonight.

The program at Basle's main concert hall consisted of Brahms' Variations on a Theme by Haydn, Beethoven's Concerto No. 3 for piano and orchestra and the Symphony No. 10 of Shostakovich.

The solo pianist was Grant Johannesen.

Last night's concert in Geneva under the direction of Guido Cantelli received somewhat adverse criticism in the Geneva newspapers today.

The music critic of La Suisse wrote:

"If this phalanx of musicians appeared very disciplined to us, its musical qualities did not achieve the heights of an 'ensemble' with such a reputation."

The Tribune de Geneve said:

"The orchestra played as it must have done before thousands of American listeners, but without much restraint with regard to the volume of sound, while the dimensions of the concert hall remained the same."

MITROPOULOS DIRIGIERT

Eine der faszinierendsten Dirigentenerscheinungen, der Grieche-Amerikaner Dimitri Mitropoulos, erscheint zum erstenmal in der Schweiz. Der Ruhm eigenwilliger und virtuoser Interpretation ist ihm aus Amerika und auch europäischen Städten, in denen er schon dirigierte, vorangeeilt, der Ruhm eines musikbesessenen Meisters, der ohne Taktstock und von der ersten Probe an auswendig dirigiert. Im ersten der Klubhauskonzerte wird er am 23. September das Orchester der «Philharmonic-Symphony Society of New York» leiten, und zwar mit einer Werkfolge, die alles andere als konventionell ist: ein von Milhaud arrangierter Couperin steht am Beginn; eine «Show piece for Orchestra» des durch seine vom Jazz inspirierten Kompositionen bekannten Amerikaners Morton Gould, die «Griechischen Tänze» des hochbedeutenden jungverstorbenen Griechen Nicholas Skalkottas und die 10. Sinfonie von Schostakowitsch werden zu hören sein, Stücke, die Mitropoulos mit Verve und Glanz vorstellen wird. P. Mg.

Die New Yorker Philharmoniker

O. M. Nun haben wir endlich auch in Basel eines der grossen amerikanischen Wunderorchester hören dürfen, nachdem das Philadelphia-Orchester in der Schweiz nur Genf mit seinem Besuch beehrt hat. The Philharmonic Symphony Society of New York, das drittälteste Orchester der Welt, 1842, im Geburtsjahr der Wiener Philharmoniker gegründet. Also ein Orchester mit Tradition, betreut von den hervorragendsten Dirigenten seit Anbeginn. Von 1926—1936 war es in der Hand Toscaninis, desgleichen zu Beginn der 40er-Jahre, Bruno Walter ist ihm bis auf den heutigen Tag verbunden, nach Stokowsky wird es heute von Mitropoulos, Széll und Cantelli geführt. Woraus schon ersichtlich, wie stark der europäische Einfluss auf die künstlerische Formung gewesen ist und noch ist. Auch heute noch sind im Orchester selbst fast 40 % europäischer Herkunft.

Wir hätten gerne ein anderes als das russische Programm gehört, das aus einer Ouvertüre von Kabalevsky und einer Symphonie von Schostakowich bestand. Ein uns geläufiges Werk, wenn auch nicht die ursprünglich vorgesehenen Haydn-Variationen von Brahms, so doch wenigstens eine bekanntere Ouvertüre, hätten immerhin eine willkommene Vergleichsmöglichkeit nach der Seite des Technischen, des Stils und der Auffassung gegeben. Doch auch so blieb der Eindruck einer Perfektion ohnegleichen vom ersten Einsatz an, der in solcher Präzision geschah, dass er geradezu als ein Novum und wie ein Choc wirkte. Zur Einführung passte die kleine Ouvertüre zu einer Oper über ein Stück von Romain Rolland in ihrer freundlichen Harmlosigkeit und rhythmischen Adrettheit ganz gut, da man hauptsächlich damit beschäftigt war, den herrlichen Klang und die unwahrscheinliche technische Souveränität des Orchesters zu bewundern. Unter der ganz unaufdringlichen, von jeder Starpose freien und phänomenal sicheren Leitung des griechischen Dirigenten Dimitri Mitropoulos zeigte sich das über hundertköpfige Orchester als eine Vereinigung von Solisten höchsten Ranges, die, ohne ihre Individualität preisgeben zu müssen, zu einer musikalischen Eintracht unvergleichlicher Art zusammengeschweisst werden, wobei als besonders erfreulicher Eindruck festgehalten sei, dass das Musizieren unter diesem so natürlich sich gebenden und offenbar ungewöhnlich kultivierten Dirigenten mit merklicher Freude und entsprechender Gelöstheit geschieht. Die unübertreffliche Disziplin hat nirgends etwas Verkrampftes. So bleibt ein unvergesslicher Eindruck von klanglicher Vollendung, obgleich das Forte, das, mit solchem Apparat hervorgebracht, auf die grossen amerikanischen Räume eingestellt ist, den Saal mitunter fast zu sprengen drohte.

Die zehnte Symphonie von Schostakowich in e-moll muss Qualitäten haben, die beim ersten Hören noch im Verborgenen bleiben, weil es sonst unverständlich wäre, dass ein so feiner Musiker wie Mitropoulos als ihr Apostel sie durch Europa führt. Zunächst empfindet man unerträgliche Längen, besonders im ersten Satz, zudem kann einem die Neigung, alles Thematische und Melodische, fast jede Floskel immer wieder und immer wieder zu wiederholen, auf die Nerven gehen. Doch ist zweifellos Substanz in dem Werk, ein konzentrierter Satz wie der zweite, ist enorm wirksam, das Volkstümliche im Melodischen nicht unangenehm, aber die immer wieder auftrumpfenden klanglichen Uebersteigerungen haben mitunter etwas Barbarisches. An dem formalen, am klassischen Satz geschulten Können ist jedoch kein Zweifel erlaubt.

Zwischen dem orchestralen Hommage für Russland stand etwas fremd und seltsam Beethovens c-moll Klavierkonzert. Auch dies technisch vollendet, wenn auch etwas unpersönlich, von einem jungen amerikanischen Pianisten, Grant Johannesen, mit grossem Erfolg vorgetragen, wozu auch die hervorragend gestaltete Begleitung beitrug, die von dem auch hier auswendig dirigierende Orchesterleiter prachtvoll ausgeführt wurde. Der starke Beifall am Schlusse des Konzerts veranlasste die spendefreudigen Gäste zu zwei Dreingaben, an denen wiederum die klangliche und technische Perfektion zu bewundern war.

NEUE ZÜRCHER ZEITUNG
Montag, 26. September 1955

The Philharmonic Symphony Orchestra of New York

-uh. Dem Orchester der «Philharmonic Symphony Society of New York», das am 23. September im Rahmen der Klubhauskonzerte im Großen Tonhallesaal unter der Leitung seines ständigen Dirigenten Dimitri Mitropoulos gastierte, verdankt man ein Fest virtuosen Orchesterspiels, wie man es in Zürich noch kaum erlebt hat. Der geradezu überwältigende Eindruck ergab sich nicht allein aus der bei uns in solch absoluter Zuverlässigkeit unbekannten Präzision des Zusammenspiels innerhalb und zwischen den einzelnen, vollkommen homogenisierten Klanggruppen, sondern in fast noch höherem Maße aus der die «unerhörten» Klangwirkungen entscheidend fördernden Reinheit der Intonation. Am auffälligsten tritt diese bei den «französisch» hell und schlank intonierenden Blechbläsern hervor, deren präziser Tonansatz ebenso bewunderungswürdig ist wie die unübertreffliche Kunst der dynamischen Graduierung, die vom zartesten Pianissimo bis zum strahlend klaren Fortissimo reicht. Wir versagen es uns, die Vorzüge der verschiedenen Orchestergruppen im einzelnen aufzuzählen — es würde auf eine Häufung preisender Epitheta hinauslaufen. Entscheidend für den musikalischen Eindruck ist, daß das Philharmonic Symphony Orchestra, bei dem sich alles in spielerische Eleganz aufzulösen scheint, dennoch keinen Augenblick das Gefühl aufkommen läßt, man befinde sich lediglich einer perfekt funktionierenden Orchestermaschine gegenüber. Im Gegenteil: es vermittelt das Erlebnis eines erstaunlich differenzierten Musizierens, bei dem die aufs höchste entwickelten virtuosen Orchesterqualitäten in den Dienst intensivsten musikalischen Ausdrucks gestellt sind. Dimitri Mitropoulos, der das Orchester formt und führt, ist allerdings auch alles andere als der Typ des Dirigentenvirtuosen. Er gibt sich als ein von Musik Besessener zu erkennen, der die scharfen geistigen und seelischen Spannungen, die sein künstlerisches Wesen bestimmen, mit einer Konzentration ohnegleichen auf das Orchester überträgt. Sein Wesen spannt sich zwischen einem feurigen und einem kalten Pol. Je sparsamer die Geste, desto stärker die innere Spannung, und wenn Mitropoulos eine Gruppe einmal scheinbar sich selbst überläßt, indem er sichtbaren Schlag vermeidet, so hält und führt er sie um so fester durch das überwachende Auge. Mitropoulos ist ein Dirigent, der mit den Spielern intensiv mitlebt. Präzision und Virtuosität sind die selbstverständliche Voraussetzung, nicht das Endziel seines Musizierens, das aus der Fülle einer reichen, Sensibilität mit vitaler Kraft vereinigenden Natur schöpft. Mitropoulos besitzt nicht nur ein phänomenales «Musikgehirn», er ist vor allem auch ein echter Künstler, der sich der Musik unbedingt und leidenschaftlich hingibt und sie ebenso leidenschaftlich zum Klang erweckt.

Mitropoulos' entschiedenes Eintreten für zeitgenössische Musik bestimmte auch das merkwürdige Gastspielprogramm,, von dem wir zuletzt sprechen, weil es das Erlebnis der sensationellen orchestralen Leistung durchaus in den Vordergrund treten ließ. So erfreulich ein unkonventionelles Programm ist, so sehr bedauerte man doch, auf die Auseinandersetzung von Dirigent und Orchester mit einem (Vergleiche der Wiedergabe erlaubenden) Meisterwerk verzichten zu müssen. Darius Milhauds klanggesättigte Orchestrierung von Couperins «La Sultane» erfüllte ihre Aufgabe: die Klanggruppen des Orchesters wirkungsvoll zu präsentieren, ausgezeichnet, aber nach diesem unverbindlichen Eingang hätte man Gehaltvolleres erwarten dürfen als die mit Orchestereffekten überladene, an musikalischem Gehalt aber um so dürftigere «Show Piece» des 1913 geborenen Amerikaners Morton Gould, der mit seinen vom Jazz und amerikanischen Songs genährten «American Symphonettes» und verwandten Stücken «gehobene Unterhaltungsmusik» typisch amerikanischer Art produziert. Für die virtuosen orchestralen Kapriolen, die Gould in den sechs Sätzchen seiner alle modernen Instrumentationsrezepte aufdringlich zur Anwendung bringenden Show Piece schlägt, vermochte selbst die über alle Begriffe glänzende Wiedergabe keine Sympathien zu wekken. Mit Gewinn hörte man dagegen die Vier griechischen Tänze von Nikos Skalkottas. Sie können zwar kaum als charakteristische Proben der differenzierten und komplexen Kunst dieses hochbegabten, 1949 gestorbenen ehemaligen Schönberg-Schülers gelten, dürfen im Hinblick auf die außerordentliche Klangplastik und tänzerische Vitalität und die glückliche Verbindung moderner harmonischer, polyrhythmischer und klanglicher Elemente mit streng thematisch verarbeiteter Volkstanzmelodik — ein überraschender Anklang an Griegs Peer-Gint-Musik im «Pleftikos» ist schon bei der Erstaufführung von der Kritik bemerkt worden — aber den besten Werken dieser Art, wie etwa Bartóks und Kodálys Orchestertänzen, an die Seite gestellt werden.

Ueberraschen mochte, daß die Amerikaner ausgerechnet mit Dimitri Schostakowitschs Zehnter Sinfonie, op. 93 (1953), nach Europa kamen. Man muß allerdings wissen, daß Mitropoulos das Werk mit dem New Yorker Orchester zur westlichen Erstaufführung gebracht hat, daß es mit dem Preis des «New York Critic Centre» ausgezeichnet wurde und als ein fraglos bedeutendes Beispiel «verständlicher zeitgenössischer Musik» gerade auch in Amerika starke Resonanz gefunden hat. Die 10. Sinfonie hat, wie die meisten neueren Werke des Komponisten, in Moskau Anlaß zu breitesten Diskussionen gegeben, die sich allerdings vornehmlich um die Frage drehten, ob man es mit einem «realistischen» oder einem «formalistischen» Werk zu tun habe. Mit der paradoxen Formel «Optimistische Tragödie» glaubte man es für die sowjetische Musikästhetik retten zu können. Die viersätzige Sinfonie ist ein von Melancholie überschattetes Opus, woran auch die aus der langen und trüben Andante-Einleitung etwas gewaltsam hervorbrechende Lustigkeit des Rondo-Finalallegros nichts zu ändern vermag. In der Harmonik im wesentlichen (trotz gewissen mixturartigen Klängen und Schärfungen) konventionell, im Rhythmischen auffallend monoton, ist die 50 Minuten spie-

Q-n. Es ist ein eigenartiges Zusammentreffen, daß die 1842 erfolgte Gründung der «Philharmonic Symphony Society of New York» und damit der Beginn dieses repräsentativen und ältesten Ensembles aus der neuen Welt in das gleiche Jahr fällt, wie die Gründung der Wiener Philharmoniker. Die Wiener sind uns als Gäste ein vertrauter Klangkörper und ein Begriff, während die Hundertschaft aus New York unseres Wissens erstmals in Bern musizierte, hat sie doch vor 25 Jahren auf ihrer Europatournee unter Toscanini unsere Stadt nicht berührt. Eine große und lange Tradition waltet über beiden Orchestern, die freilich ihrem Klangideal nach in sehr verschiedenen Richtungen geht. Nachdem in den dreißiger Jahren Toscanini und später Bruno Walter an der Spitze der New-Yorker Philharmoniker standen, ist heute der Grieche Dimitri Mitropoulos deren Leiter, und die Musizierart und das Klangbild des Orchesters wird weitgehend durch diese Persönlichkeit bestimmt.

Zwei Dinge möchte man hervorheben, die uns an diesem Klanginstrument besonders in die Ohren gefallen sind. Da ist einmal die höchst beeindruckende Disziplin und die unfehlbare Präzision einer Spielmanier, die manchmal fast als maschinell und roboterhaft empfunden wird. Das andere betrifft die Lautstärke. Sie überfällt das Publikum in den klanghart gehämmerten Fortissimo-Stellen mit geradezu trommelfellzertrümmernden Attacken. Wir gestehen, daß wir an gewissen Stellen bei Schostakowitsch und de Falla diese Ohrenmarter am liebsten mit Watte oder Ohropax gemildert hätten. Das ging allerdings zu einem Teil auch auf das buchstäbliche Getrommel in der Sinfonie des Russen, zum andern aber ebenso auf das Nichtmaßhalten des Dirigenten, der sich doch Rechenschaft darüber geben mußte, daß unser übrigens akustisch ausgezeichneter Casinosaal sich nicht mit den amerikanischen Riesensälen in eine Reihe stellen läßt.

Doch das Orchester paradierte ja nicht nur in exzessiv aufgedrehter Tonstärke, sondern brillierte in einem überaus differenzierten und klanglich virtuos abgestuften Klanggeschmeide. Wenn wir uns die einzelnen Gruppen in Erinnerung rufen, so bestechen die Streicher mehr durch die Wendigkeit und den polierten Glanz ihres Tonvolumens als durch eine von innen belebte Glut und Klanglichkeit. Die von acht Bäßen fundierte Phalanx entbehrt der satten und samtenen Wärme mancher europäischer Spitzenorchester, worunter wir ohne Ueberhebung auch unser diesjähriges Luzerner Festspielensemble einreihen dürfen. Die Holzbläser präsentieren sich als Ganzes in prachtvoll ausgeglichener Rundung. Die einzelnen Solopulte aber erreichen mit Ausnahme des ganz überragenden Solofagottisten kaum außergewöhnliches Niveau, und vom Blech ist zu sagen, daß wir die technische Virtuosität seiner Ansätze wohl bewundert haben, daß uns jedoch das explosiv stehende Metall seiner Trompeten nur zu oft Pein bereitet hat. Der Klang eines Orchesters ist ein von innen getragener und gewachsener Organismus, sozusagen ein geheimnisvolles Wunder; es ist ihm nicht mit perfektionierter Technik beizukommen. In der Hand von Dimitri Mitropoulos haben wir bei den New-Yorkern dieses Wunderbare und das, was man Klangkultur nennt, nur zu oft vermißt.

Damit sind wir bei dieser von fanatischer Leidenschaft erfüllten Dirigentenpersönlichkeit angelangt, die mit beschwörenden und eigenartig explosiven Gesten seine Musiker führt und sie mit letzter Autorität zu seinem Instrument formt. Sehr anerkennenswert und bezeichnend für diesen Stabführer war es, daß er als sinfonische Hauptnummer nicht eines der üblichen Repertoirstücke wählte, sondern ein zeitgenössisches Werk. Ein Komponist, der als einer der wenigen heute die Form der großen Sinfonie pflegt, ist der Russe Schostakowitsch, dessen höchst talentvoller und von der Zwangsjacke staatlicher Kunstverdikte noch ganz unbelasteter Erstling in Bern schon zweimal erklungen ist. Der heute knapp Fünfzigjährige hat vor zwei Jahren bereits seine 10. Sinfonie beendet. Sie bildete mit ihrer mehr als dreiviertel Stunden zu veranschlagenden Dauerhaftigkeit die Pièce de résistance eines Programms, das mit der von elektrisierender Dramatik erfüllten Ouvertüre zu Verdis «Macht des Schicksals» eröffnet wurde und im solistischen Teil das 3. Klavierkonzert von Beethoven zum Klingen brachte.

Die viersätzige Sinfonie von Schostakowitsch, die sich meist harmlos tonal, streckenweise höchst trivial und lärmig gibt, im dritten Satz ein geradezu schülerhaftes Thema zu Tode reitet und im Finale ein exorbitantes Getrommel losläßt, schien uns wie ein in vielen Wiederholungen und Reminiszenzen sich gefallender und unorganisierter Notenberg, der gewiß auch stimmungsvolle Momente aufweist, im zweiten Satz jedoch wiederum ein primitiv chromatisches Bläser-Gemiaue präsentiert, wie wenn man tausend linientreuen Katzen auf den Schwanz treten würde. Von ursprünglichen Einfällen rhythmischer und melodischer Art keine Spur! So mußte sich immer stärker lähmende Langeweile auf die Hörer senken. Und das will etwas heißen, wenn man sich vergegenwärtigt, in welch technischer Vollendung dieses Werk dargeboten wurde. In einem bereitwillig gespendeten Sonderprogramm von zwei Zugaben, die eine aus de Fallas «Dreispitz», die andere wohl ein Elgar – konnte sich das Ensemble und sein Dirigent für den stürmischen Beifall eines Publikums bedanken, das durch die Anwesenheit von Bundespräsident Petitpierre, von weiteren Bundesräten und vieler Vertreter des diplomatischen Korps beehrt wurde.

Im solistischen Teil spielte Byron Janis mit Geschmack und brillanter Technik, wenn auch nicht unfehlbar, Beethovens c-moll-Klavierkonzert, wo sich der sehr jugendliche Pianist auf dem Untergrund einer äußerst exakten und ebenso kraftvollen wie minutiös differenzierten Begleitung entfalten konnte. Sein Anschlag ist im Forte nicht ohne trokkene Härten und im Figurenwerk plötzlich wiederum etwas säuselnd weich, was sich mit dem Charakter dieses zugriffigen Beethoven nicht immer reimen wollte. Am unmittelbarsten wirkte die frische Art, wie der mit viel Beifall ausgezeichnete Künstler das Finalrondo musizierte, während ein solcher Novize des Tasteninstruments sich wohl hüten sollte, die von Beethoven komponierte Kadenz des ersten Satzes mit eigenen Zutaten verschlimmbessern zu wollen.

IL PRESIDENTE DELLA REPUBBLICA HA PRESENZIATO AL CONCERTO DELL'ARGENTINA

La Philharmonic - Symphony Society di New York

Le porte del Teatro Argentina si sono aperte, ieri sera, per ospitare la orchestra della Philharmonic-Symphony society of New York in gran tournée europea. Questa celebrata orchestra che ha già una sua storia centenaria deve la sua attuale formazione alla fusione, promossa da Walter Damrosch, delle due maggiori orchestre americane; la New York Symphony e la New York Philharmonie, nel 1928. I più grandi direttori del mondo hanno naturalmente avuto occasione di dirigere un tal complesso che molto deve della sua eccellente preparazione alla direzione artistica di Toscanini, che già nel 1930 lo condusse ad una analoga tournée europea, Roma compresa, mietendo successi memorabili.

L'attuale direttore artistico della Società filarmonica è il maestro Dimitri Mitropoulos, greco di nascita, americano di adozione che ieri sera ha diretto l'esibizione romana.

E' un'impresa complessa quella di parlare delle doti di una formazione orchestrale come questa. Verrebbe la voglia di dire, in fondo, un'orchestra vale l'altra, beninteso sempre parlando di grandi orchestre e di orchestre con un passato noto tanto da costituire tradizione. Fusione perfetta, chiarezza timbrica, ricchezza di suono, solisti ineccepibili, prontezza nella comprensione collettiva, sono i requisiti di questa che ambisce ad un primato assoluto che non ci sentiremmo di consigliare sembrandoci un bagaglio di proporzioni insopportabili. Certo è, però, che questa orchestra newyorchese è ottima e quel che abbiamo riscontrato di particolare è l'intima fusione con il suo attuale direttore.

L'Ouverture del Freischütz di Weber, viva, palpitante, sonora ben tagliata con le sue belle pause profonde ha aperto il concerto in uno con il cuore degli ascoltatori. La Sinfonia n. 5 (La Riforma), poco eseguita, di Mendelssohn ha dato la misura del magistero strumentale del complesso e della penetrazione direttoriale, e le «Danze greche» di Nicholas Skalkotas quelle del virtuosismo dei molteplici strumenti dell'orchestra.

Non diremo che la esecuzione della Sinfonia n. 2 di Brahms abbia molto convinto. Forse è di moda obiettivare il lato meccanico delle complesse architetture sonore brahmsiane, precisandone i particolari e i dettagli decorativi staccati dal loro insieme ombrato. Noi ancora non ci siamo arrivati.

E abbiamo stentato, forse per questo, a seguire il filo di quell'amabile discorso ascoltato chissà quante mai volte e mai meno suggestionante della prima. Il concerto a cui hanno assistito il Capo dello Stato, on. Gronchi, il Presidente del Consiglio on. Segni, l'ambasciatrice Luce e altri personaggi ufficiali, si è chiuso con due bis; la Sinfonia de «La forza del destino» di Verdi e la Danza finale del balletto «Il Cappello tricorno» di De Falla.

Moltissimi applausi hanno salutato il direttore Mitropoulos e i componenti della magnifica orchestra.

MITROPOULOS GETS AN OVATION IN MILAN

Special to The New York Times.

MILAN, Italy, Sept. 26— Dimitri Mitropoulos received an ovation tonight from an enthusiastic audience at the end of the second and last concert here by the New York Philharmonic-Symphony Orchestra.

The atmosphere at tonight's performance, which was again held at La Scala Theatre, was even warmer than yesterday's. Tomorrow's Corriere Della Sera will speak of a "great evening at La Scala" and will publish a flattering judgment of the New York orchestra and its conductor.

The applause tonight was strongest after Schumann's Second Symphony. The program also included Shostakovich's Tenth Symphony. The new work of the Soviet composer had never been played in Milan; it left the audience divided.

The New York Philharmonic will perform tomorrow in Perugia, where the Umbrian Music Festival is taking place. Tomorrow's concert will be dedicated to the memory of the late Olin Downes, music critic of The New York Times.

LE PRIME A ROMA

La Filarmonica di N. York all'Argentina

Nel corso della sua tournée nelle principali città italiane, l'Orchestra Filarmonica di New York è stata ospite ieri del teatro Argentina dove ha offerto un saggio al pubblico romano, in verità non troppo numeroso, delle sue impeccabili qualità musicali che ne fanno, a buon diritto, la più grande istituzione nella storia artistica degli Stati Uniti. Si tratta infatti di un complesso orchestrale di prim'ordine che ha avuto come suoi direttori nomi tra i più illustri ed acclamati come Toscanini, Bruno Walter, Victor De Sabata, Cantelli e Dimitri Mitropoulos: essi volta a volta la hanno plasmata e vi hanno infuso tutta la loro capacità e competenza di grandi interpreti.

Ora l'Orchestra Filarmonica «suona da sè», come si dice, cioè è uno strumento solo fuso con l'intelligenza e lo spirito di colui che la dirige e che ieri sera si identificava nel nome di Mitropoulos, un animatore e una guida che sa realizzare delle interpretazioni che non temono confronti.

Le qualità che impressionano di più di questa orchestra sono la estrema duttilità del suono, la purezza e la chiarezza degli impasti sonori, l'intensità e la possenza degli strumenti che raggiungono sempre una perfezione formale veramente straordinaria.

Mitropoulos ci ha fatto ascoltare una ouverture slanciata e vibrante del «Franco Cacciatore» di Weber, una sinfonia (la quinta detta della Riforma) di Mendelssohn, maestosa e pesante, a volte un po' eccessiva nei ritmi, Quattro danze greche di Nicholas Skalkotos, un compositore morto nel 1949 e allievo di Schoenberg. Queste danze risentono molto della loro terra d'origine e contengono spunti efficaci musicalmente, resi anche con un adeguato linguaggio orchestrale vivo e colorito. L'ultimo pezzo in programma era la Seconda Sinfonia di Brahms interpretata con slancio romantico e intensità di suoni, specialmente nel primo e nell'ultimo tempo.

Gli applausi calorosi ed entusiastici che hanno accolto la fine del concerto, hanno indotto Mitropoulos a concedere come bis una smagliante esecuzione della «Sinfonia della Forza del Destino».

Gli applausi erano rivolti anche alla meravigliosa orchestra, di cui fanno parte valorosi elementi italiani, a cominciare dal primo violino.

Tra le personalità presenti in sala non mancava l'ambasciatrice Luce.

LE PRIME
MUSICA

La Filarmonica di New York all'Argentina

La ben nota e valorosa Orchestra Filarmonica di New York si è presentata ieri sera all'Argentina, diretta da Dimitri Mitropulos. In programma figuravano i seguenti brani: l'ouverture de Il franco cacciatore, di Weber, la V Sinfonia, detta «La Riforma», di Mendelssohn, alcune Danze Greche, di Nicholas Skalkotas e la II Sinfonia, in re maggiore, di Brahms.

Sin dall'inizio dell'ouverture di Weber si è potuto constatare come invero la fama di questo complesso sia più che meritata, sia per le qualità d'assieme che per quelle dei soli nonchè per l'alto livello generale della compagine medesima. Nelle opere che seguivano tale sensazione è venuta naturalmente a confermarsi, sopratutto e particolarmente nelle pagine non troppo dense di sonorità. (Quando purtroppo il volume passa un determinato livello in un teatro dotato d'un'acustica come l'Argentina riesce invero ben difficile il poter gustare le sonorità ben corpose). Comunque, acustica a parte, abbiamo visto un'orchestra di prim'ordine, scattante, docile e malleabile; pronta a intuire ogni sfumatura del direttore che la guida. E il direttore, iersera, era Dimitri Mitropulos; un uomo che ha la musica nelle vene e che riesce a imprimere un suo marchio, appassionato e dinamico, alle partiture che interpreta.

Molto interessante è stato il ritorno della V Sinfonia di Mendelssohn, assente da tempo dai programmi romani. Il tono celebrativo della Riforma luterana che la permea tutta dà ad esse un colore inconfondibile, severo e maestoso, dove il respiro spazia ampiamente. Al centro di essa spiccano le note del celebre corale protestante «Ein feste Burg ist unser Gott» le quali emergono con significazione chiara e concreta.

Le Danze greche di Nicholas Skalkotas, compositore greco spentosi nel 1949 e appena ora noto — in prima esecuzione a Roma, se non andiamo errati — constano di quattro tempi costruiti con buona mano e coloriti con estro. Il materiale è tratto dal folklore ed è trattato liberamente. La parte più evidente di esse è il ritmo. Mentre le prime tre danze si riferiscono ad aspetti del folklore di varie regioni greche, l'ultima rievoca un episodio della passata lotta della Grecia contro la Turchia.

Con la II Sinfonia di Brahms terminava il programa del concerto. L'entusiasmo del pubblico però è stato tanto e tale che il maestro Mitropulos e l'Orchestra Filarmonica di New York, applauditissimi da tutti i presenti, hanno dovuto concedere ben due brani fuori programma (Verdi e De Falla).

IL POPOLO
29.9.1955

ALL'ARGENTINA

L'orchestra filarmonica di New York diretta da Mitropoulos

Il maestro Dimitri Mitropoulos è un direttore veemente. Il suo gesto scattante spreme il lembo sonoro fino all'ultima vibrazione. Quando Mitropoulos dà fuoco ai tratti di piena orchestra, le voci raggiungono spasimi esasperanti. Ma Mitropoulos non dimentica le serene trasparenze delle riposanti contabilità. Allora dalle file dell'orchestra scendono gocce di tenerezza, e la musica diviene balsamo di poesia, fatta per confortare gli animi depressi. L'ouverture del «Franco cacciatore» ha trovato nello spirito dell'interprete dolcissimo ravviamento. Le voci respiravano profumi di tenerezza. Raramente questa composizione è apparsa così lieve e trasparente.

La sinfonia di Mendelssohn (La riforma) è stata tenuta sopra un piano corretto, ma non entusiasmante.

Per rendere omaggio a un suo connazionale: il compositore greco Skalkotas, Mitropoulos ha eseguito alcune danze popolari della sua terra. Sono musiche tenute in vesti sgargianti, a volte pompose, con corredi armonico-strumentali della scuola schöuberghiana.

Nel corso della «Seconda» di Brahms bisognava evitare talune oscillazioni non desiderate, specie durante il primo tempo; ma nei tempi successivi la musica ha ritrovato, quasi sempre, il suo corso, tanto da destare entusiasmi nel pubblico che, applaudendo fragorosamente, ha richiesto bis, cortesemente concessi: Sinfonia della verdiana «Forza del destino» (omaggio gentile all'Italia) e il «Cappello a tre punte», di De Falla. Applausi, naturalmente, diretti alla brava orchestra newyorkese. Un complesso ammirevole, per fusione e bellezza di suono; ma aspra negli ottoni (trombe e tromboni), e priva di scattanti impeti nei violini. Eccellenti i corni e i violoncelli. Un complesso — in ogni caso — di pregio, i cui componenti porteranno il grato ricordo delle fervide accoglienze romane.

Assistevano al concerto, il Presidente della Repubblica Gronchi, con la famiglia al completo; il Presidente del Consiglio dei Ministri, Segni, e il Ministro per gli Affari Esteri, Martino. Notata con particolare compiacimento l'Ambasciatore americano signora Luce.

IL MESSAGGERO — Giovedì 29 Settembre 1955

LE PRIME ROMANE

ARGENTINA

La Filarmonica di N. Y. diretta da D. Mitropoulos

Ospite gradita, iersera all'Argentina, l'Orchestra Filarmonica di New York, complesso di fama mondiale le cui benemerenze sono a tutti note. Con Arturo Toscanini a capo, venne da noi venticinque anni or sono e tenne due concerti all'Augusteo che restarono memorabili. Da allora il cammino di questa orchestra non ha avuto soste e del fervore della sua attività se n'è avvantaggiata la musica di tutti i tempi e, diciamo pure, di tutti i paesi. Straordinario è il valore dei singoli elementi che costituiscono questo selezionato e sempre rinnovato complesso, magnifico quel senso di disciplina che unisce ciascun strumentista nella finalità suprema di consolidare le caratteristiche di una orchestra. Per il suo concerto romano, il quale non è che una tappa del lungo giro che sta compiendo nelle principali città d'Europa, l'Orchestra Filarmonica ha avuto sul podio un direttore di grande prestigio, amatissimo qui, da noi: Dimitri Mitropulos. Musicista tra i più brillanti dell'arte direttoriale, un fascinatore delle platee, concertatore lucido ed esperto che sa andare in profondità, senza peraltro nulla togliere alla immediatezza dell'estro ed al calore della comunicativa. Programma, quello di ieri, equilibrato tra il noto ed il poco noto, poggiato, tuttavia, su due pilastri del più smagliante repertorio sinfonico: la «ouverture» del «Franco cacciatore» di Weber e la «Sinfonia N. 2» di Brahms. Meno battuta la «Sinfonia N. 5» di Mendelssohn, autore al quale Mitropulos sta dedicando, non da oggi, le sue migliori attenzioni.

La pagina moderna del programma era costituita dalle «Danze greche» di Skalkotas, un compositore ellenico scomparso, in giovane età, alcuni anni or sono e che i suoi amici ed i suoi compatrioti stanno, con affettuoso animo e commovente solidarietà, cercando di far conoscere al pubblico internazionale. Una magnifica sala, una fervida partecipazione alle varie esecuzioni, tutte piene di meriti e di interessanti notazioni. Ciascuna famiglia di strumenti ha un suo colore, una caratteristica di suono e di fraseggio che palesano il gusto, l'esperienza, lo stile degli esecutori. Caloroso il vibrato degli archi, plastico l'accento degli ottoni, duttile e variatissimo il gioco dei legni. Della vivacità interpretativa dell'orchestra se ne sono avvantaggiate le pagine del grande repertorio e si è così ascoltato un Brahmas, un Weber ed un Mendelssohn calibrati nei valori stilistici, ricchi di pensiero, intensi di emozione. Il successo, non poteva essere altrimenti, è stato entusiastico. Al termine dell'audizione si sono avute ripetute ovazioni, richieste di bis. Desiderio sollecitamente esaudito con un bellissimo «fuori programma»: la sinfonia della «Forza del Destino» ed una smagliante pagina di De Falla.

L'Orchestra Filarmonica di New York all'Argentina

L'Orchestra Filarmonica di New York, che si recherà prossimamente a Perugia per la Sagra Musicale Umbra, ha eseguito ieri a Roma un concerto straordinario al quale è accorso un pubblico numerosissimo, nonostante che i prezzi fossero salati e che la stagione invernale non sia ancora cominciata. Fra il pubblico si notavano alcune personalità politiche, fra cui il Presidente della Repubblica Gronchi e l'ambasciatrice Clara Luce. Il concerto, diretto da Dimitri Mitropoulos, comprendeva musiche di Weber, Mendelssohn, Skalkotas e Brahms, alle quali sono venuti ad aggiungersi due bis. L'Orchestra Filarmonica di New York si è rivelata un complesso preparatissimo e affiatato, a posto in tutti i suoi settori. Da segnalare per la loro esattezza certi ingressi degli ottoni e da apprezzare al loro giusto valore certi pianissimo degli archi. La direzione di Mitropoulos è stata prima di tutto chiara, e ha dato risalto formale a ogni brano eseguito. Sebbene il pubblico si sia entusiasmato per ogni esecuzione, il meglio è forse apparso nella Sinfonia n. 5 di Mendelssohn, resa con cristallina chiarezza, con una cura quasi razionale della forma. Questa precisione formale dell'esecuzione ha permesso a un brano mediocre come le Danze greche di Skalkotas di sollevarsi al linguaggio musicale. La Sinfonia n. 2 di Brahms, che chiudeva il concerto, è stata forse un'interpretazione meno alta perchè la cura del dettaglio non è stata equilibrata da una inquadratura d'insieme altrettanto lucida.

Philharmonic Gets Milan Ovation

Milan, Italy, Sept. 26 [Reuter]. The Milan newspaper Corriere Della Sera today described the reception accorded to the New York Philharmonic Symphony Orchestra here last night as a thunderous, overwhelming, triumphal ovation."

The orchestra gave the first of two concerts at the La Scala opera house in the course of the European tour. It was directed by Guido Cantellia. Dmitri Mitropoulos conducts tonight.

The music critic of the newspaper said: "Everything in this orchestra appeared ductile and ready."

QUOTIDIANO
29.9.1955

L'Orchestra di New York all'Argentina

Se il concerto di ieri sera non costituiva il primo numero del programma ufficiale della stagione accademica, ha segnato tuttavia il primo accostamento del pubblico alla ripresa autunnale. E' stato un accostamento di particolare interesse perchè offerto dall'Orchestra Filarmonica di New York, passata in eredità, potrebbe dirsi da Arturo Toscanini a Dimitri Mitropoulos

Forte di centoquindici elementi, l'Orchestra ha raccolto ieri sera al Teatro Argentina, applausi a non finire, tanto è esatta che il Mitropoulos ha dovuto concedere due bis il primo dei quali è stato il preludio de «La Forza del Destino» e il secondo «Il cappello a tre punte» di De Falla.

La orchestra poderosa per numero e una smagliante risonanza, ha il possesso di una vigorosa massa d'archi (armoniose fra loro le famiglie dei primi e secondi, delle viole e dei violoncelli), di un complesso di fiati che si amalgama con dolcezza e una formazione di ottoni forse fin troppo vibrante. Sotto la direzione del Mitropoulos essa si affina e rinvigorisce ad un comando fatto più di gesti che di misurazioni di tempo. Tutto ieri sera è risultato così efficiente fin dal «Franco cacciatore» di Weber, in apertura del programma, da far dimenticare qualche piccolezza affiorata nel primo tempo della seconda di Brahms.

Piena e meritata approvazione ha dato alla sinfonia «La Riforma» di Mendelssohn e alle «Danze greche» di Nicolas Skalkotas, un musicista, a giudicare dalle pagine ascoltate ieri sera, che sa indubbiamente il fatto suo.

Successo completo. Pubblico affollato se pure teatro non esaurito.

IL TEMPO

MUSICA

La Filarmonica di Nuova York all'Argentina

Per due ragioni non possiamo diffonderci a lungo, come dovremmo, sul concerto offerto, all'Argentina, dall'Orchestra Filarmonica di Nuova York, diretta da Dimitri Mitropulos. La prima è che, data l'ora tarda, non abbiamo a disposizione il tempo necessario per raccoglierci e vagliare le impressioni; l'altra è che l'ambiente acusticamente deficiente dell'Argentina, che incombe sui nostri destini musicali, non consente di concludere con piena cognizione di causa sui risultati sonori della esecuzione. Che una orchestra, come la Filarmonica di Nuova York, in giro artistico per le maggiori città d'Italia, proprio nella Capitale, non trovi la sede adatta per presentarsi è cosa deplorevole; tanto più se si pensi che, a poca distanza, in via della Conciliazione, c'è il magnifico Auditorio del Palazzo Pio.

E' necessario, quindi, procedere per approssimazione. Prima di tutto, la figura del Direttore. Dimitri Mitropulos è la personificazione musicale di una volontà artistica che assorbe nella sua sfera spirituale la personalità dell'Autore. Una volontà appassionata e ardente che, tuttavia, non invade, non travolge né deforma l'opera. La investe d'un sacro fuoco ma con essa armonizza e le dà vita.

Ciò specialmente nella Sinfonia di Brahms, che era il numero più importante del programma, nella quale l'entusiasmo lirico dell'interprete ha dato l'accento, con penetrazione affettiva, in armonia con l'intuizione poetica e la struttura dialettica della forma. Nelle sonorità tenui, in particolar modo, appena rimosso il velo della viziata atmosfera acustica, le qualità sonore della mirabile Orchestra sono apparse in pieno, nella indicibile preziosità dei timbri, nella leggiadria di tenui armonie ssottilmente vibranti.

La Filarmonica di New York all' Argentina

l'ouverture del Franco Cacciatore di Weber non aveva ora diffuso, in pieno, la gica atmosfera da favola dica: ma già dalle prime ute d'inizio Dimitri Mitrolos ci è apparso — così e lo conoscemmo — quel nde interprete che i pubdi tutto il mondo applauo da lungo tempo. Col suo suscitatore egli davvero ora spalancare le porte alla ica che irrompe sull'ascolre carica di gioia sonora, figurata in misteriose risonanze, lucente nel suo vitalissimo esplodere, vibrante nello incarnarsi del canto, appassionato e irresistibile.

Una luminosa serenità di interpretazione, una gioia di suscitare la musica portandola fino al diapason di altissime temperature: ecco, schematicamente, quello di cui ci sembra costituita l'eminente natura di questo splendido musicista. Ed erano lì a dimostrarlo lo stacco dei tempi, le pause cariche di musicale silenzio nel Franco Cacciatore, l'architettura effusa di tranquilla luce dorata nella Seconda sinfonia di Brahams, le Danze greche di Nicholas Skalkotas (1904-1949), piene di ritmico vigore anche se modellate secondo i comuni canoni che presiedono a tali intellettualistiche valorizzazioni del folklore nativo, la Sinfonia No. 5 di Mendelssohn, felice di natura melodica ma frammentaria nell'intero ciclo dei suoi tempi, oltre i due bis (Verdi e De Falla) che l'entusiasmo del pubblico gli ha strappato.

E l'orchestra filarmonica? Con tale direttore essa — com'è naturale — si rivela per quello che è già noto: uno squisito strumento d'arte in possesso di un magistero tecnico formidabile.

A tanta serata di per sè eccezionale si è aggiunto il prestigio della presenza delle più alte personalità politiche: Il Presidente della Repubblica, membri del Governo e l'Ambasciatrice Signora Clara Luce.

GIORNALE D'ITALIA

LA FILARMONICA DI NEW YORK AL TEATRO ARGENTINA

Come il miglior pubblico romano si ricorderà per molto tempo del prestigio artistico del complesso della Filarmonica di New York che si è presentato ieri sera al teatro Argentina, riscuotendo un successo superlativo, alla stessa maniera il maestro Dimitri Mitropoulos e i suoi collaboratori si ricorderanno della delirante accoglienza che il pubblico romano ha loro riservato. In tale accoglienza nulla è stato di troppo o di esageratamente cortese anche se trattavasi di un complesso straniero e di un paese grande amico dell'Italia.

Il complesso artistico che il pubblico romano ha avuto la fortuna di ascoltare (peccato per una sera soltanto!) è veramente all'altezza del suo compito e più ancora all'altezza della sua grande fama. La presenza, sia pure in diversi periodi nella carriera di questo complesso, di grandi maestri, prima di tutti Arturo Toscanini e poi di Bruno Walter e ora da cinque anni di Dimitri Mitropoulos, ha contribuito segnatamente alla formazione rigorosa e capillarmente sensibile di questa istituzione dove tutti i componenti, si sente, sono dei veri solisti che nella coralità delle esecuzioni si ripartiscono in parti eguali il proprio compito interpretativo; l'effetto che ne deriva è sorprendentemente perfetto, nitido, vivo, di un linguaggio musicale autentico.

Con le prove offerte ieri sera, secondo le opere in programma e con quelle aggiunte alla fine come «fuori programma» donate con molta benevolenza e gratitudine alle insistenti richieste del pubblico addirittura impazzito dal piacere di tanta potenza e profondità d'esecuzione, la Filarmonica di New York ha dimostrato di potersi trasferire con assoluta disinvoltura da un autore all'altro, da un'epoca all'altra e da un clima espressivo all'altro con la più solida proprietà di mezzi interpretativi.

Il programma poi, nella sua varietà di stile e di impegno ha documentato questa nostra impressione, che è poi, proprio per questo, una certezza indiscutibile.

Dopo una romantica Ouverture da «Il franco cacciatore» di Weber in cui Mitropoulos ha sottolineato la sua sapienza interpretativa riuscendo a creare un paesaggio d'altri tempi pieno di colore di passioni e di sentimento, con la «Sinfonia n. 5 in re maggiore» di Mendelssohn ha potuto ritessere sonoramente uno spartito ricco di contenuto spirituale e di grande ricchezza creativa. Con la presentazione di quest'opera piuttosto ambigua nei suoi elevati significati storici e spirituali ha tanto lavorato in profondità, sì che le vaghe intenzioni del grande amburghese ci sono apparse come veri episodi di un suo particolare momento di vita intima di grande adesione spirituale. La prima parte del programma si è chiusa con la esecuzione di «Cinque danze greche» di Nicholas Skalkotos. L'orditura di queste composizioni è più che elementare addirittura inesistente. Ma il maestro Mitropoulos è riuscito a conferire loro una gradevole, orgiastica fisionomia così che tutte hanno trovato il loro giusto rilievo ed un loro colore paesaggistico e umano.

Ma la stupenda solidità di questo complesso addirittura galvanizzato dal potere di questo grande direttore si è manifestata durante l'esecuzione della «Sinfonia n. 2 in re maggiore» di Brahms. Una composizione apparentemente poco impegnata (almeno nei primi tre movimenti) ma che nell'ultimo movimento assume un tono robusto, ricco di forza e di fantasia, così che tutta la opera tende alla ricreazione di un mondo idillico ed essenzialmente lirico certamente gradevole e consolante allo spirito che vi si abbandona senza preconcetti intellettualistici. Notevole in questa ultima prova che ha concluso l'interessante programma la purezza ammagante dei pianissimi e il contrappeso degli effetti timbrici del finale che concludono l'opera in una nobile affermazione corale piena di forza e di profondo sentimento.

Alla fine del programma ufficiale dietro alla intensa richiesta del pubblico festosissimo il maestro Mitropoulos ha dovuto concedere l'esecuzione di due brani fuori programma. Un incontro fortunato dunque, una serata riuscitissima e una autentica affermazione di arte.

Cronache musicali

CONCERTI DELLA NEW YORK PHILHARMONIC SYMPHONY

Questo magnifico complesso orchestrale, considerato oggi in America come uno dei più perfetti, se non come il più perfetto (forse la sola orchestra di Boston potrebbe contendere ai newyorkesi il primato in questo campo), trae origine dalla felice fusione, nel 1928, delle due grandi orchestre: la «New York Philharmonic» (fondata nel lontano 1842) e la «New York Simphony» (fondata nel 1878) ed ha dunque dietro di sé una lunga e gloriosa tradizione.

Dalle prime battute del concerto l'ascoltatore si può convincere, infatti, che si tratta di un complesso di eccezionale efficienza sonora e di perfetta fusione. Anzi, per il gusto europeo le gradazioni dinamiche possono apparire non di rado troppo violente, come può anche sembrare alquanto rigido, soprattutto nei momenti di sapore romantico, lo stile interpretativo, nel quale invano si cercherebbero il romantico abbandono e la raffinata ricerca di effetti timbrici ai quali siamo tanto abituati.

Questi simpatici musicisti newyorkesi rappresentano invece il clima e lo stile del loro Paese: la loro interpretazione si propone anzitutto di essere sana, equilibrata, esatta fino ai minimi particolari della partitura e soffusa di quell'inestimabile dinadella partitura è soffusa di quell'irresistibile dinaricana.

Guidare una tale orchestra, soprattutto quando essa si esibisce, in una tournée, quasi ogni sera, dopo una lunga ed esauriente preparazione, si riduce a pochi cenni sintetici: la macchina corre da sé, basta sorvegliarla attentamente.

Dimitri Mitropoulos, uno dei più grandi maestri della nostra epoca, tecnico formidabile, vero mago della bacchetta, ha presentato questa orchestra in due concerti ai quali abbiamo assistito nel breve giro di ventiquattro ore (a Perugia e a Roma) con la sua solita, naturale e avvincente padronanza tecnica e ha riscosso un successo poderosissimo.

Tanto a Perugia quanto a Roma, gli ascoltatori hanno richiesto ed ottenuto due «bis».

GLI SPETT

AL SAN CARLO

MITROPULOS e la orchestra di New York

Mitropulos mancava da Napoli da cinque anni, dall'estate del '50. Ha, poi, diretto a Firenze, a Milano, a Roma, ma a Napoli, città nella quale, come egli stesso suol dire, ha lasciato buona parte del suo cuore, non era più tornato. La direzione della Orchestra Filarmonica di New York ha limitato la sua libertà di scelta, sicchè ora soltanto, auspice la tournée del complesso, al caro ed illustre maestro è stato permesso di dirigere un solo concerto al San Carlo e sostarvi meno di ventiquattr'ore.

I napoletani, che furono tra i primi ad ammirare Mitropulos qualcosa come più di vent'anni orsono, quando apparve sul podio della «Scarlatti» nella duplice veste di direttore-pianista, e che lo hanno seguito nella sua rapida e fulgida ascesa, conoscono a fondo l'uomo e l'artista perchè si senta il bisogno di illustrarne la personalità. Mitropulos (ed ebbi a dirlo più volte) è la musica-istinto distillata attraverso il filtro dell'intelletto.

Tutto è a posto nelle sue interpretazioni, ma la musica conserva la vivezza travolgente che è propria dello stato creativo. Egli ha sempre ricordato quegli artisti che, in passato, improvvisavano all'organo o al piano; ricordo che le sue interpretazioni facevano immaginare una colata di lava incandescente che, uscita dai fianchi del vulcano, non proceda alla cieca, ma fluisca nell'alveo che la guidi e la regoli. Mitropulos riusciva a compiere questo miracolo di conciliare gli opposti.

Ogni musica è studiata a fondo, dal musicista e dall'esteta, ed essa, attraverso Mitropulos, balza viva col duplice fascino della immediatezza e del calcolo. La complessa natura di questo artista mediterraneo, natura di istintivo e di studioso insieme, che ha sempre costituito il segreto fascino dell'insigne direttore, esercita una diretta suggestione sull'orchestra che diviene un solo ed unico istrumento, docile alla volontà del suo capo, perfetta nel rendere la nota e nell'esprimere. A contatto con una orchestra come quella di New York, che è indubbiamente una delle più illustri ed antiche, Mitropulos — almeno, c'è sembrato — ha maggiormente accentuato il lato «virtuosistico» delle esecuzioni. L'orchestra di New York — nella quale si notano una decina di italiani ed altrettanti oriundi — è una compagine di alto valore, e per la disciplina artistica e per la eccellenza di talune «famiglie», come, ad esempio, quelle dei legni e degli ottoni. Anche gli archi, d'una grande omogeneità, sono ragguardevoli, assai più per levigatezza e precisione che per intimo calore di suono. Nondimeno la sonorità dell'orchestra, nel suo insieme, ha un che di brillante e di pastoso che ricorda la perfezione di taluni strumenti meccanici: una perfezione che ci lascia ammirati ma che non commuove nell'intimo.

Si spiega, così, la «obiettività» nella esecuzione delle «Variazioni» di Brahms su tema di Haydn, nella quale erano, sì, profuse delicatezze sonore e sfumature timbriche squisite, ma si avvertiva in tono minore quella misteriosa poesia e quella commossa, interiore tristezza contemplativa che costituiscono l'essenza di questa austera e grande pagina.

Iniziato con la sinfonia de «La forza del destino», e continuato con Brahms, il programma presentava due novità: il pezzo virtuosistico «Show Piece» dell'americano Morton Gould (variazioni elaborate sul piano dell'interesse ritmico e timbrico) e la decima sinfonia di Sciostacovic: pagina di una prolissa lungaggine in cui il popolare musicista raccatta i cascami dei maggiori compositori dell'ottocento, da Brahms a Wagner, da Schumann a Ciaikowski e li manovra con indubbia sicurezza di mano, ma senza stile nè unità. E sopratutto senza una interiore necessità di dire una sua parola.

E' chiaro che questa musica, che sembra già nota, si lascia ascoltare facilmente (prolissità a parte) e non presenta oscurità: vuol esser musica popolare. Ma il carattere popolare non dovrebbe escludere nè personalità nè interiorità. Mitropulos ha resa questa mastodontica pagina in modo superbo: e il pubblico ha reclamato, con fervide acclamazioni, di ascoltare altre musiche. Il che l'illustre direttore ha concesso, eseguendo una pagina di Rachfaninoff ed un pezzo virtuosisstico di un musicista messicano. A quando un ritorno di Mitropulos??

ACOUSTICS NO BAR TO PHILHARMONIC

Orchestra Cheered in Rome for Performance in House Noted for Its Poor Sound

Special to The New York Times.

ROME, Sept. 28—The New York Philharmonic-Symphony Orchestra achieved a success here tonight that inveterate concert-goers termed "sensational."

The Teatro Argentina, scene of its Roman triumph, is an acoustic monstrosity where more than one famed orchestra has fallen flat. The local concert season starts much later in the autumn, and the Roman public is known and dreaded as blasé.

But tonight, a glittering and enthusiastic audience applauded right through intervals. It stamped, jumped and cheered so much that Dimitri Mitropoulos, the conductor, conceded to two encores.

Premier Antonio Segni, Foreign Minister Gaetano Martino and Mrs. Clare Boothe Luce, the American Ambassador, attended the performance, along with many other political, diplomatic and society figures. They were drawn into wild ovations started by youngsters who filled inexpensive seats. The applause was nearly delirious in the gallery behind the orchestra, where listeners enjoy the rare opportunity of watching the conductor's face, one of several pecularities of the Argentina.

The performance tonight was dedicated to the memory of Olin Downes, late music critic of The New York Times, as was last night's in Perugia.

Approaching the end of its extensive tour of European music centers with rarely more than one concert in the same place, the orchestra betrayed not the slightest trace of being tired tonight.

Local music critics praised the orchestra's brilliance, precision and suppleness. Mr. Mitropoulos was lionized.

The audience warmed up on Weber's "Freischuetz" Overture and Mendelssohn's Fifth. Much interest was aroused by "Greek Dances," by Nicholas Skalkotas, which convincingly brought out the orchestra's virtuosity. A superb rendition of Brahms' Second Symphony led to the climax of cheers.

The Philharmonic will end its Italian concert series tomorrow with a presentation at the San Carlo Opera House, Naples. The next country to be visited is Greece, where the orchestra will be heard at the Athens Music Festival. After two more concerts in London, next week, the musicians will return home by plane.

— Θὰ δώσῃ δύο συναυλίες. Κανένας χῶρος δὲν θὰ ἦταν ἀρκετὸς νὰ περιλάβῃ ὅλους ἐκείνους ποὺ θέλουν νὰ ἰδοῦν τὸν Μητρόπουλο καὶ νὰ τὸν χαροῦν διευθύνοντας τὸ σπουδαῖον ὀρχηστρικὸ συγκρότημα τῆς Ἀμερικῆς.

— Ἐκτὸς τοῦ ἑλληνικοῦ ἐνδιαφέροντος, ἀθρόα τηλεγραφήματα καταφθάνουν καθημερινῶς ἀπὸ τὸ ἐξωτερικό.

— Ἀπὸ τὸ Λονδῖνον Ἕλληνες ἐφοπλισταὶ κράτησαν δωμάτια στὴν Μεγάλη Βρεττανία καὶ παρήγγειλαν τηλεγραφικῶς καὶ εἰσιτήρια. Τὸ ἴδιο ἀπὸ τὴν Ἑλβετία καὶ τὴν Γαλλία. Ἀπὸ τὴν Γερμανία θὰ ἔλθῃ ἕνας Κρουὺπ μὲ τὴν γυναῖκα του καὶ διάφορες ἄλλες προσωπικότητες τοῦ μεγάλου γερμανικοῦ βιομηχανικοῦ Ὀργανισμοῦ. Ζήτησαν 14 εἰσιτήρια γιὰ τὶς δύο συναυλίες.

— Ἡ Κυβέρνησις θὰ δώσῃ τὴν Παρασκευὴ τὸ ἀπόγευμα 7½ — 9½ μεγάλη δεξίωσι στὸ ξενοδοχεῖον τῆς Μεγάλης Βρεττανίας. Τὴν Κυριακὴ τὸ ἀπόγευμα τὸ Ὠδεῖον Ἀθηνῶν ἐξ ἄλλου, θὰ δεξιωθῇ τὸν Μητρόπουλο εἰς τὴν αἴθουσαν τῶν συναυλιῶν τοῦ Ἱδρύματος. Θὰ παραστοῦν μέλη τοῦ Ὑπουργικοῦ Συμβουλίου καὶ τοῦ Ὠδείου, καθηγηταί, παλαιοὶ ἀριστεύσαντες μαθηταί, ἀποφοιτήσαντες μὲ χρυσᾶ βραβεῖα κ.ἄ.

— Εἰς τὸν ἀρχιμουσικόν, ἄλλοτε μαθητὴν τοῦ Ὠδείου Ἀθηνῶν, χρυσοῦν μετάλλιον κλπ. θὰ δοθῇ ἕνα ἀναμνηστικὸν δῶρον καὶ θὰ τὸν προσφωνήσῃ ὁ πρόεδρος τοῦ ἱδρύματος κ. Ἀριστείδης Κυριακίδης.

Ο ΜΗΤΡΟΠΟΥΛΟΣ ΣΤΗΝ ΑΘΗΝΑ

«Ο ΤΑΧΥΔΡΟΜΟΣ» Σάββατο, 24 Σεπτεμβρίου 1955

ΕΝΑ ΟΝΕΙΡΟ ΠΟΥ ΓΙΝΕΤΑΙ ΠΡΑΓΜΑΤΙΚΟΤΗΣ

ΑΠΟ τὶς 5 Σεπτεμβρίου ὁ Μητρόπουλος, μὲ τὴν περίφημη Φιλαρμονικὴ Ὀρχήστρα τῆς Νέας Ὑόρκης, βρίσκεται στὴν Εὐρώπη. Ἐδιμβοῦργο, Παρίσι, Βιέννη, Βρυξέλλες, Βερολῖνο, Ἑλβετία, Ρώμη, Νεάπολι. Καὶ τὸ ἐρχόμενο Σάββατο, 1η Ὀκτωβρίου, στὶς ὀκτὼ τὸ βράδυ, Θεοῦ θέλοντος καὶ Ἀττικοῦ οὐρανοῦ συναινοῦντος, τὸ ἀθηναϊκὸν κοινὸν θὰ ἔχῃ τὴν μοναδικὴ εὐτυχία νὰ ἰδῇ τὸν μεγάλο καὶ ξενητεμένο ἀρχιμουσικό του ἐπικεφαλῆς μιᾶς ἀπὸ τὶς πρῶτες ὀρχήστρες τοῦ κόσμου.

Ἀπὸ τὸ 1937, ποὺ ἔφυγε γιὰ τελευταία φορὰ ἀπὸ τὴν ἀγαπημένη του Ἀθήνα, μὲ τὴν ὑπόσχεσι ὅτι θἄρχεται κάθε χρόνο, δὲν μπόρεσε νὰ ξαναγυρίσῃ. Ἡ Ἀμερικὴ ποὺ βρίσκεται σὲ μιὰ συνεχῆ ἀναζήτησι καὶ ἀνανέωσι προσωπικοτήτων καὶ μεγάλων ταλέντων τὸν ἐπεσήμανε ἀπὸ τὴν πρώτην στιγμήν. Τότε ποὺ ἔκανε τὴν θορυβώδη του ἐμφάνισιν εἰς τὴν Βοστώνην κατὰ πρόσκλησιν τοῦ Κουσσεβίτσκυ καὶ ποὺ τοῦ ἔγραψαν οἱ κριτικοί: Ποῦ ἦταν κρυμμένο αὐτὸ τὸ μουσικὸ φαινόμενο; Κι' ἕνας, ὁ πιὸ τολμηρός: Εὑρήκαμε τὸν ἀντικαταστάτη τοῦ μεγάλου Κουσσεβίτσκυ.

Ὁ τελευταῖος ἦταν τότε ὁ μουσικὸς δικτάτωρ τῆς Ἀμερικῆς. Καὶ αὐτὸ δὲν τὸ συγχώρησε εἰς τὸν κριτικὸν ὁ ἀείμνηστος μαέστρος μέχρι τὴν ἡμέρα τοῦ θανάτου του.

Τίποτε ὅμως δὲν μπόρεσε νὰ ἀνακόψῃ τὴν φρενήρη σταδιοδρομία τοῦ Μητροπούλου. Παρὰ τὴν φοβερὴ ἀντίδρασι τῶν συνηθισμένων μουσικῶν συμφερόντων, καὶ εἶναι πολλὰ καὶ φοβερὰ εἰς τὰς Ἡνωμένας Πολιτείας, ἐπρόλαβε καὶ τὸν ἐξησφάλισε ἡ Μιννεάπολις. Ἡ μικρὴ καὶ σχεδὸν ἀσήμαντη ὀρχήστρα της σὲ λίγο καιρὸ ἔγινε περιζήτητη. Οἱ περιοδεῖες του στὶς διάφορες πολιτεῖες ἀποτελοῦσαν μεγάλο μουσικὸ γεγονός. Μὲ ὑπερφυσικὴ δύναμις εἶχε μεταμορφώσει τοὺς μουσικοὺς αὐτούς. Ὁ Δημήτρης Μητρόπουλος, ποὺ εἶχε γίνει ἡ πρώτη καὶ ἡ πιὸ ἀγαπητὴ προσωπικότης τῆς μεγάλης Πολιτείας. Ἡ Μιννεάπολις στὸ τέλος ἐκάμφθη. Δὲν μπόρεσε νὰ τὸν κρατήσῃ περισσότερο. Τὰ μεγάλα κέντρα τὸν εἶχαν ἤδη βραχυκυκλώσει. Ἡ Νέα Ὑόρκη, τὸ Σικάγο, ἡ Φιλαδέλφεια. Ἐπεκράτησε ἡ Νέα Ὑόρκη. Μὲ τὰ πλούτη της καὶ τὸν κοσμοπολιτισμό της. Ἀλλὰ καὶ μὲ τὴν μεγάλη καὶ ἱστορική της ὀρχήστρα. Εἶναι κάμποσα χρόνια τώρα ποὺ βρίσκεται ἐπικεφαλῆς της ὁ Ἕλληνας αὐτὸς καὶ κάθε χρόνο τὴν ὁδηγεῖ ἀπὸ θρίαμβο σὲ θρίαμβο.

Ἑφέτος, εἰς τὴν εὐρωπαϊκή της περιοδείαν, περιελήφθη καὶ ἡ Ἀθήνα. Πῶς ἔγινε αὐτὸ τὸ θαῦμα; Εἶναι πολλοὶ οἱ παράγοντες ποὺ ἐβοήθησαν. Πρῶτα ὑπῆρξεν ἡ βαθεῖα ἀγάπη καὶ ἀκοίμητη νοσταλγία τοῦ Μητροπούλου γιὰ τὴν Ἑλλάδα.

Μέσα στὴν τύρβη τῆς ἀμερικανικῆς μεγαλοπόλεως, ἀνάμεσα στὸν ἀβάσταχτο φόρτο ἐργασίας καὶ ὑποχρεώσεων, μέσα εἰς τὴν ἀέναον πάλην τῆς ἐπικρατήσεως καὶ τοῦ ἀνταγωνισμοῦ, εὕρισκε πάντα καιρὸ νὰ ἀλληλογραφῇ μὲ δυὸ-τρία πρόσωπα στὴν Ἀθήνα καὶ νὰ δείχνῃ ἐνδιαφέρον γιὰ κάθε καλλιτεχνικὴ καὶ πνευματικὴ κίνησι καὶ πρόοδο. Ἔτσι, ὅταν τοῦ ἔγινε ἡ πρότασις νὰ ἔλθῃ στὴν Ἀθήνα μὲ τὴν ὀρχήστρα, τὸν εὑρῆκε ψυχικὰ παρασκευασμένο ἀπολύτως. Γιατὶ δὲν εἶναι ἀρκετὸ νὰ τὸ ἤθελε μόνο. Ἔπρεπε καὶ νὰ μπορῇ νὰ τὸ πραγματοποιήσῃ. Καὶ τὸ τελευταῖο δὲν ἐξηρτᾶτο ἀπὸ τὴν ἐπιθυμίαν του. Διὰ νὰ μετακινηθοῦν οἱ 105 μουσικοὶ τῆς ὀρχήστρας χρειάζεται συμβόλαιον, πολλὰ χρήματα καὶ ἕνας σοβαρὸς μάνατζερ ποὺ θὰ τοὺς ἀναλάβῃ. Ἡ ἐφετεινὴ περιοδεία εἶχε κανονισθῇ μὲ τελευταῖον σταθμὸν τὴν Ἰταλίαν, συγκεκριμένως τὴν Νεάπολιν. Εἰς τὸ σημεῖον αὐτὸ ἐπενέβησαν οἱ φίλοι τῆς Μουσικῆς τῶν Ἀθηνῶν, ποὺ ἐνέγραψαν τὸν Μητρόπουλο πρῶτο ἐπίτιμο μέλος.

Μιὰ μακρυὰ ἀλληλογραφία τοῦ καθηγητὴ κ. Λούρου, μέλους τοῦ συμβουλίου τοῦ Συλλόγου τῶν φίλων τῆς Μουσικῆς, μετὰ τοῦ ἐν Νέα Ὑόρκη διαμένοντος κ. Βασιλείου Γουλανδρῆ, φανατικοῦ φιλομούσου καὶ γνωρίζοντος τοὺς ἐν γένει σκοποὺς τοῦ Συλλόγου, ἔδωσε τὴν εὐτυχῆ λύσιν εἰς τὸ ζήτημα. Ὁ κ. Γουλανδρῆς κατέβαλεν 25 χιλιάδες δολλάρια διὰ νὰ μετακινηθῇ ἡ ὀρχήστρα ἀπὸ τὴν Νεάπολιν καὶ νὰ δώσῃ δύο συναυλίας εἰς Ἀθήνας.. Ταυτοχρόνως ἐζήτησεν ὅπως αἱ εἰσπράξεις τῶν συναυλιῶν ἀφαιρουμένων τῶν ἐξόδων τῆς τριημέρου διαμονῆς των διατεθοῦν ὑπὲρ τῶν σκοπῶν τῶν «Φίλων τῆς Μουσικῆς». Οἱ σκοποὶ αὐτοὶ περιλαμβάνουν κυρίως τὴν ἀνέγερσιν τοῦ Μεγάρου τῆς Μουσικῆς εἰς Ἀθήνας. Δηλαδὴ μίαν αἴθουσαν μεγάλων συμφωνικῶν συναυλιῶν, μίαν μικρότερη διὰ ρεσιτάλ, μουσικήν, βιβλιοθήκην καὶ μουσεῖον.

Ἡ λαμπρὰ αὐτὴ πρότασις ἔγινε καὶ ἀπὸ τοὺς ἁρμοδίους κρατικοὺς παράγοντας προθύμως ἀποδεκτὴ καὶ ἔτσι θεμελιοῦται, ἔστω καὶ συμβολικῶς ἐπὶ τοῦ παρόντος, τὸ μεγάλο ἔργον τὸ ὁποῖον ὡραματίσθησαν μερικοὶ ἄνθρωποι ποὺ «πιστεύουν» στὴν μουσικὴ σὰν θρησκεία.

Ἡ ὀρχήστρα ποὺ θὰ ἀκούσωμε τὸ ἐρχόμενο Σάββατο εἰς τὸ Ἀρχαῖον Ὠδεῖον Ἡρώδου τοῦ Ἀττικοῦ ἔχει μίαν μακρὰν καὶ ἔνδοξην ἱστορίαν. Τὸ 1842 ἱδρύθη τὸ πρῶτον στὴν Νέα Ὑόρκη ἡ Φιλαρμονικὴ ἑταιρεία, ἔργον ἑνὸς ἐνθουσιώδους μουσικοῦ τοῦ Οὔρελι - Κορέλλι Χίλλ. Ἡ πρώτη συναυλία ἐδόθη τὸν Ἀπρίλιον τοῦ ἔτους αὐτοῦ εἰς τὴν αἴθουσαν Ἀπόλλων τοῦ Κάτω Μπρόντγουαιη. Τὸ 1892 ἡ Φιλαρμονικὴ ἐγκατεστάθη εἰς τὸ Κάρνεγκυ Χώλλ. Συνέχισε τὴν σταδιοδρομίαν της διευθυνομένη κατὰ καιροὺς ἀπὸ διακεκριμένους μαέστρους μέχρι τοῦ Μάλερ, τοῦ Βάϊνγκάρτνερ, τοῦ Ριχάρδου Στράους καὶ τοῦ Μένγκελμπεργκ. Τὸ 1921 ἡ ἐθνικὴ ὀρχήστρα συνεχωνεύθη μὲ τὴν Φιλαρμονικὴν καὶ ἑπτὰ ἔτη ἀργότερα ἐγεννήθη ἡ «Φιλαρμονικὴ - Συμφωνικὴ ὀρχήστρα τῆς Νέας Ὑόρκης». Τὸ 1925—26 ἡ νέα ὀρχήστρα ἔκαμε τὴν πρώτην της περιοδείαν εἰς τὴν Εὐρώπην μὲ τὸν Τοσκανίνι. Κατὰ τὴν δεκαετίαν 1930—40 πλεῖστοι μεγάλοι μαέστροι ἐκλήθησαν νὰ τὴν διευθύνουν, ὁ δὲ Μπροῦνο Βάλτερ ὠνομάσθη τὸ 1947 Μουσικός της σύμβουλος. Τέλος τὸ 1950 ὁ Μητρόπουλος ἐκλήθη νὰ ἀναλάβῃ ὡς πρῶτος μαέστρος τὴν διεύθυνσίν της.

Ἡ ἐφετεινὴ περιοδεία θὰ τῆς προσθέσῃ ἀκόμη ἕνα θρίαμβον, τὸν ὁποῖον θὰ μοιρασθῇ μὲ τὸν μεγάλον Ἕλληνα ἀρχιμουσικόν, τὸν Δημήτρη Μητρόπουλον. Αἱ Ἀθῆναι τοὺς ἐπιφυλάσσουν τὴν πιὸ θερμὴ καὶ ἐνθουσιώδη ὑποδοχή.

Μ. Κυρ.

Ὁ Μητρόπουλος, προτοῦ ἀκολουθήσῃ τὸ στάδιο τοῦ μαέστρου καὶ ἐξελιχθῇ στὸν περίφημο ἀρχιμουσικὸ ποὺ εἶναι σήμερα, εἶχε ὡς ὄνειρό του νὰ γίνῃ ἕνας θαυμάσιος πιανίστας. Καὶ στὴν Ἑλλάδα μάλιστα εἶχε συνδεύσει πολλοὺς γνωστοὺς καλλιτέχνες.

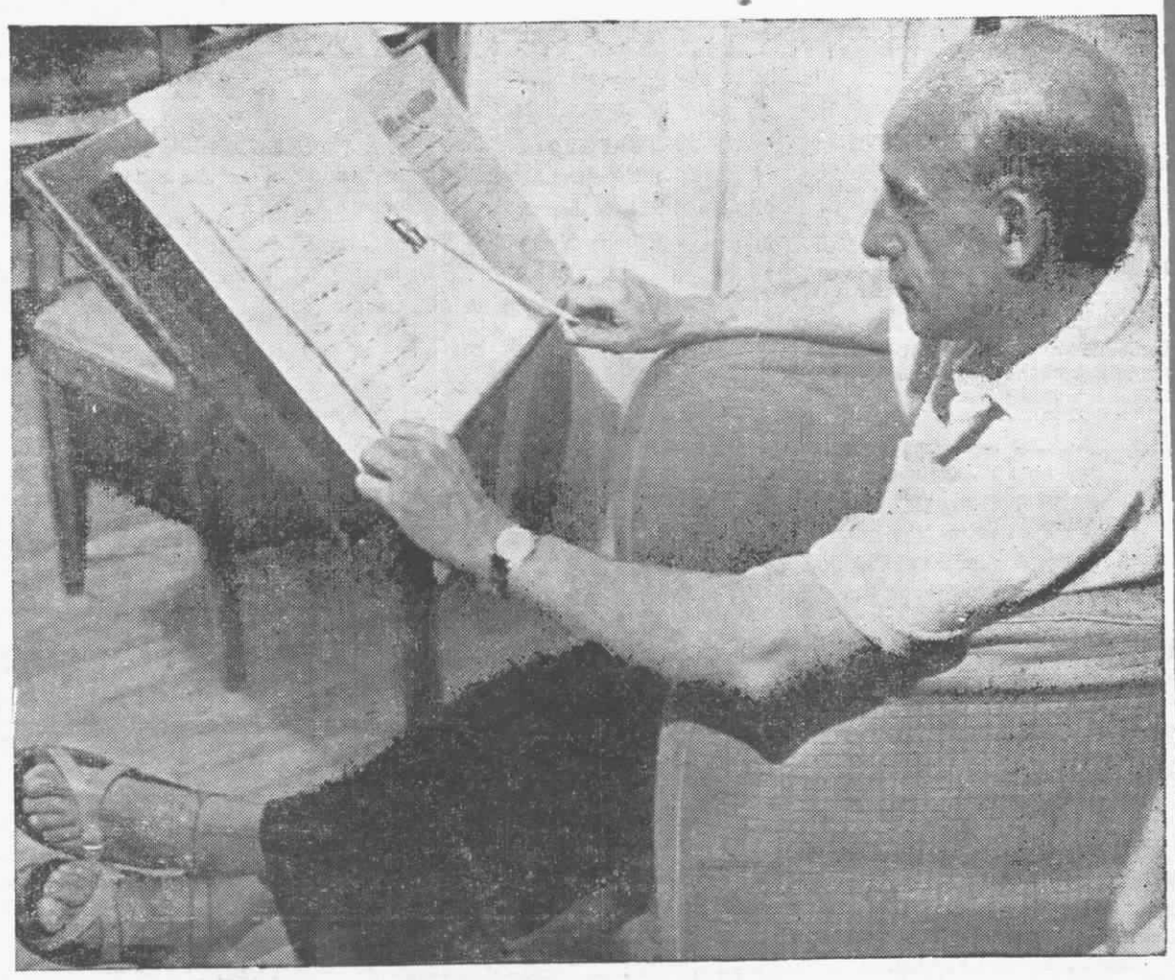
Μία ἀνέκδοτος φωτογραφία τοῦ Δημήτρη Μητρόπουλου, ὁ ὁποῖος φθάνει αὔριον εἰς Ἀθήνας. Ἡ φωτογραφία μᾶς ἀπεστάλη ἀπὸ τὸν Σύλλογον «Οἱ φίλοι τῆς μουσικῆς» τοῦ ὁποίου ὁ Μητρόπουλος εἶνε τὸ πρῶτον ἐπίτιμον μέλος.

Μία ἄλλη φωτογραφία τοῦ ἀφικνουμένου αὔριον διασήμου Ἕλληνος ἀρχιμουσικοῦ.

Ὁ ΔΗΜΗΤΡΗΣ ΜΗΤΡΟΠΟΥΛΟΣ φθάνει αὔριον τὸ ἀπόγευμα εἰς τὰς Ἀθήνας. Μαζὶ μὲ τὸν διάσημο Ἕλληνα ἀρχιμουσικὸν ἀναμένεται τὸ συγκρότημα τῆς Φιλαρμονικῆς Ὀρχήστρας τῆς Νέας Ὑόρκης ἀπὸ 115 ἄτομα, ἐκ τῶν ὁποίων 108 εἶνε τὰ μέλη τῆς Ὀρχήστρας. Τὴν 4ην ἀπογευματινήν, ποὺ ὑπολογίζεται ὅτι θὰ φθάσῃ ὁ κορυφαῖος Ἕλλην μαέστρος, θὰ προσέλθουν εἰς τὸ ἀεροδρόμιον τοῦ Ἑλληνικοῦ ὅλα τὰ στελέχη τῆς Κρατικῆς Ὀρχήστρας Ἀθηνῶν καὶ ἡ εἰδικὴ ἐπιτροπὴ δεξιώσεως ποὺ ἀπαρτίζεται ἀπὸ τὸν γενικὸν διευθυντὴν τῆς Κρατικῆς Ὀρχήστρας κ. Φιλοκτήτην Οἰκονομίδην, τὸν διευθυντὴν τοῦ Ἐξωτερικοῦ Τύπου τοῦ ὑπουργείου Προεδρίας τῆς Κυβερνήσεως κ. Καβουνίδην καὶ τὸν προϊστάμενον τῆς Διευθύνσεως Καλῶν Τεχνῶν τοῦ ὑπουργείου Παιδείας κ. Χριστοφείδη. Εἰς τὸ ἀεροδρόμιον ἐπίσης θὰ ὑποδεχθοῦν τὸν Μητρόπουλον καὶ τὴν Ὀρχήστραν τὰ μέλη τῆς ὀργανώσεως «Οἱ Φίλοι τῆς Μουσικῆς», εἰς τὴν ὁποίαν περιῆλθαν αἱ εἰσπράξεις τῶν δύο συναυλιῶν, ποὺ θὰ δοθοῦν μεθαύριον καὶ τὴν Κυριακὴν εἰς τὸ Ὠδεῖον Ἡρώδου τοῦ Ἀττικοῦ, προκειμένου ν' ἀποτελέσουν τὴν βάσιν διὰ τὴν ἀνέγερσιν Μεγάρου Μουσικῆς, μὲ αἴθουσαν συναυλιῶν χωρητικότητος 2.500 θέσεων.



Ὁ Δημ. Μητρόπουλος, ποὺ ἔρχεται εἰς τὴν Ἑλλάδα ὕστερα ἀπὸ δεκαεπτὰ ἐτῶν ἀπουσία, τὸ ἴδιο βράδυ τῆς ἀφίξεώς του θὰ παραστῇ εἰς τὰς 7 εἰς εἰδικὴν δεξίωσιν, ἡ ὁποία ὀργανώνεται πρὸς τιμήν του ἀπὸ τὸν ὑπουργὸν τῆς Παιδείας κ. Γεροκωστόπουλον εἰς τὸ ξενοδοχεῖον τῆς «Μεγ. Βρεττανίας». Τὴν ἑπομένην, δηλαδὴ τὸ Σάββατον τὸ πρωῒ εἰς τὰς 11 ἡ Φιλαρμονικὴ Ὀρχήστρα τῆς Νέας Ὑόρκης θὰ συγκεντρωθῇ εἰς τὸ Ὠδεῖον Ἡρώδου τοῦ Ἀττικοῦ γιὰ δοκιμὴ καὶ τὸ βράδυ θὰ δώσῃ τὴν πρώτην της συναυλίαν. Θὰ ἐπακολουθήσῃ τὴν Κυριακὴν δεξίωσις τὸ ἀπόγευμα εἰς τὸ Ὠδεῖον Ἀθηνῶν καὶ τὸ βράδυ ἡ δευτέρα συναυλία καὶ τὴν Δευτέραν τὸ ἀμερικανικὸν μουσικὸν συγκρότημα θὰ ἀναχωρήσῃ διὰ Λονδῖνον. Εἰς τὴν ἀγγλικὴν πρωτεύουσαν θὰ ἐμφανισθῇ εἰς τὰς 4 καὶ τὰς 5 Ὀκτωβρίου, θὰ συμπληρώσῃ δὲ ἔτσι 26 συναυλίες εἰς τὴν Εὐρώπην —τὴν πρώτην ἔδωσεν εἰς τὰς Σεπτεμβρίου εἰς τὸ Φεστιβὰλ τοῦ Δημβούργου— καὶ εἰς τὰς 20 Ὀκτωβρίου θὰ ἐγκαινιάσῃ τὴν χειμερινὴν σαιζὸν εἰς τὸ «Κάρνεγκυ Χώλλ» τῆς Νέας Ὑόρκης.

Ἂς σημειωθῇ ὅτι ἐντὸς ὀλιγωτέρων ὡρῶν ἐξηντλήθησαν γρήγορα ὅλα ἀνεξαιρέτως τὰ εἰσιτήρια καὶ τῆς 2ας συναυλίας Μητροπούλου. Ἡ ὑπηρεσία τοῦ Φεστιβὰλ διένειμε τὴν περασμένην Κυριακήν, 25ην Σεπτεμβρίου, συνολικῶς 1625 δελτία προτεραιότητος, οἱ κάτοχοι τῶν ὁποίων ἐπῆραν ὅλοι εἰσιτήρια. Μετὰ τὴν ἐξάντλησιν τῶν δελτίων προτεραιότητος παρέμειναν ἀπώλητα δύο εἰσιτήρια τῆς Α' θέσεως καὶ ὀκτὼ τῆς Β', τὰ ὁποῖα διετέθησαν εἰς τοὺς ἐν συνεχείᾳ προσελθόντας χωρὶς δελτία. Τῆς πρώτης συναυλίας ἐπωλήθησαν συνολικῶς ἐκ τοῦ κεντρικοῦ ταμείου εἰσιτηρίων τοῦ Φεστιβὰλ περὶ τὰ 3.100 εἰσιτήρια καὶ εἰσεπράχθησαν περὶ τὰς 360.000 δραχμαί. Διὰ τὰ εἰσιτήρια τῆς δευτέρας συναυλίας διενεμήθησαν δελτία εἰς ὅλους τοὺς ἀναμένοντας, ἐκλήθησαν δὲ διὰ τὴν ἀγορὰν εἰσιτηρίων μέχρι τοῦ ἀριθμοῦ 1791, ὁπότε καὶ ἐνητλήθησαν ὅλα τὰ εἰσιτήρια. Πρῶτον ἐξηντλήθησαν τὰ εἰσιτήρια τῆς τρίτης κατηγορίας δραχμῶν 120, ἐν συνεχείᾳ δὲ τῆς τετάρτης κατηγορίας δρχ. 45 ἕως τὸν ἀριθμὸν προτεραιότητος 1320. Εἰσιτήρια τῆς τρίτης κατηγορίας δρχ. 180 ὑπῆρχαν μέχρι καὶ τοῦ δελτίου προτεραιότητος 1420, τελευταῖα δὲ ἀπέμειναν τὰ εἰσιτήρια πρώτης θέσεως τῶν 240 δραχμῶν, ποὺ ἐξηντλήθησαν περὶ τὴν 7.10 ἀπογευματινὴν ἕως τὸν ἀριθμὸν προτεραιότητος 1791. Οὐδεὶς ἐκ τῶν προσελθόντων εἰς τὰ ταμεῖα τοῦ Φεστιβὰλ ἠγόρασεν εἰσιτήρια ἄνευ δελτίου προτεραιότητος, ἕκαστον τῶν ὁποίων ἀντηλλάσσετο μὲ αὐτὸ πλέον τῶν δύο εἰσιτηρίων. Σημειωτέον ὅτι καὶ τὰ μέλη τῆς Κυβερνήσεως, οἱ ἀνώτατοι αὐλικοί, οἱ πρεσβευταὶ καὶ οἱ ἐκδόται τῶν ἡμερησίων ἐφημερίδων Ἀθηνῶν, εἰς τοὺς ὁποίους ἐδόθη ἡ εὐχέρεια ἐξασφαλίσεως μέχρι δύο μόνον εἰσιτηρίων, κατέβαλον τὸ ἀντίτιμον αὐτῶν.

ΕΠ' ΕΥΚΑΙΡΙΑ ΤΟΥ ΦΕΣΤΙΒΑΛ ΑΘΗΝΩΝ

Ἀπὸ τὸ 1936, ποὺ ὁ Μητρόπουλος ἐμφανίστηκε γιὰ πρώτη φορὰ στὴν Ἀμερική, μὲ τὴν Ὀρχήστρα τῆς Βοστώνης, ἔδειξε ὅτι θὰ γίνῃ μία ἀπὸ τὶς μεγαλύτερες μουσικὲς προσωπικότητες τῶν Ἡν. Πολιτειῶν. Ἡ φωτεινή του σταδιοδρομία, ἐν τούτοις, τὸν ἀνέδειξε μέσα σὲ εἴκοσι χρόνια, ὡς μία μορφὴ ἀπὸ τὶς μεγαλύτερες τοῦ διεθνοῦς καλλιτεχνικοῦ στερεώματος. Καὶ δὲν θὰ ἦταν, ἴσως, ὑπερβολὴ νὰ ὑποστηρίξει κανείς, ὅτι, μετὰ τὴν ἀποστρατεία τοῦ μεγάλου Τοσκανίνι, ὁ Μητρόπουλος εἶναι σήμερα ἡ δυνατώτερη «μπαγκέτα» τοῦ κόσμου.

Ὁ Μητρόπουλος γεννήθηκε στὶς 18 Φεβρουαρίου 1896, στὴν Ἀθήνα. Ἡ οἰκογενειακή του παράδοσις—ὁ παππούς του ἦταν ἱερεὺς— καὶ μιὰ ἔμφυτη κλίσις του πρὸς τὸ θρησκευτικὸ μυστικισμό, λίγο ἔλειψε νὰ τὸν ὁδηγήσουν, ἀναχωρητή, σὲ κάποιο κελλὶ μοναστηριοῦ, στὸ Ἅγιον Ὄρος. Ὁ μικρὸς Δημήτρης, ὡστόσο, ἀφιερώθηκε στὴ Μουσική, «γιατὶ στὰ ἑλληνικὰ μοναστήρια δὲν θὰ τοῦ ἦταν δυνατὸν νὰ ἔχῃ στὴ διάθεσί του ἕνα ἁρμόνιο, τουλάχιστον, ποὺ θὰ τοῦ ἐπέτρεπε νὰ ἱκανοποιεῖ τὸ ἀκατανίκητο πάθος του γιὰ τὴ Μουσική».

Ἑπτὰ ἐτῶν ἄρχισε μαθήματα πιάνου. Δώδεκα ἐτῶν, ἀφοῦ τελείωσε τὰ μαθήματα τῆς προκαταρκτικῆς, ἐνεγράφη στὸ Ὠδεῖον Ἀθηνῶν, μὲ καθηγητὰς (στοὺς ὁποίους πολλὰ ὀφείλει, κατὰ τὴν ὁμολογία του) τὸν Λουδοβίκο Βασσενχόβεν, στὸ πιάνο, καὶ τὸν Ἁρμάνδο Μαρσίκ, στὴ σύνθεσι.

Τὶς πρῶτες του συνθέσεις—ὑποκρούσεις γιὰ τραγωδίες τοῦ Σοφοκλέους καὶ τοῦ Εὐριπίδου—ἔγραψε σὲ ἡλικία 14 ἐτῶν. Τὸ 1919 συνέθεσε τὴν ὄπερα «Βεατρίκη», σὲ κείμενο τοῦ Μωρὶς Μαίτερλιγκ, ἡ ὁποία ἐξετελέσθη στὸ Ὠδεῖον Ἀθηνῶν μὲ πρωταγωνίστρια τὴν Κατίνα Παξινοῦ. Ὁ Σαὶν—Σάνς, ὁ ὁποῖος ἔγραψε ἐνθουσιαστικὴ κριτικὴ γιὰ τὸ ἔργο, προσέφερε τὴν εὐκαιρία στὸν Μητρόπουλο νὰ σπουδάσῃ στὴ Γαλλία. Ἐν τούτοις τὶς σπουδές του στὸ ἐξωτερικὸ ἄρχισε στὶς Βρυξέλλες μὲ τὸν Πὼλ Ζελσόν, συνέχισε δὲ στὸ Βερολῖνο μὲ τὸν Φερούτσιο Μπουζόνι. Τὸ 1921 διωρίσθηκε βοηθὸς διευθυντὴς τῆς ὀρχήστρας τῆς Κρατικῆς Ὄπερας, τρία χρόνια δὲ ἀργότερα ἐπέστρεψε στὴν Ἑλλάδα ὡς διευθυντὴς τῆς Συμφ. Ὀρχήστρας Ἀθηνῶν καὶ καθηγητὴς τῶν ἀνωτέρων θεωρητικῶν στὸ Ὠδεῖο Ἀθηνῶν.

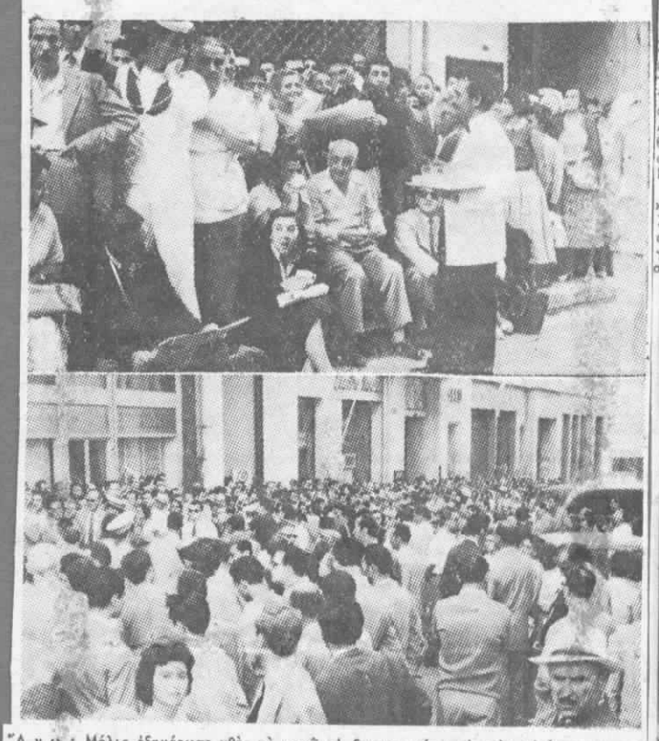
Ἡ διεθνὴς σταδιοδρομία τοῦ Μητρόπουλου ἄρχισε οὐσιαστικὰ τὸ 1930, μὲ τὴ Φιλαρμονικὴ τοῦ Βερολίνου. Τότε ἀκριβῶς ἐπραγματοποίησε καὶ τὸν ἀσύλληπτο ἆθλο τῆς ἐκτελέσεως τοῦ 3ου Κοντσέρτου γιὰ πιάνο τοῦ Προκόφιεφ, παίζοντας ὁ ἴδιος τὸ μέρος τοῦ σολίστα καὶ διευθύνοντας ταυτοχρόνως, καὶ τὴν ὀρχήστρα! Καὶ ἄλλοι μαέστροι, πρὶν ἀπ' τὸν Μητρόπουλο, εἶχαν πραγματοποιήσει παρόμοιες «διπλὲς» ἐκτελέσεις, σὲ ἔργα ὅμως τεχνικῶς πολὺ εὐκολώτερα—Κοντσέρτα τοῦ Μότσαρτ ἰδίως. Ἡ δυσκολώτατη ὅμως παρτιτούρα τοῦ Προκόφιεφ προσδίδει στὸ γεγονὸς τὶς διαστάσεις κατορθώματος, μοναδικοῦ στὰ χρονικὰ τῆς συγχρόνου τέχνης. Προικισμένος μὲ ὅλες τῆς ἀρετὲς ἑνὸς μεγάλου πραγματικά, δεξιοτέχνου, ὁ Μητρόπουλος δὲν ἀκολούθησε τὴ σταδιοδρομία αὐτή. Σὲ διάφορες περιπτώσεις ἐπανέλαβε τὸν πρῶτο αὐτὸν ἆθλο του, ὄχι μόνον μὲ τὸ Κοντσέρτο τοῦ Προκόφιεφ, ἀλλὰ καὶ μὲ ἄλλα δύσκολα ἔργα μοντέρνων συνθετῶν (Μιλώ, Κρένεκ, Ρεσπίγκι, Μαλιπιέρο, Ραβέλ). Τὰ ἔργα αὐτὰ ἐξετέλεσε ὡς σολίστ, διευθύνοντας, παραλλήλως, καὶ τὴν ὀρχήστρα, «γιὰ νὰ δώσει», ὅπως ὁ ἴδιος χαρακτηριστικά, ὁμολογεῖ, «τὴν εὐκαιρία στὸ κοινὸν νὰ ἀκούσει ἔργα, ποὺ δὲ περιλαμβάνονται στὸ τρέχον ρεπερτόριο τῶν δεξιοτεχνῶν». Ἐν τούτοις ἡ διεύθυνσις τῆς ὀρχήστρας ὑπῆρξε ἡ κατάληξις ἡ ὁποία ὡδήγησε τὸν Μητρόπουλο στὴ δόξα.

Τὸ Βερολῖνον ὑπῆρξε ἡ ἀφετηρία τῆς διεθνοῦς σταδιοδρομίας του, ἡ ὁποία ἄρχισε μὲ περιοδεῖες στὴ Γαλλία, Ἀγγλία, Βέλγιο, Ἰταλία καὶ Ρωσσία. Ἀπὸ τὸ 1934 μέχρι τὸ 1937 διηύθυνε καὶ στὶς τρίμηνες «σαιζὸν» τῶν συναυλιῶν τοῦ Μόντε—Κάρλο, ἐξακολουθώντας, πάντοτε, νὰ διευθύνει καὶ τὴ Συμφωνικὴ Ὀρχήστρα Ἀθηνῶν.

Ἡ πρώτη ἐπίσκεψις τοῦ Μητροπούλου στὴν Ἀμερικὴ (1936), ὀφείλεται στὴ φήμη, ποὺ ἀπέκτησε μὲ τὸ θρυλικὸ κατόρθωμα τῆς ἐκτελέσεως τοῦ 3ου Κοντσέρτου τοῦ Προκόφιεφ. Τὴν ἐποχὴ ἐκείνη ἡ μουσικὴ τοῦ Προκόφιεφ ἦταν ἄγνωστη, σχεδόν, στὸ κοινὸν τῶν Ἡνωμένων Πολιτειῶν. Οἱ δημοσιεύσεις τῶν ἔργων του ἐπραγματοποιοῦντο ἀπὸ τὴν «Ἑταιρεία Ρωσσικῶν ἐκδόσεων» στὸ Παρίσι, τῆς ὁποίας πρόεδρος ἦταν ὁ Σέργιος Κουσσεβίτσκυ, καλλιτεχνικὸς Διευθυντὴς τῆς Συμφωνικῆς Ὀρχήστρας τῆς Βοστώνης. Ὁ Κουσσεβίτσκυ ἔμαθε τὸ «νέο» τῆς καταπληκτικῆς ἐκτελέσεως τοῦ Κοντσέρτου τοῦ Προκόφιεφ καὶ προσεκάλεσε τὸν Μητρόπουλο νὰ διευθύνει δύο συναυλίες τῆς Συμφωνικῆς Ὀρχήστρας τῆς Βοστώνης.

Ἡ πρώτη αὐτὴ ἐμφάνισις στὴν Ἀμερικὴ προξένησε ζωηρότατην αἴσθησι, μὲ ἀποτέλεσμα νὰ προσκληθῇ καὶ πάλιν ὁ Μητρόπουλος τὸ ἑπόμενο ἔτος. Τὴν ἴδια αὐτὴ ἐποχὴ διηύθυνε, γιὰ πρώτη φορά, καὶ τὴ Συμφωνικὴ Ὀρχήστρα τῆς Μιννεαπόλεως. Ἡ νέα αὐτὴ ἐμφάνισίς του ὑπῆρξε πραγματικὰ θριαμβευτική. Ἡ ἐπιτυχία του ἦταν τόσο μεγάλη, ὥστε τοῦ ἔγινε ἀμέσως ἡ πρότασις νὰ ἀναλάβει τὴ θέση τοῦ μονίμου Διευθυντοῦ τῆς Ὀρχήστρας, εἰς ἀντικατάστασιν τοῦ μέχρι τότε Διευθυντοῦ τῆς Εὐγενίου Ὄρμαντυ, ὁ ὁποῖος ἀνέλαβε τὴ Διεύθυνσιν τῆς Συμφωνικῆς Ὀρχήστρας τῆς Φιλαδελφείας.

Ἔτσι, ὁ Μητρόπουλος, ἀποχαιρετῶντας τοὺς Ἀθηναίους συναδέλφους του, μὲ τοὺς ὁποίους συνεργάσθηκε δώδεκα χρόνια, ἐγκαταστάθηκε ὁριστικὰ στὶς Ἡνωμένες Πολιτεῖες τὸ 1940, ὅπου, ὕστερα ἀπὸ ἕξη ἔτη ἀπέκτησε καὶ τὴν ἀμερικανικὴ ὑπηκοότητα.



Ἡ σταδιοδρομία του στὴν Ἑλλάδα εἶναι ἀρκετὰ γνωστὴ

ΕΝΝΕΑ ΩΡΕΣ ΣΤΟ ΠΕΖΟΔΡΟΜΙΟ...

ΧΙΛΙΑΔΕΣ ΑΘΗΝΑΙΟΙ ΞΕΝΥΚΤΗΣΑΝ ΔΙΑ Ν' ΑΠΟΚΤΗΣΟΥΝ ΕΙΣΙΤΗΡΙΟΝ ΔΙΑ ΤΗΝ ΣΥΝΑΥΛΙΑ ΜΗΤΡΟΠΟΥΛΟΥ

ΣΤΡΩΜΑΤΑ ΣΤΗΝ ΟΔΟΝ ΑΜΕΡΙΚΗΣ.

Ά ν ω : Μόλις έξημέρωσε χθὲς τὸ πρωῒ οἱ ξενυκτισμένοι εἰς τὴν οὐρὰν φανατικοὶ φιλόμουσοι παίρνουν τὸ τσάϊ των καὶ τὸν καφέ των εἰς τὸ πεζοδρόμιον τῆς ὁδοῦ Ἀμερικῆς... Κ ά τ ω : Μία εἰκὼν τῆς συγκεντρώσεως ὀλίγον πρωτοῦ ἀρχίσῃ ἡ διανομὴ τῶν δελτίων προτεραιότητος διὰ τὴν πρώτην συναυλίαν Μητροπούλου.

Ποτὲ ἡ Ἀθήνα, οὔτε στὰ πιὸ δύσκολα χρόνια τῆς κατοχῆς, δὲν εἶχε γνωρίσει «οὐρὰ» σὰν κι' αὐτὴ ποὺ σχηματίστηκε προχθὲς ἔξω ἀπὸ τὸ κεντρικὸ ταμεῖο τοῦ Φεστιβὰλ Ἀθηνῶν, ἀπὸ τὰ φανατικὰ πλήθη τῶν θαυμαστῶν τοῦ Δημήτρη Μητρόπουλου γιὰ νὰ προμηθευθοῦν εἰσιτήρια γιὰ τὴν πρώτη συμφωνικὴ συναυλία τῆς Φιλαρμονικῆς τῆς Νέας Ὑόρκης.

— Οἱ πρῶτοι φιλόμουσοι ἄρχισαν νὰ καταφθάνουν ἀπὸ τὶς 10,30 τὸ βράδυ τοῦ Σαββάτου μὲ ἀπόφασι νὰ διανυκτερεύσουν μέχρι τὴν Κυριακὴ στὶς 9 τὸ πρωῒ γιὰ νὰ προλάβουν νὰ προμηθευθοῦν εἰσιτήρια. Οἱ ἐπικεφαλῆς τῆς οὐρᾶς δὲν ἦσαν μονάχα νέοι καὶ νέες ὅπως θὰ μποροῦσε κανεὶς νὰ ὑποθέσῃ, ἀλλὰ καὶ ὡρίμοι κύριοι ἀκόμη καὶ σεβάσμιες δέσποινες μὲ ἄστρα μαλλιά.

— Μία κυρία προχωρημένης ἡλικίας ἔφερε ἀπὸ τὸ σπίτι της μία πτυσσομένη πολυθρόνα καὶ πάνω σ' αὐτὴν πέρασε ὅλη τὴν νύκτα της πλέκοντας ἢ συζητώντας. Ἄλλοι ἐπίσης κρατοῦσαν βιβλία καὶ περιοδικὰ καὶ προσπαθοῦσαν πάρῃς τὸ εἰσιτήριον ποὺ ἐπιθυμεῖς μ' αὐτὰ νὰ περάσουν τὴν ὥρα τους. Οἱ πιὸ νέοι ἐκάθοντο στὰ ρεῖθρα τῶν πεζοδρομίων καὶ χαρτοπαίζαν ἢ διηγοῦντο ἀνέκδοτα.

— Στὶς 2 τὸ πρωῒ ἡ οὐρὰ εἶχε προχωρήσει περὶ τὰ 10 μέτρα καὶ ἀπειλοῦσε νὰ φράξῃ τὴν εἴσοδο τῆς Στοᾶς τοῦ Μετοχικοῦ Ταμείου, στὴν ὁδὸ Ἀμερικῆς.

— Ἡ τάξις ποὺ ἐπικρατοῦσε καὶ ἡ ἡσυχία ἦταν παραδειγματική. Οὔτε ἐπεισόδια, οὔτε διαπληκτισμοί, οὔτε ἔστω μιὰ δυνατὴ φωνὴ δὲν ἀκούστηκε ἕως τὰ ξημερώματα ὁπότε ἡ οὐρὰ πῆρε διαστάσεις διαδηλώσεως καὶ ἐχρειάσθη ἡ ἐπέμβασις τῶν ἀστυνομικῶν ὀργάνων γιὰ νὰ μὴ διασαλευθῇ ἡ τάξις.

— Ἀργὰ τὴν νύκτα κατέφθασαν ἐπὶ τόπου ὁ ὑπουργὸς τῆς Παιδείας κ. Γεροκωστόπουλος συνοδευόμενος ἀπὸ τὸν διευθυντὴ Ἐξωτερικοῦ Τύπου τοῦ ὑπουργείου Προεδρίας τῆς Κυβερνήσεως κ. Γ. Καβουνίδην καὶ ἄλλους ἀνωτέρους κρατικοὺς λειτουργούς.

ΕΞΗΝΤΛΗΘΗΣΑΝ ΟΛΑ ΧΘΕΣ

Παρ' ὅλο ποὺ ἐδίδοντο μόνον δύο θέσεις κατ' ἄτομον, τὰ εἰσιτήρια τῆς πρώτης συναυλίας τοῦ Μητροπούλου εἶχαν ἐξαντληθῇ μέχρις ἑνὸς χθὲς στὶς 8.30 τὸ βράδυ.

— Συνολικῶς ἐπωλήθησαν 3100 εἰσιτήρια, τὸ δὲ ποσὸν ποὺ συνεκεντρώθη ὑπολογίζεται σὲ 330.000 δραχμές.

— Τὰ δελτία προτεραιότητος ποὺ διενεμήθησαν ἔφεραν αὔξοντα ἀριθμὸ ἀπὸ 1 ἕως 1625. Ἡ ἐκφώνησις τῶν ἀριθμῶν ἔφτασε ἕως τὸ 1500 περίπου, διότι ἐν τῷ μεταξὺ τὰ εἰσιτήρια εἶχαν ἐξαντληθῇ.

— Πολλοὶ οἱ ὁποῖοι ἔκρατουν ἀριθμοὺς ἄνω τοῦ 1500 καὶ οἱ ὁποῖοι θὰ μποροῦσαν νὰ ἀγοράσουν εἰσιτήριο, ἀπεσύρθησαν διότι τὰ ἐναπομείναντα εἰσιτήρια ἦσαν μόνον τῆς Α' Κατηγορίας.

ΤΗΝ ΤΕΤΑΡΤΗ ΠΡΟΠΩΛΗΣΙΣ ΕΙΣΙΤΗΡΙΩΝ Β' ΣΥΝΑΥΛΙΑΣ

Ἡ πώλησις τῶν εἰσιτηρίων τῆς δευτέρας καὶ τελευταίας συναυλίας τῆς Φιλαρμονικῆς θὰ ἀρχίσῃ μεθαύριον στὶς 9 τὸ πρωῒ. Τὰ δελτία προτεραιότητος θὰ ἀρχίσουν νὰ διανέμωνται μία ὥρα ἐνωρίτερα.

Μία χαρακτηριστικὴ φωτογραφία ἀπὸ τὴν προχθεσινὴ διανυκτέρευσι ἑκατοντάδων φιλομούσων ἔξω ἀπὸ τὸ ταμεῖο τοῦ Φεστιβὰλ Ἀθηνῶν. Οἱ ἀναμένοντες τὸ ἔχουν «στρώσει» στὸ χαρτὶ γιὰ νὰ περάσῃ ἡ ὥρα τους.

Ἡ ἀδὸς Ἀμερικῆς θύμιζε προχθὲς τὰ μεσάνυκτα Λονδίνο, Νέα Ὑόρκη καὶ Παρίσι διότι μόνον ἐκεῖ ἕως τώρα σχηματίζονται ἀτελείωτες οὐρὲς ὑπομονητικῶν φιλοτέχνων καὶ φιλομούσων ποὺ ὧρες ἀτελείωτες περιμένουν τὴν σειρά τους γιὰ νὰ ἐξασφαλίσουν μιὰ θέσι ποὺ θὰ τοὺς ἐπιτρέψῃ νὰ παραστοῦν στὶς ἐμφανίσεις μεγάλων καλλιτεχνῶν. Κάτι τέτοιο λοιπὸν ἔγινε γιὰ πρώτη φορὰ κ' ἐδῶ, μὲ ἀφορμὴ τὴν ἔλευσι καὶ τὴν ἐμφάνισι τοῦ διασήμου Ἕλληνος ἀρχιμουσικοῦ Μητροπούλου! Οἱ Ἀθηναῖοι — κι' ὄχι μονάχα οἱ Ἀθηναῖοι, ἀλλὰ καὶ ἕνα σωρὸ ξένοι — ἠλεκτρίσθηκαν ἀπὸ τὸ γεγονὸς ὅτι τὴν κατακλεῖδα τοῦ φεστιβὰλ Ἀθηνῶν θ' ἀποτελέσουν οἱ δύο συναυλίες τῆς φιλαρμονικῆς τῆς Νέας Ὑόρκης στὴν Ἀθήνα. Τὸ ἀποτέλεσμα ἦταν ἀπροσδόκητο καὶ κυριολεκτικὰ ἀσύλληπτο. Ὀκτὼ ὧρες πρὶν ἀνοίξουν τὰ ταμεῖα τοῦ φεστιβάλ, δηλαδὴ ἀπὸ τὰς 11 τὴν νύκτα τοῦ Σαββάτου πρὸς τὴν Κυριακὴ μερικὲς περίεργες σκιὲς ἄρχισαν νὰ μαζεύωνται γύρω στὴν εἴσοδο τοῦ γραφείου πωλήσεως εἰσιτηρίων τοῦ φεστιβάλ, γωνίᾳ Πανεπιστημίου καὶ Ἀκαδημίας... Στὸ ἕνα χέρι μιὰ πάνινη πολυθρόνα ὁ ἕνας, στὸ ἄλλο μιὰ κουβέρτα καὶ μαξιλαράκι. Δεύτερος, τρίτος μὲ σκαμνάκι, τέταρτος μὲ καρέκλα καὶ οὕτω καθ' ἑξῆς.... Σὲ λίγο, γύρω στὶς 12 καὶ μισὴ εἶχε σχηματισθῇ ἕνας ὅμιλος 40 ἕως 50 ἀνθρώπων μὲ σταθερὴ ἀπόφασι διανυκτερεύσουν ἐκεῖ χάριν τῆς...ἀνέτου ἐξασφαλίσεως τοῦ ἀριθμοῦ προτεραιότητος καὶ βέβαια καὶ τοῦ πολυπόθητου εἰσιτηρίου ἐν συνεχείᾳ. Ἡ προσέλευσις τὶς πρῶτες ὧρες μετὰ τὰ μεσάνυκτα ἐξηκολούθησε ἀδιάκοπα, ἔτσι ποὺ κατὰ τὶς 2 τὸ πρωῒ τὸ πεζοδρόμιο τοῦ Μετοχικοῦ Ταμείου εἶχε συγκέντρωσι 300 περίπου ἀτόμων ὅλων τῶν ἡλικιῶν ἀμφοτέρων τῶν φύλων. Τὰ χαρτιά, τὸ τάβλι, τὸ σκάκι ἢ τό... κέντημα ἔβγαιναν κ' ἐπαίρναν πάνω σὲ τραπεζάκια, σὲ καρέλες καὶ σὲ ἐφημερίδες στρωμένες πάνω στὸ πεζοδρόμιο. Ἄλλοι πάλιν — οἱ ὀρθιοί — ἦσαν ἐγκαπεστημένοι σὲ διπλῆ βάρδεια. Ἔμενε, δηλαδή, ὁ ἕνας στοῦ Φλώκα ἢ τοῦ Ζωναρᾶ καὶ ὁ ἄλλος ἢ ἡ ἄλλη στὸ πεζοδρόμιο καὶ ἐγίνετο «ἄλλαγὴ φρουρᾶς». Ὅσο προχωροῦσε ἡ νύκτα ἡ συγκέντρωσις ἐγίνετο διαρκῶς καὶ πιὸ μεγάλη γιὰ νὰ φθάσῃ στὸ κατακόρυφο ὅταν ἄρχισε νὰ ξημερώνῃ. Καὶ ὅταν πλέον ἔφθασε ὁ ἡ ὥρα, φουρνιὲς ὁλόκληρες κατέκλυζαν πιὰ τὴν ὁδὸν Ἀμερικῆς μὲ ἀποτέλεσμα σὲ λίγο ἡ οὐρὰ νὰ στρίψῃ στὴν στοὰ μέσα τοῦ Μετοχικοῦ, στὴν ὁδὸν δηλαδὴ Σπύρου Μήλιου, τὸ μῆκος τῆς ὁποίας κατὰ τὶς 7 καὶ μισὴ ἐκαλύφθη ἐξ ὁλοκλήρου. Ἀγουροξυπνημένοι, σπεύδοντας οἱ πειοσσότεροι μὲ τὴν πεποίθησιν ὅτι θὰ εἶνε ἀπὸ τοὺς πρώτους» εὑρίσκοντο μπρὸς στὰ σὲ μιὰ ἐπιβλητικώτατη οὐρὰ 100 περίπου μέτρων, ποὺ ἐκάλυπτεν ὁλόκληρον τὸ πλάτος τοῦ πεζοδρομίου ἤτοι ἀλλοῦ 5 ἢ καὶ 7 ἀκόμη ἀτόμων. Μὲ τὴν ἀπορία καὶ τὴν ἀπογοήτευσι ἔκδηλη καὶ μετὰ ἀπὸ στιγμιαῖον δισταγμὸν ἔπαιρναν καὶ οἱ «καθυστερημένοι» τὶς θέσεις τους στὸ τέλος τῆς οὐρᾶς. Αὐτὰ γι' αὐτούς. Ἐν τῷ μεταξὺ οἱ «πρωινοτικοί» ποὺ πέρασαν τὴν νύκτα τους παίζοντας χαρτιὰ καὶ καλαμπουρίζοντας ἢ καὶ παίρνοντας κατὰ διαστήματα δίλεπτα καὶ τρίλεπτα ἕνα κάποιον ὑπνάκο, ἠσχολοῦντο τώρα μὲ τὸν πρωϊνό τους καφέ, τὸ γάλα ἢ τὸ τσάϊ ἀπὸ τὸν καφετζῆ τοῦ Μετοχικοῦ Ταμείου.

Ὥρα 8 καὶ 5' περίπου ἀρχίζει ἤμενη πολυθρόνα καὶ πάνω σ' αὐτὴν πέρασε ὅλη τὴν νύκτα της πλέκοντας ἢ διανομὴ τῶν μικρῶν χαρτιῶν μὲ τὰ ὁποῖα ὕστερα ἀπὸ λίγο ὑποτίθεται ὅτι θὰ μποροῦς νὰ πάρῃς τὸ εἰσιτήριον ποὺ ἐπιθυμεῖς μ' αὐτὰ δείχθη ἀργότερα ὅλη ἡ φασαρία χθὲς τὸ πρωῒ ἦταν ὥσπου νὰ δοθοῦν οἱ προτεραιότητες. Γιατὶ μετὰ ἡ εἴσοδος στὸ ταμεῖο τῆς ὁδοῦ Ἀμερικῆς καὶ ἡ ἀγορὰ τῶν εἰσιτηρίων ἔγινε ὁμολογουμένως κατὰ τρόπον ὑποδειγματικόν. Καὶ πρῶτα-πρῶτα γιατὶ μόνον 5—6 ἀστυφύλακες ὑπῆρχαν ὅλοι-ὅλοι ὅταν ἄρχισε ἡ διανομή. Ἦταν φανερὸ ἀπὸ πρὶν καὶ διεπιστώθη ἐκ τῶν πραγμάτων ἀμέσως μετὰ ὅτι ἦσαν τελείως ἀνεπαρκεῖς νὰ συγκρατήσουν ὅλον ἐκεῖνον τὸν ὄγκο τῶν φιλομούσων ποὺ ἔχοντας ξεστηκωθῇ ἀπὸ τὶς ἔνδεκα τὴν νύκτα ἢ τὸ λιγώτερο τὰ ξημερώματα ἦταν ἀποφασισμένος νὰ πάρῃ εἰσιτήριο μὲ κάθε θυσία. Τὸ ἀποτέλεσμα ἦταν ν' ἀρχίσουν οἱ φωνὲς, οἱ διαμαρτυρίες, ἡ κατάστασις νὰ θυστερήσῃ ἐπικίνδυνα. Ἡ κατάστασις στὸ μοίρασμα, ποὺ ἔγινετο ὡς ἑξῆς: Ἕνας ὑπάλληλος τῆς ὑπηρεσίας τοῦ φεστιβὰλ μὲ μπλὸκ στὰ χέρια δίπλα ἀκριβῶς ἀπὸ τὴν εἴσοδο τοῦ ταμείου ἔδινε ἕναν ἀριθμὸ προτεραιότητος σὲ κάθε ἄτομο ποὺ περνοῦσε ἀπὸ μπροστά του. Γρήγορα διεπιστώθη ὅτι μὲ τὴν πίεσι ποὺ ἀσκοῦσαν οἱ ἑπόμενοι, μὲ τὶς φωνές, τὶς διαμαρτυρίες, δὲν ἦταν εὐχερὴς ἡ διανομή. Γι' αὐτὸ ἀμέσως ἀπεφασίσθη ἀπὸ τὸ κύριο σῶμα τῆς οὐρᾶς νὰ χωρίζωνται περὶ τοὺς 15 μὲ 20 οἱ ὁποῖοι νὰ πλησιάζουν εἰς τὴν διανομὴ καὶ ἀφοῦ τακτοποιηθοῦν αὐτοὶ ν' ἀνανεώνονται μὲ ἄλλους ἀπὸ τὴν οὐρά... "Ὅμως καὶ πάλι τὰ πράγματα δὲν ἔγιναν πολὺ καλύτερα. Τώρα ὁ ὑπάλληλος ποὺ μοίραζε εἶχε ν' ἀντιμετωπίσῃ 20 ἀνθρώπους μαζὶ οἱ ὁποῖοι ἔπεφταν κυριολεκτικῶς ἐπάνω του, δεδομένου ὅτι «ἐπροστατεύετο» ἀπὸ ἕνα ἢ δύο τὸ πολὺ ἀστυφύλακες. Ἀπὸ τὴν ἀρχή, λοιπόν, φάνηκε ὅτι δὲν πήγαινε καλὰ ἡ δουλειά. Οἱ μικροκαυγάδες, οἱ διαμαρτυρίες καὶ οἱ φωνὲς συνεχίζοντο γιὰ νὰ ἐνταθοῦν σὲ λίγο ὅταν πλῆθος σοβαρῶν ὡς ἐπὶ τὸ πλεῖστον κυρίων καὶ κυριῶν ἄρχισε νὰ κάνῃ ὕποπτη συγκέντρωσι καὶ νὰ δημιουργῇ δεύτερη ἀντίθετη οὐρὰ πρὸς τὴν ὁδὸν Πανεπιστημίου. Ἄτομα κυρίως μὲ πεποίθησι στὴν κοινωνική τους θέσι καὶ τὸ κῦρός τους ἐπλησίαζαν μὲ σοβαρὸ ὕφος καὶ μάλλον.. ἀδιάφοροι τὸν κ. Καβουνίδην — τὸν διευθυντήν, ὡς γνωστόν, τοῦ ἐξωτερικοῦ Τύπου τοῦ ὑπουργείου Προεδρίας — καὶ τοὺς ἄλλους ὑπαλλήλους τοῦ φεστιβὰλ καὶ ζητοῦσαν εὐγενικὰ ν' ἀποκτήσουν..., ἱεροκρυφίως εἰσιτήρια. Φυσικὰ ἤρχετο ἡ ἄρνησις εὐγενικὴ καὶ αὐτὴ ἀλλὰ κατηγορηματική. Πῶς νὰ γίνῃ ἐξαίρεσις ὑπὸ τὰ βλέμματα χιλιάδων ἀνθρώπων ποὺ περίμεναν ἐπὶ τόσες ὧρες καρτερικὰ καὶ ποὺ ἔβαζαν ἀμέσως τὶς φωνὲς μόλις ἐνεφανίζετο καὶ νούργια «ὑψηλὴ προσωπικότης» ποὺ ἤθελε νὰ ὑπερφαλαγγίσῃ τὴν οὐρά. Καὶ πρέπει ν' ἀναγνωρισθῇ ὅτι ἐμφανῶς τούλάχιστον χθὲς τὸ πρωῒ δὲν ἔγινε καμμιὰ χαριστικὴ ἐνέργεια γιὰ κανένα ἀπ' ὅσους προσῆλθαν εἴτε ἐκτὸς εἴτε μὲ τὴν οὐρά. Ἔγινε πάντως ἕνα λάθος ποὺ ἐγέννησε σὲ πολλοὺς ὑποψίες μάλλον, ὅπως ἀπεδείχθη ἀργότερα ἀδικαιολόγητες. Συγκεκριμένα ἐνῷ μετὰ μυρίων βασάνων προχωροῦσε ἡ διανομὴ τῶν δελτίων μὲ τοὺς ἀριθμοὺς προτεραιότητος καὶ ἐνῷ τὸ πλῆθος τῶν ἐκτὸς οὐρᾶς μεγάλωνε γύρω ἀπὸ τὴν εἴσοδο τοῦ ταμείου στὸ πεζοδρόμιο καὶ στὸ κατάστρωμα τῆς ὁδοῦ Ἀμερικῆς, ξαφνικὰ ἀπὸ τὸν ἀριθμὸ 500 βρεθήκαμε στὸ 850! Γιατί; Σύγχυσις στοὺς ἁρμοδίους, ψάξιμο γιὰ τὰ μπλὸκ ποὺ χάθηκαν, διακοπὴ στὸ μοίρασμα, φωνὲς «ἐλάτε!», ἐκνευρισμὸς κλπ. Ἡ διανομὴ ξαναρχίζει ἀπὸ τὸ 850 γιὰ νὰ φθάσῃ μέχρι τὰ 930! Εὐτυχῶς τελικὰ τὰ μπλὸκ βρέθηκαν καὶ ὁ κ. Καβουνίδης μὲ τὸν τηλεβόα ποὺ χρησιμοποιοῦσε γιὰ ν' ἀκούεται εἰδοποιεῖ τὰ πλῆθη ὅτι τὸ «μικρὸ λάθος» θὰ διορθωθῇ. Ξαναρχίζουμε λοιπὸν στὸ 500 καὶ ἡ διανομὴ μὲ κάπως κανικώτερο τώρα ρυθμὸ συνεχίζεται ἐνῷ ἡ καθυστερημένη προσέλευσις καὶ ἄλλων ἀστυνομικῶν ἐπιβάλλει πιὰ κανονικὰ τὴν τάξιν.

Ὥρα 10 καὶ 15' ἀκριβῶς καὶ ἐνῷ ἡ διανομὴ προτεραιοτήτων συνεχίζεται μὲ κάποια ἡρεμία καὶ τάξι τώρα πιὰ, ἀρχίζει κι' ἡ πώλησις τῶν εἰσιτηρίων μὲ τὰ ὁποῖα οἱ εὐτυχεῖς θνητοὶ ποὺ θὰ τὰ ἀποκτήσουν, μερικὲς μόνον χιλιάδες μέσα στὶς ἀμέτρητες, θὰ ζήσουν ἀπὸ κοντὰ τὸ μεγαλεῖον τῆς τέχνης τοῦ Δημήτρη Μητρόπουλου.

Ἡ πώλησις διεξήχθη ὁμολογουμένως κανονικὰ ..., καὶ χωρὶς τὴν παραμικρὴ ἀνωμαλία. Ὁ «τηλεβόας» τοῦ κ. Καβουνίδη καὶ ὁ μαυροπίνακας τῆς εἰσόδου τοῦ ταμείου ἐξασφαλίζουν κανονικὴ συνέχισι τῆς πωλήσεως καὶ τὰ νούμερα φεύγουν γρήγορα 5... 10... 15, ἤτοι καλοῦνται νὰ εἰσέλθουν στὸ ταμεῖον ἀνὰ 5 οἱ ἔχοντες προτεραιότητα. Μὲ τὸ τέλος τῆς διανομῆς τῶν τελευταίων αὐτῶν γύρω στὶς 12 τὸ μεσημέρι ἡ ὁδὸς Ἀμερικῆς παίρνει τὴν... εἰρηνική της ὄψι. Μέχρις ἀργὰ τὸ ἀπόγευμα μὲ μιὰ διακοπὴ 2 ἕως 5, συνεχίζεται ὁμαλὰ ἡ πώλησις τῶν εἰσιτηρίων τῆς πρώτης συναυλίας τοῦ διασήμου "Ελληνος ἀρχιμουσικοῦ. Περιττὸν νὰ λεχθῇ ὅτι τὰ 3.337 εἰσιτήρια τῆς 1ης Ὀκτωβρίου ἐξηντλήθησαν. Ἄλλα τόσα νὰ ὑπῆρχαν, θὰ εἶχαν διατεθῇ. Ὅ,τι ἔγινε στὴν ὁδὸν Ἀμερικῆς δλην τὴν νύκτα καὶ ὅλο τὸ πρωῒ θὰ μείνῃ πραγματικὰ ἀξέχαστο καὶ χαρακτηριστικὸ τῆς τεράστιας ἀπηχήσεως ποὺ δημιουργεῖ ὁ ἐρχομὸς τοῦ μεγάλου μας Μητροπούλου.

Σ. ΑΝΑΓ.—

Ὁ διευθυντὴς ἐξωτερικοῦ Τύπου τοῦ ὑπουργείου Προεδρίας Κυβερνήσεως κ. Καβουνίδης ὁμιλεῖ μὲ τηλεβόα πρὸς τὸ πλῆθος.

Οἱ ἄνδρες παίζουν χαρτιὰ καὶ ἡ γυναίκα κεντάει, ἐνῷ περιμένουν νὰ ξημερώσῃ εἰς τὸ πεζοδρόμιον τῆς ὁδοῦ Ἀμερικῆς...

ΤΟΥ ΚΑΛΛΙΤΕΧΝΙΚΟΥ ΣΥΝΕΡΓΑΤΟΥ ΤΗΣ «ΑΘΗΝΑΪΚΗΣ» κ. ΓΙΩΡΓΟΥ ΜΑΛΛΟΥΧΟΥ

Τίποτε δὲν ἔγινε γελοιογραφικὴ ἀδεία γιατὶ τίποτε δὲν ἀποτελεῖ στὸ σκίτσο αὐτὸ ὑπερβολή, ὅταν ὁ ἀναγνώστης ἔχει ὑπ' ὄψι του τὴν οὐρὰ ποὺ ἔγινε τὴ νύκτα τοῦ Σαββάτου πρὸς τὴν Κυριακὴ μπροστὰ στὰ κεντρικὰ ταμεῖα τοῦ Φεστιβὰλ Ἀθηνῶν γιὰ τὴν ἀπόκτησι τῶν δελτίων προτεραιότητος πρὸς ἀγορὰν εἰσιτηρίων τῆς πρώτης συναυλίας μὲ τὸν Μητρόπουλο.

Ὁ καταγωγὴ τοῦ Δημήτρη Μητρόπουλου εἶναι γοητυνιακή. Τὸ γωνιουδάκι του βρίσκεται σὲ μιὰ ὥρα ἀπόστασι μὲ τὰ ποδάρια ἀπὸ τὴν Ἱστορικὴ Δημητσάνα, τὸν τόπο ποὺ γέννησε τὸν Παλαιῶν Πατρῶν Γερμανὸ καὶ τὸν Γρηγόριο τὸν Ε' πέμπτο.

Παλιότερα τὸ γωνιουδάκι τοῦ πατέρα του λεγόταν Τρεστενά. Σήμερα πῆρε τὸ ὄνομα Μελισσόπετρα. Ὁ μαέστρος ἔχει ἐκφράσει τὴν ἐπιθυμία καὶ καταβάλλει κάθε φορὰ προσπάθεια νὰ ἐπισκεφθῇ τὴν ἰδιαίτερη πατρίδα του. Ξέρει πολὺ καλὰ ὅτι μόνο ἕνα τέτοιο προσκύνημα μπορεῖ νὰ τοῦ γαρίσῃ τὴν καλύτερη ὥρα τῆς ζωῆς του. Ποιὰ ἄλλη γωνιὰ στὴ γῆ ἔχει νὰ τοῦ προσφέρῃ μιὰ πλαγιὰ μὲ τόσες καρυδιὲς καὶ γάργαρα νερά, σὰν τὴν πλαγιὰ τῆς Μελισσόπετρας;

Μὲ καθίσματα, κουβέρτες καὶ τρόφιμα ἐφθασαν προχθὲς τὸ βράδι, κατὰ τὶς δέκα, οἱ πρῶτοι - πρῶτοι τῆς οὐρᾶς, ποὺ μεγάλωνε καθ' ὅλην τὴν διάρκειαν τῆς νυκτὸς μπροστὰ στὰ κεντρικὰ ταμεῖα τοῦ δεστιβὰλ Ἀθηνῶν γιὰ τὴν ἀπόκτησι προτεραιότητος στὴν ἀγορὰ εἰσιτηρίων τῆς μιᾶς ἐκ τῶν δύο μοναδικῶν συναυλιῶν ποὺ θὰ δοθοῦν μὲ τὸν Μητρόπουλο.

Ἡ οὐρά, ἀρκετὰ παχειά, στὶς ἕξη καὶ μισὴ τὸ πρωῒ, κατεβασμένη ἀπὸ τὴ γωνία Πανεπιστημίου καὶ Ἀμερικῆς, εἶχε κάμει κιόλας τὴν γενναία στροφή της στὴν στοὰ Σπυρομήλιου καὶ ἀπειλοῦσε νὰ καταλάβῃ τὴν Βουκουρεστίου καὶ ἐν συνεχείᾳ τὴν πλατεῖα Συντάγματος!

Ἐν τῷ μεταξύ, νύχτα ἦταν αὐτή, ὧρες ὁλόκληρες. "Επρεπε νὰ περάσουν. Γι' αὐτὸ τὸ πεζοδρόμιο τῆς ὁδοῦ Ἀμερικῆς, μεταξὺ Πανεπιστημίου καὶ Σταδίου, μετεβλήθη σὲ λέσχη, ποὺ τὸ πινάκλ στὰ τραπεζάκια ἐξοχικοῦ τύπου ἔσωσε τὴν κατάστασι μὲ τὴ βοήθεια τῶν γειτονικῶν καφὲ - μπάρ, ποὺ ἔκαναν χρυσὲς δουλειές.

Εἴχαμε ἐπίσης καὶ τραβήγματα τῆς κεφαλῆς. Γιατὶ ὁ ἐνδιαφερόμενος ποὺ ἤρθε στὴν οὐρὰ κατὰ τὴ μία μετὰ τὰ μεσάνυχτα, εἶδε τὴν οὐρὰ μικρὴ καὶ «σταθερὴ» καὶ ἐπῆγε σ' ἕνα καφενεῖο ἀπ' ὅπου ἐπέστρεψε στὶς πέντε τὸ πρωῒ. Εἶχε πληκτισθῇ ὁ δύστροχης πυλὸ ἀκριβὰ τὴν περιφρόνησί του στὸ καφενεῖο τοῦ πεζοδρομίου τῆς ὁδοῦ Ἀμερικῆς.

Ἡ διανομὴ τῶν δελτίων προτεραιότητος ἤρχισε στὶς ὀκτὼ ἀκριβῶς καὶ συνεχίστηκε ὡς τὶς 9, ὁπότε ἤρχισε ἡ ἐκφώνησις τῶν ἀριθμῶν καὶ ἡ πώλησις τῶν εἰσιτηρίων. Οἱ τελευταῖοι εὐχονται νὰ μὴ βρέξῃ τὸ Σάββατο τὸ βράδι, γιατὶ στὸν «Ὀρφέα» δὲν θὰ χωράνε.

ΥΣΤΕΡΑ ΑΠΟ ΠΟΛΛΑ ΧΡΟΝΙΑ ΟΙ ΑΘΗΝΑΙΟΙ ΘΑ ΧΕΙΡΟΚΡΟΤΗΣΟΥΝ ΕΝΑ ΜΕΓΑΛΟΝ ΚΑΛΛΙΤΕΧΝΗΝ ΠΟΥ ΤΟΝ ΕΓΕΜΙΣΕ ΜΕ ΔΟΞΑ Η ΞΕΝΙΤΙΑ

ΣΗΜΕΙΩΜΑ ΤΟΥ ΚΑΛΛΙΤΕΧΝΙΚΟΥ ΣΥΝΕΡΓΑΤΟΥ ΜΑΣ κ. Γ. ΒΩΚΟΥ

Την Παρασκευή ἡ καλλιτεχνικὴ Ἑλλάδα θὰ ἔχῃ τὴν εὐτυχία νὰ ὑποδεχθῇ τὸν κορυφαῖο Ἕλληνα μαέστρο Δημήτρη Μητρόπουλο, ὁ ὁποῖος ἐπὶ κεφαλῆς τῆς ἐξ 115 ὀργάνων Φιλαρμονικῆς τῆς Νέας Ὑόρκης θὰ δώσῃ δύο συναυλίες τὸ Σάββατον καὶ τὴν Κυριακὴν 1 καὶ 2 Ὀκτωβρίου εἰς τὸ Ὠδεῖον Ἡρώδου τοῦ Ἀττικοῦ.

Ἡ ἄφιξι τοῦ Μητρόπουλου στὴν Ἀθήνα, μαζὶ μὲ τὴν περίφημη νεοϋορκέζικη ὀρχήστρα, ἀσφαλῶς πρέπει νὰ χαρακτηρισθῇ ὡς τὸ μεγαλύτερον μουσικὸν γεγονὸς τῆς μεταπολεμικῆς περιόδου.

Ὅλος ὁ μουσικὸς κόσμος τῆς Πρωτευούσης βρίσκεται σὲ συναγερμὸ καὶ ἐκεῖνοι οἱ ἡρωικοὶ ξενύχτηδες τοῦ Σαββάτου πρὸς τὴν Κυριακήν, οἱ ὁποῖοι κατόπιν ποικίλων προσπαθειῶν καὶ ἀνηλεοῦς τσαλαπατήματος, ἐξασφάλισαν εἰσιτήριο, περιμένουν μὲ κρυφὴ λαχτάρα καὶ συγκίνησι τὸ Σάββατο ὅταν ὁ μεγάλος Μητρόπουλος θὰ πατήσῃ τὸ δάθρο τοῦ μαέστρου, θὰ σηκώσῃ τὰ μαγικά του χέρια καὶ χωρὶς μπαγκέττα θὰ δώσῃ «ἀττάκα».

Δεκαεπτὰ ὁλόκληρα χρόνια λείπει ἀπ' τὴν Ἑλλάδα. Ἀφοῦ ὁ τόπος του στάθηκε ἀνήμπορος νὰ τὸν ἐκτιμήσῃ καὶ νὰ τὸν τοποθετήσῃ ἐκεῖ ποὺ ἔπρεπε, ὁ μεγάλος — πάντα ὑπῆρξε μεγάλος — σήμερα Δημήτρης Μητρόπουλος ἐγκατέλειψε τὴν πατρίδα. Καὶ πολλὰ λέγονται γι' αὐτὸ τὸ ἀναγκαστικὸ ξενίτεμα. Λέγεται ἀκόμη ὅτι ὁ Μητρόπουλος ἔφυγε μὲ δαρειὰ καρδιά... Τί εἶχε μεσολαβήσει ἄραγε; Ὅμως ἂς ρίξουμε λήθη στὸ παρελθὸν καὶ ἂς ἀτενίσουμε τὸν Μητρόπουλο ὅπως εἶνε σήμερα.

Κορυφὴ ἀνάμεσα στὶς κορυφὲς τῶν «σὲφ» τῆς ὀρχήστρας. Ὅταν ἀρχίζῃ νὰ διευθύνῃ κάποιο μαγικὸ κῦμα συμπαρασύρει τοὺς μουσικοὺς τῆς ὀρχήστρας καὶ τοὺς κάνει νὰ πραγματοποιοῦν ἑρμηνευτικὰ θαύματα....

Ποιὸς ποτὲ μπορεῖ νὰ ξεχάσῃ τὸν Μητρόπουλο ὅταν προπολεμικὰ διηύθυνε τὴν συμφωνικὴ τότε ὀρχήστρα τοῦ Ὠδείου Ἀθηνῶν;

Ἀκόμη κι' ἡ γενικὴ δοκιμή, ποὺ τότε διηύθυνε ὑπὸ τύπον ἀδὰν—πρεμιέρα, ἦταν ἀφορμὴ νὰ γεμίσουν τὰ δοξασμένα «Ὀλύμπια» ἀπὸ πλῆθος φιλομούσων κι' ἰδίως σπουδαστῶν, ποὺ μὲ τὶς παρτιτοῦρες στὰ χέρια, παρακολουθοῦσαν τὸν Μητρόπουλο στὶς καταπληκτικές του μουσικὲς ἑρμηνεῖες ποὺ ἔφεραν τὴν σφραγῖδα τῆς φωτεινῆς του προσωπικότητος.

Ὅμως παρ' ὅλα αὐτὰ χάσαμε μεῖς τὸν Μητρόπουλο. Μᾶς τὸν πῆραν—κατὰ ποὺ λένε—μέσα ἀπ' τὰ χέρια μας... Ἐθνικὴ ἀπώλεια; Ναί, ἐθνικὴ ἀπώλεια πέρα γιὰ πέρα.

Ὁ Μητρόπουλος ἀνήκει σὲ ἄλλους κόσμους. Σ' αὐτοὺς ποὺ τὸν τίμησαν καὶ δὲν πάσχισαν νὰ τὸν φθείρουν. Ποιὸς ξέρει. Ὅλα τυχερὰ εἶνε. Ἂν ἔμενε ἐδῶ ὁ Μητρόπουλος θἄταν αὐτὸς ποὺ εἶνε σήμερα ἢ θὰ διακόνευε καμμιὰ θεσούλα μαέστρου στὴν...Λυρικὴ Σκηνή; Μπορεῖ.

Ὁ Δημήτρης Μητρόπουλος, μουσικὴ δόξα τοῦ εἰκοστοῦ αἰῶνα, ἔρχεται νὰ μᾶς δροσίσῃ λίγο μὲ τὴν ὑπέρκαλλή του τέχνη.... Ἂς τὸν ὑποδεχθοῦμε ὅπως πραγματικὰ τοῦ ἀξίζει. Σὰν καλλιτεχνικὸ παιδὶ τῆς Ἑλλάδος...

Ἡ καλλιτεχνικὴ περιοδεία τῆς Φιλαρμονικῆς Ὀρχήστρας τῆς Νέας Ὑόρκης στὴν Εὐρώπη πραγματοποιεῖται ὑπὸ τὴν αἰγίδα τοῦ ἀμερικανικοῦ ὑπουργείου τῶν Ἐξωτερικῶν, στὸ πλαίσιο τοῦ προγράμματος διεθνῶν ἀνταλλαγῶν τοῦ Ἀμερικανικοῦ Ἐθνικοῦ Θεάτρου καὶ Ἀκαδημίας (A.N.T.A.), μιᾶς ὀργανώσεως τῆς ὁποίας τὸ καταστατικὸ ἔχει ἐγκριθῇ ἀπὸ τὸ ἀμερικανικὸ Κογκρέσσο.

Ἡ Φιλαρμονικὴ Ὀρχήστρα τῆς Νέας Ὑόρκης ἄρχισε τὴν περιοδεία της στὴν Εὐρώπη μὲ μιὰ σειρὰ συναυλιῶν, ἀπὸ τὶς 5 ὡς τὶς 10 Σεπτεμβρίου, κατὰ τὴν τελευταία ἑβδομάδα τοῦ Διεθνοῦς Φεστιβὰλ τοῦ Ἐδιμβούργου. Τὶς ἑξῆ αὐτὲς συναυλίες διηύθυναν ὁ Δημήτρης

Μητρόπουλος, ὁ Γκουΐντο Καντέλλι καὶ ὁ Ζὼρζ Ζέλλ, ὁ καθένας ἀπὸ τοὺς ὁποίους διηύθυνε δύο συναυλίες. Ἡ Φιλαρμονικὴ τῆς Νέας Ὑόρκης ἦταν ἡ πρώτη ἀμερικανικὴ ὀρχήστρα ποὺ προσεκλήθη νὰ μετάσχῃ στὸ Φεστιβὰλ Ἐδιμβούργου. Κατὰ τὴν πρώτη αὐτὴ ἐμφάνισί της, τὸ 1951, ὁ Δημήτρης Μητρόπουλος καὶ ὁ Μπροῦνο Βάλτερ διηύθυναν, ὁ καθένας, ἑπτὰ συναυλίες τῆς Ὀρχήστρας.

Κατὰ τὴν πρώτη αὐτὴ καλλιτεχνικὴ περιοδεία τῆς Ὀρχήστρας ἀπὸ τὸ 1930 (ὅταν ὁ Ἀρτοῦρο Τοσκανίνι διηύθυνε τὴν τότε νεοσυγχωνευθεῖσα Φιλαρμονικὴ — Συμφωνικὴ σὲ 23 συναυλίες, σὲ 15 πόλεις) δόθηκαν δύο συναυλίες, στὴν αἴθουσα συναυλιῶν τῆς Βιέννης, στὶς 12 καὶ 13 Σεπτεμβρίου.

Ἐφέτος, μετὰ τὸ Ἐδιμβοῦργο, ἡ Φιλαρμονικὴ ἔδωσε συναυλίες στὶς Βρυξέλλες, τὸ Δυτικὸ Βερολῖνο, τὸ Παρίσι, τὴν Γενεύη, τὴν Βέρνη, τὴν Βασιλεία, τὴν Ζυρίχη, τὸ Μιλάνο, τὴν Περούτζια, τὴν Ρώμη καὶ τὴν Νεάπολι, ὅπου ὁ ἕνας θρίαμβος διαδέχθηκε τὸν ἄλλο.

Ἡ ἐμφάνισι τῆς Ὀρχήστρας στὴν Ἑλλάδα ἀποτελεῖ ἕνα εἶδος «ἐπιστροφῆς», γιατὶ ὁ μουσικὸς διευθυντής της, ὁ Δημήτρης Μητρόπουλος, ἔχει νὰ ἐπισκεφθῇ τὴν γενέτειρά του ἀπὸ πρὶν ἀπ' τὸν πόλεμο — ἐμφανίσθηκε τελευταία στὴν Ἑλλάδα ὡς διευθυντὴς ὀρχήστρας τὸ 1938, δηλαδὴ πρὶν ἀπὸ 17 χρόνια. Ἐκτὸς ἀπὸ τὴν βοήθεια τοῦ ἀμερικανικοῦ ὑπουργείου τῶν Ἐξωτερικῶν γιὰ τὴν κάλυψι τῶν ταξιδιωτικῶν δαπανῶν τοῦ διάπλου τοῦ Ἀτλαντικοῦ, ἡ ἐμφάνισις τῆς Φιλαρμονικῆς στὰς Ἀθήνας κατέστη δυνατὴ χάρις στὴν πρόσθετη οἰκονομικὴ βοήθεια ἀπὸ ἰδιωτικὴ πηγή.

Οἱ δύο συναυλίες στὸ Θέατρο Ἡρώδου τοῦ Ἀττικοῦ, ὑπὸ τὴν διεύθυνσι τοῦ Ἕλληνος μαέστρου Δημήτρη Μητρόπουλου θὰ πραγματοποιηθοῦν μόνο χάρις στὴ γενναιόδωρη εἰσφορὰ τοῦ κ. Βασιλείου Π. Γουλανδρῆ. Ὁ Ἑλληνοαμερικανὸς αὐτός, τοῦ ὁποίου ἡ κοινωφελὴς δρᾶσις εἶνε γνωστὴ σ' ὁλόκληρο τὸν κόσμο, κατέβαλε ὄχι μόνο τὰ ἔξοδα ταξιδίου τῆς Ὀρχήστρας, ἀλλὰ καὶ τὰ ἔξοδα τῆς διοργανώσεως τῶν συναυλιῶν, ὥστε νὰ καταστῇ δυνατὸν αἱ εἰσπράξεις τῶν δύο συναυλιῶν νὰ διατεθοῦν γιὰ τὴν ἀνέγερσι μιᾶς αἰθούσης συναυλιῶν στὴν Ἀθήνα, ποὺ τόσο χρειάζεται ἡ ἑλληνικὴ Πρωτεύουσα. Τὰ σχέδια γιὰ τὴν ἀνέγερσι τῆς αἰθούσης αὐτῆς καταστρώνονται τώρα ἀπὸ τὸ γνωστὸ σωματεῖο «Φίλοι τῆς Μουσικῆς» τῶν Ἀθηνῶν. Ἀξίζει νὰ ὑπογραμμισθῇ τὸ γεγονὸς ὅτι ὁ Δημήτρης Μητρόπουλος, ποὺ γεννήθηκε στὰς Ἀθήνας, θὰ συμβάλῃ στὴν πραγματοποίησι τοῦ σχεδίου αὐτοῦ στὴ γενέτειρά του, διευθύνοντας τὴν ἀρχαιότερη ἀμερικανικὴ συμφωνικὴ ὀρχήστρα, ἡ ὁποία ἱδρύθηκε τὸ 1842 καὶ εἶνε μία ἀπὸ τὶς ἀρχαιότερες συμφωνικὲς ὀρχῆστρες στὸν κόσμο.

Ἡ καλλιτεχνικὴ περιοδεία τῆς Ὀρχήστρας θὰ κλείσῃ μὲ δύο συναυλίες, ποὺ θὰ δώσῃ στὸ Λονδῖνο, στὶς 4 καὶ 5 Ὀκτωβρίου, συμπληρώνοντας, ἔτσι, 26 συναυλίες, προτοῦ ἐπιστρέψῃ στὴ Ν. Ὑόρκη, ὅπου θὰ ἀνοίξῃ τὴν 114η περίοδο τῶν συναυλιῶν της, στὶς 20 Ὀκτωβρίου, στὸ Κάρνεγκι Χώλ. Ἀπὸ τὸ τέλος τῆς περιόδου συναυλιῶν 1954—55, στὶς 17 Ἀπριλίου, ἡ Φιλαρμονικὴ τῆς Νέας Ὑόρκης θὰ ἔχῃ, ἔτσι, συμπληρώσει ταξίδι 10 ἑβδομάδων, στὸ ὁποῖο συμπεριλαμβάνονται περιοδεία 5 ἑβδομάδων ἀπὸ τὴν ἀνατολικὴ στὴ δυτικὴ ἀκτὴ τῶν Ἡνωμένων Πολιτειῶν, μὲ 31 συναυλίες σὲ 29 πόλεις, ὅπως ἡ καλλιτεχνικὴ περιοδεία της στὴν Εὐρώπη. Μετὰ τὴν ἐπιστροφή της στὴ Νέα Ὑόρκη, ἡ Φιλαρμονικὴ θὰ ἔχῃ διασχίσει ἀπόστασι 40.000 χιλιομέτρων — σχεδὸν τὸ ἥμισυ τῆς περιμέτρου τῆς Γῆς.

Η «ΒΡΑΔΥΝΗ» Τετάρτη, 28 Σεπτεμβρίου

Μεθαύριον Παρασκευὴν φθάνει εἰς Ἀθήνας ὁ διεθνοῦς φήμης Ἕλλην ἀρχιμουσικὸς κ. Μητρόπουλος, ἐπὶ κεφαλῆς τῆς Φιλαρμονικῆς Ὀρχήστρας τῆς Νέας Ὑόρκης, διὰ σειρὰν δύο συναυλιῶν εἰς τὸ Ὠδεῖον Ἡρώδου τοῦ Ἀττικοῦ τὸ Σάββατον καὶ τὴν Κυριακήν. Ἡ Φιλαρμονικὴ ἐπεσκέφθη πολλὰς Εὐρωπαϊκὰς πόλεις ὅπου ἔδωσε συναυλίας, κατὰ τὰς ὁποίας ὁ Ἕλλην μαέστρος ἀπεθεώθη, ἐγράφησαν δὲ δι' αὐτὸν αἱ κολακευτικώτεραι κριτικαί. Εἷς τῶν γνωστοτέρων Εὐρωπαίων μουσικοκριτικῶν ἔγραφεν ὅτι «ἡ μετριοφροσύνη καὶ ἡ μουσικότης φέρουν τὸν κ. Μητρόπουλον ἐπὶ κεφαλῆς τῶν παγκοσμίων μαέστρων». Ἡ καλλιτεχνικὴ περιοδεία τῆς Ὀρχήστρας τῆς Ν. Ὑόρκης εἰς τὴν Εὐρώπην, θὰ κλείσῃ μὲ δύο συναυλίας τὰς ὁποίας θὰ δώσῃ τὴν 4ην καὶ 5ην Ὀκτωβρίου εἰς Λονδῖνον. Ἀνωτέρω τελευταία φωτογραφία τοῦ Ἕλληνος ἀρχιμουσικοῦ.

Μιὰ ἀληθινὴ ἀποθέωσίς του στὸ Βερολῖνο

ΤΗΣ ΣΥΝΕΡΓΑΤΙΔΟΣ ΜΑΣ κ. ΑΛ. ΛΑΛΑΟΥΝΗ

Ἡ Ἀθήνα περιμένει μὲ ἀληθινὴ λαχτάρα ἕνα ἀπὸ τὰ πιὸ διαλεχτὰ τέκνα της καὶ οἱ φιλόμουσοι τῆς πρωτευούσης — ἀλλὰ καὶ πολλοὶ ἀπ' τὶς ἐπαρχίες ποὺ ἔφθασαν ἐπίτηδες — περνοῦν νύχτες ὁλόκληρες ἄϋπνοι, στὸ πόδι, σχηματίζοντας ἀτέλειωτες οὐρὲς γιὰ νὰ μορέσουν νὰ προμηθευθοῦν ἕνα εἰσιτήριο γιὰ τὶς συναυλίες τοῦ Δημήτρη Μητρόπουλου, ποὺ ἔρχεται μὲ τὴν ὀρχήστρα «του», μὲ τὴν περίφημη αὐτὴ Φιλαρμονικὴ Ὀρχήστρα τῆς Νέας Ὑόρκης.

Στὸ μεταξύ, στὶς ξένες ἐφημερίδες, παρακολουθοῦμε τὴ θριαμβευτικὴ πορεία τοῦ Ἕλληνος μαέστρου ἀνὰ τὰ μεγάλα εὐρωπαϊκὰ κέντρα, μιὰ περιοδεία ἀπὸ 26 μέχρι στιγμῆς συναυλίες, ποὺ ἀπηχήσεις τους μᾶς δίνουν οἱ κριτικὲς καὶ τὰ σχόλια τοῦ τύπου. Τὸ Παρίσι, τὸ ψυχρὸ καὶ δύσκολο Παρίσι, γονάτισε μπροστὰ στὸν μεγάλον Ἕλληνα καὶ οἱ Γάλλοι κριτικοὶ ἐξυμνοῦν ὁμόφωνα τὸν Δημήτρη Μητρόπουλο. Ὁ πολὺς Σ. Βιλλερμὸζ γράφει πὼς ἡ τεχνικὴ τοῦ Μητρόπουλου καὶ ὁ τρόπος τῆς ἑρμηνείας του θυμίζει σ' ὅλους τὸν Φουρτβάϊγκλερ. Στὴ «Βέλτ», μιὰ ἀπ' τὶς πιὸ μεγάλες γερμανικὲς ἐφημερίδες, ὑπὸ τὸν τίτλο «Τὸ Βερολῖνο ἀποθεώνει τὸν Μητρόπουλο», ὁ κ. Στούκενσμιτ γράφει: «Ἕνα θαῦμα θερμῆς ἰδιοσυγκρασίας, ἕνα θαῦμα μνήμης, ἕνα θαῦμα φακιρικῆς συγκεντρώσεως» κι' ἐπεκτείνεται σὲ δυὸ ὁλόκληρες στῆλες, ἀναλύοντας αὐτὸ τὸ ἑλληνικὸ θαῦμα κι' αὐτὴν τὴν θαυμάσια ὀρχήστρα ποὺ ὁ Μητρόπουλος ἔχει κάνει «δική του», μεταδίδοντάς της τὸ στύλ του, τὴν ἰδιοσυγκρασία του, τὰ αἰσθήματά του, τὴ σκέψι του». Κι' ὁ ἴδιος αὐτὸς Γερμανὸς κριτικὸς τονίζει πὼς ὁ Μητρόπουλος μόνο μὲ τὸν Φουρτβάϊγκλερ μπορεῖ νὰ παραβληθῇ.

Ἡ Φιλαρμονικὴ Ὀρχήστρα τῆς Νέας Ὑόρκης εἶναι μιὰ ἀπὸ τὶς ἀρχαιότερες ὀρχῆστρες τοῦ κόσμου — ἱδρύθηκε στὰ 1842 — κι' ἕνα ἀπ' τὰ τελειότερα μουσικὰ συγκροτήματα ποὺ κάθε του μουσικὸς εἶναι κι' ἕνας σολίστας δεξιοτέχνης — ὅλοι διαλεγμένοι ἀπ' ὅ,τι τελειότερο ὑπάρχει στὸν κόσμο. Εἶχα τὴν εὐτυχία ν' ἀκούσω τὴν Φιλαρμονικὴ τῆς Νέας Ὑόρκης στὴ Βιέννη, στὰ 1930, μὲ ἐπὶ κεφαλῆς τὸν Τοσκανίνι. Σήμερα, τὴ θέσι τοῦ Τοσκανίνι παίρνει ἕνας ἀντάξιός του: Ὁ Ἕλλην Δημήτρης Μητρόπουλος.

Τὸ πρόγραμμα τῆς πρώτης συναυλίας τοῦ Σαββάτου περιλαμβάνει τὸ «Πρελούντιο καὶ Ἀλέγκρο» τοῦ Κουπερὲν κατὰ μεταγραφὴ Μιλό, τὴ 2η Συμφωνία τοῦ Σούμαν σὲ ντὸ μεῖζον, ἕνα ἀπὸ τὰ πιὸ ποιητικὰ ἔργα τοῦ μεγάλου ρωμαντικοῦ ὅπου, ἰδιαίτερα τὸ «ἀντάτσιο ἐξπρεσσίβο» εἶναι μιὰ ἀριστουργηματικὴ σελίδα, καὶ τὴν 5η Συμφωνία τοῦ Προκόφιεφ, ποὺ ὁ Μητρόπουλος θεωρεῖται ὡς ὁ τελειότερος ἑρμηνευτής του. Στὴ συναυλία τῆς Κυριακῆς, τὸ πρόγραμμα ἀρχίζει μὲ τὴν Εἰσαγωγὴ τοῦ «Φράϊσουτς» τοῦ Βέμπερ γιὰ νὰ συνεχισθῇ μὲ τὴν «Συμφωνία τῆς Μεταρρυθμίσεως» ποὺ ὀνομάζεται ἔτσι ἐπειδὴ στὸ τελευταῖο μέρος ὁ Μέντελσον ἀντλεῖ τὴν ἔμπνευσί του ἀπ' τὸ χορικὸ τοῦ Λουθήρου «Ἕνας γερὸς πύργος εἶναι ὁ Θεός μας» καί, γενικά, ἐκφράζει τὸν αὐστηρὸ χαρακτῆρα τῆς Μεταρρυθμίσεως καθὼς καὶ τὴν βαθειὰ θρησκευτικὴ πίστι τοῦ συνθέτη. Ἐπακολουθοῦν οἱ «Ἑλληνικοὶ Χοροὶ» τοῦ Σκαλκώτα καὶ ἡ 2η Συμφωνία τοῦ Μπράμς — ρὲ μεῖζον — ἡ ἐπονομαζομένη «Πριγκηπικὴ τοῦ Μπράμς» ἐπειδὴ εἶναι ἐμπνευσμένη ἀπ' τὴ φύσι καὶ τὶς ὀμορφιὲς τοῦ δάσους τῆς Βιέννης.

Ἂς σημειωθῇ ὅτι στὸ Βερολῖνο, ἦταν τέτοιος ὁ ἐνθουσιασμὸς τοῦ κόσμου ποὺ ὁ Μητρόπουλος ὑποχρεώθηκε νὰ δώσῃ ἐκτὸς προγράμματος — κάτι τὸ πρωτοφανὲς γιὰ Συμφωνικὲς Συναυλίες — ἕνα ἀπόσπασμα ἀπ' τὴν ὄπερα «Κολὰ — Μπρενιὸν» τοῦ Δημήτση Καμπαλέφσκυ καὶ τὴν εἰσαγωγὴ τῆς ὄπερας «Δύναμις τοῦ Πεπρωμένου» τοῦ Βέρντι.

Τὸ θέμα φυσικὰ τῆς ἡμέρας τόσον γιὰ τὸν μουσικὸν ὅσον καὶ γιὰ τὸν φιλόμουσον κόσμον εἶνε ἡ ἀπογευματινὴ ἀφιξις τοῦ Δημήτρη Μητρόπουλου καὶ τῆς φιλαρμονικῆς ὀρχήστρας τῆς Νέας Ὑόρκης. Γιὰ τὴν ὀρχήστρα, τὰ θέματά της καὶ τὶς ἀνάγκες της δημοσιεύεται ἰδιαίτερον ἄρθρον εἰς τὴν τρίτην σελίδα. Ἐδῶ θὰ περιορισθοῦμε στὶς νεώτερες πληροφορίες ποὺ ὑπάρχουν γύρω στὴν ἄφιξιν τοῦ διασήμου Ἕλληνος ἀρχιμουσικοῦ.

— Ὁ Μητρόπουλος, λοιπόν, καὶ τὸ ἀπὸ 119 μέλη συγκρότημα τῆς Φιλαρμονικῆς τῆς Νέας Ὑόρκης θὰ φθάσῃ εἰς τὰς Ἀθήνας εἰς τὰς 4 τὸ ἀπόγευμα. Θὰ ταξιδεύσῃ ἀπὸ τὴν Ἰταλία μὲ τὸ ὁλλανδικὸν ἀεροπλάνον τῆς γραμμῆς. Ἡ Ἕνωσις τῶν Ἑλλήνων Μουσουργῶν τιμώσα τὸν κορυφαῖόν μας μαέστρο τοῦ ἀπηύθυνε σήμερα τὸ πρωῒ εἰς τὸ ἀεροδρόμιον τῆς Νεαπόλεως ὅπου θὰ ἐπιβιβασθῇ τὸ ἀκόλουθον τηλεγράφημα :

Ἡ Ἕνωσις Ἑλλήνων Μουσουργῶν μὲ τὴν εὐκαιρίαν λαμπρύνετε μὲ ὑπέροχον τέχνην σας ἑορτὰς Ἀθηνῶν, ἀποστέλλει θερμὸ χαιρετισμὸ στὸν Ἔνδοξο Ἕλληνα διδάσκαλο καὶ εὔχεται δαφνηφόρος νὰ συνεχίζῃ πάντα τὴ μεγάλη του σταδιοδρομία.

Μανώλης Καλομοίρης πρόεδρος, Μάριος Βάρβογλης ἀντιπρόεδρος, Ἀντίοχος Εὐαγγελάτος γενικὸς

γραμματεύς, Ἀνδρέας Νεζερίτης ταμίας, Στέφανος Βαλτετσιώτης, Σώτος Βασιλειάδης, Γεώργιος Γεωργιάδης, Γεώργιος Καζάσογλου Θεόδωρος Καρυωτάκης, Γιάννης Παπαϊωάννου, Σπῦρος Σκιαδαρέσης σύμβουλοι.

—Ἂς σημειωθῇ ὅτι τὸ ἀεροπλάνο μὲ τὸ ὁποῖον θὰ ταξιδεύσῃ ὁ Μητρόπουλος προβλέπεται νὰ προσγειωθῇ εἰς τὶς 3.55. Θὰ προηγηθῇ ἄλλο τετρακινητήριον μὲ μέλη τῆς φιλαρμονικῆς τῆς Νέας Ὑόρκης, τὸ ὁποῖον θὰ φθάσῃ εἰς τὶς 2.30. Ἤδη στὶς 9.30 π. μ. ἦλθε ἀπὸ τὴν Ἰταλίαν μεταγωγικὸν ὁλλανδικὸν ἀεροπλάνον τὸ ὁποῖον ἔφερε μέρος τῶν ἀποσκευῶν τῶν ἀναμενομένων καλλιτεχνῶν. Τὸ ἀεροπλάνον αὐτὸ θὰ ξαναφύγῃ γιὰ νὰ φέρῃ εἰς τὶς 5 τὸ ἀπόγευμα τὰ ὑπόλοιπα τράγματα τῶν μελῶν τῆς φιλαρμονικῆς τῆς Νέας Ὑόρκης.

—Ἐν τῷ μεταξὺ οἱ «Φίλοι τῆς μουσικῆς» ἔκαμαν καὶ νέα ἐνέργεια ποὺ δείχνει, νομίζω, ἔλλειψι σεβασμοῦ πρὸς τοὺς ἐκπροσώπους τῆς ἑλληνικῆς κριτικῆς. Ἐνῶ ἡ ὀργάνωσις — ποὺ θὰ μᾶς ἀπασχολήσῃ ἐκτενέστερα ἀφοῦ φύγῃ ὁ Μητρόπουλος, διότι κατὰ τὴν ἀντίληψιν τῶν κυριωτέρων ἐκπροσώπων τοῦ μουσικοῦ κόσμου κινεῖται μὲ τὴν προοπτικὴν νὰ ἐπιβάλῃ καινὰ δαιμόνια καὶ νὰ ρυθμίσῃ δι' ἀναρμοδίων, ὡς ἐπὶ τὸ πλεῖστον καὶ ἁπλῶς φιλομούσων, ζωτικὰ θέματα τῆς μουσικῆς ζωῆς τοῦ τόπου — ἐνῷ, λοιπόν, εἶχε λάβει τὴν ἀπόφασιν νὰ μὴν ὑπάρξῃ κανεὶς προσκεκλημένος στὶς συναυλίες Μητροπούλου ποὺ διαχειρίζεται, μετέβαλε ξαφνικὰ ἀπόφασι. Ἔτσι ἐστάλησαν ἀνὰ δύο προσκλήσεις εἰς τοὺς ἐν ἐνεργείᾳ μαέστρους, εἰς δὲ τοὺς μουσικοὺς κριτικοὺς περιφερειακὰ ἐδόθη μόνον μία θέσις. Τὸ ἔγραψα καὶ τὴν περασμένη ἑβδομάδα ὅτι τὸ ζήτημα δὲν εἶνε θέμα θέσεων. Εἶνε θέμα τῆς θέσεως ποὺ πρέπει νὰ ἔχῃ ἡ κριτική. Καὶ εἶνε ἀπαράδεκτον «φίλοι» τῆς μουσικῆς νὰ συμπεριφέρωνται ἐχθρικὰ πρὸς τοὺς ἐκπροσώπους της, ἐκτὸς ἐὰν δι' αὐτοὺς δὲν χρειάζονται διὰ τὶς διάφορες καλλιτεχνικὲς ἐκδηλώσεις κρίσεις πέραν τῶν ἀτομικῶν τους.

ΑΠ' Ο,ΤΙ ΣΥΜΒΑΙΝΕΙ ΣΤΗΝ ΕΛΛΑΔΑ

ΜΙΑ ΝΥΚΤΑ ΣΤΗΝ ΟΥΡΑ ΓΙΑ ΕΝΑ ΕΙΣΙΤΗΡΙΟΝ!

ΤΟ ΑΝΘΡΩΠΙΝΟ... ΦΙΔΙ

Προχθὲς τὸ βραδάκι, πέρασε ὁ ἀγαθὸς ἀνθρωπάκος ἀπὸ τὴν ὁδὸ Πανεπιστημίου καὶ Ἀμερικῆς. Τὸ θέαμα ποὺ εἶδε τοῦ ἔφερε στὸ στόμα αὐθάρμητα ἐκεῖνο τὸ πασίγνωστο καὶ χαρακτηριστικὸ ναργαϊλοειδὲς:

— Τσ...τσ...τσ...

Στὴ κορυφὴ τῆς οὐρᾶς βρίσκεται τὸ.. ναυτικὸ καὶ παίζει πρέφα. Μερικοὶ ναῦτες τεντωμένοι, ἀλύγιστοι ἦρθαν νὰ πάρουν εἰσιτήρια γιὰ τὴν Συναυλία.

— Πρῶτοι, πρῶτοι, παιδιά, ἔ;
— Βεβαίως. Εἰδικὴ ἄδεια διανυκτερεύσεως.
— Καλὸ ξημέρωμα.
— Μερσί, ἐπίσης.

Φοιτητές, φοιτήτριες, ὑπάλληλοι, ἔμποροι, ἐπιστήμονες, τεχνικοί, ἐπαγγελματίες, κυρίες, δεσποινίδες, ἕνα ἀναπάντεχο κοκταὶηλ ἀνθρώπων, ἡλικιῶν, ἐπαγγελμάτων, γούστων καὶ πεποιθήσεων. Τάβλια, χαρτιά, παιγνίδια. Ἕνας κουβάλησε κοντά του ἕνα... ἀκκορντεόν.

— Ἂς ἦταν νάχα... ὅλο τὸν κόσμο στὴν διάθεσί μου.
— Νὰ πάψῃ τὸ ἀκκορντεόν.
— Γιατί, κύριε πόλισμαν;
— Εἶναι περασμένα μεσάνυκτα καὶ ὁ κόσμος κοιμᾶται.
— Ποὺντος ποὺ κοιμᾶται, κύριε πόλισμαν; Γαρίδες ὅλοι.
— Λέω γιὰ τὸν ἄλλο κόσμο. τὸν... κανονικό.
— !!!!!!

Δὲν τσουλάει ἡ ἔτιμη ἡ ὥρα. Ἀκόμα μιὰ μετὰ τὰ μεσάνυχτα εἶναι. Ἕνας λέει κολαμπούρια. Ἄλλος κάνει...ταχυδακτυλουργικὰ πειράματα. Παρακάτω παίζουν μπίζ. Κάτι κοπέλλες πιάνουνε πρίμο-σεγκόντο τὰ τελευταῖα σουξεδάκια, οἱ κύριοι στέκονται κορδωμένοι, μπαστουνάτοι, ἀξιοπρεπεῖς, οἱ κυρίες κουτσομπολεύουν ἐαυτὰς καὶ ἀλλήλας καὶ τὰ γκαρσόνια ἀπὸ τὰ πέριξ μπὰρ καὶ καφενεῖα πάνε κι' ἔρχονται.

— Ἡ ὥρα;
— Τρεῖς καὶ δέκα..

Ἔχετε τύχει στὸ κατάστρωμα καραβιοῦ ἐν πλῷ, νύχτα κατὰ τὰ νησάκια; Κάτι παρόμοιο. Μερικοὶ κοιμοῦνται. Κουβερτοῦλες, παπλωματάκια, παλτουδάκια, ντιβανάκια ἐκστρατείας καὶ πολὺ... ροχαλητό. Ἄλλοι χασμουριῶνται.

— Ψίτ, παιδί.
— Διατάξτε.
— Καφέδες. Μέτριους.
— Μέσως...

Τὸ φίδι ἔχει μεγαλώσει γιὰ καλά. Κι' ὅλο ἔρχονται.

— Νὰ κι' ἄλλοι... ἀσυλλέκτοι.
— Πα, πά, πά, τί γίνεται... Ἀργήσαμε.

Σάντουϊτς, κουλούρια, λουκουμάδες, παστέλια, τυρόπιτες, μπουγάτσες, καὶ ὅλα τὰ συναφῆ μασουλιῶνται ἀλύπητα καὶ ἀκατάπαυστα ἀπὸ τοὺς πολυπληθεῖς νεομάρτυρες τῆς μουσικῆς θρησκείας. Τὸ μυριστήκανε οἱ μικροπωλῆται καὶ πέσανε σὰν ἐπιδημία στὴν ὁδὸ Ἀμερικῆς.

— Δῶσε κι' ἐμένα μπάρμπα.
— Κύριε πόλισμαν.
— Τί τρέχει;
— Νὰ λαλήσῃ κομμάτι τὸ ἀκκορντεόν;
— Ὄχι.
— Ἀδικία. Γιὰ εἰσιτήρια τῆς μουσικῆς περιμένουμε. Νὰ μὴν τὸ πάμε μετὰ μουσικῆς τὸ ξενύχτι;
— Εἶπα, ὄχι.
— Εἶναι καὶ τὸ ἄλλο, κύριε πόλισμαν.
— Ποιό;
— Ἡ μουσικὴ... ξημερώνει. Κι' ἀκόμα εἴμαστε τρισήμισι.

Κάποιοι ἀραιοὶ γλεντζέδες πεινᾶνε ἀπὸ τὰ... κούλουμα.

— Τί γίνεται δῶ, μωρ' ἀδερφὲ μου:

— Εἰσιτήρια γιὰ τὴ Συναυλία ποὺ θὰ διευθύνῃ ὁ μεγάλος μας μαέστρος Δ. Μητρόπουλος.

Ὡστόσο κανένας δὲν παραπονιέται. Ὁ ἕνας μὲ τὸν ἄλλον κυττάνε νὰ δώσουνε κέφι καὶ ζωντάνια στὴν μακρόσυρτη οὐρὰ ποὺ τώρα, τέσσαρες καὶ μιάσῃ, κοντὰ ξημερώματα, ἔχει παραφουσκώσει καὶ θεριέψει. Εἶναι οἱ καλαμποριτζῆδες. Εἶναι τὰ πειραχτήρια.

— Μιὰ νύχτα εἶναι, πέρασε κι' ὅλας.

Τ' ἀστέρια σκᾶνε ἕνα — ἕνα καὶ ἀφήνουνε κενά. Κι' ὅσο ἐκεῖνα φεύγουνε, ἐδῶ ἔρχονται κι' ἄλλοι, ἀγουροξυπνημένοι, γουλωμένοι, ἀνυπόμονοι:

Εἶναι καὶ τὰ φορητὰ ράδια ποὺ κοπανάνε σὲ χαμηλοὺς τόνους τὰ μάμπο καὶ τὶς ρούμπες καὶ τὶς παρόλες τῶν ξένων σταθμῶν — γιατὶ οἱ δικοί μας τέτοιες ὧρες κάνουνε νανάκια — καὶ κρατοῦνε τὰ βλέφαρα ἀπάνω.

—Ὁ Αὐγερινός. Παιδιὰ ὁ Αὐγερινός.

Σὲ λίγο θὰ ζωηρέψῃ τὸ χρῶμα της ἡ ἡμέρα — θὰ ζωντανέψῃ ἡ Ἀθήνα, θὰ ἀγοῦνε τὰ μπούσια καὶ θἄρθῃ κι' ὁ ὑπάλληλος ν' ἀνοίξῃ τὸ φωτισμένο «Κεντρικὸν Ταμεῖον». Μετὰ θ' ἀρχίσῃ ἡ «προτεραιότης».

—Οἱ ἀριθμοὶ παρακαλῶ. Ἕνα... δύο... τρία... τέσσερα...

Ὅσο νάναι θάχῃ γάσει ἡ οὐρὰ τὴν ποιητική, γραφικὴ, ἤρεμη καὶ πολιτισμένη εἰκόνα της. Θ' ἀρχίσῃ τὸ «στριωξίδι» οἱ φωνὲς τῶν πόλισμαν, τὰ μεγάφωνα μὲ τὶς ὁδηγίες, φωνές, κακό, φασαρία... Τὰ ὡραῖα ἦταν τὴ νύχτα.

Ἀλλὰ μὲ συγχωρῆτε πάω νὰ κοιμηθῶ.

Ο ΜΕΓΑΛΟΣ ΕΛΛΗΝΑΣ ΑΡΧΙΜΟΥΣΙΚΟΣ

ΑΝΕΚΔΟΤΑ ΑΠΟ ΤΗ ΖΩΗ ΤΟΥ ΔΗΜ. ΜΗΤΡΟΠΟΥΛΟΥ

ΠΟΙΟ ΕΙΝΑΙ ΤΟ «ΠΙΣΤΕΥΩ» ΤΟΥ

ΟΤΑΝ ὁ Δημήτρης Μητρόπουλος διηύθυνε στὴ Σκάλα τοῦ Μιλάνου τὴν ὄπερα «Βότσεκ» τοῦ Ἄλμπαν Μπέργκ τὸν Ἰούνιο τοῦ 1952, εἶχε μιὰ καταπληκτικὴ ἐπιτυχία. Ἐν τούτοις στὴν ἀρχὴ τῆς ὄπερας ἀκούστηκαν ἐπίμονες ἀποδοκιμασίες ἀπὸ τὴν γαλαρία. Στὸ τέλος τῆς πρώτης πράξεως ὁ μαέστρος γύρισε στὸ ἀκροατήριο καὶ μίλησε στοὺς Μιλανέζους γιὰ δύο πράγματα: 1) Γιὰ τὸ πῶς πρέπει νὰ φέσται τὸ κοινὸ σ' ἕνα κονσέρτο καὶ 2) Γιὰ τὸ μεγαλεῖο τοῦ «Βότσεκ» ὡς μουσικῆς καὶ ὡς δράματος.

Ἀπὸ τὸ σημεῖο αὐτὸ κι' ἔπειτα δὲν ἀκούστηκε καμμιὰ ἀποδοκιμασία καὶ στὸ τέλος τοῦ κονσέρτου, τὸ κοινὸ ἐσηκώθη σὲ ὑποκλίσεις καὶ χειροκροτήματα.

Ἀλλὰ μὲ συγχωρῆτε πάω νὰ κοιμηθῶ.

THE CIVIC MUSIC ASSOCIATION

Presents

THE PHILHARMONIC-SYMPHONY SOCIETY OF NEW YORK

DIMITRI MITROPOULOS, Musical Director

"THE history of the Philharmonic is the history of music in America," the phrase epitomizes the orchestra's record of magnificent and uninterrupted achievement since 1842. The New York Philharmonic, America's oldest orchestra, started on the down-beat of the young republic. At a time when Tchaikovsky was only two, Brahms five, Strauss an infant-in-arms, and Mendelssohn thirty-three, the Philharmonic played its first program. It was a program which still accepted as the keystone of symphony music: the Fifth Symphony of Beethoven.

As the Philharmonic pioneered and moulded the country's cultural life, it grew and pros-

στερικὲς ζητωκραυγές:

"Οταν τὸν ρώτησαν ἀργότερα πῶς τὸ κατώρθωσε αὐτό, ὁ Μητρόπουλος ἀπάντησε:

— Ἦταν πολὺ ἁπλό. Μίλησα στοὺς ἀκροστάς μου γιὰ τὶς ἐπιγραφὲς ἐκεῖνες, ποὺ κρέμονταν ἄλλοτε πάνω ἀπὸ τὸ πιάνο, στὰ μπὰο τοῦ Γουέστ καὶ ποὺ ἔλεγαν: «Παρακαλεῖσθε νὰ μὴν πυροβολῆτε τὸν πιανίστα. Κάνει ὅ,τι μπορεῖ ὁ δύστυχος!...».

Παρὰ τὸ γεγονὸς ὅτι ὁ Μητρόπουλος εἶναι ἱκανὸς νὰ ἀποσπάσῃ τὴ μεγαλύτερη δυνατὴ ἀπόδοσι ἀπὸ τὴν ὀρχήστρα του, δὲν εἶναι καθόλου αὐταρχικὸς στὶς σχέσεις του μὲ τοὺς μουσικούς του. Χρησιμοποιεῖ τὴν πειθὼ καὶ τὴν καλωσύνη ἀντὶ τῶν ψυχρῶν διαταγῶν. Ὡς μαέστρος, προτιμᾶ, ὅπως λέει ὁ ἴδιος, νὰ εἶναι μᾶλλον «πρόεδρος δημοκρατίας παρὰ δικτάτωρ».

Μιλῶντας γιὰ τὴν ὄπερα τοῦ Στράους «Ἠλέκτρα» ποὺ ὁ Μητρόπουλος παρουσίασε στὸ Φεστιβὰλ τοῦ Μαΐου, στὴ Φλωρεντία καθὼς καὶ στὴ Νέα Ὑόρκη καὶ στὸ Σὰν Φρανσίσκο μὲ τὶς συμφωνικὲς ὀρχήστρες τῶν δύο αὐτῶν πόλεων, ἐξήγησε τοὺς λόγους ποὺ τὸν κάνουν νὰ λατρεύῃ τὸ ἔργο αὐτό:

— Γνωρίζω τὴν «Ἠλέκτρα», ὅπως ἕνας Ἀμερικάνος μπορεῖ νὰ γνωρίζῃ τὴν ἱστορία τοῦ ἐθνικοῦ ἡρώου τῆς Ἀμερικῆς Χάκ Φὶν. Εἶναι ἡ ἱστορία τοῦ ἔθνους μου. Εἶναι μέσα στὸ αἷμα μου!

Σ' ἕνα ἄρθρο του στὸ περιοδικὸ «Νιοὺ Γιόρκερ», ὁ συγγραφεὺς Ρίτσαρντ Μπόγερ ἔγραψε:

Ὅπως λέει ὁ ἴδιος ὁ Μητρόπουλος:

Καὶ τὸ κάνει αὐτὸ γιὰ νὰ ξέρῃ μπροστά του τὶς ἰδέες. Κρατεῖ στὸ μυαλό του τὴν ἀκριβῆ ἀπόχρωσι, ποὺ ἀπαιτεῖ κάθε μουσικὸς φθόγγος σὲ πενῆντα μεγάλες συμφωνίες, ἡ καθεμιὰ ἀπὸ τὶς ὁποῖες περιέχει 300.000 — 1.000.000 μουσικοὺς φθόγγους! Μιὰ μνήμη καταπληκτική...

Στὴ σειρὰ τῶν συνεντεύξεων τοῦ συγγραφέως Ἐντουαρντ Μάρρου μὲ διασήμους ἄνδρες, ποὺ δημοσιεύθηκαν μὲ τὸν τίτλο «Αὐτὸ εἶναι τὸ Πιστεύω μου», νὰ πῶς παρουσίασε τὸ δικό του Πιστεύω ὁ Μητρόπουλος:

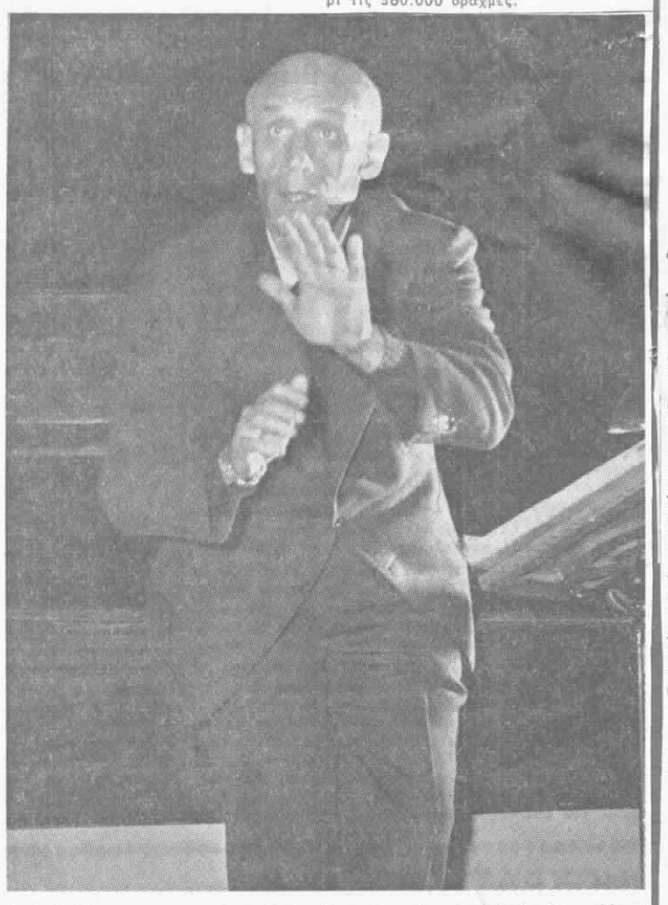
Ο ΔΗΜΗΤΡΗΣ ΜΗΤΡΟΠΟΥΛΟΣ



Ὁ διάσημος ἀρχιμουσικὸς Δημήτρης Μητρόπουλος θὰ διευθύνει, ὅπως εἶναι γνωστό, δυὸ συναυλίες στὴν Ἀθήνα στὶς 1 καὶ 2 τοῦ ἐρχόμενου μήνα. Ὁ Μητρόπουλος γεννήθηκε στὰ 1896 καὶ σπούδασε στὸ Ὠδεῖο Ἀθηνῶν καὶ στὸ Βερολῖνο. Διηύθυνε τὴν Κρατικὴ μας Ὀρχήστρα, πολλὰ εὐρωπαϊκὰ συγκροτήματα καὶ ἀπ' τὰ 1936 διάφορες ὀρχήστρες τῆς Ἀμερικῆς. Ἀπ' τὰ 1940 ὡς τὰ 1949 ἦταν διευθυντὴς τῆς συμφωνικῆς τῆς Μιννεαπόλεως καὶ ἀπὸ τὰ 1951 τῆς Φιλαρμονικῆς τῆς Ν. Ὑόρκης. Ἡ Ὀρχήστρα αὐτὴ ἱδρύθηκε στὰ 1842 καὶ στὴν μακρόχρονη ζωή της διευθύνθηκε ἀπὸ ξακουστοὺς μαέστρους ὅπως ὁ Τοσκανίνι, ὁ Φουρτβέγκλερ, ὁ Ρ. Στράους, ὁ Χόνεγγερ, ὁ Στραβίνσκυ, ὁ Στοκόφσκυ, ὁ Κουσεβίτσκυ, ὁ Μπροῦνο Βάλτερ κ. ἀ. Στὴ φωτογραφία μας, ὁ Μητρόπουλος σὲ ὥρα μελέτης.

«ΤΑ ΝΕΑ» ΠΕΜΠΤΗ, 29 Σεπτεμβρίου 1955

ΕΞΗΝΤΛΗΘΗΣΑΝ ΤΑ ΕΙΣΙΤΗΡΙΑ ΤΩΝ ΣΥΝΑΥΛΙΩΝ ΜΗΤΡΟΠΟΥΛΟΥ

Μετὰ τὴν χθεσινὴ πώλησι τῶν εἰσιτηρίων καὶ τῆς δευτέρας συμφωνικῆς συναυλίας τῆς Φιλαρμονικῆς ὁ συνολικὸς ἀριθμὸς τῶν διατεθέντων εἰσιτηρίων ἀνῆλθε σὲ 6.200 οἱ δὲ εἰσπράξεις στὸ Κεντρικὸ ταμεῖο τοῦ φεστιβὰλ σὲ 720.000 δραχμές.

—Ἡ ὑπηρεσία τοῦ Φεστιβὰλ ἀνεκοίνωσε ὅτι γιὰ τὴν ἀγορὰ εἰσιτηρίων τῆς πρώτης συναυλίας, τὰ ὁποῖα ἐπωλήθησαν τὴν περασμένη Κυριακή, διενεμήθησαν συναλικῶς 1625 δελτία προτεραιότητος, οἱ κάτοχοι τῶν ὁποίων ἐκλήθησαν ὅλοι νὰ ἀγοράσουν εἰσιτήρια. Μετὰ τὴν ἐξάντλησι τῶν δελτίων προτεραιότητος παρέμειναν ἀπώλητα δύο εἰσιτήρια τῆς Α' θέσεως καὶ ὀκτὼ τῆς Β' τὰ ὁποῖα διετέθησαν στοὺς ἐν συνεχείᾳ προσελθόντας, χωρὶς δέλτία προτεραιότητος. Τῆς πρώτης συναυλίας ἐπωλήθησαν συνολικῶς ἐκ τοῦ κεντρικοῦ Ταμείου Εἰσιτηρίων τοῦ Φεστιβὰλ περὶ τὰ 3.100 εἰσιτήρια καὶ εἰσεπράχθησαν περὶ τὶς 360.000 δραχμές.

Μιὰ ἀνέκδοτη φωτογραφία τοῦ Δημήτρη Μητρόπουλου, ὁ ὁποῖος φθάνει αὔριο τὸ ἀπόγευμα ἐπὶ κεφαλῆς τῆς Φιλαρμονικῆς Ὀρχήστρας τῆς Νέας Ὑόρκης

— Γιὰ τὴν ἀγορὰ τῶν εἰσιτηρίων τῆς δευτέρας συναυλίας, τὰ ὁποῖα διετέθησαν στὸ κοινὸν χθὲς Τετάρτη, διενεμήθησαν δελτία σ' ὅλους τοὺς ἀναμένοντας, ἐκλήθησαν δὲ γιὰ τὴν ἀγορὰν εἰσιτηρίων μέχρι τοῦ ἀριθμοῦ 1791 ὁπότε καὶ ἐξηντλήθησαν ὅλα τὰ εἰσιτήρια.

— Πρῶτα ἐξηντλήθησαν τὰ εἰσιτήρια τῆς τρίτης κατηγορίας, δραχμῶν 120, ἐν συνεχείᾳ δὲ τῆς τετάρτης κατηγορίας δραχμῶν 45, στὸν ἀριθμὸ προτεραιότητος 1320 Εἰσιτήρια τῆς δευτέρας κατηγορίας δραχμῶν 180 ὑπῆρχαν μέχρι καὶ τοῦ δελτίου προτεραιότητος 1420, τελευταῖα δὲ ἀπέμειναν τὰ εἰσιτήρια πρώτης θέσεως τῶν 240 δραχμῶν, τὰ ὁποῖα ἐξηντλήθησαν χθὲς στὶς 7.15' τὸ ἀπόγευμα στὸν ἀριθμὸ προτεραιότητος 1791, ὡς ἀνεφέρθη ἤδη.

— Πρέπει νὰ σημειωθῇ ὅτι καὶ τὰ μέλη τῆς Κυβερνήσεως, οἱ αὐλικοί, οἱ πρεσβευταὶ καὶ οἱ ἐκδόται τῶν ἡμερησίων ἐφημερίδων Ἀθηνῶν, στοὺς ὁποίους ἐδόθη ἡ εὐχέρεια ἐξασφαλίσεως μέχρι δύο μόνον εἰσιτηρίων, κατέβαλαν τὸ ἀντίτιμόν των καὶ δὲν ἐχορηγήθη σὲ κανένα πρόσκλησις δωρεάν.

φθάνει αὔριο ὁ Μητρόπουλος

ΕΑΝ ΒΡΕΞΗ, ΕΙΝΑΙ ΠΙΘΑΝΟΝ ΝΑ ΔΟΘΗ ΚΑΙ ΤΡΙΤΗ ΣΥΝΑΥΛΙΑ ΣΤΟΝ «ΟΡΦΕΑ»

ΔΙΑ ΝΑ ΔΙΕΥΘΥΝΗ ΣΥΝΑΥΛΙΑΣ ΤΟΥ ΦΕΣΤΙΒΑΛ

Ο ΜΗΤΡΟΠΟΥΛΟΣ ΦΘΑΝΕΙ ΣΗΜΕΡΟΝ ΕΙΣ ΤΑΣ ΑΘΗΝΑΣ

Η ΕΤΟΙΜΑΖΟΜΕΝΗ ΥΠΟΔΟΧΗ ΕΙΣ ΤΟΝ ΜΕΓΑΛΟΝ ΕΛΛΗΝΑ ΜΑΕΣΤΡΟΝ

'Ο Μητρόπουλος, Μουσικός Διευθυντής τῆς Φιλαρμονικῆς — Συμφωνικῆς 'Εταιρίας τῆς Νέας 'Υόρκης, γεννήθηκε στήν 'Αθήνα τό 1896 καί ἔχει άποκτήσει τήν άμεσικανική ὑπηκοότητα. Διηύθυνε, γιά πρώτη φορά, τήν Φιλαρμονική—Συμφωνική 'Ορχήστρα τῆς Νέας 'Υόρκης, ὕστερα άπό εἰδική πρόσκλησι, κατά τήν μουσική περίοδο 1940—41. Κατά τά έπόμενα χρόνια, διηύθυνε τακτικά τήν 'Ορχήστρα τῆς Νέας 'Υόρκης, αὐξάνοντας, ἔτσι, τήν μουσική φήμη του καί τόν άριθμόν τῶν θαυμαστῶν του, πρᾶγμα πού συνετέλεσε στόν διορισμό του ὡς διευθυντοῦ τῆς 'Ορχήστρας γιά τήν μουσική περίοδο 1950—51. Κατά τήν έπόμενη περίοδο διωρίσθηκε Μουσικός Διευθυντής τῆς Φιλαρμονικῆς τῆς Νέας 'Υόρκης.

'Ο Μητρόπουλος σπούδασε στό 'Ωδεῖο 'Αθηνῶν. 'Αργότερα, ὑπῆρξε μαθητής τοῦ Φερρούτσιο Μπουζόνι, στό Βερολῖνο. 'Επί πολλά χρόνια διετέλεσε μόνιμος διευθυντής τῆς Κρατικῆς 'Ορχήστρας 'Αθηνῶν. 'Εξαίσετος πιανίστας καί συνθέτης, στήν άρχή τῆς μουσικῆς του σταδιοδρομίας ἔστρεψε τήν προσοχή του στό πιάνο. "Οταν ὅμως ἄρχισε νά διευθύνη ὀρχήστρα, κατάλαβε ὅτι αὐτή ἦταν ἡ πραγματική κλίσις του. 'Ο Μητρόπουλος εἶναι γνωστός ὄχι μόνο σάν ἐξαιρετικός ἑρμηνευτής τῶν κλασσικῶν ἔργων, ἀλλά καί σάν ἐξαιρετικά πειστικός πρόμαχος τῶν συγχρόνων συνθετῶν. Πολλά άπό τά σημαντικώτερα σύγχρονα μουσικά ἔργα ἐμφανίσθηκαν, γιά πρώτη φορά, άπό αὐτόν.

'Εκτός άπό τή θέσι τοῦ Μουσικοῦ Διευθυντοῦ τῆς άοιδοτέρας άμερικανικῆς ὀρχήστρας, ὁ Μητρόπουλος ἐμφανίζεται συχνά ὡς Διευθυντής καί ἄλλων ὀρχηστρῶν, κάθε χρόνο. "Οταν τοῦ πασέρεται ἡ εὐκαιρία, ἐπίσης, ἐμφανίζεται καί στό ἐξωτερικό.

'Ο Μητρόπουλος θά διεύθυνη δύο συναυλίες τῆς Φιλαρμονικῆς 'Ορχήστρας τῆς Ν. 'Υόρκης στό θέατρο 'Ηρώδου τοῦ 'Αττικοῦ στίς 1 καί 2 'Οκτωβρίου, ἐντός τοῦ πλαισίου τοῦ «Φεστιβάλ 'Αθηνῶν».

'Η Φιλαρμονική 'Ορχήστρα τῆς Ν. 'Υόρκης εἶναι ἡ παλιότερη άμερικανική ὀρχήστρα καί ἡ ἴδρυσίς της χρονολογεῖται άπό τά πρῶτα χρόνια τῆς συστάσεως τοῦ άμερικανικοῦ ἔθνους. Σήμερα, ἔπειτα άπό πολύχρονη ἄδραση καί ἐξέλιξη, ἔφθασε στό σημεῖο νά θεωρῆται — ὅπως εἶπε κάποτε ὁ Λώρενς Γκίλμαν — «ἕνα πραγματικά άξιοθαύμαστο μέσο ψυχαγωγίας καθώς καί ψυχικῆς καί πνευματικῆς ἐνθάρρυνσεως».

'Ο Δημ. Μητρόπουλος, πού ἔρχεται εἰς τήν 'Ελλάδα ὕστερα άπό δεκαεπτά ἔτῶν άπουσία, τό ἴδιο δράδυ τῆς άφίξεώς του θά παραστῆ εἰς τάς 7 εἰς εἰδικήν δεξίωσιν, ἡ ὁποία ὀργανοῦται πρός τιμήν του άπό τόν ὑπουργόν τῆς Παιδείας κ. Γεροκωστόπουλον εἰς τό ξενοδοχεῖον τῆς «Μεγ. Βρεταννίας». Τήν ἐπομένην, δηλαδή τό Σάββατον τό πρωΐ εἰς τάς 11 ἡ Φιλαρμονική 'Ορχήστρα τῆς Ν. 'Υόρκης θά συγκεντρωθῆ εἰς τό 'Ωδεῖον 'Ηρώδου τοῦ 'Αττικοῦ γιά δοκιμή καί τό δράδυ θά δώση τήν πρώτην της συναυλίαν. Θά ἐπακολουθήση τήν Κυριακήν δεξίωσις τό άπόγευμα εἰς τό 'Ωδεῖον 'Αθηνῶν καί τό δράδυ ἡ δευτέρα συναυλία καί τήν Δευτέραν τό άμερικανικόν μουσικόν συγκρότημα θά άναχωρήση διά τό Λονδῖνον. Εἰς τήν άγγλικήν πρωτεύουσαν θά ἐμφανισθῆ εἰς τάς 4 καί εἰς τάς 5 'Οκτωβρίου θά συμπληρώση δέ ἔτσι 26 συναυλίες εἰς τήν Εὐρώπην—τήν πρώτην ἔδωσε εἰς τάς 5 Σεπτεμβρίου εἰς τό Φεστιβάλ τοῦ 'Εδιμβούργου—καί εἰς τάς 20 'Οκτωβρίου θά ἐγκαινιάση τήν νεωσοινῆν σαιζόν εἰς τό «Κάονεγκυ Χώλ» τῆς Νέας 'Υόρκης.

Athens Festival — 30 ΣΕΠΤΕΜΒΡΙΟΥ

Mitropoulos Back Today

ATHENS NOWS

All Tickets Sold For Both Concerts

DIMITRI MITROPOULOS, internationally famous Greek conductor, will be back in Athens today. With him will be the New York Philharmonic Orchestra, which, reaching the end of its European tour, will give two concerts under his baton at the Herod Atticus Theatre (Orfeus Cinema if wet) tomorrow and on Sunday night.

Dimitri Mitropoulos ponders a scare in the comfort of his home before a rehearsal of the New York Philharmonic Orchestra, which he will conduct in two concerts in Athens this week-end.

All tickets for the concerts have been sold, but both will be broadcast by Radio Athens (National Programme).

A reception will be given in honour of Maestro Mitropoulos by the Education Minister Mr Yerokostopoulos at the Grande Bretagne Hotel tonight.

The programme of Saturday's concert includes:

Prelude and Allegro «La Sultane» (Couperin-Milhaud) «Symphony No 2» (Schumann) and «Symphony No 5» (Prokofiev).

That of Sunday's includes: Overture to «Der Freischutz» (Weber); Symphony No 5» (Mendelssohn) and Greek Dances» (Skalkotas).

EXTRA TRAGEDIES

The two concerts were to have brought the Athens Festival to a triumphant conclusion, but it has now been announced that the National Theatre will give several more performances of ancient dramas at the Herod Atticus Theatre, before leaving for Yugoslavia on October 10.

«The «Hecuba» of Euripides will be performed on October 5 and 6, and the «Oedipus Rex» of Sophocles on October 3 and 4, with Kyra tina Paxinou and Alexis Minotis in the leading roles.

The National Theatre will present the «Hecuba» and the «Oedipus Rex» on October 12 and 13 at Belgrade and on October 15 and 16 at Zagreb.

Afterwards it will return to Greece and give several performances at the National Theatre in Salonika from October 19 to 31.

Η ΤΕΛΕΥΤΑΙΑ ΣΥΝΑΥΛΙΑ ΤΟΥ ΦΕΣΤΙΒΑΛ

Η ΣΥΜΦΩΝΙΑ ΤΗΣ ΛΕΒΕΝΤΙΑΣ ΤΟΥ ΚΑΛΟΜΟΙΡΗ

— Τοῦ συνεργάτου μας κ. ΜΑΡΙΟΥ ΒΑΡΒΟΓΛΗ —

'Ο κύκλος τῶν καθαρά μουσικῶν ἐκδηλώσεων τοῦ φεστιβάλ τῶν 'Αθηνῶν, ἐκλεισε μέ τήν 5η συναυλία τῆς Κρατικῆς 'Ορχήστρας μέ μαέστρο τόν κ. Φ. Οἰκονομίδη. Τό πρόγραμμα περιελάμβανε τήν εἰσαγωγή τοῦ «Λοέγκριν», τό πρελούντιο άπό τόν «Τριστανο καί τό «Θάνατο τῆς 'Ιζόνδης», τήν εἰσαγωγή τοῦ «Τανχόϊζερ» τοῦ Βάγκνερ, καί τήν «Συμφωνία τῆς Λεβεντιάς» τοῦ Μανώλη Καλομοίρη. Τώρα δέν άπομένει παρά μιά μέρα άκόμα άπό τό σημαντικώτερο ἴσως γεγονός τῆς χρονιάς, τῆς συναυλίας τῆς ὀρχήστρας τῆς Ν. 'Υόρκης μέ διευθυντή τόν ἔνδοξο "Ελληνα Δημήτρη Μητρόπουλο. Τό ὄνομα τοῦτο ἤρθε τίς τελευταῖες ἡμέρες νά μοῦ ξυπνήση τήν μνήμη καί νά μέ φέρη πολλά χρόνια πίσω, τότε πού νέοι καί φίλοι καί οἱ τρεῖς, Καλομοίρης, Μητρόπουλος καί αὐτός πού γραφει τά λόγια αὐτα, γεμάτοι νεανικούς παλμούς καί ἰδανικά γιά μιά γνήσια ἑλληνική προσφορά στή μουσική, βλέπαμε τόν κόσμο ὅλο δικό μας. Σήμερα ὕστερα άπό τόσα χρόνια, γεμάτοι συγκίνησι καί χαρά, δεχόμαστε παλι κοντά μας τόν φίλο πού πραγματοποίησε τό ὄνειρο καί τῶν τριῶν, ἐδραιώνοντας καλλιτεχνική κυριαρχία πάνω στή Γῆ. Τήν ἀμετρητη χαρα μας γιά τήν ἐπίσκεψι τοῦ Δημήτρη Μητρόπουλου, ἐπισκιάζουν τά λυπηρά γεγονότα τῶν τελευταίων ἡμερῶν, τά γνωστά γεγονότα καί ἡ στάσι τῆς κυβερνήσεως τῆς πατρίδας τῶν ἐκτελεστῶν τῆς ὀρχήστρας τῆς Νέας 'Υόρκης. Ας μή σπεύσουν λοιπόν οἱ ξενοι μουσικοί νά ἑρμηνεύσουν τά χειροκροτήματα τῶν άκροατῶν τοῦ άρχαίου θέατρου, σάν φιλική ἐκδήλωσι ἤ σάν ἀδροφροσύνη, πού δέν ὀφείλουμε στή χώρα πού ἐκπροσωποῦν, ἀλλά μᾶλλον σάν φανατισμό ἀμεροληψίας, ὄχι πάντοτε παραδεκτής, πού κατέχει τό λαό τῆς μικρῆς μας χώρας καί πού φτάνει στό σημεῖο νά χωρίζη τό ἐθνικοπατριωτικό ζήτημα, άπό τό καθαρά καλλιτεχνικό θέμα.

Ξαναγυρίζω ὅμως στήν κριτική τῆς 5ης συναυλίας τοῦ φεστιβάλ· καί μιά πού ἡ μνήμη μου ἔφερε στήν ἐπιφάνεια παληές καλές ἡμέρες κοινῶν άγώνων καί ἐλπίδων, παραχωρῶ στόν Δημήτρη Μητρόπουλο λίγες γραμμές άπ' αὐτή τήν στῆλη καί άντιγράφω άπό τόν «'Ελεύθερο Λόγο» τοῦ 1925, τούς χαρακτηρισμούς του γιά τή «Συμφωνία τῆς Λεβεντιάς» τοῦ Καλομοίρη, ὅπως μοῦ τούς εἶπε κι' ὅπως τούς ἔγραφα ἐκεῖ, στήν κριτική μου. «Τί νά σοῦ πῶ, φίλε μου Μάριε, στό ἔργο αὐτό βλέπω μιά μεγάλη δύναμη πού γιά πρώτη φορά βλέπω σέ ἑλληνική σύνθεση. Οὔτε σύ, οὔτε ἐγώ, οὔτε ὁ φίλος μας Ριάδης καταφθάσαμε ἴσαμε σήμερα νά παρουσιάσωμε ἕνα συμφωνικό σύνολο διαρκείας μέ τόσο ἔντονη ἔκφραση, γιατί εἶναι σπάνια στήν ἐποχή μας αὐτή, πού ἡ μηχανική ζωή μᾶς ἔχει κάνει νευρικούς, νά ἔχη κανείς τήν άντοχή νάχη τόσο μεγάλη μουσική ἀναπτυή. Δέν εἶναι εὔκολο πρᾶγμα νά στήση ἕνα πρῶτο μέρος μιᾶς συμφωνίας. Μιά οἰκοδομή ὅμως ἀξιόλογη μόνον ὁ Καλομοίρης ἴσαμε σήμερα μᾶς παρουσίασε καί σέ βεβαιώ, Μάριε, πώς ἀπό σήμερα ἐξραιώνεται ἡ πεποίθησίς μου γιά τή μεγάλη σημασία τοῦ Καλομοίρη στήν 'Ελληνική μουσική δημιουργία· ἄλλως τε, ξέρεις, ὁ ἴδιος ὁ Ριάδης, ὕστερα άπό τή συναυλία, ἦρθε καί μοῦ εἶπε: «Τί νά σοῦ πῶ, φίλε μου, δέν μπορῶ 'γω νά χτίσω, εἶμαι νευρικός».

"Ετσι μίλησε τότε ὁ πραγματικός καλλιτέχνης, χωρίς φαρισαϊσμό καί ὑποκρισία· κι' ἦταν ὁ πιό άρμόδιος νά μιλήση, γιατί εἶχε κάμει ὁ ἴδιος τήν άνάλυση καί τήν ἐκτέλεση τῆς «Συμφωνίας τῆς Λεβεντιάς» στό θέατρο «Ο. Λύμπια». Τό ἔργο γράφτηκε στά 1919 καί παίχτηκε, γιά πρώτη φορά, στό θέατρο τοῦ 'Ηρώδη τοῦ 'Αττικοῦ άπό τήν στρατιωτική ὀρχήστρα, γιά τίς γιορτές τῆς Νίκης. 'Από τή συμφωνία ἐκτελέστηκε μόνο τό δεύτερο καί τρίτο μέρος, κι' αὐτό γιατί τό πρῶτο παρουσίαζε τεχνικές δυσκολίες, ὅπως καί τό τελευταῖο μέ τή χορωδία.

Πέρασαν άπό τότε 35 ὁλόκληρα χρόνια. Οἱ πολεμικές καί οἱ άρνήσεις δέν σάλεψαν τό ἔργο άπ' τή θέση του. Τί ἄλλο μπορεῖ νά ζητήση ἕνας καλλιτέχνης άπ' τήν ἐπιβολή του στόν καταλυτή χρόνο;

Τό «κοιμητῆρι τῆς δουνοπλαγιᾶς», εἶναι μιά άπ' τίς καλύτερες συνθέσεις τοῦ μουσουργοῦ καί άκούγοντάς το σήμερα ἔνοιωσα τήν ἴδια συγκίνηση, ὅπως καί τότε, σάν πρωτοπαίχτηκε. Γιά τήν ἐκτέλεση τοῦ ἔργου ἔχω νά πῶ δυό λόγια. Στίς γενικές της γραμμές ἦταν σχεδόν καλή. Τό δεύτερο καί τρίτο μέρος δόθηκαν καλύτερα· ἴσως μερικές διακοπές στό «γλέντι» νά χαλάρωσαν τή ζωντάνια καί τήν ἑνότητα τοῦ ρυθμοῦ. Γιά τό πρῶτο ὅμως καί τό τελευταῖο μέρος, ἔχω πολλές ἐπιφυλάξεις. 'Ιδιαίτερα μέ λύπησε τό γεγονός πῶς ἡ ἀνδρική χορωδία, πού τόσες δαφνες ἔδρεψε στό φεστιβάλ, στό μέρος Acapella (χωρίς τή συνοδεία τῆς ὀρχήστρας), δέν παρουσιάστηκε μέ σταθερή τονικότητα.

Τά χειροκροτήματα τοῦ κοινοῦ τίμησαν τόν ἐμπνευσμένο δημιουργό καί μαζί μ' αὐτόν τόν ἀρχιμουσικό καί τήν ὀρχήστρα.

Τά τρία ἔργα τοῦ Βάγκνερ, (πρῶτο μέρος τοῦ προγράμματος), ὁ κ. Οἰκονομίδης, μᾶς τά ἔχει παρουσιάσει πολλές φορές μέ ἐπιτυχία. Αὐτή τή φορά, ὅμως, μέ λύπη μου ὁμολογῶ πώς μοῦ εἶναι «πολύ βαρύ τά ξένα κρίματα νά κρίνω». Ντροπή μου ὅμως θάταν νά γράψω πώς ἡ ἐκτέλεση τῶν συνθέσεων τοῦ Βάγκνερ, ἦταν καλή καί ἄξια νά κλείση τό «Φεστιβάλ τῶν 'Αθηνῶν» τοῦ 1955.

Ο ΜΗΤΡΟΠΟΥΛΟΣ ΣΤΗΝ ΑΘΗΝΑ!

"Απόψε καί αὔριο δίδονται οἱ δύο Συναυλίες τῆς Φιλαρμονικῆς 'Ορχήστρας Νέας 'Υόρκης, μέ διευθυντή τόν Δημήτρη Μητρόπουλο. Τήν περασμένη ἑβδομάδα δώσαμε ὅλες τίς λεπτομέρειες γιά τήν φρενιτιώδη κίνηση πού σημειώθηκε πρό τῶν συναυλιῶν. Τσέκ καί δολλάρια άπό τήν Εὐρώπη ἤρχοντο σέ μάτσα εἰς τό ξενοδοχεῖον τῆς «Μεγάλης Βρεττανίας» καί τό 'Υπουργεῖον Τύπου. Μά καί τό 'Αθηναϊκό κοινό ἔδειξε τόν ἴδιον ἐνθουσιασμό. Οἱ οὐρές—ἰδίως γιά τήν δευτέρα συναυλία—ἄρχισαν άπό τίς 11 τό δράδυ, γιά δελτία προτεραιότητος, πού θά ἐδίδοντο τήν ἐπομένην τό πρωΐ εἰς τάς 9 ! Φυσικά, σημειώθηκαν—εἶναι δυνατόν ν' άποφευχθοῦν;—κρούσματα μαύρης άγοράς, μέ δελτία προτεραιότητος πωλούμενα άντί 50—250 δραχμῶν καί εἰσιτήρια ἐγγίζοντα τήν διπλασίαν τῆς ἐπισήμου τιμῆς των. Πάντως, εἶναι ἐνθαρρυντικό νά βλέπη κανείς τήν νεολαία—καί τούς ὄχι καί τόσο νέους—νά άποφασίζουν νά ταλαιπωρηθοῦν γιά καλλιτεχνικό γεγονός. Ὡς γνωστόν, τά προγράμματα τῶν συναυλιῶν εἶναι : ΣΑΒΒΑΤΟΝ : Κουπερέν: Πρελούντιο καί 'Αλλέγκρο. Σούμαν: 2α Συμφωνία. Προκόφιεφ: 5η Συμφωνία. ΚΥΡΙΑΚΗ: Βέμπερ: 'Ελεύθερος Σκοπευτής (εἰσ.). Μέντελσον: 5η Συμφωνία. Σκαλκώττας : 'Ελληνικοί Χοροί. Μπράμς: 2α Συμφωνία. Φυσικά, δέν ὑπάρχει πλέον ἴχνος εἰσιτηρίου εἰς τά ταμεῖα. οὔτε καί εἶναι πιθανόν νά γίνουν ἐπιστροφαί. Τά πάντα ἐξαοτῶνται πλέον άπό τόν καιρό. "Αν τύχη καί βρέξη, ἡ συναυλία θά γίνη εἰς τόν «'Ορφέα» καί πλῆθος εἰσιτηρίων θά άκυρωθοῦν, ἐν μέσῳ άπελπισίας καί ὀδυρμῶν. Πάντως, ἡ ἄφιξις τοῦ Μητροπούλου, ἂν ἐξαιρέσωμε μερικούς πικροχόλους, χαιρετίσθηκε άπό τούς 'Αθηναίους σάν τό μεγάλο καλλιτεχνικό γεγονός τῆς χρονιᾶς. Τά παρασκήνια τῆς μεγάλης δεξιώσεως τῆς Παρασκευῆς άναφέρονται εἰς άλλην στήλην.

Καβουνίδης κι' ἕνας δύο συγγενεῖς τοῦ μαέστρου.

«ΗΡΘΕ!... ΗΡΘΕ!...»

Ἡ ἀνυπομονησία τοῦ κόσμου δέν κράτησε πολύ. Κάποιος ἀπό τό προσωπικό του ἀερολιμένος ἀνήγγειλε ὅτι στούς ἐπιβάτες τοῦ ἀεροπλάνου—πού ἦταν τό πρῶτο ἀπό τά δύο εἰδικῶς ἀγκαζαρισμένα γιά τούς μουσικούς τῆς Φιλαρμονικῆς — συγκαταλέγεται καί ὁ Δημήτρης Μητρόπουλος.

—«Ἤρθε!... Ἤρθε!...». Αὐτή ἦταν ἡ πρώτη κραυγή ἀγαλλιάσεως πού ξέφυγε ἀπό τά στόματα τῶν πεντακοσίων περίπου ἀνθρώπων πού συνωθοῦντο γύρω ἀπό τό ἀεροπλάνο.

— Οἱ φωτορεπόρτερ, ἀναρριχημένοι στήν κουπαστή τῆς σκάλας, ἐσκόπευαν μέ τίς μηχανές τους τό μικρό ἀνοιγμα ἀπ' ὅπου θά ξεπροβάλλε σέ λίγο ὁ μεγάλος μαέστρος. Αὐτά ὅλα ἐξετυλίχθησαν μέ κινηματογραφική ταχύτητα.

ΚΑΤΑΒΕΒΛΗΜΕΝΟΣ ΑΠΟ ΤΟ ΚΟΠΙΑΣΤΙΚΟ ΤΑΞΙΔΙ

Ἀδύνατη, ἀσκητική διεγράφη σέ λίγο στό ὕψος τῆς σκάλας ἡ μορφή τοῦ Μητρόπουλου. Τό πρόσωπό του, ὠχρό, ἔφερε ἐνδηλα τά ἴχνη τοῦ μεγάλου καί κουραστικοῦ ταξιδιοῦ πού εἶχε κάμει ἀπό τό Μιλάνο, ὅπου ἔδωσε μέ καταπληκτική ἐπιτυχία δύο συναυλίες, ἕως τά χωματα τῆς τόσο ἀγαπημένης του πατρίδας.

—«Ἔχω γυρίσει τόν κόσμο ὁλόκληρο», ἔλεγε ἀργότερα ὁ Μητρόπουλος στή συνομιλία του μέ τούς ἀντιπροσώπους τοῦ Τύπου. «Τέτοιο ἀπαίσιο ταξίδι, τέτοια κούραση ποτέ ἄλλοτε δέν τήν αἰσθάνθηκα».

— Καί πράγματι ὁ Μητρόπουλος σέ ὅσους τόν εἶδαν κατά τήν ἀποβίβασί του ἀπό τό ἀεροπλάνο, φάνηκε φοβερά κατοϊδεβλημένος. Χαιρετοῦσε μέ ἐγκάρδιες πλατειές χειρονομίες κι' γαμογελοῦσε ἀδιάκοπα μέ τό γοητευτικό χαμογελό του. Κύτταζε ὅμως συγχρόνως μέ ἀπόγνωσι τό ἀδιέξοδο ἐμπρός του καί γύρευε μέ τό βλέμμα του μιά ἤσυχη γωνιά γιά νά ἀναπνεύση καί νά ξεκουραισθῆ.

—«Εἶμαι κατασυγκινημένος, ἄρχισε νά λέη, «που βρίσκομαι στήν πατρίδα μου. Εἶχαμε ἕνα πολύ ὀδυνηρό ταξίδι. Εἶμαι σχεδόν ἄρρωστος».

Η ΠΟΛΙΟΡΚΙΑ ΤΟΥ ΠΛΗΘΟΥΣ

Δέκα λεπτά τῆς ὥρας ὁ Μητρόπουλος στεκόταν στήν ἴδια θέσι ἐπαναλαμβάνοντας ἱκετευτικά: «Εἶμαι ἄρρωστος ἀφῆστε με σάς παρακαλῶ νά περάσω». Τό πλῆθος ὅμως πού δέν ἐχόρταινε νά τόν βλέπη σπρωχνόταν ἐπάνω του, τόν ἀγκάλιαζε, τόν φιλοῦσε καί μέ κάθε εἴδους ἐκδηλώσεις τοῦ ἔδειχνε τόν θαυμασμό καί τήν ἀγάπη του.

—Τό πρωτόκολλο εἶχε φυσικά ἐντελῶς παραμερισθῆ. Ὁ κ. Οἰκονομίδης πού πῆγε ὡς γενικός διευθυντής τῆς Κρατικῆς Ὀρχήστρας καί ὡς παλαιός φίλος καί συνεργάτης του νά τόν ὑποδεχθῆ, ὁ ἀρχιμουσικός κ. Βαβαγιάννης ὁ κ. Στέφανος Βαλτετσιώτης, ὁ κ. Φαραντάτος καί τόσοι ἄλλοι ἔμειναν πίσω μή μπορώντας νά ἀπομονώσουν τόν μαέστρο γιά νά τοῦ ποῦν τό «καλῶς ὥρισες».

— Ἡ κατάστασις αὐτή κράτησε κάπου εἴκοσι λεπτά ἕως ὅτου ἐπενέβη μέ πιό δραστήρια μέσα ἡ Ἀστυνομία, διέλυσε τούς συγκεντρωθέντας καί ὡδήγησε τόν Μητρόπουλο στό αὐτοκίνητο τοῦ Ὑπουργοῦ Προεδρίας τῆς Κυβερνήσεως κ. Γ. Ράλλη, μέ τό ὁποῖον ὁ δοξασμένος ἀρχιμουσικός ἀνέβηκε στήν Ἀθήνα καί ἀμπαιρώθηκε σ' ἕνα διαμέρισμα τοῦ ξενοδοχείου τῆς «Μεγάλης Βρεττανίας», ὅπου μετά λίγη ὥρα ἐδέχθη τούς ἀντιπροσώπους τοῦ Ἑλληνικοῦ Τύπου.

ΕΖΗΤΗΣΕ ΣΥΓΓΝΩΜΗΝ ΓΙΑ ΤΑ ΕΛΛΗΝΙΚΑ ΤΟΥ

Μιλώντας στούς Ἕλληνας δημοσιογράφους, ὁ κ. Μητρόπουλος ἐζήτησε πρῶτα συγγνώμη γιά τά ἑλληνικά του. Ἐν τούτοις τό λεξιλόγιό του, ἡ προφορά του ἦταν ἄψογα. Μιλοῦσε μέ πολύ μπρίο — διότι ἐν τῷ μεταξύ εἶχε τελείως συνέλθει καί εἶχε ἐπανέλθει τόν ἑαυτό του — σέ μιά στρωτή ἑλληνική γλῶσσα καί μόνο κάθε τόσο σκόνταφτε σέ κομμιά δύσκολη λέξι, τήν ὁποίαν ὅμως ἀστραπιαία καί χωρίς κόπο ἀνακούση. Δυστυχῶς ὅμως, κάθε μέρα πού περνάει, στοιχίζει στήν Φιλαρμονικά χιλιάδες δολλάρια κι' αὐτά πρέπει κάποιος νά τά πληρώση. Καθώς θά γαθατε ἕνας συμπατριώτης μας στήν Ἀμερική πλήρωσε μέ δικά του χρήματα τά ἔξοδα μεταβάσεως τῆς Ὀρχήστρας ἀπό τό Μιλάνο στήν Ἀθήνα καί ἐπιστροφῆς της στό Λονδίνο. Ἀλλοιῶς ἡ περιοδεία πληρώθηκε μέ δικά του χρήματα τά ἔξοδα μεταβάσεως τῆς Ὀρχήστρας ἀπό τό Μιλάνο στήν Ἀθήνα καί ἐπιστροφῆς της στό Λονδίνο. Ἀλλοιῶς ἡ τουρνέ στήν Ἑλλάδα ἦταν ἀδύνατον νά πραγματοποιηθῆ. Μή ξεχνᾶτε ὅτι ἡ Φιλαρμονική ἀποτελεῖται ἀπό 116 μουσικούς, οἱ ὁποῖοι λαμβάνουν ἀφοιβές ὁσυνηθίστες γιά τήν Ἑλλάδα. Κάθε συναυλία πού θά δώσουμε, ἐκτός τῆς Ἀμερικῆς, κοστίζει 6.000 δολλάρια».

— «Μή νομίζετε», συνέχισε ὁ Μητρόπουλος, «ἄτι τά χρήματα πού χρειάζεται κάθε χρόνο ἡ Φιλαρμονική τά βρίσκουμε εὔκολα ἤ ὅτι μᾶς τά παρέχει τό κράτος. Ἀπό τό ἕνα ἑκατομμύριο δολλάρια πού ἀνέρχεται ὁ προϋπολογισμός τῆς Φιλαρμονικῆς γιά τίς 23 ἑβδομάδες τῆς σαιζόν, τίς 250.000 δολλάρια μᾶς τίς χορηγεῖ τό κράτος. Τά ὑπόλοιπα χρήματα μᾶς τά δίνουν ἰδιῶτες».

Η ΤΕΧΝΗ ΕΙΝΑΙ ΓΙΑ ΤΟΥΣ ΠΛΟΥΣΙΟΥΣ ΜΕ ΤΙΣ ΤΩΡΙΝΕΣ ΚΟΙΝΩΝΙΚΕΣ ΣΥΝΘΗΚΕΣ

Κατόπιν ὁ Μητρόπουλος, παίρνοντας ἀφορμή ἀπό τά οἰκονομικά τῆς Φιλαρμονικῆς, ἔθιξε ἕνα θέμα τεραστίου ἐνδιαφέροντος. Τήν σχέσι τοῦ λαοῦ μέ τήν μουσική.

—«Ἡ τέχνη, εἶπε, κάτω ἀπό τίς σημερινές κοινωνικές συνθῆκες, εἶναι γιά τούς πλουσίους. Τά εἰσιτήρια τῶν συναυλιῶν παντοῦ σ' ὅλον τόν κόσμο, εἶναι ἀκριβά καί τά ἀγοράζουν οἱ πλούσιοι, ὄχι γιατί ἀγαποῦν ἤ καταλαβαίνουν τήν μουσική καλύτερα ἀπό τόν λαό, ἀλλά γιά λόγους κοινωνικῆς σκοπιμότητος».

—Ἡ λεπτότης πού διακρίνει τόν μεγάλο μαέστρο δέν τόν ἄφησε νά ἀκριβολογήση στό σημεῖο αὐτό, καίτοι ἦταν φανερό πῶς ὑπονοοῦσε τόν σνομπισμό, τήν διεθνῆ ἀρρωστεια τῆς ἐποχῆς μας. «Οἱ ἄνθρωποι, προσέθεσε ὁ μεγάλος ἀρχιμουσικός, πού ἀγαποῦν εἰλικρινά τήν μουσική, αὐτοί πού τήν θεωροῦν ὅπως ἐγώ σάν θρησκεία τους, ἀνήκουν στίς ἄπορες τάξεις. Ἐλπίζω πῶς κάποια μέρα ἡ μουσική θά γίνη θρησκεία τῆς ἀνθρωπότητος ὁπότε ἡ εἴσοδος στά κοντσέρτα θά εἶναι ἐλεύθερη, ὅπως εἶναι σήμερα ἀνοικτοί οἱ ναοί στόν καθένα πού θέλει νά προσευχηθῆ».

ΠΑΝΤΟΥ ΤΟΝ ΥΠΕΔΕΧΘΗΣΑΝ ΜΕ ΑΓΑΠΗ

Τρία χαρακτηριστικά στιγμιότυπα ἀπό τήν χθεσινή ἄφιξι τοῦ Δημήτρη Μητρόπουλου. Ἀριστερά, ὁ διάσημος μαέστρος, μέσα στό αὐτοκίνητο τοῦ ὑπουργοῦ κ. Ράλλη πού τόν μετέφερε ἀπό τό ἀεροδρόμιο στό ξενοδοχεῖο τῆς «Μεγάλης Βρεττανίας». Ὁ Μητρόπουλος δέν ἔχει ἀκόμη συνέλθει ἀπό τό ἀνώμαλο ταξίδι καί ἀπό τίς ἐπιθέσεις τῶν θαυμαστῶν του. Εἰς τό μέσον, ὁ ἐπιφανής ὀρχιμουσικός κατά τήν συνάντησί του μέ τήν Κατίνα Παξινοῦ. Δεξιά, μία ὥρα μετά τήν ἄφιξί του, εὔχαρις καί ζωηρός, ὁ Μητρόπουλος ὁμιλεῖ πρός τούς ἐκπροσώπους τοῦ Ἑλληνικοῦ καί ξένου τύπου

Η ΣΟΒΙΕΤΙΚΗ ΜΟΥΣΙΚΗ

Καί ἡ συνομιλία τοῦ διασήμου ἀρχιμουσικοῦ μέ τούς δημοσιογράφους κατέληξε ὡς ἑξῆς:

—«Ἐλέχθη ὅτι στά προγράμματά μου προτιμῶ τήν σοβιετική μουσική. Αὐτό ἀν ἦταν παρ' ὅλους τούς Μάκ Κάρθυ καί τούς ὁμοίους των, ἐπραγματοποίησε μία παγκόσμια τουρνέ προπαγανδίζοντας τήν Ρωσική μουσική».

— Ὅσον ἀφορᾶ τήν 10η Συμφωνία τῆς Ἐρήνης τοῦ Σοστακόβιτς τήν ὁποίαν διηύθυνε στό Παρίσι, ὁ κορυφαῖος μαέστρος εἶπε ὅτι εἶχε σκοπό νά τήν παρουσιάση καί στήν Ἀθήνα, φοβήθηκε ὅμως τίς ἀντιδράσεις τίς ὁποίες θά ἔπρεπε νά συναντοῦσε ἀπό ὡρισμένους κύκλους.

Σέ ἐρώτησι ποιοί εἶναι οἱ συνθέτες καί τά ἔργα πού προτιμᾶ ὁ Μητρόπουλος ἀπήντησε ὅτι σαν ἄνθρωπος ἔχει τίς ὑποκειμενικές προτιμήσεις του, σαν μαέστρος ὅμως εἶναι ὑποχρεωμένος νά ἀναζητῆ καί νά παρουσιάζη τό ἀντικειμενικῶς ὡραῖο, ἀνεξαρτήτως τεχνοτροπίας ἤ σχολῆς. Ἐπίσης ὀφείλει νά σέβεται τίς προτιμήσεις τῶν ἀκροατῶν του καί τό γενικό καλλιτεχνικό κλίμα τῆς ἐποχῆς.

— Συγκεκριμένα εἶπε ὅτι τόν ἐνδιαφέρει ἡ μοντέρνα μουσική καί γι' αὐτό καί διευθύνει συχνά ἔργα νεων συνθετῶν τά ὁποῖα δέν ἀναγνωρίζονται εὔκολα καί δέν ἐπιβάλλονται ἀπό ἀκροατήριο.

Η ΧΘΕΣΙΝΗ ΔΕΞΙΩΣΙΣ

Καί λέγοντας τά παραπάνω λόγια ὁ Μητρόπουλος σηκώθηκε ὀρθιος, χαιρέτησε τούς δημοσιογράφους, τούς εὐχαρίστησε γιά τήν συντροφιά τους, ἡ ὁποία ὅπως εἶπε τοῦ ἔδωσε ἐξαιρετική χαρά, καί ἀπῆλθε, ἤ μᾶλλον ἀπήχθη ἀπό τήν ἀκολουθία του καί ὡδηγήθηκε στίς ἀποστράπτουσες αἴθουσες τοῦ ξενοδοχείου ὅπου τόν ἀνέμενε ἡ ἀφροκρεμα τῆς Ἀθηναϊκῆς κοινωνίας.

—Στή δεξίωσι παρεστησαν οἱ ὑπουργοί κ. κ. Ράλλης, Γεροκωστόπουλος, Εὐταξίας καί Στρατος, ὁ ὑπουργός ἄνευ χαρτοφυλακίου κ. Ἐμμ. Τσουδερος, ὁ κ. Κ. Τσαλδάρης, οἱ πρεσβευταί Ἀμερικῆς καί Γαλλίας, ὁ κ. καί ἡ κ. Β. Γουλανδρῆ, ὁ Δημήτρης Γαλάνης, οἱ μαέστροι καί οἱ κορυφαῖοι τῆς Κρατικῆς Ὀρχήστρας, τό συμβούλιον τοῦ Ὠδείου Ἀθηνῶν, οἱ πρωταγωνισταί τοῦ Ἐθνικοῦ θεάτρου Κατίνα Παξινοῦ καί Ἀλέξης Μινωτῆς, ἡ ἀντιπρέσβειρα καί τά μέλη τοῦ Συλλόγου «Φίλοι τῆς Μουσικῆς», οἱ μουσουργοί Καλομοίρης, Βάρβογλης, Παλλάντιος, Σκλάβος κ. ἄ.

—Τόν ἕνα μετά τόν ἄλλο ὁ Μητροπουλος τοῦ χαιρέτησε διά χειραψίας καί ἀντήλλαξε φιλικά λόγια. Ἡ συνάντησίς του μέ τούς παλαιούς συνεργάτες καί φίλους του εἶχε κάτι τό πολύ συγκινητικό. Τούς ἀγκάλιαζε, τούς φιλοῦσε καί μέ σβησμένη ἀπό τήν συγκίνησι φωνή τούς ἔλεγε ὅτι πάντα τούς θυμᾶται καί τούς σκέπτεται μέ νοσταλγία.

ΑΠΟΣΥΡΕΤΑΙ ΣΤΗΝ ΜΑΓΚΟΥΦΑΝΑ

Στίς 8.45 μ.μ. ὀφοῦ συνδιελέχτηκε μέ ὅλους τούς παρισταμένους ὁ Δημήτρης Μητρόπουλος ἀπεσύρθησαν ἀπό τήν δεξίωσι καί συνοδευόμενος ἀπό τήν κ. Κουτσογιάννη κατευθύνθηκε στό σπίτι τῆς Μαγκουφάνας ὅπου διανυκτέρευσε.

—Κατά τήν διάρκεια τῆς δεξιώσεως φωτογραφικά συνεργεία ξένων πρακτορείων καί περιοδικῶν ἐτράβηξαν ἔγχρωμες φωτογραφίες τίς ὁποίες θά ἀποστείλουν στό ἐξωτερικό πρός δημοσίευσιν.

ΑΓΩΝΙΑ ΜΗΠΩΣ ΒΡΕΞΗ

Οἱ μισοί καί περισσότεροι ἀπό τούς φιλομούσους πού κατάφεραν μέ μύρια βάσανα νά ἀποκτήσουν εἰσιτήρια τῶν συναυλιῶν Μητροπούλου, βρίσκονται ἀπό τό πρωΐ σέ φοβερή ἀγωνία:

— Θά διορθωθῆ ἄραγε ὁ καιρός; Θά δοθῆ ἡ συναυλία στό θέατρο τοῦ Ἡρώδου ἤ θά γίνη στόν «Ὀρφέα» ὅπου ἀπό τά 3.300 εἰσιτήρια θά ἰσχύσουν μονάχα τά 1.600; Τό ἴδιο ἀγωνιῶδες ἐρώτημα ἀπασχολεῖ καί τήν ἁρμοδία ὑπηρεσία ὀργανώσεως τοῦ Φεστιβάλ Ἀθηνῶν.

ΚΑΘΕ ΗΜΙΩΡΟΝ ΡΑΔΙΟΦΩΝΙΚΗ ΕΙΔΟΠΟΙΗΣΙΣ ΓΙΑ ΤΟ ΚΟΙΝΟ

Μέχρι τῆς 10ης πρωϊνῆς ἡ ὑπηρεσία ἐτέλει ἐν ἀναμονῇ τῶν ὁριστικῶν προγνωστικῶν τῆς Μετεωρολογικῆς ὑπηρεσίας ἐπί τῇ βάσει τῶν ὁποίων θά ἀποφασίση τό μέρος ὅπου θά δοθῆ ἡ συναυλία.

— Ἡ Μετεωρολογική Ὑπηρεσία, ἐρωτηθεῖσα σχετικά μέ τήν κατάστασι τοῦ καιροῦ ἐδήλωσε ὅτι εἶναι πιθανόν ἀπό 5—8 μ.μ. νά σημειωθῆ μία δεκάλεπτος βροχή. Κατά τίς προβλέψεις τῆς ἐν λόγω ὑπηρεσίας ὁ καιρός μετά τήν 8ην νυκτερινήν θά βελτιωθῆ.

— Πάντως, εἶναι πρόωρο νά λεχθῆ ἀπό τώρα ποῦ θά γίνη ἡ συναυλία. Τό κοινόν θά λάβη ἐγκαίρως γνωσιν τοῦ τόπου τῆς συναυλίας ἀπό τό ραδιόφωνο. Ἡ πρώτη ἐπίσημος ἀνακοίνωσις θά μεταδοθῆ στίς 6 μ.μ. Θά ἐπακολουθήσουν καί ἄλλες ἀνακοινώσεις κάθε ἡμίωρο.

ΘΑ ΠΑΡΑΣΤΟΥΝ ΟΙ ΒΑΣΙΛΕΙΣ

Τήν συναυλία, εἴτε στό θέατρο τοῦ Ἡρώδου δοθῆ εἴτε στόν «Ὀρφέα» θά τιμήσουν διά τῆς παρουσίας των οἱ Βασιλεῖς μετά τοῦ Διαδόχου καί τῶν λοιπῶν μελῶν τῆς Βασιλικῆς οἰκογενείας.

— Ἐπίσης στή συναυλία θά προσέλθουν τά μέλη τοῦ Ὑπουργικοῦ Συμβουλίου, τά Διπλωματικό Σῶμα καί ἄλλοι ἐπίσημοι.

— Ἡ Ἀστυνομία ἔχει ἤδη λάβει μέτρα γιά τήν ὁμαλή κυκλοφορία τῶν ὀχημάτων τόσο στήν περιοχή τοῦ θεάτρου Ἡρώδου τοῦ Ἀττικοῦ ὅσο καί στήν ὁδό Σταδίου ἐάν τελικά ἡ συναυλία, λόγω τοῦ καιροῦ, δοθῆ στόν «Ὀρφέα». Σχετική ἀνακοίνωσις ἐξεδόθη χθές ἀπό τήν Ὑπηρεσία Ὀργανώσεως τοῦ Φεστιβάλ Ἀθηνῶν.

ΟΛΑ ΕΤΟΙΜΑ ΣΤΟ ΘΕΑΤΡΟ ΗΡΩΔΟΥ ΚΑΙ ΣΤΟΝ «ΟΡΦΕΑ»

Σήμερα στίς 11 τό πρωΐ ὁ Δημήτρης Μητρόπουλος, συνοδευόμενος ἀπό τούς τεχνικούς ἐμπειρογνώμονες τῆς Φιλαρμονικῆς, ἐπρόκειτο νά μεταβῆ στό ὑπαίθριο θέατρο Ἡρώδου τοῦ Ἀττικοῦ γιά νά ρυθμίση ἐπί τόπου διάφορα τεχνικῆς φύσεως θέματα, ὅπως τῆς τοποθετήσεως τῶν ἐκτελεστῶν στήν ἑξέδρα τῶν ἀποστάσεων τῶν ἀναλογίων κλπ.

— Παραλλήλως ἡ Ὑπηρεσία Ὀργανώσεως τοῦ Φεστιβάλ σέ συνεργασία μέ τό ἀνώτερο τεχνικό προσωπικό τῆς Φιλαρμονικῆς, διασκευάζει τήν σκηνή τοῦ «Ὀρφέως» ὥστε νά εἶναι ἑτοιμη στήν περίπτωσι πού ἡ συναυλία δοθῆ σέ κλειστό χῶρο.

ΤΟ ΣΗΜΕΡΙΝΟ ΠΡΟΓΡΑΜΜΑ

Τό πρόγραμμα τῆς ἀποψινῆς συναυλίας πού θ' ἀρχίση στίς 8 ἀκριβῶς περιλαμβάνει τό «Πρελούδιο καί Ἀλλέγρο» τῶν Κουπερέν — Μιλώ, τήν Δευτέρα Συμφωνία τοῦ Σοῦμαν καί τήν Πέμπτη Συμφωνία τοῦ Προκόφιεφ.

Οἱ Βασιλεῖς θά τιμήσουν τάς συναυλίας Μητροπούλου

Εἰς τήν Ὑπηρεσίαν Ὀργανώσεως Φεστιβάλ Ἀθηνῶν ἐγνωστοποιήθη ὅτι οἱ Βασιλεῖς καί ἡ Βασιλική Οἰκογένεια θά τιμήσουν διά τῆς παρουσίας των τάς δύο συναυλίας τῆς Φιλαρμονικῆς Ὀρχήστρας τῆς Νέας Ὑόρκης, ὑπό τήν διεύθυνσιν τοῦ Δημήτρη Μητροπούλου, τό Σάββατον καί Κυριακήν 1 καί 2 Ὀκτωβρίου. Τό κοινόν παρακαλεῖται ὅπως κατά τάς ὡς ἄνω δύο ἡμέρας τοῦ Φεστιβάλ Ἀθηνῶν προσέλθη εἰς τό θέατρον καί καταλάβη τάς θέσεις του τό ἀργότερον μεχρι τάς 7.45 μ.μ. Μετά τήν ὥραν ταύτην εἰς οὐδένα θά ἐπιτραπῆ ἡ εἴσοδος.

Ἡ ρύθμισις τῆς κυκλοφορίας

Ἀρμοδίως ἀνεκοινώθη ὅτι ἡ μετάβασις τῶν τροχοφόρων εἰς τό Ὠδειον Ἡρώδου Ἀττικου θά γίνεται μόνον ἐκ τῆς περιοχῆς Μαυρογιάννη διά τῆς ὁδοῦ Διονυσίου Ἀρεοπαγίτου. Τά ταξί μετά τήν ἀποβίβασιν των ἐπιβατῶν θά ἀκολουθοῦν τάς ὁδους Διονυσίου Ἀρεοπαγίτου καί Ἀποστόλου Παύλου πρός Θησεῖον, ὅπου καί ὁ χῶρος σταθμεύσεως των. Μετά τήν λῆξιν τῆς παραστάσεως τά αὐτοκίνητα θά ἀκολουθήσουν ἀντίθετον κατεύθυνσιν.

Ἀνακοίνωσις τῆς Ἀστυνομίας διά τάς συναυλίας Μητροπούλου

Ἐκ τῆς Διευθύνσεως τῆς Ἀστυνομίας ἀνεκοινώθησαν τά ἑξῆς: «Ἐφόσον αἱ καιρικαί συνθῆκαι δέν ἐπιτρέψουν τήν τέλεσιν τῆς συναυλίας εἰς τό Ὠδειον Ἡρώδου Ἀττικου, αὐτη θέλει δοθῆ εἰς τόν κινηματογράφον «Ὀρφεύς» (ὁδός Σταδίου) δι' ὁ ἐν τῇ περιπτώσει ταύτῃ θα ληφθώσι τά ἀκόλουθα μέτρα ρυθμίσεως τῆς κυκλοφορίας: Ἀπό 19ης ὥρας μέχρι 20ης καί ἀπό 22ας ἕως 22.30 ἡ κίνησις τῶν ὀχημάτων τῆς ὁδοῦ Σταδίου θά διοχετευθῆ εἰς τήν ὁδόν Ἑλ. Βενιζέλου. Ἡ προσέλευσις τοῦ κοινοῦ δέον νά ἔχῃ συντελεσθῆ μέχρι τῆς 19.45 ὥρας. Ἡ ἀποβίβασις θά γίνεται ὑφ' ὁλοκλήρου τοῦ οἰκοδομικοῦ τετραγώνου τοῦ κινηματογράφου «Ὀρφέως» ἵνα ἐπιτυγχάνεται αὐτη εἰς τόν μικρότερον δυνατόν χρόνον. Ἡ προσέλευσις τῶν θεατῶν θά γίνεται ἐκ μιᾶς κατευθύνσεως, ἤτοι ἀπό πλατείας Συντάγματος πρός Ὁμόνοιαν. Ἡ κίνησις κενῶν ταξί, φορτηγῶν, μοτοσυκλετῶν καί ζωηλάτων ὀχημάτων ἐν γένει, θά ἀπαγορευθῆ εἰς τάς ὁδούς Βενιζέλου — Ρούσβελτ καί Πλατείας Συντάγματος καί Ὁμονοίας, διά λόγους ἀποσυμφορήσεως αὐτῶν. Ἡ σταθμευσις τῶν ἀνακτορικῶν αὐτοκινήτων θά γίνῃ ἐπί τῆς ὁδοῦ Σταδίου ἀριστερά τῷ ἀνερχομένῳ μέ μέτωπον πρός τήν Πλατείαν Συντάγματος. Ἡ στάθμευσις τῶν ὑπουργικῶν αὐτοκινήτων θά γίνῃ ἐπί τῆς ὁδοῦ Σταδίου δεξιά τῷ ἀνερχομένῳ μέ μέτωπον πρός τήν Πλατείαν Συντάγματος. Ἡ στάθμευσις τῶν αὐτοκινήτων τῶν πολιτικῶν ἀρχῶν θά γίνῃ εἰς τας ὁδούς Σανταρόζα καί Ἀρσάκη, μέ μέτωπον πρός τήν ὁδόν Σταδίου. Ἡ σταθμευσις τῶν αὐτοκινήτων τοῦ Διπλωματικοῦ Σώματος καί ξένων Ἀποστολῶν θά γίνῃ ἐπί τῆς ὁδοῦ Σταδίου ἐν συνεχείᾳ τῶν ἀνακτορικῶν καί ὑπουργικῶν αὐτοκινήτων καθώς καί εἰς τό τμῆμα Χαυτείων τῆς ὁδοῦ Αἰόλου μέ μέτωπον πρός τήν ὁδόν Σταδίου. Ἡ σταθμευσις τῶν ἰδιωτικῶν αὐτοκινήτων μετά τοῦ ἰδίου ὁδηγοῦ θά γίνῃ εἰς τήν ὁδόν Αἰόλου μέ μέτωπον πρός τήν ὁδόν Σταδίου. Ἡ σταθμευσις τῶν ἰδιωτικῶν αὐτοκινήτων ἄνευ ἰδίων ὁδηγῶν θα γίνῃ εἰς τήν Πλατείαν Δημοτικοῦ Θεάτρου (Εὐπολίδος—Κρατίνου). Παρακαλεῖται τό κοινόν ὅπως συμμορφοῦται προθύμως εἰς τάς ὑποδείξεις τῶν ὀργάνων Τροχαίας πρός διευκόλυνσίν του».

Ο ΔΗΜΗΤΡΗΣ ΜΗΤΡΟΠΟΥΛΟΣ ΔΗΛΩΝΕΙ:

Η ΚΑΡΔΙΑ ΜΟΥ ΚΤΥΠΟΥΣΕ ΠΑΝΤΑ ΓΙΑ ΤΗΝ ΕΛΛΑΔΑ...

Ὁ Δημήτρης Μητρόπουλος ἐξέφρασε τήν συγκίνησίν του γιά τόν ἐρχομό του στήν Ἑλλάδα μέ τά παρακάτω ὡραῖα λόγια πού ἔγραψε ἀποκλειστικά γιά τούς ἀναγνῶστες τῶν «Νέων»:

Τά λίγα, τά ἐλάχιστα εἰκοσιτετράωρα πού θά ζήσω στήν Ἑλλάδα εἶναι σάν ἕνα ὄνειρο...

Ἡ καρδιά μου χτυποῦσε πάντα γιά τήν Ἑλλάδα καί πάντα ζοῦσα κοντά σας ἰδίως στίς σκοτεινές καί δύσκολες ἡμέρες τοῦ πολέμου. Μόλις ἄρχισε ἡ περιοδεία τῆς ὀρχήστρας τό ὄνειρό μου ἦταν πότε θά ἀντικρύσω τόν ἑλληνικόν οὐρανόν καί πότε θά συναντήσω τίς φιλικές καί ἀγαπητές μορφές καί εἶναι τόσες πολλές σ' αὐτόν τόν τόπον. Θά ἤθελα τό ὄνειρο πού ζῶ ἀπό χθές νά μήν τελειώση ποτέ.

Δώω τά Νέα

ΕΝΑΣ ΜΕΓΑΛΟΣ ΑΡΧΙΜΟΥΣΙΚΟΣ

Ο ΔΗΜΗΤΡΗΣ ΜΗΤΡΟΠΟΥΛΟΣ ΟΜΙΛΕΙ ΓΙΑ ΤΗΝ ΜΟΥΣΙΚΗΝ ΚΑΙ ΤΟ ΚΟΙΝΟΝ

Μία θριαμβευτικὴ περιοδεία εἰς τὴν Εὐρώπην

Η ΣΥΓΚΙΝΗΣΙΣ ΤΟΥ ΔΙΑ ΤΗΝ ΑΦΙΞΙΝ ΤΟΥ ΕΙΣ ΕΛΛΑΔΑ

Ἐπὶ τέλους, ὁ Δημήτρης Μητρόπουλος βρίσκεται καὶ πάλι κοντά μας. Ἔπειτα ἀπὸ 17 ὁλόκληρα χρόνια ἀπουσίας, ὁ μεγάλος Ἕλλην μαέστρος πάτησε τὸ πόδι του στὴν ἑλληνικὴ γῆ. Χθὲς τὸ ἀπόγευμα στὸ ἀεροδρόμιο τοῦ Ἑλληνικοῦ, στὶς 6'20 μ.μ. ἀκριβῶς, καὶ γιὰ λίγα λεπτά, μὲ τὴν συγκίνηση ζωγραφισμένη στὸ πρόσωπό του, στάθηκε στὴν κορυφὴ τῆς σκάλας τοῦ ἀεροπλάνου κυττάζοντας ἔκθαμβος αὐτὸ τὸ πλῆθος ποὺ παραληροῦσε ἀπὸ ἐνθουσιασμὸ καὶ προσπαθοῦσε νὰ διασπάσῃ τὴ ζώνη τῶν ἀστυφυλάκων γιὰ νὰ βρεθῇ κοντὰ στὸ μεγάλο καλλιτέχνη. Ἔπειτα ἀπὸ ὑπεράνθρωπες προσπάθειες καὶ μέσα σ' ἕνα πανδαιμόνιο ζητωκραυγῶν καὶ ἐπευφημιῶν, κατωρθώθηκε νὰ σχηματισθῇ ἕνας διάδρομος γιὰ νὰ ἐπιβιβασθῇ ὁ Μητρόπουλος στὸ αὐτοκίνητό του. Λίγο ἐνωρίτερα, μ' ἕνα ἄλλο ἀεροπλάνο, εἶχαν ἀφιχθῇ τὰ περισσότερα ἀπὸ τὰ μέλη τῆς Φιλαρμονικῆς Ὀρχήστρας τῆς Νέας Ὑόρκης, ποὺ ἀπόψε στὶς 3 μ.μ. δίδει, παρουσίᾳ τῶν Βασιλέων, μελῶν τῆς Κυβερνήσεως καὶ τοῦ Διπλωματικοῦ Σώματος, τὴν πρώτη της συναυλία στὸ θέατρο Ἡρώδου τοῦ Ἀττικοῦ, ὑπὸ τὴν διεύθυνση τοῦ Μητροπούλου, καὶ ἐὰν φυσικὰ ὁ καιρὸς εἶναι καλός. Ἂν ὅμως ὁ ἀττικὸς οὐρανὸς δὲν φανῇ εὐνοϊκός, τότε ἡ συναυλία θὰ δοθῇ στὴν κλειστὴ αἴθουσα τοῦ «Ὀρφέως».

Ὁ διάσημος Ἕλλην ἀρχιμουσικὸς Δημήτρης Μητρόπουλος, κατὰ τὴν χθεσινὴν ἄφιξίν του εἰς τὸ ἀεροδρόμιον τοῦ Ἑλληνικοῦ, χαιρετᾷ τὸ ἀναμένον πλῆθος τῶν φίλων καὶ θαυμαστῶν του.

Τρία τέταρτα μετὰ τὴν ἄφιξί του ὁ Δημήτρης Μητρόπουλος δέχθηκε, σὲ μιὰ μικρὴ αἴθουσα τοῦ ξενοδοχείου τῆς «Μεγάλης Βρεττανίας», σὲ συνέντευξι τοὺς ἀντιπροσώπους τοῦ Τύπου. Νεώτατος ὅσο ποτὲ ἄλλοτε, παρὰ τὰ 59 χρόνια του καὶ τὴν κόπωσι τοῦ ταξιδιοῦ, ὁ διάσημος μαέστρος, μὲ τὸ χαμόγελο στὰ χείλη, μίλησε ἐπὶ μισὴ σχεδὸν ὥρα μὲ πολὺ χιοῦμορ. Καὶ ἦταν τόσο ἐνδιαφέροντα αὐτὰ ποὺ εἶπε καὶ ποὺ μεταφέρωμε παρακάτω, ὥστε κανεὶς δὲν κατάλαβε πῶς πέρασαν τὰ τριάντα αὐτὰ λεπτά.

Ὁ μεγάλος Ἕλληνας καλλιτέχνης τελείωσε ἐκφράζοντας καὶ πάλι τὸν ἐνθουσιασμό του γιατὶ βρίσκεται στὴν Ἑλλάδα. Ἀμέσως μετὰ τὴν συνέντευξι ἐπέρασε στὶς μεγάλες αἴθουσες τῆς «Μεγάλης Βρεττανίας», ὅπου ὁ ὑπουργὸς τῆς Παιδείας κ. Α. Γεροκωστόπουλος ἔδιδε δεξίωσιν πρὸς τιμήν του. Ἦταν ἐκεῖ οἱ ὑπουργοὶ κ.κ. Εὐταξίας, Στράτος, Ράλλης, ὁ Ἀμερικανὸς πρεσβευτὴς κ. Κάννον, πολιτευταὶ καὶ ὁλόκληρος ὁ πνευματικὸς καὶ καλλιτεχνικὸς κόσμος τῆς χώρας. Ὁ Μητρόπουλος ἐχαιρέτησε μὲ συγκίνησι τοὺς παληοὺς φίλους καὶ συνεργάτες του, ἀγκάλιασε τὸν κ. Φιλοκτήτη Οἰκονομίδη, ἔσφιξε τὸ χέρι γνωστῶν καὶ ἀγνώστων θαυμαστῶν του, φλυάρησε μὲ ὅλους, φωτογραφήθηκε, καὶ κατὰ τὶς 8.30 μ.μ., κατάκοπος πιὰ ἀλλὰ μὲ τὴν εὐτυχία ζωγραφισμένη στὸ πρόσωπό του, ἀποσύρθηκε γιὰ νὰ ἀναπαυθῇ. Οἱ Ἀθηναῖοι φιλόμουσοι θὰ ἔχουν τὴν εὐκαιρία νὰ ἐκφράσουν ἀπόψε ὅλον τὸν ἐνθουσιασμό τους πρὸς τὸν μεγάλο συμπατριώτη μας, κατὰ τὴν πρώτη συναυλία τῆς Φιλαρμονικῆς τῆς Νέας Ὑόρκης.

ΟΙ ΜΕΓΑΣ ΕΛΛΗΝ ΔΙΕΥΘΥΝΤΗΣ ΟΡΧΗΣΤΡΑΣ ΕΙΣ ΤΑΣ ΑΘΗΝΑΣ

ΠΛΗΘΟΣ ΘΑΥΜΑΣΤΩΝ ΥΠΕΔΕΧΘΗ ΧΘΕΣ ΤΟΝ κ. Δ. ΜΗΤΡΟΠΟΥΛΟΝ ΕΙΣ ΤΟ ΑΕΡΟΔΡΟΜΙΟΝ

ΑΙ ΚΑΤΗΓΟΡΙΑΙ ΓΟΥ ΕΝΑΝΤΙΟΝ ΤΗΣ ΡΩΣΙΚΗΣ ΜΟΥΣΙΚΗΣ

ΕΙΝΑΙ ΓΡΑΜΜΕΝΗ ΜΟΝΟΝ "ΓΙΑ ΤΙΣ ΜΑΖΕΣ"

Ἀπὸ χθὲς τὸ ἀπόγευμα εἰς τὰς 6.15' μ. μ. ὁ Δημήτρης Μητρόπουλος, ὁ διεθνοῦς φήμης διευθυντὴς ὀρχήστρας ἐρίσκεται καὶ πάλιν εἰς τὴν Ἑλλάδα, κατόπιν ἀπουσίας 17 ἐτῶν. Εἰς τὸ ἀεροδρόμιον τοῦ Ἑλληνικοῦ ἀπὸ τῆς 3ης μ. μ. τὸν ἀνέμεναν διὰ νὰ τὸν ὑποδεχθοῦν 200 περίπου πρόσωπα. Δυστυχῶς ὅμως λόγῳ τῆς κακοκαιρίας ποὺ ἐπεκράτει καθ' ἅπασαν τὴν Ἰταλίαν, τὸ ἓν ἐκ τῶν δύο ἀεροπλάνων ποὺ μετέφερε τοὺς μουσικοὺς τῆς Φιλαρμονικῆς Ὀρχήστρας τῆς Ν. Ὑόρκης, ἠναγκάσθη νὰ ἀπογειωθῇ ἀπὸ τὴν Νεάπολιν μὲ ἀρκετὴν καθυστέρησιν. Ἔτσι, ἀντὶ τῆς 3.55' μ. μ. τὸ ἀεροπλάνον ποὺ μετέφερε τὸν Ἕλληνα καλλιτέχνην ἀφίχθη εἰς τὰς 6.15' μ. μ.

Ὁ κ. ΔΗΜ. ΜΗΤΡΟΠΟΥΛΟΣ κατερχόμενος τοῦ ἀεροπλάνου χθὲς εἰς τὸ ἀεροδρόμιον τοῦ Ἑλληνικοῦ.

Θὰ ἦτο δύσκολον νὰ περιγραφῇ ἡ συγκίνησις ὅλων αὐτῶν τῶν ἀνθρώπων, ποὺ ἐπερίμεναν τὸν Μητρόπουλον, πολλοὶ ἐκ τῶν ὁποίων ἐκράτουν ἁρτυπόμους ἀνθοδέσμας διὰ νὰ τοῦ τὰς προσφέρουν. Μεταξὺ αὐτῶν ἦσαν οἱ ἐδῶ συγγενεῖς του, οἱ δύο ἐκ τῶν διευθυντῶν τῆς Κρατικῆς Ὀρχήστρας κ. κ. Φιλ. Οἰκονομίδης καὶ Θ. Βαβαγιάννης, οἱ καθηγηταὶ τοῦ Ὠδείου Ἀθηνῶν κ.κ. Κ. Κυδωνιάτης, Σπ. Φαραντάτος καὶ Μεν. Παλλάντιος, τὰ ὑπερεκατὸν μέλη τῆς Κρατικῆς Ὀρχήστρας, ἐκ μέρους τῆς Ἀμερικανικῆς πρεσβείας ἡ μορφωτικὴ ἀκόλουθος δρ Σάντος, ὁ κ. Ὅλσον καὶ ὁ ἐπὶ τοῦ Τύπου κ. Τζαίηκελ καὶ τέλος πλῆθος δημοσιογράφων καὶ φωτορεπόρτερς. Εἰς τὰς 3.30' ἀνηγγέλθη ὅτι τὸ ἀεροπλάνον μὲ τὸν κορυφαῖον καλλιτέχνην θὰ ἔφθανε τὸ ἐνωρίτερον εἰς τὰς 6, ἐνδεχομένως δὲ καὶ εἰς τὰς 7 ἢ εἰς τὰς 8 καὶ ἔτσι τὸ πρόγραμμα ποὺ εἶχε καταρτισθῇ διὰ τὴν ὑποδοχὴν ἠχρηστεύθη.

Εἰς τὰς 6.10' ἐφάνη ἕνα τετρακινητήριον σκάφος, τὸ ὁποῖον ἴπτατο εἰς μέγα ὕψος. Μᾶς ἐπληροφόρησαν ὅτι ἦτο τὸ ἀεροπλάνον ἀπὸ τὴν Νεάπολιν. Μετὰ 3 ἢ 4 λεπτά, τὸ πελώριον ἀργυρόχρουν μεταλλικὸν πτηνὸν ἐκυλοῦσεν ἐπάνω εἰς τὸν διάδρομον καὶ τέλος ἐσταμάτησεν εἰς ἀπόστασιν δεκάδος μέτρων, ἀπὸ τοῦ σημείου ὅπου ἕνα κατασυγκεκινημένον πλῆθος προσεπάθει νὰ θραύσῃ τὸν κλοιὸν τῶν ἀστυνομικῶν καὶ νὰ ὁρμήσῃ πρὸς τὸ ἀεροπλάνον, τοῦ ὁποίου οἱ ἕλικες δὲν εἶχον σταματήσει ἀκόμη. Ἡ προσπάθεια ὅμως τῶν ὀργάνων τῆς τάξεως ἀπεδείχθη ματαία. Τελικῶς ὁ κλοιὸς ἐθραύσθη καὶ πεντήκοντα περίπου ἄτομα ἐπολιόρκησαν τὴν κλίμακα καθόδου τῶν ἐπιβατῶν. Τέλος ἡ θύρα τοῦ ἀεροπλάνου ἠνοίχθη καὶ πρῶτος ἐπρόβαλεν ὁ κ. Μητρόπουλος. Ἐφαίνετο κατάκοπος ἀπὸ τὸ ταξίδι. Ἐκίνησε δύο ἢ τρεῖς φορὰς τὴν χεῖρα του, χαιρετῶν τὸ πλῆθος, ἀλλ' ἀμέσως ἐπολιορκήθη ἀπὸ τοὺς φωτορεπόρτερς καὶ τοὺς θαυμαστάς του, οἱ ὁποῖοι ὀλίγον ἔλειψε νὰ τὸν...λυντσάρουν! Μόλις ἐπρόλαβε νὰ εἴπῃ δύο ἢ τρεῖς φράσεις εἰς τὸ μικρόφωνον τοῦ ραδιοφωνικοῦ σταθμοῦ. Ἐν τῷ μεταξὺ ὅμως οἱ ἀστυνομικοί, οἱ ὁποῖοι πρὸς στιγμὴν εἶχον χάσει τὴν ψυχραιμίαν των, τὸν περιεκύκλωσαν καὶ τὸν συνώδευσαν μέχρι τοῦ αὐτοκινήτου ποὺ τὸν ἀνέμενε, τὸ ὁποῖον ἐξεκίνησεν ὁλοταχῶς διὰ τὰς Ἀθήνας.

Προηγουμένως ὁ διευθυντὴς τοῦ ἐξωτερικοῦ Τύπου κ. Καβουνίδης εἶχε κάμει λόγον περὶ συναντήσεως τοῦ μεγάλου μας μαέστρου μὲ τοὺς ἐκπροσώπους τοῦ Τύπου εἰς τὸ ξενοδοχεῖον τῆς Μεγ. Βρεταννίας, ὀλίγον πρὸ τῆς δεξιώσεως ἡ ὁποία θὰ ἐδίδετο ἐκεῖ πρὸς τιμήν του. Ἡ ὥρα ἦτο 7 παρὰ 20 καὶ ἡ δεξίωσις εἶχεν ὁρισθῇ διὰ τὰς 7 ἢ 7.15'. Ἤδη εἶχε γίνει λόγος περὶ ματαιώσεως τῆς συναντήσεως. Ἀλλ' εἰς τὴν «Μεγ. Βρεταννίαν», θὰ ἔπρεπεν ἤδη νὰ τὸν ἀναμένουν πολλοὶ δημοσιογράφοι, οἱ ὁποῖοι δὲν εἶχον ἔλθει εἰς τὸ ἀεροδρόμιον καὶ ἴσως-ἴσως δὲν ἐγνώριζον τὰ τῆς καθυστερήσεως τοῦ ἀεροπλάνου. Δισταγμὸς δὲν ἐπετρέπετο πλέον.

Εἰσήλθομεν μετὰ 15 λεπτὰ εἰς τὴν αἴθουσαν τῆς συνεντεύξεως. Καὶ μετ' ὀλίγα δευτερόλεπτα εἰσῆλθε καὶ ὁ μεγάλος μαέστρος. Ἐκάθησεν ἐμπρὸς εἰς ἕνα γραφεῖον ἐπὶ τοῦ ὁποίου εἶχον τοποθετηθῇ δύο μικρόφωνα καὶ ἤρχισε νὰ ὁμιλῇ κουρασμένος, ἀλλὰ πάντοτε χαμογελαστός. Εἰς μίαν στιγμὴν παρετήρησα ὅτι τὰ λεπτὰ ὀστεώδη χέρια του, χέρια ἑνὸς μάγου τῶν ἤχων, ἔτρεμαν ἐλαφρῶς.

Ὁ κ. Μητρόπουλος εἶπεν εἰς τὴν ἀρχὴν ὅτι ἦτο τρομερὰ συγκεκινημένος διὰ τὴν ἐπιστροφήν του εἰς τὴν πατρίδα καὶ ἐζήτησε συγγνώμην ἀπὸ τοὺς δημοσιογράφους ἐπειδή, λόγῳ τοῦ κακοῦ ταξιδίου τὸ ὁποῖον ἔκαμεν, ἦτο ἀδιάθετος καὶ ὡς ἐκ τούτου ἡ συνέντευξις θὰ ἦτο σύντομος. Εἶπεν ὅτι χάρις καὶ μόνον εἰς τὴν χειρονομίαν τοῦ κ. Β. Γουλανδρῆ (διαθέσαντος δωρεὰν τὰς θέσεις εἰς τὸ ὑπερωκεάνειον «Ὀλυμπία»), κατέστη δυνατὸν τὸ ταξίδιον τῆς Φιλαρμονικῆς Ὀρχήστρας τῆς Ν. Ὑόρκης, δεδομένου ὅτι ἡ ζωὴ εἰς τὴν Ἀμερικὴν εἶναι τρομερὰ ἀκριβὴ καὶ ὅτι ἐκ τοῦ 1.000.000 δολλαρίων τῶν ἐτησίων δαπανῶν τοῦ συγκροτήματος αὐτοῦ, αἱ 250.000 εἶναι παθητικόν, τοῦ ὁποίου ἡ κάλυψις ἀποτελεῖ μίαν μόνιμον ἀγωνίαν.

Ἐν συνεχείᾳ ἀπήντησεν εἰς μίαν κατηγορίαν, τὴν ὁποίαν πολλοὶ τοῦ προσάπτουν, ὅτι δηλαδὴ περιλαμβάνει εἰς τὰ προγράμματά του σοβιετικὴν μουσικήν. Ἐὰν κάμνῃ κάτι τέτοιο, εἶπε, τὸ κάμνει ἐπειδὴ ἡ σοβιετικὴ μουσικὴ γράφεται εἰδικῶς διὰ τὶς μάζες καὶ ὡς ἐκ τούτου εἶναι εὔληπτος.

Εἰδικῶς μάλιστα διὰ τὸν Σοστακόβιτς, τοῦ ὁποίου, ὅπως εἶναι γνωστόν, διηύθυνε τελευταίως μὲ μοναδικὴν ἐπιτυχίαν τὴν Δεκάτην Συμφωνίαν, εἶπεν ὅτι «προσωπικῶς ἡ μουσικὴ τοῦ κυρίου αὐτοῦ δὲν τοῦ ἀρέσει διόλου» καὶ ὅτι εἶναι ἕνα «τρομερὸ πρᾶγμα» νὰ γράφῃ κανεὶς γιὰ τὶς μάζες. Λόγου γενομένου διὰ τὸν Σκαλκώταν, ἀπήντησεν ὅτι εἶναι ὁ μόνος Ἕλλην συνθέτης, τὸν ὁποῖον ἤμπόρεσε νὰ παίξῃ εἰς τὴν Ἀμερικήν, χωρὶς οἱ φιλοκατήγοροι Ἀμερικανοὶ κριτικοὶ νὰ τοῦ εἰποῦν ὅτι «εὐλογεῖ τὰ γένεια του» κατὰ τὸ κοινῶς λεγόμενον. Ἐν κατακλείδι εἶπεν ὅτι οἱ Ἀμερικανοὶ μουσικοκριτικοὶ εἶναι τόσον τοπικισταί, ὥστε ὅταν μία πόλις καλῇ τὴν ὀρχήστραν μιᾶς ἄλλης διὰ νὰ δώσῃ συναυλίας, τὸ κάμνει μόνον καὶ μόνον διὰ νὰ λέγῃ ἐκ τῶν ὑστέρων πόσον καλὴ εἶναι ἡ ἰδική της!

Ἀλλ' ἡ ὥρα πλέον ἔχει περάσει. Ὁ κ. Μητρόπουλος κατευθύνεται εἰς τὴν διπλανὴν αἴθουσαν, ὅπου δίδεται ἡ δεξίωσις πρὸς τιμήν του. Καὶ μόλις πρὸ ὀλίγου μᾶς ἐξωμολογήθη ὅτι αἱ δεξιώσεις εἶναι δι' αὐτὸν μαρτύριον...

Mitropoulos l'Athénien de retour dans son pays natal

Le célèbre chef-d'orchestre Dimitri Mitropoulos se trouve depuis hier dans sa ville natale. Pour marquer cet événement, le ministre de l'Instruction publique M. Gérocostopoulos a donné une réception en l'honneur de l'artiste, à l'hôtel Grande-Bretagne. Le monde des lettres et des arts, ainsi que l'élite de la société athénienne avait tenu de rendre hommage par sa présence au célèbre musicien qui depuis 17 ans n'était pas revenu en Grèce.

Il nous semble superflu de donner une notice biographique de Mitropoulos, dont tous les Grecs ont suivi avec un sentiment de fierté la magnifique carrière.

Sa première apparition aux Etats-Unis d'Amérique, date de 1936, époque à laquelle il dirigea la Boston Symphonie Orchestra. De 1940 à 1949, le centre de son activité artistique fut dans les Etats de l'Ouest, notamment Minnéapolis. Sa popularité s'est répandue très vite d'un bout à l'autre des Etats-Unis. C'est dans la période artistique 1940-41 qu'il dirigea pour la première fois l'orchestre philharmonique de New-York. Grâce à lui le public américain fut initié à l'"Electra" de Strauss, l'"Heure Espagnole" de Ravel,"Vozzek" d'Alan Berg, "Christoph Colomb" de D. Milhand, etc.

Le public athénien réserve à son grand concitoyen une réception triomphale.

Le célèbre chef d'orchestre, Dimitri Mitropoulos, en train d'étudier une partition qu'il fera tout à l'heure répéter à la Splendide phalange de musiciens qu'il dirige

L'Orchestre Philharmonique de New-York

La tournée artistique de l'orchestre philharmonique de New-York, est effectuée sous l'égide du Département américain des affaires étrangères dans le cadre du programme des échanges culturels du théâtre National et de l'Académie (A.N.T.A.), organisation dont les statuts ont été approuvés par le Congrès Américain.

L'orchestre philharmonique de New-York, a commencé sa tournée en Europe par une série de concerts, du 5 au 10 septembre dernière semaine du Festival d'Edimbourg.

Les six concerts ont été dirigés par Dimitri Mitropoulos, Guido Cantelli et Georges Zell. Au cours de sa première tournée en 1930, sous la direction de Toscanini, 23 concerts ont été donnés dans 13 villes, dont deux à Vienne, le 12 et 13 septembre.

Cette année, après Edimbourg l'orchestre philharmonique a donné des concerts à Bruxelles, dans la zone occidentale de Berlin, à Paris, Genève, Berne, Zurich, Milan, Rome et Naples, emportant partout le plus vif succès.

L'apparition de l'orchestre philharmonique en Grèce est une sorte de "retour", du fait que Dimitri Mitropoulos n'est pas revenu en Grèce depuis la guerre, soit 17 ans.

Les deux concerts qui seront donnés au théâtre Hérode Attique sous la direction de Mitropoulo, n'ont pu être réalisés que grâce à l'apport généreux de M. B. Goulandris. Cet armateur gréco-américain, dont l'activité bienfaitrice n'est ignorée de personne, a non seulement pourvu aux dépenses du voyage de l'orchestre mais aussi à celles de l'organisation de deux concerts, de sorte que les recettes pourront être disposées pour la construction d'une salle de concerts à Athènes. Il faudra souligner à ce propos, que Dimitri Mitropoulos, qui est né à Athènes,contribuera à la réalisation de ce projet en dirigeant à titre gratuit le plus ancien orchestre d'Amérique fondé en 1842, et qui peut être considéré comme un des meilleurs et des plus anciens du monde.

La tournée artistique de l'orchestre, sera clôturée par deux concerts donnés à Londres le 4 et 5 octobre, complétant ainsi la série de 26 concerts, avant de retourner à New-York pour reprendre le 20 octobre son activité artistique au Carnegy-Hall de cette ville.

ΥΣΤΕΡΑ ΑΠΟ ΕΙΚΟΣΑΕΤΗ ΑΠΟΥΣΙΑΝ ΑΠΟ ΤΗΝ ΠΑΤΡΙΔΑ

Ο ΔΙΑΣΗΜΟΣ ΜΑΕΣΤΡΟΣ Δ. ΜΗΤΡΟΠΟΥΛΟΣ ΕΦΘΑΣΕ ΧΘΕΣ ΕΙΣ ΑΘΗΝΑΣ

Η ΣΥΓΚΙΝΗΣΙΣ ΤΟΥ ΔΙΟΤΙ ΕΥΡΙΣΚΕΤΑΙ ΕΚ ΝΕΟΥ ΕΙΣ ΤΗΝ ΠΑΤΡΙΔΑ.— ΔΙΑΤΙ ΠΡΟΤΙΜΑ ΤΗΝ ΣΥΓΧΡΟΝΟΝ ΜΟΥΣΙΚΗΝ

«ΞΑΝΑΒΡΙΣΚΩ ΤΑ ΝΙΑΤΑ ΜΟΥ ΚΑΙ ΤΗΝ ΕΛΛΑΔΑ»

Τὸ ἀεροπλάνο τῆς γραμμῆς ποὺ προσγειώθηκε χθὲς τὸ ἀπογευμα στὶς 4 μ.μ. στὸ Ἑλληνικὸ ἔφερνε στὴν Ἑλλάδα μιὰ δόξα καὶ μιὰ συγκίνηση. Μιὰ δόξα τῆς συμφωνικῆς καὶ μιὰ συγκίνηση γιὰ ἕναν μεγάλο καλλιτέχνη καὶ γι' ἀμέτρητους ἐραστὲς τῆς Μουσικῆς.

Ὕστερ' ἀπὸ 18 χρόνια ἀπουσία στὰ ἐξωτερικὰ ὁ Δημήτρης Μητρόπουλος ξαναπατοῦσε τὰ ἑλληνικὰ χώματα. Βασανισμένος ἀπὸ ἕνα ἄβολο ταξίδι, κουρασμένος ἀπὸ πολύμηνη συνεχῆ δουλειὰ μόλις ποὺ μποροῦσε νὰ χαμογελάσῃ στὸ πλῆθος τῶν φίλων καὶ τῶν θαυμαστῶν ποὺ εἶχαν μαζευτῇ στὸ ἀεροδρόμιο. Τρύπωσε μέσα σ' ἕνα αὐτοκίνητο, κάτω ἀπὸ τὶς ἐνθουσιώδεις ἐπευφημίες τῶν φιλ[illegible]ουσων καὶ ἦρθε ὁλοταχῶς στὴν Ἀθήνα γιὰ νὰ συνέλθῃ—ἀπὸ τὴν κούραση καὶ τὴν Ἐπιστροφή...

Λίγο ἀργότερα δέχθηκε τοὺς ἀντιπροσώπους τοῦ τύπου. Ἐξήγησε ἀμέσως τὴν αἰτία τῆς διαστικῆς φυγῆς του κι' ἔπειτα μίλησε 20 ὁλόκληρα λεπτὰ συνέχεια μὲ εὐγένεια καὶ μὲ ἑλληνικότητα ποὺ θὰ δυσαρεστοῦσε πολὺ ὅσους, ἄλλοτε, τὸν κατηγόρησαν ὅτι ἀπαρνήθηκε τὴν πατρίδα του.

Γι' αὐτὴν ἀκριβῶς φύλαξε τὰ πιὸ θερμὰ λόγια του καὶ τόνισε τὴ λύπη του ποὺ δὲν μπορεῖ νὰ παρατείνῃ τὴν ἐδῶ διαμονή του ἐξ αἰτίας τῶν «ἀναλημμένων ὑποχρεώσεών» του.

Ὅλον αὐτὸ τὸν καιρό, εἶπε, διηύθυνε σχεδὸν κάθε μέρα σὲ πλῆθος χώρες ποὺ ὅλες ὑποδέχθηκαν μὲ σπάνια θερμότητα αὐτὸν καὶ τὴν ὀρχήστρα του.

Ἰδιαίτερα τὸν συγκίνησε ἡ ὑποδοχὴ ποὺ τοῦ ἔγινε στὴ Γερμανία ὅπου, ἀντὶ γιὰ τελωνειακὲς διατυπώσεις, οἱ ὑπάλληλοι εἶχαν παραταχθῇ μὲ λουλούδια καὶ μπουκάλες σαμπάνια γιὰ νὰ τὸν καλωσορίσουν.

Ἐξήγησε ὕστερα, ὅτι ἡ Φιλαρμονικὴ τῆς Ν. Ὑόρκης εἶναι ἐξαιρετικὰ πολυδάπανη (στοιχίζει 500 δολ. τὸ ἄτομο τὸ μῆνα) καὶ ἀντεπεξέρχεται μόνο χάρη στὴν ἀγάπη τοῦ κοινοῦ καὶ τὶς ἐνισχύσεις διαφόρων Μαικηνῶν.

Μίλησε, ἔπειτα, γιὰ τὴν ἄφθονη ρωσικὴ μουσικὴ ποὺ περικλείνει στὰ προγράμματά του καὶ ποὺ ἔγινε ἀφορμὴ νὰ «παρεξηγηθῇ». Ἐξήγησε ὅτι αἰτία τῆς προτιμήσεώς του εἶναι ἡ προτίμηση ποὺ δείχνει τὸ κοινὸ σ' αὐτὴ τὴ μουσική. Ὁ ἴδιος προσωπικὰ δὲν ἀγαπάει ἰδιαίτερα τὴ σοβιετικὴ μουσικὴ γιατὶ εἶναι πιὸ «προχωρημένη» ἀπὸ τοὺς Ρώσους.

Καθὼς εἶναι διγασμένος—ὅπως εἶπε—σὲ πνευματικὸ καὶ αἰσθηματικὸ ἄνθρωπο ἀναγκάζεται πολὺ συχνὰ νὰ παίζῃ ἔργα ποὺ δὲν τὸν ἐνθουσιάζουν γιατὶ (αἰσθηματικὰ) θέλει νὰ ἱκανοποιήσῃ τὶς προτιμήσεις τῶν ἀκροατῶν, νὰ μὴν ξεφεύ

Ὁ πρῶτος χαιρετισμὸς τοῦ Μητροπούλου στὴν Ἑλλάδα ποὺ τὴν ἐπισκέπτεται ὕστερα ἀπὸ 17 χρόνια!... Ὁ μεγάλος Ἕλλην ἀρχιμουσικὸς κατεβαίνει ἀπὸ τὸ ἀεροπλάνο συγκινημένος πού ἐπιστρέφει ἔπειτα ἀπὸ ἀπουσία τόσων ἐτῶν στὴν πατρίδα γῆ. (Συνέντευξίν μὲ τὸν Δημ. Ο ΔΗΜΗΤΡΗΣ ΜΗΤΡΟΠΟΥΛΟΣ ΟΜΙΛΕΙ ΔΙΑ ΤΗΝ ΜΟΥΣΙΚΗΝ

Δέν συμπαθεῖ τοὺς μοντέρνους Ρώσους συνθέτας καὶ θεωρεῖ ὅτι ὁ Μπετόβεν ἔχει πλέον... «βρωμίσει»

ΟΙ ΠΛΟΥΣΙΟΙ, ΛΕΓΕΙ, ΠΗΓΑΙΝΟΥΝ ΣΤΙΣ ΣΥΝΑΥΛΙΕΣ ΓΙΑ ΤΟ «ΘΕΑΘΗΝΑΙ»

Προερχόμενος ἀπὸ τὴν Ἰταλίαν ἀφίχθη χθὲς ἀεροπορικῶς εἰς Ἀθήνας, περὶ τὴν 6.15' ἀπογευματινήν, ὁ μεγάλος Ἕλλην ἀρχιμουσικὸς Δημήτρης Μητρόπουλος. Εἰς τὸ ἀεροδρόμιον τοῦ Ἑλληνικοῦ τὸν ἀνέμενον πλήθη μουσικοφίλων, οἱ ὁποῖοι προέβησαν εἰς ἐνθουσιώδεις ἐκδηλώσεις εὐθὺς ὡς ὁ Μητρόπουλος, μετὰ ἀπουσίαν δεκαοκτὼ ἐτῶν, ἐπάτησε καὶ πάλιν τὴν ἑλληνικὴν γῆν.

Μετὰ ταῦτα, συνοδευόμενος ἀπὸ ἀντιπροσώπους τῆς Κυβερνήσεως, τοῦ καλλιτεχνικοῦ καὶ δημοσιογραφικοῦ κόσμου, ἀνῆλθεν εἰς Ἀθήνας, ὅπου τὸν ἀνέμενε ἡ ἐκτέλεσις τοῦ ἐπισήμου προγράμματος ὑποδοχῆς του, τὸ ὁποῖον ἤρχισε μὲ μίαν πρὲς — κόνφερανς.

Ἀνήσυχος, νευρώδης, καταβεβλημένος ἀπὸ τὸ ταξίδι καὶ ὡστόσο πολὺ ὁμιλητικός, εἰσῆλθεν ὁ Δημήτρης Μητρόπουλος περὶ τὴν 7.15' εἰς τὴν αἴθουσαν τοῦ ξενοδοχείου τῆς «Μεγάλης Βρετανίας», διὰ νὰ ὑποστῇ τὸ ἐρωτηματολόγιον τῶν δημοσιογράφων.

Τὸν συνώδευσε ὁ Διευθυντὴς Ἐξωτερικοῦ Τύπου κ. Καβουνίδης, ὁ ὁποῖος, ὡς γνωστόν, προΐσταται καὶ τῆς Ὑπηρεσίας Ὀργανώσεως τοῦ Φεστιβὰλ Ἀθηνῶν.

Ὁ μεγάλος Ἕλλην ἀρχιμουσικὸς παρέπονέθη κατ' ἀρχὴν νὰ τὸ ταξίδι, ποὺ ἦταν, καθὼς εἶπε, πολὺ κουραστικό. Αὐτὸ ὅμως δὲν τὸν ἐμπόδισε νὰ ἀρχίσῃ νὰ δίδῃ, ἀντὶ τῆς «πρὲς - κόνφερανς», μίαν ἐξαιρετικὰ ἐνδιαφέρουσαν διάλεξιν, εἰς τὴν ὁποίαν ἀνεφέροντο αἱ ἀπαντήσεις ὅλων τῶν πιθανῶν ἐρωτήσεων. Ὁ Μητρόπουλος ἦταν καθ' ὅλο τὸ διάστημα τῶν 20' λεπτῶν, ποὺ ὡμίλοῦσεκ ἕνας θαυμάσιος «κωζὲρ», τοῦ ὁποίου ὁ λόγος εὐλύγιστος, σπινθηροβόλος, πολλὲς φορὲς εἰρωνικὸς καὶ σαρκαστικός, ἦταν πλήρης ὑπονοουμένων.

ΕΦΘΑΣΕ ΧΘΕΣ Ο ΔΗΜΗΤΡΗΣ ΜΗΤΡΟΠΟΥΛΟΣ

ΜΙΑ ΣΥΝΕΝΤΕΥΞΗ ΜΕ ΤΟΝ ΔΙΑΣΗΜΟ ΜΑΕΣΤΡΟ

Τὸ ἀμερικανικὸ κράτος καὶ ἡ τέχνη. «Ἐκλιπαροῦμε χρήματα ἀπὸ ἰδιῶτες γιὰ νὰ συνεχίσουμε τὴ δουλειά μας». Ἡ τέχνη δὲν πρέπει νὰ εἶναι προνόμιο τῶν ὀλίγων. «Παίζω σοβιετικὴ μουσικὴ γιατὶ ἀρέσει σ' ὅλους τοὺς ἀνθρώπους»

Ἔφτασε χθὲς ἀεροπορικῶς ἀπ' τὴ Νεάπολη ὁ Δημήτρης Μητρόπουλος μὲ τὴ Φιλαρμονικὴ τῆς Νέας Ὑόρκης. Στὸ ἀεροδρόμιο τοῦ Ἑλληνικοῦ τὸν ὑποδέχθηκαν ἐκπρόσωποι τοῦ μουσικοῦ μας κόσμου, συντάκτες τοῦ Ἀθηναϊκοῦ Τύπου καὶ πλῆθος φιλομούσων.

Μόλις ἀνέβηκε στὴν Ἀθήνα, ὁ Μητρόπουλος κατευθύνθηκε στὸ ξενοδοχεῖο τῆς Μ. Βρετανίας ὅπου, ἀφοῦ μίλησε πρὸς τοὺς ἀντιπροσώπους τῶν Ἐφημερίδων, παρέστη σὲ δεξίωση ποὺ ὁ ὑπουργὸς τῆς Παιδείας ὀργάνωσε πρὸς τιμήν του.

Μιλώντας πρὸς τοὺς δημοσιογράφους, ὁ Δημήτρης Μητρόπουλος ἐξέφρασε τὴ συγκίνησή του ποὺ βρίσκεται στὴν Ἑλλάδα, τέρμα τῆς φετεινῆς καλλιτεχνικῆς του περιοδείας. «Ἡ Φιλαρμονικὴ τῆς Ν. Ὑόρκης — εἶπε ὁ Μητρόπουλος ἐμφανίσθηκε τὴν 1ην Σεπτεμβρίου στὸ Ἐδιμβοῦργο κι' ἀπὸ ἐκεῖ σὲ πολλὲς ἄλλες εὐρωπαϊκὲς πόλεις, ὅπου ἔτυχε ἐξαιρετικὰ θερμῆς ὑποδοχῆς. Δυστυχῶς, δὲν θὰ μπορέσουμε νὰ μείνουμε οὔτε μέρα περισσότερο στὴν Ἀθήνα γιατὶ τὰ ἔξοδα τῆς Ὀρχήστρας εἶναι τεράστια. Συγστὴν Ἀθήνα γιατὶ τὰ ἔσοδα τῆς Ὀρχήστρας ἀνέρχονται σὲ 1 ἑκατομμύριο δολλάρια. Ἀπ' αὐτὰ μόνο οἱ 750 χιλιάδες καλύπτονται ἀπ' τὶς εἰσπράξεις. Τὰ ὑπόλοιπα, γιὰ νὰ ἐπιβιώσει ἡ Ὀρχήστρα, εἴμαστε ἀναγκασμένοι νὰ ζητιανεύουμε ἀπὸ πόρτα σὲ πόρτα, δεδομένου ὅτι δὲν ὑπάρχει καμμιὰ κρατικὴ ἐνίσχυση.

Στὸ σημεῖο αὐτὸ ὁ Μητρόπουλος μιλώντας γιὰ τὴν ἐκπολιτιστικὴ ἀποστολὴ τῆς τέχνης παρετήρησε ὅτι «δυστυχῶς, κάτω ἀπ' τὸ σημερινὸ καθεστὼς ἡ τέχνη κατάντησε ν' ἀποτελεῖ προνόμιο τῶν πλουσίων ποὺ, στὸ βάθος, εἶναι ἐντελῶς ἄτεχνοι καὶ ἀνίδεοι καὶ συχνάζουν στὶς καλλιτεχνικὲς ἐκδηλώσεις μόνον ἀπὸ καθαρὰ .... κοσμικοὺς λόγους. Ἀντίθετα, αὐτοὶ ποὺ πραγματικὰ καταλαβαίνουν τὴ μουσικὴ δὲν ἔχουν τὶς οἰκονομικὲς δυνατότητες νὰ παρακολουθοῦν τὶς μεγάλες συναυλίες κ.λ.π.

Μιλώντας γιὰ τὴν ὑποδοχὴ ποὺ ἰδιαίτερα τοὺς ἐπεφύλαξαν στὸ Βερολῖνο, ὁ Μητρόπουλος εἶπε ὅτι στὸ ἀεροδρόμιο οἱ τελωνειακοὶ εἶχαν παραταχθεῖ σὲ δυὸ στοίχους καὶ, ἀντὶ ἐλέγχου πρόσφεραν στὰ μέλη τῆς Ὀρχήστρας λουλούδια κι' ἀπὸ μιὰ μποτίλια σαμπάνια στὸν καθένα...

Η ΣΟΒΙΕΤΙΚΗ ΜΟΥΣΙΚΗ

Σὲ ἐρώτησή μας σχετικὰ μὲ τὴ θέση τῆς σοβιετικῆς μουσικῆς στὸ ρεπερτόριό του, ὁ μαέστρος ἀπάντησε: «Ὅλοι μὲ ρωτοῦν: γιατὶ παίζω σοβιετικὴ μουσική; Παίζω γιατὶ ἀρέσει σ' ὅλο τὸν κόσμο! Πραγματικά, τὸ μεγαλύτερο μέρος τοῦ ρεπερτορίου μου ἀποτελοῦν ἔργα τῶν Προκόφιεφ, Σοστάκοβιτς, Χατσατουριάν, Καμπαλέφσκυ καὶ Ραχμανίνωφ. Αὐτὰ ἔχουν παντοῦ τὴ μεγαλύτερη ἐπιτυχία. Ἡ 10η Συμφωνία τοῦ Σοστάκοβιτς π.χ. χάλασε κόσμο παντοῦ ὅπου τὴν παρουσιάσαμε, γιατὶ ἡ τέχνη τοῦ Σοστάκοβιτς μιλάει στὴν καρδιὰ τῶν μαζῶν ὅλης τῆς ὑφηλίου. Ἔτσι παρ' ὅλες τὶς προσωπικές μου ἐπιφυλάξεις ὡς πρὸς τὴ μορφὴ καὶ τὰ ἐκφραστικὰ μέσα τῶν ἔργων τῶν σοβιετικῶν συνθετῶν — γιατὶ ἐγὼ εἶμαι πιὸ μοντέρνος — καὶ παρ' ὅλο τὸ «μακκαρθισμὸ» ποὺ βασιλεύει στὴν Ἀμερική, ἐγὼ γίνει ὁ μεγαλύτερος προπαγανδιστὴς τοῦ κ. Σοστάκοβιτς.

ΟΙ «ΠΑΡΕΞΗΓΗΣΕΙΣ» ΣΤΗΝ ΕΛΛΑΔΑ

Μ' αὐτὰ τὰ λόγια, ὁ Μητρόπουλος ἔκλεισε τὴ συνέντευξη γιὰ νὰ παρευρεθεῖ στὴ δεξίωση, ὅπου τὸν περίμεναν παλιοὶ γνώριμοι, συνάδελφοι καὶ μαθητές του.

Τὸν μαέστρο θὰ δεξιωθεῖ αὔριο Κυριακὴ στὶς 5 μ.μ. τὸ Δ.Σ. τοῦ Πανελληνίου Μουσικοῦ Συλλόγου στὰ γραφεῖα του: ὁδὸς Σαπφοῦς, ἀριθμ. 10.

Ο ΔΗΜΗΤΡΗΣ ΜΗΤΡΟΠΟΥΛΟΣ

— ΣΥΝΕΧΕΙΑ ΕΚ ΤΗΣ 1ης ΣΕΛΙΔΟΣ —

καὶ μπορεῖ νὰ καταλάβετε τί ἔχουμε τραβήξει μὲ τὰ διαβατήρια, τὰ τελωνεῖα, τὰ ξενοδοχεῖα καί... τὸ μουσικόφιλο κοινὸν τῶν χωρῶν, ποὺ ἐπισκεφθήκαμε. Θὰ ἤθελα νὰ μείνω στὴν Ἑλλάδα περισσότερο ἀπὸ δυὸ ἡμέρες, ἀλλὰ τὰ ἔξοδα ποὺ χρειάζεται ἡ ὀρχήστρα γιὰ τὴν συντήρησή της μᾶς ἀναγκάζουν νὰ μετακινούμεθα συνεχῶς ἀπὸ χώρας εἰς χώραν.

ΚΡΑΤΟΣ ΚΑΙ ΤΕΧΝΗ

Η ΥΠΟΔΟΧΗ ΤΟΥ

Η ΣΟΒΙΕΤΙΚΗ ΜΟΥΣΙΚΗ

Ο ΜΠΕΤΟΒΕΝ... ΒΡΩΜΑΙ

Η ΕΛΛΗΝΙΚΗ ΜΟΥΣΙΚΗ

Ἐδῶ ἐτελείωσε ἡ ὑπὸ τύπον πρὲς - κόνφερανς διάλεξις τοῦ μεγάλου Ἕλληνος ἀρχιμουσικοῦ. Γιατὶ εἰσῆλθε στὴν αἴθουσα μεγαλοπρεπῶς ἡ Κατίνα Παξινοῦ, ἡ ὁποία κατηυθύνθη πρὸς τὸν Μητρόπουλο, τὸν ἀγκάλιασε, τὸν ἐφίλησε καὶ τὸν ἐσήκωσε νά... σταθοῦν μαζὶ πρὸ τῶν φωτογραφικῶν φακῶν τῶν φωτορεπόρτερς.

Καὶ ὅταν ἐτελείωσε ἡ λῆψις τῶν φωτογραφιῶν, ἡ Ἑλληνὶς τραγωδὸς ἀπήγαγε τὸν Μητρόπουλο καὶ τὸν ἐξηφάνισε σὲ μιὰ κρύπτη τῆς πλαγιᾶς αἰθούσης. Τί ἔγινε ἀπὸ κεῖ καὶ πέρα, κανεὶς δὲν γνωρίζει. Σὲ λίγο, ὅμως, ἐνεφανίσθη στὸ διάδρομο μόνη πιὰ ἡ κ. Παξινοῦ φωνάζοντας σέ κάποιον: «Τσακμάκη, Τσακμάκη, γρήγορα τὴν γούνα μου, γιατὶ διάζουμαι!».

Κι' ἔτσι ἀπίθανα ἐτελείωσε ἡ τόσο ἐνδιαφέρουσα διάλεξις τοῦ κ. Μητροπούλου, τὸν ὁποῖον περιμένει σήμερα τὸ ἀθηναϊκὸ κοινὸ γιὰ νὰ τὸν ἀποθεώσῃ στὸ Ὠδεῖο Ἡρώδου τοῦ Ἀττικοῦ.

ΑΣΤΕΡΗΣ ΚΟΒΑΤΖΗΣ

ΕΝΘΟΥΣΙΩΔΗΣ ΥΠΟΔΟΧΗ ΣΤΟ ΜΕΓΑΛΟ ΜΑΕΣΤΡΟ

Ὁ Μητρόπουλος ἐκθειάζει τοὺς συγχρόνους συνθέτας

ΕΧΕΙ ΕΠΙΦΥΛΑΞΕΙΣ ΓΙΑ ΤΗ ΡΩΣΙΚΗ ΜΟΥΣΙΚΗ, Η ΟΠΟΙΑ ΟΜΩΣ, ΟΠΩΣ ΔΙΑΠΙΣΤΩΝΕΙ ΚΑΘΕ ΦΟΡΑ ΠΟΥ ΔΙΕΥΘΥΝΕΙ ΟΡΧΗΣΤΡΑ, ΑΡΕΣΕΙ ΣΤΟΝ ΚΟΣΜΟ

ΤΑ ΚΑΘΗΚΟΝΤΑ ΤΟΥ ΩΣ ΔΙΕΥΘΥΝΤΟΥ ΞΕΝΗΣ ΟΡΧΗΣΤΡΑΣ

Εἰς τὸ ξενοδοχεῖον τῆς «Μ. Βρετανν/ας» ὁ Μητρόπουλος φωτογραφίζεται μὲ τὴν κ. Παξινοῦ.

"Οταν στὶς 6 χθὲς τὸ ἀπόγευμα ἡ φωνὴ τῆς σπίκερ τοῦ ἀεροδρομίου τοῦ 'Ελληνικοῦ ἀνήγγειλε ὅτι τὸ ἀεροπλάνο, τοῦ ὁποίου ἐπιβαίνει ὁ κ. Μητρόπουλος προσγειώνεται σὲ δέκα λεπτά, ὁ κόσμος ποὺ περίμενε ἀπὸ τὶς 3 τὸ ἀπόγευμα τὴν ἄφιξη τοῦ μεγάλου "Ελληνος μαέστρου σηκώθηκε αὐτόματα καὶ ἀκάθεκτος ἐφώρμησε πρὸς τὸ χῶρο προσγειώσεως τῶν ἀεροσκαφῶν. Δυνάμεις ὅμως τῆς 'Αστυνομίας ἀναχαιτίζουν τὰ πλήθη καὶ δὲν ἀφήνουν κανένα νὰ πλησιάσῃ.

'Αλλ' αὐτὸ δὲν κρατεῖ πολύ. Γιατί, ὅταν σὲ λίγο τὸ ἀεροπλάνο προσγειώθηκε στὸ ἀεροδρόμιο, ὁ κόσμος ἔσπασε τὴν ἀστυνομικὴ ζώνη καὶ ξεχύθηκε πρὸς τὴν σκάλα τοῦ ἀεροπλάνου.

Γελαστὸς - γελαστὸς ἐμφανίζεται ὁ Μητρόπουλος. Μόλις τὸν βλέπει τὸ πλῆθος ἀρχίζει νὰ τὸν χειροκροτῇ καὶ νὰ τὸν ἐπευφημῇ μὲ ἀσυγκράτητο ἐνθουσιασμό. Καὶ τότε τὸ γελαστὸ πρόσωπο τοῦ ἐξηντάρη ἀνθρώπου, ποὺ λείπει δέκα ἑπτὰ χρόνια ἀπὸ τὴν πατρίδα του, ἀλλάζει ὄψι.

'Η μεγάλη συγκίνησι ἔρχεται νὰ προστεθῇ στὴν κούρασι τοῦ ταξιδιοῦ καὶ στὴν ταλαιπωρία τῆς περιηγείας.

Εἶναι ἀδύνατον νὰ κατεβῇ τὴν σκάλα. 'Ο κόσμος δὲν παραμερίζει, δὲν τοῦ ἀνοίγει διάδρομο γιὰ νὰ περάσῃ καὶ νὰ φθάσῃ στὸ αὐτοκίνητο ποὺ τὸν ἀναμένει σὲ ἀπόστασι δέκα πέντε μέτρων. Περὶ τοὺς 30 τότε ἀστυνομικοί, τὸν ἁρπάζουν, κυριολεκτικά, καὶ τὸν ὁδηγοῦν στὸ αὐτοκίνητο.

Τὰ προεδρεῖα, οἱ ἐπίσημοι, οἱ συγγενεῖς, ἡ ἐκπρόσωπος τῆς 'Αμερικανικῆς Πρεσβείας, δὲν πρόλαβαν οὔτε κἂν νὰ τὸν ἰδοῦν. Τὸ αὐτοκίνητο ξεκίνησε ὁλοταχῶς καὶ μερικοὶ ἀπὸ τὸ πλῆθος εἶπαν:

— Τέλειωσε. Αὐτὸ ἦταν ὅλοι

'Αλλὰ δὲν ἦταν αὐτό. Τὸ αὐτοκίνητο ἀντὶ νὰ πάῃ στὴν 'Αθήνα ἔκανε περίπατο καὶ ὅταν πλέον ὅλοι εἶχαν φύγει, ἀνενόχλητο, ἐπέστρεψε στὸν χῶρο τῆς προσγειώσεως γιὰ τὴν Τελωνειακὴ τακτοποίησι τοῦ ἀφιχθέντος μαέστρου καὶ τὴν παραλαβὴ τῶν πραγμάτων του.

Μποροῦμε νὰ... καυχηθοῦμε ὅτι εἴμαστε οἱ μόνοι ποὺ δὲν τὴν πάθαμε, πρὸς μεγάλην ἔκπληξιν τοῦ διευθυντοῦ τοῦ 'Εξωτερικοῦ Τύπου. Καὶ βρήκαμε τὴν μοναδικὴ εὐκαιρία νὰ πλησιάσουμε τὸν μαέστρο. 'Αλλὰ βρισκόταν σὲ τέτοια κατάστασι, ποὺ μόνο τὴ λεμονάδα μας δέχθηκε μὲ ἀληθινὴ εὐχαρίστησι.

Στὴ διαδρομὴ ὅμως ἀπὸ τὸ 'Ελληνικὸ ὡς τὴν 'Αθήνα ἄρχισε νὰ συνέρχεται καὶ τελικῶς κατωρθώθη νὰ δώσῃ ἐν συνεχείᾳ συνέντευξι στοὺς ἀντιπροσώπους τοῦ Τύπου στὸ ξενοδοχεῖο τῆς Μεγάλης Βρεταννίας καὶ ἀμέσως κατόπιν νὰ παραστῇ στὴ δεξίωσι ποὺ ἐδόθη ἐκεῖ πρὸς τιμήν του ὑπὸ τοῦ ὑπουργοῦ τῆς Παιδείας.

Στὴ δεξίωσι παρέστησαν πολλοὶ ὑπουργοί, ἐκπρόσωποι τοῦ καλλιτεχνικοῦ κόσμου τῆς πρωτευούσης καὶ πολλοὶ ἄλλοι, ποὺ προέβησαν σὲ συγκινητικὲς ἐκδηλώσεις συμπαθείας πρὸς τὸν διάσημο "Ελληνα μαέστρο.

Στοὺς δημοσιογράφους ὁ Δημήτρης Μητρόπουλος ἐξέφρασε τὴ συγκίνησι ποὺ αἰσθάνεται, γιατὶ βρίσκεται στὴν 'Ελλάδα. 'Ωμίλησε κατόπιν γιὰ τὶς ὑποχρεώσεις του ὡς 'Αμερικανοῦ ὑπηκόου καὶ διευθυντοῦ τῆς Φιλαρμονικῆς 'Ορχήστρας τῆς Νέας 'Υόρκης καὶ ἐξήγησε γιατὶ δὲν τοῦ εἶναι δυνατὸν νὰ παραβλέπῃ τὰ καθήκοντά του. Αὐτὸ τὸ ἐτόνισε γιὰ νὰ ἀφήσῃ νὰ ἐννοηθῇ ὅτι δὲν πρέπει νὰ ὑπάρχουν παράπονα ἀπὸ ἑλληνικῆς ἢ ἄλλης πλευρᾶς. Μόλον τοῦτο πολλὲς φορὲς παρουσίασε ἑλληνικὰ ἔργα καὶ θὰ ἐξακολουθήσῃ νὰ παρουσιάζῃ ὅσα κρίνῃ πὼς ἀξίζουν. Στὸ σημεῖο αὐτὸ εἶπε τὰ καλύτερα λόγια γιὰ τὰ ἔργα τοῦ Σκαλκώτα, ποὺ περιέλαβε στὸ ρεπερτόριό του.

ΞΕΠΕΡΑΣΜΕΝΟΣ Ο ΜΠΕΤΟΒΕΝ

'Εκδηλώνοντας τὶς προτιμήσεις του εἶπε ὅτι ὁ Μπετόβεν πλέον πρέπει νὰ θεωρῆται «ξεπερασμένος» συνθέτης καὶ ὅτι ἡ ἐνδιαφέρουσα μουσικὴ εἶναι γραμμένη ἀπὸ συγχρόνους συνθέτας. Γιὰ τὴν παλιὰ καὶ τὴν καινούργια σοβιετικὴ μουσικὴ ἐνῶ, ὅπως εἶπε, ὁ ἴδιος προσωπικῶς ἔχει ἐπιφυλάξεις, διαπιστώνει κάθε φορὰ ὅτι ἀρέσει στὸν περισσότερο κόσμο. 'Από τὸ κεφάλαιο τῶν προτιμήσεών του πρέπει νὰ σημειώσουμε τὴ μελοδραματικὴ μουσική, ποὺ, ὅπως ἀνέφερε, δὲν μπορεῖ νὰ διευθύνῃ τακτικὰ γιατὶ οἱ ὅπερες ἔχουν μεγάλα ἔξοδα καὶ ἀνεβαίνουν μετὰ δυσκολίας.

'Αλλὰ καὶ οἱ συναυλίες τῆς Φιλαρμονικῆς κοστίζουν πανάκριβα, εἶπε ὁ Δημήτρης Μητρόπουλος 'Εκατὸν ὀγδόντα χιλιάδες ἑλληνικῶν δραχμῶν στοιχίζει κάθε ἐμφάνισι τῆς 108μελοῦς ἀμερικανικῆς συμφωνικῆς ὀρχήστρας.

Ο ΕΛΛΗΝ ΑΡΧΙΜΟΥΣΙΚΟΣ ΕΙΣ ΤΑΣ ΑΘΗΝΑΣ

Μὲ τὸν Δημήτρη Μητρόπουλο

ΤΟΥ ΣΥΝΕΡΓΑΤΟΥ ΜΑΣ κ. ΝΕΣΤΟΡΑ ΜΑΤΣΑ

'Η θερμή, ἡ πραγματικὴ ὑποδοχὴ τοῦ Μητρόπουλου δὲν ἔγινε χθὲς τὸ ἀπόγευμα, στὶς 4 περίπου ποὺ ἔφθασε στὸ ἀεροδρόμιο τοῦ 'Ελληνικοῦ, ὕστερα ἀπὸ 17 ὁλόκληρων ἐτῶν ἀπουσία. Τὸ Κοινό μας δέχθηκε μέρες πρὶν τὸν διάσημο "Ελληνα μαέστρο, ὅταν, γιὰ πρώτη φορὰ στὰ 'Ελληνικὰ μουσικὰ χρονικά, ξενύχτησε δυὸ βραδιὲς συνέχεια σὲ μιὰν ἀπίθανη οὐρὰ γιὰ νὰ ἐξασφαλίσῃ ἕνα εἰσιτήριο γιὰ νὰ τὸν ἀκούσῃ.

Αὐτὴ ἡ ἀθρόα προσέλευσι χιλιάδων ἀνθρώπων, αὐτὴ ἡ ταλαιπωρία των ἡ πολύωρη καὶ μὲ τόση ἐπιμονή, μὲ τὴν ἐλπίδα ν' ἀγοράσουν ὅσο-ὅσο ἕνα εἰσιτήριο, εἶναι ὁ πιὸ θερμός, ὁ πιὸ ἐγκάρδιος, ὁ πιὸ εἰλικρινὴς χαιρετισμὸς τοῦ Κοινοῦ μας στὸ μεγάλο παιδὶ τῆς 'Ελλάδος ποὺ γυρνοῦσε νοσταλγὸς τῆς πατρίδος του, στὴν 'Αθήνα. 'Ο Μητρόπουλος βρισκόταν μέρες πρὶν στὴν 'Αθήνα. 'Η παρουσία του ἦταν αἰσθητὴ κι' ἡ μαγεμένη μουσικὴ ἰδιοφυΐα του ἠλέκτριζε ὅλους μας ποὺ τὸν περιμέναμε ἀνυπόμονα... Μὲ τὴν χθεσινὴ ἄφιξί του πραγματοποίησε ἕνα ἀπὸ τὰ μεγαλύτερα ὄνειρα τῶν 'Ελλήνων φιλομούσων ποὺ ἤθελαν νὰ τὸν ἀκούσουν νὰ διευθύνῃ τὴν καλύτερη συμφωνικὴ ὀρχήστρα τοῦ κόσμου, τὴ Φιλαρμονικὴ τῆς Νέας 'Υόρκης!

'Ο Μητρόπουλος, παρὰ τὴν ἡλικία του, διατηρεῖ ἀκέραιη τὴ νεανικὴ φλόγα καὶ τὸν ἐνθουσιασμό του. Τὸ διεπίστωσαν αὐτὸ χθὲς τὸ ἀπόγευμα στὴν «Μ. Βρεταννία» ὅσοι εἶχαν τὴν ἐξαιρετικὴ εὐκαιρία νὰ τὸν δοῦν ἀπὸ κοντὰ καὶ νὰ τὸν ἀκούσουν νὰ μιλάῃ σὲ τέλεια σχεδὸν 'Ελληνικὰ γιὰ τὴ μεγάλη χαρὰ ποὺ αἰσθάνεται εὐρισκόμενος στὴν 'Αθήνα, ὕστερα ἀπὸ 17 ὁλόκληρα χρόνια.

'Οπτικὰ εἶναι κάπως κουρασμένος. Αὐτὸ βέβαια ὀφείλεται στὶς ἀλλεπάλληλες συναυλίες του τοῦ τελευταίου καιροῦ σέ δι άφορα μουσικὰ κέντρα τοῦ 'Εξωτερικοῦ, συναυλίες ποὺ ἐσημείωσαν ἀληθινὰ μοναδικὴ ἐπιτυχία.

'Ο παγκόσμιος τύπος τὸν ἐχαρακτήρισε ὡς τὸν μεγαλύτερο μαέστρο τῆς ἐποχῆς μας κι' οἱ εἰδικοὶ ἐξήραν γιὰ μιὰν ἀκόμη φορὰ τὸ καταπληκτικό του δαιμόνιο, αὐτὸ ποὺ τὸ διοχετεύει ἀκέραιο στὰ μέλη τῆς ὀρχήστρας καὶ τὰ κάνει, σὰν μαγεμένα ἀπ' τὸ ἔντονό του βλέμμα, νὰ παρασύρωνται στὸ δικό του μεθύσι.

Δὲ μιλάει σχεδὸν καθόλου γιὰ τὶς ἐπιτυχίες του, οὔτε γιὰ τὴ μοναδικὴ τιμὴ ποὺ τοῦ ἔγινε νὰ τοῦ ἀναβέσουν, ὕστερα ἀπ' τὸν Τοσκανίνι, τὴ διεύθυνσι τῆς μεγαλύτερης ὀρχήστρας τοῦ κόσμου. "Ολ' αὐτὰ εἶναι μέσα μόνον γιὰ νὰ φθάσῃ στὸ βασικὸ σκοπό του: Νὰ καθυποτάξῃ τὸ Πνεῦμα τῆς μουσικῆς καὶ νὰ νικήσῃ μὲ τὴν ἰδιοφυΐα του τὶς ἀνυπότακτες μαγγανεῖες τῶν ἤχων.

'Η σύντομος ἀμιλία του εἶναι τολμηρή, χωρὶς συμβιβασμοὺς σὲ σκοπιμότητες καὶ χωρὶς καμμιὰ δούσμευσι. Διανθίζει τὴν ὁμιλία του μὲ ἀρκετὰ σπινθηρίσματα χιοῦμορ ἐνὸς χιοῦμορ φίνου ποὺ ἀποκαλύπτει τὴν ἄκρα πνευματική του καλλιέργεια.

"Υστερα ἀπ' τὴν πρώτη συγκίνησι ποὺ αἰσθάνεται εὐρισκόμενος μὲ τοὺς δημοσιογράφους τῆς πατρίδος του καὶ ποὺ τὴν ἐκφράζει μὲ εἰλικρίνεια καὶ χωρὶς εὐκόλες φιλολογίες, ἀρχίζει τὴ φιλική του ἐξομολόγησι — γιατὶ περὶ ἐξομολογήσεως ἐπρόκειτο κι' ὄχι περὶ συνεντεύξεως δεδομένου ὅτι δὲν ἀπαντοῦσε σ' ἐρωτήματα, ἀλλὰ μιλοῦσε μόνος του σ' ἕνα τόνο εἰλικρινῆ κι' ἐγκάρδιο — μ' αὐτὴ τὴ διαπίστωσι:

— 'Η ζωή στὴν 'Αμερικὴ εἶναι ἐξαιρετικὰ ἀκριβὴ καὶ κάθε χρόνο ἡ Φιλαρμονική ας, ποὺ ἀντιμετωπίζει τεράστια ἔξοδα κ,ινδυνεύει νὰ διαλυθῇ. Τὸ Κράτος δυστυχῶς, δὲ μᾶς βοηθᾷ καθόλου. "Ολα ὀφείλονται ἀπολύτως στὴν ἰδιωτικὴ πρωτοβουλία καὶ στὴν εὐγενικὴ ἐνίσχυσι μερικῶν πλουσίων ποὺ βοηθοῦν τὴν Φιλαρμονικὴ νὰ ὁλοκληρώσῃ τὸ ἔργο της.

Καὶ συνεχίζει ἔτσι ὁ μεγάλος "Ελλην μουσικός:

— Μὴ σᾶς φανῇ περίεργο αὐτὸ ποὺ λέω ὅτι δὲν ὑπάρχει στὶς 'Ηνωμένες Πολιτεῖες σημαντικὴ Κρατικὴ ἐνίσχυσι στὶς διάφορες ἐκδηλώσεις τῆς Τέχνης. 'Η Τέχνη ἀφορᾷ συγκριτικὰ ἕνα περιωρισμένο ποσοστὸ ἀνθρώπων ἐνῶ τοΚράτος σπεύδει ν' ἀντιμετωπίση προβλήματα ποὺ ἀφοροῦν τὸ σύνολο.

Σχετικὰ μὲ τὶς ἀκριβὲς τιμὲς εἰσιτηρίων ποὺ τόσο ἐδῶ ὅσο κι' ἀλλοῦ ποὺ ἔδωσε συναυλίες θὰ ἐμποδίσουν τὸ πολὺ Κοινὸ νὰ τὶς παρακολουθήσῃ, ὁ "Ελλην ἀρχιμουσικὸς ἐκφράζει τὴν λύπη του, ἀλλὰ ἐξηγεῖ ὅτι τὰ ἔξοδα εἶναι τεράστια καὶ πάλι δὲν καλύπτονται.

— Τ' ὄνειρό μου, μᾶς λέει, εἶναι νὰ προσφέρεται κάποτε ἡ Μουσικὴ ὅπως κι' οἱ ἄλλες ἐκδηλώσεις τῆς Τέχνης, σ' ὅλον τὸν κόσμο δωρεάν. Η ΤΕΧΝΗ ΕΙΝΑΙ ΟΠΩΣ Η ΘΡΗΣΚΕΙΑ. 'Απευθύνεται στὴν ψυχὴ καὶ στὸ πνεῦμα, γι' αὐτὸ ἀκριβῶς δὲν πρέπει νὰ ἔχῃ ὑλικὸ τίμημα.

Σχετικὰ μὲ τὴν προτίμησί του στὴ Ρωσικὴ μουσικὴ καὶ ἰδιαίτερα στοὺς σύγχρονους Ρώσους συνθέτας, ὁ Μητρόπουλος μὲ εἰλικρίνεια μᾶς κάνει αὐτὴ τὴν ὁμολογία:

— 'Εμένα προσωπικὰ δὲ μοῦ ἀρέσει καθόλου ἡ σύγχρονη Ρωσικὴ μουσική. 'Αρέσει ὅμως πολὺ στὸ Κοινόν, ἰδιαίτερα ὁ Σοστάκοβιτς. Δέ μποροῦμε, λοιπόν νὰ ἀγνοήσουμε αὐτὴ τὴν ἔφεσι τοῦ Κοινοῦ καὶ νὰ μὴ συμπεριλάβουμε στὸ ρεπερτόριό μας ἔργα ποὺ τὸ συγκινοῦν.

Εἰδικώτερα γιὰ τὶς δικές του προτιμήσεις ὁ διάσημος "Ελλην ἀρχιμουσικὸς μᾶς ἐξομολογεῖται ὅτι τρέφει ἰδιαίτερην ἀδυναμία στοὺς μοντέρνους ποὺ ζοῦν στὴν ἐποχή μας καὶ μετουσιώνουν στὸ ἔργο τους τὸ πνεῦμα τοῦ ταραγμένου καιροῦ μας.

— Ζῶ κι' ἐγὼ στὴν ἐποχή μας, λέει, καὶ πιστεύω ἀκράδαντα ὅτι πρέπει νὰ τὴν ὑπηρετήσω!

"Οσον ἀφορᾷ τοὺς "Ελληνες μουσικούς, μᾶς ἐξηγεῖ ὅτι στὸ ρεπερτόριό του ἔχει μόνον ἔργα Σκαλκωτᾶ γιατί, παρὰ τὴν ἔντονη ἐπιθυμία του νὰ παρουσιάσῃ κι' ἄλλους, δὲ συναντᾷ ἀνάλογη ἀπήχησι στὸ διεθνὲς Κοινὸ ποὺ προτιμᾷ ἔργα σίγουρα καὶ καθιερωμένα.

Καὶ κλείνει τὴ φιλική του ὁμιλία ὁ Μητρόπουλος ἐκφράζοντας μας τὴ βαθειὰ συγκίνησι γιὰ τὴν ὑποδοχὴ ποὺ συνάντησε στὰ διά φορα Κράτη ποὺ ἐπισκέφθηκε, μιὰν ὑποδοχὴ ἀληθινὰ καταπληκτική ποὺ ἀποκορυφώθηκε στὴ Γερμανία ὅπου πλήθη κόσμου ἔρραναν αὐτὸν καὶ τὰ μέλη τῆς ὀρχήστρας του μὲ λουλούδια, ἐνῶ οἱ τελωνειακοί, μόλις ἔφθασαν τὰ ἀεροπλάνα τους στὸ ἀεροδρόμιο τοῦ Δυτικοῦ Βερολίνου «τιμῆς ἕνεκεν», δὲν τοὺς ἔκαναν κανένα ἔλεγχο, οὔτε καὶ τοὺς ζήτησαν διαβατήρια.

Δὲ χρειάζεται ὅμως νὰ μᾶς τὸ τίποτ' ἄλλο, ὁ διάσημος "Ελλην ἀρχιμουσικός. Αὐτὸς δὲν ἐκφράζεται μὲ λόγια, ἐκφράζεται μὲ ἤχους. Καὶ μᾶς ἐπιφυλάσσει τὴν πιὸ εὔγλωττη ὁμολογία του στὶς δυὸ συναυλίες ποὺ θὰ διευθύνῃ καὶ ποὺ ἀποτελοῦν ἀναντίρρητα, τὸ οὐσιαστικώτερο μουσικὸ γεγονὸς τῶν τελευταίων ἐτῶν γιὰ τὸν τόπο μας.

ΧΙΛΙΑΔΕΣ ΕΝΘΟΥΣΙΩΝΤΩΝ ΑΘΗΝΑΙΩΝ ΥΠΕΔΕΧΘΗΣΑΝ ΤΟΝ Δ. ΜΗΤΡΟΠΟΥΛΟΝ

«ΦΙΛΩ ΤΟ ΧΩΜΑ ΤΗΣ ΠΑΤΡΙΔΟΣ... 17 ΧΡΟΝΙΑ... ΚΑΙ ΝΟΜΙΖΩ ΠΩΣ ΕΙΝΕ ΧΘΕΣ».-
«ΤΑ ΜΟΝΤΕΡΝΑ ΕΡΓΑ ΕΙΝΕ ΤΩΡΑ Η ΠΗΓΗ ΤΩΝ ΝΕΩΝ ΜΟΥΣΙΚΩΝ ΚΑΤΑΚΤΗΣΕΩΝ

«ΚΑΙ Ο ΜΠΕΤΟΒΕΝ ΕΙΝΕ ΣΗΜΕΡΑ ΞΕΠΕΡΑΣΜΕΝΟΣ», ΛΕΓΕΙ Ο ΔΙΑΣΗΜΟΣ ΜΟΥΣΙΚΟΣ

Μετὰ ἀπουσίαν 17 ἐτῶν, ἔφθασε χθὲς εἰς τὰς 'Αθήνας ὁ διάσημος "Ελλην μαέστρος Δημήτρης Μητρόπουλος, τὸν ὁποῖον ὑπεδέχθησαν χιλιάδες ἐνθουσιόντων 'Αθηναίων. 'Ο μουσικὸς συνεργάτης τῆς «'Ακροπόλεως» κ. Γ. Βῶκος, μᾶς περιγράφει ὡς ἑξῆς τὴν ἄφιξιν τοῦ μεγάλου ἀρχιμουσικοῦ ὁ ὁποῖος τοῦ παρεχώρησεν ἰδιαιτέραν συνέντευξιν πρὸς τὴν ἐφημερίδα μας.

Δὲν μπορεῖ νὰ τὸ συλλάβῃ ἡ ἀνθρώπινη φαντασία ἐκεῖνο ποὺ ἔγινε χθὲς τὸ βράδυ στὸ ἀεροδρόμιο τοῦ 'Ελληνικοῦ, ὅταν ἡ ἀνθρωποθάλασσα ἐφώρμησε — εἶνε ἡ κυριολεξία—κατὰ τοῦ προσγειωθέντος ἀεροπλάνου ποὺ ἔφερνε στὴν 'Ελλάδα τὸν διάσημο "Ελληνα μαέστρο Δημήτρη Μητρόπουλο... Τὸ τί ἐπακολούθησε εἶνε ἀδύνατον νὰ περιγραφῇ. 'Αλλὰ ἂς πάρωμε τὰ πράγματα μὲ τὴν σειρά τους.

'Από χθὲς τὸ πρωί, ἡ καλλιτεχνικὴ 'Αθήνα βρισκόταν σὲ συναγερμό... «'Απόψε ἔρχεται ὁ Μητρόπουλος»— τὸ γενικὸ θέμα τῆς ἡμέρας.

'Απόψε Μητρόπουλος μας — μετὰ ἀπὸ δέκα ἑπτὰ ὁλόκληρα χρόνια ξενιτειᾶς — θὰ ξαναπατοῦσε τὸ εὐλογημένο χῶμα τῆς 'Ελλάδος.

Καὶ μόνο αὐτὴ ἡ σκέψι γιὰ τὸν ἐρχομὸ τοῦ Μαέστρου - θρύλου, ἠλέκτρισε τὰ πλήθη τῶν φιλομούσων καὶ τῶν θαυμαστῶν του, ὥστε ἀπὸ τὶς 2 τὸ μεσημέρι ἡ περιοχὴ ἀναμονῆς τοῦ ἀεροδρομίου τοῦ 'Ελληνικοῦ, ἄρχισε σιγὰ - σιγὰ νὰ γεμίζῃ ἀπὸ κόσμο...

'Η ὑπηρεσία τοῦ ἀεροδρομίου εἶχε δώσει τὴν πληροφορία, ὅτι ἡ ἄφιξις τοῦ εἰδικοῦ ἀεροπλάνου τοῦ φέροντος τὸν Μητρόπουλο, θὰ ἐπραγματοποιεῖτο στὰς 4 τὸ ἀπόγευμα.

"Ομως, καθὼς ἀνέφερα, τὰ καραβάνια τῆς ὑποδοχῆς ἄρχισαν νὰ καταφθάνουν ἀπὸ τὰς 2 τὸ μεσημέρι...

Στὰς 3.30' δὲν ὑπῆρχε καρέκλα στὸ μπὰρ τοῦ ἀεροδρομίου.

Μουσικοὶ λογῆς - λογῆς, καὶ κάθε κλάδου... Μαέστροι, συνθέται, καθηγηταί, φωτορεπόρτερς—ὅλοι ἐπὶ ποδὸς ὑποδοχῆς!

Οἱ δεῖκτες τοῦ ρολογιοῦ τοῦ ἀεροδρομίου ἄρχισαν νὰ πλησιάζουν στὰς 4... ὅμως ἀεροπλάνο καὶ Μητρόπουλος πουθενά...

Καὶ ἡ ἀδημονία ἄρχισε... Κι' οἱ συζητήσεις φούντωναν λεπτὸ—μὲ λεπτό...

— Γιατὶ δὲν ἦλθε ἀκόμη τὸ ἀεροπλάνο ἀπ' τὴν Νεάπολι;... Τί συμβαίνει;

Καὶ δόστου τὰ μάτια ὅλων κυττοῦσαν τὸν γκριζογάλανο οὐρανό, μήπως κάπου ἀπ' τὸν μακρυνὸ ὁρίζοντα ξεπροβάλῃ τὸ μετάλλινο πουλί, μὲ τὸ πολύτιμο καλλιτεχνικό του — ἐλληνικῆς παραγωγῆς — φορτίο...

Καὶ ἀπὸ δῶ καὶ πέρα ἀρχίζει τὸ ἀτελεύτητο ἐρωτηματολόγιον ἀπὸ γραφεῖο σημάτων...

Καμμία πληροφορία ἀπ' τὴν ἁρμοδία δεσποινίδα...

— Μόλις ἔχουμε τίποτε νεώτερο θὰ σᾶς εἰδοποιήσουμε...

— Εὐχαριστοῦμε πολύ... Μᾶς ὑποχρεώσατε... Τώρα τί ἔχετε νὰ μᾶς πῆτε;...

— Τίποτε ἀκόμη.

Τί νὰ γίνῃ!... Κι' ἡ ἀναμονὴ συνεχίζεται καθ' ὁμάδας μετὰ τῆς σχετικῆς συζητήσεως.

Καὶ κάθε τόσο:

— Πότε ἔρχεται τ' ἀεροπλάνο;

— 'Ακόμη δὲν ξέρουμε τίποτε...

'Αναμονή. 4.30, 4.50, 5, 5.10, 5.20... Καὶ ξάφνου τὸ χαρμόσυνο ἄγγελμα: «Τὸ ἀεροπλάνο τῆς Κ.Υ.Μ.

— ΒΛΕΠΕ 2ΣΗ ΣΕΛΙΔΑ —

'Ο Δημήτρης Μητρόπουλος, ἐνῶ ἐξέρχεται ἀπὸ τὸ ἀεροπλάνον καὶ ἀντικρύζει τὴν ἑλληνικὴ γῆ μετὰ 17 ἐτῶν ἀπουσίαν καὶ θριάμβους.

— ΑΠΟ ΤΗΝ 1η ΣΕΛΙΔΑ —

προερχόμενο ἐκ Νεαπόλεως, προσγειώνεται στὸ ἀεροδρόμιο στὰς 6 καὶ5...

Οἱ δεῖκτες, ἀπαθέστατοι προχωροῦν... 6 παρὰ 10.

Τὸ πλῆθος — ἄνω τῶν 2.000 ἀτόμων — πλησιάζει τὸ κιγκλίδωμα ποὺ χωρίζει τὴν ἐξωτερικὴ περιοχὴ ἀπ' τὸ πεδίον προσγειώσεως.

"Ομως ἡ ἀστυνομία κλείνει τὸ κιγκλίδωμα...

Φωνές..., κακά.

— 'Ανοῖξτε μας νὰ μποῦσε... Γιατὶ νομίζετε, κ. ἀστυνόμε, ὅτι περιμένουμε ἀπ' τὸ μεσημέρι...

'Ο κ. Καβουνίδης — διευθυντὴς 'Εξωτερικοῦ Τύπου τοῦ 'Υπουργείου Προεδρίας τῆς Κυβερνήσεως — προσπαθεῖ νὰ πείσῃ τὸν ἐπὶ κεφαλῆς τῆς ἀστυνομικῆς δυνάμεως ὅτι δὲν πρόκειται νὰ γίνῃ... κίνημα, ἀλλὰ ὑποδοχὴ σ' ἕνα καλλιτεχνικὸ παιδὶ τῆς 'Ελλάδος ποὺ λείπει 17 χρόνια...

Στὸ τέλος τὸν... πείθει, τὸ κιγκλίδωμα ἀνοίγεται καὶ ὁ ἀνθρώπινος ὄγκος εἰσορμᾷ.

Η ΑΦΙΞΙΣ

"Ολοι στρέφουν... ἱκετευτικὰ βλέμματα στὸν οὐρανό. 6.10, 6.15, 6.18... νὰ τὸ ἀπὸ μακρυά. Στὴν ἀρχὴ μιὰ κουκίδίτσα, ποὺ λίγο—λίγο μεγαλώνει. Τὸ ἀεροπλάνον καὶ ὁ Μητρόπουλος.

Πλησιάζει—πλησιάζει... ὥσπου οἱ ρόδες του κυλοῦν μαλακὰ στὸ διάδρομο προσγειώσεως.

'Εδῶ νὰ εἰσαστε καὶ νὰ βλέπατε τὸ τί ἔγινε.

Πατεῖς με—πατῶ σε. Φύρδην μίγδην. 'Η ἀστυνομία ἀγωνίζεται νὰ συγκρατήσῃ τὸ πλῆθος τῶν θαυμαστῶν τοῦ ἡμιθέου τῆς μπαγκέττας.

"Ετοιμη ἡ σκάλα καθόδου. 'Η πόρτα ἀνοίγει. Πάτος ὁ Δημήτρης Μητρόπουλος. Στέκεται ἔκπληκτος. Συγκινημένος μὲ μάτια δακρυσμένα. Τὸ πλῆθος ξεσπᾷ... «Ζήτω ὁ Μητρόπουλος»! Χειροκροτήματα... «Μπράβο»!.

Δίπλα μου μιὰ κυρία — συγγενής του προφανῶς — κιδυνεύει νὰ συνθλιβῇ. Μὰ δὲν τὸ βάζει κάτω.

— Δημητράκη! Δημητράκη!

Μὰ ποῦ νὰ ἀκούσῃ ὁ Δημητράκης, μέσα σὲ κεῖνη τὴν ὀχλοβοή.

Κατεβαίνει τὴν σκάλα. Βροχὴ ο

'Απόκομμα ΑΥΓΗΣ

Οὐδείς χειροκροτήθηκε τόσο θερμά καί παρατεταμένα ὅσον ὁ Μητρόπουλος

Η ΦΙΛΑΡΜΟΝΙΚΗ ΤΗΣ Ν. ΥΟΡΚΗΣ ΠΡΟΣΕΦΕΡΕ ΤΗΝ ΕΝΤΟΝΩΤΕΡΗ ΜΟΥΣΙΚΗ ΣΥΓΚΙΝΗΣΙ ΣΤΟΥΣ ΑΘΗΝΑΙΟΥΣ

Ο ΜΗΤΡΟΠΟΥΛΟΣ ΚΑΙ ΤΑ ΜΕΛΗ ΤΗΣ ΟΡΧΗΣΤΡΑΣ ΑΝΕΧΩΡΗΣΑΝ ΣΗΜΕΡΑ ΤΟ ΠΡΩΪ ΓΙΑ ΤΟ ΛΟΝΔΙΝΟΝ

'Η ἀπότομη μεταβολή τοῦ καιροῦ, συνεπείᾳ τῆς ὁποίας οἱ συμφωνικές συναυλίες τῆς Φιλαρμονικῆς 'Ορχήστρας τῆς Νέας 'Υόρκης ἀντί τοῦ θεάτρου 'Ηρῴδου τοῦ 'Αττικοῦ ἐδόθησαν στήν αἴθουσα τοῦ «'Ορφέως» ἐστέρησαν ἀπό 1.600 περίπου 'Αθηναίους τήν εὐκαιρίᾳ ἀν νά ἀπολαύσουν τό ὡραιότερο μουσικό ἀκρόαμα πού γνώρισε ποτέ ἡ 'Α-θήνα καί νά ἑνώσουν μαζί μέ τούς 4.500 περίπου τυχεροὺς ἀκροατάς τίς εἰλικρινες ἐκδηλώσεις ἀγάπης καί θαυμασμοῦ πρός τόν μεγάλο 'Ελληνα μαέστρο Δημήτρη Μιτρόπουλο.

— Εἶναι ἀπερίγραπτη ἡ ἀγωνία πού ... τίς γιλιάδες τῶν φιλομούσων πού παρηκολούθησαν τίς ἀλλεπαλλήλες ἀνακοινώσεις τῆς 'Υπηρεσίας Οργανώσεως τοῦ Φεστιβάλ, τίς ὁποίες μετέδιδε προχθές τό ραδιόφωνο κατά πυκνά χρονικά διαστήματα. 'Η ἀγωνία ἔφτασε στό κατακόρυφο ὅταν στίς 6 τό ἀπόγευμα ὁ ἐκφωνητής ἀνήγγειλε ὅτι ἐν περιπτώσει βελτιώσεως τοῦ καιροῦ ἡ συναυλία θά ἐδίδετο στό θέατρον 'Ηρῴδου γιά νά δυνηθῇ νά τήν παρακολουθήσῃ ὅσο τό δυνατόν περισσότερος κόσμος. Τό ἠθικό κατόπιν τούτου τῶν φιλομούσων ἀναπτερώθηκε, ἀλλ' ὄχι γιά πολύ ὥρα γιατί στίς 6.30 ὁ ἐκφωνητής μετέδωσε τήν «κατοσδικαστική» ἀπόφασι σύμφωνα μέ τήν ὁποίαν λόγῳ μή ἱκανοποιητικῆς βελτιώσεως τοῦ καιροῦ ἡ συναυλία θά ἐδίδετο ὁριστικά στόν 'Ορφέα. Πάντως, προσέθετε ἡ ἀνακοίνωσις, «Εἶναι ἐνδεχόμενον ἡ συναυλία νά ἐπαναληφθῇ αὔριο τήν πρωΐαν δι' ἐκείνους οἱ ὁποῖοι ἔχουν ὑπεράριθμα εἰσιτήρια».

ΚΑΤΑΜΕΣΤΗ ΑΙΘΟΥΣΑ

Τήν ἴδια ὥρα ἡ αἴθουσα τῆς ὁδοῦ Σταδίου, στήν ὁποία ἀπό τό πρωΐ προσέδιδε μία ἐντελῶς ξεχωριστή αἴγλη.

ΘΟΡΥΒΩΔΗΣ ΧΕΙΡΟΚΡΟΤΗΜΑΤΩΝ

Στίς 8.05 μία ὁμοβροντία χειροκροτημάτων καί μία φωνή ἐνθουσιαστικῆς χαρᾶς πού δύγῆκε συγχρόνως ἀπό τά στόματα 1600 ἀνθρώπων ὑποδέχτηκαν τήν εἴσοδο στή σκηνή τοῦ μεγάλου ἀρχιμουσικοῦ. Διέσχισε μέ γρήγορα βήματα τήν σκηνή, ἐχαιρέτησε τό πρῶτο βιολί καί στάθηκε ἐμπρός ἀπό τό «πόντιουμ». 'Η συγκίνησίς του ἦταν φανερή. Γιά πρώτη φορά ὕστερα ἀπό 17 χρόνια ἐπικοινωνοῦσε καί πάλι μέ τό ἀγαπημένο του 'Αθηναϊκό κοινό.

—Κατόπιν ἐστράφη πρός τήν ὀρχήστρα καί μέ μιά νευρώδη κίνησί του ἀντῆχησαν οἱ πρῶτες συγχορδίες τοῦ «Πρελούδιου καί 'Αλλέγκρο» τοῦ Κουπερέν σέ διασκευή Μιλῶ μέ τό ὁποῖον ἄρχισε ἡ συναυλία. Τό πρόγραμμα τῆς συναυλίας συνεχίστηκε κατόπιν μέ τήν Δευτέρα Συμφωνία τοῦ Σούμαν

— 'Αντί τῆς 5ης Συμφωνίας τοῦ Προκόπιεφ ὁ Μητρόπουλος ἐκλεισε τό πρόγραμμα μέ τήν Δεκάτη Συμφωνία τοῦ Σοστάκοβιτς τήν ἐπονομαζομένη «Συμφωνία τῆς Εἰρήνης». Πρόκειται γιά τό τελευταῖο ἔργο τοῦ Σοβιετικοῦ συνθέτη ποὺ διηύθυνε ὁ Μητρόπουλος μέ καταπληκτική ἐπιτυχία στόν Παρίσι καί σέ ἄλλους σταθμούς τῆς συνεχιζομένης περιοδείας του. 'Η ἀλλαγή αὐτή στό πρόγραμμα ἔγινε γιατί δέν χωροῦσε στή σκηνή τοῦ «Ορφέως» τό πιάνο πού ἀπαιτοῦσε ἡ Συμφωνία τοῦ Προκόφιεφ.

— Οἱ ἐκδηλώσεις τοῦ κοινοῦ ἦσαν ἀφάνταστες. Τόσο ζωηρά καί παρατεταμένα δέν ἔχει χειροκροτηθῇ οὐδείς μέχρι σήμερα στήν 'Ελλάδα. Κατ' ἀπαί εἶχαν γίνει, διά πάν ἐνδεχόμενον, οἱ ἀναγκαῖες προετοιμασίες, ἐσείετο ἀπό τά χειροκροτήματα μέ τά ὁποῖα ἔγινε δεκτός στή σκηνή καί ἀπεθεώθη ὁ ἥρως τῆς ἡμέρας, ὁ Δημήτρης Μητρόπουλος.

— 'Η αἴθουσα ἦταν κατάμεστη ἀπό ἐκλεκτό κόσμο. 'Ακόμη πιό γεμάτος ἦταν ὁ ἐξώστης ὅπου ἡ εἴσοδος εἶχε ἐπιτραπῇ ἀπό τίς 6.30 μ.μ. Οἱ διάδροµοι, τά σκαλάκια, ὁ μεταξύ τοῦ πρώτου καί τοῦ δευτέρου ἐξώστου χῶρος εἶχαν ἐπίσης καταληφθῇ ἀπό τούς φιλομούσους.

— 'Η παρουσία τῶν Βασιλέων, τοῦ Διαδόχου, τῶν μελῶν τοῦ ὑπουργικοῦ συμβουλίου καί τῶν λοιπῶν ἐπισήμων τήνιν λοιπόν τοῦ κοινοῦ ποὺ δέν ἐνοῦσε νά ἐγκαταλείψῃ τήν αἴθουσα, ὁ Μητρόπουλος διηύθυνε μιά σύνθεσι τοῦ Ραβέλ καί τό γνωστό συμφωνικό ἔργο τοῦ Ντέ Φάλλια «Τό τρίκωχο καπέλλο».

—Κατά τό διάλειμμα οἱ Βασιλεῖς ἐκάλεσαν σέ ἰδιαίτερη ἀκρόασι τόν Μητρόπουλο τόν ὁποῖον συνεχάρησαν γιά τήν ὑφθαστη τέχνη του. 'Επίσης εἱ Βασιλεῖς ἐδέχθησαν τό ζεύγος Β. Γουλανδρῆ πρός τό ὁποῖον ἐξέφρασαν τήν εὐαρέσκειαν των γιά τήν γενναία καί εὐγενική χειρονομία του χωρίς τήν ὁποίαν ἡ μεταπλησις τῆς Φιλαρμονικῆς θά ἦτο ἀδύνατος. 'Ως γνωστόν ὁ κ. Γουλανδρῆς προσέφερε ἐξ ἰδίων τά ἔξοδα μετακλήσεως τῆς Φιλαρμονικῆς στήν 'Ελλάδα. 'Εν συνεχείᾳ οἱ Βασιλεῖς ἐκάλεσαν γιά τήν Κυριακή τό ἐσημέρι τόν Μητρόπουλο σέ πρόγευμα στά 'Ανάκτορα τοῦ Τατοΐου.

Η ΠΡΩΙΝΗ ΣΥΝΑΥΛΙΑ

Χθές τό πρωΐ ὁ διάσημος ἀρχιμουσικός, ἀφοῦ ἀπό τήν προηγουμένη εἶχε ἀποσπάσει τήν συγκατάθεσι τῶν ἐκτελεστῶν νά παίξουν ἐκτάκτως σέ μία τρίτη συναυλία στόν «'Ορφέα», ἐπεκοινώνησε τηλεφωνικῶς ἀπό τήν Μαγκνουφάνα, μέ τόν ἐπιμελητή τῆς ὀρχήστρας, στόν ὁποῖον ἔδωσε τό πρόγραμμα τῆς συναυλίας.

—Τό πρόγραμμα ἀπετελεῖτο ἀπό τήν εἰσαγωγή στήν ὄπερα τοῦ Βέρντι «Η Δύναμις τοῦ Πεπρωμένου», τίς «Συμφωνικές Παραλλαγές» τοῦ Μπράμς πάνω σ' ἕνα θέμα τοῦ Χάϋδν, τέσσαρες ἀπό τούς «'Ελληνικούς Χορούς» τοῦ Ν. Σκαλκώτα καί τήν «'Ηρωϊκή Συμφωνία» τοῦ Μπετόβεν.

—'Η συναυλία ἐδόθη χωρίς καμμιά δοκιμή, τήν προκαθορισθεῖσα ὥρα στόν «'Ορφέα», ὅπου καί παλι κατά τήν προσέλευσι τοῦ κοινοῦ, χώρις στά ληφθέντα ὑπό τῆς 'Αστυνομίας μέτρα, παρετηρήθη ἀπόλυτος τάξις. Στή συναυλία αὐτήν ἴσχυσαν τά εἰσιτήρια τῆς πρώτης συναυλίας ἐπί τῶν ὁποίων δέν ὑπῆρχεν ἡ διπλῆ ἐνδειξις.

—Οἱ ἐκδηλώσεις ὑπέρ τοῦ Μητροπούλου καί τῆς Φιλαρμονικῆς στήν πρωϊνή συναυλία ἦσαν ἀκόμη πιό θερμές καί ἐνθουσιώδεις. Στά «μπράβο» προσετίθετο τώρα καί ἕνα ὁλόψυχο εὐχαριστῶ γιά τήν εὐγενική προσφορά τοῦ μεγάλου μαέστρου νά δώσῃ καί τρίτη συναυλία πρός χάριν ἐκείνων ποὺ δέν εἶχαν τήν τύχη νά τόν ἰδοῦν καί νά χαροῦν τήν θεία τέχνη του κατά τήν πρώτη συναυλία.

—Στό διάλειμμα ὁ κοσθηγητής τοῦ 'Ωδείου 'Αθηνῶν κ. Μπευστίντουΐ, συνοδευόμενος ἀπό τόν συνθέτην κ. Παλλάντιον ἀνέβηκε στή σκηνή καί ἀφοῦ ἠσπάσθη τόν Μητρόπουλο τοῦ προσέφερε δυό δάφνινα στέφανα. 'Ο Μητρόπουλος τά πῆρε καί τά προσέφερε μέ τήν σειρά του στούς μουσικούς τῆς 'Ορχήστρας.

—Γιά μπίς διηύθυνε τό δεύτερο χορό τοῦ Σκαλκώτα. Τό κοινόν ὅμως δέν ἀρκέστηκε στό ἕνα μπίς. Ζητοῦσε ἐπίμονα ἀπό τόν Μητρόπουλο νά τοῦ χαρίσῃ ἄλλη μία ἐκτέλεσι. 'Αλλά, ὅπως ὁ Ἴδιος εἶπε ἀπευθυνόμενος στό πλῆθος τῶν θαυμαστῶν του, ἡ ὥρα ἦταν προχωρημένη καί ἔπρεπε νά πάῃ στά 'Ανάκτορα ὅπου τόν περίμενε ἕνα ἐκαλό φαγητό».

Η ΔΕΞΙΩΣΙΣ ΕΙΣ ΤΟ ΩΔΕΙΟΝ

Στά ἀνάκτορα ὁ Μητρόπουλος ἔμεινε περί τίς τρεῖς ὥρες. Παρεκάθησε σέ πρόγευμα μέ τούς Βασιλεῖς καί συνωμίλησε μαζί τους ἐπάνω σέ διάφορα καλλιτεχνικά θέματα. 'Εν συνεχείᾳ, στίς 5 τό ἀπόγευμα, μετέβη στό 'Ωδεῖο 'Αθηνῶν στή δεξίωσι ποὺ ὠργάνωσε τό συμβούλιο τοῦ Ἱδρύματος πρός τιμήν του.

—'Η ὑποδοχή ποὺ τοῦ ἔγινε ἐκεῖ, ἀπό τούς καθηγητάς, τά μέλη τοῦ συμβουλίου, τούς μαθητάς καί τούς λοιπούς προσκεκλημένους ἦτο ἀληθινά θριαμβευτική. Πρῶτος τόν προσεφώνησεν ὁ πρόεδρος τοῦ συμβουλίου κ. 'Αριστ. Κυριακίδης, ὁ ὁποῖος μεταξύ ἄλλων τοῦ εἶπε τά ἑξῆς:

'Ο ἀναχωρήσας σήμερα τό πρωΐ γιά τό Λονδῖνο διάσημος "Ελλην ἀρχιμουσικός, ὁ ὁποῖος ἀπεθεώθη ἀπό τούς 'Αθηναίους Φίλους τῆς Μουσικῆς κατά τίς τρεῖς συναυλίες τίς ὁποίες διηύθυνε προχθές καί χθές Στά λόγια τοῦ κ. Κυριακίδη ὁ Μητρόπουλος ἀπήντησεν ὡς ἑξῆς: «'Αναλογίζομαι τώρα ποὺ βρίσκομαι ἀνάμεσά σας τίς μαθητικές μου μέρες, μέ τά σφάλματα καί τίς ἐσφαλμένες νότες ποὺ ἔπαιζα. Σκέπτομαι ἀκόμη πόσο τυχερός στάθηκα ποὺ παρασύρθηκα πρώτος ἀπό τόν χείμαρρο τῆς μοίρας καί αἰσθάνομαι ὑπερήφανος ὅτι τελικά δέν ἀπέτυχα. 'Εάν ἔχαια τό πλοῖο τό 1939 ποὺ μέ μετέφερε ἀπό τήν Εὐρώπη στήν 'Αμερική, θά εἶχα μείνει κοντά μέ τούς ἄλλους συναδέλφους μου νά περιμένω τήν γενναιοδωρία τῆς τύχης μου, ποὺ μπορούσε καί νά μήν ἔλθῃ ποτέ. "Ολοι εἴμεθα κατά ἕνα τρόπο θύματα τῶν περιστάσεων. Σέ μερικούς ὑπάρχει μιά συσσώρευσις εὐνοϊκῶν περιστάσεων. Πολλοί ἔγιναν φημισμένοι χωρίς νά τό ἀξίζουν. 'Εγώ προσωπικῶς κατέβαλλα ἑκατονταπλάσιους κόπους μόνο καί μόνο γιατί ἡ τύχη θέλησε νά μέ κάνῃ «τζένιο». Εὐτυχώς εἶχα τό θάρρος νά ἀντιμετωπίσω τήν πραγματικότητα καί νά πεισθῶ ὅτι τίποτε δέν ἀγοράζεται μέ τό φεμμα. Χρειάστηκα σκληρή δουλειά, καρτερία καί δύναμι. Κι' ὅλοι ἐδῶ εἴμεθα θαυμάσιοι καί ἐκλεκτοί σπόροι. "Αλλοι πέσανε σέ κοπρεφόρο ἔδαφος καί γόνιμο, ἄλλοι σέ ξερό, ἄγονο καί πετρῶδες. Κανένα πνεῦμα δέν κατέβηκε ἀπ' εὐθείας ἀπό τόν οὐρανό. Εὐχαριστῶ ὅλους ποὺ στάθηκαν στήριγμα γιά νά γίνω ἐγώ φημισμένος κι' αὐτούς ποὺ ἤμειναν ἐδῶ καί ὑπέφεραν τόσο. Νά ξέρατε πόσο ταπεινός αἰσθάνομαι, γιατί δέν νομίζω ὅτι εἶμαι καλύτερος. Εἶχα μιά καταπληκτική τύχη. Ξεκίνησα παίζοντας ἕνα ἁπλῶς καλό πιάνο. Δέν ἦταν σπουδαῖο. "Ηταν ἴσως δυναμικό καί μεταδοτικό. 'Αντιμετώπισα τήν τύχη μου, σάς τό ξαναλέω, μέ καρτερία καί δύναμι. Μέ τιμοῦν παντοῦ καί μέ δοξάζουν. Τούς εὐχαριστῶ ὅλους ἀλλά ἐτό αὐτί μου δέν ἱδρώνει πιά». 'Εδῶ στήν 'Ελλάδα ἀπό προχθές ὄχι μόνον ἱδρωσε, ἀλλά αἰσθάνομαι τήν μεγαλύτερη συγκίνησι ποὺ μπορεῖ νά νοιώσῃ ἄνθρωπος στή ζωή του. Κι' αὐτό γιατί δύγῆκα ἀπό σάς».

Η ΑΠΑΝΤΗΣΙΣ ΤΟΥ ΜΗΤΡΟΠΟΥΛΟΥ

ΤΟ ΔΩΡΟΝ ΤΟΥ ΩΔΕΙΟΥ

Κατά τήν διάρκεια τῆς χθεσινῆς δεξιώσεως στό ὠδεῖον 'Αθηνῶν ὁ κ. 'Αρ. Κυριακίδης ἐξ ὀνόματος τοῦ συμβουλίου, προσέφερε στόν Μητρόπουλο μία ἀναμνηστική πλάκα ἐπί τῆς ὁποίας εἶναι χαραγμένη ἡ ἑξῆς ἀφιέρωσις: «Στόν Δημήτρη Μητρόπουλο τό 'Ωδεῖον 'Αθηνῶν, παραστάτης τῶν πρώτων του βημάτων, ποὺ τόν ὡδήγησαν πρός τήν δόξαν, μέ ἀγάπη, τιμή καί θαυμασμό.

'Αθῆναι 2 'Οκτωβρίου 1955».

—'Εκτός ἀπό τόν κ. Κυριακίδη ὡμίλησε καί ὁ ἐκ τῶν ἀρχαιοτέρων καθηγητῶν τοῦ 'Ωδείου κ. Σκλάβος ὁ ὁποῖος ἐξῆρε τήν προσωπικότητα καί τό μουσικό ἦθος τοῦ τιμωμένου ἀρχιμουσικοῦ.

ΜΑΘΗΤΑΙ ΤΟΝ ΣΤΕΦΑΝΩΝΟΥΝ

'Η ὡραία καί ἄκρως συγκινητική τελετή στό 'Ωδεῖο 'Αθηνῶν ἡ ὁποία ἔκαμε τόν Μητρόπουλο νά θυμηθῇ τά νιανικά του χρόνια καί τά πρῶτα σκιρτήματά του γιά τήν τέχνη, ἐπισφραγίστηκε μέ τήν στεφάνωσιν τοῦ μεγάλου μαέστρου ἀπό δύο μαθητάς τοῦ 'Ωδείου.

ΣΤΟΝ ΠΑΝΕΛΛΗΝΙΟ ΜΟΥΣΙΚΟ ΣΥΛΛΟΓΟ

Μετά τήν δεξίωσι τοῦ 'Ωδείου ὁ Μητρόπουλος μετέβη στά γραφεῖα τοῦ Πανελληνίου Μουσικοῦ Συλλόγου τοῦ ὁποίου τά μέλη τοῦ ἐπεφύλοξαν θερμοτάτη ὑποδοχή.

— 'Ο Μητρόπουλος, ἀπαντῶν σέ σχετική προσφώνησι τοῦ προέδρου τοῦ συλλόγου κ. Χυτήρη εἶπε μεταξύ ἄλλων ὅτι ἀπό ὅσα ἄκουσε ἡ θέσις τῶν 'Ελλήνων μουσικῶν ἐν συγκρίσει μέ τούς 'Αμερικανούς συναδέλφους τους εἶναι καλύτερη. 'Εκεῖ, εἶπε, ὑπάρχουν πολλοί, ἀλλά οἱ καλοί εἶναι λίγοι, ἐνῶ ἐδῶ στήν 'Ελλάδα οἱ λίγοι ποὺ ὑπάρχουν εἶναι καλοί. Καί ἀκόμη ἐδῶ ὑπάρχει ὑπόστηριξις.

— Στήν 'Αμερική, συνέχισε ὁ διάσημος μαέστρος εὐνοοῦνται οἱ ἐλάχιστοι. 'Η πλειονότης τῶν μουσικῶν περνᾶ ἀπαρατήρητη. Καί χαριτολογῶν κατέληξε: «Δέν εὐδύνομαι γιά ὅ,τι ἔτυχε νά συμβῇ σέ μένα».

— Προηγουμένως ὁ Μητρόπουλος δέν παρέλειψε νά ἐκφράσῃ τήν συγκίνησί του γιά τήν ὑποδοχή ποὺ τοῦ ἔγινε στόν Πανελλήνιο Μουσικό σύλλογο τοῦ ὁποίου σημειωτέον εἶναι τακτικό μέλος καί ἀπό διετίας ἐπίτιμος πρόεδρος.

— 'Ο διάσημος ἀρχιμουσικός κατά τήν σύντομη δεξίωσι ποὺ ἐπηκολούθησε ἀνεγνώρισε πολλούς παλαιούς φίλους μεταξύ τῶν παρισταμένων μέ τούς ὁποίους ἀντήλλαξε θερμές χειραψίες καί φιλιά. 'Ακολούθως ὑπό τά ζωηρά χειροκροτήματα τῶν παρισταμένων ἀνεχώρησε γιά ν' ἀναπαυθῇ, δεδομένου ὅτι ἔπειτα ἀπό μιά περίπου ὥρα θά ἔπρεπε νά βρίσκεται στόν «'Ορφέα» γιά νά διευθύνῃ τήν τρίτην καί τελευταίαν συναυλίαν τῆς Φιλαρμονικῆς 'Ορχήστρας τῆς Νέας 'Υόρκης.

ΤΙ ΕΙΠΕΝ Ο κ. ΧΥΤΗΡΗΣ

Προσφωνῶν τόν διάσημον ἀρχιμουσικόν ὁ Πρόεδρος τοῦ Μουσικοῦ Συλλόγου κ. Χυτήρης, εἶπε τά ἑξῆς:

»Κάθε σου νίκη στό διεθνικό στίβο τῆς εἰρηνικῆς ἁμίλλας, εἶναι καί γιά μᾶς ἕνα στεφάνι δόξας καί μιά περίλαμπρη σελίδα στήν 'Ιστορία μας. Πα

'Ο Δημήτρης Μητρόπουλος ἐνῶ λαμβάνει ἀπό τόν πρόεδρο τοῦ συμβουλίου τοῦ 'Ωδείου 'Αθηνῶν κ. Ἀριστ. Κυριακίδη τήν ἀναμνηστική πλάκα ποὺ τοῦ ἐδώρησαν τό συμβούλιον καί οἱ καθηγηταί τοῦ Ἱδρύματος.

ρακολουθώντας σε ἔστω κι' ἀπό μακρυά, νοιώθουμε πάντα καινούργιες συγκινήσεις καί σοῦ ἐκφράζουμε τήν ὁλόθερμη εὐχή νά ζῇς χιλιόχρονος γιά τήν δόξα καί τιμή τῆς παγκοσμιας Τέχνης καί τῆς 'Ελλάδος».

Η ΒΡΑΔΥΝΗ ΣΥΝΑΥΛΙΑ

'Η τρίτη καί τελευταία συναυλία τῆς Φιλαρμονικῆς, λόγῳ τῆς πασατειγομένης κακοκαιρίας, ἐδόθη στόν «'Ορφέα». 'Ο μεγαλος ἀρχιμουσικός, παρ' ὅλον ὅτι εἶχε καταπονηθῇ ἀπό τίς δύο προηγούμενες συναυλίες, τίς ἐντυπωσιακές συγκινήσεις καί τίς δεξιώσεις, διηύθυνε μέ ἐξαιρετική ζωηρότητα καί δυναμισμό τά τέσσαρα ἔργα τοῦ προγράμματος δηλαδή τήν Εἰσαγωγή «Ελεύθερος Σκοπευτής» τοῦ Βέμπερ, τήν «Συμφωνία τῆς Μεταρρυθμίσεως» τοῦ Μέντελσον, τούς 'Ελληνικούς χορούς τοῦ Σκαλκώτα καί τήν Δευτέρα Συμφωνία τοῦ Μπράμς. Μεταξύ τοῦ πρώτου καί τοῦ δευτέρου μέρους οἱ ἀκροαταί παρηκολούθησαν ἕνα ἀκόμη συγκινητικό «ἰντερμέτζο». Στή σκηνή ἀνέβηκαν ἡ ἀντιπρόεδρος τοῦ Συλλόγου «Φίλοι τῆς Μουσικῆς» κ. 'Αλεξάνδρα Τριάντη καί ὁ σύμβουλος τοῦ συλλόγου κ. Κωνστ. Κωστάκης. 'Η ἐξαιρετη ἑρμηνεύτρια τοῦ Λίντ πλησίασε τόν πρῶτο βιολιστή τῆς ὀρχήστρας καί τόν εὐχαρίστησε γιά τήν μουσικη πανδαισία τήν ὁποίαν αὐτός καί οἱ συναδελφοί του, ὑπό τήν ἐμπνευσμένην καθοδήγησιν τοῦ Μητρόπουλου, ἐχάρισαν στό 'Αθηναϊκό κοινό. 'Εν συνεχείᾳ ἡ κ. Τριάντη ὑπό τά ζωηρά καί παρατεταμένα χειροκροτήματα τοῦ κοινοῦ προσέφερε στόν προεδρχοντα τῆς Φιλαρμονικῆς ἕνα ἀρχαῖο 'Ελληνικό ἀμφορέα. Στή βάσι του ἦταν γραμμένη μέ χρυσά γράμματα μία σύντομη ἀφιέρωσις τῶν «Φίλων τῆς Μουσικῆς» πρός τήν Φιλαρμονικήν τῆς Νέας 'Υόρκης.

ΟΙ «ΦΙΛΟΙ ΤΗΣ ΜΟΥΣΙΚΗΣ» ΠΡΟΣ ΤΟΝ ΜΗΤΡΟΠΟΥΛΟ

'Απευθυνομένη ὕστερα ἡ κ. Τριάντη στόν Μητρόπουλο τοῦ ἐπέδωσε τό δίδαγρον τῶν «Φίλων τῆς Μουσικῆς» πού συνίσταται σέ μιά μετάλλινη πλάκα ἐπί τῆς ὁποίας εἶναι χαραγμένο τό ἔμβλημα τοῦ συλλόγου καί μιά ὁλιγόλογη ἀφιέρωσις.

—Ταυτοχρόνως ἡ ἐκλεκτή καλλιτέχνις παρέδωσε στόν ἐπιμελητή τῆς ὀρχήστρας 110 ἀνομνηστικά μετάλλια γιά νά διανεμηθοῦν στά μέλη τῆς ὀρχήστρας. Τά μετάλλια ἦταν ἐντός θήκης καί συνωδεύοντο ἀπό μικρούς κλώνους ἐλαίας.

—'Η συναυλία ἐτελείωσε περί /τή 10.15' νυκτερινήν. Προηγουμένως ὁ Μητρόπουλος διεύθυνε, ἐκτός προγράμματος μιά σύνθεσι Καμπαλέφσκυ καί τό δεύτερο χορό τοῦ Σκαλκώτα.

ΜΙΑ ΦΙΛΙΚΗ ΣΥΓΚΕΝΤΡΩΣΙΣ

Μετά τήν χθεσινοβραδυνή συναυλία ὁ Μητρόπουλος παρέστη σέ μία στενή φιλική συγκέντρωσι στό σπίτι τοῦ καθηγητοῦ κ. Λούρου. Στή συγκέντρωσι παρίστανται οἱ ὑπουργοί κ.κ. Ράλλης καί Γερεμεσσινόπουλος μετά τῶν συζύγων των, ὁ ὑπουργός τῶν Οἰκονομικῶν καί πρόεδρος τοῦ Συλλόγου «Φίλοι τῆς Μουσικῆς» κ. Λάμπρος Εὐταξίας, οἱ πρωταγωνισταί τοῦ 'Εθνικοῦ Θεάτρου Κατίνα Παξινοῦ καί 'Αλέξης Μινωτῆς καί ἄλλοι.

ΑΝΕΧΩΡΗΣΕ ΤΟ ΠΡΩΪ ΓΙΑ ΤΟ ΛΟΝΔΙΝΟ

Σήμερα στίς 8.30 τό πρωΐ, μέ ἀεροπλάνο τῆς K.L.M. ἀνεχώρησε γιά τό Λονδῖνον τό πρῶτο κλιμάκιο τῶν ἐκτελεστῶν τῆς Φιλαρμονικῆς. Σχίτ 9.10 ἀκριβῶς ἀπογειώθηκε ἀπό τό ἀεροδρμιο τοῦ 'Ελληνικοῦ τό δεύτερο ἀεροπλάνο τῆς ἰδίας ἑταιρίας στό ὁποῖον ἐπέβαινε ὁ Δημήτρης Μητρόπουλος μέ τόν πρόεδρο καί τό ἀνώτερο προσωπικό τῆς Φιλαρμονικῆς.

—'Η τουρνέ τοῦ Μητρόπουλου στήν Εὐρώπη θά κλείσῃ αὔριο μέ τήν συναυλία τήν ὁποίαν θά διευθύνῃ στό «Ρόγιαλ Φέστιβαλ Χώλ».

—Οἱ «Φίλοι τῆς Μουσικῆς» παραθέτουν σήμερα τό μεσημέρι πρόγευμα πρός τιμήν τοῦ εὐρισκομένου στήν 'Αθήνα ὁμογενοῦς τῆς 'Αμερικῆς κ. Βασ. Γουλανδρῆ καί τῆς συζύγου του εἰς ἔνδειξιν εὐγνωμοσύνης γιά τήν ὑπέρ τοῦ συλλόγου σημαντική δωρεά του.

Athenian Commentary

By Basil Kazandzis

quer the World; and I saw him coming back bringing along the New York Philharmonic!

By now you have seen the all-night queveing up, you have heard the cheers...

But it is my duty to point out that the members of the New York Philharmonic should not feel that all this enthusiasm is only for our great conductor.

They are entitled to share all of it, for we are equally proud, and happy, to have them here. Their European tour has been one of the main events of this summer, and the service they are rendering their country is really valuable.

By now we know how good they are both as a team and as individuals.

We want them to know how dear they have become to us, during their visit, and how much we have appreciated their participation in our Athens Festival.

The lines I am printing below are those of a talented lady poet about whom we may be hearing more in future issues: MARIA KASSIMATIS.

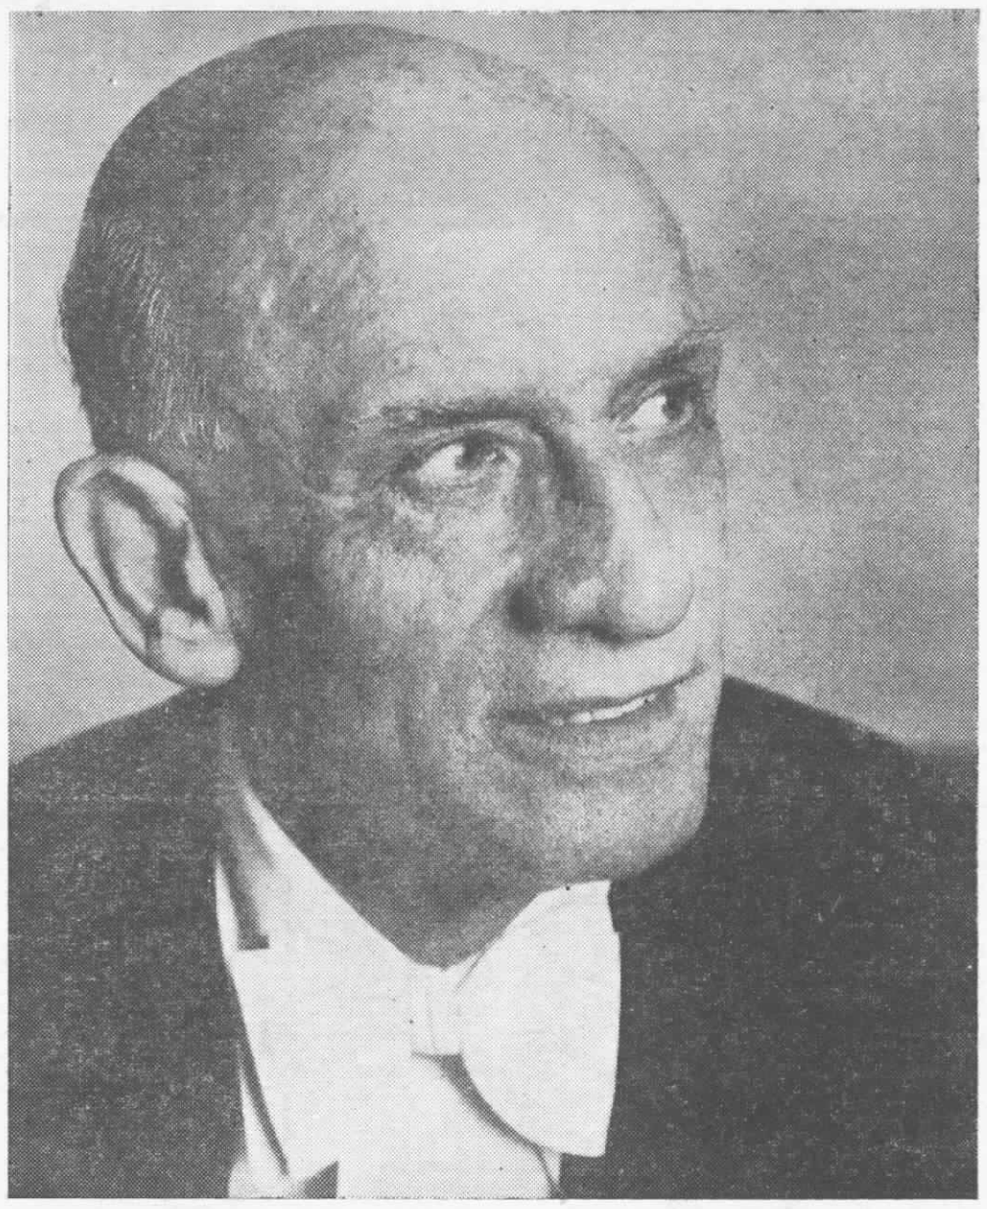
They were written in Glascow some ten years ago, but their actuality reminds us of some of the poems of KAVAFY.

DIMITRI MITROPOULOS

The Conductor as a Young Man

(A Lecture Delivered to Ourselves)

Let's array that delicate «something
Separating man from beast
With ribbons of moonlight
And golft coloured boughs,
Dipped in the liquor of morn,



Then, proud, like eagles
Let's proceed towards the walls
Of our destiny,
Choosing a transcendent art
Before building our future gift
To posterity.

Is the descendant responsible
For what he has to face on Earth?
Or can he reject the superfluous
With a Socratian grin, denoting:
«How many things am I not in need of?»

Must the sweating and tears

ΔΗΜΗΤΡΗΣ ΜΗΤΡΟΠΟΥΛΟΣ

Ο Μητρόπουλος, ὅπως ἀναφέραμε στὸ προηγούμενο σημείωμά μας, ἐπεβιβάσθη, τὸ 1940, στὸ τελευταῖο ὑπερωκεάνειο ποὺ διέσχισε τὸν Ἀτλαντικὸ ἀπὸ τὴν Εὐρώπη πρὸς τὴν Ἀμερική, μετὰ τὴν κήρυξι τοῦ Β' Παγκοσμίου Πολέμου.

Ἀπὸ τὸ 1938 ἤδη εἶχε διευθύνει τὴ Συμφωνικὴ Ὀρχήστρα τῆς Μιννεαπόλεως, τῆς ὁποίας, ἔκτοτε, διωρίσθη μόνιμος διευθυντής. Μὲ τὴν ὀρχήστρα αὐτή, κατὰ τὴ διάρκεια τοῦ πολέμου καὶ τὰ ἑπόμενα ἔτη, μέχρι τοῦ 1949, ὁ Μητρόπουλος ἀπέκτησε παναμερικανικὴ φήμη. Περιώδευσε στὰ μεγαλύτερα κέντρα τῶν Ἡνωμένων Πολιτειῶν, εἴτε μὲ τὴν Ὀρχήστρα τῆς Μιννεαπόλεως, εἴτε διευθύνοντας ὡς «προσκεκλημένος ἀρχιμουσικὸς» πολλὲς ἀπὸ τὶς μεγαλύτερες ὀρχῆστρες τῆς Ἀμερικῆς.

Τὴ Φιλαρμονικὴ Ὀρχήστρα τῆς Νέας Ὑόρκης διηύθυνε ὁ Μητρόπουλος, γιὰ πρώτη φορά, στὰς 19 Δεκεμβρίου 1940, κατόπιν ὑπογραφῆς συμβολαίου γιὰ τέσσερις ἑβδομάδες. Ἐν συνεχείᾳ ἐνεφανίσθη καὶ κατὰ τὶς ἑπόμενες δύο περιόδους συναυλιῶν, ἔλαβε δὲ μέρος καὶ στὰ πανηγυρικὰ κοντσέρτα ποὺ ἐδόθησαν γιὰ τὸν ἑορτασμὸ τῆς ἑκατονταετηρίδος ἀπὸ τῆς ἱδρύσεως τῆς Ὀρχήστρας.

Ὕστερα ἀπὸ τὶς ἐμφανίσεις του αὐτὲς παρουσιάσθηκε καὶ πάλι στὸ «Λόντιουμ» τῆς Φιλαρμονικῆς τῆς Νέας Ὑόρκης τὴν Ἄνοιξι τοῦ 1947, ἔλαβε δὲ μέρος καὶ στὴν περιοδεία τῆς Ὀρχήστρας σὲ διάφορες πόλεις τῶν Ἡνωμένων Πολιτειῶν. Κατὰ τὴν περίοδο 1947–48 διηύθυνε τὴν Ὀρχήστρα ἐπὶ τέσσαρες ἑβδομάδες, τὸ ἑπόμενο δὲ ἔτος ἐπὶ ὀκτώ. Τέλος κατὰ τὴν περίοδο 1949–50 μαζὶ μὲ τὸν Στοκόφσκυ ἀπετέλεσαν τὴν δυάδα τῶν τακτικῶν ἀρχιμουσικῶν τῆς Ὀρχήστρας.

Τὴν περίοδο 1950–51 ὁ Μητρόπουλος ἀγκαζαρίστηκε ὡς ὁ μοναδικὸς τακτικὸς διευθυντὴς τῆς Ὀρχήστρας. Ὕστερ' ἀπὸ λίγο τὸ Διοικητικὸ Συμβούλιο τῆς «Συμφωνικῆς Φιλαρμονικῆς Ἑταιρίας» τὸν ἐξέλεξε ὡς μόνιμο Καλλιτεχνικὸ Διευθυντὴ τῆς Φιλαρμονικῆς,—θέση τὴν ὁποία κατέχει μέχρι σήμερα.

Ἡ λαμπρὴ σταδιοδρομία τοῦ Μητροπούλου στὸν Νέο Κόσμο, τῆς ὁποίας σκιαγραφήσαμε τὰ κυριώτερα σημεῖα, προϋποθέτει, βεβαίως, ἐκτὸς ἀπὸ τὰ σπάνια καλλιτεχνικὰ προσόντα καὶ μιὰν ἀκάματη δραστηριότητα, ἕνα πνεῦμα ἀσκητισμοῦ καὶ αὐστηρῆς περισυλλογῆς. Πραγματικά, ὁ Μητρόπουλος εἶναι, πρῶτα ἀπ' ὅλα, ἕνας ἀκούραστος «ἐργάτης», ποὺ ἐργάζεται ἐξαντλητικὰ τόσο τὸν χειμῶνα, κατ' ἐξοχὴν ἐποχὴ τῶν μεγάλων καλλιτεχνικῶν ἐκδηλώσεων, ὅσο καὶ τὸ καλοκαίρι.

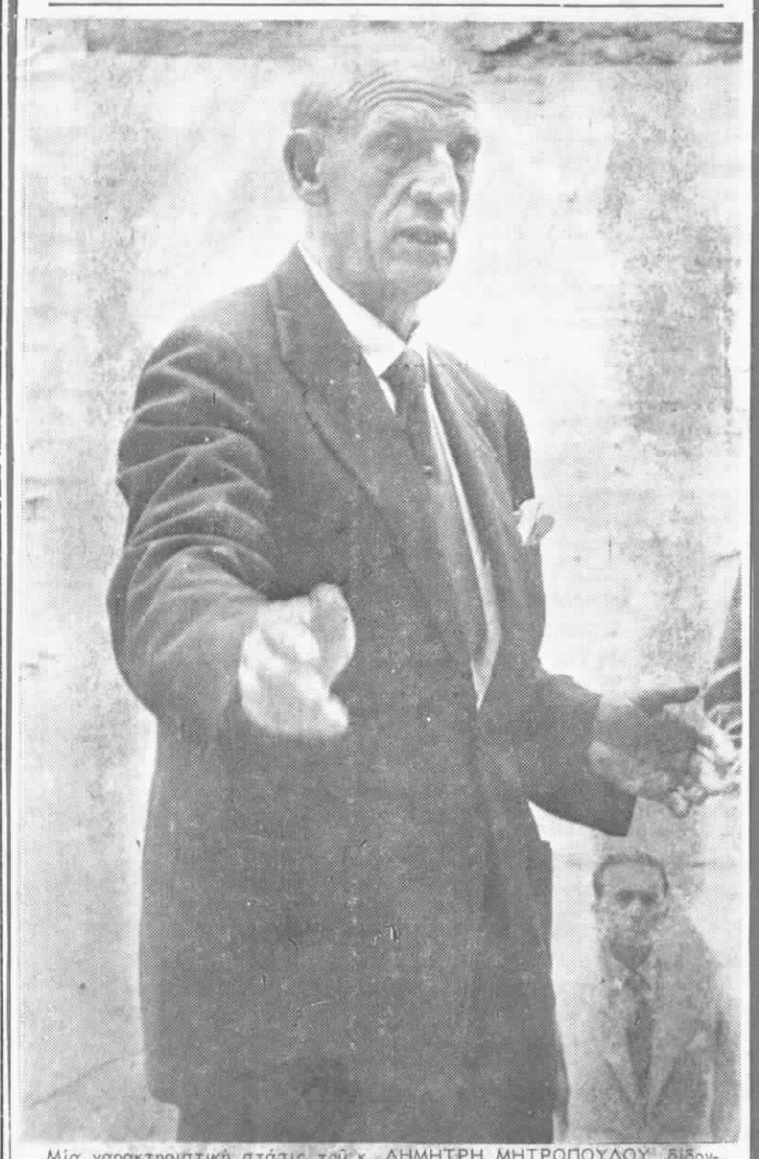
Οἱ τελευταῖες θερινὲς ἐμφανίσεις του, (τὸ παρελθὸν θέρος), ἐπραγματοποιήθησαν ἀπὸ τὸ Κολοράντο, ὅπου ἐωρτάσθηκε ἡ διακοσαετηρὶς τοῦ Γκαῖτε μέχρι τὸ Φεστιβὰλ τοῦ «Φλωρεντινοῦ Μαΐου», ὅπου διηύθυνε, σὲ συναυλιακὴ ἐκτέλεσι τὴν ὄπερα τοῦ Ριχάρδου Στράους «Ἠλέκτρα», περιοδεύσας, ἐν συνεχείᾳ στὶς μεγαλύτερες πόλεις τῆς Ἰταλίας, ὅπου, σὺν τοῖς ἄλλοις, διηύθυνε στὴ Σκάλα τοῦ Μιλάνου τὴν περιώνυμη ὄπερα τοῦ Ἄλμπαν Μπὲρκ «Βότσεκ».

Μία ἀπὸ τὶς ἐντυπωσιακώτερες καινοτομίες, ποὺ ἐπραγματοποίησε ὁ Μητρόπουλος ὡς διευθυντὴς τῆς Φιλαρμονικῆς τῆς Νέας Ὑόρκης, (εἶναι εὐρύτατα γνωστὸ τὸ πόσον ὁ Ἕλλην ἀρχιμουσικὸς προπαγανδίζει καὶ διαδίδει τὰ ἔργα τῶν συγχρόνων συνθετῶν), εἶναι καὶ ἡ μεταφορὰ ὁλοκλήρου τῆς Ὀρχήστρας ἀπὸ τὴν ἐπίσημη αἴθουσα τοῦ Κάρνεγκυ Χώλ, στὰ σάλα τοῦ κινηματογράφου Ρόξυ τοῦ Μπρόντγουαίη. Ἐκεῖ, ἐπὶ δύο ἑβδομάδες, ἡ Φιλαρμονικὴ τῆς Νέας Ὑόρκης ἔδιδε (1950–51) τέσσερις συναυλίες τὴν ἡμέρα, ἐν συνδυασμῷ μὲ τὸ φίλμ ποὺ παρουσίαζε ὁ κινηματογράφος.

Ἔτσι, χιλιάδες νέων, προσηλύτων ἀκροατῶν, ἐπεκοινώνησαν μὲ τὰ ἔργα τῆς μεγάλης τέχνης, ποὺ χωρὶς τὸ «πείραμα» τοῦ Μητροπούλου δὲν θὰ εἶχαν ποτὲ τὴν εὐκαιρία νὰ παρακολουθήσουν μιὰ συναυλία ἀξιώσεων. Πολλοὶ ἀπὸ τοὺς νέους αὐτοὺς ἀκροατὰς ἐνεγράφησαν, ἐν συνεχείᾳ, ὡς συνδρομηταὶ τῶν συναυλιῶν τοῦ Κάρνεγκυ Χώλ, δικαιώνοντας τὴ θεωρία τοῦ Μητροπούλου κατὰ τὴν ὁποία «ἐκεῖνο ποὺ ἔχει σημασία εἶναι αὐτὴ ἡ ἴδια ἡ μουσικὴ καὶ ὄχι ὁ τόπος καὶ ὁ χρόνος τῆς παρουσιάσεώς της».

Μεταξὺ τῶν νέων ἔργων ποὺ παρουσίασε ὁ Μητρόπουλος κατὰ τὴν περίοδο 1950–51 περιλαμβάνονται καὶ ὡρισμένα θεατρικὰ ἔργα, τὰ ὁποῖα ἐξετέλεσε «συναυλιακῶς»—ὅπως «Αἱ Χοηφόροι» τοῦ Μιλώ, ἡ «Ἱσπανικὴ ὥρα» τοῦ Ραβέλ, ὁ «Ἀρλεκῖνος» τοῦ Μπουζόνι καὶ ἡ «Νύχτα ἐξαϋλώσεως» τοῦ Σένμπεργκ (α' ἐκτέλεσις στὴν Ἀμερική).

Τὸν Αὔγουστο τοῦ 1951 ὁ Μητρόπουλος καὶ ἡ Φ. Ο. τῆς Ν. Ὑόρκης ἐνεφανίσθησαν, γιὰ πρώτη φορά, στὸ διεθνὲς μουσικὸ Φεστιβὰλ τοῦ Ἐδιμβούργου, μὲ θριαμβευτικὴ ἐπιτυχία. Τὸ 1952–53 ἐπίσης παρουσίασε στὸ κοινὸν τοῦ Νέου Κόσμου τὴν ἀριστουργηματικὴ μοντέρνα ὄπερα τοῦ Μιλὼ «Χριστόφορος Κολόμβος».



Τελειώνοντας τὸ σύντομο αὐτὸ βιογραφικὸ σημείωμα δὲν κρίνομε ἄσκοπο νὰ σημειώσουμε κάτι πολὺ γνωστὸ στὸ ἑλληνικὸ κοινόν: ὁ Μητρόπουλος οὐδέποτε χρησιμοποιεῖ παρτιτούρα καὶ μπαγκέτα ὅταν διευθύνει. Ἡ ἐντατικὴ μελέτη καὶ ἡ τερατώδης μνήμη του, τοῦ ἐπιτρέπουν νὰ πραγματοποιεῖ πραγματικοὺς ἄθλους διευθύνοντας ἀπὸ μνήμης καὶ τὰ πλέον περίπλοκα καὶ πολυσύνθετα ἔργα. «Μὲ αὐτὸ τὸν τρόπο», παρατηρεῖ ὁ ἴδιος, «ἀπηλλαγμένος ἀπὸ τὴ διάσπασι τῆς προσοχῆς μου, μπορῶ καὶ εἰσδύω στὸ βαθύτερο πνεῦμα τοῦ ἔργου, ἀφιερώνοντας ὅλες τὶς δυνάμεις μου στὴν ἐπικοινωνία μου μὲ τοὺς ἐκτελεστάς, στοὺς ὁποίους προσπαθῶ νὰ μεταδώσω ὅλες μου τὶς προθέσεις, γιὰ τὴν ἐπίτευξι ἑνὸς «συλλειτουργικοῦ, καλλιτεχνικοῦ ἀποτελέσματος».

Ἡ αὐστηρὴ προσήλωσις τοῦ Μητροπούλου στὸ βαθύτερο πνεῦμα τῆς τέχνης του, ἡ «ἀποστολικὴ» ἀφοσίωσίς του γιὰ τὴ διάδοσι τῶν ἔργων τῶν συγχρόνων σχολῶν, ἡ φιλοσοφικὴ ἐνατένισις τῆς ζωῆς, ἡ ἁπλότης τοῦ χαρακτῆρος, ἡ «ἀγάπη» του πρὸς τὸν ἄνθρωπο, πρὸς τοὺς συναδέλφους του, τὸ ἐνδιαφέρον του γιὰ ὅλα τὰ πνευματικὰ προβλήματα ποὺ ἀπασχολοῦν τὴ σημερινὴ ἀνθρωπότητα καὶ ἡ εὐρύτατη καλλιέργειά του κάνουν ὥστε ὁ Μητρόπουλος νὰ εἶναι ὄχι μόνον μία ἀπὸ τὶς μεγαλύτερες διεθνεῖς φυσιογνωμίες τῆς μουσικῆς, ἀλλὰ καὶ ἕνας ἀπὸ τοὺς πλέον γνησίους καὶ μεγάλους «ἀνθρώπους» ποὺ κοσμοῦν τὸ διεθνὲς καλλιτεχνικὸ στερέωμα.

Ο ΜΗΤΡΟΠΟΥΛΟΣ ΚΑΤΑ ΤΑΣ ΔΟΚΙΜΑΣ ΤΗΣ ΟΡΧΗΣΤΡΑΣ

Τεράστιον ἐνδιαφέρον καὶ πρωτοφανὴ ἐνθουσιασμὸν τῶν φιλομούσων προεκάλεσεν ἡ ἄφιξις τῆς Φιλαρμονικῆς Ὀρχήστρας τῆς Νέας Ὑόρκης ὑπὸ τὴν διεύθυνσιν τοῦ διασήμου μαέστρου Δημ. Μητροπούλου. Ἡ ἀνωτέρω φωτογραφία ἐλήφθη κατὰ τὰς δοκιμὰς τῆς Ὀρχήστρας τῆς ὁποίας ἡ πρώτη συναυλία ἐδόθη τὸ βράδυ χθὲς μὲ θριαμβευτικὴν ἐπιτυχίαν. Ὁ μεγάλος Ἕλλην ἀρχιμουσικὸς Δημήτρης Μητρόπουλος ὁ ὁποῖος ἀπεθεώθη ὑπὸ τοῦ κοινοῦ διακρίνεται ἀνωτέρω εἰς τὸ θέατρον Ἡρώδου τοῦ Ἀττικοῦ κατὰ τὴν διάρκειαν τῶν δοκιμῶν. Ὡς γνωστὸν ἡ δευτέρα τῆς Συναυλίας τῆς Φιλαρμονικῆς Ὀρχήστρας τῆς Νέας Ὑόρκης θὰ δοθῇ ἀπόψε βράδυ εἰς τὸ θέατρον Ἡρώδου τοῦ Ἀττικοῦ, ἢ ἐν περιπτώσει βροχῆς εἰς τὸ κινηματοθέατρον «Ὀρφεύς».

Ο ΜΕΓΑΛΟΣ ΕΛΛΗΝ ΜΑΕΣΤΡΟΣ ΔΗΜΗΤΡΙΟΣ ΜΗΤΡΟΠΟΥΛΟΣ ΟΜΙΛΕΙ ΔΙΑ ΤΗΝ ΜΟΥΣΙΚΗΝ

ΑΘΗΝΑΙ, 1.—Ἀνήσυχος, νευρώδης, κουρασμένος ἐκ τοῦ ταξιδίου του, ἀλλὰ πολὺ ὁμιλητικός, ἐδέχθη ὁ διάσημος Ἕλλην μαέστρος, κ. Μητρόπουλος, τοὺς δημοσιογράφους καὶ ὡμίλησε διὰ τὴν μουσικήν:

—Εἰς τὴν Ἀμερικήν, εἶπεν, ἡ μουσικὴ συντηρεῖται ἀπὸ τοὺς ἰδιώτας, διότι τὸ κράτος δὲν ἐνδιαφέρεται διὰ τὴν τέχνην, ἐπειδὴ ἔχει νὰ ἀσχοληθῇ μὲ ἄλλα πολὺ σοβαρώτερα ζητήματα. Ἂν δὲν ἦσαν οἱ εὔποροι τῆς Ἀμερικῆς, θὰ ἦτο ἀδύνατον νὰ συντηρηθοῦν αἱ διάφοροι ὀρχήστρες. Τὸ ὄνειρό μου εἶναι νὰ φθάσωμεν εἰς ἕνα σημεῖον ποὺ τὸ κράτος νὰ ὑποστηρίζῃ τὰς τέχνας, εἰς τρόπον, ὥστε νὰ παρέχωνται τὰ καλλιτεχνικὰ δημιουργήματα δωρεὰν εἰς τὸν λαόν. Διότι, ὅπως δὲν πληρώνετε, ὅταν πᾶτε νὰ προσκυνήσετε, ἔτσι δὲν πρέπει νὰ πληρώνουν καὶ ἐκεῖνοι ποὺ θέλουν ν' ἀκούσουν μουσικὴν ἢ νὰ πᾶνε εἰς τὸ θέατρον κλπ. Ἡ τέχνη εἶναι πνευματικὸν προϊόν, ποὺ τὸ δημιουργεῖ, βέβαια, ἕνας, ἀλλὰ ἀνήκει εἰς ὅλους.

— Ἡ αὐτοκράτειρα τῆς Περσίας ἔφθασε χθὲς ἀεροπορικῶς εἰς Ρώμην, προερχομένη ἐκ Παρισίων. Τὴν αὐτοκράτειραν, ἡ ὁποία συνοδεύεται ἀπὸ τὴν μητέρα της, τὸν διευθυντὴν τοῦ πρωτοκόλλου καὶ τὸν ἰδιαίτεραν ἰατρόν της, ὑπεδέχθησαν εἰς τὸ ἀεροδρόμιον οἱ ἐν Ρώμῃ πρεσβευταὶ τῆς Περσίας παρὰ τῇ Ἰταλικῇ κυβερνήσει καὶ παρὰ τῇ Ἁγίᾳ Ἕδρᾳ, καθὼς καὶ ἀνώτεροι ὑπάλληλοι.

— Εἰς τὸ Χόλλυγουντ, κοσμήματα καὶ ἀργυρᾶ εἴδη ἀξίας 4.300 δολλαρίων ἐκλάπησαν ἐξ οἰκίας τῆς λαίδης Μέϋ Λόουφορντ, μητρὸς τοῦ βρετανικῆς καταγωγῆς ἠθοποιοῦ Πέτρ. Λόουφορντ.

Ο ΜΠΕΤΟΒΕΝ....ΒΡΩΜΑ!

Η ΕΛΛΗΝΙΚΗ ΜΟΥΣΙΚΗ

PHILHARMONIC ADDS CONCERT IN ATHENS

ATHENS, Oct. 2 (Reuters)—The six-week Music and Drama Festival here ended tonight with the second and final concert by the New York Philharmonic Symphony Orchestra under the direction of Dimitri Mitropoulos.

Both orchestra and conductor, who go to London by plane tomorrow morning, scored an unexpected success during their forty-eight-hour visit here.

Queen Frederika, who attended tonight's concert with King Paul, as well as the one last night, led the audience's tremendous, twenty-minute ovation at the end of the performance.

Mr. Mitropoulos conducted an extra, unscheduled program this morning to oblige the enthusiastic musiclovers in his birthplace. The musicians said that this was the heaviest day in their ten-week tour.

In the two concerts, the orchestra played Weber's overture, "Der Freischuetz," and Skalkotas' "Greek Dances" twice, a Brahms "Variation on a Theme" by Haydn, Beethoven's "Eroica," Mendelssohn's Fifth Symphony, Brahms' Second Symphony and Kabalevsky's "Colas Bruegnon."

Philoktetes Economides, general musical director of the Athens Orchestra and Opera, said later, "Even with the passing of time those who had the good fortune to attend this outstanding musical event will never forget this admirable musical ensemble of New York's Philharmonic conducted by our own Mitropoulos."

ΤΟ ΜΕΓΑΛΟ ΤΕΚΝΟ ΤΗΣ ΕΛΛΑΔΟΣ

Ὁ Μητρόπουλος ἀπεδεώθη ἀπὸ τὸ Ἀθηναϊκὸν κοινόν

ΟΙ ΤΡΕΙΣ ΣΥΝΑΥΛΙΕΣ ΠΟΥ ΔΙΗΥΘΥΝΕ ΤΟ ΣΑΒΒΑΤΟ ΚΑΙ ΤΗΝ ΚΥΡΙΑΚΗ

Παρεκάθησε χθὲς στὸ βασιλικὸ πρόγευμα

ΕΝΤΥΠΩΣΕΙΣ ΤΟΥ ΣΥΝΕΡΓΑΤΟΥ ΜΑΣ κ. ΔΗΜ. ΧΡΟΝΟΠΟΥΛΟΥ

Ἀθληθινὰ θριαμβευτικὴ ὑπῆρξεν ἡ ἐπιτυχία τῶν τριῶν συναυλιῶν, ποὺ διηύθυνε κατὰ τὸ Σαββατοκύριακο ὁ διάσημος Ἕλλην ἀρχιμουσικὸς Δημήτριος Μητρόπουλος καὶ ποὺ ἐδόθησαν ἀπὸ τὴν Φιλαρμονικὴ τῆς Νέας Ὑόρκης.

Καὶ οἱ τρεῖς συναυλίες—δύο τακτικὲς καὶ μία ἔκτακτη — ἐδόθησαν στὴν αἴθουσα τοῦ «Ὀρφέως», λόγω τοῦ καιροῦ. Ἡ μεταβολὴ αὐτὴ δὲν ἐμείωσε καθόλου τὴν ἐπιτυχία τῶν λαμπρῶν αὐτῶν ἐκδηλώσεων, μὲ τὰς ὁποίας ἔκλεισε τὸ Φεστιβὰλ τῶν Ἀθηνῶν. Μὲ τοὺς Βασιλεῖς καὶ τὰ μέλη τῆς Κυβερνήσεως ἐπὶ κεφαλῆς, ὁ ἐκλεκτότερος κόσμος τῶν Ἀθηνῶν — ὅσος μπόρεσε νὰ βρῇ εἰσιτήρια — παρηκολούθησε τὶς συναυλίες τῆς Συμφωνικῆς Ὀρχήτρας τῆς Νέας Ὑόρκης καὶ ἐπευφήμησαν ἐνθουσιωδῶς τὸν Δημήτρη Μητρόπουλο καὶ τοὺς ἀξίους συνεργάτας του.

Ἡ πρώτη ἐκ τῶν τριῶν συναυλιῶν ἐδόθη μὲ κάθε ἐπιμέλεια τὴν 8ην μ. μ. τοῦ Σαββάτου. Πολὺ πρὸ τῆς ὥρας αὐτῆς ἡ κυκλοφορία εἰς τὸ σημεῖον αὐτὸ τῆς ὁδοῦ Σταδίου εἶχε κυριολεκτικῶς διακοπῇ, ὄχι μόνο λόγῳ τῆς προσελεύσεως τῶν θεατῶν, ἀλλὰ καὶ λόγῳ συρροῆς χιλιάδων κόσμου ποὺ ἦλθαν γιὰ νὰ ἐπευφημήσουν τὸν διάσημο συμπατριώτη μας ποὺ τιμᾷ τὸ ἑλληνικὸ ὄνομα στὴν ξένη.

Ὀλίγον πρὸ τῆς ἐνάρξεως ἔφθασαν αἱ Α. Α. Μ. Μ. οἱ Βασιλεῖς, ὁ Διάδοχος καὶ ἡ πριγκήπισσα Σοφία, συνοδευόμενοι ἀπὸ τὸν Μ. Αὐλάρχην κ. Λεβίδην, τὸν Αὐλάρχην τῆς Βασιλίσσης κ. Λελούδαν ,καὶ ἄλλους αὐλικούς. Ἐκ τῶν μελῶν τῆς Κυβερνήσεως παρίσταντο ὁ ἀντιπρόεδρος καὶ ὑπουργὸς τῆς Ἐθνικῆς Ἀμύνης κ. Παν. Κανελλόπουλος, οἱ ὑπουργοὶ κ. κ. Παπαληγούρας, Εὐταξίας, Γεροκωστόπουλος, Ράλλης, Δερτιλῆς κλπ., ὁ πρέσβυς τῶν Ἡνωμ. Πολιτειῶν κ. Κάνον, ἄλλα μέλη τοῦ διπλωματικοῦ Σώματος καὶ πλῆθος ἐκλεκτοῦ κόσμου.

Τὸ πρόγραμμα τοῦ πρώτου μέρους περιελάμβανε τὴν εἰσαγωγὴ καὶ τὸ ἀλλέγκρο ἀπὸ τὴν «Σουλτάνα» τοῦ Φρ. Κουπρέν, κατὰ διασκευὴν Μιλώ, καὶ τὴν Συμφωνία σὲ ντὸ μεῖζον ἀριθ. 2, ἔργον τοῦ Σοῦμαν.

Ὅταν ὁ Δημήτρης Μητρόπουλος — ποὺ ἡ ἀρχικὴ ἐμφάνισίς του καπεχειροκροτήθη —ἐτελείωσε τὸ πρῶτο μέρος, θύελλα χειροκροτημάτων καὶ ἐπευφημιῶν δονοῦσε τὴν αἴθουσα τοῦ «Ὀρφέως».

Πρὶν ἀρχίσῃ τὸ δεύτερο μέρος, ὁ Δημήτρης Μητρόπουλος —ποὺ μετὰ βίας συγκρατοῦσε τὴν συγκίνησίν του — μίλησε στὸ κοινόν, ἐξηγῶντας ὅτι στὸ δεύτερο μέρος ἐπῆλθεν ἀλλαγὴ καὶ ἀντὶ τῆς Συμφωνίας ἀρ. 5 τοῦ Σεργίου Προκόφιεφ, θὰ δοθῇ ἡ 10η Συμφωνία τοῦ Σοστάκοβιτς. Ἐπηκολούθησε ἡ ἐκτέλεσις τῆς Συμφωνίας αὐτῆς ποὺ ἐκάλυψε ὁλόκληρο τὸ δεύτερο μέρος.

Ὅταν ἐτελείωσε, ὁλόκληρο τὸ κοινὸν μὲ τοὺς Βασιλεῖς ἐπὶ κεφαλῆς ἐχειροκροτοῦσε καὶ ἐπευφημοῦσε. Ἡ ἀποθέωσις κράτησε ἐπὶ πολὺ κι' ἔτσι ὁ Μητρόπουλος ἐπῆρε πάλι τὴν μπαγκέττα καὶ διηύθυνε ἕνα ἔργο τοῦ Ραχμανίνωφ. Ἐπηκολούθησε νέα ἀποθέωσις καὶ νέο μπὶς ἀπὸ τὸν μαέστρο, τέλος δέ, μόλις εἰς τὰς 10.30' ἐτελείωσεν ἡ θριαμβευτικὴ αὐτὴ συναυλία ποὺ ἀπετέλεσε ἕνα μεγάλο καλλιτεχνικὸ γεγονός. Ἐννοεῖται, ὅτι ὁ Μητρόπουλος κατὰ τὴν ἀναχώρησί του ἀπὸ τὸν «Ὀρφέα» ἐπευφημήθη ἐνθουσιωδῶς ἀπὸ χιλιάδας φανατικῶν θαυμαστῶν καὶ θαυμαστριῶν ποὺ ἐξεδήλωναν μὲ κάθε τρόπο τὴν συγκίνησί τους γιὰ τὴν παρουσία του καὶ τὴν μεγάλη του τέχνη.

Διαρκούσης τῆς συναυλίας τοῦ Σαββάτου εἶχεν ἀναγγελθῆ ἀπὸ ραδιοφώνου ὅτι ὁ Δημήτρης Μητρόπουλος εἶχεν ἀποφασίσει νὰ δώσῃ μίαν ἔκτακτη συναυλία τὸ πρωῒ τῆς Κυριακῆς, δεδομένου ὅτι εἰς τὸν «Ὀρφέα» δὲν ἐχώρεσε ὁλόκληρος ὁ κόσμος ποὺ εἶχε ἀγοράσει εἰσιτήρια. Ἀργότερα μάλιστα ἀνηγγέλθη ὅτι γιὰ τὴν ἔκτακτη αὐτὴ συναυλία ὑπῆρχαν θέσεις καὶ θὰ ἐπωλοῦντο τὸ πρωῒ τῆς Κυριακῆς. Ἡ ἀναγγελία αὐτὴ συνεκίνησε πολλοὺς φιλομούσους καὶ ἔτσι τὰ ὑπολειπόμενα εἰσιτήρια τῆς ἐκτάκτου συναυλίας ἔγιναν ἀνάρπαστα.

Ἡ ἔκτακτος συναυλία τῆς Συμφωνικῆς Φιλαρμονικῆς Ὀρχήστρας τῆς Νέας Ὑόρκης ποὺ διηύθυνε πάντα ὁ Δημ. Μητρόπουλος, ἐδόθη χθὲς τὴν 11ην π.μ. στὸν «Ὀρφέα». Καὶ πάλι ἡ αἴθουσα ἐπλημμύρισε ἀπὸ τοὺς ἐνθουσιώδεις θαυμαστὰς τοῦ Μητρόπουλου. Καὶ πάλι τὸ κοινὸν τὸν ἐπευφήμησε μὲ ἐκδηλώσεις γενικῆς ἀναγνωρίσεως τοῦ μεγάλου ἔργου του.

Πρὸ τῆς ἐνάρξεως τῆς συναυλίας, ὁ Δημ. Μητρόπουλος μίλησε στὸ κοινὸν καὶ ἀνήγγειλε τὸ πρόγραμμα. Πραγματικὰ τὸ πρόγραμμα ἦταν θαυμάσιο καὶ περιελάμβανε τὴν εἰσαγωγὴ ἀπὸ τὴν «Φορτσα ντὲλ Ντεστίνο» τοῦ Βέρντι, Παραλλαγὲς τοῦ Χαῦδν σὲ διασκευὴ Μπράμς, τοὺς ἑλληνικοὺς χοροὺς τοῦ Σκαλκώτα καὶ τὴν 3ην Συμφωνία τοῦ Μπετόβεν, τὴν γνωστὴν ὡς «Ἡρωϊκήν». Ὅταν ὁ Μητρόπουλος ἐτελείωσε τὴν ἀναγγελίαν τοῦ προγράμματος, τὸ κοινὸν τὸν ἀνευφήμησε μὲ ἐκδηλώσεις ἀληθινοῦ παραληρήματος.

Ἡ ἐκτέλεσις τοῦ θαυμασίου αὐτοῦ προγράμματος ὑπῆρξεν ἀριστουργηματική, εἰς δὲ τὸ τέλος τοῦ α' μέρους τὸ κοινὸν ποὺ κατέκλυζε τὸν «Ὀρφέα» ἐχειροκρότησε ἐπὶ δέκα λεπτά. Ἰδιαιτέραν ἐντύπωσι στὸ πρῶτο μέρος ἔκαναν οἱ Ἑλληνικοὶ Χοροὶ τοῦ Σκαλκώτα.

Στὸ δεύτερο μέρος ὁ Μητρόπουλος μὲ τὴν ἀπαράμιλλη τέχνη του, διηύθυνε τὴν Ἡρωϊκὴ Συμφωνία τοῦ Μπετόβεν. Ἡ θαυμασία αὐτὴ ἐκτέλεσις ἔδωσε τὴν ἀφορμὴ νέας ἀποθεώσεως καὶ νέων χειροκροτημάτων ποὺ δὲν σταμάτησαν. Ὁ Μητρόπουλος ὑπεχρεώθη νὰ διευθύνῃ ἕνα ἀπὸ τοὺς Ἑλληνικοὺς Χοροὺς τοῦ Σκαλκώτα καὶ αὐτὸ δὲν ἦτο ἀρκετὸ γιὰ νὰ ἱκανοποιήσῃ τοὺς θαυμαστάς του. Ἐπέμεναν νὰ χειροκροτοῦν δαιμονιωδῶς, ὅταν ὁ Δημήτρης Μητρόπουλος, γυρίζοντας πρὸς τὸ κοινό, εἶπε:

—Παρακαλῶ νὰ μὲ ἀφήσετε νὰ φύγω, γιατὶ μὲ περιμένει ὁ Βασιλεύς.

Ὅταν ἡ θύελλα τῶν νέων χειροκροτημάτων ἐκόπασε, ὁ Μητρόπουλος προσέθεσε χαριτολογῶν:

— Καὶ μοῦ ἔχει καὶ καλὸ φαΐ.

Μὲ αὐτὰ μπόρεσε ὁ μεγάλος μαέστρος νὰ...διασωθῇ ἀπὸ τοὺς θαυμαστάς του καὶ ἀνῆλθεν εἰς τὰ Ἀνάκτορα τῆς Δεκελείας, ὅπου παρεκάθησεν στὸ βασιλικὸ πρόγευμα.

Χθὲς τὸ βράδυ ἐδόθη ἡ τρίτη καὶ τελευταία συναυλία τῆς Συμφωνικῆς Φιλαρμονικῆς Ὀρχήστρας τῆς Νέας Ὑόρκης. Φυσικά, ἐφόσον ἡ ἀκαταστασία τοῦ καιροῦ ἐξηκολούθησε, καὶ ἡ τελευταία αὐτὴ συναυλία ἐδόθη στὸν «Ὀρφέα». Οἱ Βασιλεῖς, ἡ Βασιλικὴ Οἰκογένεια, τὰ μέλη τῆς Κυβερνήσεως καὶ τὰ μέλη τοῦ Διπλωματικοῦ Σώματος ἔτιμησαν τὴν τρίτην συναυλίαν καὶ κατεχειροκρότησαν τὸν διάσημο Ἕλληνα ἀρχιμουσικὸ καὶ τοὺς Ἀμερικανοὺς συνεργάτας του.

Τὸ χθεσινοβραδυνὸ πρόγραμμα περιελάμβανε τὴν Εἰσαγωγὴ ἀπὸ τὸν «Φράϊσουτς» τοῦ Βέμπερ, τὴν Συμφωνία ἀριθ. 5 εἰς Ρὲ μεῖζον, Ἔργον 107 τοῦ Μέντελσον, τοὺς τέσσαρας Ἑλληνικοὺς Χοροὺς τοῦ Σκαλκώτα καὶ στὸ δεύτερο μέρος τὴν Συμφωνία ἀρ. 2 εἰς Ρὲ μεῖζον, Ἔργον 73 τοῦ Μπράμς.

Ὅταν τελείωσε ἡ χθεσινοβραδυνὴ συναυλία, ἡ ἀποθέωσις τοῦ Δημήτρη Μητροπούλου ὑπῆρξε πλήρης. Ὁ «Ὀρφεὺς» συνεκλονίσθη ὄχι μόνον ἀπὸ χειροκροτήματα, ἀλλὰ καὶ ἀπὸ ἐπευφημίας καὶ ζητωκραυγάς. Σπανίως ἕνας μεγάλος καλλιτέχνης εἶδε τέτοιες ἐκδηλώσεις θαυμασμοῦ καὶ λατρείας ἀπὸ ὅσες εἶδε ὁ Μητρόπουλος στὴν Ἑλλάδα κατὰ τὶς τρεῖς ἡμέρες ποὺ πέρασαν.

Ὅταν ἀργά, μετὰ τὶς δέκα, ὁ Μητρόπουλος ἐτελείωσε τὸ μεγάλο ἔργο του ἦταν κατάκοπος. Ἀλλὰ στὰ μάτια του ἔλαμπε ἡ ἱκανοποίησις τοῦ μεγάλου θριάμβου, αὐτοῦ ποὺ λίγοι ἄνθρωποι τὸν χαίρονται στὸν κόσμο.

Εἰκονίζει τὴ θεὰ-νύμφη «Νίκης τῆς Τερίνας», πλαισιωμένην ἀπὸ κλάδον ἐλαίας. Τὰ μαλλιά της εἶναι τυλιγμένα μὲ χάρι καὶ συγκροτοῦνται μὲ μιὰ κορδέλλα, μὲ λεπτὸ κέντημα. Μόνον σὲ ὡρισμένα ἀθηναϊκὰ βάζα, μπορεῖ νὰ συναντήσῃ κανεὶς κεφαλὲς ζωγραφισμένες μὲ τόση λεπτότητα καὶ χάρι. Χαράκτης καὶ στὰ δυὸ νομίσματα — τῆς Ἀθηνᾶς καὶ τῆς Νίκης — εἶναι ὁ ἴδιος καλλιτέχνης. ΕΔΗΛΩΣΕΝ ΟΤΙ ΟΛΑ ΤΑ ΟΦΕΙΛΕΙ ΕΙΣ ΚΑΤΑΠΛΗΚΤΙΚΗΝ ΤΥΧΗΝ

ΤΟΥ ΚΑΛΛΙΤΕΧΝΙΚΟΥ ΣΥΝΕΡΓΑΤΟΥ ΤΗΣ «ΑΘΗΝΑ·Ι·ΚΗΣ» κ. ΓΙΩΡΓΟΥ ΜΑΛΛΟΥΧΟΥ

Η παρουσία τοῦ Δημήτρη Μητροπούλου καὶ οἱ συναυλίες ποὺ ἔδωσε — τρεῖς ἀντὶ τῶν δύο ποὺ εἶχαν προσδιορισθῆ ἀρχικῶς — ἀπετέλεσαν καλλιτεχνικὸν γεγονὸς τὸ ὁποῖον κρατεῖ ἐν ζωηρᾷ συγκινήσει τὸν φιλότεχνον κόσμον τῆς πρωτευούσης, μολονότι σήμερα τὸ πρωῒ ὁ διακεκριμένος μουσικὸς ἔφυγε διὰ τὸ Λονδῖνον. Ὅλο τὸ ἀπόγευμα τοῦ Σαββάτου οἱ εὐτυχεῖς κάτοχοι εἰσιτηρίων τῆς πρώτης συναυλίας παρακολουθοῦσαν μὲ ἀγωνίαν τὴν ἐξέλιξιν τοῦ καιροῦ καὶ τό... ραδιόφωνο τὸ ὁποῖον τὴν ὅλην ἐσπερινὴν ἀνήγγειλεν ὅτι ὁριστικῶς ἡ πρώτη ἐμφάνισις τῆς Φιλαρμονικῆς τῆς Νέας Ὑόρκης θὰ ἐγίνετο εἰς τὸν «Ὀρφέα». Ἔτσι πλέον τῶν χιλίων ἀφροατῶν ποὺ εἶχαν ἀγοράσει εἰσιτήρια γιὰ τὰ βραχάκια κατ' ἀνάγκην δὲν μποροῦσαν νὰ παρακολουθήσουν τὴν συναυλίαν. Ὅταν τὸ ἐμαθε ὁ Μητροπούλος προσεφέρθη χάριν αὐτῶν νὰ δώσῃ χθὲς τὸ πρωῒ μίαν ἔκτακτον συναυλίαν εἰς τὸν «Ὀρφέα». Ἐν τῷ μεταξὺ κατὰ τὴν πρώτην του ἐπικοινωνίαν μὲ τὸ ἀθηναϊκὸ Κοινὸ κατὰ τὸ βράδυ τοῦ Σαββάτου ὁ κορυφαῖος Ἕλλην ἀρχιμουσικὸς ἀπεθεώθη κυριολεκτικῶς ἀπὸ τὸ πυκνότατον ἀκροατήριον. Παρευρέθησαν οἱ Βασιλεῖς καὶ ὁ Διάδοχος, οἱ πλεῖστοι τῶν ὑπουργῶν, τὰ μέλη τοῦ διπλωματικοῦ Σώματος καὶ ὁ γνωστότερος ἀθηναϊκὸς κόσμος. Ἦταν τόσο ἐπίμονοι καὶ θερμαὶ αἱ ἐκδηλώσεις ὥστε ὁ Μητρόπουλος ἔπαιξε δύο μπὶς ἐκτὸς προγράμματος. Ἐπίσης ὑποχρεώθηκε ν' ἀλλάξῃ τὸ πρόγραμμα καὶ εἰς τὸ δεύτερο μέρος ἀντὶ τῆς συμφωνίας τοῦ Προκόφιεφ — ποὺ ἡ ἐκτέλεσής της ἀπαιτοῦσε πιάνο τὸ ὁποῖον δὲν ὑπῆρχε στὸν «Ὀρφέα» — ἡ Φιλαρμονικὴ ἐξετέλεσε τὴν 10η Συμφωνία τοῦ Ρώσου συνθέτου Σοστακοβίτς. Τὴν ἀλλαγὴν ἀνήγγειλεν ὁ ἴδιος ὁ Μητρόπουλος πρὸς τὸ Κοινὸν ἀφοῦ προηγουμένως ἐζήτησε συγνώμην διότι ὡρισμένα μέλη τῆς ὀρχήστρας δὲν παρουσιάσθηκαν ντυμένα ὅπως ἔπρεπε, διότι τὰ πράγματά τους εἶχαν σταλῆ εἰς τὸ Ὠδεῖον Ἡρῴδου Ἀττικοῦ μὲ τὴν ἐντύπωσιν ὅτι θὰ ἐγίνετο ἐκεῖ ἡ συναυλία. Οἱ Βασιλεῖς συνεχάρησαν θερμῶς τὸν διαπρεπῆ καλλιτέχνην, ὁ ὁποῖος τιμητικῶς προσεκλήθη καὶ παρεκάθησε χθὲς τὴν μεσημβρίαν εἰς τὸ βασιλικὸν πρόγευμα. Τὸ γεγονὸς τὸ ἀνέφερε πάλι ὁ ἴδιος ὁ Μητρόπουλος, ὁ ὁποῖος ὡμίλησε καὶ χθὲς τὸ πρωῒ πρὸς τοὺς ἀκροατὰς τῆς δευτέρας συναυλίας, οἱ ὁποῖοι ἐπέμεναν νὰ παίξῃ καὶ δεύτερο μπὶς ἀφοῦ ἔκανε ἕνα μετὰ τὸ τέλος τοῦ προγράμματος. Ἐπευφημούμενος εἶπεν ὅτι ζητεῖ συγγνώμην διότι πρέπει νὰ φύγῃ γιατὶ τὸν περιμένει...καλὸ ταῖ. Ἂς σημειωθῆ ὅτι καὶ κατὰ τὴν πρωϊνὴν συναυλίαν ἡ αἴθουσα τοῦ «Ὀρφέως» εἶχε πυκνοτάτη συγκέντρωσι καὶ σχεδὸν ὅλα τὰ εἰσιτήρια ποὺ ὑπελείποντο γιὰ νὰ συμπληρωθῆ ὁ ἀριθμὸς τῶν θέσεων τοῦ «Ὀρφέως» μετὰ τὴν προσέλευσιν ἐκείνων ποὺ εἶχαν εἰσιτήρια τῆς πρώτης συναυλίας διετέθη σαν σχεδὸν ἐξ ὁλοκλήρου. Ὁ Ἕλλην ἀρχιμουσικὸς ὡμίλησε καὶ πάλιν ὁ ἴδιος πρὸς τὸ Κοινὸν προτοῦ ἀρχίσῃ ἡ συναυλία καὶ ἀνήγγειλε προσωπικῶς τὸ πρόγραμμά της. Παραλλήλως ἐξέφρασε τὴν λύπην του διότι ἡ ὀρχήστρα δὲν εἶνε δυνατὸν νὰ παραστῇ τὴν διαμονήν της εἰς τρόπον ὥστε νὰ ἱκανοποιηθοῦν καὶ ἐκεῖνοι ποὺ εἶχαν εἰσιτήρια γιὰ τὴν τρίτη συναυλία καὶ δὲν θὰ ἐχωροῦσαν πάλιν εἰς τὸν «Ὀρφέα».

Πανηγυρική, τέλος, ὑπῆρξεν ἡ χθεσινοβραδυνὴ τρίτη καὶ τελευταία συναυλία τῆς Φιλαρμονικῆς ὀρχήστρας τῆς Νέας Ὑόρκης, ἡ ὁποία λόγω τῆς βροχῆς ἐδόθη καὶ αὐτὴ εἰς τὸν «Ὀρφέα». Παρευρέθησαν καὶ πάλιν οἱ Βασιλεῖς καὶ ὁ Διάδοχος καὶ πλῆθος ἄλλων ἐπισήμων. Τὸ ἀσφυκτικὰ γεμᾶτο θέατρο ἐπεφύλαξεν ἀποθεωτικὰς καὶ πάλιν ἐκδηλώσεις πρὸς τὸν μεγάλον καλλιτέχνην, ὁ ὁποῖος ὑπεχρεώθη στὸ τέλος νὰ παίξῃ δύο μπὶς, μιὰ εἰσαγωγὴ τοῦ Καβαλέφσκυ καὶ ἕνα χορὸ τοῦ Σκαλκώττα.

ΕΙΣ ΤΟ ΩΔΕΙΟΝ ΑΘΗΝΩΝ

Χθὲς τὸ ἀπόγευμα στὶς 5, παρουσία τῶν ὑπουργῶν Παιδείας καὶ Οἰκονομικῶν κ. κ. Γεροκωστοπούλου καὶ Εὐταξίας, ὡργάνωσε δεξίωσιν πρὸς τιμὴν τοῦ διασήμου ἀρχιμουσικοῦ τὸ Ὠδεῖον Ἀθηνῶν, ἀπὸ τὸ ὁποῖον προῆλθε ὁ Δημήτρης Μητρόπουλος καὶ ἀπὸ τὸ ὁποῖον ἀπεφοίτησε στὰ 1919, τιμηθεὶς τότε καὶ μὲ χρυσοῦν μετάλλιον. Εἰς τὴν δεξίωσιν ἐπάνω μὲν εἰς τὴν σκηνὴν τῆς αἰθούσης τῶν συναυλιῶν τοῦ Ὠδείου ἔλαβαν θέσιν ὁ σύλλογος τῶν καθηγητῶν καὶ τὸ διδακτικὸν προσωπικὸν τοῦ Ἱδρύματος, καθὼς ἐπίσης καὶ τὰ μέλη τοῦ διοικητικοῦ συμβουλίου. Εἰς τὴν πλατεῖαν ἦσαν οἱ γνωστότεροι ἐκπρόσωποι τοῦ μουσικοῦ κόσμου, συνθέται καὶ κριτικοί, καθὼς ἐπίσης καὶ οἱ διπλωματοῦχοι τοῦ Ὠδείου, εἰς δὲ τὸν ἔξω στην εἶχαν τοποθετηθῆ οἱ σημερινοὶ μαθηταί του. Ὀλίγον μετὰ τὴν 5ην ἀπογευματινὴν ἐνεφανίσθη ὁ τιμώμενος διαπρεπὴς καλλιτέχνης, ὁ ὁποῖος καὶ ἔγινε δεκτὸς μὲ θύελλα χειροκροτημάτων. Ὁ Μητρόπουλος ἔλαβε θέσιν εἰς τὸ κέντρον τῶν καθηγητῶν τοῦ Ὠδείου, περιστοιχούμενος ἀπὸ τοὺς κ.κ. Φαραντάτον, Σκλάβον καὶ τὸν μαέστρον Βαβαγιάννην. Εἰς τὴν ἐναντι πλευρὰ εἶχε καθήσει τὸ διοικητικὸν συμβούλιον, ὁ πρόεδρος τοῦ ὁποίου κ. Ἀρ. Κυριακίδης προσεφώνησε τὸν Μητρόπουλο. Ὁ κ. Κυριακίδης, ἀφοῦ ἐξέφρασε τὴν συγκίνησιν ὅλων τῶν παραγόντων τοῦ Ὠδείου Ἀθηνῶν, διότι ὁ παλαιὸς μαθητὴς του ἔφθασε εἰς τὶς κορυφὲς τῆς Τέχνης καὶ ἔχει γίνει παγκόσμιος δόξα, ὑπενθύμισε τὰ χρόνια τῶν σπουδῶν του, τὶς διπλωματικές του ἐξετάσεις, τὴν ἐκτέλεσιν τοῦ πρώτου του ἔργου μὲ τὴν μαθητικὴν ὀρχήστραν τοῦ Ὠδείου στὴν αἴθουσα, ὁπου ἐδίδετο ἡ δεξίωσις, τὴν παρουσίασι ἀπὸ μέρους του εἰς ἡλικίαν 24 ἐτῶν τῆς ὄπερας του «Βεατρίκη», τὶς ἀνώτερες σπουδές του εἰς τὴν Γερμανίαν καὶ διαδοχικῶς τὰ διάφορα στάδια τῆς ἐξελίξεως καὶ ἀνόδου του μέχρι τῆς ἐποχῆς ποὺ ἔφυγε εἰς τὴν Ἀμερικήν. Ὁ κ. Κυριακίδης εἰς τὴν κατακλεῖδα τῆς ὡραίας του προσφωνήσεως ἀνέφερε ὅτι τὸ Ὠδεῖο Ἀθηνῶν προσφέρει εἰς τὸν παλαιόν του μαθητὴν μιὰ ἀσημένια ἀναμνηστικὴ πλάκα. Καὶ κατέληξεν:

— Τώρα, μέσα σ' αὐτὸ τὸ γνώριμό σας κτίριο, ποὺ φαίνεται παλιό, ἀλλὰ ἔχει ὅλη τὴν δύναμι καὶ τὴν ζωή, ποὺ τοῦ δίνει ἡ παράδοσις, τὸ παρελθόν του καὶ ἡ σημερινὴ ψυχὴ τῶν πρωτεργατῶν του, μέσα στὸ Ὠδεῖον ἀπὸ τὸ ὁποῖον ἐβγήκατε καὶ σεῖς, μὲ συγκίνησι σᾶς προσφέρομεν αὐτὴν τὴν μικρὴν ἀναμνηστικὴ πλάκα, ἀκατάλυτο δεῖγμα τῶν δεσμῶν μας, ποὺ μπορεῖ διακριτικὰ νὰ εἶνε πάντα κοντά σας. Θὰ σᾶς θυμίζῃ τὸ Ὠδεῖον Ἀθηνῶν, «παραστάτη τῶν πρώτων δημάτων ποὺ σᾶς ὡδήγησαν στὴν δόξα». Στὸ ἀσῆμι ἐπάνω ἔχομε χαραγμένο παρακάτω, ὅτι τὸ Ὠδεῖον Ἀθηνῶν ἀπονέμει εἰς τὸν Δημήτρη Μητρόπουλο τὸ χρυσοῦν μετάλλιον τῆς τιμῆς καὶ τῆς ἀριστείας.

Ὁ Μητρόπουλος χαιρετᾶ τὸ Κοινόν, ποὺ τὸν ἀποθεώνει κατὰ τὴν προχθεσινὴν πρώτην συναυλίαν τῆς Φιλαρμονικῆς Ὀρχήστρας τῆς Νέας Ὑόρκης.

Κάτω: Ὁ διαπρεπὴς ἀρχιμουσικός, ἐνῶ εἰσέρχεται εἰς τὴν αἴθουσαν τοῦ Ὠδείου Ἀθηνῶν κατὰ τὴν χθεσινὴν πρὸς τιμήν του δεξίωσιν καὶ χειροκροτεῖται ἀπὸ τοὺς καθηγητὰς τοῦ Ὠδείου.

Μιὰ παλιὰ φωτογραφία τοῦ Δημήτρη Μητρόπουλου μὲ τὴ μητέρα του

Τὸ ΑΠΟΓΕΥΜΑ τῆς περασμένης Παρασκευῆς, περιμένοντας τὸν Μητρόπουλο στὸ ἀεροδρόμιο τοῦ Ἑλληνικοῦ, εἴχαμε τὴν εὐκαιρία νὰ γνωρίσουμε μερικοὺς ἀπὸ τοὺς συγγενεῖς τοῦ μεγάλου Ἕλληνος μαέστρου καὶ νὰ τοὺς ἀκούσουμε νὰ διηγοῦνται διάφορα ἀνέκδοτα ἀπὸ τὴ ζωή του.

Μιὰ ἐξαδέλφη του, π.χ., θυμήθηκε ἕνα διασκεδαστικὸ περιστατικὸ ποὺ συνέβη ἕνα κυριακάτικο μεσημέρι στὸ Παλιὸ Φάληρο, ὅπου ἔμενε τότε ὁ Μητρόπουλος μὲ τὴν μητέρα του. Ὁ μαέστρος διαζόταν νὰ πάῃ στὸ Ὠδεῖο Ἀθηνῶν καὶ κάθησε πρῶτος στὸ τραπέζι, ζητώντας νὰ τὸν σερβίρουν, ἐνῶ συγχρόνως διάβαζε μιὰ ἐφημερίδα. Στὸ τραπέζι εἶχαν τοποθετηθῆ ἕξη σεβδίτσια καὶ φυσιτὰ κι' ἕξη πετσέτες. Ἐνῶ, λοιπόν, ὁ μαέστρος ζητοῦσε κάθε τόσο νὰ τοῦ φέρουν τὸ φαγητό, γιατὶ διαζόταν, ἐπαιρνε ἀφηρημένος ἀπὸ τὸ τραπέζι μιὰ-μιὰ τὶς πετσέτες καὶ τὶς ἔβαζε μπροστὰ στὸ στῆθος του τὴ μιὰ ἐπάνω στὴν ἄλλη. Ὅταν κατόπιν σερβιρίστηκε τὸ φαγητὸ καὶ κάθησαν καὶ ὅλοι οἱ ἄλλοι νὰ φᾶνε, ἀναζήτησαν τὶς πετσέτες τους. Ἀλλὰ οἱ πετσέτες εἶχαν γίνει ἀφαντες! Καὶ μόνο ὅταν κύτταξαν τὸ στῆθος τοῦ Μητροπούλου κατάλαβαν τί εἶχε συμβῆ. Ὅν εἶδαν νὰ τρώῃ, ἀφηρημένος πάλι, μὲ ἕξη πετσέτες μπροστὰ στὸ στῆθος του. Τοῦ ἐπῆσαν, λοιπόν, δικαιωματικῶς τὶς πέντε καὶ τοῦ ἀφησαν τὴ μιὰ ποὺ τοῦ... ἀνῆκε!

Μερικοὶ ἀπὸ τοὺς συγγενεῖς αὐτοὺς θυμήθηκαν πόσο εὐσεβὴς ἦταν νέος ὁ Μητρόπουλος καὶ εἶπαν πὼς ἂν δὲν γινόταν μουσικός, θὰ ἦταν σήμερα κληρικός. Ἀνεφέρθη δὲ σχετικὰ καὶ τὸ ἑξῆς ποὺ ἔχει ὁ ἴδιος ὁ μαέστρος σημειώσει κάπου: «Ἡ κλίσις μου πρὸς τὴν μουσικὴν μὲ ἀπορρόφησε ἀπὸ τὴν θρησκείαν...». Σ' αὐτό, μάλιστα, ἀποδίδεται τὸ γεγονὸς ὅτι στὴν ἀρχὴ καταπιάστηκε μὲ τὴν ἐκκλησιαστικὴ μουσικὴ καὶ ὅτι ἔπαιζε θαυμάσια ἐκκλησιαστικὸ ὄργανο.

Ὅταν κατόπιν ἡ θεία του θυμήθηκε τὸν μαέστρο σὲ ἡλικία τριῶν χρόνων νὰ παίζῃ πιάνο μὲ δυὸ δακτυλάκια, ὁ θεῖος του δὲν τὸ ἄκουσε ἀπὸ συγκίνησι. Μίλησαν τότε καὶ γιὰ τὸν γαμὸ τῆς ἀδελφῆς του Δημήτρη Μητροπούλου, τῆς Ἑλένης, μιᾶς δεκαεφτάχρονης κοπέλλας, ποὺ πέθανε στὴν Ἐλβετία. Τὶς μέρες ἐκείνες ὁ μαέστρος ἔδινε συναυλίες στὸ Βερολῖνο καὶ τοῦ ἦταν ἀνθρωπίνως ἀδύνατον νὰ συνοδεύσῃ τὴν ἀδελφή του στὴν τελευταία της κατοικία. Τὸ βράδυ, λοιπόν, τῆς ἡμέρας τοῦ ἐνταφιασμοῦ της ὁ Μητρόπουλος διηύθυνε τὴν ὀρχήστρα του μὲ δουκωμένα μάτια. Ἡ μεγάλη λύπη του μετουσιώθηκε σὲ μιὰ ὑπέροχη ἑρμηνεία, ὁμοια τῆς ὁποίας δὲν πρόκειται ἄλλη φορὰ νὰ ἐπανακούσουν οἱ ἀκροατὰ του... Γι' αὐτὴν τὴν Ἑλένη, ποὺ ἔφυγε τόσο πρόωρα, ἔλεγαν, ἐπειδὴ ἦταν μεγάλο πιανιστικὸ ταλέντο, ὅτι «θὰ γινόταν ἕνας δεύτερος Μητρόπουλος».

Κάποτε, πάλι, ποὺ ὁ Μητρόπουλος ἐξήτασε στὸ Ὠδεῖο Ἀθηνῶν τὴν ἐξαδέλφη του Ἀγγελικὴ Ἀναγνωστοπούλου — Μιχαλακοπούλου, ἐκείνη κάθησε στὸ πιάνο τρέμοντας ἀπὸ τὸν φόβο της. Μπροστά του δὲν μποροῦσε νὰ παίξῃ ποτὲ χωρὶς τράκ. Γι' αὐτὸ ὁ Μητρόπουλος ἀπομακρύνθηκε καὶ τῆς ἐγύρισε τὴν πλάτη γιὰ νὰ μὴν τὴν βλέπῃ. Ὅταν, λοιπόν, ἡ μαθήτρια ἄρχισε νὰ παίζῃ, ὁ μαέστρος, ἀφηρημένος, ρώτησε τὸν κ. Φίλ. Οἰκονομίδη:

— Μὰ ποιὸς παίζει τόσο ὡραῖα;

Ἀπόρησε ἐκεῖνος:

— Ποιὸς θέλει νὰ παίζῃ; Ἡ ἐξαδέλφη σου!...

— Μπρέ, τί μοῦ λές;...

Κι' ὁ Μητρόπουλος δὲν πίστευε στ' αὐτιά του καὶ στὰ μάτια του. Γιατὶ ἡ ἐξαδέλφη του εἶχε ἀποκτήσει τὴν ψυχραιμία της καὶ ἔπαιξε θαυμάσια, χωρὶς ἐκεῖνο τὸ τράκ ποὺ τῆς δημιουργοῦσε τὸ αὐστηρὸ βλέμμα τοῦ μαέστρου...

Ἀναφέρθηκε ἐπίσης ὅτι στὸν Μητρόπουλο δὲν ἄρεσαν ποτὲ τὰ γράμματα τοῦ σχολείου καὶ ὅτι τὸ Γυμνάσιο τὸ ἔβγαλε μὲ χίλια βάσανα.

Σημειωτέον ὅμως ὅτι ἀπέκτησε μόνος του μιὰ τεραστία μόρφωσι καὶ ὅτι ἐκτὸς τῶν σπουδῶν του στὸ Ὠδεῖο ποὺ παρακολουθοῦσε μὲ μεγάλο ζῆλο, μιλάει θαυμάσια πέντε γλῶσσες: Γαλλικά, γερμανικά, ἰταλικά, Ἱσπανικὰ καὶ ἀγγλικά.

ΣΤΟ ΔΡΟΜΟ ΤΗΣ ΖΩΗΣ

ΜΗΤΡΟΠΟΥΛΟΣ

Ποτέ μου δὲν εἶχα καταλάβει τόσο βαθειά, τόσο ζωντανά, πὼς ἡ ὀρχήστρα ἀποτελεῖ πραγματικὰ ἕ ν α ὄ ρ γ α ν ο, ὅσο τὸ Σάββατο τὸ βράδυ, ὅταν παρακολουθοῦσα ἀπ' τὸ ραδιόφωνο τὴ συναυλία τῆς Φιλαρμονικῆς τῆς Νέας Ὑόρκης μὲ διευθυντὴ τὸν Δημήτρη Μητρόπουλο.

Καὶ δὲν ἦταν ὁ τέλειος συγχρονισμός, ποὺ ἔδινε αὐτὴ τὴν ἐντύπωσι τῆς ἑνότητας, ἀλλὰ κάτι πολὺ περισσότερο, πολὺ πιὸ βαθύ: μιὰ συνοχὴ στὸ αἴσθημα καὶ στὸ χρῶμα, στὸν ἐσωτερικὸ παλμό, χαρίζει σ' αὐτὴν τὴν ὀρχήστρα, τὴν ἐλαστικότητα, τὴν ἄνεσι καὶ τὴν ἐλευθερία, ποὺ μονάχα μπορεῖ νὰ ἔχῃ ὁ ἕνας ἄνθρωπος ὅταν παίζῃ ὁ ἴδιος στὸ ἀγαπημένο του ὄργανο καὶ ξέρει νὰ τὸ τιθασσεύῃ καὶ νὰ τοῦ ἐπιβάλλῃ, ἐντελῶς αὐθόρμητα, τυφλὴ ὑπακοή.

Τὴν Κυριακὴ ἀπὸ μιὰ θέσι στὸν «Ὀρφέα» ἀπ' ὅπου ἔβλεπα ὄχι μονάχα τὶς κινήσεις, μὰ καὶ τὸ πρόσωπό του, μπόρεσα νὰ ἐξηγήσω πῶς ὁ Μητρόπουλος πετυχαίνει αὐτὸ τὸ θαῦμα. Κοιτάζοντας τὴν ἔκφρασί του καὶ μόνον, ἀκόμα κι' ἂν δὲν ἄκουγες θὰ ἤξερες τί λέει τὸ κάθε ἔργο. Τόσο ὁλοκληρωτικὰ δίνεται στὴ μουσική, ὥστε θὰ μποροῦσε κανεὶς νὰ πῇ πὼς στὸ πρόσωπό του ζωγραφίζεται ἡ μορφή της.

Ἀληθινὰ εἶναι συγκλονιστικὸ τὸ θέαμα ποὺ προσφέρει ὁ Μητρόπουλος ὅταν διευθύνῃ τὴν ὀρχήστρα του. Κάποιες στιγμὲς μοιάζει νὰ προσεύχεται — πιστὸς μιᾶς πανανθρώπινης θρησκείας, ποὺ ἔχει πέσει σ' ἔκστασι καλῶς ἡ ψυχή του ἔφτασε πολὺ κοντὰ στὸ Θεό. Κι' ὅλοτε εἶν' ἕνας Ποσειδώνας ποὺ ἀναταράζει τὴν ὀρχήστρα μὲ τὴν μπαγέτα του καὶ ξεσηκώνει τὰ μουσικὰ κύματα σὲ ἀπίθανο ὕψος.

Πῶς ξέρει νὰ τὴν γαληνεύῃ πάλι αὐτὴ τὴν ἀγριεμένη θάλασσα! Καὶ πόσο ὑποβλητικὲς καὶ ἀρμονικὲς οἱ κινήσεις του. Ὅλες του οἱ κινήσεις. Ὅταν τὸν βλέπῃ κανεὶς νὰ σείῃ τὴ γροθιά του ἢ νὰ χαμηλώνῃ τὰ ὑψωμένα του μπράτσα ἔτσι ἁργὰ-ἁργά, ἀκούει, λὲς καλλίτερα τὰ κρεσέντα καὶ τὰ ντιμινουέντα.

Καὶ κείνη ἡ κίνησι ὁλόκληρου τοῦ κορμιοῦ του στοὺς ἑλληνικοὺς χορούς τοῦ Σκαλκώττα, εἶχε μιὰ πραγματικὰ ἑ λ λ η ν ι κὴ γραμμή, ποὺ μᾶς φανέρωσε πιὸ καθαρὰ ἀπὸ κάθε του συγκίνησι, ὅτι εἶναι παιδὶ τῆς Ἑλλάδας κι' ὅσο κι' ἂν ζῇ μακρυά της, ἡ ψυχή του ἀπομένει δική μας.

Ἂς εἶναι τρισευλογημένος ποὺ μᾶς ἦλθε. Τὸν εὐχαριστοῦμε ἀπ' ὅλη μας τὴν καρδιά, μαζὶ μὲ τοὺς τόσο διαλεχτούς, τόσο ἀξίους μουσικούς του, ποὺ παίζουν σὰν μαγνητισμένοι ἀπὸ τὸ βλέμμα του. Αἱ ἑρμηνεῖαι του, ποὺ ἔχουν φθάσει σὲ τέτοιο βαθμὸ τελειότητος, ὥστε νὰ φαίνωνται ἐλευθερωμένες ἀπὸ τὸ βάρος τῆς τεχνικῆς, ἀπ' τὰ δεσμὰ τῆς πειθαρχίας εἶν' ἕνα ἀγνὸ ἀπόσταγμα μουσικῆς. Γι' αὐτὸ κατώρθωσαν νὰ μᾶς ἀνεβάσουν στὴ σφαῖρα τοῦ ὀνείρου, βγάζοντάς μας, γιὰ λίγο μέσα ἀπ' τὸν κλοιό, ποὺ βαρειές, σκοτεινὲς ἔγνοιες ἔχουν δημιουργήσει αὐτὸν τὸν καιρὸ γύρω μας.

Η ΓΝΩΜΗ ΤΗΣ ΚΡΙΤΙΚΗΣ

Η ΠΡΩΤΗ ΣΥΝΑΥΛΙΑ ΤΗΣ ΦΙΛΑΡΜΟΝΙΚΗΣ

ΤΟΥ ΑΚΑΔΗΜΑ·Ι·ΚΟΥ ΜΑΝΩΛΗ ΚΑΛΟΜΟΙΡΗ

Στὰ 1924, ὅταν ὁ Μητρόπουλος γύρισε ἀπὸ τὴ Γερμανία καὶ ἐπρόκειτο νὰ διευθύνῃ γιὰ πρώτη φορὰ μπρὸς στὸ ἀθηναϊκὸ Κοινὸ τὴν πάλαι ποτὲ ὀρχήστρα τοῦ Ἑλληνικοῦ Ὠδείου ἔγραψα στὸν «Ἐλεύθερο Τύπο» γιὰ τὸ νέο τότε Μητράπουλο μεταξὺ ἄλλων «σὺκ ἐγὼ εἰμι τὸ φῶς» ἀλλὰ ὁ ὀπίσω μου ἐρχόμενος».

Τὴν ἐποχὴ ἐκείνη ἐθεωρήθηκαν τὰ λόγια μου αὐτὰ σὰν ἕνα σχῆμα λόγου ἐπιτηδευμένης μετριοφροσύνης.

Σήμερα ποὺ τὰ ἀναπολῶ καὶ τὰ σκέπτομαι τὰ βρίσκω σὰν ὑπερβολικὰ ἐγωϊστικὰ γιὰ τὸ ἄτομό μου. Γιατὶ ὁ δρόμος ὁ καλλιτεχνικὸς ποὺ ὁ Ἕλλην μαέστρος ἐτράβηξε τὸν ἔβγαλε ὡς τὶς ψηλότερες κορφὲς, ὡς τὶς ἀπάτητες κορφὲς τῆς θείας Τέχνης κι' ἀπὸ κεῖ ἀπάνω στέκεται ἥρωας καὶ νικητὴς τόσον ἀπόμακρα ἀπὸ ἐμᾶς τοὺς κοινοὺς θνητοὺς ποὺ προσπαθοῦμε νὰ οἰκοδομήσουμε λιθαράκι πρὸς λιθαράκι ἕνα μικρὸ καὶ ταπεινὸ ναὸ τῆς Τέχνης τῆς ἑλληνικῆς, ὥστε νὰ μὴ χωράῃ καμμιὰ σύγκρισις. καμμιὰ προφητεία γιὰ τὴν τρισένδοξη σταδιοδρομία ἑνὸς τέτοιου ἀριστοτέχνη τῶν ἤχων καὶ τῶν ρυθμῶν παρὰ μόνο ὁ θαυμασμὸς καὶ ἡ ἀγάπη μας γιὰ τὴν εὐτυχία ποὺ μᾶς χαρίζει μὲ τὸ μουσικό του δαιμόνιο.

Βέβαια, ὅταν ἐγὼ ὡραματιζόμουν τὸ νέο τότε Μητρόπουλο σὰν τὸ Μεσσία τῆς μουσικῆς μας, τὸν ὡραματιζόμουν σὰν τὸν Μεσσία καὶ τὸν Ἥρωα τῆς ἑλληνικῆς Μούσας, ἐκεῖνον ποὺ θὰ ἔβλεπε φτερὰ στὰ ὄνειρα καὶ τὶς ἐλπίδες μας γιὰ τὴν ὁλοκλήρωσι τῆς ἑλληνικῆς δημιουργίας καὶ τῆς ἐθνικῆς μουσικῆς τοῦ γένους τῶν Ἑλλήνων.

Ὅμως ὁ Μητρόπουλος ἐπροτίμησε καὶ ἐτράβηξεν ἄλλο δρόμο καὶ ἀπὸ ἐθνικὸς ἥρωας τῆς δημιουργικῆς μουσικῆς ἀνέβηκε σὲ καλλιτεχνικὰ ὕψη ποὺ δὲν τολμούσαμε ὡς τώρα νὰ ἐνατενίσωμε ἐδῶ στὴν Ἑλλάδα καὶ ἀναβεῖχθηκε παγκόσμιος ἥρωας τῆς ἀναδημιουργικῆς τέχνης τῶν ἤχων καὶ τῶν ρυθμῶν.

Εἶνε ὁ πρῶτος Ἕλλην μουσικὸς ποὺ ἀποτελεῖ μιὰν ἀδιαφιλονίκητη διεθνῆ δόξα ὅλου τοῦ πολιτισμένου κόσμου ὅσο οἱ μεγάλοι τῶν μεγάλων τῆς ἀναδημιουργίας, ὅπως καὶ ὅσο ὁ Τοσκανίνι, ὁ Φουρτβέγκλερ ἢ ὁ Μπρούνο Βάλτερ.

Ἂν ὁ τόπος μας εἶχε στοιχειώδη ἀντίληψι γιὰ τὴ σημασία τῆς μουσικῆς σ' ὅλο τὸν Κόσμο πολὺ πρὶν χαρίσῃ μὲ τόσον ἐλαφρὰν καρδίαν τὸν Μητρόπουλο στὴν Ἀμερική, θὰ εἶχε προσπαθήσει νὰ κρατήσῃ μὲ κάθε θυσία τὸ Μητράπουλο στὴν Ἑλλάδα σχηματίζοντας μὲ οἱαδήποτε δαπάνη μιὰν ὀρχήστρα ἀνταξία του, μετακαλῶντας ὁποιουσδήποτε ξένους ἐκτελεστὰς θὰ τοῦ ἐχοειάζοντο ἀπὸ τὸ ἐξωτερικὸ γιὰ νὰ βελτιωθῇ ἡ ἀπόδοσις τῆς ὀρχήστρας καὶ παρέχοντας ὅρους ἐπιβιώσεως στοὺς ἐντοπίους μουσικοὺς τέτοιους ὥστε νὰ μποροῦνε νὰ ἀφοσιωθοῦνε ἀποκλειστικὰ στὸ ἔργο καὶ τὴν ἀποστολή τους.

Ἔτσι ἡ Ἀθήνα θὰ ἐξειλίσσετο σ' ἕνα πραγματικὸ μουσικὸ κέντρο μὲ διεθνῆ ἀκτινοβολία καὶ περιοδεῖες τῆς ἑλληνικῆς αὐτῆς ὀρχήστρας μέχρι τὸ μεγάλο Ἕλληνα μαέστρο ἐπὶ κεφαλῆς στὸ ἐξωτερικὸ θὰ ἀπέφεραν ἠθικὸς στὴν Ἑλλάδα ἀπείρως περισσότερα ἀπὸ ὅ,τι τὰ 150 χιλιάδες δολλάρια τῶν Τούρκων στὸν κ. Ντιοὺϊ ἢ οἱ πολυάριθμες ἀποστολὲς ἀπὸ ὑπουργοὺς καὶ πρεσβευτὰς στὰ διάφορα συνέδρια.

Καὶ ὅταν σήμερα τὸ 50% περίπου τῶν μελῶν τῆς Φιλαρμονικῆς τῆς Νέας Ὑόρκης ἀποτελεῖται ἀπὸ μουσικοὺς ποὺ δὲν ἐγεννήθηκαν στὴν Ἀμερική, δὲν βλέπω γιατὶ θὰ ἔβλαπτε ἂν εἶχε γίνει κάτι ἀνάλογο ἐν ἀνάγκῃ καὶ στὸν τόπο μας ἀφοῦ ε

ΜΕΤΑ ΤΗΝ ΑΝΑΧΩΡΗΣΙΝ ΤΟΥ...

ΜΕΡΙΚΑ ΣΤΙΓΜΙΟΤΥΠΑ ΑΠΟ ΤΑΣ ΣΥΝΑΥΛΙΑΣ ΚΑΙ ΤΗΝ ΔΕΞΙΩΣΙΝ ΤΟΥ κ. Δ. ΜΗΤΡΟΠΟΥΛΟΥ

Ἡ βροχὴ ποὺ ἐματαίωσε τὰ σχέδια ὅπως ἡ συναυλία δοθῆ εἰς τὸ Ὠδεῖον Ἡρώδου τοῦ Ἀττικοῦ.— Ὑποδειγματικὴ τάξις εἰς τὸν «Ὀρφέα».— Αἱ ἐκδηλώσεις τοῦ κοινοῦ.— Τὴν Κυριακὴν τὸ πρωῒ.— «Ξέρετε, δὲν μπορῶ νὰ κάνω τὸν Βασιλιᾶ νὰ περιμένη... Κι' ἔχει καλὸ φαΐ».— Ἡ δεξίωσις εἰς τὸ Ὠδεῖον.—Ἡ τελευταία συναυλία καὶ τὰ τελευταῖα χειροκροτήματα.

Τώρα ποὺ ὁ Δημήτρης Μητρόπουλος ἔφυγε ἀπὸ κοντά μας διὰ νὰ ἐπανέλθη ἀγνώστον πότε πλέον, ἠμποροῦμεν νὰ ἀναπλάσωμεν κάπως περισσότερον ψύχραιμοι, τὰς ὑπερόχους ἐκείνας στιγμὰς τῆς αἰσθητικῆς μυσταγωγίας ποὺ μᾶς προσέφερεν, τὰς στιγμὰς ἐκείνας κατὰ τὰς ὁποίας ἡ συγκίνησίς μας ἐκ τῆς παρουσίας του, δὲν μᾶς ἄφησεν ἴσως νὰ δοθῶμεν ὁλοψύχως εἰς τοὺς διονυσιακοὺς κόσμους τοῦ πάθους καὶ τὰς ἀπολλωνίους σφαίρας τῶν μαγικῶν ὁραμάτων τῆς μουσικῆς ἐκείνης τῆς ὁποίας ὑπῆρξεν ὁ ἀπαράμιλλος ἑρμηνευτής. Ἔργον ὅμως τοῦ γράφοντος, δὲν εἶναι ἡ περιγραφὴ τῆς μυσταγωγίας αὐτῆς (καὶ λέγω «περιγραφή», ἐπειδὴ ἡ λέξις «κριτικὴ» θὰ ἀπετέλει ἱεροσυλίαν), ἀλλ' ἡ μεταφορὰ ὡρισμένων στιγμιοτύπων ἀπὸ τὰς δύο συμφωνικὰς συναυλίας, καθὼς καὶ ἀπὸ τὴν δεξίωσιν ποὺ ἐδόθη εἰς τὸ Ὠδεῖον Ἀθηνῶν πρὸς τιμὴν τοῦ μεγάλου ἀρχιμουσικοῦ.

Τὸ Σάββατον τὸ βράδυ, ὅστερα ἀπὸ τὴν νεροποντήν, ἡ ὁποία ἐματαίωσε τὸ σχέδιον, ὅπως ἡ συναυλία δοθῆ εἰς τὸ Ὠδεῖον τοῦ Ἡρώδου τοῦ Ἀττικοῦ, πολλοὶ ἀπὸ ἐκείνους οἱ ὁποῖοι δὲν εἶχον κατορθώσει νὰ προμηθευθοῦν τὰ εἰσιτήρια μὲ διπλῆν ἀρίθμησιν, ἐστέκοντο περίλυποι ἔξω ἀπὸ τὸν «Ὀρφέα» καὶ ἐκύτταζαν τοὺς «ἄλλους», τοὺς «τυχερούς», μὲ φθόνον ἀπολύτως δικαιολογημένον. Εὐτυχῶς, δὲν ἐσημειώθη κανένα ἐπεισόδιον, χάρις εἰς τὴν ὑποδειγματικὴν τάξιν τὴν ὁποίαν ἐτήρησαν τὰς 5, ἐπάνω εἰς τὴν σκηνήν, εἰς τὴν ὁποίαν εἶχον λάβει θέσιν οἱ καθηγηταὶ καὶ τὸ Δ.Σ. τοῦ Ὠδείου Ἀθηνῶν, εἰσῆλθεν ὁ Δημήτρης Μητρόπουλος, εὑρισκόμενος ὑπὸ τὸ κράτος μιᾶς ἰσχυρᾶς συγκινήσεως, ἀπολύτως δικαιολογημένης. Ἐκάθησε μεταξὺ τοῦ κ. Φαραντάτου καὶ τοῦ κ. Σκλάβου, ἡ συγκίνησίς του ἐφάνη νὰ μεγαλώνη καθ' ὅλην τὴν διάρκειαν τῆς ἐμπνευσμένης προσφωνήσεως τοῦ κ. Α. Κυριακίδου, προέδρου τοῦ διοικητικοῦ συμβουλίου τοῦ Ὠδείου, μετὰ τὸ πέρας τῆς ὁποίας οὗτος τοῦ προσέφερεν ἐξ ὀνόματος τοῦ ἱδρύματος μικρὰν ἀργυρᾶν ἀναμνηστικὴν ἐνεπίγραφον πλάκα. Ἐν συνεχείᾳ ἐσηκώθη ἀπὸ τὸ κάθισμά του διὰ νὰ ἀπαντήσῃ. Τὴν στιγμὴν αὐτὴν ἡ συγκίνησίς του εἶχε φθάσει εἰς τὸ κατακόρυφόν της. Ἦτο περισσότερον ἕνας ἄνθρωπος μελαγχολικός, ποὺ μονολογεῖ μέσα εἰς τὸ δωμάτιόν του, ἐνθυμούμενος σκηνὰς ἀπὸ τὸ παρελθόν, παρὰ ὁ «τιμώμενος», ὁ ὁποῖος ἀπαντᾶ τυπικῶς εἰς μίαν προσφώνησιν. Καὶ πράγματι, ὅπως μᾶς εἶπεν, ἐνεθυμεῖτο «κουδέντες ποὺ εἶπε σ' αὐτὴν τὴν αἴθουσαν ... τὴν μουσικὴν ποὺ ἔπαιξε ἐδῶ καὶ χάθηκε...».

τὰ ἀστυνομικὰ ὄργανα. Καὶ κάτι ἄλλο ἀκόμη: Ἀπὸ τὰς τακτικὰς μας συμφωνικὰς συναυλίας, δὲν λείπουν οἱ καθυστερημένοι. Τὴν φορὰν αὐτὴν ὅμως, ὅλοι, εἶχον φροντίσει νὰ εὑρίσκωνται εἰς τὴν θέσιν των ἀπὸ τὰς 7.30 τὸ ἀργότερον, φοβούμενοι μήπως δὲν κατορθώσουν νὰ εἰσέλθουν μετὰ τὴν ἄφιξιν τῶν Α.Α. Μ.Μ. τῶν Βασιλέων.

"Οταν τέλος ἔφθασεν ἡ ὥρα νὰ ἀρχίσῃ ἡ συναυλία καὶ οἱ θεαταὶ τοῦ ἐξώστου διέκριναν τὸν μεγάλον μαέστρον νὰ προχωρῇ πρὸς τὸ «πόντιουμ», ἀνάμεσα ἀπὸ τὰ πρῶτα βιολιὰ καὶ τὰ κοντραμπάσσα, ἡ αἴθουσα ἐγέμισεν ἀπὸ τὸν ἦχον μιᾶς θυέλλης χειροκροτημάτων, μοναδικῆς ἴσως εἰς τὰ χρονικὰ τῆς μουσικῆς μας ζωῆς. Τὰ χειροκροτήματα ἐπανελήφθησαν ζωηρότερον, ὅταν ὁ κ. Μητρόπουλος ἀνήγγειλεν ὅτι διὰ λόγους τεχνικοὺς (ἡ σκηνὴ τοῦ «Ὀρφέως» δὲν ἐχωροῦσε τὸ πιάνο, ποὺ ἦτο ἀπαραίτητον διὰ τὴν ἐκτέλεσιν τῆς Πέμπτης Συμφωνίας τοῦ Προκόφιεφ) ἀντὶ τῆς προαναγγελθείσης ἀνωτέρω συμφωνίας, θὰ ἐξετέλει τὴν 10ην Συμφωνίαν τοῦ Σοστακόβιτς. "Οταν ἐτελείωσεν ἡ ἐκτέλεσις τῆς Συμφωνίας αὐτῆς (ἡ ὁποία παίζεται διὰ πρώτην φορὰν εἰς τὴν Ἑλλάδα, ἐξαιρέσει δύο ἠχοληψιῶν της, ποὺ μετεδόθησαν ἀπὸ τὸν ραδιοσταθμὸν Ἀθηνῶν μὲ τὴν ἰδίαν ὀρχήστραν καὶ τὸν ἴδιον μαέστρον), τὸ κοινὸν δὲν ἐννοοῦσε νὰ ἀφήσῃ τὸν κ. Μητρόπουλον νὰ φύγῃ μὲ τὰς «μπίς» του. Καὶ ὁ μάγος αὐτὸς τῶν ἤχων, ὑπακούων εἰς τὰς ἐπιθυμίας του, ἐξετέλεσε δύο σύντομα κομμάτια τοῦ Ραχμάνινωφ καὶ τοῦ Ντὲ Φάλλια.

Τὸ αὐτὸ ἐπανελήφθη προθύμως καὶ τὴν Κυριακὴν τὸ πρωῒ εἰς τὴν συναυλίαν ποὺ ἔδωσεν ὁ μεγάλος καλλιτέχνης δι' ὅσους δὲν εἶχον κατορθώσει, λόγῳ τῆς βροχῆς, νὰ τὸν ἀπολαύσουν τὸ περασμένο βράδυ εἰς τὸν «Ὀρφέα». Μετὰ τὴν «Ἡρωϊκὴν» τοῦ Μπετόβεν, ἐξετέλεσε καὶ πάλιν ἕνα ἀπὸ τοὺς «χορούς» τοῦ ἀειμνήστου Σκαλκώτα. "Οταν ὅμως τὸ κοινὸν τοῦ ἐζήτησε καὶ δεύτερον «μπίς», ἀφοῦ ἔκαμε νόημα εἰς ὅλους νὰ σωπάσουν, εἶπε τὰ ἑξῆς: «Ξέρετε, δὲν μπορῶ νὰ κάμω τὸν Βασιληᾶ νὰ περιμένῃ... Κι' ὅπως ἀκούω, ἔχει καὶ καλὸ φαΐ!» Αὐτὸ ἦτο. Ἡ ἁπλότης τοῦ μεγάλου μας μαέστρου ἀφώπλισε καὶ τοὺς πλέον ἀπαιτητικοὺς ἀπὸ τοὺς ἀκροατάς του, οἱ ὁποῖοι... εὐχαρίστως τοῦ ἔδωσαν τὴν ἄδειαν νὰ παρακαθήσῃ εἰς τὸ βασιλικὸν γεῦμα! "Ας σημειωθῇ ὅτι εἰς τὴν πρωϊνὴν αὐτὴν συναυλίαν ἐπωλοῦντο καὶ ἀρκετὰ εἰσιτήρια, διότι οἱ «ἄτυχοι» τῆς προηγουμένης βραδυᾶς ἦσαν ὀλιγώτεροι ἀπὸ ὅσους ἠμποροῦσε νὰ περιλάβῃ ὁ «Ὀρφεύς». Φυσικὰ μὲ τὸ νὰ εἶπω ὅτι τὰ εἰσιτήρια αὐτὰ ἐξηντλήθησαν πολὺ σύντομα, δὲν κάμνω τίποτε ἄλλο παρὰ νὰ μακρηγορῶ ἀναφέρων πράγματα ποὺ γίνονται ἀφ' ἑαυτῶν νοητά.

Τὸ ἀπόγευμα ἡ αἴθουσα τοῦ Ὠδείου Ἀθηνῶν, εἰς τὴν ὁποίαν ὁ μουσικὸς αὐτὸς ὀργανισμὸς ἐδεξιώθη τὸν πάλαι ποτὲ μαθητήν του, ἦτο κατάμεστος ἀπὸ κόσμον, μὲ ὁμβρέλλας καὶ ἀδιάβροχα, λόγῳ τῆς ραγδαιοτάτης βροχῆς. Κατὰ ὅμως βρίσκουν εὐνοϊκὸν ἔδαφος καὶ ἄλλοι ὄχι. "Αν ἤμουν ὁ Θεὸς ποὺ νομίζετε, ἁπλούστατα θὰ πήγαινα νὰ πέσω στὴν Αἴτνα γιὰ νὰ θέσω ἐνδόξως τέρμα στὴν θεϊκή μου ὕπαρξι, ὅπως λέγει καὶ ὁ ἀρχαῖος φιλόσοφος!» Τέλος ὁ κ. Σκλάβος, παλαιὸς συμμαθητὴς τοῦ Δημήτρη Μητροπούλου, ἔκλεισε τὴν τελετὴν μὲ μερικὰ θερμὰ καὶ συγκινητικὰ λόγια πρὸς τὸν φίλον τῶν μαθητικῶν του χρόνων.

Ἡ δευτέρα βραδινὴ συναυλία εἰς τὸν «Ὀρφέα» συνεκέντρωσε περισσότερον ἴσως κόσμον ἀπὸ τὴν πρώτην. Εἰς τὸν ἐξώστην ἦτο ἀδύνατον νὰ κυκλοφορήσῃ κανεὶς εἰς τοὺς διαδρόμους, αἱ βαθμίδες τῶν ὁποίων εἶχον καταληφθῆ ἀπὸ τὴν νεολαίαν τῶν Ὠδείων μας. Καὶ πράγματι, περιέργως κατὰ τὴν δευτέραν συναυλίαν οἱ παρακολουθοῦντες αὐτὴν μαθηταὶ τῶν Ὠδείων ἦσαν πολὺ περισσότεροι. Λέγω δὲ περιέργως, διότι τὸ πρόγραμμα τῆς πρώτης ἦτο φυσικὸν νὰ προσελκύσῃ περισσοτέρους ἐξ αὐτῶν. (Σούμαν καὶ Προκόφιεφ, καθὼς εἶχεν ἀναγγελθῆ).

Κατὰ τὸ διάλειμμα ἡ ἀντιπρόεδρος τοῦ Συλλόγου «Φίλοι τῆς Μουσικῆς» κ. Ἀλεξάνδρα Τριάντη ὑπὸ τὰ χειροκροτήματα τοῦ κοινοῦ ἐπέδωσεν ἐξ ὀνόματος τοῦ Συλλόγου εἰς τὴν ὀρχήστραν ἕνα ὑπέροχον ἑλληνικὸν ἀμφορέα, εἰς δὲ τὸν Δημήτρη Μητρόπουλον μίαν μικρὰν ἀναμνηστικὴν πλάκα μὲ τὸ ἔμβλημα τοῦ Συλλόγου καὶ σύντομον ἐπιγραφήν. Καθὼς μάλιστα ἐπληροφορήθην ἀργότερον, ὁ αὐτὸς Σύλλογος ἀπένειμεν εἰς τὰ 110 μέλη τῆς Φιλαρμονικῆς Ὀρχήστρας τῆς Νέας Ὑόρκης ἰσάριθμα ἀναμνηστικὰ μετάλλια ἐντὸς μικρᾶς θήκης συνοδευόμενα ἀπὸ κλώνους ἐλαίας.

Αἱ ἐνθουσιωδέστεραι ὅμως ἐκδηλώσεις ἐσημειώθησαν ὅταν ἡ συναυλία ἐτελείωσε. Θὰ ἔλεγε κανεὶς ὅτι οἱ 2.000 ἄνθρωποι ποὺ κατέκλυσαν τὸν «Ὀρφέα» εἶχον καταληφθῆ ἀπὸ ἕνα ἀλλόφρονα πανικὸν εἰς τὴν σκέψιν ὅτι ἡ Δευτέρα Συμφωνία τοῦ Μπράμς θὰ ἦτο τὸ τελευταῖον ἔργον ποὺ θὰ ἤκουαν ἐκ τοῦ φυσικοῦ ἀπὸ τὸν Μητρόπουλον ἐπὶ ἀρκετὰ ἴσως χρόνια. Παρὰ τὴν τρομερὰν ὅμως κόπωσιν ποὺ ἀσφαλῶς θὰ ἠσθάνετο ἔπειτα ἀπὸ ἕνα μαρτυρικὸν 24ωρον (2 συναυλίαι καὶ τρεῖς ἢ τέσσαρες ἐπισήμους δεξιώσεις) ὁ μεγάλος ἀρχιμουσικὸς δὲν ἠθέλησε νὰ ἀπογοητεύσῃ τὸ πλῆθος αὐτὸ ποὺ τὸν ἐπευφημοῦσεν ὡσὰν ἠμίθεον. Καὶ ἐξετέλεσε μίαν εἰσαγωγὴν τοῦ Ντιμίτρι Καμπαλέφσκυ, καθὼς καὶ ἕνα ἀπὸ τοὺς χοροὺς τοῦ Σκαλκώτα. Τὰ χειροκροτήματα ὅμως καὶ αἱ ζωηραὶ ρυθμικαὶ κραυγαί: «Μη-τρόπου-λος, Μητρόπου-λος» ἐπανελαμβάνοντο πάντοτε ζωηραὶ καὶ ἔτσι διὰ νὰ ἐκκενωθῇ ἡ αἴθουσα, παρέστη ἡ ἀνάγκη ὅπως ἡ ὀρχήστρα ἐγκαταλείψῃ τὰς θέσεις της.

Οἱ διαβάται, οἱ ὁποῖοι κατὰ τὰς 11 τὸ βράδυ τῆς Κυριακῆς ἐπερνοῦσαν ἀπὸ τὴν Στοὰν Ἀρσακείου, ἔβλεπαν ἐμπρὸς ἀπὸ τὴν πλαγίαν ἔξοδον τοῦ «Ὀρφέως» ἕνα ἀρκετὰ μεγάλο πλῆθος ἀνθρώπων. Τὸ πλῆθος αὐτὸ ἐχωρίζετο εἰς τὰ δύο ἀπὸ μίαν δίοδον, τὴν ὁ-

Τὸ κοινὸ τοῦ «Ὀρφέως» ἀντήχησε ἀπὸ τὴν κραυγὴ «Εἰρήνη - Εἰρήνη». Ἡ ἐπίσκεψη τοῦ Μητρόπουλου στὸ Ὠδεῖο Ἀθηνῶν καὶ στὸν Μουσικὸ Σύλλογο. Ἡ μετριοφροσύνη τοῦ μεγάλου δασκάλου. «Αἰσθάνομαι ταπεινὸς γιατὶ δὲν νομίζω ὅτι εἶμαι καλύτερος...ἀπὸ σᾶς βγῆκα»! Οἱ μουσικοὶ ὑποφέρουν στὴν Ἀμερικὴ

"Οχι μόνον οἱ εἰδικοὶ κι' οἱ φίλοι τῆς μουσικῆς, ἀλλὰ ἕνα εὐρύτερο κοινό, ἔδειξε ζωηρότατο ἐνδιαφέρον γιὰ τὶς συναυλίες ποὺ δόθηκαν τὸ περασμένο Σαββατοκύριακο στὴν αἴθουσα τοῦ «Ὀρφέως» μὲ τὸν Δημήτρη Μητρόπουλο. Δυστυχῶς ὅμως ἀπ' τὴ μιὰ ἡ κακοκαιρία κι' ἀπ' τὴν ἄλλη ὁ τρόπος ποὺ ὀργανώθηκαν αὐτὲς οἱ συναυλίες ἐμπόδισε πολὺ κόσμο νὰ τὶς ἀπολαύσει ἀπὸ κοντά — στὸ τέλος παρηγορήθηκε κάπως ἀκούγοντας ἀπ' τὸ ραδιόφωνο τὰ διαλεχτὰ προγράμματα τοῦ διάσημου Ἕλληνα ἀρχιμουσικοῦ καὶ τῆς Φιλαρμονικῆς Ὀρχήστρας τῆς Νέας Ὑόρκης.

"Ηταν πραγματικὰ ἕνα μεγάλο καλλιτεχνικὸ γεγονός. Τὰ εἰσιτήρια, ἂν καὶ πανάκριβα, ἔγιναν ἀνάρπαστα καὶ βρῆκε εὐκαιρία νὰ ὀργιάσει ἡ μαύρη ἀγορά. Μὰ ἡ ἐπίμονη κακοκαιρία περιόρισε τὶς συναυλίες στὴν αἴθουσα τοῦ «Ὀρφέως» κι' αὐτὸ εἶχε σὰν ἀποτέλεσμα νὰ μείνουν ἀπ' ἔξω κι' ὅσοι εἶχαν προμηθευτεῖ τὰ ἐπὶ πλέον εἰσιτήρια ποὺ προορίζονταν γιὰ τὸ εὐρύχωρο θέατρο τοῦ Ἡρώδου τοῦ Ἀττικοῦ. Ὡστόσο οἱ μισοὶ θεατὲς τῆς πιὸ πάνω «κατηγορίας» στάθηκαν τελικὰ τυχεροί, γιατὶ ὁ Μητρόπουλος κι' ἡ Φιλαρμονικὴ Ὀρχήστρα τῆς Νέας Ὑόρκης, δέχτηκαν κι' ἔδωσαν μιὰ ἔκτακτη συναυλία τὴν Κυριακὴ τὸ πρωῒ, ἐνῶ οἱ ἄλλοι ἐξαργύρωσαν τὰ εἰσιτήριά τους κι' ἂς ξαγρύπνησαν γιὰ νὰ τὰ προμηθευτοῦν ὁλόκληρη νύχτα...

Ἔτσι, δόθηκαν τρεῖς συναυλίες μὲ διαφορετικὰ προγράμματα, ποὺ χειροκροτήθηκαν ὅλα μ' ἀσυγκράτητο ἐνθουσιασμό.

ΠΡΩΤΟΦΑΝΕΙΣ ΕΚΔΗΛΩΣΕΙΣ

Ὁ Μητρόπουλος κυριολεκτικὰ ἀποθεώθηκε ὅσο κανένας ὡς τώρα καλλιτέχνης στὸν τόπο μας. Ἐπὶ ἀρκετὰ λεπτὰ τὰ χειροκροτήματα κι' ἐπευφημίες δονοῦσαν τὴν αἴθουσα τοῦ «Ὀρφέως». Αὐτὲς οἱ πρωτοφανεῖς ἐκδηλώσεις τοῦ κοινοῦ ἦταν αὐθόρμητες καὶ προκλήθηκαν ἀπὸ τὴν μεγάλη τέχνη ποὺ χάρισε στοὺς ἀκροατές του ὁ Ἕλληνας ἀρχιμουσικός. Ἀλλὰ μαζὶ μὲ τὴν χαρά, ἑνοιωσαν πολλοὶ καὶ μιὰ πίκρα, γιατὶ δὲν ὑπάρχουν ἐδῶ οὔτε οἱ στοιχειώδεις προϋποθέσεις γιὰ νὰ δημιουργεῖ στὴν πατρίδα του ἕνα τέτοιο ἀληθινὸ μοναδικὸ ταλέντο. Χαρακτηριστικὸ εἶναι πὼς οἱ «συγκινηθέντες» μὲ τὸν Μητρόπουλο ἁρμόδιοι ἀρκέστηκαν νὰ τοῦ δίνουν συγχαρητήρια καὶ νὰ τοῦ προσκαλοῦν σὲ δεξιώσεις, χωρὶς κἂν νὰ δείξουν πὼς τοὺς ἀπασχολεῖ ὁ ἐπαναπατρισμός του, ἔστω σὰν σκέψη...

Η «ΣΥΜΦΩΝΙΑ ΤΗΣ ΕΙΡΗΝΗΣ»

Ἀλλὰ ὁ ἐνθουσιασμὸς τοῦ κοινοῦ ἔφτασε στὸ κατακόρυφο κατὰ τὴν συναυλία τοῦ Σαββάτου, ὅταν ὁ Μητρόπουλος ἀνήγγειλε ὅτι ἡ μὴ ἔγκαιρη μεταφορὰ τοῦ πιάνου στὴ σκηνὴ τοῦ «Ὀρφέως», ὑποχρεώνει τὴν ἀλλαγὴ τοῦ προγράμματος κι' ἀντὶ τῆς «5ης Συμφωνίας» τοῦ Προκόπιεφ, θὰ παιζόταν ἡ 10η Συμφωνία, ἡ «Συμφωνία τῆς Εἰρήνης», τοῦ σοβιετικοῦ Σοστακόβιτς. Ἡ ἀναγγελία τούτη ἔγινε δεκτὴ ἀπ' τὸ κοινὸ μὲ παταγώδη χειροκροτήματα καὶ κραυγὲς χαρᾶς καὶ γιὰ ἕναν πρόσθετο λόγο: "Οπως εἶναι γνωστό, ἡ 10η Συμφωνία τοῦ Σοστακόβιτς ὑπῆρχε στὸ πρόγραμμα τῶν συναυλιῶν, ποὺ θὰ ἔδινε ὁ Μητρόπουλος, μὰ ὕστερα ἀπὸ «συστάσεις» τῶν ἐδῶ διοργανωτῶν τοῦ «Φεστιβὰλ Ἀθηνῶν» ἀφαιρέθηκε γιὰ λόγους... πολιτικῆς σκοπιμότητος. Ὁ ἴδιος ὁ Ἕλληνας ἀρχιμουσικὸς στὴν συνέντευξή του πρὸς τοὺς ἀντιπροσώπους τοῦ Τύπου, μὲ πολὺ «τάκτ» ὁμολόγησε ὅτι ἀφαιρέθηκε ἡ «Συμφωνία τῆς Εἰρήνης» γιὰ ν' ἀποφευχθοῦν «οἱ παρεξηγήσεις», ἂν καὶ παίζεται μὲ καταπληκτικὴ ἐπιτυχία ἀκόμα καὶ στὴν πατρίδα τοῦ μακαρθισμοῦ.

Δύο φωτογραφίες ἀπὸ τὴν ὑποδοχὴ τοῦ Δημήτρη Μητρόπουλου. Ἀριστερὰ ὁ Μητρόπουλος στὴν σκηνὴ τοῦ «Ὀρφέως» χαιρετᾶ τὸ κοινὸ ποὺ τὸν ἀποθέωσε κυριολεκτικά. Δεξιά, ὁ διευθυντὴς τοῦ Ὠδείου Ἀθηνῶν κ. Κυριακίδης, τὴ στιγμὴ ποὺ ἀπονέμει στὸν μεγάλο μαέστρο τὸ ἀναμνηστικὸ μετάλλιο τοῦ Ὠδείου ὅπου ὁ Μητρόπουλος ἔμαθε τὰ πρῶτα μουσικὰ γράμματα.

ἐντυπώσεις του καὶ ἀνάλυση τοῦ ἔργου. Ἀξίζει ὅμως νὰ παραθέσουμε ἐδῶ ἕνα ἀπόσπασμα ἀπ' τὴν κριτικὴ τοῦ μουσουργοῦ Μανώλη Καλομοίρη στὸ χθεσινὸ «Ἔθνος».

«ΕΙΝΑΙ ΑΡΙΣΤΟΥΡΓΗΜΑ» ΓΡΑΦΕΙ Ο ΚΑΛΟΜΟΙΡΗΣ

Ἡ 10η Συμφωνία τοῦ Σοστακόβιτς, γράφει ὁ Καλομοίρης εἶναι ἀναμφισβήτητα ἕνα ἀριστούργημα. Ὁ Σοστακόβιτς χωρὶς νὰ καταφεύγῃ στοὺς μαθηματικοὺς ὑπολογισμοὺς σύγχρονων ὑπερνεωτεριστῶν, κατώρθωσε νὰ χαρίσῃ στὴν ἀνθρωπότητα ἕνα ἔργο ποὺ ἐνῶ στὴ βαθύτερη οὐσία του εἶναι ἐθνικό, βγαλμένο ἀπὸ τὴν λαϊκὴ ψυχὴ τῆς μουσικῆς Ρωσίας, γίνεται συγχρόνως καὶ πανανθρώπινο, τέτοιο ποὺ νὰ μπορῇ νὰ συγκινήσῃ τὸν καθένα ἀπὸ τοὺς ἁπλοὺς καὶ ἀνίδεους ἀνθρώπους τοῦ λαοῦ ὡς τὸν πιὸ ἐκλεπτυσμένο διανοούμενο.

Εἶναι ἀπὸ τὰ ἐλάχιστα ἔργα τῆς τελευταίας πεντηκονταετίας, ποὺ μὲ συνεκλόνισαν τόσο βαθειά, ἀλλὰ καὶ μοῦ ἔδειξαν πὼς ὁ δρόμος ποὺ ἀκολουθάει ἡ ἑλληνικὴ μουσική, κατὰ μέγα μέρος, εἶναι ὁ σωστὸς καὶ ποὺ κάποια μέρα σὲ πεῖσμα κάθε ἀρνητοῦ της θὰ τὴν φέρῃ καὶ αὐτὴ στὶς ἀληθινὲς κορυφὲς τῆς Τέχνης.

Ὁ Μητρόπουλος καὶ ἡ θαυμασία ὀρχήστρα του ἀπέδωσαν τὸ ἔργο μὲ μιὰ καταπληκτικὴ πλαστικότητα, κατανόησι καὶ ἀνάτασι.

Ἡ ἐντύπωσις ποὺ ἐπροξένησαν σὲ ὁλόκληρο τὸ ποικιλόμορφο καὶ ποικιλότροπο ἀκροατήριο στάθηκε κυριολεκτικὰ κεραυνοβόλα καὶ μοναδική.

Θὰ προτιμοῦσα, ὅπως γίνεται στὸ Μπαϊρόϊτ στὸν «Παρσιφαλ» νὰ μὴν ἀκούγωνται οὔτε χειροκροτήματα καὶ ὁ κόσμος νὰ ἔφευγε μὲ τὸ χέρι στὴν καρδιά του ἀπολυτρωμένος ἀπὸ τὰ μικρὰ καὶ ταπεινὰ ποὺ μᾶς τριγυρίζουν.

ΕΠΙΣΚΕΨΗ ΣΤΟ ΩΔΕΙΟ ΑΘΗΝΩΝ ΚΑΙ ΣΤΟΝ ΜΟΥΣΙΚΟ ΣΥΛΛΟΓΟ

Παρ' ὅλον ὅτι ὁ Μητρόπουλος ἔμεινε στὴν Ἀθήνα δυὸ μόνο εἰκοσιτετράωρα — ἔφυγε χθὲς τὸ πρωῒ γιὰ τὸ Λονδῖνο — καὶ στὸ μικρὸ αὐτὸ διάστημα εἶχε νὰ δώσει τρεῖς συναυλίες καὶ νὰ παρευρεθεῖ στὶς ἐπίσημες δεξιώσεις (ποὺ καθὼς εἶπε τὶς ἀντιπαθεῖ τρομερά...), δὲν παρέλειψε νὰ ἐπισκεφθεῖ τὴν Κυριακὴ τὸ ἀπόγευμα τὸ Ὠδεῖον Ἀθηνῶν, ὅπου μαθήτεψε, καθὼς καὶ τὰ γραφεῖα τοῦ Πανελληνίου Μουσικοῦ Συλλόγου γιὰ νὰ χαιρετίσει τοὺς συναδέλφους του.

Στὸ Ὠδεῖο Ἀθηνῶν τὸν ὑποδέχτηκαν μὲ συγκίνηση καὶ χαρὰ οἱ καθηγητὲς κι' οἱ μαθητὲς τοῦ Ὠδείου. Ὁ πρόεδρος τοῦ Διοικητικοῦ Συμβουλίου κ. Ἀρ. Κυριακίδης, προσφωνώντας τὸν Μητρόπουλο ἀνάμεσα στ' ἄλλα εἶπε: «Εἶμαι βέβαιος ὅταν ἐμπήκατε στὸ Κάρνεγκυ Χὸλ καὶ σ' ὅλες τὶς πολυτελέστερες αἴθουσες συναυλιῶν, ὅπου τὸ διεθνὲς κοινὸ σᾶς ἀποθεώνει, Γιατὶ θὰ ἔλεγα— ὅτι ἀπ' αὐτὴν τὴν πορτίτσα περάσατε γιὰ νὰ πάρετε τὸν δρόμο ποὺ ὁδηγεῖ στὴν ἀθανασία τοῦ καλλιτέχνη».

«ΑΠΟ ΣΑΣ ΒΓΗΚΑ!»

Ὁ Μητρόπουλος συγκινημένος ἀπάντησε: «Ἀναλογίζομαι τώρα ποὺ βρίσκομαι ἀνάμεσά σας τὶς μαθητικές μου μέρες, μὲ τὰ σφάλματα καὶ τὶς ἐσφαλμένες νότες ποὺ ἔπαιζα... Εἶχα τὸ θάρρος ν' ἀντιμετωπίσω τὴν πραγματικότητα καὶ νὰ πεισθῶ ὅτι τίποτε δὲν ἀγοράζεται μὲ τὸ ψέμα. Χρειάστηκε σκληρὴ δουλειά, καρτερία καὶ δύναμη. Ὅλοι ἐδῶ εἴμαστε θαυμάσιοι, κι' ἐκλεκτοὶ σπόροι. Ἄλλοι πέσανε σὲ καρποφόρο ἔδαφος καὶ γόνιμο, ἄλλοι σὲ ξερό, ἄγονο καὶ πετρῶδες. Κανένα πνεῦμα δὲν κατέβηκε ἀπευθείας ἀπ' τὸν οὐρανό. Εὐχαριστῶ ὅλους ποὺ στάθηκαν στήριγμα γιὰ νὰ γίνω ἐγὼ φτιμισμένος κι' αὐτοὺς ποὺ ἔμειναν ἐδῶ καὶ ὑπέφεραν τόσο. Νὰ ξέρετε πόσο ταπεινὸς αἰσθάνομαι γιὰ τὶ δὲν νομίζω ὅτι εἶμαι καλύτερος... Ἀπὸ σᾶς βγῆκα.

Μετὰ τὶς ὁμιλίες δυὸ μαθητὲς τοῦ Ὠδείου Ἀθηνῶν προσέφεραν ἕνα στεφάνι στὸν μεγάλο μαέστρο καὶ τὸ Διοικητικὸ Συμβούλιο τοῦ ἀφιέρωσε μιὰ ἀναμνηστικὴ πλάκα. Ἀκολούθως ὁ Δ. Μητρόπουλος ἐπισκέφθηκε τὸν Μουσικὸ Σύλλογο ὅπου κι' ἐκεῖ τοῦ ἔγινε ἐγκάρδια ὑποδοχή. Ὁ πρόεδρος τοῦ συλλόγου κ. Χυτήρης προσφώνησε ὡς ἑξῆς τὸν διάσημο ἀρχιμουσικό:

ΜΟΥΣΙΚΗ ΚΡΙΤΙΚΗ

Ο ΔΗΜΗΤΡΗΣ ΜΗΤΡΟΠΟΥΛΟΣ ΚΑΙ Η ΦΙΛΑΡΜΟΝΙΚΗ ΣΥΜΦΩΝΙΚΗ ΟΡΧΗΣΤΡΑ ΤΗΣ ΝΕΑΣ ΥΟΡΚΗΣ = = = = = =

Τῆς Κας ΑΛ. ΛΑΛΑΟΥΝΗ

Λαμπρότερο ἐπιστέγασμα τοῦ Φεστιβὰλ 'Αθηνῶν ἀπ' τις δυο τελευταῖες συναυλίες —ἢ μαλλον τρεῖς μὲ τὴν ἔκτακτη τοῦ Κυριακάτικου πρωινοῦ — με τὴν Φιλαρμονικὴ 'Ορχήστρα τῆς Νέας 'Υόρκης καὶ τὸν Μητροπουλο, δὲν θὰ μποροῦσε νὰ φαντασθῆ κανείς. Αὐτο ἦταν τὸ ἀληθινο «Φεστιβάλ», αὐτὸ ἦταν ἡ μεγάλη, ἡ ἀφθαστη Μ ο υ σ ι κ ὴ Γ ι ο ρ τ ή, ποὺ μᾶς κράτησε σὲ μιὰν ἀφανταστη μαγεία δυο ὁλόκληρες μέρες καὶ ποὺ θὰ μᾶς κρατᾶη γιὰ πολὺν καιρὸν ἀκομα στὸν μαγικό της κύκλο, σὰν μιὰ ἀσβυστη ἀνάμνησις.

'Ο Μητρόπουλος... Πόση ἐξέλιξι στὴν τεχνική του ἀπὸ τότε ποὺ μᾶς ἄφησε —γιατί, βέβαια, ἡ μεγαλοφυΐα ὑπῆρχε ἀνέκαθεν— πόση αὐτοσυγκέντρωσις, πόση ἐγρήγορσις καὶ λιτότητα στὶς κινήσεις, ἀλλὰ καὶ πόση φλόγα!... 'Ο ἴδιος φλέγεται, πυρπολεῖται, λὲς καὶ διατρέχει ὅλο του τὸ εἶναι ἕνα ἠλεκτρικὸ ρεῦμα, ἕνα μαγνητικὸ ρευστὸ ποὺ, ἀπ' τὴν αἰχμὴ τῆς μπαγκέτας του, ἐκτὸς ξυέται πάνω στὴν ὀρχήστρα του καὶ τὴν ἀναταράζει καὶ τὴν συγκλονίζει καὶ τὴν καθυποτάζει στὴ σιδερένια του θέλησι. Εἶναι μιὰ θαυμάσια ὀρχήστρα, ναί, ποὺ τὰ μέλη της εἶναι διαλεγμένα, ἕνα-ἕνα ἀπ' ὅ,τι τελειότερο μπορεῖ νὰ ὑπάρχη στὸν κόσμο. Εἶναι μιὰ θαυμάσια σύνθεσις τοῦ παληοῦ τύπου, ποὺ ἀποβλέπει στὴν ἐνότητα, τὴν σ-ύ μ π ῆ ξ ι, ἀλλὰ καὶ τοῦ νέου ποὺ ἀπαιτεῖ τὴν τ ε χ ν ι κ ὴ τελειότητα τοῦ καθε μουσικοῦ — ὁ καθένας τους σ' αὐτὴν τὴν ὀρχήστρα εἶναι ἕνας διρτουοζος, ἀπ' τὰ ἔγχορδα ὡς τὰ πνευστά, ὡς ἐκεῖνο τὸ θαυμαστὸ ὄμποε,, τὸ φλάουτο, τὸ φαγκόττο, τὸ κόρνο, ὡς τὰ κρουστά, ὅλοι εἶναι διρτουοζοι. Ἀλλὰ ἀκριβῶς γιὰ νὰ καθυποτάξῃς μιὰ τέτοια ὀρχήστρα, γιὰ νὰ κάμψῃς τέτοιους μουσικοὺς στὴ θέλησί σου, γιὰ νὰ κάνῃς αὐτὸ τὸ σύνολο, δικό σου, ἀποκλειστικὰ δικό σου ὄργανο... Ἔ' ναί, μόνο Μητρόπουλος πρέπει νάσαι.

Κι' ἔτσι εἶναι σήμερα αὐτὴ ἡ Φιλαρμονικὴ τῆς Νέας Ὑόρκης στὰ χέρια τοῦ "Ελληνα ἀρχιμουσικοῦ: "Ἕνα ὄργανο ποὺ το «παίζει» ὅπως αὐτὸς θέλει, ἔτσι ὅπως ἕνας πιανίστας κάνει ὅ,τι θέλει —κι' ὅ,τι μπορεῖ —ἀπ' τὸ πιάνο του. Καὶ εἶναι τέτοια ἡ προεργασία καὶ ἡ προσυνεννόησις μαέστρου καὶ ὀρχήστρας, ποὺ ἡ ἑρμηνεία κυλάει, ρέει, σὰν κάτι τὸ ἀπόλυτα φυσικὸ καὶ αὐτονόητο — φθάνει ὡς τὴ δημιουργία, γίνεται ἀποκάλυψις καὶ προφητεία συνάμα, χωρὶς ὁ μαέστρος νἄχῃ ἀνάγκη νὰ κτυπάῃ τὸ χρόνο, ἡ μπακέττα του εἶναι τὸ μαγικὸ ραβδὶ ἀπ' ὅπου πέφτει ἡ ἠλεκτρικὴ ἐκκένωσις πάνω στὴν ὀρχήστρα...

Μὲ τὴν ἀπέραντη μνήμη του, ὁ Μητροπουλος ἔδωσε τρια διαφορετικὰ προγράμματα χωρὶς κἀν νἄχῃ τὸν καιρο νὰ «προβάρῃ». Δυο λόγια μὲ τοὺς «συναδέλφους» του — καθως ἀποκαλεῖ τοὺς μουσικούς του —ἀρκοῦν. Καὶ τί θὰ μποροῦσα νὰ πρωτοαναφέρω ἀπ' ὅλες τὶς ἑρμηνείες ποὺ μᾶς χάρισε ἡ μεγαλοφυΐα του; Τὰ λόγια δὲν εἶναι ἀρκετὰ γιὰ νὰ ἐκφράσουν τὴν ποιητικὴ ἑρμηνεία τῆς 2ας Συμφωνίας τοῦ Σοῦμαν, τὴν καταπληκτικὴ ἀπόδοσι τῆς Δεκάτης τοῦ Σοστακόβιτς — ἕνα θαυμάσια ἔργο, ἀπο καλυπτικὰ δοσμένο — τὴν ἑρμηνεία τῆς 'Ηρωικῆς τοῦ Μπετόβεν — ποιὸς εἶπε, ἀλήθεια, πὼς ὁ Μητρόπουλος δὲν ἀγαπάει τὸν Μπετόβεν; Δὲν ἄκουσα ποτέ μου κανέναν, ἐκτὸς ἀπ' τὸν Τοσκανίνι ποὺ ἄκουσα μὲ τὴν ἴδια αὐτὴ ὀρχήστρα κι' ἀκριβῶς στὴν Τρίτη αὐτὴν τοῦ Μπετόβεν, νὰ ἑρμηνεύῃ τὸν Μπετόβεν μὲ τέτοια πιστότητα καὶ πίστι, μὲ τέτοια ἀγάπη, μὲ τέτοιο τέλειο δόσιμο τοῦ ἑαυτοῦ του... Καὶ τί νὰ πῶ γιὰ τὸ μεγαλεῖο τῆς ἀποδόσεως τῆς Συμφωνίας τῆς Μεταρρυθμίσεως τοῦ Μέντελσον; 'Ο παραγνωρισμένος Μέντελσον ἀναδειχνόταν ἐδῶ μεγάλος κάτω ἀπ' τὴ μπαγκέττα τοῦ "Ελληνα ἀρχιμουσικοῦ. Κι' οὔτε ἄκουσα ποτέ μου τελειότερη ἑρμηνεία τοῦ Μπράμς, ἢ ἂν ἄκουσα κάτι τὸ παρόμοιο σὰν τὴν ἑρμηνεία αὐτῆς τῆς Δεύτερης Συμφωνίας ποὺ μᾶς ἔδοσε προχθὲς ὁ Μητρόπουλος, δὲν μπορῶ πιὰ νὰ τὸ θυμηθῶ... Καὶ οἱ 'Ελληνικοὶ Χοροὶ τοῦ Σκαλκώτα; Μὲ πόση ἀγάπη δόθηκαν ἀπὸ μουσικοὺς καὶ μαέστρο, μὲ πόση θαειὰ κατανόησι, λεπτότητα, διαύγεια, μὲ πόση νοσταλγικότητα καὶ φλόγα συνάμα...

Μοῦρχονται τώρα στὸ νοῦ καὶ τὰ κομμάτια ποὺ ὁ Μητροπουλος ἔδωσε ἐκτὸς προγράμματος, ὑπείκοντας στὸ παραλήρημα τοῦ κόσμου—πῶς μπόρεσε νὰ συνεπάρῃ ἔτσι τὴν ὀρχήστρα του, σὰν νἄταν ἕνα καὶ μόνο ὄργανο, σὰν μιὰ τεράστια φωνὴ ποὺ τραγουδοῦσε—στὶς «Βοκαλίζ» τοῦ Ραχμανίνωφ, στοὺς φλογεροὺς ρυθμοὺς τοῦ ντὲ Φάλλια, στὴ γοητευτικὴ ἐκείνη εἰσαγωγὴ τῆς ὄπερας τοῦ Ρώσου Δημήτρη Κομπαλέφσκυ «Κολὰς — Μπρενιόν»... Καὶ ἦταν ἀκόμα ἡ δραματικὴ Εἰσαγωγὴ τῆς «Δύναμης τοῦ Πεπρωμένου» τοῦ Βέρντι, ἡ γεμάτη ρωμαντισμὸ Εἰσαγωγὴ τοῦ «Φράϊσουτς» καὶ πάλι οἱ Χοροὶ τοῦ Σκαλκώτα...

Ἄ, ναί, γιὰ πολὺν καιρὸ θὰ μένουμε κάτω ἀπ' τὴν ἀνείπωτη αὐτὴν γοητεία ποὺ ζήσαμε αὐτὲς τὶς δυὸ μέρες ποὺ ὁ Μητρόπουλος καὶ ἡ ὀρχήστρα «του» μᾶς ἔκαναν νὰ ξεχάσουμε κάθε γηΐνη μιζέρια καὶ νὰ ἐπικοινωνήσουμε μὲ τὸ Θεό.

ΚΑΤΑ ΤΑΣ ΣΥΝΑΥΛΙΑΣ ΤΗΣ ΦΙΛΑΡΜΟΝ

ΤΟ ΑΘΗΝΑΪΚΟ ΚΟΙΝΟ ΑΠΕΘΕΩΣΕ ΣΤΟΝ «ΟΡΦΕΑ» ΤΟΝ ΜΗΤΡΟΠΟΥΛΟ

Ὀκτὼ φορὰς ἀνεκλήθη ἐπὶ σκηνῆς ὁ μεγάλος ἀρχιμουσικὸς ἀπὸ τὰ χειροκροτήματα τῶν ἀκροατῶν

ΤΑ ΑΠΡΟΟΠΤΑ ΤΗΣ... ΨΥΧΡΑΣ ΥΠΟΔΟΧΗΣ ΤΟΥ ΑΤΤΙΚΟΥ ΟΥΡΑΝΟΥ

Οἱ ὀργανωταὶ τοῦ Φεστιβὰλ 'Αθηνῶν ὑπῆρξαν... προφῆται ὅταν ἀνεκοίνωσαν, ὅτι εἰς περίπτωσιν κακοκαιρίας αἱ συναυλίαι τῆς Φιλαρμονικῆς 'Ορχήστρας τῆς Νέας 'Υόρκης, ὑπὸ τὴν διεύθυνσιν τοῦ διασήμου "Ελληνος ἀρχιμουσικοῦ Δημήτρη Μητροπούλου θὰ ἐδίδοντο ἀντὶ τοῦ θεάτρου τοῦ 'Ηρώδου τοῦ 'Αττικοῦ εἰς τὸν «'Ορφέα». Διότι, δυστυχῶς διὰ τοὺς φιλομούσους, ὁ ἀττικὸς οὐρανὸς ἐφρόντισε νὰ δοθοῦν αἱ συναυλίαι εἰς τὸν «'Ορφέα».

"Αν ὅμως ὁ ἀττικὸς οὐρανὸς ἐπεφύλαξε... ψυχρὰν ὑποδοχὴν εἰς τὸν διάσημον "Ελληνα ἀρχιμουσικὸν τὸ ἀθηναϊκὸν κοινὸν τὸν ἀπεθέωσε κυριολεκτικῶς κατὰ τὴν ἐμφάνισίν του ἀπὸ τῆς σκηνῆς τοῦ «'Ορφέως».

Δύο συναυλίαι ἀνεφέροντο εἰς τὸ πρόγραμμα, δεδομένου ὅμως ὅτι οὐδὲν κακὸν ἀμιγὲς καλοῦ, αἱ συναυλίαι ἔγιναν τρεῖς.

Διὰ νὰ ἱκανοποιήσῃ ἐκείνους — τὰς χιλιάδας — ἀπὸ τοὺς κατόχους εἰσιτηρίων, ποὺ ἦσαν εὐτυχεῖς μέχρι τῆς πρωΐας τοῦ Σαββάτου καὶ μετεβλήθησαν, ὡς ὑπεράριθμοι, εἰς δυστυχεῖς ὅταν ὁ ἀττικὸς οὐρανὸς ἄνοιξε τοὺς κρουνούς του, ὁ διάσημος "Ελλην ἀρχιμουσικὸς ἔδωσε χθὲς τὸ πρωῒ καὶ μίαν ἔκτακτον συναυλίαν.

'Ο Μητρόπουλος ἐγνώρισε τὴν ἀποθέωσιν καὶ εἰς τὰς τρεῖς συναυλίας. Κατὰ τὴν πρώτην συναυλίαν, τοῦ Σαββάτου, ἡ αἴθουσα τοῦ «'Ορφέως» εἶχε πλημμυρίσει ἀπὸ πλήθη κόσμου καὶ ἡ συγκοινωνία εἰς τὴν ὁδὸν Σταδίου καὶ τὰς παρόδους εἶχε διακοπῆ. Οἱ Βασιλεῖς, ὁ Διάδοχος καὶ αἱ Πριγκήπισσαι ἐτίμησαν διὰ τῆς παρουσίας των τὴν συναυλίαν. Παρευρέθησαν ἐπίσης μέλη τοῦ ὑπουργικοῦ συμβουλίου, ὁλόκληρον τὸ διπλωματικὸν Σῶμα καὶ ἄνθρωποι τῶν γραμμάτων καὶ τῶν τεχνῶν.

'Η ἐμφάνισις τοῦ Μητροπούλου ἐπὶ τῆς σκηνῆς ἐπροκάλεσε θύελλαν χειροκροτημάτων καὶ ἐπευφημιῶν.

'Επὶ πολλὰ λεπτὰ τῆς ὥρας ἡ αἴθουσα ἐδονεῖτο κυριολεκτικῶς ἀπὸ τὰ χειροκροτήματα. 'Αλλὰ αἱ ἐκδηλώσεις ὑπερέβησαν κάθε προηγούμενον εἰς τὸ τέλος τῆς συναυλίας. 'Οκτὼ φορὲς ὁ μεγάλος μαέστρος ἐνεφανίσθη εἰς τὴν σκηνὴν διὰ νὰ χαιρετίσῃ τὸ παραληροῦν ἀπὸ ἐνθουσιασμὸν κοινόν. Τόσον πανηγυρικὰ ἦσαν τὰ χειροκροτήματα καὶ αἱ ἐπευφημίαι, ὥστε ὁ διάσημος ἀρχιμουσικὸς ἠναγκάσθη νὰ ἐκτελέσῃ δύο εἰδικὰ συνθέσεις ἐκτὸς προγράμματος.

Τὴν αὐτὴν ἐπιτυχίαν ἐσημείωσαν τόσον ἡ χθεσινὴ πρωϊνὴ ἔκτακτος συναυλία ὅσον καὶ ἡ χθεσινοβραδυνὴ, τὴν ὁποίαν ἐτίμησαν καὶ πάλιν διὰ τῆς παρουσίας των οἱ Βασιλεῖς. 'Η συγκίνησις τοῦ Μητροποπούλου ἀπὸ τὰς ἐκδηλώσεις τοῦ ἀθηναϊκοῦ κοινοῦ ἦτο καταφανὴς εἰς τὸ πρόσωπόν του. Καὶ ὁ μεγάλος μαέστρος ἔδειξεν ὅλην του τὴν ἀγάπην πρὸς τοὺς "Ελληνας φιλομούσους μὲ τὴν χειρονομίαν του νὰ δώσῃ τὴν ἐκτὸς προγράμματος τρίτην συναυλίαν.

ΜΟΥΣΙΚΑ ΣΗΜΕΙΩΜΑΤΑ

ΟΙ ΤΡΕΙΣ ΣΥΝΑΥΛΙΕΣ ΤΟΥ ΔΗΜ. ΜΗΤΡΟΠΟΥΛΟΥ

ΜΕ ΤΗΝ ΦΙΛΑΡΜΟΝΙΚΗ ΟΡΧΗΣΤΡΑ ΤΗΣ Ν. ΥΟΡΚΗΣ

Σ

ΚΑΘΕ φορὰ ποὺ βρισκόμαστε μπροστὰ σὲ μιὰ μεγάλη καλλιτεχνικὴ προσωπικότητα, ἔχομε τὴν αἴσθησι ἑνὸς ἀπέραντου ψυχικοῦ πλουτισμοῦ. Παρ' ὅλο δὲ ποὺ ἡ ἐπαφὴ μὲ τὸ Δημήτρη Μητρόπουλο δὲν κράτησε περισσότερ, ἀπὸ δυὸ ἡμέρες — χρόνος ἀρκετὸς ὡστόσο γιὰ τρεῖς συναυλίες καὶ δυὸ δεξιώσεις — μᾶς φάνηκε ὅτι ζήσαμε μαζὶ του ἀναρίθμητες ὧρες, γιατὶ κάθε στιγμὴ ξεχείλιζε ἀπὸ μιὰ ἔντονη καὶ ἀπαράμιλλη καλλιτεχνικὴ συγκίνησι.

'Ο Δημήτρης Μητρόπουλος ἔχει μιὰ μαγικὴ δύναμι, ποὺ ἀναβλύζει ἀπὸ τὴν τέλεια διανοητικὴ κατάκτησι τοῦ μουσικοῦ κειμένου καὶ ἀπὸ τὸ «δαιμόνιο» τοῦ μεγάλου καλλιτέχνη, ποὺ εἶναι στὸ θάθος ἀγνὸς καὶ ἁπλός. Οἱ ἑρμηνεῖες του, ποὺ ἔχουν πολλὰ κοινὰ σημεῖα μὲ τὶς ἑρμηνεῖες τοῦ Φουρτβένγκλερ (καὶ ποὺ γι' αὐτὰ θὰ μιλήσουμε πιὸ κάτω), δίνουν τὸ μέγιστον δυνατὸν τῆς καλλιτεχνικῆς συγκινήσεως.

Γνωστὸ εἶναι ὅτι οἱ μεγάλοι ἀρχιμουσικοὶ ἀγωνίζονται νὰ ὑπερνικήσουν τὶς δυσκολίες ποὺ συναντοῦν διευθύνοντας ἕνα ἔργο, γιὰ νὰ μὴν τὸ ἐπηρεάσουν ἐρμηνεύοντάς το σύμφωνα μὲ τὴ δική τους ἰδιοσυγκρασία. "Οπως ὅμως ὁ Φουρτβένγκλερ καὶ ὁ Κλέμενς Κράους, ὁ Μητροπουλος κατορθώνει πάντα νὰ παραμένῃ ὁ θαυμαστὸς ἀρχιμουσικός, ποὺ δὲν παραμορφώνει τὸ ἔργο, ποὺ ἑρμηνεύει. "Ενει μιὰ μεγάλη ἄνεσι, μιὰ χαρούμενη διάθεσι ἀνάμικτη μὲ ἀπέραντο μεγαλεῖο, ἀπαλότητα καὶ διαφάνεια, ὅλα αὐτὰ δὲ ἐκφράζονται μὲ τὶς κινήσεις του, ποὺ εἶναι πλατεῖες κι' εὐγενικές, χωρὶς νὰ προσδίδουν θραδύτητα στὸ κείμενο, γεμάτες ζωτικότητα καὶ παλλόμενες ἀπὸ πάθος, χωρὶς ποτὲ οἱ χρόνοι νὰ ξεφύγουν ἀχαλίνωτοι.

Κάτω ἀπὸ τὰ χέρια του, συχνὰ ἀκίνητα σχεδόν, οἱ μουσικοὶ φθάνουν παίρνουν ἀνάγλυφη μορφὴ καὶ κάθε λεπτομέρεια βρίσκει τὸν ἀποφασίτητο χῶρο γιὰ τὴν πλήρη ἀνάπτυξί της. 'Ο φθόγγος ὅμως δὲν εἶναι μόνο ἀνάγλυφος. "Εχει ἐπίσης εὐρύτητα, διαύγεια καὶ χρῶμα. Κι' ἀλήθεια, τί ἐκπληκτικὸς ὁ χρωματισμὸς στὶς σελίδες ποὺ ἑρμηνεύει! "Οσο γιὰ τὶς ἐκλάμψεις, ποὺ ξέρει νὰ προκαλῇ σὲ ὡρισμένα μέρη, δὲν ξεπέφτουν ποτὲ σὲ μιὰ θεατρικὴ ἀπόδοση. Μιὰ ἄπειρη καὶ βαθυτάτη διείσδυσι δίνει ξεχωριστὲς ἀποχρώσεις σὲ κάθε ἀντίθεσι Σ' αὐτὸ ἐπίσης προστίθεται μιὰ ἔξοχη φινέτσα ἀντιλήψεως, μιὰ ἀριστοκρατικὴ ἐλαφρότητα, μιὰ θαυμαστὴ ζωτικότητα, ἕνα αὐθεντικὸ μεγαλεῖο εὐνένειας καὶ δυνάμεως καὶ μιὰ πάντα ἀληθινὴ καὶ ἀνθρώπινη ἀγνότητα.

'Ο Μητρόπουλος δίνει στὴ διεύθυνσί του ἕνα ἀσύγκριτο κῦρος, ποὺ, ὅπως π. χ. καὶ στὶς ἑρμηνεῖες τοῦ Φουρτβένγλερ, ἐκφράζει ἀλάνθαστα τὰ βάθη καὶ τὰ ὕψη τῶν ἀνθρωπίνων αἰσθημάτων.

Τὸ πρόγραμμα τῶν τριῶν συναυλιῶν περιελάμβανε: Κουπερὲ «'Η Σουλτάνα» σὲ διασκευὴ τοῦ Μιλὼ, Σεῦμαν «Συμφωνία ἀριθ. 2», Σοστάκοβιτς «Συμφωνία ἀρ. 10», Μπράμς «Παραλλαγὲς σ' ἕνα θέμα τοῦ Χάϋδν», Σκαλκώτα «'Ελληνικοὶ χοροί», Μπετόβεν «'Ηρωϊκή», Βέμπερ «'Ελεύθερος σκοπευτὴς» (εἰσαγωγὴ), Μέντελσον «Συμφωνία ἀριθ 5» Μπράμς «Συμφωνία ἀριθ 2», Ραχμανίνωφ «Βοκαλίζ», Ντὲ Φάλλια ἕνα μέρος ἀπὸ τὸ «Τρίκωχο καπέλλο», Βέρντι «Δύναμις τοῦ πεπρωμένου» (εἰσαγωγὴ) καὶ μιὰ σύνθεσι τοῦ Καμπαλέβσκυ. Μάταιος κόπος θὰ ἦταν ἡ ἀνάλυσι κάθε ἑρμηνείας τῶν ἔργων αὐτῶν.

'Ο Δημήτρης Μητρόπουλος μελετᾶ στὸ σπουδαστήριό του ἕνα μουσικὸ κείμενο.

Πρέπει νὰ σημειώσουμε ὅτι ὡρισμένες ἀποδόσεις θὰ μείνουν ἀξέχαστες. Ἀναφέρουμε ἰδιαίτερα τὴν «εἰσαγωγὴ» τοῦ «'Ελεύθερου σκοπευτὴ» μὲ τὴν ἐκπληκτικὴ ποικιλία διαθέσεων, τὸ ἔργο τοῦ «Κουπερὲν» μὲ τὴν ἠχητικότητα ἐκκλησιαστικοῦ ὀργάνου τῶν χάλκινων πνευστῶν, τοὺς χοροὺς τοῦ Σκαλκώτα καὶ τὸ μπαλλέτο τοῦ Ντὲ Φάλλια μὲ τὸ συναρπαστικὸ ρυθμὸ καὶ οἴστρο τους, τὴ συμφωνία τοῦ Μέντελσον μὲ τὴν ἀνάλαφρη γαλήνη της, τὴν «'Ηρωϊκὴ» μὲ τὴν ὑπέροχη μεταμόρφωσι τῶν ἀτομικῶν αἰσθημάτων σὲ καθολικὰ καὶ τὴν Δεκάτη συμφωνία τοῦ Σοστάκοβιτς, ὅπου οἱ τολμηρότητες τοῦ μεγάλου τεχνικοῦ καὶ οἱ ἐκπληκτικὲς ἐμπνεύσεις τοῦ συμφωνικοῦ μουσουργοῦ, πῆραν μιὰ ἔντονη ζωὴ στὴν ἀπόδοσι.

'Η Φιλαρμονικὴ συμφωνικὴ ὀρχήστρα τῆς Νέας 'Υόρκης, ποὺ ἐπραγματοποίησε τὶς ἑρμηνείες τοῦ Δημήτρη Μητρόπουλου εἶναι ἕνα σύνολο τόσης ὑψηλῆς καλλιτεχνικῆς ἀξίας, ὥστε περιττεύει κάθε λεπτόλογη ἐξέτασί της. Μιὰ ἀξιοθαύμαστη ρυθμικὴ ἀκοίβεια, μιὰ ἰσορροπία τῶν ἠχητικῶν ἐπιπέδων, ὅπως τὴν συναντᾶμε σπάνια, ἕνας τέλειος συντονισμὸς μὲ τὸ μαέστρο, μιὰ σταθερότητα παίξιματος καὶ ἕνας ἄπειρος πλοῦτος ἐκφραστικῶν μέσων ἀπέδειξαν ὅτι ὁ μεγάλος ἀρχιμουσικὸς Δημήτρης Μητρόπουλος δὲν θὰ μποροῦσε νὰ ἐπιθυμήσῃ καλύτερους ἑκτελεστάς.

ΤΟΥ κ. ΦΟΙΒΟΥ ΑΝΩΓΕΙΑΝΑΚΗ

«'Ανήκω στὴν ἐποχή μου καὶ αὐτὴν ἐξυπηρετῶ».

Μ' αὐτὴ τὴ φράσι, ποὺ ἀποτελεῖ τὸν πυρῆνα τῆς συνεντεύξεως ποὺ ἔδωσε, ἀποκαλύπτει ὁ Δημήτρης Μητρόπουλος, μὲ τὸν πιὸ καθαρὸ τρόπο τὴν προσωπικότητά του.

Μιὰ προσωπικότητα ποὺ ἔχει σφυρηλατήσει ὁ δεξιοτέχνης τοῦ πιάνου, ὁ πρωταπορειακὸς συνθέτης καὶ ὁ διευθυντὴς τῆς ὀρχήστρας. 'Ο στοχασμὸς καὶ ἡ φαντασία μαζὶ μὲ τὴ δράσι, ἡ μουσικὴ δημιουργία μαζὶ μὲ τὴν ἐκτέλεσι, ἔδωσαν στὸν Μητρόπουλο τὴ δυνατότητα τῆς ἐποπτείας τῶν συγχρόνων μουσικῶν ρευμάτων. Τοῦ ἐπέτρεψαν νὰ συλλάβῃ στὸ σύνολο, ὅπως καὶ στὶς χαρακτηριστικές τους λεπτομέρειες ὅλα τὰ σύγχρονα μουσικὰ προβλήματα καὶ νὰ πραγματοποιήσῃ ἔτσι τοὺς μουσικούς του ὁραματισμούς. Γιατί, μόνον ὅταν ἀντιμετωπίσουμε τὴν προσωπικότητά του, στὴν πολύμορφη δράσι της, θὰ μπορέσουμε νὰ ἐκτιμήσουμε σωστὰ τὸν πιανίστα, τὸν συνθέτη καὶ τέλος τὸν μαέστρο. Γιατὶ ὁ Μητρόπουλος δὲν εἶνε ὁ π ι α ν ί σ τ α ς ἢ ὁ σ υ ν θ έ τ η ς. 'Η συνθετική του δραστηριότητα ὅπως καὶ οἱ ἐμφανίσεις του σὰν δεξιοτέχνη - πιανίστα, ὁλοκληρώνουν τὸν μαέστρο - Μητρόπουλο.

Σὰν πιανίστας ἢ σὰ συνθέτης ἔχει νὰ λύσῃ κάθε φορὰ καὶ ἕνα μουσικὸ πρόβλημα, ποὺ σὲ τελευταία ἀνάλυσι θὰ ἐκμεταλλευθῇ ὁ μαέστρος-Μητρόπουλος, ἡ ἰδιότητα δηλ. ποὺ ἔχει μορφώσει καὶ προβάλλει τελικὰ τὴν προσωπικότητά του σὲ διεθνῆ κλίμακα.

'Η καλλιτεχνική του δραστηριότητα μέ ὁποιοδήποτε πρόσωπο καὶ ἂν παρουσιαζόταν — εἴτε σὰν πιανίστας, εἴτε σὰ συνθέτης — ἕνα σκοπὸ εἶχε: τὸν μαέστρο ποὺ ἐκκολάπταταν στὸ βάθος τῆς προσωπικότητάς του. Σ' αὐτὴν οὐσιαστικὰ τὴν ἰδιότητα τοῦ Μητροπούλου θὰ πρέπει ν' ἀναζητήσουμε τὴν καλλιτεχνικὴ του προσφορά. 'Εὰν θὰ θέλαμε νὰ κλείσουμε μέσα σὲ μιὰ φράσι τὸ χαρακτηριστικὸ στοιχεῖο ποὺ φέρνει σήμερα ὁ Μητρόπουλος στὴ διεύθυνσι τῆς ὀρχήστρας, θὰ λέγαμε ὅτι εἶνε ὁ δ υ ν α μ ι κ ὸ ς τ ο ν ι σ μ ό ς.

'Ακολουθῶντας τὸ πνεῦμα τῆς σύγχρονης ἐποχῆς, ποὺ στὴ μουσικὴ δημιουργία ἐκφράζεται μὲ τὸ προβάδισμα, θὰ λέγαμε τὴν κυριαρχία τοῦ ρυθμικοῦ στοιχείου, ὁ Μητρόπουλος μᾶς προσφέρει τὴ μουσικὴ παράδοσι — ἀπ' τὰ προκλασικὰ ἕως τὰ σύγχρονα μουσικὰ ἔργα — ἀναβαπτισμένη σ' ἕνα καινούργιο φῶς μὲ τὴν ἀναζωογονητικὴ δύναμι ποὺ τῆς δίδουν ὁ τονισμὸς καὶ ἡ προβολὴ τοῦ ρυθμικοῦ στοιχείου. Τὰ πάντα κάτω ἀπ' τὴν μπαγκέτα του παίρνουν μιὰ καινούργια λάμψι. Κ' ἡ πιὸ ἀδιάφορη μελῳδικὴ λεπτομέρεια ξαναβρίσκει τὸ ρυθμικὸ σκελετό της καὶ ἀποκτᾶ σφρίγος, ἐνδιαφέρον. 'Ο ρυθμός, τὸ πρωταρχικὸ αὐτὸ στοιχεῖο τῆς μουσικῆς ξαναπαίρνει μὲ τὸν Μητρόπουλο τὴ θέσι του.

Παράλληλα, τὸ μελῳδικὸ μοτίβο ἀκολουθεῖ καὶ αὐτό, στὴν ἑρμηνεία τοῦ Μητρόπουλου, τὸ ἔντονο ἀντιρρομαντικὸ πνεῦμα τῆς ἐποχῆς. 'Η ἔμφασι καὶ οἱ πληθωρικὲς διαχύσεις ἔχουν παραχωρήσει τὴ θέσι τους σὲ μιὰ νεοκλασικὴ ἀντίληψι, ποὺ σέβεται αὐστηρὰ τὸ «γράμμα» τῆς παρτισιὸν, ἀκριβῶς γιὰ νὰ ἐπιτύχῃ, νὰ φθάσῃ στὸ βάθος τῆς μουσικῆς ποὺ ἑρμηνεύει.

Στὸ σημεῖο αὐτὸ ἀποφασιστικὸ ρόλο παίζει ἡ πλαστικότητα τῶν κινήσεων τοῦ Μητροπούλου. 'Η ἀνυπέρβλητη αὐτὴ δύναμι, ποὺ ἄλλοτε ὁρμητικὴ καὶ ἀπαλή, μεταμορφώνει τοὺς μουσικοὺς τῆς ὀρχήστρας σ' ἕνα ζωντανὸ, μαζὶ ὅμως καὶ πειθήνιο στὰ κελεύσματά του μουσικὸ ὄργανο, ἕτοιμο πάντα νὰ μετουσιώσῃ σὲ ρυθμό, μελῳδία καὶ ἁρμονία τοὺς μουσικούς του ὁραματισμούς.

Δίπλα σ' αὐτὲς τὶς σκέψεις ποὺ μᾶς γέννησε τὸ πέρασμα τοῦ Μητροπούλου ἀπ' τὴν 'Αθήνα, θὰ ἦταν τὸ λιγώτερο ἀφέλεια νὰ προσθέσουμε τὴ γνώμη μας γιὰ τὴν ἑρμηνεία τῶν ἔργων ποὺ ἀκούσαμε. Μέγιστον μάθημα, ποὺ ἂς ἐλπίσουμε ὅτι ἡ εὐεργετικὴ του ἐπίδρασι θὰ ἔχῃ τὸ ἀποτέλεσμα ποὺ ὅλοι εὐχόμαστε.

ΦΟΙΒΟΣ ΑΝΩΓΕΙΑΝΝΑΚΗΣ

'Ο Μητρόπουλος κατὰ τὴν στιγμὴν ποὺ ἔφευγε χθὲς ἀπὸ τὸ ἀεροδρόμιον Ἑλληνικοῦ.

'Ο ΔΗΜΗΤΡΗΣ ΜΗΤΡΟΠΟΥΛΟΣ κατὰ τὴν χθεσινὴν ἀναχώρησίν του εἰς τὸ ἀεροδρόμιον τοῦ 'Ελληνικοῦ ὁμιλῶν πρὸς ὅσους τὸν προέπεμψαν μέχρις ἐκεῖ ἐπανελάβεν ὅτι ἡ Τέχνη ἀνήκει εἰς τοὺς πολλοὺς καὶ πρέπει νὰ ἔχουν ὅλοι τῆν δυνατότητα νὰ παρακολουθοῦν τὶς μουσικὲς ἐκδηλώσεις. Κατόπιν ὁ διαπρεπὴς μαέστρος μὲ καταφανῆ συγκίνησιν ἐξέφρασε πρὸς τοὺς παριστανομένους τὴν λύπην του διότι δὲν θὰ μπορέσῃ νὰ ἔλθῃ τοῦ χρόνου καὶ πάλιν εἰς τὴν 'Ελλάδα ὅπως ἐπιθυμεῖ πάρα πολύ. Μία μόνον περίπτωσις ὑπάρχει σχετικῶς: Δεδομένου ὅτι κατὰ πᾶσαν πιθανότητα τοῦ χρόνου θὰ διευθύνῃ τὴν Συμφωνικὴν τῆς Βιέννης δὲν ἀποκλείεται ὁ διαπρεπὴς καλλιτέχνης νὰ ἐπιχειρήσῃ ἐπὶ κεφαλῆς τῆς μεγάλης αὐτῆς ὀρχήστρας περιοδείαν καὶ κατ' αὐτὸν τὸν τρόπον νὰ κατορθώσῃ νὰ ξαναέλθῃ εἰς τὴν Πατρίδα του.

Ο ΘΡΙΑΜΒΟΣ ΤΟΥ ΜΗΤΡΟΠΟΥΛΟΥ

ΣΥΝΗΡΠΑΣΕ ΤΟ ΚΟΙΝΟΝ Ο «ΜΑΓΟΣ ΤΗΣ ΜΠΑΓΚΕΤΑΣ»

ΣΑΝ ΥΠΝΩΤΙΣΜΕΝΗ Η ΟΡΧΗΣΤΡΑ ΑΚΟΛΟΥΘΟΥΣΕ ΤΟΝ ΑΡΧΗΓΟ ΤΗΣ ΠΟΥ ΕΧΑΡΙΣΕ ΣΤΟ ΚΟΙΝΟΝ ΕΝΑ ΜΟΥΣΙΚΟ ΠΑΡΑΔΕΙΣΟ

Αὐτὸ τὸ καταπληκτικὸ φαινόμενο τῆς μπαγκέτας, ποὺ ὁ ἐρχομός του ἐπὶ κεφαλῆς τῆς Φιλαρμονικῆς τῆς Νέας Ὑόρκης, μᾶς ἀνύψωσε σ' οὐράνιες σφαῖρες ἀπροσμέτρητης μουσικῆς ἀπολαύσεως, αὐτὸς ὁ σύγχρονος Μάγος τῆς Ὀρχήστρας, ὁ Δημήτρης Μητρόπουλος, εἶνε Ἕλλην.

Τὸ πέρασμά του ἐπ' ἐδῶ στάθηκε ἡ ἀποκάλυψη ἑνὸς παραμυθένιου κόσμου, ποὺ μᾶς πρόσφερε τ' ἀληθινό, τὸ ὑπέργειο νόημα τῆς θείας αὐτῆς τέχνης, τῆς μουσικῆς.

Τοῦτες οἱ γραμμὲς ποὺ χαράζω δὲν ἔχουν κἂν τὴν θέσι κριτικῆς.... Κάτι τέτοιο, νομίζω, θἄταν ἀσυγχώρητη ἀσέβεια, γιὰ ἕνα γίγαντα τῆς μουσικῆς... Αὐτὰ μας τὰ λόγια ἀποτελοῦν ἕνα ἐλάχιστο φόρο τιμῆς, γιὰ τὸν ἀπαράμιλλο αὐτὸν «σέφ», ποὺ μὲ τὰ ρυθμικά του σχήματα, σὰν διευθύνει, μαγνητίζει καὶ τοὺς μουσικοὺς τῆς Ὀρχήστρας—παρασύροντάς τους σ' ἀσύλληπτης μουσικῆς διμορφιὰς ἑρμηνείες — καὶ τοὺς ἀκροατές του...

Τί εἶνε ὁ Δημήτρης Μητρόπουλος; Διάσημος διευθυντὴς Ὀρχήστρας, ποὺ ἡ φήμη του — γοργόφτερο πουλὶ — ἁπλώνεται σήμερα σ' ὅλη τὴν οἰκουμένη; "Η ἀκόμη ἕνα ἀκαταδάμαστο μουσικὸ δαιμόνιο; Κι' ὅμως τέτοιοι χαρακτηρισμοὶ ἐπαληθεύουν, ἄγαγε, τὴν πραγματικότητα;

"Οχι! Ὁ Μητρόπουλος εἶνε ὅλα αὐτά, καὶ κάτι ἀκόμη, ποὺ ξεπερνᾶ τὰ ὅρια τῆς πιὸ τολμηρῆς φαντασίας: Φιλόσοφος τῆς μπαγκέτας! Ἡμίθεος τῆς τέχνης!

"Ενα πνεῦμα κυρίαρχο, φεγγοβόλο, ἀνεξάντλητο σὲ καλλιτεχνικὴ δύναμι...

Σύμβολο μιᾶς ἐποχῆς ποὺ διεκδικεῖ τὰ πάντα γιὰ τὸν ἑαυτό της, ἀποτελεῖ ὁ Δημήτρης Μητρόπουλος.

Τὰ διεκδικεῖ καὶ τὰ κατακτᾶ. Μήπως δὲν εἶνε ὑπεράξιος;

Μήπως δὲν εἶνε ἡ προσωποποίησις ἑνὸς χαλύβδινου μουσικοῦ «πιστεύω», ποὺ πάνω σ' αὐτὸ ἀνυψώνει κάθε τόσο καὶ ἀπὸ ἕνα μουσικὸ μνημεῖο ἑρμηνείας;...

Τί εἶνε ἡ Ὀρχήστρα γιὰ τὸν Μητρόπουλο; Μέσο ἐκφράσεως τοῦ καλλιτεχνικοῦ ψυχικοῦ του κόσμου, ἢ ἕνα παιχνίδι στὰ μαγικά του χέρια;

Ποιὰ φλόγα πυρώνει τὸ εἶναι του, καὶ ποιὰ εἶνε ἡ πεμπτουσία, μὲ τὴν ὁποία αἰχμαλωτίζει τοὺς πάντας;

Εἶνε τὸ γέννημα τῆς μεγαλοφυΐας ὁ Μητρόπουλος, ποὺ ἀποτυπώνει στὴν καρδιὰ τῶν ἀνθρώπων τὶς δονήσεις τῆς δικῆς του ὑπάρξεως...

Ἐκεῖνο ποὺ μᾶς πρόσφερε ὁ Μητρόπουλος μὲ τὴν Φιλαρμονικὴ Ὀρχήστρα τῆς Νέας Ὑόρκης, δὲν χαρακτηρίζεται οὔτε μὲ ἐκφράσεις θαυμασμοῦ, οὔτε μὲ παράθεσι ἁλυσίδας ἐνθουσιαστικῶν ἐπιφωνημάτων.

Στὸν Μητρόπουλο σταματοῦν ὅλα αὐτά... Γιατὶ ἡ τέχνη του, ὑπέροχη στὴν οὐράνια ὁμορφιά της, ἀνυπέρβλητη στὴν τελειότητά της, ἀντανακλᾶ τὸ χάρμα τῆς καλαισθησίας, τῆς ἰσορροπίας, στὴν ἄμεση καὶ προσωπικὴ ἔκφρασι τῆς ψυχῆς του καὶ τῆς πνευματικῆς ἀρχιτεκτονικῆς του...

Πάνω ἀπὸ ἕνα ἀριστουργηματικὸ ὀργανικὸ σῶμα — τὴν Φιλαρμονικὴ Ὀρχήστρα τῆς Νέας Ὑόρκης — ὁ Μητρόπουλος πραγματοποιεῖ μουσικὲς ἑρμηνεῖες, ποὺ γοητεύουν καὶ καθηλώνουν.

Ἡ κάθε του κίνησι, εἴτε μὲ τὸ ἀριστερὸ χέρι, εἴτε μὲ τὰ δεξί, εἶνε κι' ἕνα ψυχικὸ πρόσταγμα γιὰ τοὺς μουσικοὺς τῆς Ὀρχήστρας: «Ἐμπρός! Πραγματοποιῆστε τὸ ἀπραγματοποίητο, περιβάλετε τὴν κάθε σας νότα, τὴν κάθε σας μελωδικὴ φράσι, τὴν κάθε συγχορδία, μὲ τὸν φωτοστέφανο ἑρμηνευτικοῦ ὀνείρου»...

Αὐτὰ λὲν τὰ χέρια τοῦ μαέστρου-μάγου, ὅταν διαγράφουν τὰ ρυθμικὰ σχήματα, τὰ ἄλλοτε τόσο ἁπλᾶ καὶ ἄλλοτε νευρώδη, συναρπαστικά, συγκλονιστικά.

Πειθήνια, ὑπνωτισμένη ἡ Ὀρχήστρα, ἀκολουθεῖ τὸν ἀρχηγό της στὴν θριαμβευτικὴ μουσική του πορεία...

Καὶ ἡ ἐπιβολὴ ἐκχύνεται ἀτέλειωτη.. Τὸ ἀριστερό του χέρι διαλέγει, ἀποφασίζει, βγάζει στὴν ἐπιφάνεια αἰθέρια ἠχητικὰ συμπλέγματα.

Τὰ ἔγχορδα, μὲ καταπληκτικὴ εὐστροφία καὶ ἠχητικὴ ὁμοιογένεια, δονοῦνται ἀπὸ μιὰ ἀπαράμιλλη ἐκφραστικὴ πληρότητα...

Οἱ βιόλες προβάλλουν καλλίγραμμες, οὐσιαστικές, εὐτίσθητες... Πλαισιώνουν τὰ βιολιὰ καὶ πλαισιώνονται ἀπὸ αὐτά, μὲ διάκρισι καὶ τὰ μελωδικὰ σχέδια, εὔκαμπτα, παίρνουν μιὰ μορφὴ ἀμεσότητας — ἑναρμονίζονται καὶ προσαρμόζονται σὲ κάθε πνευματικὴ ἀπόχρωσι. Ἀηδονόλαλα τὰ φλάουτα, σὲ μιὰ κινητικὴ ἀνάπλασι τοῦ Μητρόπουλου. Νάτο τὸ Κόρ - Ἀνγκλαί, μὲ μιὰ γοητευτικὴ ἐγκαλιτέ, ἐνῶ ἀμέσως τὸ τραγούδι τῶν Ὄμποε ξεπροβάλλει, σὰν ἠχὼ θεϊκῆς μουσικῆς ὑπάρξεως.

Πιὸ πέρα, τὰ κλαρῖνα μὲ τὰ φαγκότα, συμπληρώνουν τὴν θεσπέσια ἠχητικὴ αἴσθησι τῆς ὁμάδας τῶν ξυλίνων πνευστῶν.

Ποῦ εἶνε τὸ βαρύγδουπο καὶ τὸ βλοσυρὸ τῶν κοντραμπάσσων;

Μαγεύονται κι' αὐτὰ στὴν μπαγκέτα τοῦ Μητρόπουλου. Ἐλίσσονται, ἐξευγενίζονται, ἀπαγγέλλουν πειθαρχῶντας στὸν Ἄϊαντα, μαζὶ μὲ τὰ βιολοντσέλλα. Δέος, ὅταν ὁ μάγος τῆς Ὀρχήστρας δώση τὸ σύνθημα γιὰ κρεσέντο ὡς τὸ φόρτε.

Κύματα ἁρμονίας ἀπ' τὰ κόρνα. Ποίημα ἠχητικῆς διαυγείας κι' ἐδῶ. Καὶ στὰ τρομπόνια καὶ στὶς τρόμπες ἐπίσης.

Σὲ ἁρνάκια μετέβαλε ὁ Μητρόπουλος τοὺς ὀργανικοὺς λύκους τῆς Ὀρχήστρας...

Καὶ ὁ πίνακας τῶν ἠχητικῶν χρωμάτων, ἀνεξάντλητος σὲ ἰριδισμούς, προβάλλει κάθε στιγμή...

Τὸ πνεῦμα τοῦ ἀκροατῆ λυγίζει κάτω ἀπ' τὸ χέρι τοῦ μεγάλου δασκάλου.

Θἄχε νόημα νὰ μιλήσω πιὰ, ὕστερα ἀπ' αὐτά, γιὰ τὴν ἑρμηνεία τῆς 2ας Συμφωνίας τοῦ Σούμαν, τοῦ πρελούντιου τῶν Κουπερέν—Μιλώ, ἢ γιὰ τὴν δεκάτη Συμφωνία τοῦ Σοστάκοβιτς, ἑνὸς καταπληκτικοῦ σὲ σύλληψιν, θεματικὴ ἀνάπτυξι καὶ ἐνορχηστρωτικὸ θάμβος ἔργου, ποὺ φανερώνει τὴν μεγαλειώδη προσωπικότητα αὐτοῦ τοῦ Ρώσσου συνθέτη;

Μὰ σ' αὐτὸν τὸν μουσικὸ Παράδεισο τοῦ Δημήτρη Μητρόπουλου, τί νὰ πρωτοχαρῆ κανείς; Ἀλήθεια! Τί νὰ πρωτοχαρῆ;...

ΠΕΡΙ ΟΡΧΗΣΤΡΑΣ

Τὸ πρωϊνὸν δημοσιογραφικὸν ὄργανον τοῦ ΚΚΕ προσπαθεῖ νὰ πείσῃ τοὺς ἀναγνώστας του, ὅτι ἡ Φιλαρμονικὴ τῆς Ν. Ὑόρκης ἔκανε εἰς τὴν αἴθουσαν τοῦ «Ὀρφέως» ὄχι ἀμερικανικήν, ἀλλὰ ρωσικὴν προπαγάνδαν μὲ τὴν 10ην Συμφωνίαν τοῦ Σοστάκοβιτς. Λησμονεῖ κατ' ἀρχὴν ἡ «Αὐγή», ὅτι ἀπὸ τῆς πρώτης στιγμῆς ὑπῆρχεν εἰς τὸ πρόγραμμα ἡ Συμφωνία τοῦ Προκόπιεφ, ἡ ὁποία, ὅμως, δὲν ἐξετελέσθη διὰ τεχνικοὺς λόγους, συνεπῶς ἡ ἐκτέλεσις ἄλλου ρωσικοῦ ἔργου δὲν ἀπετέλει μίαν αὐθόρμητον ἐκδήλωσιν, ἀλλὰ ἁπλῶς τὴν τήρησιν τοῦ προγράμματος. Ὀλίγον μᾶς ἐνδιαφέρει ἂν ἡ Φιλαρμονικὴ τῆς Ν. Ὑόρκης ἔκανε προπαγάνδαν εἴτε ρωσικήν, εἴτε ἀμερικανικὴν κατὰ τὴν ἐμφάνισίν της εἰς τὰς Ἀθήνας. Ἐκεῖνο, τὸ ὁποῖον ἔχει σημασίαν εἶναι, ὅτι ἐπὶ κεφαλῆς τῆς μεγαλυτέρας ὀρχήστρας τοῦ κόσμου, εἶναι ἕνας "Ελλην, ὁ Δημήτρης Μητρόπουλος, ὁ ὁποῖος ἐπισύρει τὸν διεθνῆ θαυμασμὸν καὶ τιμᾷ τὸ ὄνομα τῆς Ἑλλάδος εἰς ὁλόκληρον τὸν κόσμον. Ὁ "Ελλην μαέστρος κάμνει προπαγάνδαν ὀρχήστρας καὶ ὄχι μουσικῆς. Ἂς ἀφήσῃ, λοιπόν, ἡ «Αὐγὴ» τὰ κουτοπόνηρα συμπεράσματά της καὶ ἂς μᾶς εἴπῃ καθαρὰ ἂν ἦταν ποτὲ δυνατὸν μία ρωσικὴ ὀρχήστρα περιοδεύουσα εἰς τὸν ἐλεύθερον κόσμον νὰ ἔκανε ἀμερικανικὴν προπαγάνδαν.

Ἀπόκομμα ΕΛΕΥΘΕΡΙΑΣ

Οἱ Βασιλεῖς φωτογραφούμενοι κατὰ τὸ διάλειμμα τῆς προχθεσινῆς συναυλίας τῆς Φιλαρμονικῆς Ὀρχήστρας τῆς Νέας Ὑόρκης μὲ τὸν διάσημον μαέστρον Δημήτρη Μητρόπουλο.

Η ΜΟΥΣΙΚΗ ΚΙΝΗΣΙΣ

Ο ΜΗΤΡΟΠΟΥΛΟΣ ΔΙΕΥΘΥΝΕΙ

ΑΙ ΤΡΕΙΣ ΣΥΝΑΥΛΙΑΙ ΤΗΣ ΦΙΛΑΡΜΟΝΙΚΗΣ ΤΗΣ ΝΕΑΣ ΥΟΡΚΗΣ

Τὸ Φεστιβὰλ Ἀθηνῶν ἔκλεισε μὲ τὶς συμφωνικὲς συναυλίες τῆς Φιλαρμονικῆς Ὀρχήστρας Νέας Ὑόρκης κάτω ἀπὸ τὴ διεύθυνση τοῦ Δημήτρη Μητρόπουλου.

Οἱ συναυλίες αὐτὲς (δύο τὸν ἀριθμό, ὅπως εἶχε ἀρχικὰ καθορισθῆ) ἐπρόκειτο, φυσικά, νὰ δοθοῦν στὸ Ὠδεῖο Ἡρώδου Ἀττικοῦ. Καὶ ἀσφαλῶς ἐκεῖ μέσα, παρ' ὅλα τὰ προβλήματα ἀκουστικῆς, ποὺ δημιουργεῖ τὸ ὑπαίθριο, ἡ ὅλη καλλιτεχνικὴ ἐκδήλωση θὰ εἶχε ἕναν μεγαλοπρεπέστερο χαρακτῆρα καὶ μιὰ γοητεία μὲ ἀνεξίτηλα τὰ αἰσθητικὰ ἀποτελέσματά της.

Γιατὶ τέτοια μέρη καὶ τέτοιοι χῶροι δὲν βρίσκονται ἀλλοῦ...

Μὰ ὁ οὐρανὸς τῆς Ἀθήνας πεισματικὰ τὶς δυὸ τούτες μέρες (Σάββατο καὶ Κυριακὴ) δὲν ἐπέτρεψε τὸ πλησίασμα στὰ μνημεῖα τοῦ φωτεινοῦ καὶ ἀθάνατου ἑλληνικοῦ πνεύματος...

Ἔτσι οἱ συναυλίες δόθηκαν στὸν «Ὀρφέα».

Καὶ ἐπειδὴ δὲν μποροῦσαν νὰ τὶς παρακολουθήσουν ὅλοι, ὅσοι εἶχαν ἀγοράσει εἰσιτήρια γιὰ τὸ ἀρχαῖο Ὠδεῖο, μιὰ ἔκτακτη (τρίτη) δόθηκε τὴν Κυριακὴ τὸ πρωῒ γιὰ νὰ καλυφθῆ, κατὰ ἕναν τρόπο, τὸ κενό.

Ἡ αἴθουσα ὅμως αὐτὴ ἀποδείχθηκε σχετικὰ μικρὴ γιὰ τὸν ὄγκο τῆς ξένης ὀρχήστρας, ὄγκο σὲ ἀριθμὸ ὀργάνων καὶ ἠχητικὴ ἀπόδοση.

Ἐκατό, περίπου, μουσικοὶ στριμώχθηκαν μέσα στὸ κουτὶ ἐκεῖνο τῆς «σκηνῆς» μὲ ἀποτέλεσμα νὰ τείνῃ ὁ ἦχος νὰ σπάσῃ τὰ πάντα γύρω γιὰ νὰ βρῆ διέξοδο.

Ἡ ἠχητικότητα, ὅπως τὴν ἔχει ρυθμίσει ὁ Μητρόπουλος, καὶ τὸ ἐπίπεδο δυναμικῆς τοῦ ἀρχιμουσικοῦ μας, ὅπως τὸ ἔχει ἀνεβάσει ἕνα - δυὸ βαθμοὺς πάνω ἀπὸ τὴν περιοχὴ τοῦ αἰθέριου «πιανίσσιμο» καὶ αὐτοῦ τοῦ αἰθέριου «πιάνο», ζητοῦν τὸ «ἀνάλογό» τους σὲ χῶρο ὥστε ν' ἀποφευχθῆ ἡ ἐντύπωση μιᾶς κάποιας ἠχητικῆς σκληρότητας.

Ἡ ἀντίληψη αὐτὴ ἦχου καὶ δυναμικῆς τοῦ Μητρόπουλου εἶναι σύμφωνη μὲ τὴ φλογερὴ καλλιτεχνική του ἰδιοσυγκρασία, ἀλλὰ καὶ μὲ τὸ αἴσθημα τοῦ «χρώματος» καὶ τὴν τάση πρὸς τὸ «μεγάλο», ποὺ κυριαρχεῖ στὸ Νέο Κόσμο.

Εἴπαμε «φλογερὴ ἰδιοσυγκρασία». Πράγματι ὁ Μητρόπουλος ὁλόκληρος εἶναι μιὰ φλόγα.

Ἔτσι τὸν γνωρίσαμε πρὶν χρόνια πολλὰ καὶ ἔτσι εἶναι καὶ σήμερα.

Μὲ τὴ διαφορά, τώρα, ὅτι ἡ μουσική του ἐξωτερίκευση, ὡς τεχνική καὶ ὡς ἔκφραση, προδίδει τὸ μεγάλο καταστάλαγμα τοῦ χρόνου.

Μὲ ἄλλες λέξεις «τὴ γαλήνη, ποὺ τὴ βρίσκει ὁ δημιουργὸς ὅταν φτάσει στὴν κορφὴ τῆς ἑξελ ἕξεως καὶ σταδιοδρομίας του, Γαλήνη ὄχι στὴν ἔκφραση, ἀλλὰ στὸν τρόπο χρησιμοποιήσεως τῶν μέσων καὶ στὸ γάργαντα τοῦ δημιουργικοῦ δρόμου.

Τὸ εἶναι ὁλόκληρο τοῦ μεγάλου αὐτοῦ ἀρχιμουσικοῦ εἶναι ἦχος καὶ μουσική.

"Ενας ὁρμητικὸς χείμαρρος, ποὺ δυὸ ἔχει τὶς κύριες πηγές του: τὸ ἔνστικτο καὶ τὸ συναίσθημα. ..

"Ας μὴ ζητήσωμε τὸ ἀπολλώνειο φῶς καὶ τὴν ἀπολλώνεια γαλήνη.

Ὁ χείμαρρος παρασύρει τὰ πάντα. Καὶ αὐτό, ἀκόμα, τὸ πνεῦμα.

Ἀπὸ ὅλο του τὸ σῶμα ξεπηδοῦν, λές, μουσικοὶ ἦχοι.

Ἡ «μπαγκέττα» (ὁ Μητρόπουλος χρησιμοποιεῖ τώρα τὸ μαγικὸ αὐτὸ ραβδάκι) σπανίως σχηματίζει τοὺς ἀριθμοὺς τοῦ μουσικοῦ μέτρου. Εἶναι καὶ αὐτὴ μαζὶ μὲ τὰ χέρια, τὰ δάχτυλα, τοὺς βραχίονες, τὸ κεφάλι, τὸ σῶμα ὁλόκληρο ἕνα «μουσικὸ ὄργανο», αὐτό, ποὺ ἀποτελεῖ τὴ συνισταμένη τῆς ὅλης μουσικῆς προσφορᾶς.

Προηγεῖται, νομίζεις, ὁ ὀπτικὸς παράγοντας καὶ ἀκολουθεῖ σὰν ἄμεση καὶ φυσικὴ συνέπειά του ὁ ἀκουστικός.

Γιὰ τοῦτο ἡ τέχνη τοῦ Μητρόπουλου εἶναι αὐστηρὰ προσωπικὴ καὶ ὑποκειμενική.

Μιὰ τέχνη, ποὺ ἔχει ἄφθονο τὸ ρωμαντικὸ στοιχεῖο.

Μιὰ τέχνη, ποὺ δὲν μπορεῖ ἀζημίως νὰ τὴν ἀντιγράψῃ κανείς.

Μιὰ τέχνη, ποὺ ἠλεκτρίζει τὰ πλήθη καὶ κεντᾶ τὰ νεῦρα.

Τέχνη, θὰ μποροῦσε ἴσως νὰ τὴν ἀποκαλέσῃ κανείς, τῶν μαζῶν, ποὺ περιεκλείνει, ὡστόσο, ἄπειρα τὰ θαυμάσια σὲ ἐκφραστικὴ λεπτότητα, προνόμιο, τοῦτο, τῶν ὀλίγων, ποὺ δέχθηκαν τὴν εὔνοια τοῦ Θείου.

Τέχνη ἐντελῶς ἰδιόρρυθμη, ποὺ τὸν ἔντονο, τὸν ὑπερβολικὸ στιγμὲς - στιγμὲς (ὄχι ὅμως νοσηρό) ρωμαντισμό της τὸν προσαρμόζει μὲ καταπληκτικὸ τρόπο καὶ τὸν χρησιμοποιεῖ στὴν ἀπόδοση τῆς σύγχρονης μουσικῆς προσφορᾶς.

Ἡ μοναδικὴ ἑρμηνεία, ἀπὸ τὸν Μητρόπουλο, τῆς μουσικῆς ταύτης δείχνει, ὅτι τὸ ρωμαντικὸ στοιχεῖο ὑπάρχει πάντα, ἀκόμα καὶ στὴν ἐποχή μας αὐτή, ποὺ τὴ χαρακτηρίζομε ὡς πεζή.

"Αν ἐξαιρέσωμε τὴν «Ἡρωϊκὴ Συμφωνία» τοῦ Μπετόβεν ὁ Μητρόπουλος μᾶς ἔδωσε στὶς τρεῖς αὐτὲς συναυλίες τῆς Φιλαρμονικῆς Ὀρχήστρας Νέας Ὑόρκης μουσικὴ ρωμαντικὴ καὶ σύγχρονη: τὴ Συμφωνία σὲ ντὸ μεῖζ. (γνωστὴ μὲ τὸν ἀριθμὸ 2) τοῦ Σούμαν, τὴ Συμφωνία ἀριθ. 2 καὶ τὶς «Παραλλαγὲς σ' ἕνα θέμα τοῦ Χάϋδν» τοῦ Μπράμς, τὴ Συμφωνία «τῆς Μεταρρυθμίσεως» τοῦ Μέντελσον, τὴ 10η Συμφωνία τοῦ Σοστακόβιτς (τὸ ἔργο τοῦτο παίχθηκε, γιὰ τεχνικοὺς λόγους, στὴ θέση τῆς 5ης Συμφωνίας τοῦ Προκόφιεφ, ποὺ ἀνέγραφε τὸ πρόγραμμα), τὸ «Πρελούδιο καὶ Ἀλλέγκρο» τοῦ Φ. Κουπερέν, κατὰ διασκευὴ Μιλώ, τὴν εἰσαγωγὴ στὸν «Φράϊσυτς» τοῦ Βέμπερ, τὴν εἰσαγωγὴ στὴ «Δύναμη τοῦ Πεπρωμένου» τοῦ Βέρντι, 4 ἑλληνικοὺς χοροὺς τοῦ Σκαλκώτα καί, ἀπὸ τὰ «μπίς», μουσικὴ τῶν Ραχμάνινωφ, Ντὲ Φάλλια, Καβαλέφσκι.

Τὴ Συμφωνία σὲ μὶ ἔλασ., ἀριθ. 10 (ἔργο 93), τοῦ Σοστακόβιτς, ποὺ γράφηκε τὸ 1953, τὴν ἀκούσαμε προχθὲς γιὰ πρώτη φορά.

Εἶναι ἕνα ἔργο τεχνικώτατα γραμμένο, μὲ ἑνότητα, χρῶμα, λυρισμό, μὲ ἔκδηλη τὴν ὕπαρξη τοῦ λαϊκοῦ στοιχείου, ἔργο, ποὺ προδίδει ἔμπνευση καὶ ζωντανὸ μουσικὸ παλμό. Καμμιὰ προσπάθεια δημιουργίας «ἐντυπώσεων» μὲ ἐξεζητημένες ἁρμονίες ἢ μουσικὰ διαστήματα ἢ ἄλλους συνδυασμούς.

Μέσα στὰ πλαίσια μιᾶς ἀληθινὰ μουσικῆς σύγχρονης ἀντιλήψεως καὶ τεχνοτροπίας τὸ ἔργο τοῦτο παρουσιάζει πραγματικὸ ἐνδιαφέρον μὲ τὴν εἰλικρίνεια καὶ τὴ συνέπεια τοῦ δημιουργοῦ του.

Καὶ νομίζω, πὼς ἦταν δύσκολο νὰ ζητήσῃ κανεὶς ὡραιότερη ἑρμηνεία ἀπὸ αὐτήν, ποὺ μᾶς ἔδωσε ὁ Μητρόπουλος.

Ἡ φλόγα τοῦ ἀρχιμουσικοῦ φώτισε καὶ τὶς πιὸ μικρές, τὶς πιὸ λεπτομερειακὲς πτυχές του.

Τὰ «ἐφφέ» δυναμικῆς τοῦ ἀρχιμουσικοῦ, ἰδίως κατὰ τὸ ζωηρὸ Β΄ μέρος τῆς Συμφωνίας, θὰ μᾶς μείνουν ἀλησμόνητα.

Ἡ μεγάλη τέχνη τοῦ "Ελληνα ἑμηνευτῆ βρῆκε ἀνταπόκριση στὸ θαυμάσιο σύνολο, ποὺ τὸ ἀποτελοῦν οἱ μουσικοὶ τῆς Φιλαρμονικῆς Νέας Ὑόρκης.

Ἡ ἑνότητα, ἡ ὁμοιογένεια, ἡ εὐκαμψία, τὸ «συμπαγὲς» τοῦ ἤχου τῆς ὀρχήστρας αὐτῆς ναρίζουν ἀληθινὴ καλλιτεχνικὴ γιορὰ στὸν ἀκροατή.

Ἀπὸ τὸ πρῶτο ὡς τὸ τελευταῖο ἀναλόγιο ὅλοι ἀπεδίδουν μὲ ὅλη τὴν ψυχὴ καὶ τὴν τέχνη τους.

"Ενα σύνολο μὲ πειθαρχία, μὲ συνείδησι, μὲ ὁλοφάνερη τὴν παράδοσι.

Τὸ κοινό, ποὺ ἀσφυκτικὰ γέμισε καὶ κατὰ τὶς τρεῖς συναυλίες τὸν «Ὀρφέα», ἐπεφύλαξε ὑπερενθουσιώδη ὑποδοχὴ στὸ μουσικὸ τέκνο τῆς Ἑλλάδας καὶ στοὺς ἄξιους συνεργάτες του.

Ἀπόκομμα ΝΕΩΝ
Χρονολογία 4 ΟΚΤ. 1955

Ὁ Δημήτρης Μητρόπουλος ἐνῶ χαιρετᾶ τὸ πλῆθος τῶν φίλων καὶ θαυμαστῶν του, ποὺ κατέδηκε χθὲς στὸ ἀεροδρόμιο τοῦ Ἑλληνικοῦ γιὰ νὰ τὸν ἀποχαιρετήσῃ καὶ νὰ τοῦ εὐχηθῆ: «Νὰ ξαναγυρίσῃ μὲ τὸ καλό».

Πυκνὲς ὁμάδες ἀνθρώπων τῆς τέχνης καὶ τοῦ πνεύματος συνεκεντρώθησαν χθὲς τὸ πρωῒ στὸ ἀεροδρόμιο τοῦ Ἑλληνικοῦ γιὰ νὰ ἀποχαιρετήσουν τὸν Δημήτρη Μητρόπουλο καὶ νὰ τοῦ ἐκδηλώσουν γιὰ μιὰ ἀκόμη φορὰ τὸν ἄπειρο θαυμασμό τους ποὺ κορυφώθηκε στὶς τρεῖς ἀλησμόνητες συναυλίες τοῦ «Ὀρφέως».

— Στὸ ἀεροδρόμιο εὑρίσκοντο ὁ γενικὸς διευθυντὴς τῆς Κρατικῆς Ὀρχήστρας κ. Φιλ. Οἰκονομίδης, ὁ διευθυντὴς Ἐξωτερικοῦ Τύπου τοῦ Ὑπουργείου Προεδρίας τῆς Κυβερνήσεως κ. Γ. Καβουνίδης, ὁ ἀρχιμουσικὸς κ. Θεοδ. Βαβαγιάννης, ἡ κ. Κουτσογιάννη, στὸ σπίτι τῆς ὁποίας φιλοξενήθηκε κ. ἀ.

— Ὁ Μητρόπουλος, κατὰ τὴν ὀλίγη ὥρα ποὺ παρέμεινε στὸ ἀεροδρόμιο περιμένοντας τὸ ἀεροπλάνο τῆς K.L.M., ἦταν ὁμιλητικώτατος καὶ ἐξαιρετικὰ διαχυτικὸς πρὸς ἐκείνους ποὺ τὸν περιεστοίχισαν, ἀλλὰ καὶ πρὸς ὅλους τοὺς ἀγνώστους φίλους του ποὺ τοῦ ζητοῦσαν αὐτόγραφα ἢ ἤθελαν ἁπλῶς νὰ τοῦ σφίξουν τὸ χέρι καὶ νὰ τὸν εὐχαριστήσουν γιὰ τὴν συγκίνησι ποὺ τοὺς χάρισε.

ΜΗΤΡΟΠΟΥΛΟΣ: Η ΤΕΧΝΗ ΔΕΝ ΠΡΕΠΕΙ ΝΑ ΕΙΝΑΙ ΚΛΕΙΣΤΗ

Ὁμιλῶν πρὸς τοὺς συγκεντρωθέντας ὁ Μητρόπουλος ἀνέπτυξε καὶ πάλι τὶς ἀπόψεις του σχετικὰ μὲ τὴν κοινωνικὴ καὶ ἐκπολιτιστικὴ ἀποστολὴ τῆς τέχνης. «Ἡ τέχνη, εἶπε ὁ διάσημος ἀρχιμουσικός, δὲν πρέπει νὰ εἶναι κλειστὴ καὶ νὰ ἀπευθύνεται στοὺς ὀλίγους. Ὕψιστος προορισμός της εἶναι νὰ ἐξυπηρετῆ τὸ γενικὸ καλὸ καὶ συντελῆ στὴ βελτίωσι τῶν ἠθικῶν καὶ πνευματικῶν ὅρων ζωῆς τῆς ἀνθρωπότητος. Ἀλλοιῶς, ἐτόνισε ὁ Μητρόπουλος, ἡ τέχνη εἶναι στείρα καὶ δὲν ἐκπληροῖ τὸν βαθύτερο κοινωνικό προορισμό της».

ΠΙΘΑΝΟΝ ΝΑ ΕΛΘΗ ΜΕ ΤΗΝ ΣΥΜΦΩΝΙΚΗ ΤΗΣ ΒΙΕΝΝΗΣ

Σὲ ἐρώτησι, ἐὰν πράκειται νὰ ἐπισκεφθῆ ξανὰ τὴν Ἑλλάδα τὸν ἐρχόμενο χρόνο ποὺ θὰ βρίσκεται στὴν Εὐρώπη, ὁ Μητρόπουλος ἀπήντησε ὅτι τὸ θέλει πάρα πολὺ ἀλλὰ δὲν τὸ ἐλέπει πιθανὸν λόγῳ τῶν πολλαπλῶν ὑποχρεώσεων τὶς ὁποῖες ἔχει ἀναλάβει.

— Ἡ μόνη, εἶπε, περίπτωσις στὴν ὁποία μπορεῖ νὰ ἐλπίσωμε εἶναι μία καθοδὸς στὴν Ἑλλάδα τῆς Συμφωνικῆς Ὀρχήστρας τῆς Βιέννης, τὴν ὁποίαν θὰ διηυθύνω ἐγώ. Αὐτὸ ὅμως ἐξαρτᾶται περισσότερο ἀπὸ ἐσᾶς παρὰ ἀπὸ ἐμένα. Προσωπικῶς θὰ κάνω ὅ,τι εἶναι δυνατὸν γιὰ νὰ πείσω τὴν διεύθυνσι τῆς Συμφωνικῆς τῆς Βιέννης νὰ ἔλθῃ γιὰ δυὸ τουλάχιστον μέρες στὴν Ἀθήνα.

— Στὶς 9 ἀκριβῶς ὁ Μητρόπουλος ἐπεβιβάσθη στὸ τετρακινητήριο ἀεροσκάφος τῆς K.L.M. καὶ στὶς 9.10 ἀνεχώρησε γιὰ τὸ Λονδῖνο.

ΠΡΟΣ ΤΙΜΗΝ ΤΩΝ ΓΟΥΛΑΝΔΡΗ

Πρὸς τιμὴν τοῦ ζεύγους Γουλανδρῆ ὁ Σύλλογος «Οἱ φίλοι τῆς Μουσικῆς», παρέθεσε χθὲς τὸ μεσημέρι πρόγευμα στὸν Ναυτικὸ Ὅμιλο. Παρεκάθησαν ἐκτὸς ἀπὸ τὸν κ. Βοισ. Γουλανδρῆ καὶ τὴν σύζυγό του, ὁ πρόεδρος τοῦ Συλλόγου, ὑπουργὸς τῶν Οἰκονομικῶν κ. Λάμπρος Εὐταξίας, ἡ ἀντιπρόεδρος κ. Ἀλεξάνδρα Τριάντη, ἡ κ. Νίνα Ἀραβαντινοῦ, ὁ καθηγητὴς καὶ ἡ κ. Λούρου, ὁ κ

Η ΑΘΗΝΑ ΑΠΕΘΕΩΣΕ ΤΟ ΕΝΔΟΞΟ ΤΕΚΝΟ ΤΗΣ, ΤΟΝ ΜΗΤΡΟΠΟΥΛΟ

Οἱ τρεῖς συναυλίες τῆς Φιλαρμονικῆς Νέας Ὑόρκης

Η ΣΥΓΚΙΝΗΤΙΚΗ ΔΕΞΙΩΣΙΣ ΕΙΣ ΤΟ ΩΔΕΙΟΝ

Ἡ τριήμερος παραμονὴ τοῦ Μητροπούλου εἰς τὰς Ἀθήνας, ἐπὶ κεφαλῆς τῆς Φιλαρμονικῆς Ὀρχήστρας τῆς Νέας Ὑόρκης, ἀπετέλεσε ἕνα καλλιτεχνικὸ γεγονὸς ποὺ θὰ παραμ ἰνῃ ἀλησμόνητον εἰς τὰ μουσικὰ χρονικὰ τῆς πρωτευούσης.

Χάρις εἰς τὴν γεννεοδωρίαν τοῦ Βασιλείου Γουλανδρῆ, πρὸς χάριν τῶν σκοπῶν τοῦ Συλλόγου τῶν «Φίλων τῆς Μουσικῆς» ἀξ ώθηκε τὸ Ἀθηναϊκὸ κοινὸ νὰ ξαναδῇ τὸν διάσημο ἀρχιμουσικὸ ὕστερα ἀπὸ 17 χρόνια. Καὶ τὸ σπουδαιότερο νὰ τὸν ἰδῇ ἐπὶ κεφαλῆς τῆς μεγαλυτέρας ὀρχήστρας τῆς Ἀμερικῆς, ἴσως καὶ τῆς καλυτέρας τοῦ κόσμου. Γιατί, ὅπως ὁμολογοῦν οἱ διασημότεροι κριτικοί, ἡ ὀρχήστρα αὐτὴ ποὺ βρίσκεται τέσσερα περίπου χρόνια στὰ χέρια τοῦ Μητροπούλου, ἔχ ι διαμορφωθῇ καὶ ἔχει ἀποκτήσει τὴν πλαστικότητα καὶ τὴν πληρότητα ποὺ αὐτὸς τῆς ἔχει δώσει. Εἶναι ἀναμφισβήτητον ὅτι τὸ μουσικὸ αὐτὸ συγκρότημα τῶν 105 μουσικῶν φέρει τὴν σφραγῖδα τῆς προσωπικότητος τοῦ διευθυντοῦ της καὶ ὅτι μὲ κανένα ἄλλον δὲν θὰ ἠμποροῦσε νὰ ἀποδώσῃ ὅ,τι σήμερα μὲ αὐτὸν ἐπὶ κεφαλῆς ἀποδίδει.

Εἶναι κρῖμα ὅτι ὁ τόσον πομπωδῶς διαφημισθεὶς γαλανὸς ἀττικὸς οὐρανὸς ὑπεδέχθη τὸν διαπρεπῆ ἀρχιμουσικὸ καὶ τὴν ὀρχήστρα του μὲ συννεφιὰ καὶ βροχὴ ποὺ διήρκεσε ἀνελλιπῶς δύο ὁλόκληρες ἡμέρες. Τόσες, ὅσες χρειάστηκαν γιὰ νὰ ζοῦν σὲ ἀγωνία ὅλοι ὅσοι εἶχαν ἀγοράσει μὲ τόσους κόπους καὶ θυσίες τὰ εἰσιτήριά τους γιὰ τὸ Ὠδεῖον τοῦ Ἡρώδου τοῦ Ἀττικοῦ καὶ γιὰ νὰ ἀλλάξουν τελικὰ τὰ προγράμματα καὶ νὰ δοθοῦν οἱ συναυλίες στὸν Ὀρφέα. Αὐτὸ βέβαια εἶχε τὸ καλὸ ἀποτέλεσμα ὅτι δόθηκαν τρεῖς συναυλίες ἀντὶ δύο καὶ ὅτι στὸν κλειστὸ χῶρο χάρηκαν οἱ Ἀθηναῖοι, κατὰ τὴν ἀντίληψι τοῦ Μητροπούλου, τὴν ἠχητικὴ πληρότητα τῆς ὀρχήστρας, πρᾶγμα ποὺ δὲν θὰ συνέβαινε εἰς τὸ ὕπαιθρο. Ἀπὸ τὴν ἄλλη πλευρὰ ἐχάθη ἡ θαυμασία ἀτμόσφαιρα τοῦ ἀρχαίου Ὠδείου καὶ μαζὶ μὲ αὐτὴ καὶ κάμποσα εἰσιτήρια τὰ ὁποῖα δὲν μπόρεσαν νὰ ἔχουν ἀπόκρισι εἰς τὴν αἴθουσαν τοῦ Ὀρφέως παρὰ τὴν κοσμοπλήμμυρα ποὺ παρετηρήθη. Εὐτυχῶς ὅτι τὸ ραδιόφωνο μετέδωσε καὶ τὶς τρεῖς συναυλίες καὶ ἔτσι μπόρεσαν ὅλοι οἱ Ἕλληνες νὰ ἀπολαύσουν τὴν μουσικὴ πανδαισία ποὺ τοὺς χάρισε ὁ μεγάλος μαέστρος. Βέβαια ἔχασαν τὸ ὀπτικὸ θαῦμα ποὺ παρουσιάζει ὁ Μητρόπουλος διευθύνοντας. Ἀλλὰ διαφορετικὰ δὲν ἦτο δυνατὸν νὰ γίνῃ. Καμμιὰ αἴθουσα καὶ κανένα Στάδιο δὲν ἦτο σὲ θέσι νὰ ἱκανοποιήσῃ ὅλους ἐκείνους ποὺ ἤθελαν νὰ ἰδοῦν καὶ νὰ ἀκούσουν τὸν Μητρόπουλο.

Παρουσίᾳ τῶν Βασιλέων, μελῶν τοῦ ὑπουργικοῦ συμβουλίου, τοῦ διπλωματικοῦ Σώματος καὶ χιλιάδων κόσμου ἐδόθη ἡ πρώτη συναυλία τοῦ Σαββάτου. Μόλις ὁ Μητρόπουλος ἐνεφανίσθη εἰς τὸ πόντιουμ, τὸ κοινὸν ὄρθιο ἐξέσπασεν εἰς ἕνα φρενιτιώδες χειροκρότημα, παρόμοιο ποὺ δὲν ἔχει συμβῇ γιὰ κανένα ἕως τώρα καλλιτέχνη. Ταυτοχρόνως ἀκούστηκαν φωνές: «Καλῶς ἦλθες». Ὁ Μητρόπουλος βαθύτατα συγκεκινημένος ὑπεκλίθη πρὸ τοῦ κοινοῦ ἀρκετὴ ὥρα. Φοροῦσε φράκο καὶ ἔφερε τὸν ἀνώτερον Ταξιάρχην τοῦ Φοίνικος, τὸν ὁποῖον τοῦ ἀπένειμεν ὁ Βασιλεὺς κατὰ τὴν ἐπίσκεψίν του εἰς τὴν Ἀμερικήν. Τὸ πρόγραμμα, εἶχεν ἀρχικῶς εἰπωθῇ, δὲν ἦταν δύσκολο. Τὰ χειροκροτήματα ποὺ ὑπεδέχθησαν τὴν ἐκτέλεσιν κάθε κομματιοῦ διέψευδαν τὴν ἀντίληψι αὐτή. Ἔτσι ὁ Κουπερὲν οὔτε καὶ ὁ Σούμαν ἠμποροῦσαν νὰ κουράσουν καὶ ὅταν ὁ Μητρόπουλος ἀνήγγειλεν ὅτι ἀντὶ τῆς πέμπτης συμφωνίας τοῦ Προκόφιεφ θὰ ἐπαίζετο ἡ δεκάτη τοῦ Σοστάκοβιτς τὰ χειροκροτήματα ποὺ ἐξέσπασαν ἐδικαίωσαν—καὶ μὲ τὸ παραπάνω—τὴν ἐκλογή του. Τὸ σημεῖο αὐτὸ ἀξίζει κάποια προσοχή: Στὶς τρεῖς συναυλίες ποὺ ἔδωσε ὁ κ. Μητρόπουλος ἔδωσε τὴν εὐκαιρία στὸ κοινό μας νὰ ἀκούσῃ ἔργα ἄγνωστα εἰς τὸν τόπο μας ὅπως τὴν δεκάτη τοῦ Σοστάκοβιτς, τὴν εἰσαγωγὴ στὴν ὄπερα «Κολὰς Μπρενιὸν» τοῦ Καμπαλέφσκυ, καὶ μᾶς προσέφερεν ἀγνώριστη καὶ μὲ ὁμορφιὰ ποὺ ποτὲ δὲν εἴχαμε ὑποψιασθῇ τοὺς «Τέσσερις Ἑλληνικοὺς χορούς» τοῦ Σκαλτώτα. Ὁ ἐνθουσιασμὸς εἶχε φθάσει εἰς τὸ κατακόρυφον μετὰ τὴν ἐκτέλεσιν τῆς «Δεκάτης συμφωνίας» τοῦ Σοστάκοβιτς καὶ ὁ Μητρόπουλος ἔπαιξε σὲ «μπὶς» μιὰ μελωδία τοῦ Ραχμάνινωφ καὶ ἕνα ἀπόσπασμα ἀπὸ τὸ «Τρίκοχο καπέλλο» τοῦ Ντὲ Φάλια.

Ἡ δευτέρα συναυλία ποὺ ἦταν ἔκτακτη λόγῳ τοῦ καιροῦ δόθηκε τὴν Κυριακὴ τὸ πρωῒ στὰς 11 στὸν «Ὀρφέα» πάλιν. Ἡ ὑπηρεσία τοῦ Φεστιβὰλ κατέβαλε κάθε προσπάθεια ὥστε νὰ ἱκανοποιηθοῦν ὅσοι ἔμειναν ἔξω ἀπὸ τὴν πρώτη. Καὶ τὸ ἐπέτυχε κατὰ μεγάλο ποσοστόν. Ἡ συναυλία αὐτὴ ἐκτὸς τῶν Ἑλληνικῶν χορῶν τοῦ Σκαλκώτα, περιέλαβε καὶ τὴν ἠρωϊκὴ συμφωνία τοῦ Μπετόβεν. Τὸ κοινὸ ἀπεθέωσε καὶ πάλιν τὸν μαέστρο. Τὸ μεσημέρι μετὰ τὴν συναυλία ὁ Μητρόπουλος προσκληθεὶς προσωπικῶς ὑπὸ τοῦ Βασιλικοῦ ζεύγους ἀνῆλθεν εἰς τὸ Τατόϊ καὶ παρεκάθησε εἰς τὸ Βασιλικὸν πρόγευμα. Εἰς τὸ τέλος μάλιστα τῆς πρωϊνῆς συναυλίας καὶ ἐνῶ τὸ κοινὸν ἐχειροκρότει ἀκόμη μὲ ἐνθουσιασμόν, ὁ Μητρόπουλος ἐζήτη-

ΜΙΑ ΔΗΛΩΣΙΣ ΤΟΥ

ΛΟΝΔΙΝΟΝ, 3 Ὀκτωβρίου. Ἰδιαιτέρα Ὑπηρεσία. — Ὁ πρώην στρατάρχης τῆς Ἀεροπορίας λόρδος Ντάουντιγκ, ἀνώτατος διοικητὴς τῶν Βρεττανικῶν δυνάμεων κατὰ τὴν μάχη τῆς Ἀγγλίας, ἐδήλωσε χθὲς τὴν ἑσπέραν ὅτι πιστεύει εἰς τὴν ὕπαρξιν τῶν ἰπταμένων δίσκων καὶ ἀνθρώπων προερχομένων ἐκ τοῦ διαστήματος. Ὁ στρατάρχης Ντάουντιγκ, ἡλικίας 73 ἐτῶν, ὁ ὁποῖος τελεῖ σήμερον ἐν ἀποστρατείᾳ, εἶπεν εἰς χθεσινὴν συγκέντρωσιν τῶν μελῶν μιᾶς Λέσχης τοῦ Οὐέστ Χόαθλυ, ἡ ὁποία ἀσχολεῖται μὲ τοὺς ἰπταμένους δίσκους: «Εἶμαι ἀπολύτως πεπεισμένος ὅτι τόσον οἱ δίσκοι ὅσον καὶ οἱ ἄνθρωποι αὐτοὶ ὑπάρχουν εἰς τὴν πραγματικότητα. Ὑπάρχουν ἐπὶ τοῦ προκειμένου αἱ ἀναφοραὶ 10.000 αὐτοπτῶν μαρτύρων, ἐκ τῶν ὁποίων καὶ αἱ ἡμίσεις ἀκόμη ἂν εἶναι ἐσφαλμέναι, αἱ ὑπόλοιποι 5.000 πρέπει τοὐλάχιστον νὰ ἀφοροῦν κάτι τὸ συγκεκριμένον». Ὁ λόρδος Ντάουντιγκ, ὁ ὁποῖος ἀπὸ τῆς παραιτήσεώς του κατὰ τὸ 1942 ἔχει γράψει τρία μυθιστορήματα, προσέθεσεν ὅτι συμφώνως πρὸς τοὺς αὐτόπτας μάρτυρας, οἱ ἰπτάμενοι δίσκοι, ποὺ προέρχονται ἐκ τοῦ πλανήτου «Ποσειδῶν», ἔχουν πλήρωμα 12 ἀνδρῶν καὶ διάρκειαν πτήσεως μιᾶς ἑβδομάδος, ἐνῶ οἱ προερχόμενοι ἐκ τοῦ πλανήτου «Ἀφροδίτη» ἔχουν πλήρωμα 6 ἀνδρῶν καὶ διάρκειαν πτήσεως μόνον 24 ὡρῶν. Ἀνεγνωρίσθησαν ἐξ ἄλλου, κατέληξε, πολυάριθμοι μικροὶ δίσκοι διαμέτρου δύο ἕως τριῶν ποδῶν, οἱ ὁποῖοι προσεγειώθησαν κατὰ τὸ παρελθὸν εἰς πολλὰ σημεῖα τῆς Γῆς.

ΑΛΗΣΜΟΝΗΤΟΙ ΘΑ ΠΑΡΑΜΕΙΝΟΥΝ ΑΙ ΤΡΕΙΣ ΣΥΝΑΥΛΙΑΙ ΕΙΣ ΑΘΗΝΑΣ ΤΗΣ «ΦΙΛΑΡΜΟΝΙΚΗΣ» Ν. ΥΟΡΚΗΣ

Ἀπεθεώθη ὁ Δ. Μητρόπουλος

Ὁ βασιλεὺς συγχαίρει τὸν κ. Μητρόπουλον μετὰ τὴν συναυλίαν.

ΑΘΗΝΑΙ, 3.— Τέσσαρες χιλιάδες περίπου ἀκροαταὶ παρηκολούθησαν τὰς συμφωνικὰς συναυλίας τῆς φιλαρμονικῆς ὀρχήστρας τῆς Νέας Ὑόρκης, αἱ ὁποῖαι, λόγῳ τῆς μεταβολῆς τοῦ καιροῦ, ἐδόθησαν εἰς τὴν αἴθουσαν τοῦ «Ὀρφέως» τῆς ὁδοῦ Σταδίου, ἐνῶ ἄλλοι χίλιοι ἑξακόσιοι, οἱ ὁποῖοι θὰ παρηκολούθουν ἐπίσης, ἂν αἱ συναυλίαι ἐδίδοντο ὡς εἶχεν ἀρχικῶς ἀποφασισθῇ εἰς τὸ θέατρον Ἡρῴδου τοῦ Ἀττικοῦ, ἔμειναν ἔξω τοῦ νυμφῶνος.

Η ΠΡΩΤΗ ΣΥΝΑΥΛΙΑ

Τὴν 6.30' μ.μ. ἀπὸ τὴν κατάμεστον ἐκλεκτοῦ κόσμου αἴθουσαν τοῦ «Ὀρφέως», ἡ ὁποία ἀπὸ πρωΐας εἶχε καταλλήλως προετοιμασθῇ, σεισμὸς χειροκροτημάτων ὑπεδέχθη τὴν ἐπὶ σκηνῆς ἐμφάνισιν τοῦ διασήμου Ἕλληνος ἀρχιμουσικοῦ Μητροπούλου κατὰ τὴν πρώτην συναυλίαν. Ὁ ἐξώστης ἦτο περισσότερον καὶ τῆς αἰθούσης πλήρης φιλομούσων ἀκροατῶν, ἀλλὰ καὶ οἱ διάδρομοι καὶ τὰ σκαλάκια, ἐνῶ ἐξ ἄλλου, ἡ παρουσία τῶν βασιλέων, τῶν μελῶν τοῦ ὑπουργικοῦ συμβουλίου καὶ ἄλλων ἐπισημοτήτων, προσέδωσεν εἰς τὴν συναυλίαν ἐξαιρετικὴν αἴγλην. Ἡ συγκίνησις τοῦ μεγάλου μαέστρου ἦτο καταφανής. Ὕστερα ἀπὸ δέκα ἑπτὰ ἔτη, ἐπεκοινώνει καὶ πάλιν μὲ τὸ παλαιὸν γνώριμον κοινόν του.

Ἡ συναυλία ἤρχισε μὲ τὸ «Πρελούντιο καὶ Ἀλέγκρο» τοῦ Κουπερὲν καὶ ἐσυνεχίσθη μὲ τὴν δευτέρα συμφωνία τοῦ Σούμαν καὶ τὴν δεκάτην τοῦ Σοστάκοβιτς, τὴν «συμφωνίαν τῆς εἰρήνης». Τὴν ἐκτέλεσι τοῦ τελευταίου αὐτοῦ ἔργου τοῦ Σοβιετικοῦ μουσικοσυνθέτου διηύθυνε μὲ καταπληκτικὴ ἐπιτυχία ὁ Μητρόπουλος στὸ Παρίσι καὶ ἀλλοῦ. Κατόπιν, ὕστερα ἀπὸ μιὰ θύελλα χειροκροτημάτων τοῦ κοινοῦ, ὁ μαέστρος ἐδιηύθυνε τὴν ἐκτέλεσιν μιᾶς συνθέσεως τοῦ Ραβὲλ καὶ τὸ ἐτρίκοχο καπέλλο» τοῦ Ντὲ Φάλλια. Κατὸ τὸ διάλειμμα οἱ βασιλεῖς ἐκάλεσαν πλησίον των τὸν Μητρόπουλον καὶ τὸν συνεχάρησαν διὰ τὴν ἄφθαστον τέχνην του. Ἐπίσης ἐδέχθησαν τὸ ζεῦγος Β. Γουλανδρῆ, πρὸς τὸ ὁποῖον ἐξέφρασαν τὴν εὐαρέσκειάν των διὰ τὴν γενναίαν καὶ εὐγενικὴν χειρονομίαν του τῆς καταβολῆς ὅλων τῶν τεραστίων δαπανῶν διὰ τὴν μετάκλησιν τῆς Φιλαρμονικῆς τῆς Νέας Ὑόρκης εἰς Ἀθήνας. Τὴν μεσημβρίαν τῆς Κυριακῆς ὁ Μητρόπουλος ἐγένετο δεκτὸς εἰς γεῦμα εἰς τὰ ἀνάκτορα

Η ΔΕΥΤΕΡΑ

Τὴν πρωΐαν τῆς Κυριακῆς ἐδόθη ἡ δευτέραν συναυλία. Τὸ πρόγραμμά της ἀπετελεῖτο ἀπὸ τὴν εἰσαγωγὴν τοῦ μελοδράματος τοῦ Βέρντι «Ἡ δύναμις τοῦ Πεπρωμένου», ἀπὸ τὰς «συμφωνικὰς Παραλλαγὰς» τοῦ Μπράμς ἐπὶ ἑνὸς θέματος τοῦ Χάϋδν, ἀπὸ τέσσαρας ἀπὸ τοὺς «Ἑλληνικοὺς Χορούς» τοῦ Ν. Σκαλκώτα καὶ ἀπὸ τὴν «Ἡρωϊκὴν Συμφωνίαν» τοῦ Μπετόβεν.

Εἰς τὸ διάλειμμα ὁ καθηγητὴς τοῦ Ὠδείου Ἀθηνῶν κ. Μπουστίντουϊ τοῦ προσέφερε δύο στεφάνους δάφνης. Ὁ Μητρόπουλος τοὺς προσέφερεν εἰς τοὺς μουσικοὺς τῆς ὀρχήστρας. Μετὰ τὴν λῆξιν τῆς συναυλίας κατηυθύνθη εἰς τὰ ἀνάκτορα, ὅπου, ὅπως εἶπε, «τὸν ἀνέμενε ἕνα καλὸ φαΐ». Εἰς τὰ ἀνάκτορα παρέμειναν ἐπὶ τρεῖς ὥρας.

Η ΤΡΙΤΗ ΣΥΝΑΥΛΙΑ

Ἀπὸ τὰ ἀνάκτορα κατηυθύνθη εἰς τὴν πρὸς τιμήν του δεξίωσιν τοῦ Ὠδείου Ἀθηνῶν, ὅπου πρῶτος τὸν προσεφώνησεν ὁ πρόεδρος τοῦ συμβουλίου κ. Ἀρ. Κυριακίδης, ὁ ὁποῖος τοῦ προσέφερε καὶ ἀναμνηστικὴν πλάκα, δύο δὲ μαθηταὶ τὸν ἐστεφάνωσαν.

Ἡ τρίτη καὶ τελευταία συναυλία ἦτο βραδυνή. Τὸ πρόγραμμα περιελάμβανε τὴν εἰσαγωγὴν τοῦ «Ἐλευθέρου Σκοπευτοῦ» τοῦ Βέμπερ, τὴν «Συμφωνίαν τῆς Μεταρρυθμίσεως» τοῦ Μέντελσον, «Ἑλληνικοὺς Χορούς» τοῦ Σκαλκώτα καὶ τὴν «Δευτέραν Συμφωνίαν» τοῦ Μπράμς.

Μετὰ τὴν τρίτην συναυλίαν ὁ Μητρόπουλος παρέστη εἰς φιλικὴν συγκέντρωσιν εἰς τὴν οἰκίαν τοῦ καθηγητοῦ κ. Λούρου, παρισταμένων καὶ τῶν ὑπουργῶν κ.κ. Ράλλη καὶ Γεροκωστοπούλου μετὰ τῶν κυριῶν των, τοῦ ὑπουργοῦ Οἰκονομικῶν κ. Εὐταξίᾳ καὶ τῶν πρωταγωνιστῶν τοῦ Ἐθνικοῦ Θεάτρου Κατίνας Παξινοῦ καὶ Ἀλέξη Μινωτῆ.

Η ΑΝΑΧΩΡΗΣΙΣ

Σήμερον τὴν 8.30 π.μ. ἀνεχώρησε διὰ τὸ Λονδῖνον ἀεροπορικῶς τὸ πρῶτον κλιμάκιον τῶν ἐκτελεστῶν τῆς Φιλαρμονικῆς. Τὴν 9.10 ἀπεγειώθη ἄλλο ἀεροπλάνον, εἰς τὸ ὁποῖον ἐπέβαινον ὁ Μητρόπουλος μὲ τὸν πρόεδρον καὶ τὸ ἀνώτερον προσωπικὸν τῆς Φιλαρμονικῆς.

Ἡ τουρνὲ τοῦ Δ. Μητροπούλου εἰς τὴν Εὐρώπην κλείει αὔριον (σήμερον) μὲ τὴν συναυλίαν, τὴν ὁποίαν θὰ διευθύνῃ εἰς τὸ «Ρόαγιαλ Φεστιβὰλ Χώλ» τοῦ Λονδίνου.

'THEY PLAYED LIKE DEVILS'

The New York Phil. Revels In A Diabolical Masterpiece

By Emil Bouratinos

COMING from the U.S. as an apostle of Russian music, Dimitri Mitropoulos paid a creditable tribute to the only artistic elements within modern music which are worthy of any consideration or praiseworthy distinction. Whether we like it or not, the Russian school alone offers something new, aesthetic, pure and spontaneous.

It is much to the honour of the American nation, that the long lived tradition of freedom of thought and fair-play prevailed once again, through the New York Philharmonic's presentation of the Russian school to the eager audiences of the world. No one should be made to expect anything else from this land, where Democracy, in spirit and deeds is an everyday tune, to which all Americans are believed to sing with all their hearts...

The Saturday concert started with the Prelude and Allegro from «The Sultana», by F. Coperen, arranged with much imagination and cunningless by A. Milhaud. It was played with a zest and almost sensual colouring which was to be re-applied in one piece only, Scalcotta's Greek dances. Rightly too, for it would have been impossible to give such a colouring to any of the o· other pieces of the three programmes.

Following Schumann's 2nd Symphony, which came after Couperin's Prelude, Mr Mitropoulos gave us the most exci[illegible] of the entire Athens Shostakovitch's Sym- 10.

DE TRADITION

unhampered by the conventions of mosical music but defihin Russian tradition, blic masterpiece by ssed even our most expectations. With ch, Ehostokavitch opcompletely new and ed path in symphoruction which allows ically limitless possi-

While boldly thrusting himself into something daringly new and purely broad-minded he practically abandons his older principals.

The work is layed out in far separate movements, the last of which is in reality divided into two parts. The first movement is based on two themes. The main one he uses in all possible disguises including rhythmical alterations and tonal readjustments.

These often make it difficult to fish the original out, but it gives the piece astonishing unity. One always hears something familiar, but scarcely knows what that it. So great is the expectant interest of the whole work that one is driven to suspect that it was written a detective tone-story and not a symphony.

This form, clearly discernable, is a liberal extension of the sonataform, with some roots in the sonata form of the late Beethoven quarters. (A-B-Working-out Passage B-A-Coda).

The second movements displays a most astonishing variety of rhythmical statements which seem to be endless. The third, is lyrical and peaceful. The first part of the last movement is the least interesting of all, but the second part is the crowing of counterpount and explosive outbusts of savage wildness.

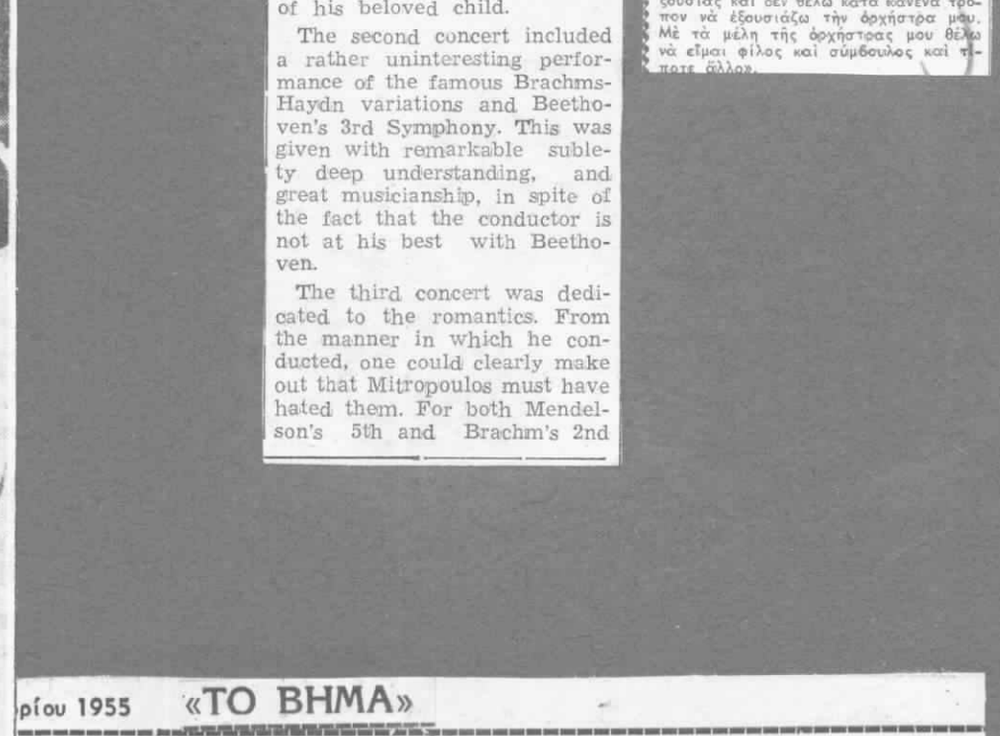
FATHERLY LOVE

Mr Mitropoulos — in spite of his declaration to the contrary must have had great fondness for the Symphony. For his execution was rivetting, breath taking and full of amiable affection. One felt that the conductor performed like a father acting for the wel-fare of his beloved child.

The second concert included a rather uninteresting performance of the famous Brachms-Haydn variations and Beethoven's 3rd Symphony. This was given with remarkable subletty deep understanding, and great musicianship, in spite of the fact that the conductor is not at his best with Beethoven.

The third concert was dedicated to the romantics. From the manner in which he conducted, one could clearly make out that Mitropoulos must have hated them. For both Mendelson's 5th and Brachm's 2nd were rather expressionless. Though delightfully dignified and purely academic, these two works were rendered in a casual, more or less uninteresting, way which failed to bring out the exuberant tonal variety, temperament ,and mystical mood.

Quite contrary to this, the charming four Greek dances, of Scalcotta were given with unique pep and extraordinary ups-and-downs. This proves that a man must love the music he performs in order to stir-up real enthusiasm, which was something less than casual in the «Orpheus» theatre when the four dances were completed. With the New York Philharmonic, one of the world's three best orchestras, and Mr Mitropoulos' unsurpassed gift in conducting modern music, one felt that nothing could have been too difficult for them. They played like devils.



Something seemed to be amusing Dimitri Mitropoulos when this photograph was taken

DEBUT IN LONDON FOR MITROPOULOS

Conductor of Philharmonic Heard for First Time— Myra Hess Is Soloist

Special to The New York Times.

LONDON, Oct. 4—The New York Philharmonic-Symphony Orchestra concludes its European tour with a pair of concerts in London's Festival Hall, the first of which took place this evening with a large audience attending.

Although the New York players had visited the Edinburgh Festival in 1951 and again this year, they have not been heard in London since their memorable visit with Arturo Toscanini in 1930. Much curiosity was therefore aroused in musical circles regarding not only the orchestra but also its conductor, Dimitri Mitropoulos, who, strange as it may seem, was making his London debut tonight.

Many listeners were disappointed that no American music was included in either concert, especially since both orchestra and conductor are reputed to excel in modern music rather than classics. As though to banish any such notion, Mr. Mitropoulos presented a program wholly devoted to German Nineteenth-Century romantics. The overture to Weber's "Der Freischuetz" demonstrated at once splendid tonal quality of the New York players and set at rest any doubts as to the conductor's sympathy with music of this type and period.

Work of Schumann

There followed Schumann's Second Symphony. It has been said by Sir Donald Tovey that no orchestra ever earned its reputation in Schumann; and in the first movement there was a certain tension between the brilliant capacities of players and the homely, safe orchestration of the composer.

The impression was accentuated by the conductor's curious placing of his trumpets during the first half of concert in an exposed position on the extreme right of the platform. They failed to blend with the rest of the orchestra and were excessively audible even when nearly marking time with tonic and dominant punctuation.

The two central movements of the symphony were, however, played with consummate musicianship. The romantic climax of the slow movement, which is based on a long series of descending trills in the violins, can seldom have sounded so rapturously beautiful.

After the interval the trumpets moved to a more normal place for Brahms' D minor Piano Concerto, in which Dame Myra Hess was soloist. Hers was a performance of great simplicity and dignity. Her present physical resources no longer enable her to ride the tempest of the fiercely masculine first movement. But in the more effective or rhapsodic passages she offered Brahms-playing as true and unaffected as anyone can hear now.

The faithful collaboration of Mr. Mitropoulos and the orchestra rounded off an evening of superlative music-making.

THE NEW YORK ORCHESTRA

ROMANTIC WORKS

Since it played at the Edinburgh Festival a month ago the Philharmonic Symphony Orchestra of New York has been on a tour round Europe. Last night it arrived at the Festival Hall for the first of its two London concerts and showed no sign of staleness in the precision of its attack and ensemble, nor any dimming of its highly polished tone.

Mr. Dimitri Mitropoulos, who is now its principal permanent conductor, has shown himself, on the four occasions when he has given concerts with it in this country, as primarily an interpreter of modern music, in which he excels. But last night's wholly romantic programme revealed more catholic sympathies.

The overture to Der Freischütz was not lacking in flexibility, which, incidentally, revealed the extraordinary unanimity of the phrasing of the strings in small subtleties of shape demanded by the conductor. The orchestra does not command veiled tone, as was noticeable also in the slow movement of Brahms's D minor concerto. Its brass in particular is unabashed, and the repetitions of dotted-note fanfare figures, with which Schumann feverishly tries to propel his second symphony, became exasperating when played at their face value. It is an open question with a symphony of indifferent quality like this one whether the conductor should play it for all its worth, without attempt at apology for inept scoring, and have the courage of his convictions in putting it into his repertory, or whether he should mitigate all the wind chorus in accompanimental figures at the risk of the texture sounding muddy. Mr. Mitropoulos mitigated nothing and played it as though he believed in every redundant note of it.

The greatest all-round satisfaction was provided by the concerto. There is a fairly simple test of the quality of the performance of this rough-hewn megalith of a concerto—whether conductor and soloist take its measure so that its size, though great, does not disrupt the form or the soloist's physical grasp of it. Last night's interpretation was such that the D minor concerto seemed to be almost as good as its more spendid fellow in B flat.

Dame Myra Hess played with the New York Orchestra in Edinburgh and mutual understanding between her and Mr. Mitropoulos ensured that the first movement was launched on a rhythm like that of a huge pendulum, within whose pulse there was ample room for the power, the volume, and the grim emotion to expand. There were a few minute details capable of improvement—the rather thick bass of the piano in octave passages and the characterless tone-quality of the horn in its big tune—but the main thing was that the dimensions were right, the power sustained, and the ensemble, which is of peculiar complexity in this concerto, that of hand-in-glove—the pianist's hand in the orchestral glove making a perfect fit.

Dimitri The Dynamo

THE wonderful thing at the first Festival Hall concert of the New York Philharmonic Symphony Orchestra was the way in which Dame Myra Hess virtually hurled herself into line with this powerful organisation in the first movement of the First Piano Concerto of Brahms.

The man in charge was Dimitri Mitropoulos, a dynamic conductor to be feared by soloists. His left hand decisively compels discipline.

The V-sign means diminuendo, a rigid right-angle of thumb and forefinger means crescendo. Every command goes through that hand as if it were putting invisible cards into an electronic brain and producing spontaneous right answers.

Weber's overture to "Der Freischutz" disclosed the orchestra's efficiency. Mitropoulos manipulated many unexpected effects, including several reductions of the excitement to a leaden, dead pan tone on which the next passage would rise like the sun at dawn.

Under him the rarely played Second Symphony of Schumann was a long and dramatic oratorical effort. But without the false rhetoric of extreme loudness and softness the orchestral balance was precise even though it meant, at one point, three flutes and three oboes blowing themselves fortissimo to keep their end up.

In the concerto Dame Myra was quite unabashed by the fierce conflagration of sound which unleashed it. She made the keyboard live up to the heroic energy demanded by the music and the conductor.

After the gigantic first movement the rest scarcely mattered. A faltering horn nearly brought disaster to the last page, the orchestra obviously were a little weary after their flying tour of Europe. P. B.

ORCHESTRA WITH LITTLE WARMTH

NEW YORK PLAYERS

The New York Philharmonic Symphony Orchestra played a programme of German romantic music at the Festival Hall last night under Dimitri Mitropoulos. The choice seems strange for a conductor whose heart appeared to be his least prominent feature.

The characteristic tone quality of the orchestra, too, is clear, dry and powerful, with little mellowness or warmth.

Schumann's C major symphony needs imagination—and even a touch of fantasy in the scherzo—if its rhythmic weakness and stodgy texture are to be forgotten. Mr. Mitropoulos preferred to allow the music to go its own rather square gait, intervening only occasionally, though then with considerable violence.

Myra Hess was the soloist in Brahms's D minor concerto. This is a work which makes purely physical demands on the player which no woman, and not many men, can wholly satisfy. Her performance was steady but almost inevitably less than life-size. M. C.

DATE

Dame Myra adds fire to the Philharmonic

By PERCY CATER

THE New York Philharmonic - Symphony Orchestra has the right to feel happy about its Royal Festival Hall concert last night, when it was meeting London for the first time in 25 years, and Mitropoulos, its conductor, was making his London debut.

To the blaze of glory in which the concert ended, our Dame Myra Hess, by her superb playing of the Brahms No. 1 Piano Concerto, contributed enormously.

But I must say that before this the orchestra, which made a sticky start, had played itself into form and had shown us some of its real style.

For the early dullness, I think the blame goes to overeagerness on the part of the New York players, perhaps a certain amount of travel weariness after an eight-country tour, and a programme short of facile splendours.

The orchestra was anxious not to disappoint London, and this concern, apparently a little too much stressed, denied us spark and dash in the "Freischutz" overture, with which the programme opened.

The horn-playing, for instance, was correct but obviously careful. Everything seemed tensed up. Mitropoulos waved his arms, made snatching movements with his left-hand fingers, demanded effects so vibrantly that his bald head seemed to tremble.

The response was earnest, but bite and brilliance refused to develop.

Then, in the third and fourth movements of the Schumann Second Symphony the orchestra "came to life." From then the concert was all right. I have not heard it do anything much more beautiful than the accompaniment to the Brahms Concerto.

The introduction had wonderful power and poise, the background for the solo faithfully disposed itself to every need.

As for Dame Myra, she was magnificent. She played like a great lady and a great artist. I have never heard her play better.

She made us forget the formidable difficulties of this work. Where the concerto is stern and forceful she attacked with fire and determination.

The packed house recalled her again and again. Mitropoulos kissed her hand, and she kissed his. The orchestra applauded her heartily. She deserved the acclaim.

SHOSTAKOVITCH'S TENTH SYMPHONY

When Shostakovitch's tenth symphony was introduced to London at Easter by Sir Adrian Boult and the London Philharmonic Orchestra, it obtained for itself the immediate verdict that in it the composer had found himself once more after many vicissitudes, and that here was a symphony of significance for our time and for the whole world. This verdict was confirmed last night when Mr. Dimitri Mikropoulos and the New York Philharmonic-Symphony Orchestra gave it a performance of great power and sustained eloquence at this second concert in the Festival Hall.

This was indeed the sort of music we have been waiting to hear from this orchestra and this conductor, for it has to be reluctantly admitted that their streamlined, french-polished performances of German romantic music—in which Dvorak is to be included—give little pleasure. Verdi's overture to La Forza del Destino, with which they opened their programme at the Festival Hall last night, suits them well enough—no inhibitions, no half-measures, no subtleties of colour, but instead full-blooded animal music that asks for, and certainly got, plain vigorous statement.

But Dvorak's violin concerto was misconceived by soloist and orchestra alike. It was slick and urban, instead of wayward and rural. Mr. Nathan Milskin is a marvellously accomplished violinist, but his tone is silky and sophisticated, whereas Dvorak needs a reedy sound, and the bite of rosin from the bow. The score puts ma non troppo after its allegro marking, but this performance went dashing ahead with no touch of the brake even when the flute had its bird-like duet with the soloist.

It is not a great concerto, perhaps not even a very good concerto, so that it needs playing down not up. Mr. Mikropoulos's high-tension methods are not for Dvorak.

But they are, without a doubt, for Shostakovitch, as for Vaughan Williams, whose fourth symphony he has twice played at Edinburgh. Shostakovitch in his latest big symphony is again painting the Russian soul; there is the lyrical pathos familiar from Tchaikovsky and Rachmaninov, there is the wild high spirits that we know in Moussorgsky, there is the wry humour of Prokofiev. But this is the Russian soul in the terms not of the familiar nineteenth century but of the contemporary scene.

The reiterations of the Russian symphonists, both Borodin and Tchaikovsky, are here, and it may be that they are responsible for the feeling of excessive length, which the composer with unwonted self-criticism recognized. But the size is part of the conception and there is fecundity of invention as well as fervent repetition. In this tenth symphony is found the realization of the promise of the first, and it proclaims quite clearly that it comes from the same pen after 30 years.

SHOSTAKOVITCH WORK CONVINCES

U.S. INTERPRETATION

The main work in Dimitri Mitropoulos's second concert with the New York Philharmonic Symphony Orchestra in the Festival Hall last night was Shostakovitch's tenth symphony.

Its huge structure and intense utterances make severe demands upon performers. These artists have known the work longer than any others outside Russia, and their performance carried immense conviction.

More it is hard to say without deep knowledge of a work which was only heard for the first time in London this spring, and which, as well as being long, is obviously of major significance.

Greatness, even, has been claimed for it. This seems doubtful at present. But certainly its introspective cast and its self-questioning ambiguity are on a profounder level than the greater part of Shostakovitch's output.

Nathan Milstein's verve and technical exuberance with his strong, sweet tone, were admirably effective in Dvorak's violin concerto. J. W.

A VISITOR to London this week is the Rev. Cynolwyn Pugh, formerly of New York. He is to preach in Jewin Welsh Presbyterian Church next Sunday, but arrived early in the week to meet some of his old friends of the Philharmonic Symphony Orchestra of New York, now appearing at the Royal Festival Hall.

"LONG TIME NO SEE, REVEREND"

When he was the pastor of the Welsh Presbyterian Church in New York Mr. Pugh was a regular visitor to Carnegie Hall, the "home" of the orchestra, and acted as unofficial chaplain to its members and their families.

When he turned up at the Royal Festival Hall for the rehearsal a few hours before the first concert he was greeted by the men and their conductor, Dimitri Mitropoulos, with cries of "Hi, there, Reverend" and "Long time no see, Reverend."

The proceedings were delayed while greetings were exchanged.

Between Mr. Pugh and the conductor there is a particular bond of sympathy. Mitropoulos hails from a family of priests in Greece, and before music claimed him contemplated entering the priesthood.

He is a profoundly religious man, and although he receives a very high salary he lives simply and gives most of his money to religious causes, in particular to financing anyone entering the priesthood not only of the Greek Church but also of other denominations.

After the two concerts in the Festival Hall he and the orchestra leave by air on Thursday for New York, where their autumn concert season begins in 10 days' time.

The Rev. Cynolwyn Pugh has recently removed to Llanbadarn Fawr, Aberystwyth, where he now lives in a house with the charming name of Pendibyn (On the Very Edge).

Ἡ ἴδια ἡ μουσικὴ του ἰδιοσυγκρασία, ἡ μουσικὴ του φύση, τοῦ ἐπέβαλλαν νὰ ἀκολουθήσει αὐτὸ τὸ δρόμο. Φάνηκε καθαρὰ ἀπ' τὴν ἀρχὴ πὼς ὁ μουσικὸς Μητρόπουλος ὑπεροχαντίζει τὸ μουσικό του δημιουργικὸ πνεῦμα. "Ετσι ἀπὸ τὸ 1926 ποὺ ἐπέστρεψε στὴν Ἀθήνα γιὰ ν' ἀναλάβει τὴ διεύθυνση τῆς Συμφωνικῆς ὀρχήστρας καὶ σ' ὅλη τὴ μέχρι σήμερα διαδρομὴ τῆς ταραχώδους του ἐξέλιξης, ὁ "Ελληνας καλλιτέχνης λογαριάζεται σὰν ἕνας μεγάλος ἀρχιμουσικός, ἐνῶ σὰν συνθέτης παραμένει σὲ δευτερεύουσα μοῖρα.

Ἀπὸ τὰ ἔργα ποὺ ἑρμήνευσε ὁ Μητρόπουλος στὶς δυὸ βραδυνὲς συναυλίες τοῦ Σαββάτου καὶ τῆς Κυριακῆς στὸν «Ὀρφέα» ἀναμφισβήτητα ἡ «10η Συμφωνία» τοῦ Σοστάκοβιτς παρουσίασε τὸ μεγαλύτερο ἐνδιαφέρον. Σὲ πολλοὺς γεννήθηκε τὸ ἐρώτημα γιατὶ τὸ ἔργο αὐτὸ φέρνει τὴν προσωνυμία «Συμφωνία τῆς Εἰρήνης». Εὔλογη κατ' ἀρχὴν αὐτὴ ἡ ἀπορία, ὅμως θὰ πρέπει νὰ σκεφτοῦμε πὼς δὲν εἶναι ἀνάγκη μιὰ σύνθεση ἀφιερωμένη στὴν ἰδέα τῆς Εἰρήνης νὰ περιλαμβάνει «τυμπανοκρουσίες καὶ κωδωνοκρουσίες» καὶ ἄλλα παρόμοια ἠχηρὰ καὶ πομπώδη πράγματα γιὰ νὰ δείχνεται πὼς τὸ περιεχόμενό της ἔχει ἄμεση σχέση μὲ τὸν τίτλο τοῦ ἔργου. Τὸ ἰδεῶδες τῆς Εἰρήνης βρίσκεται παντοῦ διάχυτο σ' ὅλες τὶς ἐκδηλώσεις τῆς ζωῆς καὶ τῆς τέχνης. "Ενα ἔργο μὲ ζωντανὸ περιεχόμενο ποὺ ἀποπνέει ὑγεία, δύναμη καὶ χαρὰ ποὺ φέρνει στὶς καρδιὲς τῶν ἀνθρώπων τὸ μήνυμα τῆς ἀγάπης καὶ τῆς συναδέλφωσης, σίγουρα εἶναι μιὰ εἰρηνικὴ δημιουργία. Σὰν ἔργο τέχνης ἡ 10η Συμφωνία τοῦ Σοστάκοβιτς εἶναι ἀπὸ τὶς πιὸ καλὲς ἐπιτεύξεις τοῦ Σοβιετικοῦ συνθέτη, καὶ ἕνα ἀπὸ τὰ πιὸ ὑπέροχα μουσικὰ δημιουργήματα τῆς ἐποχῆς μας. Μακρυὰ ἀπὸ δωδεκαφθογγικοὺς ἐγκεφαλισμούς, ἀπὸ μοντερνιστικὲς ἁρλοῦμπες, μὲ ἐκδηλο τὸ στοιχεῖο τῆς λαϊκῆς μουσικῆς, γίνεται ἄμεσα κατανοητὸ καὶ ἀπὸ τὸν πιὸ ἀνίδεο ἀκροτή, ἐνῶ παράλληλα σὰν ἔργο τέχνης μπορεῖ νὰ ἱκανοποιήσει καὶ τὸ πλέον ραφιναρισμένο γοῦστο.

Ἀναμφισβήτητα ὁ Σοστάκοβιτς βρῆκε στὸ πρόσωπο τοῦ Μητροπούλου, τὸν ἰδεῶδη, τὸν ἀνυπέρβλητο ἑρμηνευτὴ τῆς μουσικῆς του. Στὴν ἀπόδοση τῆς 10ης Ἑνας παντοδύναμος μουσικὸς κραδασμὸς ποὺ ἐκπορευόταν ἀπὸ τὸ μαέστρο εἶχε συνεπάρει τοὺς μουσικούς, καὶ ἡ ὀρχήστρα στὰ χέρια τοῦ Μητροπούλου εἶχε μεταβληθεῖ σ' ἕνα ἀπέραντο ὄργανο στὴν ἔνταση καὶ τὴν ἔκταση, γιὰ νὰ μᾶς ἀποκαλύψει ὅλο τὸ συναισθηματικὸ βάθος, τὴν οὐσία καὶ τὸ σφρίγος ποὺ περικλείει ἡ θαυμαστὴ δημιουργία τοῦ Σοστάκοβιτς.

Ἀμείλικτος ἐχθρὸς τῆς ραυτίνας ὁ Μητρόπουλος, προσπάθησε πάντοτε ν' ἀποφύγει τὴν «πεπατημένη», γι' αὐτὸ παλαιότερα μερικὲς ἑρμηνεῖες του, ἰδιαίτερα στὰ κλασσικὰ ἔργα, εἶχαν χαρακτηριστεῖ κάπως τολμηρὲς καὶ παρακινδυνευμένες. Σήμερα ὁ μαέστρος ἐμφανίζεται πιὸ ὥριμος καὶ κατασταλαγμένος, δίχως ὅμως νὰ τοῦ λείπει ἡ νεανικὴ ζωντάνια καὶ τὸ σφρίγος ποὺ πάντα καὶ σὲ ὅλα τὰ ἔργα χαρακτηρίζουν τὶς μουσικὲς ἑρμηνεῖες του. Ξέφυγε πιὰ ἀπὸ τὶς σπασμωδικὲς κινήσεις καὶ τὶς παράφορες ὁρμητικὲς ἐκδηλώσεις, καὶ μόνο ὅταν τὸ πνεῦμα τοῦ ἔργου τὸ ἀπαιτεῖ, ἀφήνεται νὰ παρασυρθεῖ ἀπὸ τὴ δίνη τοῦ μουσικοῦ του αὐθορμητισμοῦ.

Δυστυχῶς ἀπὸ ἔλλειψη χώρου δὲν μποροῦμε νὰ σταθοῦμε σὲ λεπτομερειακὴ ἀνάλυση γιὰ τὴν ἀπόδοση τῶν ἄλλων ἔργων ποὺ παρουσίασε ὁ Μητρόπουλος. Θὰ ποῦμε μόνο πὼς σ' ὅλες τὶς συνθέσεις, ἀπὸ συμφωνικοὺς μεγαλόκοσμους ὡς τὶς μουσικὲς μινιατοῦρες — ὅπως οἱ χοροὶ τοῦ Σκαλκώτα — ἡ τέχνη του ἔβειξε κάτι τὸ πρωτόφαντο καὶ ἀποκαλυπτικό.

Orchestra Heard in London in Shostakovich Tenth— Mitropoulos Conducts

Special to The New York Times.

LONDON, Oct. 5—The second and last of the New York Philharmonic-Symphony's London concerts ended tonight with a performance of Shostakovich's Tenth Symphony. Few who heard it will readily forget it.

The evening had begun with Verdi's Overture to "La Forza del Destino" in a reading strikingly similar in its controlled intensity and sharply drawn outlines to that of Arturo Toscanini.

Dimitri Mitropoulos shaped the string motto-theme with such plasticity and feeling for line that for once its numerous appearances did not seem excessive. It was a performance that made one wish to hear a whole opera—whether by Verdi or Wagner or Strauss—directed by this most demonic of modern conductors.

Dvorak's Violin Concerto shows that great composer some way below his best. It was difficult not to wish that some other concerto—for instance, that of Alban Berg—had been chosen to display the splendid musicianship of the orchestra and of Nathan Milstein, the soloist.

In the first movement Mr. Milstein showed rather less than his usual imperturbability, and even lost pitch once or twice, but in the nostalgic slow movement he recovered his best form and reveled in the glorified village-fiddling of the finale.

Still, no brilliance of execution can disguise the weakness of this work.

To those who remembered the well-intentioned but mediocre performance with which the Shostakovich Symphony was introduced to London last Easter, tonight's reading came as a revelation.

The immense first movement attained its climax with the irresistible force of an incoming tide; the thunderous climax itself, and the pale, desolate ending seemed the inevitable result of purely musical logic.

Mitropoulos shows how

By PERCY CATER

MITROPOULOS and the New York Philharmonic - Symphony Orchestra made their second and last concert of this visit, in the Royal Festival Hall last night, something for London to remember. They were brilliant.

The orchestra had got the measure of the place, had forgotten any "first night" anxieties. It was on its toes, completely assured, poised.

In the "La Forza del Destino" overture, which was as smart as paint, it showed its spirit. The surges of tone came as though a coiled spring impelled them.

The strings had an immense verve; the woodwind reflections were flowing and urbane.

Peak of the night was Shostakovitch's Tenth Symphony, which, with playing of this colour and intensity, appeared more than ever a masterwork of our time.

Mitropoulos, who has the highest opinion of this composer, put into the direction of the symphony all he had, and his players responded with an earnest understanding. The symphony, dominatingly of darkness and grandeur, was presented with a lively regard for all its aspects.

ΠΟΛΛΑ ἐνδιαφέροντα σημεῖα εἶχαν ὅσα εἶπε ὁ Δημήτρης Μητρόπουλος στοὺς συναδέλφους του καὶ στοὺς ἀντιπροσώπους τοῦ Τύπου — τόσο ποὺ οἱ τελευταῖοι κατὰ πλειοψηφίαν ἢ τὰ παραποίησαν, ἢ τ' ἀποσιώπησαν. Εἶπε λοιπὸν ἀνάμεσα στ' ἄλλα ὁ διάσημος "Ἑλληνας μαέστρος πὼς ἕνα μεγάλο μέρος τῆς θριαμβευτικῆς σταδιοδρομίας του τὸ χρωστάει στὴν καταπληκτικὴ τύχη ποὺ εἶχε. Καὶ δὲν νομίζουμε πὼς ὑπερβάλλει. Κάτω ἀπ' τὸ σημερινὸ «σύστημα» τοῦ «ἐλευθέρου κόσμου» —τὸ ὁποῖον ἄρκετὰ διακριτικὰ τὸ στόλισε κατὰ πως μπόρεσε ὁ Μητρόπουλος — ἡ ἀνάδειξη μιᾶς καλλιτεχνικῆς φυσιογνωμίας ἐξαρτᾶται πολὺ ἀπ' τὶς συμπτώσεις. Πόσα ταλέντα χάνονται καὶ πόσες προσπάθειες ἀναγνωρίζονται μόνον μετὰ... θάνατον γιατὶ κανεὶς δὲν τὶς πρόσεξε καὶ δὲν τὶς εὐνόησε; "Αν τόσα παιδιὰ τοῦ λαοῦ βρίσκανε μιὰ στοιχειώδη ἔστω συμπαράσταση γιὰ ν' ἀναπτύξουν τὴν κλίση τους στὸν καλλιτεχνικό, τὸν ἐπιστημονικὸ καὶ στὸν τεχνικὸ τομέα, ὁπωσδήποτε θὰ κυριαρχοῦσαν σήμερα ὀνόματα ποὺ οἱ ἴδιοι οἱ κάτοχοί τους ἔπεφτε καὶ νὰ τ' ἀνειρεύονται αὐτό. Μεγάλος παράγοντας λοιπὸν οἱ συμπτώσεις, ἡ τύχη — ὅπως θέλετε πέστε το — τὴν σήμερον ἡμέρα σὲ ὅποιον θέλει κι' ἐπιμένει πάνω ἀπ' ὅλα νὰ μείνει τίμιος κι' ἄνθρωπος μὲ καθαρὴ συνείδηση. Ὁ Μητρόπουλος, σὰν ἀληθινὸς καλλιτέχνης κι' ἀπὸ μετριοφροσύνη κι' ἀπὸ ἐπίγνωση τῶν συνθηκῶν ποὺ ζοῦμε, δὲν μποροῦσε νὰ μὴν εὐγνωμονεῖ καὶ τὴν... τύχη ποὺ τὸν εὐνόησε. "Αν ἔμενε στὴν Ψωροκώσταινα θὰ τὸν εἶχαν τώρα στὴν καλύτερη περίπτωση νὰ διδάσκει «σολφὲζ» σὲ καμμιὰ ἐρειπωμένη αἴθουσα Ἀθηναϊκοῦ ὠδείου. Κι' ἂς σκοτώθηκαν νὰ τὸν καλοῦνε σὲ δεξιώσεις!

ΣΕΜΑΤΙΣΤΗΚΕ ἡ ἀπογευματινὴ φυλλάδα τῶν «κώλλ-γκέρλς» καὶ τῶν «σιδερωμάτων» ποὺ ἡ Φιλαρμονικὴ Ὀρχήστρα τῆς Νέας Ὑόρκης μὲ τὰ ἔργα ποὺ ἔπαιξε κάτω ἀπὸ τὴν διεύθυνση τοῦ Δημήτρη Μητροπούλου, δὲν καταφερε νὰ κάνει... ἀμερικανικὴ προπαγάνδα κι' ἔγινε χωρὶς νὰ τὸ θέλει ἀφορμὴ νὰ ἐκδηλωθοῦν τὰ εἰρηνόφιλα αἰσθήματα τοῦ κοινοῦ. Καὶ ἡ ξεφουσκωμένη —τόσο γοήγορα — ἀπ' τὸν «ἀντιαμερικανισμὸ» της φυλλάδα, μᾶς πληροφορεῖ ἀφρίζουσα ὅτι ὁ ε"Ελλην Μαέστρος κάμνει προπαγάνδα ὀρχήστρας καὶ ὄχι μουσικῆς"! Προπαντὸς δηλαδή, στενοχωριέται ποὺ δὲν ἔγινε ἀμερικανικὴ προπαγάνδα! Τ' ὁμολογεῖ καθαρά. Καὶ ἀγωνίζεται γὰ πείσει τοὺς ἀφελεῖς ἀναγνώστας της περὶ τοῦ ἀντιθέτου. Ἀλλὰ τί ἐστὶ αὐτὴ ἡ «προπαγάνδα ὀρχήστρας»; "Οτι τὰ βιολιά, οἱ μπασσάδιλες, τὰ κόντρα μπάσο καὶ τὰ ὄμποε εἶναι ἀμερικανικῆς προελεύσεως; Τόσο τὸ καλύτερο. "Ας παίζουν ὅ,τι τοὺς λέει ὁ Σοστακόβιτς μὲ τὴν «Συμφωνία τῆς Εἰρήνης» καὶ δὲν ἔχει κανεὶς ἀντίρρηση νὰ προπαγανδίζουν μόνα τους τὰ... ὄργανα τὸν ἀμερικανικὸ τρόπο ζωῆς — νὰ μὴν κρεπάρει δηλαδὴ κι' ἀπ' τὸ κακό της ἡ φυλλάδα τῶν «σιδερωμάτων» ποὺ δὲν «πιάνει» ἡ ἀμερικανικὴ (μετὰ μουσικῆς ἢ ἄνευ) προπαγάνδα. Βλέπετε, τὰ διάφορα... ὄργανα αὐτῆς τῆς προπαγάνδας, εἶναι πάντοτε ἀλληλέγγυα!

Ο ΔΗΜ. ΜΗΤΡΟΠΟΥΛΟΣ ΚΙ' Η ΦΙΛΑΡΜΟΝΙΚΗ Ν. ΥΟΡΚΗΣ

ΤΟΥ κ. ΠΕΤΡΟΥ ΠΕΤΡΙΔΗ

Γεγονὸς ἱστορικῆς γιὰ τὴν Ἑλληνικὴ Πρωτεύουσα σημασίας μπορεῖ νὰ χαρακτηρισθῇ ἡ ἐμφάνισις τῆς Φιλαρμονικῆς Ὀρχήστρας Νέας Ὑόρκης ὑπὸ τὴν διεύθυνσι τοῦ διασήμου Ἑλληνοαμερικανοῦ ἀρχιμουσικοῦ κ. Δ. Μητροπούλου. Στὴ μακρυνὴ αὐτὴ γωνιὰ τῆς Εὐρώπης σπανία μᾶς δίνεται ἡ εὐκαιρία νὰ ἀπικοινωνήσουμε μὲ συμφωνικὸ συγκρότημα καὶ μὲ μαέστρο τέτοιας ὀλκῆς. Εἶναι, ἐπομένως, εὐνόητος καὶ συγχωρετὸς ὁ ἐξαλλος συναγερμός, ποὺ σημειώθηκε τόσο στὸ κυνηγητὸ τῶν εἰσιτηρίων ὅσο καὶ στὴν ὄγκωσι τῶν αἰσθηματικῶν ἀλαλαγμῶν.

Τὰ προγράμματα τῶν δυὸ ἀρχῆθεν ἐξαγγελθεισῶν συναυλιῶν 1ης καὶ 2ας Ὀκτωβρίου παρουσίαζαν τὸ ἀξιοσημείωτο χαρακτηριστικόν, ὅτι δὲν εἶναν ἀπολύτως κεκλεισμένα θύρα στὴν κλασσικὴ μουσική. Ἐξαιρέσει τοῦ «Πρελούδιου καὶ Ἀλέγκρου» τοῦ Κουπρὲν διασκευασμένου γιὰ σύγχρονη ὀρχήστρα ἀπὸ τὸν κ. Νταριοὺς Μιλλιὼ τὴ μερίδα τοῦ λέοντος κατεῖχεν ἡ ρομαντικὴ μουσικὴ μὲ ἐκπροσώπους τοὺς Σούμαν καὶ Μπράμς. Ἡ σύνθεσις ἑνὸς προγράμματος συμφωνικῆς συναυλίας ἀνήκει, δίχως ἀμφιβολία, στὴν ἀποκλειστικὴν ἁρμοδιότητα καὶ δικαιοδοσία τοῦ μαέστρου. Ὑπὸ τὸ πρίσμα αὐτὸ καλούμεθα ἡμεῖς οἱ μουσικοκριτικοὶ καθὼς καὶ τὸ ἀκροατήριο νὰ ἀξιολογήσουμε τὶς ἐκτελέσεις κι' ὄχι ὑπὸ τὸ βάρος τῆς κατὰ διάναιαν ὑποθήκης σχετικῆς μὲ τὸ τί θὰ προτιμούσαμε, νὰ εἶχε διευθύνει ὁ ἀρχιμουσικός.

Ὁ Φρανσουὰ Κουπρέν, ἑνίοτε ἐπιλεγάμενος ὁ Μέγας, ἀποτελεῖ μιὰν ἀπὸ τὶς πιὸ ἐξέχουσες φυσιογνωμίες τοῦ Γαλλικοῦ Χρυσοῦ Αἰῶνος, τοῦ τόσο μεγαλόπρεπα σὺνφιζομένου στὸ πρόσωπο τοῦ «Βασιλιᾶ-Ἡλίου» Λουδοβίκου τοῦ 14ου. Μαζὶ μὲ τὸν Ραμὼ σχηματίζουν ἔνδοξη δυανδρία στὶς δέλτους τῆς κλασσικῆς Γαλλικῆς μουσικῆς. Κύρια προσόντα τῆς τέχνης αὐτῆς ἐμφανίζονται ἡ λεπτή, δροσερή, παρθενικὴ σχεδὸν εὐαισθησία, τὸ τίλειον ὕφος ἀφογγης αὐλικῆς κοσμιότητος, ἡ αὐτόχρημα Ἀττικὴ διαύγεια στὴ διατύπωσι τῶν μουσικῶν ἰδεῶν καὶ ἡ ὅσο χωρεῖ λογικὴ ἐπεξεργασία τῶν χαρακτηριστικῶν θεμάτων. Στενὰ συνυφασμένος μὲ τὴ κλασσικὴν αὐτὴ τέχνη τῆς πατρίδος του ὁ σύγχρονος Γάλλος μουσουργὸς κ. Ντ. Μιλλιὼ ἔδωσε μιὰ διασκευή, ἡ ὁποία, ἂν καὶ ἀποτελοῦσα σημαντικὴ μεγέθυνσι χάριν συντουτισμοῦ μὲ τὰ πιλαίσια σημερινῆς ὀρχήστρας μένει βασικὰ πιστὴ στὸ βαθύτερο νόημα τοῦ ἔργου καὶ τῆς ἐποχῆς.

Ἡ Συμφωνία ἀρ. 2 τοῦ Σούμαν στέκεται ἀδικαιολόγητα παρημελημένη στὰ συνήθη προγράμματα συμφωνικῶν συναυλιῶν ἐν σχέσει τουλάχιστο, μὲ τὶς δυὸ ἑπόμενες. Ἡ τόσο πλουσιοπάροχη ἐρμηνεία τοῦ κ. Μητροπούλου μᾶς ὀδηγεῖ στὸ νὰ διαλύσουμε τὶς προκαταλήψεις εἰς βάρος τοῦ ἔργου. Ἐδῶ διαχύνεται ἀπ' ἄκρου εἰς ἄκρον, σ' ἐνθερμα κύματα εὐτραπεῖος αἰσθηματισμοῦ, ὁ καλύτερος Σούμαν τῆς ὑγιοῦς περιόδου. Ἀκούσιά μας παραμένουν, μολαταῦτα, ἀδιάλυτοι οἱ ἐνδοισμοί μας σχετικὰ μὲ τὴν πηγαία συμφωνικότητα τῶν μουσικῶν σκέψεων τοῦ Σούμαν. Πάμπολλοι συνθέτες, μεταξὺ τῶν ὁποίων κολοσσοὶ ὡς ὁ Βάγνερ, συλλαμβάνουν καὶ καταγράφουν τὴν πρώτην ἐξόρμησι τοῦ μουσικοῦ κειμένου στὴ γλῶσσα τοῦ πιάνου, πάνω σὲ δυὸ ἢ τρία πεντάγραμμα, κατόπι δὲ προβαίνουν στὴ μεγέθυνσι καὶ μεταγραφὴ γιὰ μεγάλην ὀρχήστρα. Κάθε μέθοδος ἐργασίας εἶναι παραδεκτὴ ἐφόσο τὰ αἰσθητικὰ ἐπιτεύγματα φθάνουν στὸ ὕψος τῶν προθέσεων τοῦ καλλιτέχνη κι' ἐξαντλοῦν μέχρι κεραίας τὶς δυσκολότητες ἐπιδιώξεις του. Κατὰ τὴ διαδικασία ἡ ἀρχικὴ γλῶσσα τοῦ πιάνου ἐξαφανίζεται, προβάλλει δὲ πάνοπλη ἡ ὀρχηστρικὴ μορφὴ ἀπηλλαγμένη ἀπὸ προπατορικὲς, πιανιστικὲς ἀναμνήσεις. Στὴν περίπτωσι τῶν συμφωνικῶν ἔργων τοῦ Σούμαν ἡ διαδικασία αὐτὴ ἐμφανίζεται ἀτελὴς, κοπιώδης, οὐδόλως πειστικὴ ὡς πρὸς τὴν ὀρχηστρικὴ της τελεολογία. Παραμένει, σ' ἐμφανὴ βαθμό, μουσικὴ πιάνου ἐνορχηστρωμένη. Ὁ Σούμαν, ὅπως κι' ὁ Σοπέν, παραμένει ὡς κατ' ἐξοχὴν συνθέτης τῶν πλήκτρων, τοῦ τραγουδιοῦ, τῆς παντοίας ἐνδόμυχης μουσικῆς δωματίου. Ἡ συχνὰ ἀριστη κατὰ τὰ ἄλλα μουσικὴ ὕλη τῶν συμφωνιῶν του διαβιοῖ ὑπὸ τὸ μειονέκτημα ἀτελοῦς μετενδύσεως στὴν ὑφὴ τῆς ὀρχήστρας, ἐνίοτε δὲ καὶ ὑπὸ τὸ τῆς βαρειᾶς, ἀκαλαίσθητης ἐνορχηστρώσεως.

Ἡ Συμφωνία ἀρ. 10 τοῦ συγχρότοῦ Ρώσσου συνθέτη Σοστάκοβιτς κατεῖχε φαντασμαγορικὴ θέσι στὸ πρόγραμμα τῆς συναυλίας. Τὸ διεξοδικὸ αὐτὸ ἔργο, διαρκείας πενήντα περίπου λεπτῶν, σφαλλεται ἴσως ἀπὸ ὑπερβολικὸ πλοῦτο μουσικῶν θεμάτων, ρυθμικῶν ἐξάρσεων, ὀρχηστρικῆς πολυχρωμίας. Ἐδῶ ξεχύνεται ἀφθονη μουσικὴ, ἀρκετὴ νὰ ἐπενδύσῃ δυὸ ἢ τρία μπαλλέτα ἀσιατικῆς ἐμπνεύσεως. Προκειμένου ὅμως περὶ συμφωνίας καὶ δὴ τῆς δεκάτης τὸν ἀριθμό, τίθενται μερικὰ προβλήματα βασικῆς σημασίας ὅσον ἀφορᾶ τὶς σχέσεις μεταξὺ μουσικῆς σκέψεως καὶ τῆς ἐγχρώμης διατυπώσεώς της. Εἶναι προφανὲς ὅτι μεταξὺ τῆς συμφωνικῆς σκέψεως καὶ τοῦ ὀρχηστρικοῦ χρώματος, ποὺ καλεῖται νὰ τῆς δώσῃ ἀναγλυφικότητα, ὑπάρχουν κι' ὀφείλουν νὰ ὑπάρχουν ὡρισμένες σχέσεις ὅσον ἀφορᾶ στὴν ἀναμεταξύ τους ἰσορροπία. Χρήσιμο νὰ τονισθῇ, χάριν παραδείγματος, ὅτι στὴν ὅλη κλασσικὴ μουσική, ἀπὸ τὶς ὑπέροχες ἀκαπέλλα πολυφωνίες τῆς "Αναγεννήσεως — ὥρα Παλεστρίνα — διὰ Μπάχ, Χαίντελ μέχρι Μπετόβεν συμπεριλαμβανομένου ἡ μουσικὴ σκέψις βασίζεται τὰ μέγιστα σ' αὐτὴ ταύτη τὴν ὑφὴ τῆς μουσικῆς πλοκῆς παρὰ στὸ σχεδὸν ἀνύπαρκτο ὀρχηστρικὸ χρῶμα. Ἡ περιδόητη «Σχολὴ τῆς Φούγκας» τοῦ Μπάχ—22 περίπου φοῦγκες, κανόνες, ριτσερκάρι κλπ.—δὲν φέρει, ὅσον ἀφορᾶ στὴν ἐνόργανή της ἐνσάρκωσι, καμμιὰν ἔνδειξι. Εἶναι ἀπόλυτη μουσικὴ σκέψις, αὐτοτελὴς κι' αὐτάρκης, ἀπόλυτη σὲ τέτοιο σημεῖο ποὺ ἐθεωρεῖτο κι' ἀπὸ τοὺς εἰδικοὺς ὡς ὑπερβάσα τὰ πλαίσια τῆς μουσικῆς κι' ἀναγομένη στὰ τῶν καθαρῶν μαθηματικῶν. Μὲ τὴ μεταπήδησι τῆς κλασσικῆς μουσικῆς στὸ ρομαντικὸ ἐπίπεδο τὸ ὀρχηστρικὸ χρῶμα ἄρχισε νὰ ἐπενδύῃ ὅσο πάει καὶ πλουσιώτερα τὴ μουσικὴ σκέψι. Δύσκολο στάθηκε νὰ ἐπιτευχθῇ μιὰ κάποια ἰσορροπία μεταξὺ τῶν δυὸ παραγόντων τῆς συμφωνικῆς δημιουργίας. Κι' ὄχι μόνο τοῦτο. Μὲ τὴ φθορὰ τοῦ ρομαντισμοῦ καὶ τὴν ἐπελθοῦσα νεώτερη τεχνοτροπία τὸ χρῶμα κατήντησε νὰ καταλύῃ τὴ σκέψι καὶ νὰ τὴν πνίγῃ μέσα σ' ὠκεανοὺς πολυχρωμης, φανταχτερῆς, ἐντυπωσιακῆς ἐξωτερικότητος. Ὅσο πλουσιώτερο τὸ χρῶμα, τόσο φτωχότερη ἡ μουσικὴ σκέψις. Ἡ ἀσύδοτη κυριαρχία τοῦ χρώματος πάνω στὴ σκέψι ἀποτελεῖ ἕνα ἀπὸ τὰ πιὸ ἐνδεικτικὰ παρακμῆς χαρακτηριστικὰ τοῦ σημερινοῦ μας αἰσθητικοῦ κατανταήματος. Ἀνάλογην ἀνατροπὴν ἰσορροπίας μπορεῖ κανεὶς νὰ διαπιστώσῃ ἔστω καὶ μέσα στὰ μεμονωμένα πλαίσια τῆς Ρωσσικῆς μουσικῆς. Ἰδοὺ ὁ Μουσόργκσκυ, ὁ Μπορωντίν, οἱ δυὸ βαθύτεροι, πηγαιότεροι μουσουργοί. Ὁποία θαυμαστὴ ἰσορροπία μεταξὺ σκέψεως καὶ χρώματος! Στὴν περίπτωσι τοῦ πρώτου—ὅρα ὅπερα «Μπόρις Γκοντοῦνοφ»—ἡ δραματικὴ σκέψις καταβαρατεῖ ἀπόλυτα τοῦ τόσο διακριτικοῦ ὀρχηστρικοῦ χρώματος. Ἡ Δεκάτη Συμφωνία τοῦ Σοστακόβιτς ἐξεταζομένη ὑπὸ τὸ πρίσμα τῶν ὡς ἄνω ὀλίγων θεωρητικῶν στοχασμῶν, μᾶς προσφέρει ἄφθονη μουσικὴ πρώτην ὕλη, συχνὰ μετρίας ποιότητος. Ὅσον ἀφορᾶ στὶς ἀξιώσεις περὶ συμφωνίας μᾶς ἐπιτρέπεται νὰ ἀναφερθοῦμε στὸ ἀρχαῖο: «πλίνθοι καὶ καρφωμοὶ ἀτάκτως ἐρριμμέναι».

Κατὰ τὸ εἰκοσιετὲς διάστημα τῆς ἀπουσίας του ὁ κ. Μητρόπουλος συνεπλήρωσε σὲ βαθμὸν ἀξιοθαύμαστο τὴν καλλιτεχνική του φυσιογνωμία. Ἀριστοτέχνης, συναρπαστικὸς διρτουόζος τῆς μπαγκέττας—τὴν ὁποία ξαναπῆρεν, εὐτυχῶς, στὰ χέρια—κατέχει ὡς τὶς μυχιώτερες πτυχὲς τὰ ἔργα ποὺ διευθύνει. Ἀπόλυτος κυρίαρχος ὅλων τῶν δυνατοτήτων τοῦ ἐκλάμπρου συγκροτήματος τῆς Φιλαρμονικῆς Ὀρχήστρας Νέας Ὑόρκης, διαπλάθει μὲ καταπληκτικὴν ἀποτελεσματικότητα τὶς παντοῖες προθέσεις του στὸν ὁρίζοντα τῆς θαυμαστῆς αὐτῆς ἀρχήσεως. Οἱ Ἀθηναῖοι, ἀποταμιεύσαντες ἐπὶ μακρὰ σειρὰ ἐτῶν ἐνθουσιασμούς καὶ χειροκροτήματα, τὸν περιεπτύχθησαν μὲ χειμάρρους ἡφαιστειωδῶν ἐπευφημιῶν. Συγχαρητήρια ὀφείλονται ἐπίσης στοὺς «Φίλους τῆς Μουσικῆς» γιὰ τὴν ὀργάνωσι τῆς ἐξαιρετικῆς αὐτῆς καλλιτεχνικῆς ἱεροτελεστίας.

ΑΠΟ ΤΗ ΜΟΥΣΙΚΗ ΠΟΥ ΑΚΟΥΩ

Ο ΜΗΤΡΟΠΟΥΛΟΣ

— Τοῦ συνεργάτου μας κ. ΜΑΡΙΟΥ ΒΑΡΒΟΓΛΗ —

«Οἱ ἄνθρωποι ποὺ ἀγαποῦν βιλικρινὰ τὴ μουσική, αὐτοὶ ποὺ τὴν θεωροῦν ὅπως ἐγὼ σὰν θρησκεία τους, ἀνήκουν στὶς ἄπορες τάξεις. Ἐλπίζω πὼς κάποια μέρα ἡ μουσικὴ θὰ γίνῃ θρησκεία τῆς ἀνθρωποτητος, ὁπότε ἡ εἴσοδος στα κοντσέρτα θὰ εἶναι ἐλεύθερη, ὅπως εἶναι σήμερα ἀνοικτοὶ οἱ ναοὶ στὸν καθένα ποὺ θέλει νὰ προσευχηθῇ».

Μ' αὐτὰ τὰ λόγια ἄνοιξε τὴν καρδιὰ του διάπλατη, ὁ Δημήτρης Μητρόπουλος, ὁ μεγάλος καλλιτέχνης κι' ὅπιος μπόρεσε νὰ νοιώσῃ, καταλαβε καλὰ τί κλεί νει μέσα του αὐτὸς ὁ ἄνθρωπος.

"Εσπευσε ὁ κόσμος νὰ δῇ τὸν ἔνδοξο μαέστρο κι' ἀπ' ὅλους πρῶτοι ἔτρεξαν οἱ χθεσινοὶ διῶκτες καὶ χλευαστές του, νὰ ἀγκαλιαστοῦν καὶ νὰ φωτογραηθοῦν ἀκόμα μαζί του. Κι' ἔδειξε γιὰ μιὰ ἀκόμα φορὰ τὴν ψυχή του ὁ Μητρόπουλος. Συγχώρησε τὰ πάντα καὶ τοὺς πάντες. Ξέχασε τὰ πικρὰ λόγια, ξέχασε τὰ ξετσίπωτα γραπτά! Κι' ἀναβαπτισμένος στὸ ἑλληνικὸ φῶς, πῆρε κουράγιο γιὰ νὰ συνεχίσῃ τὸ δρόμο τῆς Μουσικῆς καὶ τῆς Ἑλλάδας.

"Αν θελήσω νὰ φανῶ συνεπὴς μὲ τὶς ὑποχρεώσεις ποὺ ἔχω ἀναλάβει, θὰ πρέπει ἐδῶ νὰ ἀσχοληθῶ μὲ τὴν κριτική. Καὶ ὁμολογῶ πὼς εἶναι ἡ πρώτη φορὰ ποὺ φοβοῦμαι νὰ πάρω τέτοια εὐθύνη. "Ἀλλωστε «οἱ φίλοι τῆς Μουσικῆς» λίγο ἐλλειψῃ νὰ ἀπαγορεύσουν στοὺς μουσικοκριτικοὺς νὰ ἀσχοληθοῦν μὲ τὸ ἔργο τους, δείχνοντας ἕνα προστατευτικὸ ἐνδιαφέρον, μὲ τὴν ἀμφιβολία ποὺ τοὺς γεννήθηκε ἂν πρέπει ἢ ὄχι νὰ μᾶς στείλουν προσκλήσεις! Θὰ πρέπει λοιπὸν νὰ ἐκφράσω ἀνυπόκριτη χαρά, γιατὶ στὸν τόπο μας ἡ μουσικὴ μόρφωση προχώρησε τόσο πολύ, ὥστε νὰ κρίνεται πλέον ἡ κριτική! "Ισως νὰ θέλησαν νὰ προδιαθέσουν τὸ ἀναμφισβήτητο γεγονός, πὼς τὰ ψεγάδια τῆς μπαγκέτας τοῦ μάγου μαέστρου εἶναι τόσο σπάνια, ποὺ ἦταν σχεδὸν βέβαιο πὼς στὶς δύο Συναυλίες ποὺ θὰ ἔδινε, θὰ ἦταν δύσκολο σ' ἕναν εὐσυνείδητο κριτικὸ νὰ σημειώσῃ ἔστω καὶ ἕνα γιὰ δείγμα. Τὰ ζητήματα τῆς ἀναλύσεως καὶ ἑρμηνείας τῶν μουσικῶν ἔργων, ἔχουν ἀπὸ χρόνια πάρει προσωπικό, γιὰ κάθε μαέστρο, χαρακτῆρα καὶ δὲν εἶναι ἔργο τῆς στιγμῆς ν' ἀσχοληθοῦμε μὲ θέματα ποὺ ἔχουν τὴν μορφὴ τῆς παγκόσμιας διενέξεως στὸν κόσμο τῶν μουσικῶν. "Ετσι δὲν θὰ μιλήσω γιὰ τὶς προσωπικὲς γνῶμες τοῦ Δημήτρη Μητρόπουλου γιὰ τὴν ἑρμηνεία τοῦ Μπετόβεν ἢ τοῦ Μπράμς. Μιὰ κι' ἀνάφερα ὅμως τὸ ὄνομα τοῦ Μπετόβεν, θυμήθηκα μὲ λύπη, πὼς ὁ παλιός μου φίλος Μητρόπουλος, δὲν εἶχε ἐκφρασθῇ ποτὲ ἄλλοτε τόσο ἀδέξια γιὰ τὸν Τιτάνα, ὅπως στὴν προχτεσινή του «πρὲς κονφεράνς». Φαίνεται πὼς εἶναι ἀπαραίτητο νὰ μᾶς ἐκπλήσσουν καμμιὰ φορά, οἱ μεγαλοφυεῖς, μ' αὐτὰ ποὺ λένε!

Στὴν ἑρμηνεία τῶν μοντέρνων ἔργων, ὁ "Ελληνας μαέστρος τῆς Φιλαρμονικῆς τῆς Νέας Ὑόρκης, μᾶς ἔπεισε ὅτι εἶναι ἄφταστος. Ξεχωρίζει ὁλοφάνερα ἀπ' τοὺς ἄλλους συναδέλφους του, ποὺ ἔχουν τὴ μανία νὰ δίνουν πάντα μιὰ αἰσθητικὴ λύσι σὲ μιὰ σύνθεσι καὶ ποὺ γιὰ νὰ τὸ πετύχουν κομματιάζουν τὰ ἔργα. Μοῦ θυμίζουν τὰ παιδιόστικα κατασκεύασματα, ποὺ γιὰ ν' ἀνακαλύψουν τὸν μηχανισμὸ τῶν παιχνιδιῶν τους, τ' ἀνοίγουν, καταστρέφοντάς τα.

Ἡ 10η συμφωνία τοῦ Κοστάκοβιτς, σὲ πρώτη ἐκτέλεση στὴν Ἑλλάδα, ἔτσι ξαφνικὰ ποὺ μᾶς δόθηκε, ἄφησε πίσω της τὴ νοσταλγία. Εἶναι θαυμάσιο ἔργο, πραγματικὴ «Συμφωνία τῆς Εἰρήνης». Εἶναι γραμμένη μὲ τέτοιο τρόπο, μὲ τόσα ὀρχηστρικὰ ἐντυπωσιακὰ ἐφέτα, ὥστε δικαιολογημένα προκάλεσε τὸ παν δαιμόνιο τῶν ἐκδηλώσεων τοῦ θαυμασμοῦ, παντοῦ ὅπου ἐκτελέστηκε ἀπ' τὸ Μητρόπουλο, στὴ μεγάλη του περιοδεία. Ὁμολογῶ πὼς μιὰ μόνο ἐκτέλεσι, ἑνὸς μοντέρνου ἔργου. ἂν δὲν ἔχει κανεὶς προηγούμενα μελετήσει τὴ σύνθεση, δὲν μπορεῖ νὰ καίνη τὸ τεχνικὸ μέρος του. Ὑπάρχει βέβαια καὶ ὁ τρόπος τοῦ δανεισμοῦ μιᾶς κριτικῆς ἀπὸ τοὺς ξένους συναδέλφους, ἀλλ' ὁ τρόπος αὐτὸς δὲν μοῦ πάει καθόλου.

Σήμερα στη Ρωσσία, ὕστερα ἀπὸ τὸ θάνατο τοῦ μεγάλου Προκόφιεφ, ὑπάρχουν δυὸ «μεγάλοι», ὁ Σοστάκοβιτς καὶ ὁ «φολκλορίστας» Ἀράμ Χατσατουριάν. Ὁ Σοστάκοβιτς βρῆκε στὸ πρόσωπο τοῦ Δημήτρη Μητρόπουλου τὸν μοναδικὸ ἐρμηνευτή του. Τὸ ἀκροατήριο ἀπιθέωσε τὸν "Ελληνα ἀρχιμουσικὸ καὶ τὴν Ἀμερικάνικη ὀρχήστρα, ποὺ ἐξετέλεσε τὸ Σοβιετικὸ ἔργο.

PHILHARMONIC RETURNS

Orchestra Arrives by Plane After 5-Week European Tour

The New York Philharmonic-Symphony Orchestra arrived at New York International Airport, Idlewild, Queens, yesterday morning after a five-week European tour during which it gave twenty-seven concerts.

The group was headed by Dimitri Mitropoulos, the orchestra's musical director, and Bruno Zirato, its manager. Eight orchestra members, who had decided to remain for a European holiday before the opening of the orchestra's fall season, were not among those returning.

The 15,000-mile tour, sponsored by the American National Theatre and Academy and the State Department, was made at a cost of approximately $270,000, resulting in a deficit to the Philharmonic-Symphony of $82,000.

The orchestra's fall season begins Thursday, Oct. 20, with a Carnegie Hall concert under the direction of Mr. Mitropoulos.

Orchestra In; Mitropoulos Calls Europe Tour a Success

The New York Philharmonic-Symphony Orchestra returned yesterday from a five-week European tour, and Dimitri Mitropoulos, its musical director and conductor, was enthusiastic about the reception he and his musicians had been accorded wherever they went.

The group arrived at Idlewild Airport from London at 9 a. m. aboard two chartered KLM Dutch Airliners.

"It was the greatest event of my life—I was celebrated like a god," Mr. Mitropoulos said of the welcome he was given in his native Athens. Police riot squads were called to restore order among crowds of music lovers clamoring for tickets for the orchestra's two scheduled performances in Athens.

The orchestra also played in Great Britain, Germany, Austria, Belgium, France and Italy. Mr. Mitropoulos said the group was given one of its most memorable tributes in West Berlin.

Mr. Mitropoulous said he thought similar visits by the New York Philharmonic-Symphony to other countries would be "the best possible propaganda" for America. But he expressed doubt that the group could afford to make another foreign tour, noting that the trip had left the New York Philharmonic Symphony Society with a $80,000 deficit.

"I would not even advise the Society to spend another penny on a similar trip unless we get financial help from some source," he declared solemnly. "I don't think we should endanger our existence here to make European tours."

ΓΕΓΟΝΟΤΑ ΚΑΙ ΣΤΟΧΑΣΜΟΙ

Ὁ Μητρόπουλος καὶ τό κοινόν

ΠΕΡΙΤΤΕΥΕΙ φυσικὰ νὰ τονισθῇ ἰδιαιτέρως ὅτι οἱ σημερινές μας παρατηρήσεις, ἂν καὶ τὴν ἀφορμὴ γιὰ νὰ τὶς κάνωμε μᾶς τὴν ἔδωσε ἕνα ἐπίκαιρο γεγονὸς — οἱ συναυλίες τῆς Συμφωνικῆς Ὀρχήστρας τῆς Νέας Ὑόρκης — δὲν ἔχουν σχέσι μὲ τὴν τέχνη τοῦ Μητρόπουλου ποὺ ἡ ἀξία της εἶναι παγκόσμια ἀναγνωρισμένη, γιὰ νὰ μὴ προσθέσωμε ὅτι στὸ κεφάλαιο αὐτὸ ἐμεῖς δὲν διαθέτομε καμμιὰ ἁρμοδιότητα. Δὲν ἔχουν σχέσι οὔτε μὲ τὸ θερμόστατο, μὲ τὸ ἀληθινὰ ἔκτακτο ἐνδιαφέρον ποὺ ἐπροκάλεσε ἡ ἐπιστροφή του ὕστερα ἀπὸ τόσον καιρό. Ὁ τόπος μας ἔπρεπε νὰ τὸν τιμήσῃ μὲ τὸ θαυμασμό του καὶ μὲ τὴ στοργή του, ὅπως τιμᾶ κι' ἐκεῖνος μὲ τ' ὄνομά του καὶ μὲ τὸ ταλέντο του τὸν τόπο μας. Τὸ θέμα ποὺ θέλουμε νὰ θίξωμε εἶναι ἄλλο, γενικώτερο, πρόκειται συγκεκριμένα γιὰ τὴ σχέσι τοῦ κοινοῦ μὲ τὴ μουσική, ἀκριβέστερα τοῦ μεγάλου κοινοῦ μὲ τὴ μουσικὴ τῆς ποιότητος, ἄσχετα μὲ τὸν καλλιτέχνη ποὺ τοῦ τὴν προσφέρει καὶ τὰ μέσα ποὺ ὁ καλλιτέχνης χρησιμοποιεῖ.

Ἐρωτᾶται: "Ολος, αὐτὸς ὁ κόσμος, ποὺ ὁ ἐνθουσιασμός του φτάνει συνήθως ὡς τὴν ὀξύτητα τοῦ παραληρήματος, καταλαβαίνει τὴ μουσικὴ ποὺ ἀκούει;

Ἐδῶ θὰ ἀφηγηθοῦμε ἕνα πολιτικὸ ἀνέκδοτο. Εἶχε φτάσει ἀπὸ τὴν Κρήτη ὁ Ἐλευθέριος Βενιζέλος, τὸ Σεπτέμβριο τοῦ 1910 καὶ ἡ Ἀθήνα τοῦ ἔκανε μία ἀποθεωτικὴ ὑποδοχή. Ἐρχότανε μὲ τὸ θρύλο τῶν Κρητικῶν ἀγώνων τοῦ Θέρισου, καλεσμένος ἀπὸ τὸ Στρατιωτικὸ Σύνδεσμο κι' ὅλοι τὸν ἔβλεπαν σὰν Μεσσία. Βγῆκε στὸ μπαλκόνι τοῦ ξενοδοχείου «Μέγα» στὸ Σύνταγμα κι' ἄρχισε νὰ μιλᾶ. Ὁ ἐνθουσιασμὸς τοῦ κόσμου ἦταν ἀσυγκράτητος, πήγαινε «κρεσέντο» σὲ χειροκροτήματα καὶ σὲ ζητω κραυγὲς ἀπὸ φράση σὲ φράση. "Οπου σὲ μιὰ στιγμὴ ἕνας ἄνθρωπος τοῦ λαοῦ ποὺ βρισκότανε κοντὰ στὸν νέο τότε συνάδελφο Σπῦρο Μελᾶ — γιατὶ ἂν δὲν κάνωμε λάθος αὐτὸς μᾶς περιέγραψε τὴ σκηνὴ — ἄρχισε νὰ κλαίῃ καθὼς ἡ συγκίνησί του εἶχε φτάσει στὸ κατακόρυφο καὶ νὰ λέῃ

ΜΙΑ ΑΝΕΚΔΟΤΗ ΦΩΤΟΓΡΑΦΙΑ ΤΟΥ ΜΗΤΡΟΠΟΥΛΟΥ

Ὁ μεγάλος μαέστρος διευθύνει τὴν «Ποιμενικὴ» τοῦ Μπετόβεν στὸν Κοκκιναρὰ τῆς Κηφισιᾶς.

Η ΠΡΟΣΩΠΙΚΟΤΗΣ ΠΟΥ ΕΚΥΡΙΑΡΧΗΣΕΝ ΕΙΣ ΤΟΥΣ ΔΙΕΘΝΕΙΣ ΜΟΥΣΙΚΟΥΣ ΣΤΙΒΟΥΣ

Ο† ΔΗΜ. ΜΗΤΡΟΠΟΥΛΟΣ

ΝΟΣΤΑΛΓΙΚΟΣ ΠΡΟΣΚΥΝΗΤΗΣ ΤΗΣ ΠΑΤΡΩΑΣ ΓΗΣ, ΑΠΟΘΕΩΝΕΤΑΙ ΟΠΟΥ ΕΜΦΑΝΙΖΕΤ ΑΙ

—Εἶναι πραγματικὰ μιὰ δύσκολη κατάστασι τὸ νὰ στέκη κανεὶς πάρα πολὺ ψηλά. Ἔλεγε μιὰ κυρία. Ἀλλὰ μὲ πόση μετριοφροσύνη, μὲ πόσο τάκτ ἀντιμετώπισε ὁ Μητρόπουλος τὴν κατάστασι αὐτή, ὅταν βρέθηκε ἀνάμεσα στοὺς παληοὺς συναδέλφους του τοῦ Ὠδείου Ἀθηνῶν τὴν περασμένη Κυριακὴ τ' ἀπόγευμα.

«Νὰ ξέρατε πόσο ταπεινὸς αἰσθάνομαι, γιατὶ δὲ νομίζω πὼς εἶμαι καλλίτερος. Εἶχα μιὰ καταπληκτικὴ τύχη. Ξεκίνησα παίζοντας ἕνα ἁπλῶς καλὸ πιάνο».

—Θεέ μου! Ἁπλῶς καλό! διέκοψε ζωηρὰ μιὰ δεύτερη κυρία. Μὰ θὰ μοῦ ἐπιτρέψετε τώρα νὰ ἐξομολογηθῶ κάτι ποὺ δὲν εἶχα ξεστομίσει ποτέ: Παρακολουθοῦσα τὰ διάφορα ρεσιτὰλ τραγουδιοῦ ἢ βιολιοῦ, ποὺ συνώδευε ὁ Μητρόπουλος. Τακτικὰ ὅμως μοῦ τύχαινε ἀντὶ ν' ἀκούω τὸν σολίστ—ποὺ κάποτε ἦταν καὶ παγκοσμίου φήμης — νὰ βρίσκωμαι ἀφωσιωμένη στὴ συνοδεία τοῦ πιάνου. Τὸ εἶχα ἀποδώσει τότε στὴν ἐξαιρετική μου ἀγάπη γι' αὐτὸ τὸ ὄργανο. Τώρα ποὺ ὁ Μητρόπουλος ἔγινε αὐτὸς ποὺ εἶναι σήμερα, μπορῶ ἐπὶ τέλους ἀ ἐξηγήσω ἐκείνη τὴν... ἀδυναμία μου.

—Ὅσο ὅμως γι' αὐτὸ ποὺ εἶπε ὅτι «χρειάστηκε σκληρὴ δουλειά, καρτερία καὶ δύναμι», κανεὶς δὲν θὰ τοῦ τὸ ἀμφισβητήση, εἶπε ἡ πρώτη κυρία. Δὲ θὰ ξεχάσω τὴν ἀπελπισία ποὺ μᾶς κυρίευε ὅταν σὰν μαθήτριες τύχαινε νὰ τρυπώσουμε σὲ καμμιὰ δοκιμὴ τῆς ὀρχήστρας. Εἴχαμε πάει μὲ χαρὰ ὅτι θ' ἀκούσωμε «τζάμπα» ἀλλὰ τί νὰ σᾶς πῶ, μᾶς ἔβγαινε ξυνό. Κάθε δυὸ-τρία μέτρα ὁ Μητρόπουλος σταματοῦσε γιὰ μιὰ παρατήρησι. Καὶ μόλις ἡ ὀρχήστρα ξανάρχιζε τὴν ξανασταματοῦσε πάλι. Κι' αὐτὴ ἡ ἱστορία δὲν εἶχε τελειωμό. Τὸ παράξενο ὅμως ἦταν πὼς οἱ μουσικοί του δὲν θύμωναν, ἀντίθετα πρασπαθοῦσαν νὰ παρακολουθήσουν τὶς ὑποδείξεις του μὲ τὴν καλλίτερη θέλησι τοῦ κόσμου. Καὶ τὸ ἀποτέλεσμα τὸ χαιρόμαστε ἐπὶ τέλους ὅταν ἀκούγαμε τὸ κάθε κομμάτι ἀγνώριστο τὴν Κυριακὴ τὸ πρωΐ, στὴ γενικὴ δοκιμή. Καὶ τὴ Δευτέρα τ' ἀπόγευμα — τότε βλέπετε εἴχαμε τὴν τύχη νὰ ἐπαναλαβαίνεται ἡ συναυλία — τὸ ἀπολαβαίναμε διπλά, γιατὶ τὸ νοιώθαμε ἀκόμα καλλίτερα. Ἰδιαίτερα θυμᾶμαι τὴν συγκλονιστικὴ ἐντύπωσι ἀπὸ τὴν πρώτη ἐκτέλεσι μιᾶς συμφωνίας τοῦ Μπράμς. Ὁ μαέστρος εἶχε ἀγωνισθῆ περισσότερο παρὰ ποτέ. Τὴ φορὰ αὐτὴ ἔκανε καὶ ἀνάλυσι τοῦ ἔργου τοῦ μεγάλου συνθέτη γιὰ νὰ μπορέση νὰ δημιουργήση ἀτμόσφαιρα καὶ νὰ βρῆ τὴν κατανόησι, ποὺ ζητοῦσε ἀπ' τοὺς μουσικούς του. Φυσικὰ ἡ ἐκτέλεσι ἦταν κάτι ποὺ χαράχθηκε βαθειὰ στὴ μνήμη μας.

Ἡ κυρία σώπασε, βυθίζοντας τὸ βλέμμα στὸ κενό. Ὅταν γύρισε ἐπὶ τέλους ἀπὸ τὸ μυστήριον, παραφορὰν καὶ τέλος μὲ τὴν φρενιτιώδη ἀγαλλίασιν τῆς μουσικῆς ἀποδόσεως, παρουσίασεν ὡσαύτως κατὰ τὸν ἰσχυρότερον τρόπον τὴν ἀρχιτεκτονικήν της καὶ συνεκράτησε πάντοτε τὴν συνοχὴν τῆς σκέψεως τοῦ συνθέτου. Εἶχε δὲ τοῦτο τὴν σφραγῖδα μιᾶς ἀλανθάστου καλλιτεχνικῆς ὀντότητος καὶ μουσικῆς τέχνης.

Ὁ Μητρόπουλος, ὕστερα ἀπὸ 17 χρόνια ἀντικρύζει καὶ πάλιν τὴν ἑλληνικὴ γῆ...

Κι' ὕστερα ὁ Μητρόπουλος μᾶς ἐπαίνεσε γιὰ τὴ μουσικότητά μας. «Ἕνα κοινὸ ἀπὸ τὰ περισσότερο καλλιεργημένα», εἶπε. Σίγουρα, δὲν ἀναλογίστηκε πὼς εἶναι αὐτὸς ὁ ἴδιος ποὺ μᾶς ἔχει μορφώσει. Κι' ὅτι σ' αὐτὸν πρὸ πάντων χρωστᾶμε τὴ μουσικὴ κατανόησι ποὺ ἔχει καταπλήξει ὅλους τοὺς ξένους καλλιτέχνες ποὺ πέρασαν ἀπὸ δῶ.

Τὴν ὀλίγον παιζομένην ὀβερτοῦρα τοῦ Μπετόβεν ἠκολούθησεν ἡ «Ὀβερτοῦρα τοῦ Δὸν Κιχώτου» τοῦ Jean Rivier, ἡ ὁποία διὰ πρώτην φορὰν ἐξετελέσθη ἐν Βοστώνῃ. Τὸ ἔργον εἶχε συντεθῆ τῷ 1929 καὶ ἐπαίχθη τὸ πρῶτον ὑπὸ τοῦ Νικολάου Σοκόλωφ καὶ τῆς Ὀρχήστρας Κλήβελαντ, πρὸς τὴν ὁποίαν καὶ εἶναι ἀφιερωμένον. Ἔχει τὰ χαρακτηριστικὰ Γασκωνικοῦ μπουρλέσκ καὶ ἐξ...βαγκάντσας, εἶναι δονκιχωτική, ἂν προτιμᾶτε, μὲ αἰσθηματικὰ ἐντερλούντ καὶ ἀσυφώνικους στεναγμοὺς κατὰ τὸ σύστημα ποὺ παίζονται τὰ «blues».

"Ενας ὕμνος γιὰ τὸ Μεγάλο Μαέστρο

Τὸ κατωτέρω ἄρθρον ἐδημοσιεύθη εἰς τὴν «Ἀτλαντίδα» τῆς Νέας Ὑόρκης τὴν 29ην Ἰανουαρίου 1936:

Ὑπὸ τοὺς τίτλους: «Ἕλλην διευθύνει τὴν Συμφωνικὴν Ὀρχήστραν Βοστώνης» καὶ «Ὁ Δημήτριος Μητρόπουλος ἀποκαλύπτει ἐξαιρετικὸν μουσικὸν τάλαντον», ὁ ἀνεγνωρισμένος κύριος μουσικοκριτικὸς κ. Olin Downes ἐδημοσίευσε τὰ ἀκόλουθα διὰ τὴν ἐν Βοστώνῃ, τὸ ἀπόγευμα τῆς παρελθούσης Παρασκευῆς ἐμφάνισιν τῆς Boston Symphony Orchestra μὲ διευθυντὴν τὸν κ. Δημήτριον Μητρόπουλον:

ΒΑΣΙΛΙΣΣΑ, ΜΗΤΡΟΠΟΥΛΟΣ ΚΑΙ ΜΑΓΕΙΡΙΚΗ

ΟΣΟΙ παρηκολούθησαν τὴν πρωϊνὴ συναυλία τῆς Φιλαρμονικῆς Νέας Ὑόρκης τὴν περασμένη Κυριακή, θὰ γέλασαν ἀσφαλῶς μὲ τὶς τελευταῖες λέξεις τοῦ Μητρόπουλου ὁ ὁποῖος, γιὰ νὰ μὴν παίξῃ ἄλλο «μπὶς» ἐπεκαλέσθη τὴν βασιλικὴν πρόσκλησιν. «Κι' ὕστερα», προσέθεσε, «θὰ μοῦ ἔχουν καὶ καλὸ φαΐ». Τὸ πιὸ ἐνδιαφέρον σημεῖον τῆς ὑποθέσεως εἶναι ὅτι ὁ Μητρόπουλος δὲν ἔμεινε γοητευμένος τόσο ἀπὸ τὸ φαγητὸ — ἐξέχασα νὰ ρωτήσω τὸ menu—ὅσον ἀπὸ τὴν ἐνδιαφέρουσα κουβέντα καὶ τὶς βαθειὲς μουσικὲς γνώσεις τοῦ βασιλικοῦ ζεύγους. Βέβαια τὰ γοῦστα τους δὲν συμπίπτουν: Λάτρεις τῆς παλαιᾶς μουσικῆς οἱ Βασιλεῖς, τρελλαίνονται γιὰ Βιβάλντι, Μπὰχ καὶ Μότσαρτ. Ὑποστηρικτὴς τῶν μοντέρνων συνθέσεων ὁ Μητρόπουλος. Φαίνεται ὡστόσο ὅτι οἱ ἑρμηνεῖες τῶν ρωσσικῶν ἔργων κατέκτησαν ἀπολύτως τὴν Βασίλισσα Φρειδερίκη, ἡ ὁποία στὸ τέλος τῆς συναυλίας, ἠγείτο τῆς «κλάκας» μὲ ἀκατάβλητη ζωντάνια. Μήπως ἔχει ἀντίρρηση κομμιὰ ἐφημερίδα;

ΕΝ ΚΡΥΠΤΩ ΚΑΙ ΠΑΡΑΒΥΣΤΩ

Τὸ βρισίδι ποὺ ἔφαγε ὁ Μητρόπουλος ἀπὸ κάποια ἀπογευματινὴν ἐφημερίδα τῶν Ἀθηνῶν, προξένησε δυσαρέσκεια ἀκόμη καὶ στὸν στενώτατο κύκλο τῶν ἀναγνωστῶν της. Ὁ δὲ διευθυντὴς καὶ ἰδιοκτήτης αὐτῆς τρέφει τόσον ἄσπονδον μῖσος ἐναντίον τοῦ Ἕλληνος μαέστρου ὥστε καὶ εἰς τὴν φιλόμουσον σύζυγόν του δὲν ἐπέτρεψε νὰ παρακολουθήσῃ τὶς συναυλίες τῆς Φιλαρμονικῆς Νέας Ὑόρκης.

Ἔτσι ἡ οἰκογένεια ἀπέσχε ὁλοκληρωτικὰ ἀπὸ τὶς καλλιτεχνικὲς αὐτὲς ἐκδηλώσεις. Ὁλοκληρωτικά; Ὄχι δά!! Γιατὶ μαθαίνω —καὶ σᾶς τὸ λέω γιὰ νὰ γελάσετε καὶ σεῖς — ὅτι ὁλόκληρη ἡ οἰκογένεια παρακολούθησε τὶς συναυλίες ἀπὸ τὸ ραδιόφωνον... κεκλεισμένων τῶν θυρῶν! Δυστυχῶς, τίποτε δὲν μένει κρυφὸ στὸν κόσμο τοῦτο.

'Ο μαέστρος Δημήτρης Μητρόπουλος στὰς 'Αθήνας

ΕΝΤΥΠΩΠΕΙΣ ΑΠΟ ΤΗΝ ΑΦΙΞΙ, ΤΗΝ ΥΠΟΔΟΧΗ ΤΟΥ ΚΑΙ ΤΙΣ ΣΥΝΑΥΛΙΕΣ ΤΟΥ

Καμμιὰ φορὰ συμβαίνουν στὴ ζωή μας τὰ πιὸ ἀπίθανα πράγματα, καὶ γίνονται πραγματικότητες τὰ πιὸ τολμηρά μας ὄνειρα. Κάτι τέτοιο συνέβη καὶ μ' ἐμένα αὐτὲς τὶς τελευταῖες μέρες. "Ηταν στ' ἀλήθεια ἕνα ὄνειρο τὸ νὰ παρακολουθήσω μάλιστα ἀπὸ τόσο κοντά, αὐτὸν τὸν γίγαντα τῶν ἤχων, τὸν Δημήτρη Μητρόπουλο.

"Ενοιωσα κάποια ἀπογοήτευσι ὅταν στὸ ἀεροδρόμιο βρῆκα ὅλον ἐκεῖνον τὸν κόσμο πούνοιωθε σὰν κι' ἐμένα τὴν ξέφρενη ἀνυπομονησία νὰ καλωσορίσῃ τὸν μεγάλο μαέστρο. Μετὰ ἀπὸ δυόμισυ ὡρῶν καθυστέρησι τὸ ἀεροπλάνο προσγειώθηκε, ἡ πόρτα ἄνοιξε καὶ ἡ ἐπιβλητικὴ ἀσκητικὴ μορφὴ του παρουσιάστηκε στὴ σκάλα. "Ολος ὁ κόσμος ξέσπασε σὲ χειροκροτήματα καὶ φωνές. "Ενοιωσα ἕνα κόμπο στὸ λαιμό μου καὶ προσπαθοῦσα ὅσο μποροῦσα νὰ βρῶ στὸ πρόσωπό του τὴν συγκίνησι τοῦ γυρισμοῦ ὕστερα ἀπὸ 17 χρόνια. Κυττοῦσε γύρω του, κυττοῦσε τὸν οὐρανὸ μ' ἕνα περίεργο χαμόγελο σὰν νὰ μὴ πίστευε κι' αὐτὸς τὴν πραγματικότητα. "Εφυγε γρήγορα ἀπ' τὸ ἀεροδρόμιο χωρὶς νὰ μπορέσῃ κανεὶς νὰ τὸν πλησιάσῃ.

'Απὸ τότε ἄρχισα νὰ μετρῶ τὶς ὧρες ποὺ θὰ μ' ἔφερναν κοντὰ στὴ μεγάλη στιγμὴ νὰ τὸν δῶ νὰ διευθύνῃ. "Ημουν τριγυρισμένη ἀπὸ ὅλο ἐκεῖνο τὸ πλῆθος ποὺ γέμιζε ἀσφυχτικὰ τὴν αἴθουσα τοῦ «'Ορφέα». 'Η ὀρχήστρα ἦταν κιόλας στὴ θέσι της ὅταν ξαφνικὰ μιὰ θύελλα χειροκροτημάτων μ' ἔκανε νὰ πεταχτῶ ὄρθια. 'Ο Μητρόπουλος ἦταν πάνω στὸ πόντιουμ.

Σὲ λίγα δευτερόλεπτα ἡ αἴθουσα γέμισε ἀπὸ μουσική. Εἶχα ἀκούσει πολλὲς συναυλίες τῆς Φιλαρμονικῆς, ἀλλὰ δὲν τὸν εἶχα δῆ ποτὲ νὰ διευθύνῃ. Καρφωμένη στὸ κάθισμά μου ἔζησα δύο ἀλησμόνητες ὧρες. "Ως τότε νόμιζα ὅτι ἡ συναυλία εἶναι μιὰ ἀπόλαυσις ἀκουστική. Αὐτὴ τὴν φορὰ ἦταν κάτι διαφορετικό, ἔβλεπα καὶ ἄκουγα μιὰ δημιουργία. Οἱ κινήσεις του λιτὲς καὶ ἀπόλυτες, κυριαχοῦσαν πάνω στὴν ὀρχήστρα καὶ αἰχμαλώτιζαν. Εἶχα τὴν ἐντύπωσι ὅτι πάνω ἀπ' ὅλα ἐκείνη τὴν στιγμὴ ὑψωνόταν τὸ σχῆμα τοῦ σώματός του ποὺ σὰν κάθετη γραμμὴ πάνω στὸ πόντιουμ ἀνέβαινε καὶ κυριαρχοῦσε.

Φυσικὰ δὲν πρόκειται νὰ κάνω κριτικὴ καὶ περιγραφὴ τῆς ἐκτελέσεως, γιατὶ αὐτὸ θάταν τὸ λιγώτερο ἱεροσυλία. 'Η Φιλαρμονικὴ 'Ορχήστρα τῆς Νέας 'Υόρκης, εἶναι μία ἀπὸ τὶς δύο πρῶτες συμφωνικὲς ὀρχῆστρες τοῦ κόσμου καὶ οἱ μουσικοὶ ποὺ τὴν ἀπαρτίζουν εἶναι σχεδὸν ὅλοι ἀναγνωρισμένοι σολίστ, ποὺ ἔχουν ἐρμηνεύσει ἔργα κάτω ἀπὸ τὴν μπαγκέτα τῶν διασημοτέρων μαέστρων τῆς ἐποχῆς μας.

Οἱ δυὸ ὧρες πέρασαν γρήγορα καὶ εἶδα τὸν μαέστρο νὰ ὑποκλίνεται μπροστὰ σ' ἕνα ἀκροατήριο ποὺ κυριολεκτικὰ παραληροῦσε. "Εφυγα ἀπ' τὸν «'Ορφέα» προσπαθώντας νὰ φυλάξω μέσα μου ὅσο μποροῦσα περισσότερο τὴν ἔκστασι ποὺ μοῦ προεκάλεσαν οἱ ἦχοι καὶ ἡ ἀξέχαστη μορφή του.

'Η ἑπόμενη φορὰ ποὺ εἶδα τὸν Μητρόπουλο ἦταν ἴσως πιὸ συγκινητικὴ ἀπ' ὅλες. Εἶχα τὴν τύχη νὰ παρευρεθῶ σὲ μιὰ πραγματικὰ συγκινητικὴ τελετὴ ποὺ ὠργάνωσε τὸ 'Ωδεῖο 'Αθηνῶν γιὰ τὸν μαθητή του τὸν Δημήτρη Μητρόπουλο. Καθόμουν σὲ μιὰ γωνιὰ τῆς αἰθούσης ἐξετάσεων τοῦ 'Ωδείου καὶ τὸν ἔβλεπα νὰ ἀκούῃ μὲ τὸ κεφάλι του σκυφτὸ τοὺς λόγους ποὺ τοῦ ἀπηύθυναν. Σὲ λίγο σηκώθηκε καὶ ἀκουμπώντας σὲ μιὰ καρέκλα ἄρχισε νὰ μιλάῃ. Δὲν εἶχαν καμιὰ σχέσι αὐτὰ ποὺ ἔλεγε μὲ εὐχαριστήριο λόγο. Εἶχα τὴν ἐντύπωσι ὅτι παρακολουθοῦσα ἀπὸ μιὰ κλειδαρότρυπα ἕναν ἄνθρωπο ποὺ μονολογοῦσε κλεισμένος στὸ δωμάτιό του. «Θυμᾶμαι τὸν ἑαυτό μου — εἶπε — ἐδῶ μέσα ὅταν μικρὸς γεμᾶτος ἐνθουσιασμὸ, ἔπαιζα καὶ μελετοῦσα γιὰ ὧρες στὸ πιάνο...». "Ετσι ἄρχισε καὶ συνέχισε ὁ μεγάλος μας καλλιτέχνης, προσπαθώντας νὰ μᾶς πείσῃ ὅτι χάρις στὴν τύχη ποὺ τὸν βοήθησε καὶ τὸν ἔσπρωξε, ἀνέβηκε τόσο ψηλά. Τέλος ἐξομολογήθηκε ὅτι δὲν θυμόταν ποτὲ στὴ ζωή του νὰ εἶχε τὴν συγκίνησι ποὖνοιωσε γυρνώντας στὴν πατρίδα του καὶ βλέποντας ὅτι ὅλοι τὸν θεωροῦμε σὰν κάτι δικό μας, σὰν αἷμα μας.

'Ο μαέστρος Δημ. Μητρόπουλος ἐνῶ χαιρετᾶ τὸ κοινόν, στὴ δεύτερη συναυλία τῆς Φιλαρμονικῆς 'Ορχήστρας τῆς Νέας 'Υόρκης

'Εκείνη τὴν ὥρα ποῦλεγε ὅλα αὐτὰ δὲν ἦταν ὁ μεγάλος μαέστρος, ἀλλὰ ἕνας ἄνθρωπος πνιγμένος ἀπὸ ἀναμνήσεις τῶν νεανικῶν του χρόνων, ποὺ κατὰ κάποιο τρόπο ζητοῦσε νὰ δικαιολογήσῃ στοὺς φίλους καὶ συναδέλφους του τὴν καταπληκτική του σταδιοδρομία.

Τὸν ξαναεῖδα διευθύνοντας ἄλλες δύο φορές, νοιώθοντας πάντα μιὰν ἀνείπωτη εὐτυχία καὶ μιὰν ἀνάτασι. "Εφυγε τὴν Δευτέρα τὸ πρωΐ, καὶ τώρα ποὺ εἶδα πὼς τὰ ὄνειρα γίνονται πραγματικότης, παρακαλῶ τὸν Θεὸ νὰ μοῦ ξαναδώσῃ ἄλλη μιὰ φορὰ τὴν εὐτυχία νὰ τὸν δῶ καὶ νὰ τὸν ἀκούσω.

Η «ΒΡΑΔΥΝΗ»

ΣΤΟ ΔΡΟΜΟ ΤΗΣ ΖΩΗΣ

ΤΥΧΗ

— Εἶδες τὶ εἶπε ὁ Μητρόπουλος στὴ δεξίωσι τοῦ 'Ωδείου 'Αθηνῶν; ρώτησε κάποιος τὴν κυρία ποὺ ὑποστηρίζει παντοτε πὼς ἀρκεῖ ἕνα μεγάλο ταλέντο καὶ μιὰ δυνατὴ θέλησι γιὰ ν' ἀνέβῃ κανεὶς ψηλά.

Καὶ τῆς ἐπανέλαβε τὰ λόγια τοῦ μεγάλου ἀρχιμουσικοῦ:

Χωρὶς νὰ σαστίσῃ καθόλου, ἡ κυρία εἶπε:

— 'Ο Μητρόπουλος ἔχει τὴν «μετριοφροσύνη ποὺ χαρακτηρίζει ὅλους τοὺς πραγματικὰ μεγάλους, ἀλλὰ καὶ τὸ λεπτότατο ἐκεῖνο τάκτ ποὺ δὲν λείπει ἀπὸ καμμιὰ εὐγενικὴ ψυχή. Θέλησε ν' ἀνεβάσῃ τοὺς συναδέλφους του, ἀποδίδοντας ἕνα μεγάλο μέρος τῆς ἐπιτυχίας του στὴν τύχη. Θὰ μοῦ ἐπιτρέψετε νὰ θεωρῶ σὰν ἕνα καλοειπωμένο κομπλιμέντο αὐτὴ τὴ φράσι του, ἂς ποῦμε: «"Ολοι ἐδῶ εἴμαστε θαυμάσιοι κι' ἔκλεκτοί σπόροι. "Αλλοι πέσανε σὲ εὔφορο καὶ γόνιμο ἔδαφος, ἄλλοι σὲ ξερό, ἄγονο καὶ πετρῶδες».

Κι' ἡ συζήτησι εἶχε ἀνάψει. Κάποιος εἶπε παρεμβαίνοντας:

— Χωρὶς ν' ἀμφισβητῶ καθόλου τὴν εὐγένεια τῆς ψυχῆς καὶ τὴ μετριοφροσύνη του, ἀρνοῦμαι νὰ παραδεχθῶ πὼς ὁ Μητρόπουλος δὲν πιστεύει πραγματικὰ στὸ βάθος ὅτι ἐκτὸς ἀπὸ τὴ μεγαλοφυΐα καὶ τὴ σκληρὴ κι' ἐπίμονη δουλειά, ἔχει παίξει κι' ἡ τύχη τὸ ρόλο της στὴν παγκόσμια ἀναγνώρισί του. 'Ολοφάνερη εἶναι ἡ εἰλικρίνεια σ' αὐτὲς τὶς φράσεις: «Εἶχα μιὰ καταπληκτικὴ τύχη», καὶ «εὐχαριστῶ ὅλους ἐκείνους ποὺ ἐστάθηκαν στήριγμα γιὰ νὰ γίνω ἐγώ, φημισμένος». Γιατὶ μὴ μοῦ πῆτε πὼς δὲν χρειάζεται τύχη γιὰ νὰ βρῇ ὑποστήριξι καὶ ἡ πιὸ ἐξαιρετικὴ ἰδιοφυΐα. 'Η ἱστορία τῆς μουσικῆς εἶναι γεμάτη ἀποδείξεις γι' αὐτό. Φτάνει νὰ σᾶς θυμίσω πὼς ὁ Σεζὰρ Φρὰνκ πούλησε σ' ἕνα ἐκδότη τὴν περίφημη σονάτα του γιὰ βιολὶ καὶ πιάνο, ἀντὶ εἰκοσιπέντε φράγκων! Αὐτὸ δὲν θὰ πῇ πὼς γύρω του δὲν ὑπῆρχαν ἄνθρωποι ἱκανοὶ ν' ἀντιληφθοῦν τὴν μεγάλη του ἀξία καὶ ταὐτόχρονα πρόθυμοι νὰ τὸν βοηθήσουν;

—Τέτοιες θεωρίες μποροῦν ν' ἀφανίσουν ἕνα ταλέντο, τὸ ξέρετε; φώναξε θυμωμένη ἡ κυρία ποὺ ἔμενε ἀμετάπειστη. Γιατὶ ὅταν κανεὶς πιστεύῃ στὴν τύχη, δὲν ἀτσαλώνει τὴν θέλησί του γιὰ νὰ ὑπερνικήσῃ τὶς δυσκολίες, ποὺ φαίνονται ἀνυπέρβλητες, πολλὲς φορές.

— Δὲν μοῦ λέτε, βρίσκετε πὼς εἶναι μιὰ ἀνυπέρβλητη δυσκολία τὸ νὰ εἶσαι σχεδὸν σίγουρος πὼς θὰ σκοτώσῃς τὸν πατέρα σου ἂν ἀκολουθήσῃς τὸ δρόμο ποὺ σοῦ ὑπαγορεύει ἡ κλίσι σου; ρώτησε ἀναπάντεχα κάποιος μηχανικός.

Καὶ χωρὶς νὰ περιμένῃ ἀπάντησι ἐξήγησε:

— Δίχως αὐτὸ τὸ φόβο πιστεύω πὼς θὰ εἶχα γίνει μεγάλος πιανίστας.

— "Αλλος στὴ θέσι σας μπορεῖ νὰ μὴ φοβόταν...

— "Ισως. Μὰ ἀκριβῶς γιατὶ εἶχα αὐτὴ τὴν ψυχοσύνθεσι, θὰ μποροῦσε ὁ πατέρας μου νὰ μὴν ἦταν τόσο ἀλύγιστος στὴν ἀντίστασί του. "Αν τὸ ἤθελε ἡ τύχη...

— 'Υπάρχουν βέβαια εὐνοϊκὲς ἢ δυσμενεῖς συμπτώσεις, παραδέχτηκε ἐπὶ τέλους ἡ κυρία, ποὺ μποροῦν νὰ ἐπηρεάσουν μιὰ σταδιοδρομία. Πάντως ἐκεῖνος ποὺ ἔχει τάξει ἕνα σκοπὸ στὴ ζωή του δὲν πρέπει νὰ πολυσυλλογίζεται τὴν τύχη καὶ νὰ προχωρῇ σὰν νὰ πρόκειται νὰ τὴν δημιουργήσῃ μόνος του.

Καὶ σ' αὐτὸ δὲν μπόρεσε νὰ διαφωνήσῃ κανείς.

ΕΙΔΗΣΕΙΣ

'Απὸ τὶς πιὸ ἀξιομνημόνευτες ὧρες ποὺ ἔζησε ὁ Δημήτρης Μητρόπουλος στὴν 'Αθήνα ἦταν ἡ δεξίωση ποὺ τοῦ ἔγινε στὸ 'Ωδεῖον 'Αθηνῶν. Βρέθηκε στὸ ἴδρυμα ὅπου ἔκαμε τὶς πρῶτες του προσπάθειες, ἀνάμεσα στοὺς ἀνθρώπους ποὺ τοῦ παραστάθηκαν στὸ ξεκίνημά του. Κι' ἀληθινὰ συγκινητικὴ ἦταν ἡ προσφώνηση τοῦ Προέδρου τοῦ Διοικητικοῦ Συμβουλίου τοῦ 'Ωδείου κ. Α. Κυριακίδη. 'Αξίζει νὰ δώσουμε ἕνα μέρος τουλάχιστον ἀπ' αὐτὴ τὴν προσφώνηση:

"Οταν φθάσῃ κανεὶς σὲ μιὰ κορυφή, ὅπως ἐσεῖς, ἕνα ἀπὸ τὰ πειὸ ζωηρὰ συναισθήματα, ποὺ μπορεῖ νὰ δοκιμάσῃ, εἶναι νὰ γυρίσῃ νὰ ἰδῇ ἀπὸ ποῦ ἔχει ξεκινήσει, νὰ κυττάξῃ τὸν δρόμο ποὺ ἔχει διανύσει. Καὶ γιὰ σᾶς αὐτὸ τὸ γύρισμα πρὸς τὰ πίσω παίρνει μιὰ ξεχωριστὴ σημασία καὶ μιὰ ἰδιαίτερη αἰσθητική.

Γυρίζοντας νὰ ἰδῆτε ἀπὸ ποῦ ξεκινήσατε, βλέπετε τὴν 'Αθήνα τὴν ἀρχαία καὶ τὴν νέα, τὴν αἰώνια 'Αθήνα νὰ προβάλλεται ἀπάνω στὶς καμπύλες τοῦ 'Υμηττοῦ, ποὺ νομίζει κανεὶς πὼς ἐπλάγιασαν ἀπάνω τους Θεοί, γιὰ νὰ ἔχουν τέτοια ἁρμονία. Βλέπετε τὸ 'Αττικὸ πεῦκο μὲ τὶς ἀμέτρητες ἀποχρώσεις καὶ σκιὲς στὸν 'Αττικὸ ἥλιο. Βλέπετε τὴ θάλασσα τοῦ Σαρωνικοῦ νὰ ἔρχεται νὰ χαϊδεύῃ τὴν παραλία τοῦ Παλαιοῦ Φαλήρου ὅπου περάσατε τὰ παιδικά σας χρόνια. Καὶ εἶμαι βέβαιος πὼς ὅταν ἐμπήκατε ἀπὸ τὴν ξεθωριασμένη αὐτὴ πορτίτσα στὴν ταπεινή, ἀλλὰ δοξασμένη μας Αἴθουσα, θὰ αἰσθανθήκατε περισσότερη συγκίνηση ἀπὸ ὅση ἔχετε δοκιμάσει στὸ Κάρνεγκυ Χὸλλ καὶ τὶς τελειότερες αἴθουσες συναυλιῶν, ὅπου τὸ διεθνὲς κοινὸν σᾶς ἀποθεώνει. Γιατὶ θὰ ἔλεγα, ὅτι ἀπ' αὐτὴν τὴν πορτίτσα περάσατε, γιὰ νὰ πάρετε τὸν δρόμο ποῦ ὁδηγεῖ στὴν ἀθανασία τοῦ καλλιτέχνη.

'Εδῶ, ἐπάνω σ' αὐτὴ τὴ σκηνή, ποὺ πήρατε τὸ δίπλωμα καὶ τὸ χρυσοῦν μετάλλιον, βλέπετε σήμερα νὰ ξαναζωντανεύουν οἱ ἀναμνήσεις σας, βλέπετε μὲ χαρὰ παληοὺς συμμαθητὰς καὶ συναδέλφους νὰ σᾶς περιβάλλουν μὲ ζωγραφισμένη στὸ πρόσωπο τὴν ἀγάπη καὶ συγκίνηση. 'Αλλὰ μὲ πόνο θὰ βλέπετε νὰ ἔχουν φύγει καὶ νὰ λείπουν γιὰ πάντα παληοὶ καλοὶ σας φίλοι. Κι' αὐτοὶ ὅμως εἶναι ἐδῶ σήμερα παρόντες γιὰ νὰ σᾶς χαιρετήσουν. Θὰ τοὺς βρῆτε στὰ μάτια τῶν Κυριῶν, ποὺ ἦταν συντρόφισσες τῆς ζωῆς των. Τὰ δάκρυα τῆς λύπης των σμίγουν σήμερα μὲ τὰ δάκρυα τῆς συγκινήσεως, ποὺ βλέπουν τὸν μεγάλο φίλο ἐκείνων ποὺ ἔχουν χάσει. Καὶ σ' αὐτὸ ἐδῶ τὸ περιβάλλον θὰ θυμηθῆτε ὅτι πρὶν γίνετε εἴκοσι χρονῶν, εἴχατε γράψει τὸ συμφωνικὸ ποίημα «Τάφος» ποὺ παίχθηκε σὲ συναυλία συνδρομητῶν. Καὶ τώρα ποὺ διευθύνετε τὴν Φιλαρμονικὴ 'Ορχήστρα τῆς Νέας 'Υόρκης, θὰ ἔλθῃ καὶ αὐτὸ στὸ νοῦ σας. Πῶς, στὰ 1917 — μαθητὴς ἀκόμα στὸ 'Ωδεῖο μας — διευθύνατε μιὰ μαθητικὴ συναυλία μὲ ὅλο ἀπὸ δικά σας ἔργα.

"Οταν ἤσαστε ἀκόμα νεώτατος, μόλις 24 ἐτῶν, ἐγράψατε καὶ ὁλόκληρη "Οπερα, τὴν «Βεατρίκη». Κι' ὅμως τελικὰ δὲν ἐγίνατε συνθέτης. 'Επροτιμήσατε νὰ εἶστε ὁ διευθυντὴς ὀρχήστρας, ποὺ δίνει ὅλο τὸ νόημα τῶν ἔργων ποὺ ἀναλαμβάνει νὰ διευθύνῃ. Κι' ἔτσι κρέμονται ἀπὸ τὴν μπαγκέτα σας ὅλα τὰ δημιουργήματα τῶν κλασσικῶν καὶ νεωτέρων μεγάλων μουσικῶν.

Καθὼς μεταφέρομαι τώρα στὰ μαθητικὰ ἐκεῖνα χρόνια νομίζω πὼς σᾶς βλέπω αὐτὴν τὴν στιγμὴ μπροστά μου, κάπως νεώτερο μόνο — μαθητὴ μέσα στὴν ὀρχήστρα, ποὺ διηύθυνε ὁ Marsick. Καὶ ποιὸς — ἂς ποῦμε τοὐλάχιστον ἀπὸ τοὺς γεροντοτέρους — δὲν σᾶς θυμᾶται πίσω στὴν σκηνὴ ὄρθιο μὲ τὰ τύμπανα μπροστά σας, νὰ δίνετε τὴν ἐντύπωση ἀπὸ τότε πὼς κυριαρχεῖτε σ' ὅλη τὴν ὀρχήστρα;

Τὰ μάτια καὶ τὸ μετωπό σας ἄστραφταν καὶ φεγγοβολοῦσαν περισσότερο ἀπὸ τὴν λάμψη τῶν χαλκίνων, ποὺ ἦταν λίγο παρὰ κάτω. Καὶ μὲ τὰ τυμπανά σας ἐκεῖνα, ἀνοίγατε τὴν θριαμβευτικὴ νεκρικὴ πομ-

ΑΝΤΙΡΡΗΣΕΙΣ ΓΙΑ ΩΡΙΣΜΕΝΕΣ ΕΚΤΕΛΕΣΕΙΣ ΤΟΥ ΜΗΤΡΟΠΟΥΛΟΥ

'Ο συνεργάτης τῶν «Νέων» στὸ Λονδῖνο κ. Σπ. Μπαμπούρης μᾶς γράφει τὰ ἑξῆς:

'Ο κριτικὸς τῆς «Νταίηλυ 'Εξπρές», γράφει: «'Η συναυλία αὐτὴ μπορεῖ νὰ θεωρηθῇ ὡς ἐπιτυχία μᾶλλον, παρὰ θρίαμβος. 'Ο Μητρόπουλος εἶναι ἕνας ἀτομικιστὴς ποὺ ἑρμηνεύει τὴ μουσικὴ ὅπως θέλει ἐκεῖνος. "Η σᾶς ἀρέσει ἢ ὄχι». Μὲ τοὺς δύο αὐτοὺς κριτικοὺς διεφώνησε ὁ μουσικοκριτικὸς τῶν «Τάϊμς» ὁ ὁποῖος εἶναι ὁ δυσκολώτερος τοῦ Λονδίνου καὶ ὁ ὁποῖος ἔμεινε ἱκανοποιημένος ἀπὸ τὶς ἐκτελέσεις, ὅπως ἔμεινε καὶ τὸ πολυπληθὲς κοινὸ ποὺ εἶχε γεμίσει ἀσφυκτικὰ τὸ «Φέστιβαλ χώλ». 'Αλλὰ ἂν ἡ πρώτη συναυλία εἶχε μᾶλλον ἀβέβαιη ἐπιτυχία, ἡ δεύτερη ἦταν ἀληθινὸς θρίαμβος. 'Ο ἴδιος ὁ μουσικοκριτικὸς τῆς «'Εξπρές», τιτλοφορεῖ τὸ σημείωμά του «Οἱ δυὸ Δημήτρηδες. Μία ἀξέχαστη βραδυά», ἀναφερόμενος στὸ Δημήτρη Μητρόπουλο ποὺ παρουσίασε τὴν 10η συμφωνία τοῦ Δημήτρη Σοστάκοβιτς. Καὶ γράφει: «Καμμιὰ βρεττανικὴ ὀρχήστρα δὲν θὰ μποροῦσε νὰ ἐκτελέσῃ τὴν συμφωνία αὐτὴ μὲ τόσο κολοσσιαία ἐντύπωσι. Οἱ ζητωκραυγὲς τῶν ἀκροατῶν θὰ ἐξακολουθοῦν νὰ ἠχοῦν στὰ αὐτιὰ τοῦ διευθυντοῦ καὶ τῆς ὀρχήστρας του, ἐνῶ ἐπιστρέφουν στὴν Νέα 'Υόρκη. 'Ο Μητρόπουλος εἶναι ἕνας ἔνθερμος θιασώτης τῆς μοντέρνας μουσικῆς καὶ κατενόησε βαθειὰ τὸ ἔργο. Μᾶς ἔδωσε ἕνα Σοστάκοβιτς μὲ καρδιὰ καὶ μὲ μυαλό. "Ενας ἀληθινὰ δημιουργικὸς καλλιτέχνης». 'Ο κριτικὸς τῆς «Νταίηλυ Τέλεγκραφ» ἔγραφε: «'Η τεράστια δομὴ τοῦ ἔργου αὐτοῦ καὶ οἱ ἔντονες ἐκφράσεις του, ἔχουν μεγάλες ἀπαιτήσεις ἀπὸ τοὺς ἐκτελεστές. 'Αλλὰ ἡ συμφωνικὴ αὐτὴ ὀρχήστρα ὑπὸ τὸν Μητρόπουλο, γνωρίζει τὸ ἔργο τοῦ Σοστάκοβιτς περισσότερο ἀπὸ οἱοδήποτε ἄλλο συγκρότημα ἔξω ἀπὸ τὴ Ρωσσία καὶ ὁ τρόπος μὲ τὸν ὁποῖο ἀπέδωσαν τὴν 10η συμφωνία ἦταν τεράστια πειστικός». Τέλος, ὁ κριτικὸς τῶν «Τάϊμς» ἔγραφε: «'Ο Μητρόπουλος καὶ ἡ ὀρχήστρα του μᾶς ἔδωσαν μιὰ ἐκτέλεσι μεγάλης δυνάμεως καὶ ἀμείωτης εὐγλωττίας. "Ηταν πραγματικὰ ἡ μουσικὴ ποὺ περιμέναμε νὰ ἀκούσουμε ἀπὸ μιὰ τέτοια ὀρχήστρα κι' ἕνα τόσο φημισμένο μαέστρο».

WORLD OF MUSIC: PHI

Its European Tour Was Highlighted by Three Concerts in Athens

THE New York Philharmonic-Symphony Orchestra, just back from its European tour, can look back on a highly successful trip abroad. The orchestra was warmly received wherever it played, and, a Philharmonic spokesman said, there was "tremendous enthusiasm" for its musical director, Dimitri Mitropoulos.

Swiss audiences found the sheer sound of the Philharmonic almost overpowering. Concert halls in that country are relatively small, seating 1,500 or less—about half the capacity of Carnegie Hall—and Swiss orchestras follow the practice of the French in their instrumentation.

On the other hand, the Philharmonic's "French horns" are built on the large-scale German pattern and its woodwinds are of similar large caliber. The tonal power generated by these instruments was, apparently, a revelation to Swiss audiences.

In Vienna, the second oldest European orchestra played host to the oldest American orchestra. (The Vienna Philharmonic and New York Philharmonic both were founded in 1842). After the concert, the Viennese musicians staged a gala party in honor of the Americans.

Excitement reached its peak in Athens, where a third concert had to be scheduled in addition to the two originally planned. The King and Queen of Greece were on hand for the concerts, at the conclusion of which a plaque and an antique amphora of the kind awarded as trophies by the ancient Greeks were presented to Mr. Mitropoulos. Every member of the orchestra received a copy of a medal struck off to commemorate the group's visit.

Συμφωνικὲς συναυλίες τῆς Κρατικῆς Ὀρχήστρας στὸ Φεστιβὰλ Ἀθηνῶν.— Οἱ συναυλίες τῆς Φιλαρμονικῆς τῆς Ν. Ὑόρκης μὲ τὸν Δημήτρη Μητρόπουλο.

Πέντε συμφωνικὲς συναυλίες τῆς Κρατικῆς Ὀρχήστρας πλαισίωναν τὶς μελοδραματικὲς παραστάσεις τοῦ Φεστιβὰλ Ἀθηνῶν. Τὶς διεύθυναν οἱ τρεῖς δικοί μας ἀρχιμουσικοί, Οἰκονομίδης, Βαβαγιάννης καὶ Παρίδης καὶ δυὸ ξένοι, ὁ Ἰταλὸς Φράνκο Καπουάνα καὶ ὁ Ρουμάνος Ἰονὲλ Περλέα. Ἡ σύγκριση πολὺ ἱκανοποιητικὴ γιὰ τοὺς δικούς μας, ποὺ φάνηκαν ἰσάξιοι μὲ ξένους μαέστρους διεθνικὰ ἀναγνωρισμένους καὶ μὲ μεγάλη πεῖρα. Οἱ μουσικοὶ τῆς ὀρχήστρας ἐργάστηκαν ἐντατικὰ κι ἀπέδειξαν ἄλλη μιὰ φορὰ πὼς τὸ ἑλληνικὸ φιλότιμο κατορθώνει νὰ ὑπερνικήσει κάθε δυσκολία, ἀκόμα καὶ μὲ τὰ ἀτελῆ μέσα ποὺ διαθέτει. Κι ὅταν συμβαίνει νὰ ἐκτελοῦν ἔργα ποὺ τὰ ἔχουν παίξει πολλὲς φορὲς τὸ πρᾶγμα εἶναι εὐκολώτερο, γιατὶ δὲν ἔχουν παρὰ νὰ προσαρμοστοῦν στὶς ἀντιλήψεις τοῦ κάθε μαέστρου των. Ὅταν ὅμως πρόκειται γιὰ ἔργα μοντέρνα, ποὺ τὰ πρωτοπαίζουν, δείχνουν ἐξαιρετικὴ ἱκανότητα νὰ τὰ ἀφομοιώνουν. Γι' αὐτὸ μποροῦμε νὰ ποῦμε πὼς σὲ γενικὲς γραμμὲς οἱ συμφωνικὲς συναυλίες τοῦ Φεστιβὰλ ἦταν ἀπὸ τὶς καλύτερες ποὺ παρουσίασε φέτος ἡ Κρατικὴ Ὀρχήστρα. Φυσικὰ καθένας μπορεῖ νὰ παρατηρήσει μερικὲς ἐλλείψεις· σὲ λεπτομέρειες, εἴτε γιατὶ ὑπάρχουν ἀληθινὰ ἐλλείψεις, εἴτε γιατὶ δὲν ἀρέσει στὸν καθένα ὁ τρόπος τῆς ἀπόδοσης. Αὐτὲς ὅμως εἶναι λεπτομέρειες, ποὺ πολὺ λίγο ζημιώνουν τὸ σύνολο.

Ὅσο γιὰ τοὺς ἀρχιμουσικούς, δικούς μας καὶ ξένους, κάθε καλλιτέχνης, εἴτε σολίστας, εἴτε μαέστρος, θὰ ἀποδίνει καλύτερα ἔργα ποὺ ταιριάζουν στὴν ἰδιοσυγκρασία του, ἄλλος τὰ κλασικά, ἄλλος τὰ ρομαντικά, ἄλλος τὰ μονλη ἡ Ἑλλάδα χόρευε μέσα στὶς ἐξαίσιες ἐνορχηστρώσεις τοῦ ἐμπνευσμένου μουσουργοῦ, μὲ τὸ διονυσιακὸ μεθύσι τοῦ ἐμπνευσμένου μαέστρου. Ὑποκλιθεῖτε οἱ φιλισταῖοι τῆς μουσικῆς. Ἐδῶ βρισκόμαστε μπροστὰ σένα μοναδικὸ μουσικὸ φαινόμενο καὶ μποροῦμε νὰ μιλᾶμε· γιὰ παράδοση καὶ κανόνες καὶ Ἀκαδημαϊσμούς;Δεχτεῖτε μ' εὐγνωμοσύνη ὅ,τι μᾶς δίνει ὁ μεγάλος μας Μαέστρος καὶ πιστέψτε πὼς αὐτὸ ποὺ μᾶς δίνει εἶναι τὸ σωστό. Πιστέψετε, ἀλλὰ μὴν τὸν ἀντιγράφετε σεῖς οἱ ἄλλοι ἀρχιμουσικοί Πιστέψετε, ἀλλὰ προσπαθήσετε νὰ βρῆτε ἐσεῖς τὸν ἑαυτό σας, δουλεύοντας ἀκούραστα ὅπως βρῆκε τὸν ἑαυτό του κι ὁ Μητρόπουλος δουλεύοντας ἀκούραστα γιὰ χρόνια. Last but not least, was the final Philharmonic concert, Mitropoulos conducting, The Overture to Der Freischutz of von Weber, Mencelssohn's Fifth Symphony, four Greek dances by Skalkottas, with fascinating rhythms—was given a marvelous reading. The first had a curious marked rhythm (something like the Kola), the second was sensuous, the third a lovely melody and the fourth a wild gypsy dance . . . which might have come from any program. The last half of the program was devoted to the Brahms Second Symphony in D.

CONDUCTOR MITROPOULOS IN ATHENS
After the rains, an Olympian serenity.

Local Boy

Athens awaited its moment of musical glory. Conductor Dimitri Mitropoulos was returning to his native Greece for the first time in 17 years, bringing with him the 104 members of his touring New York Philharmonic-Symphony Orchestra. Thousands, many equipped with food and folding chairs, camped all night in front of the box office, and scalpers set the price of seats at $30. When Mitropoulos arrived four hours late at Athens' airport, after a bumpy flight from Naples, hundreds of admirers greeted him with cries of "Yassou, yassou—Hello, hello," and thrust bunches of tuberoses and laurel into his arms. But the maestro was in no mood for adulation. "I was sick as a dog," he blurted into a microphone, "and I still feel ill. I'm very happy to be back. Now please let me pass."

In Athens, lanky, egg-bald Conductor Mitropoulos (some members of the Philharmonic affectionately speak of him as "E.G."—for egghead) visited the open-air Herodes Atticus Theater, told friends he was praying for rain so that he could play in an indoor theater and would not have to compete with the splendor of the floodlit Acropolis and Parthenon. He had his wish. A downpour washed the first concert indoors—not before King and Cabinet Ministers were consulted on the crisis. The switch came so late that Chief Baggage Master Vincent Jacoby tried to shoulder the orchestra's harp into a bus in order to get it to the theater in time, was thrown out by the bus conductor. (He finally made it by hitching a ride on a truck.) King Paul, Queen Frederika and their two oldest children applauded the maestro's interpretation of Schumann's dramatic Second Symphony, and Mitropoulos joined them for a chat at the theater bar, where Princess Sophie served him a glass of water (a Mitropoulos must at intermission). When the royal couple extended him an invitation for lunch for the following day, the maestro casually replied: "I'll try and be there if I'm not too exhausted."

Back on the podium, he was as loose-jointed as a rag doll as he conducted Shostakovich's Tenth Symphony. The frenzied applause, foot-stamping, cries of "bravo," and rhythmic chants of Mi-tropou-los continued for a full 20 minutes. Next day, after an unscheduled concert for overflow crowds of the night before, Mitropoulos found that he was not too exhausted for the royal meal, after all. ("The King's expecting me, and I hear he has a good lunch waiting.")

By the close of his final concert that night (including Brahms's Second and Skalkottas' Greek Dances), Maestro Mitropoulos was getting used to Athens' adulation. Said he: "I'm beginning to feel like Frank Sinatra." But the Greeks had some other words for it. Mitropoulos, one critic wrote, conducted "with an Olympian serenity that was both Apollonian and Dionysian."

New York Philharmonic Musical Ambassador

The New York Philharmonic Orchestra achieved a glittering triumph in Rome—a city whose citizens take music quite seriously. The account in the New York Times tells of prolonged and enthusiastic applause which encouraged conductor Dimitri Metropoulos to permit two encores.

What is particularly interesting about the story from Rome is that it mentions the pleased response from young Italians sitting in inexpensive seats. These young people are the sort who will remember the concert in years to come and will not be likely to agree when critics of America call us a people without culture.

Tours such as the one made by the New York Philharmonic can do a great deal toward building up the prestige of this country abroad. The orchestra is in effect an aggregation of diplomats carrying music cases instead of briefcases. Their message of understanding may be more effective in reaching the people of other lands than those carried by the diplomats.

τέρνα. Τοὺς δικούς μας μαέστρους τοὺς ξέρουμε πιὰ καλά. Ὅσο γιὰ τοὺς δυὸ ξένους, ὁ μὲν Φράνκο Καπουάνα φάνηκε πὼς τὸ μουσικό του κλίμα εἶναι πιὸ πολὺ τὸ μελόδραμα. Στοὺς «Μονολόγους τῆς Μήδειας» μὲ τὴν ὑπέροχη μετζοσοπράνο τῆς Μετροπόλιταν Ὄπερας τῆς Νέας Ὑόρκης Μπλὰνς Τῆμπομ, καθὼς καὶ στὸν «Οἰδίποδα Τύραννο» τοῦ Στραβίνσκυ ἦταν ἀληθινὰ περίφημος. Ὡς τόσο καὶ στὴ Β' συναυλία τῆς Κρατικῆς Ὀρχήστρας ἐνθουσίασε τὸ ἀκροατήριο μὲ τὴ μουσικότατη ἀπόδοσή του σὲ ἀποσπάσματα ἀπὸ ἔργα τοῦ Βάγνερ.

Ὁ μαέστρος Ἰονὲλ Περλέα ἀπέδωσε στὴν Γ' συμφωνικὴ συναυλία τὴν 1η συμφωνία τοῦ Μπράμς, τὰ «Νυκτερινὰ» τοῦ Ντεμπυσσὺ καὶ τὸ συμφωνικὸ ποίημα τοῦ Ρίχαρδ Στράους «Τὶλ Ὀϋλενσπίγκελ». Ἔδειξε ἐξαιρετικὴ τεχνικὴ στὴν ἀπόδοση τῶν ἀποχρώσεων τοῦ ἤχου, πρὸ πάντων στὰ ἐξαίσια «Νυκτερινά», καὶ στὸ «Τὶλ Ὀϋλενσπίγκελ», ὅπου ἀνέδειξε τὶς ἠχητικὲς ἀντιθέσεις καὶ τὸ χιουμοριστικὸ πνεῦμα τοῦ συμφωνικοῦ ποιήματος τοῦ Ρ. Στράους.

Εἴχαμε ἀκόμα τὴν τύχη ν' ἀκούσουμε καὶ νὰ θαυμάσουμε στὶς συμφωνικὲς συναυλίες δυὸ μεγάλες καλλιτέχνιδες τοῦ τραγουδιοῦ, στὴν Α' συναυλία τὴν Ἑλένη Νικολαΐδου σὲ ἄριες τοῦ Γκλούκ, τοῦ Χάϋδν καὶ τοῦ Μότσαρτ, μὲ διεύθυνση τοῦ Θεόδ. Βαβαγιάννη, καθὼς καὶ τὴ διάσημη σοπράνο τῆς Μετροπόλιταν τῆς Ν. Ὑόρκης Ἔλεηνορ Στῆμπερ στὴν Δ' συναυλία μὲ διεύθυνση τοῦ Ἀνδρέα Παρίδη, ὅπου τὴν ἀποθέωσε κυριολεκτικὰ τὸ κοινὸ στὴν ἄρια τῆς Κοντέσας ἀπὸ τοὺς «Γάμους τοῦ Φίγκαρο» τοῦ Μότσαρτ καὶ πρὸ πάντων στὴν περίφημη ἄρια τοῦ Μπετόβεν «Ah! perfido», ὅπου φάνηκε ὅλη ἡ βαθιά της μουσικότητα καὶ ἡ ἐξαιρετικὴ φωνητική της τεχνική.

Ὡς τόσο ἔχω νὰ παρατηρήσω μὲ λύπη μου πὼς πολὺ λίγη θέση δόθηκε σὲ ἑλληνικὰ ἔργα στὰ προγράμματα τῶν συμφωνικῶν συναυλιῶν. Ἐκτὸς ἀπὸ τὴ «Βυζαντινὴ Θυσία» τοῦ Πετρίδη στὴν Α' συναυλία καὶ στὴ «Συμφωνία τῆς Λεβεντιᾶς» τοῦ Καλομοίρη στὴν Ε' δὲν παίχτηκε κανένα ἄλλο συμφωνικὸ ἔργο ἑλληνικό. Αὐτὸ ἦταν σπουδαία παράλειψη, γιατὶ ξέρουμε πὼς ὑπάρχουν ἀρκετὰ ἔργα ποὺ ἄξιζε νὰ τὰ γνωρίσουν καὶ οἱ ξένοι. Ἂς τὸ ἔχει στὸ νοῦ της ἡ ἐπιτροπὴ τοῦ Φεστιβὰλ γιὰ τὸν ἐρχόμενο χρόνο, γιατὶ οἱ ξένοι ἐνδιαφέρονται ν' ἀκούσουν καὶ τὴ μουσικὴ τοῦ κάθε τόπου, κι ὄχι μονάχα τὰ καθιερωμένα κλασικὰ ποὺ τὰ ἔχουν ἀκούσει χιλιάδες φορές. Ἀπόδειξη μὲ πόσον ἐνθουσιασμὸ χειροκροτήθηκε ἡ «Συμφωνία τῆς Λεβεντιᾶς» ποὺ διεύθυνε μὲ ἐξαιρετικὴ κατανόηση καὶ ζωντάνια ὁ Φιλοκτήτης Οἰκονομίδης στὴν τελευταία συναυλία τῆς Κρατικῆς Ὀρχήστρας.

Θέλω ἀκόμα νὰ προσθέσω πὼς χρειάζεται νὰ δίνεται περισσότερη προσοχὴ στὸν καταρτισμὸ τοῦ προγράμματος τῆς κάθε συναυλίας, ἔτσι ποὺ νὰ παρουσιάζουν στὰ ἔργα ποὺ ἐκτελοῦνται κάποια ὁμοιογένεια ὕφους καὶ ποὺ νὰ ταιριάζουν στὸ αὐστηρὸ καὶ ὑποβλητικὸ πλαίσιο τοῦ ἀρχαίου χώρου. Στὴν Δ' π. χ. συναυλία ποὺ διεύθυνε μὲ ἐξαιρετικὴ ἐπιτυχία ὁ μαέστρος Παρίδης ἡ ἀντίθεση ἀνάμεσα στὰ κλασικὰ ἔργα τοῦ Μότσαρτ καὶ τοῦ Μπετόβεν καὶ τὴ 2η συμφωνία τοῦ Τσαϊκόφσκυ μὲ τοὺς κραυγαλέους, ρωσικοὺς χορούς στὸ τελευταῖο μέρος, ἔκανε σχεδὸν ὀδυνηρὴ ἐντύπωση. Ἂς τὸ προσέξει αὐτὸ ὁ κάθε ἀρχιμουσικὸς ποὺ ἔχει αὐτὸς πρὸ πάντων τὴν εὐθύνη γιὰ τὸ πρόγραμμά του.

Carnegie Decked Out For Symphony Return

By DOUGLAS WATT

Carnegie Hall was decked out last night for the opening of a season of Philharmonic-Symphony concerts. United Nations Night seemed to be the theme. The boxes were decorated with falls of greenery, and many of them were, in addition, draped with the flags of foreign nations and representatives of same. Sitting in a kind of neutral box amidst all this display was Dag Hammarskjold, the UN Secretary General.

It was a dressy audience, on the whole, and it filled Carnegie. Up on the stage were the 100-odd men of the orchestra, recently returned from a successful European tour. And there were the orchestra's musical director, Dimitri Mitropoulos, and the evening's guest soloist, pianist Rudolf Serkin. And, just before the second half, there was the president of the board of directors, Floyd G. Blair, to introduce Richard C. Patterson Jr., commissioner of commerce and public events.

Patterson read a lengthy proclamation by Mayor Wagner (the Mayor was tied up at another function) designating Nov. 21-26 as Philharmonic-Symphony Week and adding the hope that press, public et al would support the orchestra's drive for funds during that period. When he was done, Blair returned to emphasize how good the orchestra is and how deserving of public support. He really told them.

And somewhere there was Mozart, trying to make himself heard. This being the Mozart Bicentennial, Mitropoulos had given over the entire concert to Mozart works. Following the Overture to "The Abduction From the Seraglio," Serkin and the orchestra ticked off three piano concertos —Nos. 25, 16 and 23, in that order, the intermission preceding the last two.

Everything (that is, everything this reporter heard, the length of the concert and the speeches preventing his staying for the last work) was smartly played. The orchestra was on its toes and the soloist played with nimble grace. But half as large an orchestra would have been sufficient and, truth to tell, the smooth readings revealed very little heart. You gotta have heart. The writer was plain bored.

Philharmonic Opens Season on Gala Note

By HARRIETT JOHNSON

The Philharmonic-Symphony opened its 114th season last night in Carnegie Hall with an all-Mozart program, celebrating the 200th anniversary of the composer's birth; but the aura of festivity was present on many other counts.

Only two weeks ago the ensemble returned from a triumphant European tour, during which, as Floyd Blair, president of the Philharmonic Society remarked in a short speech, even the British rendered it ovations. Consequently many top-ranking diplomats from foreign countries were present to honor musical director Dimitri Mitropoulos and his orchestra.

Flags from many nations, including that of the conductor's native Greece, draped the lower boxes, and Richard C. Patterson Jr., Commissioner of the Department of Commerce and Public Events of the City of New York, read a proclamation from Mayor Wagner, designating the coming week as "Philharmonic Week."

The sold-out house was enthusiastic in its response to the music, which featured pianist, Rudolf Serkin, in a sublime mood performing three concerti.

Beginning with the Overture to "The Abduction From the Seraglio," the evening continued with the Concerto No. 25 in C Major; No. 16 in D Major and No. 23 in A Major.

Too much Mozart, most would say, and there is no doubt that the elegant transparency of his style is not the ideal substance for a one-composer stint.

But a relaxed Serkin, performing his best, which is, needless to say, top notch, was the prime factor in sustaining interest throughout the evening. The pianist was much more at ease in manner than last season, playing with a minimum of gesture and almost no excess motion. He displayed magnificent control plus wide color; also rhythmic buoyancy and exuberance when the music required it.

Possibly he was at his best in the final concerto, the A Major, K. 488. This work, so expressive of Mozart's joyous nature and abounding in humor, was performed with all of its laughter spontaneously present and with its introspective "andante" no less impressively interpreted.

Mitropoulos retained a big orchestra for the entire program until this last concerto, which was understandable, considering that in this first concert the whole body should have some part. Being a master of accompaniment, he kept his sound well modulated in relation to the pianist, but in the tutti sections the dynamics were out of proportion to the texture of the music.

And by contrast with the beautiful balance of ensemble and soloist during the final concerto, the rest of the concert was overweighted.

As a whole, however, the evening had an electric quality of excitement, which has been absent from Philharmonic openings in recent years.

Dimitri Mitropoulos' recent return to his native Athens, as conductor of the traveling New York Philharmonic, caused a riot when 3,500 music lovers tried to get into a theater accommodating only 3,000. Police reinforcements and two ambulances had to be called. Demand for tickets had been so great the critics had to pay for their own . . .

Philharmonic Opens With All-Mozart

By LOUIS BIANCOLLI

Fresh from its triumphal five-week tour of Europe the New York Philharmonic, with Dimitri Mitropoulos at its head, opened its 114th season in Carnegie Hall last night.

The occasion proved quite a gala home-coming. It was learned at intermission time that Mayor Robert F. Wagner had proclaimed this "Philharmonic Week," and warm testimonials were pronounced about the orchestra's successes overseas.

The international note was further stressed by the presence of delegates of member states of the United Nations visited by the Philharmonic. The first-tier boxes in which they sat were draped with their countries flags.

Bicentennial Tribute.

Another world institution being honored last night was a little fellow named Wolfgang Amadeus Mozart, who was the real business of the evening. The all-Mozart program was a splendid bicentennial tribute.

The orchestra seemed to have returned refreshed and strengthened. One welcomed back its fine balance. Magnificent tone, and collective alertness in grasping a given idea.

Mr. Mitropoulos was his dynamic and inspiring self on the podium. One sensed the reverence of the man for the quality of Mozart and for the ideals of artistry he lived by.

Serkin's Power.

One felt that, too, about Rudolph Serkin, who undertook the formidable assignment of playing three of Mozart's piano concertos—the C Major (K. 503), the D Major (K. 451), and the A Major (K.488).

Mr. Serkin played with that confident power that spells marvelous control and reserves of strength, without ever hinting at strain. He caught the quiet depths of Mozart's poetry.

Any excess tends to obliterate subtleties in these concertos. Mozart is in his favorite medium here, the master of heavenly discourse between piano and orchestra. A perfect balance must be maintained.

Mr. Serkin knew his place in this scheme; so did the orchestra, and so did Mr. Mitropoulos. They had each other's interests at heart, and thus best served Mozart's.

The C Major (K. 503) is something of a problem, never having been made to feel completely at home in the repertory. It is less spontaneous, more calculated than the others—a frugal thing trying, in the andante, to say too much with too little.

It is a kind of sunshine without warmth; Mozart, to be sure, But Mozart moving watchfully, aiming at something different, less rippling and glittering, more thoughtful. And even when he nods he is graceful.

Mitropoulos—A Study in Concentration

An unusual rehearsal photograph of Dimitri Mitropoulos, who returned with the Philharnine days ago after a four-weeks' tour which took it as far afield as the conductor's native Athens. On Thursday night in Carnegie Hall he will open the orchestra's 114th season and his fifth as its musical director.

Mr. Mitropoulos will conduct for twelve of the twenty-eight weeks of the season. Pierre Monteux and Bruno Walter will conduct for two weeks each, Guido Cantelli for eight and George Szell for four weeks. Franco Autori, Max Rudolf and Thomas Schippers will also conduct in the regular series.

Philharmonic:

Society Opens 114th Season

By MILES KASTENDIECK

IN a double-barreled opening, the Philharmonic-Symphony began its 114th season in Carnegie Hall last night. Looking backward to its recent triumphal European tour, the society had as its special guests the eleven top-ranking diplomats from those countries the orchestra visited.

Looking forward to the bicentennial of Mozart's birth, Dimitri Mitropoulos devoted the program entirely to Mozart, specifically three piano concertos with Rudolf Serkin as piano soloist.

To honor the occasion Mayor Wagner issued a proclamation announcing "Philharmonic Week." It was read by Richard C. Patterson Jr., Commissioner of the City's Department of Commerce and Public Events, and accepted by Floyd G. Blair, president of the society, who took a moment to tell how wonderful the tour had been, especially its brilliant windup in London.

In Top Form

The program opened with the overture to "The Abduction From The Seraglio." Then came the parade of concertos: K. 503, K. 451, and K. 488. Three could have been one too many except that Mozart's genius supplied sufficient variation in them to sustain interest and pleasure to the end.

Neither K. 503 or K. 451 are frequently heard, though by coincidence the latter had been played by the Little Orchestra Society on Monday night.

From the start, the orchestra sounded in top form, revitalized from the encomiums heaped upon it abroad. It had to share the limelight with Serkin, of course, who was also keyed to achieve the remarkable feat of differentiating among the concertos.

With perhaps more rhythmic verve and virile stylizing than is customary in Mozart, he played with that infallible sense of artistry that always has singled him out among great pianists. That the performances grew more "Mozartean" as the evening progressed evolved naturally from everybody warming up to the music and in turn being inspired by it.

Mitropoulos Conducts Mozart

Mozart's all-but-forgotten Sinfonia Concertante in A major received its initial local performance yesterday afternoon at the New York Philharmonic-Symphony's first Sunday concert of the season. The program, conducted by Dimitri Mitropoulos and broadcast over the CBS radio network, also included the same composer's Piano Concertos in D major, K. 451, and C major, K. 503, with Rudolf Serkin as soloist. In the opening work John Corigliano, violin; William Lincer, viola, and Laszlo Vargo, cello, were the featured performers.

The Sinfonia Concertante is unquestionable minor Mozart, which means, nonetheless, that it is still a great work. It is fresh, elegant, high-spirited and its tunes ripple with an effortless gaiety that declare the work to be 100 per cent authentic. The piece, rediscovered in Salzburg in 1953 by Mr. Lincer, is chiseled out of those exact elements that have made Mozart's name stand as something unique in the history of art, and while it is true that the Sinfonia's technical apparatus is wholly conventional, its content is throughout lively and highly individual. The work is, in fact, Mozartian to the core. And that is recommendation enough. J. S. H.

Music: A Mozart 'Find'

Philharmonic Performs Work for 3 Soloists

By HOWARD TAUBMAN

IT is always open season in musical circles to hunt for unknown and neglected works by the great masters. With the bicentennial of Mozart's birth to be observed in January, 1956, an effort will be made to dig up and perform pieces of his not commonly encountered. One such composition was introduced to the programs of the New York Philharmonic - Symphony at Carnegie Hall yesterday afternoon.

The work is entitled a Sinfonia Concertante for Violin, Viola and 'Cello and Orchestra in A (K. Anh. 104). It was brought to the attention of the conductor, Dimitri Mitropoulos, by the Philharmonic's solo violinst, William Lincer, who was one of yesterday's soloists.

Mr. Lincer got interested in this work a number of years ago at a time when he could not have imagined that it would contribute its small meed to the Mozart Year excitement. He finally found a printed score in the Mozarteum library in Salzburg and went to considerable expense to have photostats made and parts extracted.

The musicologists may be sharpening their snickersnees for Mr. Lincer, a mere performer who had the temerity to seek out the score. Before wielding their weapons, they should remember that the violist has made no big claims for the Mozart piece. He conceded that what he found in Salzburg was a printed score published by the firm of C. A. Spina in Vienna in the Eighteen-Seventies. Now he has got it a performance.

The piece is in one movement, which lasts about fifteen minutes. The first fifty-one measures are scored by Mozart; the next eighty-three of writing for the solo instruments are also by Mozart. But the orchestral accompaniment was provided by Otto Bach, artistic director of the Mozarteum almost 100 years ago. It was also Bach who contributed the development, recapitulation and cadenza.

William Lincer

The work is not bad Mozart. It has a lively theme that reminds one of an aria by Osmin in "The Abduction From the Seraglio," and there is a tender second theme. What Mozart himself wrote has vivacity; what Otto Bach filled in seeks to be in Mozart's style but lacks his spirit. But there is enough authentic Mozart in the work to merit its performance on occasion, particularly if an orchestra is looking for a different curtain-raiser and if it wants to give three of its principal players a chance to move front and center.

Mr. Lincer's companions as soloists were John Corigliano, concertmaster, and Laszlo Varga, first 'cellist. They played the piece pleasantly, and Mr. Mitropoulos conducted in like spirit. Rudolf Serkin then took over the body of the program to play two of the three Mozart piano concertos which he had performed at the Philharmonic opening last Thursday.

Mozart's Lost Sinfonia Charms Carnegie Hall

By LOUIS BIANCOLLI

A beautiful little work of Mozart's—only recently salvaged from oblivion—was featured on yesterday's matinee program of the Philharmonic in Carnegie Hall.

The composition is a "Sinfonia Concertante" in A Major, dating from 1779 when Mozart was 23 and still living in Salzburg.

Scored for violin, viola, cello, and orchestra, it consists of only one movement, but in that movement are packed the epitome and secret of Mozart's unique gift.

He Discovered Gem.

Discoverer of the "Sinfonia"—perhaps "rediscoverer" is the word—was William Lincer, the distinguished first viola player of the Philharmonic.

Yesterday Mr. Lincer had the satisfaction and pride of appearing in the Philharmonic's first performance of the little Mozart gem he has helped restore to circulation.

With him in the solo spotlight were John Corigliano, the orchestra's concertmaster, and Laszlo Varga, first cellist. Dimitri Mitropoulos conducted.

The performance was ravishing in its perfect balance, swift interplay of voices, and that winged lyricism that is the very spirit of Mozart.

Whets Appetite.

Why Mozart left this "Sinfonia" in a fragmentary state will never be known. It is so good it whets our appetite for more.

The solo instruments blend voices in a dream colloquy that ends too soon. The orchestra joins in chattily, rises with the trio on a crest of poetry, and subsides as they elaborate a thought

Mr. Lincer began his search in the late 30s when he found a reference to a Mozart score with three solo string parts in an appendix of the Koechel Catalogue.

Later he photostated a printed copy of the viola part which somehow found its way into the possession of a Midwestern collector.

Found in Salzburg.

Two years ago, while in Europe on a professional engagement, he consulted the library staff of the Mozarteum in Salzburg. After a hunt, they located the manuscript.

Mr. Lincer then discovered that Otto Bach, an early director of the Mozarteum, had edited and brought out the score in the 1870s. A comparative study showed what was done.

The missing accompaniment of the second half of the allegro, along with the development section and cadenzas, had been worked out by the Salzburg editor "as he imagined Mozart might have" on the basis of earlier material.

However short, however edited, however vague its origins, this unfinished Sinfonia for three soloists is in more ways than one the "notable rarity in orchestral literature" that Irving Kolodine rightly calls it.

Philharmonic Plays Tribute to Downes

OLIN DOWNES used to say that in opera the music should get underneath the dramatic action and lift it as if on wings. There are two reasons for recalling this in connection with last night's concert of the New York Philharmonic-Symphony at Carnegie Hall.

The first is that part of the program was a memorial tribute to Mr. Downes, who died on Aug. 22 after serving as this newspaper's music critic for thirty-two years. The other was that most of the program was given over to the last act of Wagner's "Die Goetterdaemmerung," and at the end the performance lived up to Mr. Downes' dictum. It soared.

One would be less than loyal to Mr. Downes' critical principles, though, if one implied that the whole of the seventy-two-minute act was safely off the ground. The truth is that the first two scenes—Siegfried's encounter with the Rhine maidens, and his murder—were inclined to be dull.

It was partly because the texture of the orchestral playing was rough. This seemed in line with Dimitri Mitropoulos' concept of the work as something gloomy and fiercely barbaric. But it did prevent the work from having much melodic flow. And it cannot be said that Ramon Vinay was an interesting or moving Siegfried. His voice lacked color and did not carry well.

After the intermission, though, the story changed. From then on the performance was absorbing, and with the entrance of Astrid Varnay as Bruennhilde it took on lift and heroic quality, two characteristics that were always dear to Mr. Downes' heart. Miss Varnay was not the most velvety voiced of Bruennhildes, but she had dramatic intensity and great ringing tones that brought the part to life.

It was Siegfried's Funeral that began the last half of the concert that was dedicated to Mr. Downes. A black-edged card in the program called him "a stanch friend" of the Philharmonic - Symphony Society. It also cited his services in contributing program notes and intermission comments for the orchestra's Sunday afternoon broadcasts.

Mrs. Irene Downes, the critic's widow, was a guest of honor. So were his two daughters, Mrs. Richard Williams 3d and Mrs. George Rockwell Smith, and their young daughters, Catherine and Alice. Mme. Olga Koussevitzky, a close friend of the family, was seated in the box with Mrs. Downes.

The other members of the "Goetterdaemmerung" cast were Lucine Amara (a very touching Gutrune), Luben Vichey (a villainous Hagen with a noble voice), Clifford Harvuot (a resonant Gunther), and Shakeh Vatenissian, Rosalind Elias and Herta Glaz as the Rhine maidens.

"Goetterdaemmerung," incidentally, has not been given at the Metropolitan since February, 1952. Mr. Mitropoulos asked to have it among his assignments there this season, but Rudolf Bing vetoed the suggestion on the ground that Wagner had not been drawing well on recent seasons. The act was the second big Wagnerian work Mr. Mitropoulos has conducted with the Philharmonic. Last year he opened the season with the first act of "Die Walkuere," also with Miss Varnay and Messrs. Vinay and Vichey as the leading singers.

The opening selection of last night's program was Mozart's Sinfonia Concertante (K. anh. 104), which was played by the orchestra last Sunday. Again the same three members of the orchestra had the solo parts. They were the concertmaster, John Corigliano; the solo 'cellist, Laszlo Varga, and the violist, William Lincer, who was responsible for discovering the work.

Philharmonic Offers Wagner Classic

By LOUIS BIANCOLLI.

The third act of Wagner's "Goetterdaemmerung" built up to a shattering climax on last night's Philharmonic program in Carnegie Hall.

At that point Astrid Varnay was singing the "Immolation" scene with a strength and beauty of tone that for a while reminded one of Kirsten Flagstad.

Brilliant Accompaniment.

Accompanying her brilliantly through the blazing finale of Wagner's opera were Dimitri Mitropoulos and the Philharmonic-Symphony.

That was one of the two high points of the concert version of Wagner's music that made up the bulk of last night's program.

The other was the stirring performance of Siegfried's "Funeral March" that preceded the "Immolation" by a few minutes.

Magnificent Tone.

There was magnificent tone to the reading, and a great depth of feeling, augmented by the fact that it was being played in memory of Olin Downes.

No finer tribute could have been paid to the late critic of the New York Times than this moving threnody played by such an orchestra and led by such a conductor.

Like Mr. Mitropoulos himself, Mr. Downes was a man of fierce courage and conviction, and one sensed the profound loss again in the tragic reminder of the reading.

It was quite fitting to divide the third act at the death of Siegfried and continue after the intermission with the "Funeral March." Any risk of applause was thus averted.

If Mr. Mitropoulos was the musical hero of last night's performance, its heroine was Miss Varnay, who sang so surprisingly well I almost didn't recognize her.

If she continues that way at the Met this season, she may help swing a good deal of sentiment back to Wagner and the "Ring" dramas.

Second heroine of the evening was Lucine Amara, whose splendid voice and expressive style gave haunting beauty to Gutrune's lines.

Ramon Vinay was artistic as Siegfried, but vocally pallid, while Luben Vichey was quite sonorous as Hagen. Clifford Harvuot sang Gunther.

WORDS and MUSIC

Wagner in 'Concert' at Philharmonic

The catastrophic Wagnerian "Twilight of the Gods" took place in concert form last night on the stage of Carnegie Hall under the auspices of the Philharmonic-Symphony, Dimitri Mitropoulos conducting; plus an assorted list of artists from the Metropolitan Opera.

What actually happened, as you Wagnerites might surmise, is that Act III of "Goetterdaemmerung" was presented; and with the asset of an impressive Bruennhilde. Astrid Varnay, as a matter of fact, was the only participant who fully projected the heroic grandeur of Wagner's symbolism as expressed in his music.

Her voice is developing in beauty and fluidity, and she sang with a magnificent feeling for the sweep of Wagner's melodic line. She still needs to lighten her middle and lower voice in the way Flagstad did so superbly, so that her high notes will float easily with more brilliance.

But Miss Varnay, with a compelling Nordic splendor, embodied the character of the war-like maid who threw herself into the fire to expiate the sins of many. And, fortunately, she has the voice and artistry to project her intensity of feeling.

Dramatic Excitement

Luben Vichey, who sang Hagen, has a mountain of a voice, deep and dark in the bargain. But apparently he was too busy with his new concert bureau to review his part well enough to sing it from memory. Ramon Vinay as Siegfried was vocally unsatisfactory, though he sang with understanding and fine musicianship. The lesser parts were acceptably done.

Mitropoulos with his ensemble was not up to his usual high opera-in-concert-form standard. Especially the latter part of the performance lacked the prophetic quality of Greek tragedy, which Varnay had as Bruennhilde. He took the final orchestral conclusion too fast, and there was a nervous jerkiness which did not become the sable mood of doom which pervades the music. Yet, there were many moments of orchestral effulgence, inescapable because of the dramatic excitement inherent in the score.

"Siegfried's Funeral March," which followed the intermission, was played in memory of Olin Downes, the late music critic of The New York Times.

Sunday's matinee will feature a repetition of this program.

New Mozart 'Concertante' Performed at Philharmonic

The enterprise of William Lincer, principal viola player of the Philharmonic-Symphony, was responsible for the first performance by the orchestra yesterday of a beautiful "Sinfonia Concertante for Violin, Viola, Violincello and Orchestra in A Major" by Mozart. Lincer, John Corigliano, concertmaster, and Laszlo Varga, first cellist, were the soloists in the work which opened the ensemble's initial Sunday matinee of the season at Carnegie Hall.

Lincer did considerable research over a period of many years in order to track down the piece which he had originally found listed almost 20 years ago in the Koechel Catalogue of Mozart works. Consisting of only one movement, the solo parts were completed by the composer but only a portion of the orchestral accompaniment was finished. Realization of this was undertaken by Otto Bach, a Mozart scholar, in the late 19th century. Lincer eventually found the composition in an obscure section of the library in the Salzburg Mozarteum.

The music on first hearing appears to catch something of the sublime beauty of the well-known "Sinfonia Concertante" in E Flat for Violin, Viola and Orchestra; and according to the best authorities, was probably written shortly after this composition.

The Philharmonic will open its coming Thursday night and Friday afternoon pair of Carnegie Hall concerts with this work, to be followed by the third act of Wagner's "Goetterdaemmerung" in concert form, featuring the following soloists in leading roles: Astrid Varnay, Ramon Vinay and Luben Vichey. Dimitri Mitropoulos will conduct.

Philharmonic Symphony:

Wagner Opera

By MILES KASTENDIECK

DIMITRI MITROPOULOS presented another of his concert performances of opera with the Philharmonic-Symphony in Carnegie Hall last night. This time he selected the third act of Wagner's "Die Goetterdaemmerung." It gave him and the society a special opportunity to dedicate the playing of Siegfried's stirring "Funeral March" to the memory of Olin Downes, late critic of the New York Times.

As expected, Mitropoulos revealed his adeptness in conducting opera, brought dramatic inflection into the playing as it is seldom realized at the Metropolitan, and stirred appreciation of the greatness of this particular score. Once warmed to its task, the orchestra responded with a richness and fullness of expression befitting the power and beauty of the music. Though not overwhelming in impact, the performance was, on the whole, gratifying.

Varnay in Role

Singing Bruenhilde, Astrid Varnay stood out among her associates. Hers was an authoritative delivery of the famous immolation scene. Vocally clear and forceful, she left no question of her command of the role and the stage presence to project it. She grows more impressive with the years. In her brief appearance as Gutrune, Lucine Amara sang most appealingly. As the Rhine maidens, Shakeh Vatenissian, Rosalind Elias, and Herta Glaz offered fresh voices and good ensemble.

The men fared less well. Ramon Vinay had the artistry if not the power to sing Siegfried's music. Luben Vichey had the power but not the malevolence to represent Hagen. Clifford Harvuot sang Gunther adequately. They needed more conviction in their performances.

A repetition of Mozart's newly discovered "Sinfonia Concertante" opened the program.

Philharmonic in Third Act Of 'Goetterdaemmerung'

By Francis D. Perkins

Except for the first fifteen minutes, the third act of Wagner's "Goetterdaemmerung" occupied last night's concert of the Philharmonic-Symphony Orchestra at Carnegie Hall. Astrid Varnay was the Bruennhilde and Ramon Vinay the Siegfried with the expert instrumentalists conducted by Dimitri Mitropoulos; Luben Vichey as Hagen, Lucine Amara as Gutrune, Clifford Harvuot as Gunther and Shakeh Vartenissian, Rosalind Elias and Herta Glaz as the Rhine Maidens completed the roster of Metropolitan Opera soloists. Before beginning the epic close of the "Ring" cycle, the orchestra repeated the Mozart Sinfonia Concertante which it had introduced to us last Sunday, with John Corigliano, William Lincer and Laszlo Varga again as the solo violinist, violist and cellist.

Siegfried's funeral music, which followed the intermission, was designed as a tribute to Olin Oownes, the eminent music critic of "The New York Times" who died two moiths ago; the musnc itself and the intensity of its performance were an appropriate tribute to him and to his long and notable carèer. An intermission, if there must be one, in extensive and continuous music such as this act presents a problem hard to solve in a satisfactory way. There could have been less of a break in dramatic continuity and atmosphere if the pause had lollowed the funeral music, but here a halt would have been awkward without an interpolated close.

The performance was in straight concert form, except that Hagen sang first offstage and then came forward with Gunther. This particular work, indeed, would make the partly dramatic presentation used for some concert performances of opera rather impracticable. Here and there a realization of the full significance of the act as a whole called for some effort of the imagination, but most of last night's hearers were probably acquainted with "Goetterdaemmerung," and the musical performance was mainly impressive.

Miss Varnay gave Bruennhilde's music its necessary intense and heroic quality, both in the proclamations and the tenderer moments of the Immolation Scene. Her voice, with color and power, had an incisiveness which was in character here; there were some hints of effort as the scene neared its close, but few Bruennhildes complete it without a touch of vocal strain. Mr. Varnay was in good voice as Siegfried; there was spirit and considerable dramatic persuasion, although there were emotional shadings in his narrative that eluded him.

In voice and expressive color, Mr. Vichey was a convincing Hagen, realizing the character with freely produced and dark hued tones. The other soloists also fared well, and Mr. Mitropoulos generally preserved a just balance between the vocal and instrumental elements. There were a few passages that could have profited from more flexibility of phrasing, but the orchestral performance was marked not only by imposing bass and sonority, but also by lucidity, good proportion and musical and dramatic eloquence, which testified to Mr. Mitropoulos' talent in the operatic field. The closing measures represent one of the most potent dramatic culminations in musical literature, and this was the impression in this performance.

...estral Echoes From Paris

Mitropoulos and Cantelli in French View

By Emile Vuillermoz
Paris

The reopening of the music season in Paris was marked by the visit of the New York Philharmonic-Symphony. We have had the orchestras from Boston and Philadelphia and were happy to have this splendid, well-organized group whose qualities of discipline and beautiful instrumental sonority have been much appreciated by us. The great American orchestras are certainly marvelous living keyboards from which a master of the baton can draw a wealth of artistic splendor.

The New Yorkers brought with them not one conductor, but two. The first concert was conducted by Dimitri Mitropoulos; and the second by Guido Cantelli.

The contrast between the two techniques in conducting was quite striking. Mitropoulos has developed considerably since he left Europe. In his gestures he is scarcely recognizable as the same man. He has adopted the ideas and sign language of Furtwängler, borrowing that spasmodic shaking of his head, that constant quiver of the baton and those mysterious injunctions which are not intended to indicate time or measure, but serve to maintain the voltage of the current flowing to the unfoldment of a musical phrase.

The onlooker who follows this conductor's arm with his eyes, to discern the metric or rhythmic interpretation of a symphony, at once finds himself derailed. I might even say these capricious pulsations are so completely divorced from the breadth of the measures and the symmetry of strong and weak beats that they baffle instead of guide the observer. You say to yourself, that if you were an instrumentalist in that orchestra, you could never attack correctly by following such disconcerting directions.

Technique Effective

However, the flawless quality of the execution certainly proves that this enigmatic technique is effective. One can only conclude that Mitropoulos does it all by focussing on rehearsals and that on the day of the performance there is no need to beat time, and he can content himself with keeping his instrumentalists fine-drawn, encouraging them, spurring them on to clear an obstacle. He gives them elasticity, sensitivity, and élan. And when he comes up to the starting gate, as they say at the race track, he lowers his hands and his riding whip to the level of his belt, making only imperceptible vibratory movements as soon as the race begins.

The next day the same orchestra performed under the baton of Guido Cantelli. We had never heard this young Italian conductor in France, although we knew of his successes in his own country and in America. We knew that he had attracted the attention of Toscanini, which was the best possible letter of introduction to musicians, and we looked forward to hearing him with much interest.

Cantelli appeared, and at once his faultless bearing on the podium, his slender silhouette, precise, polished gestures, enchanted and conquered his audience. His method of conducting is just the opposite of that used by Mitropoulos, his baton follows to a hair every detail of the music, of which it marks the slightest accent, rhythm, and attack. Where the indications of Mitropoulos are mysterious and undecipherable to the public, those of Cantelli are readable to the whole world. His two hands write the whole score on the air; and that, indeed, is after the Toscanini tradition.

Exaggerated Direction

But while Toscanini never made a single gesture which did not serve the score and the interpretation, Cantelli that day directed a little too much for the listener. He exaggerated the rhythmic and metrical direction for each measure and almost every note, although palpably his excellent instrumentalists had no need for anyone to take them by the hand as if they were beginners.

Certainly we must not make it a practice to condemn conductors who, in their method of conducting, make allowance for the audience. They are right to underline the design, the volume, the relief, and the detail of a symphonic structure; for this helps the listeners to a better understanding.

But it is not necessary to make this praiseworthy intention so evident. Cantelli made it a little too obvious by a gesticulation which was immoderate and over insistent. His excessive animation did not please people; and it antagonized the critics, who were rather severe with him for it.

In Calmer Fashion

He was responsive, however, to the criticism; for a week later he returned to Paris at the head of the Orchestra of La Scala of Milan, a splendid organization whose enormous string section possesses remarkable warmth, sensitivity, and expressiveness. There he showed himself in far calmer fashion. His success was then complete and well merited.

He has the true temperament of a conductor. The only fault one could find is that of yielding sometimes a little too easily to the lure of brilliant executions. With him, everything was quite dazzling, quite sparkling. Thus he gave us an interpretation of Ravel's "Daphnis et Chloé" so blazing that he seemed to have forgotten that we have in it a simple pastoral and that the two principal characters are humble shepherds, ill suited to these continual fireworks.

On the other hand, in "Tableaux d'un Exposition" and in Debussy's "The Sea," this scintillating quality worked marvels. Guido Cantelli is still at an age where one looks for resplendence; in a few years he will understand the superiority of controlled emotion.

The Philharmonic

Overture, "Fidelio".....Beethoven
Piano Concerto in E flat, K. 482....Mozart
Prelude and Passacaglia, Op. 42 (first N. Y. performance).....Ben Weber
Tone Poem, "Also Sprach Zarathustra".....Strauss

Ben Weber, whose Prelude and Passacaglia was given its New York premiere last night.

It was wet and soggy last night and some of the sogginess could be felt even inside Carnegie Hall, where the Philharmonic was holding forth with a varied program. After a rather perfunctory homage paid to Beethoven, and to the restored opera house in Vienna, in the shape of the "Fidelio" overture, the orchestra and Mr. Scarpini launched into Mozart's E flat concerto (K. 482) in a manner that made me think that some of the players and their instruments must have gotten wet.

Mr. Scarpini seems to be a competent and serious pianist but he failed to catch fire from the wet orchestra. In some places, such as in the rondo, he played very nicely, but it seems to me that he miscalculated his dynamics because a good deal of his passage work was lost.

What happened to this fine orchestra? Mr. Mitropoulos did reduce it to almost proper proportions and we were delighted with the lively tootling of the woodwinds and horns which, unlike in the "Fidellio" oveture, could be heard and enjoyed. But they were not together, some of them were out of tune, and the whole business was sloppy and untidy. Even so, I did get some measure of pleasure out of the work—it is an elaborate divertimento held in the concerto manner—until the cadenzas came along. I don't remember who wrote them but they were pretty awful. There ought to be a law . . .

Then, with the troublesome preliminaries out of the way, the picture changed and after the intermission we heard a thoroughly dried, well tuned, spick-and-span orchestra. I don't know how they do it.

Ben Weber's "Prelude and Passacaglia" disclosed an arresting musical talent. His position in the twelve-tone world is somewhat right of center; he is no doctrinaire but musician first. I found the piece pleasant and well made, though not fully sustained. The writing is fluent, the orchestral treatment sober in spite of an obvious romantic undercurrent, but in the last variations the momentum seems to run out. This is solid music, dignified, and altogether free of the tentative frivolities one so often encounters in would-be contemporary music. Mr. Mitropoulos gave it a relaxed and well moulded performance.

At the time when the French composers were setting to music the glistening waves of the ocean, or the murmurs of the forest, Strauss took a step no one but a German composer would have attempted: to express philosophy in sound. This is, of course, patently impossible, and this philosophical music is as lacking in sincerity as the musical philosophy of Nietzsche from which it descended. But if we forget about the esthetic nonsense, the bombast, and the trivial melodies, we still have something tangible left—the métier carried to a point where it becomes art.

And now our great orchestra showed what it can do when the spirit moves the players and their chief. Mr. Mitropoulos was in his element, lording it over with benevolent but absolute authority. The orchestra sparkled, roared, and shimmered, always in perfect entente, rolling out the long crescendos, sounding the trumpet calls, and caressing the strings. The only flaw was the organ which ought to be tuned to the pitch used by the orchestra. The public must have left thoroughly roused and satisfied, and I am afraid that they forgot what happened to the man whose 200th anniversary will be celebrated throughout the year. It simply escapes me why such an incomparable body of musicians is unable to do justice to Mozart. But, then, I am a chronicler and cannot fathom the mysteries of the conductorial mind.

BEN WEBER, 39-year-old American composer, is a man who may produce something distinctive before long. His Prelude and Passacaglia, Op. 42, which was introduced to New York by the Philharmonic-Symphony at Carnegie Hall last night, is a work that merits respect. It has a point of view and a touch of personality.

This score, one of the works to emerge from the Louisville Philharmonic-Rockefeller Foundation commissioning program, uses the twelve-tone system. But Mr. Weber is not uncompromising about his atonalism. There is more than a suggestion of Wagner and early Schoenberg in his work, particularly in the rather juicy prelude. The passacaglia has points of interest, but it sags somewhat in the middle. It could be pruned to advantage.

Dimitri Mitropoulos, who used a score in conducting Mr. Weber's composition, is at his best in modern music of this school. He directed the orchestra in a performance that made clear every detail in the piece while allowing it to build within its own logic. Mr. Weber, who came out to take a bow, must have been pleased with what he heard.

The evening ended with one of Mr. Mitropoulos' specialties, Strauss' "Also Sprach Zarathustra," which should have sent everyone home satisfied.

Things were not so cheerful in the first half. Mr. Mitropoulos began with the "Fidelio" Overture in honor of the Vienna Opera House, which reopens with "Fidelio" tomorrow. If the Viennese had heard this performance they would not have been flattered. There is no objection to rough-hewn Beethoven, but he ought not to be coarse and crude. It is a sin to let the Philharmonic sound like this.

The evening's soloist was Pietro Scarpini, Italian pianist, who made quite a splash in his debut with the orchestra last season when he played Prokofieff's Second Concerto. His handling of Mozart was disappointing. The E flat Concerto (K. 482) is in the gallant style, but it is this style at its zenith and in the slow movement the music achieves a tragic intensity.

Mr. Scarpini's playing had surface grace and glitter, but it did not get under the skin of the work. And the orchestra, though it was reduced for the occasion, was asked to play with a heaviness and thickness that threw the interpretation out of balance.

Philharmonic:

Mozart Music at Carnegie

By MILES KASTENDIECK

IT TOOK THREE QUARTERS of a concert to get started at the Philharmonic-Symphony in Carnegie Hall last night. When Mitropoulos and the orchestra came to Strauss's "Also Sprach Zarathustra," their performances began to focus.

There was interest enough before this in the first New York hearing of Ben Weber's "Prelude and Passacagglia" and Pietro Scarpini's interpretation of Mozart's Piano Concerto K. 482. Neither of these performances carried conviction, though for different reasons.

Weber's music makes a promising beginning but gets stranded about half way through. Whether the tone row restricted him or inspiration flagged, he succumbed to routine. Though well-made, the music fails to culminate. Weber took a bow with a hiss or two plainly audible.

Scarpini played fluently, tastefully, yet a bit anemically. In romanticizing Mozart, he raised the question of style, but then his choice of cadenzas did this anyhow. Pianistic delicacy was there, but the classic spirit and joyousness of this work appeared only momentarily.

Sloppy Playing

The concerto is not too familiar. It has its fascination for its deviation from the usual Mozart pattern. This would have been more rewarding had the orchestra played less sloppily, but the woodwinds and horns were not in line as they should have been. Though Mitropoulos used a reduced orchestra, the coarse quality and vigorous accents of his Mozart performances persisted.

To honor the reopening of the Vienna Opera House, Mitropoulos began the program with Bethoven's overture to "Fidelio." While the performance of this was acceptable, that of the Strauss which ended the concert was stunning. He was in his element. The full flavor of the tone poem evolved naturally, surged into its theatrical pages, and attained its mystical close logically. This was the only satisfying aspect of the evening.

Philharmonic Delights With Mozart Concerto

By LOUIS BIANCOLLI.

Two stirring performances—widely spaced in style, feeling, and period—highlighted the Philharmonic program led by Dimitri Mitropoulos in Carnegie Hall last night.

One was of Mozart's E-flat Major Piano Concerto with the distinguished Italian artist Pietro Scarpini as soloist. The other was of Richard Strauss' tone poem based freely on Nietzsche's "Thus Spake Zarathustra."

Mr. Scarpini will be remembered as one of the better concert debutants of last season. He has a clean and thorough technic and a sense of style to match.

Beautifully Scaled.

The reading of the Mozart classic was beautifully scaled in dynamics and mood. There was never a hint of excess in the dainty, poetic world that Mr. Scarpini fashioned at the keys.

In the slow movement, which is one of Mozart's most perfect reveries, Mr. Scarpini softened his tone to a religious hush. It was a true pianissimo, with meaning and feeling, not a mere understatement.

Mr. Mitropoulos worked in a supremely tender and refined background. The interweaving of piano and orchestral line was a model of balance and crisp precision—a criterion for readings of Mozart's concertos.

Another World.

With the Strauss tone-poem, Mr. Mitropoulos was in another world. Here, vast sonority and strange pronouncements mingle in a kind of symphonic trance. Here "Superman" makes his debut in music.

Luckily, one can listen to this music without trying to find a key in it to Nietzsche's "world riddle" or to Strauss' attempt to orchestrate an erratic theory of evolution.

Arresting Music.

It is music that sounds exciting for its own sake, full of clashing themes and rolling masses of tone; maybe not great music, but certainly arresting music—at least as Mr. Mitropoulos conducted it.

There were some boos for Ben Weber's new "Prelude and Passacaglia"—but some lingering applause, too, from an embattled minority who relish a stark and jagged style worked into a fabric bustling with high tension.

The concert opened with Beethoven's "Fidelio" overture.

Philharmonic-Symphony Opens 114th Season

Amid gaiety and excitement, the N. Y. Philharmonic-Symphony opened its 114th season with a Mozart program, at Carnegie Hall, Oct. 20. Dimitri Mitropoulos was on the podium, his usual dynamic self; but after conducting the Overture to "The Abduction from the Seraglio," he virtually handed the program over to Rudolf Serkin, the soloist of the evening. For Mr. Serkin accomplished the formidable feat of playing three Mozart concertos and giving them the beauty, the purity, the lyricism which they so richly deserve. There will be much Mozart heard this year, for this is the season of celebration of the bicentennial of Mozart's birth (Jan. 27, 1756) — but we doubt if there are many who can do more with this glorious music than Mr. Serkin. The slow movements were liquid, with a lyrical singing quality; the fast movements were clean and crisp, sometimes almost breathlessly rapidly paced; the delicate nuances, gently swelling and falling, so classic in their perfection. Mozart, on the other hand, is not exactly Mr. Mitropoulos' dish. He had to hold back the forcefulness of the roaring lion in his nature; and it is much to his credit that he kept the orchestra properly subdued to allow the appropriate interplay between the soloist and the ensemble. To add to the festive quality of the opening, there were Honored Guests, envoys representing countries visited by the orchestra during its recent tour of Great Britain and the European Continent. The boxes were draped with flags of these countries, and green garlands

MISSIONARY SPIRIT

Dmitri Mitropoulos Wanted To Teach

By BRUNO USSHER
Theater Arts Columnist

It is high time someone wrote a biography of Dmitri Mitropoulos, the Greek-born conductor who began his sixth season as musical director of the New York Philharmonic Symphony a fortnight ago. Actually his contribution to music in this country dates back to 1936 when he made his American debut as guest conductor of the Boston Symphony at the invitation of the late Serge Koussevitzky.

That, in itself, would make a chapter in a book about Mitropoulos who will celebrate his 60th birthday quietly next Feb. 18, if he has his way.

Koussevitzky, the conductor, happened also to be the publisher of Prokofieff's third piano concerto. It was in 1934 that Mitropoulos programmed that work as guest-director of the Berlin Philharmonic. When on the evening of the concert the soloist fell ill, Mitropoulos on the spur of the moment played the difficult solo part himself while conducting.

How well he can do it has since been discovered by radio audiences of the New York Philharmonic. (There are requests for a repetition at one of the Sunday broadcasts.) As a result of the sensational double success in Berlin, Mitropoulos toured Europe as Prokofieff-playing pianist - conductor. It pleased the Russian composer but it also upset his plans for solo appearances in a work that he had fashioned to display his own tremendous technique. As a result Prokofieff wrote a fourth concerto and informed Publisher Koussevitzky accordingly. The Boston director in due time brought Mitropoulos to Boston.

That engagement led to the directorship of the Minneapolis Symphony. Then, in 1945 the New York Philharmonic beckoned. They still talk in Minneapolis about his musicianship and his humanity. There was his refusal to accept a salary increase unless (during depression years) the salaries of the orchestra members were raised correspondingly. There, too, was his insistence on travelling day coach instead of pullman while the orchestra rode "sitting up."

This is typical of the man Mitropoulos and it is the human being in him as well as his concert and broadcast

DMITRI MITROPOULOS

Musician Is Marked By His Understanding

policies which should occupy a biographer.

In his wallet, Mitropoulos carries two quotations. Both have influenced his life, he has told close friends. One is by the Greek philosopher, Socrates (an Athenian like the maestro): "If I must choose between doing an injustice and being unjustly treated, I will choose the latter." The other is from St. Francis: "God grant that I may seek rather to comfort than to be comforted, to understand than to be understood, and to love than be loved."

It is the kind of credo for a man who spends much of his day quietly in a hotel-apartment high up from street noise but near Carnegie Hall so as to make walking possible. He works very hard. His day often begins at 5 in the morning, when, after a frugal breakfast, he immediately starts study of orchestral scores. He is apt, however, to break his long day with a siesta after lunch, a wholesome Mediterranean habit. His leisure hours are spent in reading the works of his favorite philosophers: Plato, Socrates, Nietzsche and Kierkegaard, and the Greek dramatists.

In his personal life Mitropoulos is a disciple of St. Francis. Friends of his explain his remarkable understanding of such moderns as Arnold Schoenberg and Alban Berg (whose opera "Wozzek" was one of many memorable broadcast subjects) on the basis of his sympathy for the mystic Kierkegaard.

Mitropoulos seems a unique combination of mind and emotion. His music-making is straightforward, impassioned and subtle, expressing the composer and himself. That explains his conducting without a baton, a method he finds suitable for intense direction.

"Let me explain why I do not use a baton," he told an acquaintance during his visit to California last May. "To me a baton gets in the way. I can respond to the music and express my feelings with my hands." (That also may be the pianist in him.) As for conducting from memory without a score. Mitropoulos explained: "That you can do if you are willing to pay the price. In effort it means one hour expanded to long hours of preparation, but after the effort you are in complete control of your people.

"I will give you an example. If I were a lion tamer, I would not enter a cage of lions reading a book entitled 'How to Tame Lions.' In the same way I would not enter a rehearsal unless completely prepared."

Whether informally dressed in a polo shirt, sweater and slacks, as an Alpinist (he still takes vacations in the Rockies to climb mountains) or in formal concert attire, Mitropoulos reminds a beholder often of a benign or deeply concerned Friar Lawrence from "Romeo and Juliet." (Shakespeare is one of his favorites.) As a matter of fact, in his early days he was torn between music and the priesthood. Although music won out, he has not lost the missionary spirit.

"I always wanted to be a teacher of some sort," he explains, "and I think music has not taken me too far away. I think my main talent is to be a missionary of something. I love it when I feel I have brought a composer and an audience closer together."

A champion broadcaster of moderns, Mitropoulos never neglects public wishes for the classics and romantics.

Mitropoulos asks his audiences to "participate." As he put it, "A concert is not a place to relax . . . you have to give your collaboration . . . a good audience listens hard. That does not come as easily as a football game or a musical comedy. But it is worth the effort, for real listeners will get much that is rewarding.

Mitropoulos has a large fan mail and he answers it meticulously. The "thank you" letters for modern novelties are not as numerous always as the worth of the music would suggest.

"The people who understand are not always in the majority," Mitropoulos comments philosophically. "But we have a duty to a minority in this musical democracy. So I would like to make an appeal to people on both sides of the fence of musical preferences . . . to listen with tolerance."

Mitropoulos, while not an avid gourmand except in music, enjoys good food. His culinary allusions to the enjoyment of music and fine cooking are apt: "As in music also in eating there are many things which some people favor and which others dislike. Basically, it comes down to this. Enjoyment of eating like listening, is a matter of sufficient experience. So the question about listening to music is: 'Are you allergic or are you stubborn?'"

KNOWS THE SCORE: Dmitri Mitropoulos, here conducting the New York Philharmonic Symphony, states he wouldn't enter a rehearsal unless "completely prepared."

Philharmonic Honors Vienna Opera

By HARRIETT JOHNSON

The New Vienna Opera House, which Dimitri Mitropoulos describes as "the most perfect stage that mankind has ever known," will open with Beethoven's "Fidelio" tomorrow night. In honor of the occasion, Mitropoulos began the Carnegie Hall concert of the Philharmonic-Symphony last night with the overture to the opera. He will repeat the work at Sunday afternoon's concert.

Unfortunately it was not too felicitous a performance and the evening generally, like the perverse weather, did not find the ensemble at its best.

Pietro Scarpini, Italian pianist, played the Mozart Concerto in E Flat Major, K. 482, with a dull muffled tone and with little sparkle for a composition which Irving Kolodin rightly described in his program notes as buoyant and affirmative from beginning to end.

The Philharmonic's accompaniment was also without inspiration and the brass section was especially unhappy.

Matters weren't helped any by the first local performance of Ben Weber's "Prelude and Passacaglia, Op. 42," a piece whose dissonant sound did not add pleasure to its barren ideas.

The program closed with the Strauss tone poem, "Also Sprach Zaratustra."

Our Philharmonic Orchestra and its eminent musical director are indeed unpredictable. The program they played last night in Carnegie Hall looked pretty bad on paper and I wondered whether they make their selections by composers' initials, tonalities, or by flipping a cymbal. But it was a fine concert and I was well entertained by an ensemble that was alert, precise, flexible and euphonious. And the two Weber pieces did not prove to be too much of the same kind. I must admit, though, that I did not hear the Casadesus concerto which may have lowered the batting average.

When listening to Carl Maria Weber's First Symphony, a modest yet engaging work, one is surprised to discover how in 1807 the north Germans were already traveling on a well marked path toward Romanticism, while in Vienna the classic symphony was just reaching its pinnacle in Beethoven's Fifth. The first movement is a pleasant hodge-podge of Italian opera that would have raised Haydn's blood pressure, but the second Andante is clearly the work of the man who was to compose the Wolf Glen scene in "Freischuetz." The last movement, witty and humorous, was for many years a great favorite with the public—a century and a quarter ago. I see no reason why our public should not enjoy an occasional performance of this happy-go-lucky symphony.

The same composer's "Konzertstueck," written eight years after the symphony, shows that Weber was nearing his real destination which was neither symphony nor concerto but opera. While a very grateful concerto, this work is dramatic program music arranged in scenes that virtually demand staging. Recitatives and marches illustrate the unfolding of a typical romantic story, and the soloist must be more than a pianist—he has to declaim the sentiments of the invisible protagonists.

Mr. Casadesus played with gusto and did full justice to the piece which is both capricious and delightfully naive. The orchestra was in perfect rapport with the soloist and Mr. Mitropoulos guided it with a sure hand. The balances were exceedingly delicate and the woodwinds and brass outdid themselves in fine intonation and wonderfully blended sonorities. Mr. Gombert, the first oboe, deserves a scroll, as does Mr. Polisi, the first bass

The two Weber pieces framed a score of entirely different qualities, and once more I was pleasantly disappointed. I was afraid that "Judith" being a choreographic poem, originally written for Martha Graham, may not come off as a symphonic piece, but Mr. Schuman's score nowhere shows what Dr. Johnson called "a loose sally of the mind." On the contrary, the composer seems to be engrossed in every step he takes, one feels his wits ticking incessantly, as a watch, receiving, selecting, interpreting. Nevertheless, the close precision of this impeccably made orchestral score does not in the least prevent feelings from gushing up, not to be prompted out.

Elegiac melodies wander from part to part, gathering momentum while the mournful brasses try to restrain them. Then the sardonic staccatos of the woodwinds chatter in tickling rhythms until the two elements get embroiled in a free for all that is as exciting as it is effective orchestral writing.

This is a strong score, a very personal one, and free of any and all clichés. It has a quality of fastidious complexity, a complexity which owes as much to conscious selection as to immediate impulse.

Mr. Mitropoulos and his men gave "Judith" all they had. With the exception of a few spots where the percussion was a mite out of step, everything was orderly, disciplined and alive. Especial praise is due for the rhythmic accuracy and vigor the conductor enforced, and for the beautifully unhurried unfolding of the long melodic lines.

Dimitri Mitropoulos and the Philharmonic - Symphony presented the first performance here of Mozart's Sinfonia Concertante (K. Anh. 104), a characteristic piece of special interest because of the opportunity given to three string soloists. Indeed, a solo work for violin, viola and 'cello is sufficiently uncommon to make the discovery of this work important. For this, William Lincer, violist of the Philharmonic-Symphony, may be justly proud. The work should become a welcome addition to orchestras throughout the land.

Pursuing his penchant for presenting operas in concert performance, Mr. Mitropoulos offered the third act of Wagner's "Götterdämmerung" to complete this concert. As conductor and orchestra warmed to their task, the richness and fullness of the music came into its own, though the impact was hardly overwhelming. Singing Brünnhilde, Astrid Varnay gave an authoritative performance, leaving no question of her command of the role. Lucine Amara, Raymond Vinay, Luben Vichey, and Clifford Harvuot were the other soloists.

At its most recent concert under Mitropoulos, the Philharmonic-Symphony gave a splendid account of Strauss's "Also Sprach Zarathustra." The performance of Mozart's Piano Concerto (K. 482), though interesting for itself, was less so in performance because of stylistic discrepancies on the part of both the conductor and Pietro Scarpini as soloist. Mr. Scarpini's fluent fingers and good taste did not sufficiently convey the classic spirit of the work.

NO ONE will ever pin a medal on Dimitri Mitropoulos for his program building. No one would have last night. For the Philharmonic-Symphony concert at Carnegie Hall he assembled trivialities and inoffensive meanderings seasoned by a helping of grimness. There were a few interesting minutes, but not enough for a whole evening. A concert isn't a place for boredom or penitence.

These observations are not made because Mr. Mitropoulos chose to direct two contemporary works. It is fine to have music of our time on Philharmonic programs, but in proportion and proper balance. William Schuman's choreographic poem, "Judith," was well worth doing, even though it does not set out to be endearing. When you do it, however, why include something like Robert Casadesus' E minor Piano Concerto, which is agreeably harmless but has little real substance?

Why do it when you have devoted so much time to a couple of pieces of Weber, which are not particularly substantial either? The trick ought to be to make a program so absorbing that even an audience not especially hospitable to unfamiliar music will put up with in good spirit because it has had value for its money.

Robert Casadesus

Mr. Mitropoulos led a forceful performance of Mr. Schuman's "Judith." This music was written as a sort of symphonic concerto with dancer; it was commissioned by the Louisville Philharmonic and the dancer was Martha Graham. Like so much of the composer's works, it builds with rhythmic power and generates great energy.

Mr. Schuman knows the resources of the symphony orchestra, and his aims are serious. The work has no program, but it could be that the choreography provided the music with another dimension. Alone, it is almost unrelieved in its grimness and intensity. There is an effective slow section in the middle that seems to unbend with a human touch, but it is not enough to make the work a piece one would wish to live with.

Mr. Casadesus gave a brilliant performance of Weber's 'Konzertstueck," and in the concluding virtuoso pages of this work the concert was actually fun. The French pianist also did the best that could be done for his concerto, and Mr. Mitropoulos and the orchestra gave him able support here. But, alas, Mr. Casadesus is a better pianist than composer. The concerto, though it has some atmosphere, is lightweight stuff.

So, for that matter, is Weber's Symphony No. 1. There is a dewy romanticism in the slow movement, and considerable verve in the last. But there must be better eighteenth and nineteenth-century works that deserve occasional performance.

The symphony has an ingratiating part for the first oboe, and Harold Gomberg played it neatly. He deserved the accolade of being singled out by Mr. Mitropoulos for a handshake. He might welll have been mentioned by name in the printed program.

Philharmonic Excels In Varied Program

By LOUIS BIANCOLLI.

The line running through the varied and contrasting program of the Philharmonic in Carnegie Hall last night was the excellence of the playing.

It was a rather unorthodox program—a weighty, modernistic score by William Schumann bracketed between two amiable numbers by Weber, and a piano concerto by Robert Casadesus with the composer doubling as soloist.

Through the diversity of mood and material, some good, some mediocre, some problematic, one bond held—the refreshing virtuosity of Mr. Casadesus, the orchestra, and conductor Dimitri Mitropoulos.

Highpoint of the evening, in performance, was Schumann's choreographic poem entitled "Judith," after the Biblical heroine, though composed and completed for Martha Graham without thought of subject or dramatic use.

This music is tough in every sense—tough to write, tough to play, tough to take. It is audacious in idiom, raucous and angular. At times, granitic and complex in texture, and in general a bit hard on the nervous system.

Mr. Schumann is to be applauded for the stamina to maintain such consistent novelty and complexity and the orchestra for surviving the ordeal without a collective outbreak of blisters and bruises.

Mr. Mitropoulos put all his power of intellect and musicianship into this difficult and problematic music, proclaiming himself once more the unrivaled champion of modern music.

Mr. Casadesus concerned himself with both Weber's "Konzertstueck" and his own E Minor Concerto, both equally brilliant in the playing, with the Weber a few leagues ahead of the concerto in other respects.

The Weber piano music is good fun—fast, breezy, spilling all over the keyboard; clean fun, too, in the neat and nimble thoroughness of Mr. Casadesus. He made even his own synthetic score sound good.

Weber's other listing was the C Major Symphony, the work of a 19-year-old genius bursting with ideas and not quite sure where best to place them.

Robert and Gaby joined hands—if you'll pardon the expression—in a harmonious merger over Mozart's two-piano Concerto in E-flat Major, and Jean, a handsome young fellow, took very good care of things in Saint-Saens' G Minor Concerto.

The reunion had the conductorial blessings of Dimitri Mitropoulos.

Philharmonic-Symphony:

Hail Weber's Work

By MILES KASTENDIECK

DIMITRI MITROPOULOS and the Philharmonic-Symphony offered a good concert at Carnegie Hall last night. One glance at the program would not have lured a large audience except out of curiosity. There was nothing at all familiar on the list, other than that Robert Casadesus was the piano soloist.

Dusting off Weber's First Symphony and airing his "Konzertstuck" made good listening. Playing Schuman's choreographic poem "Judith" and Casadesus' Third Piano Concerto, representing a jump of almost a century and a half, gave the audience the hard and soft side of contemporary music.

As the second half of the concert belonged to Casadesus, so the first half belonged to Mitropoulos. He gave the romantic elements of the Weber symphony due recognition with the orchestra cooperating nicely.

The "Judith" offered him full expression for his special way with modern scores. Its granitic character may not appeal to popular taste, but its intellectual fabric makes it a musicians' piece of more than passing consequence. Mitropoulos gave it a stunning performance—literally.

Casadesus played the "Konzertstuck" like the old warhorse that it is, a virtuoso piece brilliant enough to delight pianistic fancy. His own concerto flows glibly as a late conservative entry in the contemporary field. The pianist matched the fluency of his composition with a similar fluency in performance. It was accomplishment to respect in writing and to admire in execution, but hardly to excite.

The most gratifying aspect of the evening was the rapport between conductor and orchestra.

Philharmonic Plays at Carnegie Hall

SAINT-SAENS' rather old-fashioned G minor Piano Concerto came to exhilarating life at the Saturday evening concert of the Philharmonic-Symphony in Carnegie Hall under the direction of Dimitri Mitropoulos.

The soloist was young Jean Casadesus, who displayed the virtues we associate with Saint-Saens' style at its best. That is to say he was elegant, without attempting any great profundity in the rhapsodic first movement. His real triumph was the brilliant, scherzo-like middle movement. The music danced like quicksilver. The passage work rippled off the keyboard with no apparent effort and with most infectious zest and wit.

The finale was a more hectic but equally brilliant frolic for both pianist and orchestra with Mr. Mitropoulos supplying his share of the excitement and drive.

The "Dance of the Seven Veils" from Strauss' "Salome" was another sort of frolic for the orchestra. Its more garish colors and overtones of tragedy were an effective contrast to the Gallic Saint-Saens and finely suited to Mr. Mitropoulos' dramatic sense.

The first half of the program, including the First Symphony of Weber and William Schuman's choreographic poem, "Judith," was repeated from Thursday's concert. E. D.

Bachelor Conductor Strikes Decisive Blow for Women

Dimitri Mitropoulos, noted conductor, struck a decisive blow in the battle of the sexes when he stated yesterday that a woman can make bigger contributions to life than a man.

Pacing up and down in the library of Central High School prior to a rehearsal yesterday afternoon in preparation for a symphony concert in Lincoln auditorium tomorrow night, the world-famous musician started off the discussion with a remark that he had come alone. "Don't you know I'm a bachelor?" he asked.

He hastened to add that he has nothing against women; and that he has a higher regard for them than is generally given—though he doesn't place them on a pedestal; just regards them as human beings.

"There's a time for everything," he stated, "And I was too busy to get wed. And now I prize my freedom too much."

However, Mitropoulos believes that women can offer more to life because of her essentially feminine qualities of "tenderness and flexibility. It makes her more tolerant than a man; less rigid and more constructive," he declared.

"She can do anything a man can do," he went on. "Even conduct an orchestra. But it looks funny to see as we aren't used to it."

But in his definition of genius and his mention of persons of genius, there was one woman's name. Probably because he qualified his remarks that woman's mind is better—"when not kept down."

Genius he defined as the "creative mind that also brings something new—or an improvement of what we know so far."

As to the men of genius through the years, he mentioned Socrates as the forerunner of Christ; Christ; St. Francis, a realization of Christ; and two scientists, Pasteur and Curie.

As a tolerant man, he noted that there are many gradations of genius and that he places many more men on the list of musical geniuses than some persons would. He talked of the demonic genius of Wagner as compared to that of Mozart. There are good and evil geniuses, he went on. "Both are necessary, as evil exists to make good glorious, but it must be strong evil."

However, in giving his brief list of humanitarian geniuses, he stated that he had left out geniuses in the field of music or other arts.

"Lots of persons have lived and could live without knowing of Bach," he countered, "but not without the contributions of Socrates, Christ, Pasteur or Curie."

"I love people for what they are morally or mentally, not necessarily because of their talent, or genius as an entertainer."

This is Mitropoulos' fifth visit to Syracuse and he declared that he likes to come here because of his friendship and mutual appreciation he has with Prof. Louis Krasner of Syracuse University, who was formerly his concertmaster with the Minneapolis Symphony, and is now director of the [illegible] Chamber Music Ensemble.

TALKING IT OVER

'To Every Man, His Own Mountain To Climb,' Says Mitropoulis

By EMMA VAN WORMER

Dimitri Mitropoulis, musical director of the New York Philharmonic Symphony, carries two quotations in his wallet, quotations that have influenced his life. One is by the Greek philosopher Socrates, the other from St. Francis.

Athenian Socrates (Mitropoulis also is a native of Athens) said: "If I must choose between doing an injustice and being unjustly treated, I will choose the latter."

And from St. Francis: "God grant that I may seek rather to comfort than to be comforted, to understand than to be understood, and to love than to be loved."

Mitropoulis, who has done much mountain climbing, has been known to say: "To every man his own mountain to climb." Two things, music and ethics, occupy the mind of Mitropoulis. He says: "Life is a big clock. If one part is missing, nothing works. The man who cleans the streets, the man who plays the triangle, each should be proud of what he does. He is part of the glory, part of the functioning of the great clock."

On his arrival in Syracuse Friday for a series of engagements culminating in a free symphonic concert he will conduct Sunday night in Central High School, Maestro Mitropoulis will go to the home of Prof. and Mrs. Louis Krasner, 521 Scott Ave., where he will be a guest during his Syracuse visit. Friday night he will lecture on "The Spiritual Aspect of Living" in Hendricks Chapel on S.U. campus, an event arranged by the Syracuse Friends of Chamber Music, Mrs. T. Crouse Barnum president. A social hour, arranged by S.U. Pan Hellenic will follow in the Colonial Room of the Chapel.

—'NEW LOOK'—
Mitropoulis Has Players, Audience Under His Spell

Dimitri Mitropoulis, whose musical capacity apparently is unlimited, conducted a symphonic concert in Central High School last night for a capacity audience, with many seated on stage. The event was described as a "brand new look for the music potentialities of Syracuse" in the program. There was no admission.

The concert proved that an orchestra plays only as well as its conductor demands and since an outstanding music master was on the podium, it was possible to draw from Syracuse professional players and a number of students, generally excellent performance. It should be remembered that Mitropoulis is a dynamic personality, with players and audience alike under his spell. None is indifferent to him or to his music. That he has the strength and the will to carry all before him is evident.

The program was pleasant listening with Syracuse especially favored with a second performance of the Sinfonia Concertante in A Major of Mozart, a first performance having taken place a month ago by the New York Philharmonic Symphony under Mitropoulis. The soloists: Louis Krasner, (concertmaster), Analee Camp, principal cellist and Claude Bortel, principal violinist. The Second Concerto Grosso of Ernest Bloch, contemporary composer, a New York Critics Award winner, afforded considerable interest, particularly the Variations. (In these selections one noted a musical unfolding by players).

The gigantic musical forces which Beethoven unlooses in his several sy[illegible]dies were less in evidence in h[illegible] Second, chosen for last night's concert. Here was the lyrical [illegible]eethoven with graceful melodies and charming content. The hall rang out with applause following each selection, the Mozart soloist Krasner, Camp and Bortel returning to the stage with Maestro Mitropoulis to acknowledge deserved praise.

As for Director Mitropoulis, no symphonic program conductor in at least a quarter of a century of Syracuse music has won such acclaim. There was prolonged hand clapping, there were shouts and lastly, the audience stood in appreciation of the maestro's gift of his time, his effort, his knowledge and his understanding.

MAESTRO AND VIOLINIST. Dimitri Mitropoulis, left, conductor of the New York Philharmonic Symphony, and Louis Krasner, who heads the Krasner Chamber Music Ensemble. Mitropoulis comes to Syracuse Friday for rehearsals of a local symphony orchestra, a lecture forum Nov. 18 and a concert Nov. 20.

Mitropoulis is a Missionary In His Attitude Toward Music

By EMMA VAN WORMER

Dimitri Mitropoulis, music director of the New York Philharmonic-Symphony, in Syracuse for the week-end, is both persuasive and kind, in rehearsals with those who help him make music. This was evidenced in a rehearsal in Central High School yesterday with professional players and students, working on a concert program set for tomorrow night in the school hall.

Mitropoulis, known to Syracuse through several appearances on the podium, and as a generous supporter of Syracuse Friends of Chamber Music programs, conducts another rehearsal today. This noon he was a luncheon guest of Frederick W. Barker in the Century Club.

Following rehearsal today, Mitropoulis will hear teen-age Arthur Fennimore Jr., of Warners, play several numbers, including Bach, Scarlatti, Chopin and Debussy and one of his own (Arthur's) compositions. The young pianist is a pupil of Althea Allewelt Whiteside.

Controversial music under Mitropoulis has resulted in proper concert hall behavior, because, as Mitropoulis puts it, he expects his audiences to listen to these compositions with open minds. In Mitropoulis' words: "Through music, we want to say to the people, 'This is our capital. With a little effort and a little patience, it can be your capital, too'." (This controversial music includes the Violin Concerto of Alban Berg, performed with the New York Philharmonic with Syracusan Louis Krasner as soloist, Mitropoulis conducting.)

"A missionary of a religion" is the way Mitropoulis describes his consideration of an artist, adding: "His religion is his art, whatever art it is. In the case of a musical composition, that art is not alive until the performer revives it and transmits it to his audience." Mitropoulis avers that he loves his audiences, endeavoring to reach them through this "missionary attitude" in a human and understanding and spiritual way. When he feels that he does not succeed in that effort he is unhappy and distressed.

There is a price to pay for conducting from memory and without a score. "That you can do," the Maestro says, "if you are willing to play the price. In effort it means one hour expanded to long hours of preparation, but after the effort you are in complete control of your people." As an example, Mitropoulis points out that if he were a lion tamer he could not enter a cage of lions reading a book titled "How to Tame Lions." In the same way he would not enter a rehearsal not completely prepared Mitropoulis has given numbers of scholarships to needy students, he has bought many instruments for musicians who otherwise would be without them, and has commissioned works by struggling composers. In Syracuse the prospect of playing under Mitropoulis has heartened several students, 15 of whom will play in the 60-member orchestra tomorrow night. Among them are Martha Terrell of DeWitt, a Central High School senior who studies cello with Analee Camp; Louis Francini of Hammond, Ind., who says he gave his first program at the age of about three years. He has a full-tuition scholarship in Syracuse University, studying with Louis Krasner.

Another student player is Judith Sedarbaum, of Great Neck, L. I., a pupil of Murray Bernthal. Miss Sedarbaum began music studies on the piano, but at the age of eight started fiddle study and for 10 years has been practicing on strings. In the orchestra personnel are such widely known strings players as Violist Eugene Becker, only recently returned from U. S. Army service in Germany; Violist Claude Bortel; Cellists Analee Camp and Elizabeth Mann and violinists, with Louis Krasner, concertmaster, Adrienne Galimir (Mrs. Krasner), Myron Levee, Murray Bernthal, Carl Silfer, Ethel Freeman Black, Rose Bernthal, Harris Pine and Phyllis La Vine Levinson and Bass Strings players Rudy and Jacob Miller.

In Hendricks Chapel last night, Chancellor William Pierson Tolley of Syracuse University, introduced Maestro Mitropoulis at a Lecture-Forum on "Spiritual Aspects of Living." Dr. Edwin H. Cady of S.U. English department presided. Maestro Mitropoulis referred to the great teachers of the ages: Socrates, Christ and St. Francis of Assissi.

Reading from the New Testament, from the Parable of the Sower, Mitropoulis expressed the hope for a people who would serve their community the better for having sowed the seed of understanding and good will. Later he answered questions from the audience with brief comments on works chosen for tomorrow night. There was a social hour in Lounge and Colonial Room. The Sunday concert will include Beethoven, Bloch and Mozart compositions. Maestro Mitropoulis, Syracuse Friends of Chamber Music, with cooperation of a grant from the Music Recording Industry Trust Fund and Local 78, American Federation of Musicians, make the free concert possible. Mitropoulis, a bachelor, is a native of Athens, Greece. He has been in the States since 1936 and formerly conducted the Minneapolis Symphony. Louis Krasner was concertmaster there.

Mitropoulos Concert Hit At Lincoln

By WILLIAM FLEMING

The multiple ovations of an audience that jammed Lincoln Auditorium last evening over and beyond its capacity greeted the local appearance of Dimitri Mitropoulos, the distinguished director of the New York Philharmonic Symphony Society.

So great was the demand for the complimentary tickets that the stage was opened at the back to accommodate 300 more persons in the gymnasium space of Central High School. The orchestra was composed of Syracuse musicians with a sprinkling of guests from other communities. The concert was presented under the auspices of the Syracuse Friends of Chamber Music and made possible by the Trust Funds of the Recording Industries, obtained through the cooperation of Local 78 of the American Federation of Musicians.

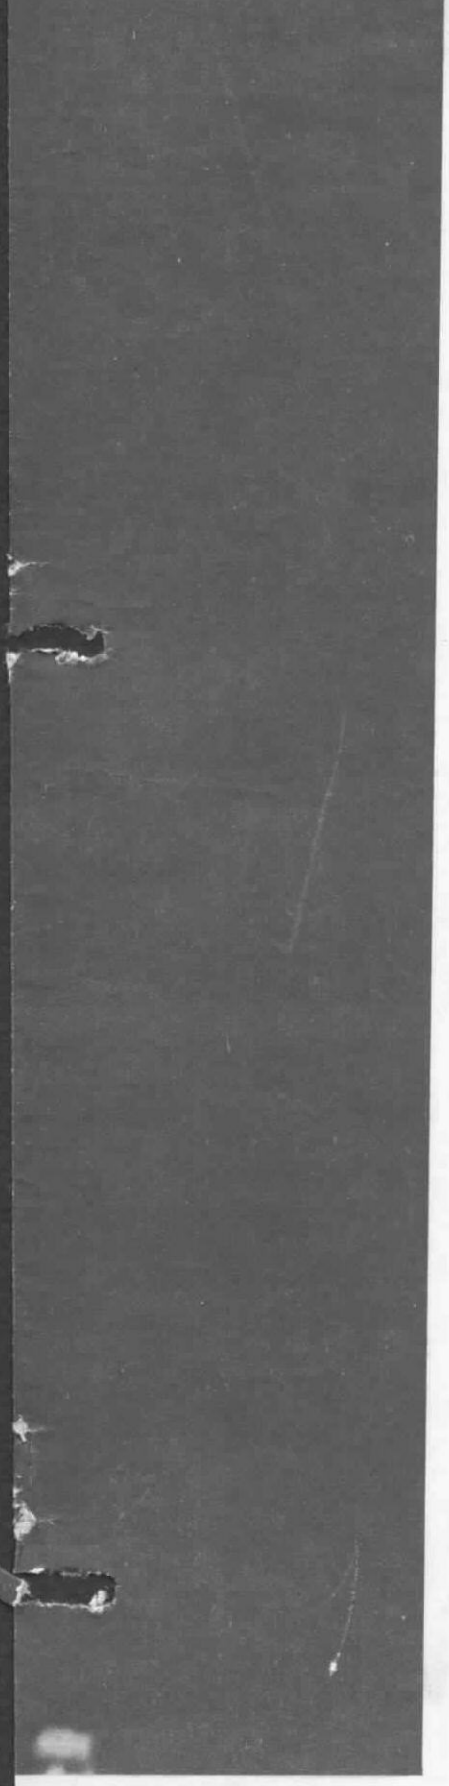
Classical Restraint

The Mozart Sinfonia Concertante in A Major opened the program on a note of classical restraint. Louis Krasner, violinist, Claude Bortel, violist, and Analee Camp, cellist, constituted the concerting group playing against the full orchestra. Each wove his part into the fabric with poise and feeling, and the whole tapestry was masterfully designed as a period piece by the eminent maestro.

Bloch's recently-composed Concerto Grosso No. 2 for string orchestra followed. This is a shapely work of noble proportions. Its modal melodies flow freely through the tonal space, yet find significant unity in Bloch's refined harmonic and contrapuntal sense. The antiphonal use of divided choirs, solo instruments against the aggregate, and the high versus the low registration provide a broad panorama of string color.

The Beethoven Second Symphony brought the concert to its climax and close. Mitropoulos' reading of this work brought out all its restless energy and impetus qualities. The surprise accents, syncopated rhythms and sudden shifts of dynamic intensity gave sharp definition to its formal contours.

Need Conductor



More than anything else this concert served to remind the more than 2,000 present and the community at large that Syracuse has the component parts of a symphony orchestra in its midst. The presence of Dimitri Mitropoulos, moreover, pointed out that what this potential orchestra needs above all is a great conductor. An orchestra, after all, is merely an instrument even though it is the greatest musical instrument ever devised. But as an instrument it needs a virtuoso player if it is to function at its maximum capacity.

Mitropoulos proved the catalytic chemical force who produced dynamic compounds out of the inert instrumental ingredients. His is the power to command an infinitude of different shades of meaning by attitude and gesture. Rhythmical nuances, abrupt shifts of accent and melodic shapes all seem to emanate from his angular body, then emerge in sound from the players themselves.

Remarkable Method

His method is all the more remarkable since his baton technique is so completely unorthodox. He rarely if ever gives a downbeat. Instead he etches the rhythms and melodies in the air so that they become a complex ballet of moving lines and forms. In addition he ignites the spirits of the players with his own electrical energy then unifies the animated instruments into one body.

Not the least remarkable fact is that it was all done with just two rehearsals and even then the whole group was never present all at one time. Prof. Krasner, of course, must be commended for the splendid and exacting preparatory work that went into the successful evening. The musicians themselves who played under the maestro and the community as a whole must be forever grateful to Dimitri Mitropoulos for revelation of this notable evening.

Πότε - πότε, βέβαια, τοῦ ἔρχεται ὁ πειρασμὸς νὰ καπνίση ἢ ν' ἀκούση ἕνα δικό του ἔργο. Ἀλλὰ ὑπερνικάει τὸν πειρασμὸ ζητώντας βοήθεια ἀπ' τὴν μικρὴ Παναγία ποὺ ἔχει πάντα μαζί του. Τὴν πῆρε ἀπὸ τὸ Ἅγιον Ὄρος, μαζὶ μ' ἕνα καλογερίστικο κομπολόϊ

Κάποτε, σὲ μιὰ μεγάλη συναυλία μὲ τὴ Φιλαρμονικὴ τῆς Νέας Ὑόρκης, τὴν ὥρα ἀκριβῶς ποὺ ἄρχιζε τὸ κοντσέρτο κι' ἐνῶ οἱ πρῶτες μελῳδίες τῆς ἑβδόμης Συμφωνίας τοῦ Μπετόβεν εἶχαν ἠχήσει, τὸ κοινὸ βλέπει κατάπληκτο τὸν μαέστρο νὰ κατεβαίνη ἀπ' τὴν ἕδρα του καὶ νὰ φεύγη στὰ παρασκήνια. Σκάνδαλο μέγα γιὰ τὸ «Κάρνεγκι χὼλ». Ὡστόσο σὲ λίγα λεπτὰ ὁ Μητρόπουλος ξαναβρέθηκε στὴ θέσι του, μὲ μιὰν ἔκφρασι στενοχωρημένη καὶ μ' ἕνα βιασμένο χαμόγελο σὰ νὰ ζητοῦσε συγγνώμην ἀπ' τὸ κοινό. Τί εἶχε γίνει; Ἁπλούστατα, ὅπως ἐξήγησε ὕστερα στοὺς δημοσιογράφους, εἶχε ξεχάσει τὸ ροζάριό του, ποὺ δὲν τὸ ἀποχωριζόταν ποτέ.

Μετὰ τὴν ἐπιστροφή του ἀπ' τὸ Ἅγιον Ὄρος, ὁ Μητρόπουλος ἀφωσιώθηκε χωρὶς καμμιὰ περίσπασι πιὰ στὴ μουσική. Τὸ 1919,σὲ ἡλικία 23 χρονῶν (γεννήθηκε ὡς γνωστὸν στὴν Ἀθήνα, στὶς 18 Φεβρουαρίου 1896) ἔγραψε μιὰ ὄπερα, τὴν «Ἀδελφὴ Βεατρίκη», πάνω σ' ἕνα ἔργο τοῦ Μέτερλιγκ, ποὺ παίχθηκε στὸ Ὠδεῖον Ἀθηνῶν Τὸν κύριο ρόλο τραγούδησε μιὰ νεαρὴ δραματικὴ σοπράνο, ποὺ λεγόταν Κατίνα Παξινοῦ...

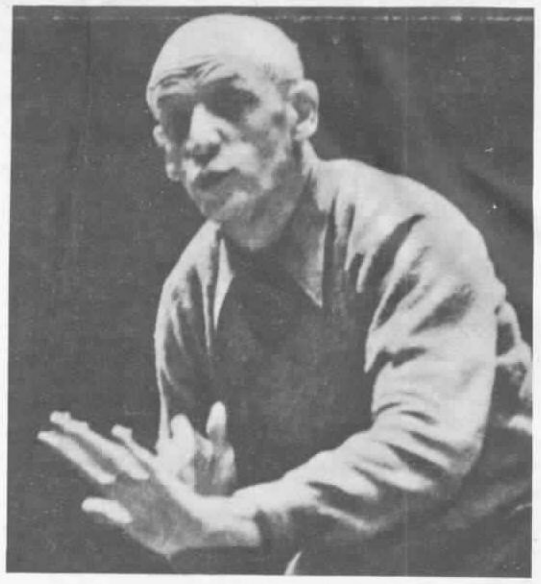
Ἀποφοιτώντας ἀπ' τὸ Ἐθνικὸ Ὠδεῖο μὲ χρυσοῦν μετάλλιον, φεύγει μὲ ὑποτροφία τῆς πόλεως τῶν Ἀθηνῶν γιὰ ἀνώτερες σπουδὲς στὶς Βρυξέλλες, κι' ἀπὸ κεῖ στὸ Βερολῖνο, ὅπου ὁ μεγάλος συνθέτης καὶ δάσκαλος Φερρούτσιο Μπουζόνι ἔπαιξε ἀποφασιστικὸ ρόλο στὴν ὅλη μουσικὴ ἐξέλιξι τοῦ νεαροῦ μαθητῆ του.

Γιὰ νὰ μπορέση νὰ ζήση στὸ Βερολῖνο, ἔκανε ὁποιαδήποτε δουλειὰ τοῦ τύχαινε, παίζοντας πιάνο σὲ θεατρικὲς παραστάσεις ἢ συνοδεύοντας διαφόρους σολίστες στὶς ἐμφανίσεις τους. Ὥσπου τὸ 1924 ἐκλήθη ν' ἀναλάβη τὴ διεύθυνσι τῆς Συμφωνικῆς Ὀρχήστρας τοῦ Ὠδείου Ἀθηνῶν.

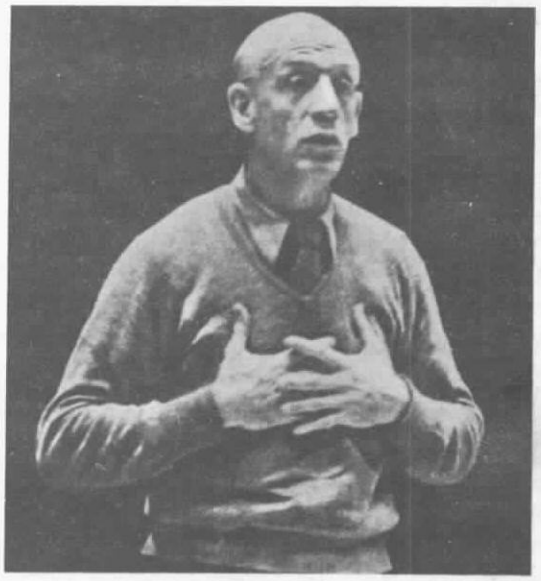
Ἡ διεθνὴς καρριέρα τοῦ Μητρόπουλου μποροῦμε νὰ ποῦμε ὅτι ἀρχίζει στὰ 1930, ὅταν καλεῖται νὰ διευθύνη τὴ Φιλαρμονικὴ τοῦ Βερολίνου. Τὸ πρόγραμμα περιλαμβάνει καὶ τὸ κοντσέρτο Νο 3 τοῦ Προκόφιεφ, μὲ σολίστα στὸ πιάνο τὸν Ἔγκον Πέτρι. Ἀλλὰ ὁ Πέτρι ἀρρωσταίνει καὶ ἀντικαταστάτης του εἶναι ἀδύνατο νὰ βρεθῆ. Τότε ὁ Μητρόπουλος προτείνει νὰ κάμη διπλὸ ντεμποῦτο, ὡς διευθυντὴς ὀρχήστρας καὶ πιανίστας μαζί. Ἦταν ἕνα ἐπικίνδυνο πείραμα, ποὺ μποροῦσε νὰ τοῦ στοιχίση ὅλη τὴ σταδιοδρομία του. Ἄλλο τόσο ὅμως μποροῦσε νὰ συντελέση καὶ στὴν ἀστραπιαία ἐπιβολή του. Κι' αὐτὸ ἔγινε. Ἡ ἐπιτυχία του ἦταν θριαμβευτική. Κι' ἐπαναλήφθηκε στὴ Γαλλία, Βέλγιο, Ἀγγλία, Ἰταλία, Ρωσία — χωρίς, σ' ὅλο αὐτὸ τὸ διάστημα, νὰ πάψη νὰ εἶναι διευθυντὴς τῆς Συμφωνικῆς Ὀρχήστρας Ἀθηνῶν.

Στὴν Ἀμερικὴ ὁ Προκόφιεφ ἦταν ἀκόμη τελείως ἄγνωστος, ὅπως ἄλλωστε καὶ ὁ Μητρόπουλος, ὅταν τὸ 1926 ὁ Κουτσεβίτσκυ τὸν κάλεσε νὰ διευθύνη τὴ Φιλαρμονικὴ τῆς Βοστώνης. Τὸ πρόγραμμα ἦταν λακωνικὸ χωρὶς τὶς στοιχειώδεις πληροφορίες. Τὸ κοινὸ δὲν ἤξερε τί νὰ ὑποθέση. Ἐπὶ πλέον ὁ ἄγνωστος μαέστρος ἄρχιζε νὰ διευθύνη, τὴ στιγμὴ ποὺ ἡ θέσι τοῦ σολίστα ἦταν ἀκόμη ἄδεια. Ὕστερα ἀπὸ λίγα λεπτὰ ὁ μαέστρος ἄφισε τὴ θέσι του καὶ κάθισε στὸ πιάνο. Κι' ὅταν στὸ τέλος ἡ αἴθουσα πλημμύρισε ἀπὸ φρενίτιδα χειροκροτημάτων, ὁ Μητρόπουλος εἶπε δυὸ λόγια ἀπὸ τὴ σκηνή:

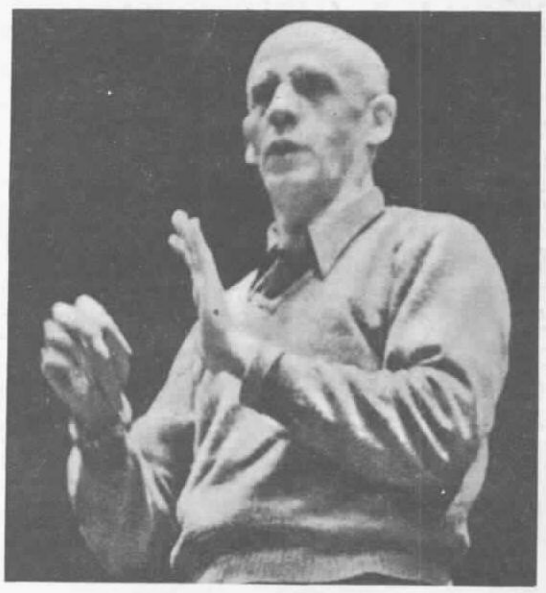
«Τὸ κοντσέρτο ποὺ ἀκούσατε ἦταν ἑνὸς Ρώσου. Ὀνομάζεται Προκόφιεφ».



Τὸ ὄνομα τοῦ ἄγνωστου συνθέτη κατέκτησε ἀπ' τὴν ἄλλη μέρα ὅλη τὴν Ἀμερική, ὅπως καὶ τὸ ὄνομα τοῦ Μητρόπουλου.



«Τώρα, εἶπε στὴν Ἀθήνα ὁ γέρος πατέρας του, μπορῶ νὰ πεθάνω ἥσυχος. Τὰ δυὸ παιδιά μου ἔχουν καθένα τὸ μαγαζάκι τους, καὶ τὸ τρίτο, ὁ Δημήτρης μου, πέτυχε στὴν Ἀμερική.



Τὸν ἑπόμενο χρόνο ὁ Μητρόπουλος ἐκλήθη νὰ διευθύνη τὴ συμφωνικὴ τῆς Μιννεαπόλεως. Νέος θρίαμβος. Καὶ καθὼς ὁ τακτικός της διευθυντὴς ὑπέγραψε συμβόλαιο μὲ τὴ Φιλαρμονικὴ τῆς Φιλαδελφείας, πρότειναν στὸν Μητρόπουλο νὰ τὸν ἀντικαταστήση. Δέχθηκε. Ἀποχαιρέτησε τὴν Ἑλλάδα καὶ τὴν Ἀθήνα. Ἦταν γραφτὸ νὰ μὴν τὴν ξαναϊδῆ, παρὰ ὕστερα ἀπὸ 18 χρόνια. Στὸ μεταξὺ ὁ «ἀδελφὸς Δημήτριος» ἔγινε μιὰ παγκόσμια μουσικὴ δόξα κι' ἀπ' τὸ 1951 ἀνέλαβε τὴν μουσικὴ διεύθυνσι τῆς Φιλαρμονικῆς Ὀρχήστρας τῆς Νέας Ὑόρκης.

Πρῶτος του πόθος, ὅταν πρὶν λίγες ἑβδομάδες ξαναγύρισε στὴν Ἀθήνα: νὰ ξαναϊδῆ τοὺς παλιούς του συντρόφους καὶ «νὰ φάη φασολάδα καὶ ἀρνὶ τῆς σούβλας»...

Τώρα ὁ Μητρόπουλος ξαναγύρισε στὴ δεύτερη πατρίδα, νὰ συνεχίση τὸν ἐπίπονο δρόμο του. Αὐτὸς ὁ μοναχικὸς μαθητὴς τοῦ Ἁγίου Φραγκίσκου, μοχθεῖ νὰ ὑπηρετήση τὸ πνεῦμα τῆς ἐποχῆς του καὶ νὰ καταστήση τὴ μουσικὴ μυσταγωγία, κοινὸ κτῆμα τῶν πολλῶν, καταθέτοντας στὴν φιλοδοξία του αὐτὴ ὅλη τὴ φλόγα τῆς ψυχῆς του, ὅλον τὸν μυστικισμὸ τῆς ἰδιοσυγκρασίας του, ὅλον τὸν πλοῦτο τῆς γυμνασμένης του μνήμης, κι' ὅλη τὴν ἀφοσίωση στὴν τέχνη του — μαζὶ φυσικά, μὲ τὸ μεγάλο μουσικό του τάλαντο.

Popularity No Clue to Merit

Mitropoulos Finds Genius 'Lucky'

Dimitri Mitropoulos, world famous conductor, last night defined the popularity and success of genius as "luck" for an audience in Hendricks Chapel at Syracuse University under the auspices of the Syracuse Friends of Chamber Music.

Mitropoulos said that the man who is considered a genius is a person who brings something new into the world that he could not have been capable of had it not been for the spadework of men who went before him. The genius is a "lucky person."

The conductor said that popularity did not necessarily mean that a man was an artist and a true contributor to mankind, and added that not infrequently popularity denoted mediocrity.

"You cannot judge the value of an artistic piece on how popular it is," the conductor said. "The weakest works of all composers are those which were intended for the masses. Beethoven's greatest works are not his symphonies, but his chamber music . . . his quartets."

"Far greater than being successful is simply being useful to mankind," the great conductor said. "Sometimes to become a famous man becomes a curse . . . success has more than once destroyed a man. You should gain as much equipment as possible to be useful to your neighbors."

Metropoulos smiled, and acknowledged sarcastically, "Yes, I am a famous man, then he advised with solemnity, "Be useful . . .. and if the ground upon which you sow your seeds renders you great . . . then feel humble and embarrassed for those who did not have the chance."

"I never thought that I would have a career . . . I was not an ambitious person," the conductor told his audience. "I was interested in religion and philosophy. If someone had told me I would have gone as far as I have I would have laughed in his face." Then Metropoulos quoted from the 13th Chapter of St. Matthew's gospel: "Behold the sower went forth to sow."

"I am the lucky one who was endowed with circumstances and luck," he said. "I am very embarrassed when I look at my neighbors and see that they have not what I have, and then I hate success for the importance that is placed upon it."

Overtones

Mitropoulos Continues Philharmonic Direction

By WILLIAM FLEMING

After his inspiring appearance with an orchestra of Syracuse musicians last Sunday, Dimitri Mitropoulos entrained for New York where he was greeted with the welcome words that he will continue as musical director of the Philharmonic Society during 1956-57 for a sixth season.

Sharing the podium with Mitropoulos will be the regular guest conductors of past seasons — Bruno Walter, Guido Cantelli, Leonard Bernstein, and Andre Kostelanetz. George Szell, conductor of the Cleveland Orchestra, has previously been among the regular guests, but next season he will be fulfilling European engagements. In his place there will be two new faces in guest spots. One is Max Rudolf, artistic director and assistant manager of the Metropolitan Opera. Hitherto heard only as an opera conductor, he will invade the symphonic battlefield next year. The other is Paul Paray, the noted French conductor and musical director of the Detroit Symphony, who was heard last season in Syracuse.

William Fleming

Maestro Mitropoulos spent a weekend in Syracuse crowded with luncheons, receptions, rehearsals, a press conference and a talk to a large group at the University. In his informal talks at these various meetings, Mitropoulos brought out many of the problems which beset an artist who tries to foster pure musical values in the face of the harsh economic facts of life.

EUROPEAN TOUR

His phenomenally successful five-week European tour this fall, for instance, made an enormous impression on his orchestra's personnel. After playing season after season to blase New York audiences, they were surprised and stimulated by their reverent and rapturous reception abroad. The cold gray dawn came, however, after they returned when it was found that there was an $85,000 deficit chargeable to the Philharmonic's budget, even though most of the expenses had been underwritten by the State Department's International Exchange program. Mitropoulos was genuinely convinced that such good will tours carried out by cultural emissaries accomplish far more in the long run than international conferences and activities through the usual diplomatic channels.

Mitropoulos is also acutely aware of the moral responsibility of a conductor to perform the music of significant contemporary composers. Here, however, idealism collides head-on with commercialism. When Tschaikowsky and Brahms are on the program, the financial chimes start ringing in the box office. When the works of Schoenberg and Piston are announced, there is fiscal silence. When modern pieces are played on the weekly New York series, many regular season subscribers threaten to cancel their subscriptions, a fact which terrifies the board of directors who have to meet the payroll of one million dollars annually.

When a modern work is listed for Sunday afternoon, there are groans from the Columbia Broadcasting System which carries the concerts on a sustaining basis. After every new work is played, Mitropoulos stated, stacks of adverse letters pour in. The pressure of subscribers thus is decisive as long as symphony societies operate on the principle that the customer is always right, and the leadership of the musical director is thus checked. Only a subsidized, non-profit set-up, he feels, can free music from this department store psychology.

In Europe where the radio is financed out of public funds, programming of a more daring experimental sort is possible. Mitropoulos cited the example of the Hamburg radio which recently presented Schoenberg's last and unfinished opera, "Moses and Aaron." A fee of $25,000 was paid to the composer's widow for the right, plus the expenses of herself and her daughter from Los Angeles to Germany so that they could attend the premiere.

The opera is so complex that it took five months of rehearsals to stage two performances. In the long run, Mitropoulos feels, this type of enterprise will educate the general public to a finer and more discriminating understanding. Here, however, where the hucksters of the market place are in control, there is concern only for the immediate response. The flaw of Hooper and Nielsen ratings is that they measure only the size of yesterday's audience, not those of the near and more distant future.

There is such a thing, Mitropoulos said, as being overly concerned with the current tastes of the common man. When it comes to matters of spirit and taste, he declared, all people are certainly not created equal. Many have a genuine antipathy to intellectual things, but others have both curiosity and interest. Hence it is necessary to educate and wait for understanding to develop.

These and other variations of the theme of music as an art versus music as a profitable industry were discussed at length during the busy weekend the maestro spent among Syracuse musicians.

Music

Triple-Header, And All Superb

By LOUIS BIANCOLLI.

High among the many fine things I heard and saw over the last few days were three performances—a ballet, an opera, a symphony concert.

The ballet was the Thanksgiving night performance at City Center of George Balanchine's rollicking masterpiece in cowboy idiom—"Western Symphony."

Maybe it was the holiday spirit, but this was just about as fresh and exhilirating a ballet performance as I have ever beheld.

In the Finale the company swirled through the bouncy folk themes as if under a giant spell of speed and brilliance.

Focus of this frenzied crescendo of motion was the breath-taking technic of Tanaquil Leclercq.

This was Balanchine ballet at its best.

Verdi and Mitropoulos.

My opera highlight was the return of "The Masked Ball" Saturday afternoon and with it the return to the Met podium of the dynamic and versatile Dimitri Mitropoulos.

The performance was again electrifying, bringing out the full beauty and power of this astonishing score—a stunning triumph for the winning team of Verdi and Mitropoulos.

The performance also marked the dramatic return of the beloved Negro contralto, Marian Anderson, to the role of Ulrica—once more an impressive and symbolic figure.

Excellent teamwork was also provided by Zinka Milanov, Roberta Peters, Jan Peerce and Robert Merrill. All rose nobly to the occasion.

Sparkling Collaboration.

On the symbolic shelf was yesterday's philharmonic concert led by Pierre Monteux and featuring Robert Casadesus as double-header soloist in Mozart's C Minor Concerto and d'Indy's symphony on a French mountain song.

The collaboration was tops all around—that between Mr. Casadesus and Mozart, that between Mr. Casadesus and d'Indy, and that between Mr. Monteux and everybody.

That K. 491 Concerto Mozart is a miracle of sound spun out of flawless form and infused with quiet passion. Mr. Casadesus was its eloquent spokesman yesterday.

Mr. Monteux gave all four composers listed—Beethoven, Mozart, Berlioz, d'Indy—the wisdom, warmth and wonder that keep this tireless artist of eighty young.

Opera by Verdi Offered at the Metropolitan

VERDI'S "Un Ballo in Maschera," one of last season's successful revivals, received its first performance of the current season yesterday afternoon at the Metropolitan Opera. The cast contained no newcomers except Giorgio Tozzi, who sang the subordinate role of Samuel.

A large audience waited amiably through the first act until the opera caught fire in the second. Up to that time the singing had been rather spotty. Coordination between stage and pit was less than perfect, and some of the singers sounded exceptionally nervous.

But at the opening of the second-act curtain, Zinka Milanov came forth to sing a sumptuous and vocally subtle Ma dall' arido stelo divulsa," and brought the house down. From that point the performance was of true Metropolitan caliber.

Jan Peerce rose to the occasion in his duet with Miss Milanov, the conspirators chuckled sardonically (what a stroke of inspiration is this closing quartet and chorus!), and Robert Merrill, as Renato, sang with utmost beauty of tone.

To Dimitri Mitropoulos went an equal share of the honors for this sudden focusing of resources. He conducted with feeling and splendid rhythm, pushing the music and the singers inexorably along.

Others in the cast were Marian Anderson (making her first appearance of the season) as Ulrica, Roberta Peters as Oscar, Calvin Marsh as Silvano, Norman Scott as Tom, James McCracken as a judge, and Charles Anthony as Amelia's servant. H. C. S.

Milanov Scores in 'Masked Ball'

"The Masked Ball," like many of Verdi's operas, is unrelieved gloom from beginning to end. An operatic "First-Lady," however, can make us eat the tragedy and beg for more. Such was the triumph of Zinka Milanov in Saturday afternoon's performance at the Metropolitan Opera, the first this season.

She has never sung with less effort, with a purer beauty or with more communicative ardor. The audience was genuinely and fervently enthusiastic and it is to her credit that she doesn't plant a claque through the house to whip up an exaggerated frenzy. She doesn't need it.

Dimitri Mitropoulos on the podium was another potent asset to the occasion. He extracted the dramatic implications from each note and the result was music-drama. He also suffused the score with an overall electricity which sustained interest even in the dreary portions. There were moments of uncertainty and lack of cohesion in the ensembles but these were minor faults.

Robert Merrill as Renato was outstanding. His sumptuous voice poured out effortlessly, and with beautiful quality, not only in "Eri Tu," but continuously. He also shows marked growth as an artist, both as actor and vocalist. Jan Peerce as Riccardo was his usual dependable self, and Roberta Peters did well as Oscar.

Marian Anderson was obviously very nervous in the role of the Fortune Teller, and did not do her best. One informed observer commented that she had sung much more impressively at the rehearsal two days previous.

Two more performances of "The Masked Ball" have been announced. Saturday night's will be a benefit for the Hebrew Orphan Home, with Herva Nelli as Amelia, and Sandra Warfield as Ulrica. Milanov and Anderson will return for the first Saturday matinee broadcast performance, Dec. 10.

Verdi's 'Ballo in Maschera' Performed at Metropolitan

By Francis D. Perkins

"BALLO IN MASCHERA"
METROPOLITAN OPERA HOUSE

Opera with music by Giuseppe Verdi, libretto by Antonio Somma; staged by Herbert Graf. Conductor, Dimitri Mitropoulos.

The cast:

Riccardo	Jan Peerce
Renato	Robert Merrill
Amelia	Zinka Milanov
Ulrica	Marian Anderson
Oscar	Roberta Peters
Silvano	Calvin Marsh
Samuel	Giorgio Tozzi
Tom	Norman Scott
A Judge	James McCracken
Amelia's Servant	Charles Anthony

Chorus master, Kurt Adler; choreography by Zachary Solov; sets by Mstislav Dobujinsky; costumes by Ladislas Czettel.

Verdi's "Un Ballo in Maschera" had its first performance of the season yesterday afternoon at the Metropolitan Opera House. Except for Giorgio Tozzi, who sang Samuel for the first time here, the members of the cast were already known in their roles to local audiences. The opera itself, after a considerable period of relative obscurity, has gained much in popularity here in recent years. The score has the quota of memorable tunes which one expects from Verdi; its descriptive and emotional resources rank it high among the works of the composer's middle years, and it has occasional foreshadowings of his later style.

With some debatable features, the libretto is not among the most exacting ones in the Metropolitan's repertory; its course is not unusually complicated. Verdi and his librettist transferred the scene from Sweden to Colonial Boston for political reasons; in 1940, the Metropolitan returned it to Sweden, with the sets that are now in use. Riccardo is no longer indentified as King Gustave III, and the current program gives no locale to the action, but in this case where it takes place is not important.

Under Mr. Mitropoulos' conductorship, the musical production is among the Mtropolitan's superior offerings. The pacing was judicious, neither drawn out nor hurried; vocal and instrumental balance and co-ordination were good, and the conductor and orchestra gave ample attention to fine points of dynamics and musical and expressive color.

The prevailing standard of singing and characterization was praiseworthy. Mme. Milanov was generally in her best vocie, particularly in top notes which had power and emotional force without prejudice to clarity, firmness and continuity of vocal line. Miss Anderson, in the role of her Metropolitan debut ten months ago, sang with musicianship and expressive conviction; her voice gained in power during the relatively brief span of this assignment. Miss Peters' singing was generally clear, bright and fluent, with an occasional slight touch of vocal hardness.

Peerce and Merrill

Both Mr. Peerce and Mr. Merrill conveyed the moods and emotions of Riccardo and Renato with taste and skill. Mr. Peerce's voice, after dispensing with a certain sense of effort in the first scene, had warmth and fluency; Mr. Merrill was in notable vocal form, particularly in "Eri tu." The pair of conspirators, Samuel and Tom, are seldom ro never separated on the stage, and it is hard to consider either's singing separately, but both voices were commendable; their mien was conspiratorial in the traditions of melodrama. Calvin Marsh fared well as Silvano. The stage direction was smooth running and effective.

At the Met:

2 Fine Offerings

By MILES KASTENDIECK

METROPOLITAN OPERA UPPED its current repertory two operas on Saturday. Verdi's "Masked Ball" brought Dimitri Mitropoulos back to the conductor's desk. Mozart's "Cosi Fan Tutte" offered the first opera in English. Both were well performed for capacity audiences which, incidentally, they should draw steadily.

Zinka Milanov and Jan Peerce made the story of Verdi's opera come alive. Both in action and in song they carried the performance handsomely. Robert Merrill sang richly, but his Renato appeared little concerned with what was going on around him. Giorgio Tozzi and Norman Scott as the conspirators, Roberta Peters as the page, and Marian Anderson as Ulrica sustained their customary level of performance.

True Quality

At first Mitropoulos made the music too clean-cut and even abrupt. When he allowed the orchestra to play more lyrically, the true quality of this score unfolded. There was no doubt of a dynamic, authoritative director in charge.

Η πνευματική και καλλιτεχνική ζωή του μηνός ΑΚΤΙΝΕΣ

ΔΗΜΗΤΡΗΣ ΜΗΤΡΟΠΟΥΛΟΣ

Το σύντομο πέρασμα του Δημήτρη Μητροπούλου από την ελληνική πρωτεύουσα δεν επρόσφερε μόνο μιάν πολύτιμη συμβολή στις καλλιτεχνικές εκδηλώσεις του «Φεστιβάλ Αθηνών», αλλ' έχάρισε συγχρόνως και μιά γενικώτερη πνευματική, καλλιτεχνική, άκόμα και έθνική χαρά και ίκανοποίηση. Διότι, έκτος από τις τρείς έξαιρετικές συναυλίες, που τις έμψύχωνε και διηύθυνε με την έμπνευση και την ίκανότητα της μουσικής του ίδιοφυΐας, έδωσε άκόμη την εύκαιρία σε όσους τον πλησίασαν και μίλησαν μαζί του να δούν από κοντά και να έκτιμήσουν τον έκλεκτό και πλούσιον έσωτερικό του κόσμο, έναν κόσμο γεμάτον από πνευματικότητα, από άνθρωπισμό και από έλληνικότητα.

Δέν ήταν τυχαίο το γεγονός ότι, πρίν να έκδηλωθή το μουσικό του ταλέντο, είχε δείξει ζωηρότατη κλίση προς την θρησκεία και την έκκλησία. Ήταν μιά έμφυτη, αύθόρμητη και δυνατή έκδήλωση των εύγενικών και άνωτέρων τάσεων της ψυχής του, που έμειναν πάντα μέσα της ζωντανές και γόνιμες. Γι' αύτό, ένώ από την μιά τον έφεραν στά άνώτερα σκαλοπάτια της τέχνης, κράτησαν από την άλλη ζωηρό και άκμαίο μέσα του το θρησκευτικό του αίσθημα.

Μιλώντας στούς δημοσιογράφους για την Μουσική, έτόνισε ίδιαίτερα τον μορφωτικό και πολιτιστικό προορισμό της. Και γι' αύτό άκριβώς, για να μπορέση ή Μουσική ν' άνταποκριθή στην κοινωνικήν άποστολή της, πρέπει, κατά τη γνώμη του, να παύση να είναι, με τα ύψηλά είσιτήρια, προνόμιο των πλουσίων, άλλα να γίνη άπόλυτα προσιτή και έλεύθερη στον λαό. «Πρέπει ό λαός — κατά την χαρακτηριστική του φράση — να μπορή έλεύθερα να χαίρεται τη μουσική, όπως έλεύθερα μπορεί να προσεύχεται στην έκκλησία»!

Και όσο για την έλληνικότητα της ψυχής του, που διάφορες φήμες την είχαν παρουσιάσει ώς έξασθενημένη και άτονη, όσοι τον έχουν άκούσει να έκφράζη τη χαρά και τη συγκίνησή του που ξανάβλεπε ύστερα από τόσα χρόνια την Πατρίδα του, να μιλά με τρυφερή στοργή «για τον τόπο μας» και να λέγη με χαρούμενη ίκανοποίηση ότι «ξαναβρίσκοντας την πατρίδα μου, ξαναβρήκα τα νειάτα μου», ένοιωσαν βαθύτατα ότι ούτε ή μακροχρόνια άπουσία ούτε ή συνεχής διαμονή μέσα σε ξένα και ίσχυρώς άφομοιωτικά περιβάλλοντα μπόρεσαν να νοθεύσουν και ν' άλλοιώσουν την έθνική του συνείδηση και ψυχή.

'Αλλά και όλα αύτά να μην ύπήρχαν, θά έφθανε και μιά μονάχα έκδήλωσή του, για να δείξη τον αύθόρμητο και γνήσιο πατριωτισμό του. Όταν ένας Κύπριος δημοσιογράφος του ζήτησε ένα άναμνηστικό αύτόγραφο, ό Δημήτρης Μητρόπουλος, άντι άπλως να βάλη στο χαρτί την ύπογραφή του, όπως γίνεται συνήθως, έγραψε πρόθυμα και άδίστακτα αύτά τα λόγια: «Πόσο θάθελα, άντι να έλθω έγώ στην 'Αθήνα, να έρχόταν ή Κύπρος στην άγκαλιά της 'Ελλάδος»!

ΟΙ ΕΛΛΗΝΙΚΟΙ ΧΟΡΟΙ ΤΟΥ ΣΚΑΛΚΩΤΑ

'Από τις έκλεκτές μουσικές συνθέσεις, που παρουσίασε ό Μητρόπουλος στις τρείς συναυλίες με την Φιλαρμονική 'Ορχήστρα της Νέας Υόρκης, την ίσχυρότερη έντύπωση και τη ζωηρότερη ίκανοποίηση έπροκάλεσε ή έκτέλεση των τεσσάρων έλληνικών χορών του Σκαλκώτα. Μαζί με την χαρούμενη διάθεση, την ζωντάνια και την όρμη που έδονούσαν και έσυγκλόνιζαν το ρυθμό και την μουσική των χορών αύτών, άναδινόταν συγχρόνως από αύτους μιά καθαρή και γνήσια έλληνική πνοή, που έφερνε και σκόρπιζε στην άτμόσφαιρα και στις ψυχές των άκροατών την μυρωδιά του έλληνικού ύπαίθρου και της έλληνικής ψυχής.

'Ο έκλεκτός Έλλην συνθέτης, που έχάθηκε δυστυχώς πρόωρα, άφίνοντας μικρό ποσοτικώς, άλλα έξαιρετικό ποιοτικώς έργο, και ό διάσημος Έλλην άρχμουσικός συνενώθηκαν σ' αύτη την έκτέλεση με έναν βαθύτατο ψυχικό συνταυτισμό — τον συνταυτισμό που έδημιουργούσε ή κοινη έλληνική ψυχή τους — και έπρόσφεραν μιάν άπό τις ώραιότερες και ίσχυρότερες καλλιτεχνικές άπολαύσεις. Και είναι έπιπλέον ένα ίδιαίτερο κατόρθωμα του Μητροπούλου το έκπληκτικό και άξιοθαύμαστο γεγονός ότι οί ξένοι μουσικοί της 'Ορχήστρας ένοιωσαν και άπέδωσαν με έξαιρετική κατανόηση και θέρμη όχι μόνο την μουσική, άλλα και το πνεύμα των γνησίως έλληνικών αύτών συνθέσεων.

[ΕΝΤΥΠΩΣΕΙΣ ΚΑΙ ΕΞΟΜΟΛΟΓΗΣΕΙΣ ΤΟΥ ΔΗΜΗΤΡΗ ΜΗΤΡΟΠΟΥΛΟΥ]

Μεγάλο καὶ μοναδικὸ καλλιτεχνικὸ καὶ κοινωνικὸ γεγονὸς στάθηκε ἡ παρουσία τοῦ Δημήτρη Μητρόπουλου στὴν Ἀθήνα ἀπὸ τὶς 30 Σεπτεμβρίου ὡς τὶς 2 Ὀκτωβρίου καὶ ἡ προσφορά του μὲ τὴ Φιλαρμονικὴ τῆς Ν. Ὑόρκης. Ἔδωσε πολλά, ἀλλὰ καὶ πῆρε πολλά: τὶς θαυμάσιες ἐκδηλώσεις ἑνὸς πλήθους ἀκροατῶν ποὺ ἀληθινὰ τὸν ἀποθέωσαν καὶ τὸν ἐτίμησαν ὅσο κανέναν ἄλλο ἐργάτη τοῦ πνεύματος ἢ τῆς τέχνης, δικό μας ἢ ξένον. Τώρα, ὁ Μητρόπουλος βρίσκεται πάλι πολὺ μακρυά. Μὰ δὲν ξεχνάει, δὲν μπορεῖ νὰ ξεχάσει τὶς τρεῖς ἡμέρες ποὺ ἔζησε στὴν Ἀθήνα. Στὸ κείμενο ποὺ ἀκολουθεῖ ἔχουμε τὴν ἀπάντησή του στὴν παράκλησή μας νὰ δώσει τὶς ἐντυπώσεις του ἀπὸ τὶς ἡμέρες αὐτὲς ποὺ «εἶταν μιὰ γιορτὴ τοῦ καλοῦ καὶ τοῦ ὡραίου». Κι ὅπως θὰ δεῖ ὁ ἀναγνώστης, εἶναι ἕνα κείμενο ὄχι τυπικό, ὄχι ἕνα εὐχαριστήριο κείμενο, ἀλλὰ μιὰ σελίδα ποὺ κλείνει βασικὲς πεποιθήσεις τοῦ Μητρόπουλου καὶ κρυφοὺς καημούς του.

Η "ΝΕΑ ΕΣΤΙΑ,,

Δὲν ὑπάρχει ἀμφιβολία πὼς ἡ ἐπίσκεψή μου στὴν Ἀθήνα εἶταν γιὰ μένα σὰν μιὰ θεϊκὴ εὐλογία ποὺ ποτέ μου δὲν φαντάσθηκα πὼς θὰ τὴ ζήσω, οὔτε πὼς εἶμαι πραγματικὰ ἀντάξιος.

Ἕνα πρᾶγμα εἶναι σίγουρο, πὼς καὶ ἐγὼ καὶ οἱ φίλοι μου, θαυμασταί μου, συμπατριῶτες μου, βάλαμε σὲ ἀμοιβαία ἐπίδειξη, ὅ,τι καλλίτερο ἔχουμε μέσα μας, καὶ αὐτὲς οἱ τρεῖς ἡμέρες εἶταν μιὰ γιορτὴ τοῦ καλοῦ καὶ τοῦ ὡραίου. Ὕστερα ἀπὸ 16 ὁλόκληρα χρόνια, τί ἀνέλπιστη χαρὰ καὶ εὐτυχία, νὰ ξαναγυρίσω στὸν τόπο μου, στοὺς φίλους, στοὺς συμπατριῶτες μου!! Καὶ μαζὶ μ' αὐτὸ νὰ γυρίσω πίσω, μὲ μιὰ τέτοια πανοπλία, τί πιὸ τέλεια, μὲ τὴν Ὀρχήστρα τὴ Συμφωνικὴ τῆς Νέας Ὑόρκης! Ἡ Γενναιόδωρη μοῖρα μου μοῦ παρεχώρησε σὰν μιὰ Βασιλικὴ κορώνα ἕνα τέτοιο καλλιτεχνικὸ σύνολο καὶ μοῦδωσε ἔτσι τὴν εὐκαιρία νὰ δείξω στοὺς φίλους μου, στὸν τόπο μου, στοὺς συμπατριῶτες τὸ λόγο ποὺ μὲ ἀνάγκασε νὰ τοὺς ἀπαρνηθῶ καὶ νὰ ζῶ στὴν ξενητειά.

ΔΗΜΗΤΡΗΣ ΜΗΤΡΟΠΟΥΛΟΣ

Εἶναι ἀληθινὸ δυστύχημα ποὺ ἡ Τέχνη, ἰδίως ἡ Μουσικὴ καὶ ἰδίως ἡ δουλειὰ ἡ δική μου, δὲν γνωρίζει φτώχια! Ἔτσι, παρ' ὅλη τὴν πρόοδο τῆς ἀνθρωπότητας, οἱ Τέχνες ἔμειναν πάντα προνόμιο τῶν πλουσίων! Ἐν τούτοις οἱ Καλὲς Τέχνες εἶναι σὰ μιὰ θρησκεία, ἴσως ἡ πιὸ ἀγαπητὴ στὸ Θεό, καὶ δὲ θὰ πρέπη νὰ εἶναι μόνο προνόμιο τῶν ὀλίγων, τῶν ἐκλεκτῶν, τῶν πλουσίων! Κατὰ τὴ Διαθήκη, δὲν ὑπάρχει γι' αὐτοὺς θέση στὸν Παράδεισο, γι' αὐτοὺς ὁ Παράδεισος εἶναι ἐδῶ κάτω, καὶ ἔτσι φυσικὰ τὸν χαίρονται ὅσο μποροῦνε σ' αὐτὴ τὴ ζωή. Εἶναι στὸ χέρι μας, νὰ δημιουργήσουμε σ' αὐτὸν τὸν κόσμο τὸν Παράδεισό μας καὶ ἐν τούτοις κάνουμε ὅτι μποροῦμε γιὰ νὰ τὸν μετατρέψουμε σὲ Κόλαση. Πῶς θἄθελα νὰ ἔδινα συναυλίες δωρεὰν στὸν κόσμο, στὸν τόπο μου, μὲ ἕνα σύνολο σὰν αὐτὸ ποὺ διαθέτω. Μὰ πίσω ἀπὸ αὐτὴ τὴν ὁμορφη τελειότητα, ἀγρυπνᾶ ὁ Μεγάλος καὶ τρομερὸς Δράκος μυριάδων δολλαρίων, καὶ ἀμφιβάλλω πολὺ ἂν, παρὰ αὐτὴ τὴν τόσο ἄμεμπτη θρησκευτικὴ ἔκφραση, ὁ Ἅγιος Πέτρος θὰ μᾶς ἄνοιγε τὴν Πόρτα τοῦ Παραδείσου.

Τί κρῖμα, τί χίλιες φορὲς κρῖμα!

ΔΗΜΗΤΡΗΣ ΜΗΤΡΟΠΟΥΛΟΣ

Εἶναι κρῖμα εἶναι σίγουρο, αὐτὸ καὶ ἐγὼ καὶ οἱ φίλοι μου, θαυμαστοί μου, συμπατριῶτες μου βάλαμε σὲ ἀμοιβαία ἐπίδειξη, ὅ,τι καλλίτερο ἔχουμε μέσα μας καὶ αὐτὲς ἡ τρεῖς ἡμέρες εἶταν μιὰ γιορτὴ τοῦ καλοῦ καὶ τοῦ ὡραίου.

ΑΥΤΟΓΡΑΦΟ ΤΟΥ ΜΗΤΡΟΠΟΥΛΟΥ

Schweizerische Musik-Zeitung
№ 11 - Nov. 1955

Dem Orchester der «Philharmonic Symphony Society of New York», das am 23. September im Rahmen der Klubhauskonzerte unter der Leitung von Dimitri Mitropoulos gastierte, verdankt man ein best virtuosen Orchesterspiel, wie es eines in Zürich noch kaum erlebt hat. Der geradezu überwältigende Eindruck ergab sich nicht allein aus der bei uns in solch absoluter Zuverlässigkeit unbekannten Präzision des Zusammenspiels innerhalb und zwischen den einzelnen, vollkommen homogenisierten Klanggruppen, sondern in fast noch höherem Maße aus der die «unerhörten» Klangwirkungen entscheidend fördernden Reinheit der Intonation. Am auffälligsten trat diese bei den «französisch» hell und schlank intonierenden Blechbläsern hervor, deren präziser Tonansatz ebenso bewunderungswürdig ist wie die unüberbietbare Kunst der dynamischen Gradierung, die vom zartesten Pianissimo bis zum strahlend klaren Fortissimo reicht. Das Orchester vermittelte das Erlebnis eines erstaunlich differenzierten Musizierens, bei dem die aufs höchste entwickelten virtuosen Orchesterqualitäten in den Dienst intensivst-terminologischen Ausdrucks gestellt sind. Dimitri Mitropoulos gab sich als ein von Musik Besessener zu erkennen, der die scharfen geistigen und seelischen Spannungen, die sein künstlerisches Wesen bestimmen, mit einer Konzentration ohnegleichen auf das Orchester übertragt. Sein Wesen spannt sich zwischen einem feurigen und einem kalten Pol. Je sparsamer die Geste, desto stärker die innere Spannung. Präzision und Virtuosität sind die selbstverständliche Voraussetzung, nicht das Endziel seines Musizierens, das aus der Fülle einer reichen, sensibilität mit vitaler Kraft vereinigenden Natur schöpft.

Mitropoulos' entschiedenes Eintreten für zeitgenössische Musik bestimmte auch das merkwürdige Gastspielprogramm. So erfreulich ein unkonventionelles Programm ist, so sehr bedauerte man doch, auf die Auseinandersetzung von Dirigent und Orchester mit einem (Vergleiche der Wiedergabe erlaubenden) Meisterwerk verzichten zu müssen. Darius Milhauds klanggesättigte Orchestrierung von Couperins «La Sultane» erfüllte ihre Aufgabe: die Klanggruppen des Orchesters wirkungsvoll zu präsentieren, ausgezeichnet, aber nach diesem unverbindlichen Eingang hätte man Gehaltvolleres erwarten dürfen als die mit Orchestereffekten überladene, an musikalischem Gehalt aber um so dürftigere «Show Piece» des 1914 geborenen Amerikaners Morton Gould, der mit seinen vom Jazz und amerikanischen Songs genährten «American Symphonettes» und verwandten Stücken «gehobene Unterhaltungsmusik» typisch amerikanischer Art produziert. Mit Gewinn hörte man dagegen die Vier griechischen Tänze von Nikos Skalkottas. Sie können zwar kaum als charakteristische Proben der differenzierten und komplexen Kunst dieses hochbegabten, 1949 gestorbenen ehemaligen Schönberg-Schülers gelten, dürfen im Hinblick auf die außerordentliche Klangplastik und tänzerische Vitalität und die glückliche Verbindung moderner harmonischer, polyrhythmischer und klanglicher Elemente mit streng thematisch verarbeiteter Volkstanzmelodik ein überraschender Anklang an Griegs Peer Gynt Musik im «Pleftikos» ist schon bei der Erstaufführung von der Kritik bemerkt worden – aber den besten Werken dieser Art, wie etwa Bartoks und Kodalys Orchestertänzen, an die Seite gestellt werden.

Überraschen mochte, daß die Amerikaner ausgerechnet mit Dimitri Schostakowitschs Zehnter Sinfonie, op. 93 (1953), nach Europa kamen. Man muß allerdings wissen, daß Mitropoulos das Werk mit dem New Yorker Orchester zur westlichen Erstaufführung gebracht hat, daß es mit dem Preis des «New York Critic Circle» ausgezeichnet wurde und als ein tragisches bedeutendes Beispiel «verständlicher zeitgenössischer Musik» gerade auch in Amerika starke Resonanz gefunden hat. Die 10. Sinfonie hat, wie die meisten neueren Werke des Komponisten, in Moskau Anlaß zu breitesten Diskussionen gegeben, die sich allerdings vornehmlich um die Frage drehten, ob man es mit einem «realistischen» oder einem «formalistischen» Werk zu tun habe. Mit der paradoxen Formel «Optimistische Tragödie» glaubte man es für die sowjetische Musikästhetik retten zu können. Die viersätzige Sinfonie ist ein von Melancholie überschattetes Opus, woran auch die aus der langen und trüben Andante-Einleitung etwas gewaltsam hervorbrechende Lustigkeit des Rondo-Finalallegros nichts zu ändern vermag. In der Harmonik im wesentlichen (trotz gewissen mixturartigen Klangen und Schärfungen) konventionell, im Rhythmischen auffallend monoton, ist die 50 Minuten spielende e-moll-Sinfonie ausgezeichnet durch reiche motivische, kontrapunktische und klangliche Verarbeitung wenig origineller Themen. Die etwas brutale Kunst, mit der die von solistischen Bläsern beherrschten Partien immer wieder mit gewaltigen Tuttiausbrüchen und rasanten Steigerungen konfrontiert werden, muß den Hörer beeindrucken. Sinfonischer Atem ist der Zehnten ebenso eigen wie den früheren sinfonischen Werken Schostakowitschs. Es ist kaum abwegig zu vermuten, es liege ihr ein verschwiegenes Programm zugrunde. Mehr noch als die offenkundigen motivischen Zusammenhänge (dreitöniges Kernmotiv) und direkte Zitate (Hauptthema des 1. Satzes im 3. Satz) deutet die Art der musikalischen Entwicklungen und die ganze innere Stimmung des Werkes darauf hin. Die imponierende Wiedergabe trug den Gefühlskräften, die den weiträumigen Bau der Sinfonie bestimmen, auf packende Weise Rechnung. Gewisse dynamische Übersteigerungen im Marschsatz und im Finale sind sowohl dem Werk selbst als der die Raumakustik etwas zu wenig berücksichtigenden Aufführung zur Last zu legen.

THEATER, FILM, MUSIK

Metropolitan Opera

Verjüngter Verdi — unsterblicher Mozart

Von ROBERT PIRK

Die erste Aufführung von Verdis "Ballo in Maschera" in dieser Spielzeit als Samstags-Matinee, wies denkbar beste Besetzung auf. Zinka Milanov als Amelia, Wahrsagerin Ulrika: Marian Anderson, Robert Merrill, Jan Peerce, die Ohr wie Aug' bestechende Roberta Peters. Ein bunter Kranz schönster Stimmen, in üppiger Entfaltung vor dem Hintergrund immer noch faszinierender Musik.

Und dann geschieht des Wunder: der Blick wird radarartig von der Bühne abgelenkt und bleibt im Orchesterraum an der hochragenden Silhouette des (unentwegt stehenden?) Dirigenten hängen, als ob dort eine magnetische Kraftanlage eingebaut wäre: Dimitri Mitropoulos, dem vom ersten Pizzicato der Ouvertüre an der Abend gehört. Ist das derselbe "Maskenball", bei dem unsere Großeltern sanft die Köpfe mitwiegten und hie und da eine Träne wegwischten? Der alte Staub wirbelte nur so auf unter seinem Taktstöckchen; Trompeter und Posaunisten, die seit 20 Jahren unbeachtet ihre Noten herunterbliesen, schreckten plötzlich auf, wenn Mitropoulos wie ein strafender Gott seinen Pfeil auf sie richtete und sie für einen Takt zu Solisten wider Willen werden ließ. Sie wußten sicherlich kaum, wie ihnen geschah, aber es geschah ihnen und es war den angespannt lauschen Hörern — recht.

Finale im Prestissimo

Tempi, seit Jahren verschlafen und verschlampt, hatten plötzlich leidenschaftlichen Schwung und trotz gewisser anfänglicher Widerstände — das Trägheitsgesetz läßt sich nicht gleich außer Kraft setzen und die Macht der Gewohnheit besteht auf ihrer Diktatur — tanzten Bühne und Orchester am Ende nach der Pfeife des Hexenmeisters. Der jauchzende Aufbruch Riccardos und seines Hofes zum Schlupfwinkel der berüchtigten Wahrsagerin, war nun in der Tat ein alle mitreißendes Abenteuer.

Der furiose Dirigent trieb jedermann zur äußersten Eile an, als ging's nicht zu einem Spaß, sondern auf Leben und Tod (um die sich's "letzten" opernhaften Endes in der Tat immer dreht) und trotz aller Beängstigungen, die unter dieser erbarmungslos anfeuernden Peitsche sämtliche Beteiligten befielen, auch die kaum mehr in ihren Sperrsitzen zu haltenden Zuhörer, kamen alle heil und unbeschädigt davon und der Vorhang fiel über einem alles besiegelnden buchstäblichen ersten "Finale".

Dieser neue "Maskenball 1955", den lauernden Leierkästen entrissen, entitalienisiert, ist ein zeitloses Kunstwerk, globale Sphärenmusik, Gemeingut des Kosmos. Und das alles trotz einem Opernbuch, das gelegentlich, gerade in den tragischsten Momenten einer Parodie gefährlich nahekommt und dann nur durch das gläubig-glaubhafte, überzeugt-überzeugende Genie eines Verdi, seine vitale Dramatik, seine unversiegliche Melodik gerettet werden kann.

Verdis genialer Schachzug

Im zweiten Akt jedoch, wo sich sämtliche Mitwirkende "wie auf Verabredung" unterm Galgen treffen und der gehörnte Ehemann (Renato) trotz romantisch-bleichen Mondscheins in der leichtverschleierten Begleiterin seines Freundes Riccardo die eigene Gemahlin nicht erkennt, würde die ganze musikantische Magie nicht mehr helfen; wenn nicht auf die Sekunde genau, in der der Zuschauer sich anschickt, laut herauszuplatzen, oben der sardonische Lachchor der Verschworenen einsetzte — einer der genialsten Schachzüge dieser Partitur.

Am besten schnitt unter den Bühnenfiguren stimmlich wie darstellerisch Robert Merrill ab; seine Leistung wäre auch ohne die italienischen "Schluchzer" ausgezeichnet. Erschütternd die Inbrunst und Ausdruckskraft der unvergleichlichen Marian Anderson; schade nur, daß dieser wundersam ästhetische Alt in den tieferen Regionen gelegentlich vom entfesselten Orchester überwältigt wurde. Zinka Milanov brachte mit ihren drei Arien das Haus dreimal zu (störendstem) "Toben", was sie ohrenscheinlich daran hinderte, ihre Soli je nach Stimmung und Stand der dramatischen Aktion entsprechend zu differenzieren. Verläßlich wie stets der Tenor Jan Peerce, was sich auch von Herbert Grafs Regie sagen ließe, wenn nur zuletzt Renato dem Riccardo nicht hätte von hinten nachlaufen müssen, um ihn — von vorn zu erstechen. Das Ganze aber bleibt ein Erlebnis, überglänzt vom Furor des Symphonikers der Oper: Mitropoulos, der ein "stehendes" Repertoirewerk zum modernen Musikdrama umschafft.

Verdi Opera Returning to Met

Giuseppe Verdi's "Un Ballo in Maschera," ("A Masked Ball") presented Saturday night at the Metropolitan Opera, brought with it two major cast changes in the persons of Herva Nelli and Sandra Warfield, who sang the roles of Amelia and Ulrica for the first time at the house. Others in the familiar cast, conducted by Dimitri Mitropoulos, included Jan Peerce as Riccardo, Robert Merrill as Renato, Roberta Peters as Oscar, Calvin Marsh as Silvano, Nicola Moscona as Sam and Lorenzo Alvary as Tom.

By all odds, Miss Nelli's portrayal was one of the finest she has given in her distinguished association with the company. Indeed, in every phrase her voice rang out with remarkable security and freedom, her tones emerging throughout with great precision and even greater clarity.

Color, too, was not foreign to her work, and in the air "Ma dall' arido stelo divulsa" the soprano contrived to alter her dynamic intensities with such assurance that the number was at once rewarding musically and charged with dramatic power. Similarly, her second-act love duet with Riccardo was thoroughly successful in projecting the sweep, passion and poetry of the text. It was, in sum, a vivid impersonation.

The same, however, cannot be said for Miss Warfield's Ulrica. The role, as Verdi designed it, is meant to turn the blood to water and the heart to ice, but Miss Warfield's sorceress was a rather bland, innocuous creature. In addition, her voice did not seem sufficiently large or luxurious to communicate properly the fatal sentiments and prophesies made known by the character. As a result, the second scene—the only one in which Ulrica appears—failed to create the essential atmosphere of black magic necessary to the plot.

MISS WARFIELD BOWS AS ULRICA AT 'MET'

Saturday night's "Un Ballo in Maschera" at the Metropolitan included the first appearance of Sandra Warfield, contralto, in the role of Ulrica.

Miss Warfield's debut in the part was a very promising one. The contralto's voice has not yet sufifcient weight and solidity to do full justice to the role, but she very sensibly refrained from forcing, and her singing of Ulrica's part, if light-textured, was very agreeable. Visually her portrayal of the role was effective.

Miss Warfield and her husband, the tenor James McCracken, on Saturday performed four roles between them. In the matinée "Les Contes d'Hoffmann" Miss Warfield sang the role of Antonia's Mother, while Mr. McCracken was heard as Nathaniel in the afternoon and the Judge in the evening.

Herva Nelli was the Amelia of "Un Ballo in Maschera" and proved to be in good voice. Others in the cast were Jan Peerce, Robert Merrill, Roberta Peters, Calvin Marsh, Nicola Moscona, Lorenzo Alvary and Charles Anthony.

Dimitri Mitropoulos conducted with energy and enthusiasm. The performance was for the benefit of the Hebrew National Orphan Home.

BOY SOPRANO AT 'MET'

Peter Mark, 15, Will Sing in 'Tosca' Benefit Tonight

Peter Mark, 15-year-old boy soprano from Brooklyn, will sing the role of the off-stage shepherd in tonight's performance of "Tosca" at the Metropolitan Opera House.

The performance will be for the benefit of the Metropolitan Opera Guild, with new staging by Dinno Yannopoulos and new scenery by Frederick Fox. Principal roles will be sung by Renata Tebaldi, Richard Tucker and Leonard Warren. Dimitri Mitropoulos will conduct.

Peter Mark has been a student of piano and violin at the preparatory division of the Juilliard School since 1948, and has studied singing at the Columbus Boys Choir School in Princeton. He has appeared in small roles in Metropolitan Opera productions of "Andrea Chénier" and "Boris Godunoff."

Met Shepherd

Peter Mark, 15, of Brooklyn, will share billing with Renata Tebaldi and Richard Tucker in tonight's "Tosca" production at the Met. In the original score, Puccini specified that a boy's voice be used for the music of the shepherd in the third act, so conductor Dimitri Mitropoulos hired one. Met sopranos have sung the part since 1941, when a youngster named Michael Kreatsoulas was hired for it.

Renata Tebaldi as Tosca

Last night's "Tosca" offered a cast such as few theaters can unite on one stage. If one adds to this the lure of a redesigned and completely refurbished production, with Mr. Mitropoulos in the pit, it was obvious that a gala performance was in the offering.

Frederick Fox, the designer of the sets and costumes, states in his artistic musings printed in the playbill that his and the stage director's ideas were derived from the score and "supported by research." I don't quite know what he means. It is hoped that designer and director find inspiration in the score, but that would still leave them free to create imaginative settings, while all the research in the world would be useless if the sets are not serviceable for operatic purposes.

The church scene in the first act was crowded and awkward. As the available space was beginning to be scarce, the later arrivals behaved exactly like the Met's own patrons who come late, making whole rows of spectators uncomfortable. This scene calls for a more open stage, with room for maneuver.

The second act was well staged and the set, though in the traditional operatic vein, acceptable save for the garish blue light that came through the window. Even the Mediterranean cannot produce such a shade. The third act I could not see because the performance started very late. Thus, the restaging was not an unqualified success.

Nothing but praise is due to the singers. Miss Tebaldi was in her glory. That she sings well is taken for granted, but she more and more confirms the opinion that she is neither a lyric nor a dramatic soprano; she is what the role demands. Those sudden shrieks are terrifying, all the more so because the sound remains unfailingly musical. Then again she drops back to a palpitating whisper or an ingratiating piano, and still every sound is absolutely within the realm of music. None of those naturalistic moans and groans, for Miss Tebaldi understands that in opera, expression depends on music and not on vocal realism.

On the other hand, she is a fine actress who does not resort to the standard operatic hocus-pocus; with a raised eyebrow or a van smile she can achieve startling results. In the second act, where she sits opposite Scarpia, transfixing him with a stare, one can feel murder in the air.

But Scarpia, too, rose to the occasion. Mr. Warren, who took a slow start, was magnificent in the second act. All his violence and malevolence was in his gestures and facial expression. He moved slowly, turned his head with disgusting calmness—and sang, always sang. Nor was his idea of Scarpia a bellowing monster, some of his finest singing was in the soft passages.

Mr. Tucker was in top form, even ready to successfully challenge Mr. Mitropoulos. Nothing could stop his fine voice and nothing could shake his security of intonation. Again, I must mention the beauty that a finely turned soft passage can evoke—all the principals of last night's cast not only know that but practice it.

Mr. Mitropoulos shook up the old Met orchestra, placing petards under the brasses, tightening the strings on the fiddles, cleaning out the bore of the woodwinds. The orchestra was in a frenzy, but it did some very delicate playing, too. On the whole, the performance was seething with dramatic force and the old thriller came to life not only because of the vivid interpretation, but because the gaunt and contorted figure of the conductor, exhorting, cajoling and coercing every one to suppreme effort, himself became one of the principal actors in the drama. I must say, though, that at times the singers were covered. A high soprano, even a tenor, can retaliate, but a baritone is helpless, especially if he does not intend to enter into competition.

This was an absorbing musical experience. If Mr. Mitropoulos relents a bit, and if they can improve the congestion in the first act, the Met will be able to chalk up a resounding success.

Music: Stunning 'Tosca'

By HOWARD TAUBMAN

THE Metropolitan Opera put on a stunning "Tosca" last night. The impedlimenta of routine were cast: aside, and the work was restudied under the direction of Dimitri Mitropoulos as though it were a new opera. The result was a performance with the explosive power of melodrama at its best.

It was precisely because Puccini's music was given its due that this production carried such impact. There were no wonders in the revised settings and staging. But there was a cast that could not be surpassed in any theatre today, and there was a conductor who had paid attention to the smallest detail but had not forgotten that the blood and thunder must come through in the music.

In such a company of performers Mr. Mitropoulos was the dominant figure, as the conductor should be. Not because he intruded his personality, but because he made the opera sing and surge with passion. The Metropolitan Opera orchestra played as it has seldom played before, and Puccini's every dramatic stroke made its point.

The singers were not overwhelmed, but when the sound had to be big, as it must at the end of the first act, it was overwhelming. Mr. Mitropoulos learned his business in the opera house as a repétiteur a long time ago. Today he is one of the finest opera conductors in these parts.

Renata Tebaldi was a Tosca in whom you could believe. She carried herself like the prima donna Tosca is and at the same time she had simplicity and tenderness, which most interpreters forget to convey. Her singing was nothing less than masterly, commanding in its power and searching in its sensitivity. And at the end of the second act she knew how to muster forth the fury and horror of the shocked avenger.

Richard Tucker, as good a lyric tenor as we have, sang Cavaradossi as though the part were written for his voice. His tones had quality and glowing color; his top notes rang out with rich resonance, and he sang with musical feeling. Mr. Tucker phrased with the assurance of a man who was aware that music and words contributed something to each other.

Completing the leading trio was Leonard Warren, singing his first Scarpia anywhere.

Leonard Warren as Scarpia last night at the "Met."

This was the American baritone's fortieth role, the statisticians said. It will be one of his greatest. In fact, it is not far from that now. He brought to it the smiling suavity and the courtliness that mask Scarpia's brutality. His acting was effective, but he relied even more on his singing to project the character.

One cannot remember an interpretation of Scarpia that achieved so much through the voice. Mr. Warren knows how to color his voice, and he can let it thunder forth. He used it at every moment as an expression of character. And he sang from beginning to end, which is a rare occurrence among Scarpias.

As usual, the Metropolitan's singing strength was manifested throughout the cast with Alessio De Paolis, Clifford Harvuot and Salvatore Baccaloni contributing credible characterizations as well.

Dino Yannopoulos staged "Tosca" with reasonable effectiveness. He surrounded Scarpia with too many ominous followers at times, and his first-act ending was too cluttered. For the latter fault he was not to blame; the set left him no alternative. But why must such things as Mr. Baccaloni's comic business be allowed to go on while Mr. Tucker is singing "Recondite armonia"?

Frederick Fox designed the new sets, and in the first act he was guilty of a failing that crops up too often at the Metropolitan. The forestage was so jammed that the action became difficult to manage. The second-act set was convincing. As for the third, a report will have to be made another time.

The Metropolitan Opera Guild stood sponsor to last night's performance, with the proceeds going to the production fund. The sold-out house applauded and shouted as though it felt it had received full value for the stepped-up ticket costs. This "Tosca" will pack the house every time.

Mitropoulos Conducts 'Tosca'

By LOUIS BIANCOLLI.

A combination of Metropolitan and Mitropoulos rebounded to the greater glory of Puccini and his operatic thriller "Tosca" last night.

The production—revised, refurnished and restudied—was one of the company's most exciting of recent years. For that, the credit goes largely to Dimitri Mitropoulos, one of the most versatile and dynamic conductors of our time.

Keynote of the performance was its astonishing unity and integrity, everybody and everything working towards a common goal of dramatic and musical cohesiveness. If there was any one star, it was Puccini.

Mr. Mitropoulos gave the score a new vividness and freshness, brought out new subtleties, and accented the crucial moments with arresting impact. "Tosca" was almost a new opera last night.

Mr. Bing put some of his company's best material at the maestro's disposal—the talents of Dino Yannopoulos, for instance, for brightening up the staging and streamlining the action.

It was a steadily plausible "Tosca" to watch, the themes of terror and intrigue and romance mounting inseparably with the music in the surrounding mood and atmosphere.

The second act, with its fantastic range of villainy and sacrifice and courage, was high-powered drama in the enactment, though, again, it was Mr. Mitropoulos's dynamism that raised it to fever-pitch suspense.

And what a cast—Renata Iebaldi returning to the title role an even more expressive and dominating artist; Leonard Warren acting and singing a terrifying Scarpia, and Richard Tucker pouring out golden tone.

Mme. Tebaldi, of commanding figure and bewitching voice, again ranged through Tosca's fearful gamut with glowing tone and superb control.

Mr. Warner is today unparalleled master of the role of Scarpia, its unctuous villainy, its scheming watchfulness, its bland arrogance. And Mr. Tucker has become a highly persuasive Cavaradossi on all counts.

Sharing the billing with last night's excellent cast was gifted Peter Mark, 15-year-old Brooklyn singer, who sang the shepherd's song offstage—a case of a child being heard but not seen. Puccini himself preferred a boy's voice there.

One could scarcely blame last night's audience for its high state of excitement. "Tosca," as sung, played and conducted last night, is a mass stimulant.

Mainly About Theatre:

Good 'Ball' at the Met

By JOHN CHAPMAN

Saturday night's Metropolitan Opera performance of "The Masked Ball" was, I thought, an unusually smooth one with Dimitri Mitropoulos conducting and with a warm and beautiful performance by Herva Nelli in the role of Amelia. Riccardo and Renato were sung by Jan Peerce and Robert Merrill, both of whom are solid men in opera, and the boy, Oscar, was sung by Roberta Peters, who doesn't look any more like a boy than Jayne Mansfield does. I may be stupid in most ways, but I can tell a girl almost every time I see one. This was Miss Peters' third opera of the week, the other having been "Rigoletto" and "Tales of Hoffman." And tonight she will be in "Cosi fan Tutte," pinch-hitting for Patrice Munsel, who severely scalded her hands trying to cool off a hot teakettle at home.

More Advice

Everybody, including me, knows how to run an opera house better than the sorely beset impresario in charge at the moment, be he Gatti, Eddie Johnson or Rudolf Bing, and Bing is in the catcall seat now. I have a few words of advice for Bing now. They are about "The Masked Ball." Verdi and his librettist, Somma, wrote it in three acts. The second act, "An Abandoned Heath" (which isn't so damned abandoned because it has sopranos, tenors and baritones lurking about) ends with Renato hauling his wife Amelia home to his mansion for the purpose of killing her.

The third act is in two scenes. In the first scene, Renato has drug his spouse to the house and ordered her to say farewell to the bambini before he executes her for being in love with Jan Peerce. (Personally, I don't blame him.) But he changes his mind and spares her and then Verdi and Somma get on to the final scene. This is the big wallop — a great masked ball in a palace, with sixteen George Liberaces fiddling pretty music on a balcony, during which King Gustavus Peerce is assassinated.

Well, Mr. Bing, this is the way the opera was planned, and the wait between Scene 1 and Scene 2 of Act III is interminable because everybody has to change costume and the stage crew has to set up the big ballroom. For the sake of story continuity and practicality of staging, I would, if I were running the Met, put Act II and the first scene of Act III together and have my intermission just before the great climax in the ballroom. It would save time and save the audience from sitting around with nothing to do for so long.

At the Concert

To Dimitri Mitropoulos and the Friends of Chamber Music, gratefully.

Mozart's composing hands are Long since dust; but look—
Those of this Conductor
Warm and bright, are governing
The chords of the Sinfonia
Drawn from the obedient orchestra.

The wand-baton, small as a pen,
Seems to inscribe on the air
The cunning for each musician,
While the Maestro himself
Converts the various pieces
To a single instrument,
Playing it by way of the wand
Magicianly; his hands hovering
Like the slow motion of angels.

Beautiful as a birch
The melody of light
Spills from the fingerfalls,
Breaks from his countenance,
Invoking the spirit of Mozart
To illuminate the very score.

The Master's composing hands
Are long since dust,
But these of Mitropoulos,
Hovering like the slow motion
Of twin angels, are governing
The tides of the Concertante,
That break in sounding waves
As it were upon the shore
Of the enchanted audience.

Metropolitan Opera House:

Hail Mitropoulos For Tosca Rebirth

Work Sweeps Audience Like Fire With Tebaldi and Tucker in Roles

By MILES KASTENDIECK

SOMETHING tremendous took place at the Metropolitan Opera House last night. Puccini's "Tosca" was reborn. In a performance that people have dreamed about for years, the work caught fire and swept the audience into salvos of applause.

Chiefly responsible for all the excitement was Dimitri Mitropoulos. He unlocked the score, gave the music its true intensity, and made the melodrama come into its proper focus. The music has not surged forth from the pit and flooded both stage and auditorium so completely in at least a quarter century.

Recreating the score could not have been so effective had not Renata Tebaldi sung Tosca and Richard Tucker sung Mario superbly. This Tosca was quite superior to Tebaldi's single performance of the role last season. Tucker has never sounded better. And there was Leonard Warren to add his notable voice as Scarpia. The vocal quality was as fine as one could ask.

With this trio working with Mitropoulos it was not so surprising that the second act was overwhelming. They created a memorable moment in the annals of Metropolitan Opera. Few performances of "Tosca" has attained greater dramatic impact.

What made the whole show outstanding was the integration of all departments. Though cautiously called revised, the production is as good as new. It is infinitely better than the old one, a pictorial achievement which Frederick Fox designed through a mixture of historical study and inspiration and which Dino Yannopoulos has staged with an eye to realistic drama.

Boy, 15, in Role

The other members of the cast, like Salvatore Baccaloni as the Sacristan and Alessio de Paolis as Spoletta, assured a sense of completeness to the proceedings. Mitropoulos adhered to the original casting by having a 15-year-old boy, Peter Mark, sing the role of the shepherd.

That Tebaldi further endeared herself to the Metropolitan with this performance confirms the fact that she is singing even better than she did last year. She also appeared less conscious about movement on stage last night. Indeed, there was a new freedom about her action that set her off impressively. This is a Tosca worthy of the role and likely to keep people storming the box office.

Yet she did not overshadow Tucker. Though he looked self-conscious, he, too, got inside his role and sang with added richness. Warren sang his first Scarpia on any stage with intelligent perception, not yet expressing the malevolence of this sinister character, however.

WORDS and MUSIC

By Harriett Johnson

Mitropoulos Leads 'Tosca' at Met

The melodramatic passion of "Tosca" demands flamboyant singers who can unload sound with the momentum of a cascade. Renata Tebaldi in the title role, Richard Tucker as Cavaradossi and Leonard Warren as Scarpia did this superbly last night in the first performance of the Puccini work this season at the Metropolitan Opera.

With sets redesigned by Frederick Fox and with staging by Dino Yannopoulos, the so-called "revised" production unfolded nothing new and startling. The smoldering, dramatic excitement of the score, which flames into murder in the second act and strikes more tragedy in the third, was, however, brilliantly expressed by Dimitri Mitropoulos on the podium. We predict that Mitropoulos' destiny, if he would fulfill his greatest potentialities, is in the operatic genre. He projects every note with its dramatic implication, and the total result is music-drama of incandescence.

Next to Mitropoulos, the most impressive figure was baritone Leonard Warren, singing his first Scarpia, anywhere. His beautiful voice was used with smooth polish as well as with the demoniac energy necessary to a convincing portrayal of the sadistic, cunning Scarpia. His acting was less intense than the expressiveness of his voice, but he was effective histrionically, too.

Tucker sang with his usual excellent vocal control, and, considering his rotundity, he was believable in the part. That is, except where he had been apparently directed to be carried out on a stretcher from his torture chamber. In one minute he got up and never sang better. This moment is hard enough to take, when Cavaradossi walks out with the help of the guards.

Miss Tebaldi's voice was alluringly opulent in sound for the most part during the second and third acts after she had warmed up.

This worldly heroine, an elegant sophisticate, who knows the answers, and murders with the skill of a professional, is not, however, the soprano's ideal role. Both the glamor and subtlety of Tosca (ironically enough, by the way, also a singer) eluded, if it did not entirely escape her. That she chose to wear a scarlet gown in the second act when she knifes Scarpia gives an indication of the quality of her portrayal. Apparently, Puccini, himself, indicated dark green, but anything, it seems to me, would be more subtle than red. Her acting, however, was best in this scene, when she could be bold and direct.

I-Witness

Can star opera also be ensemble opera? Those who doubt that the perennial question can have an affirmative answer should see the Metropolitan's currently revised "Tosca" while Richard Tucker, Renata Tebaldi, and Leonard Warren are responding to the authority of Dimitri Mitropoulos's conducting, pursuing the logical plan of Dino Yannopoulos's stage direction and reveling in the clean, spacious scenery devised by Frederick Fox from some remnants of the old hand-me-downs of 30 years ago. Actually, I doubt that much more has remained than the same old knife with which Tosca stabs Scarpia, but Fox has achieved some of the old solid look of his "Andrea Chenier" on a much more scanty budget. Rarely has Rudolf Bing achieved as much with so little.

Of the familiar personnel, both Tucker and Tebaldi surpassed anything they had previously done here as Cavaradossi and Tosca, he with a plenitude of bright, soaring sound, she with vocal quality of richness and fervor, subtly shaded and thoroughly in accord with Mitropoulos's well-shaped direction of the orchestral score.

As for the new Scarpia of Leonard Warren, few unaware of the circumstance would believe that he was singing it for the first time. Serious artist that he has become, he had a tight grip on virtually every vocal problem in the part (a few parlandos in Act II did not come across as they might), he has the beginnings of an interesting characterization — built around Scarpia's ogling of Tosca at every convenient and some inconvenient moments through a lorgnette that he carries — and he has an unsuspectedly appropriate physique for the role. Also he was very suitably costumed, aside from a pair of red-clocked black stockings that seemed a mite gay for the fearsome police chief.

As for Tebaldi, she seemed more at ease in the role than when she sang it last winter. More fittingly costumed than before (though with some room for improvement), she mustered plentiful sound for her climaxes — "Vissi d'arte" fared especially well —, colored her tones artfully, and sustained a well-bred contempt for Scarpia that marked him for the morgue from the moment she pulled her hand away as they parted in Act. 1. The aria was warmly received by the large attendance, but Mitropoulos gauged accurately the moment to resume without delaying the performance unduly.

MUSIC AND MUSICIANS

By PAUL HENRY LANG

Manners at the Opera

Last week's revival of "Tosca," attended by a packed house, proved to be a great success. Under Mr. Mitropoulos' fiery direction, the opera, usually a mere succession of highlights with some connecting passages, appeared as a dramatic whole. The success was signalized by prolonged demonstrations during the performance, visibly trying the patience of this earnest conductor who all but tore himself to pieces in order to keep the dramatic tension unabated.

I think that our public, in indulging in these outbursts, shows a deplorable lack of discipline and a lamentable disregard for the elementary requirements of good opera. When they break into applause at the end of an aria or passage that immediately leads to another one, they effectively destroy the continuity of the drama. The silly custom of greeting a star with applause when he or she enters, no matter how important the music or delicate the dramatic situation, is not becoming to a modern audience. Time and again I was chagrined when at the end of an aria the public would not wait for another thirty seconds until the little orchestral postlude, which is an integral part of the composition, could be finished.

Insensitive Attitude

I really cannot fathom the minds of those who acquiesce in this thoughtless and insensitive attitude. Why do they go to the opera? To hear disconnected pieces? The composer did not write his music to be drowned in clapping, and the librettist did not devise a dramatic plot and action to be ruined at crucial moments by enforced standstill.

There is nothing more ludicrous than to see an animated dramatic situation frozen, like a momentarily arrested moving picture, all singers awkwardly retaining the posture they happen to be in when the applause breaks loose, until the show can re-commence. Next day the critic reports on remarkable dramatic realizations, but he is perjuring himself, for too often these realizations were killed by trigger-happy philistines.

We do not interrupt a play when an actor makes a fine speech. In the concert hall, too, this fatuity has been outlawed, and no one with any decency would applaud between the movements of a symphony or a sonata, yet how much more disturbing it is when the mood is deliberately destroyed in the middle of an opera. There are plenty of opportunities at the end of the acts to get the circulation back into itching palms.

Painful Spectacle

Are we trying to perpetuate an entirely alien and outmoded Continental custom? There is something very silly about a dignified American who roars "bravos" in the opera while in any other place he would not be caught in such extrovert behavior—except, perhaps, in the private lunacy of class reunions.

Another painful spectacle is the large number of latecomers at the Met. They barge in, led by the usher, their trampling down the aisle clearly audible, force half a row of decent citizens blissfully enveloped in the music rudely to interrupt their enjoyment, scramble to their feet, retrieve hats knocked out of their laps, and then try to recapture the mood while behind them the view of the rest of the audience is blocked. These furtive processions down the aisle after dark are frequently still coming twenty-five minutes after curtain time.

What Price Dessert

This is a scandalous situation, entirely unworthy of a twentieth-century American audience. Those who are unwilling to sacrifice dessert, when they see that the time is running out, should stay at their dinner table and continue gossiping. Those who go to the opera to hear an entire work, and they are of course the majority, are entitled to some protection from such lackadaisical misrule. Carnegie Hall would not let any one traipse to his seat after a symphonic movement had started; public opinion will sooner or later force the Met to take a sterner attitude, even though this may mean keeping the door closed for an entire act, a situation by no means unknown in some enlightened places.

Mr. Bing very graciously hands out coffee and doughnuts to the enthusiastic, if impecunious, music lovers who stand in line for hours in the cold for the luxury of obtaining standing room tickets. He may well offer the latecomers some of Sherry's delicacies—up in the restaurant—until the conscientious opera lovers enjoy an undisturbed first act.

Violin Magic

Fund Concert Is Memorable

By MILES KASTENDIECK

TO SAY THAT THE pension fund concert of the Philharmonic-Symphony in Carnegie Hall last night was memorable sounds almost trite. That is what it was, not only because David Oistrakh played magnificently but also because the chance to hear the three violin concertos of this program so played in one evening is a treasurable (even though somewhat overpowering) experience. A capacity audience sensed a rare event and luxuriated in what it heard.

The over-abundance of riches consisted of Mozart's Violin Concerto No. 5, K. 219, the Brahms, and the Tchaikovsky. That Oistrakh sustained an enviable level of artistry through all these (the Brahms alone is an evening's stint) is a kind of tour de force in itself.

Name of Art

He is, however, too much of an artist to look on it as a feat. Since he did it in the name of art along with Dimitri Mitropoulos, who also contributed his services, music-making must have been the impetus.

In performance the concertos fared in the order they were listed. There were some reservations about the Mozart though Oistrakh obviously knows what the classic style is and uses a specially refined tone to achieve the right quality.

This restraint he abandoned in Brahms where he allowed his temperament to give the music its proper bite. The Tchaikovsky expressed a more personal quality, characteristic of the composer as well as the violinist's approach.

Fine Phrasing

The phenomenal ease with which all this music was played, the impeccable phrasing that revealed how thorough a musician he is, the beauty of style that was ever-present in his performance: these again stamp Oistrakh as a singularly accomplished violinist as superb in orchestral performance as in recital.

The musicians contributed a vital part to the concert too. They responded almost too well to Mitropoulos' direction in the Mozart, quite dramatically in the Brahms, and whole-heartedly in the Tchaikovsky.

That the concert went beyond 11 P.M. mattered little to the audience. It gave a rising vote of thanks and lingered long after to bring conductor and violinist back time after time for bows.

MUSIC

The Philharmonic

By PAUL HENRY LANG

ARNEGIE HALL
Conductor, Dimitri Mitropoulos; soloist, avid Oistrakh, violinist.
The program:
Violin Concerto in A major, K. 219....Mozart
Violin Concerto in D major .....Brahms
Violin Concerto in D major.....Tchaikovsky

Serious musician that he is, Mr. Oistrakh last night undertook an evening of music making that tried the listener's capabilities, let alone the interpreter's. Three big concertos are heavy fare for the Philharmonic, too, in its present condition. However, this distinguished violinist knows neither fatigue nor insecurity; the orchestra may have sagged here and there, but Mr. Oistrakh remained imperturbable. This does not mean that his performance and interpretation measured up to his phenomenal fiddling.

The Mozart concerto in A major, though relatively simple, is very demanding. We missed in the first movement the subtle humor the oera buffa element calls for. The broadly designed second movement demands sustained singing, something Mr. Oistrakh can supply with ease, but his tone was too sweet, and he has a cavalier way with trills and ornamental notes. The third movement, exotic and quixotic—it is supposed to be "Turkish" but sounds Gypsy to me—actually becomes a bit wild and moody; last night it was tame and correct.

Mr. Oistrakh's playing was impeccable throughout the concerto, as far as the mechanics of violin playing are concerned, but there was a decided lack of feeling for this sort of music.

The recapitulations took place with prosaic simplicity and he made few attempts at correlating the sections.

The Brahms concerto, though complicated and the product of a great deal of painstaking labor, is nevertheless a far more satisfying work than the two piano concertos. Only its last movement can be considered a virtuoso piece, the other two are pure music for music's sake. Here Mr. Oistrakh was in his element—or nearly so. There was much beautiful playing but somehow the concerto did not quite coalesce. Even such a thoroughly romantic piece as the F sharp minor episode in the slow movement did not fully rouse the soloist's imagination. The bitter-sweet mood, dusky and fluctuating, was not realized though the playing itself was superb.

Throughout the evening I was somewhat disturbed by elisions and slides that are no longer considered bon ton by our modern violinists. Mr. Oistrakh does not use them in an objectionable manner, but they are there, and in Mozart—even in Brahms—they are disturbing. His tone is a glorious violin tone, but one that causes the same visceral reaction to some of us as the bleating of the great tenors. Yet this very bleating, in both fiddler and tenor, is greatly prized by many.

Mr. Oistrakh proved time and again that he can do without it, notably in the heavenly passage in the first movement of the Brahms concerto that follows the cadenza. However, said passage was marred by the public which listened with breathless rapture to the music of Mr. Joachim — the cadenza — and then inhaled with audible noise when Mr. Brahms returned with with the real breathtaker.

All in all, this was a performance remarkable for its earnest intentions and magnificent technical fluency, but I must admit that I would rather put up with a little less technique and more searching interpretation. Mr. Oistrakh is tops in his trade, but we do not have to strike our flag; both concertos have been heard in this city, played by our own fiddlers, in an artistically more satisfactory manner.

David Oistrakh, violin soloist with the Philharmonic.

Mr. Mitropoulos officiated with his customary zeal, but the orchestra sounded a bit pale in the Mozart and a bit lush in the Brahms. The Tchaikowsky concerto I missed because of the lateness of the hour. I suspect, though, that it furnished the piece de resistance.

Before leaving, Mr. Mitropoulos offered a peculiar program which brought a great deal of pleasure. He dusted off Weber's First Symphony, and the "Konzertstück," for Mr. Casadesus, played William Schuman's choreographic poem, "Judith," and introduced Casadesus's Third Piano Concerto.

While the "Judith" remains a granitic score, its intellectualism holds interest especially when Mr. Mitropoulos conducts it. Both conductor and soloist were virtuosos in the music of Weber. Mr. Casadesus's Concerto is a fluent score, commanding respect but little else. In a later program, Gaby, Robert, and Jean Casadesus made a whole family of soloists.

Oistrakh Brilliant in A Concerto Marathon

By DOUGLAS WATT

What a week this has been at Carnegie Hall! Tebaldi's soprano on Sunday and Tuesday and David Oistrakh's violin last night in not one, not two, but three concertos.

The occasion was a Philharmonic-Symphony Pension Fund concert, Dimitri Mitropoulos conducting, and it marked Oistrakh's first local appearance with orchestra. The hall was sold out, with even the boxes solidly packed, and the incomparable Soviet fiddler certainly gave the crowd its money's worth.

Consisting, as it did, of Mozart's A Major Concerto (K. 219) and the D Major concertos of Brahms and Tchaikovsky, it was necessarily a very long concert. But it was a brilliant one from start to finish. There could be no more convincing demonstration of Oistrakh's versatility and, of course, endurance.

Beautiful Brahms

The high spot was, for one listener, the Brahms work. It went like a charm, all of its sweep and warmth glowingly expressed both by orchestra and soloist. But then, the Mozart concerto was beautifully handled, too, as was the first movement of the Tchaikovsky piece, which was all of it the writer could stay to hear.

"Suave" is a word that has frequently been used to identify Oistrakh's characteristic tone, and I can think of none better. It is neither a small nor a large tone and it is like velvet. Modest and friendly in appearance and seemingly devoid of temperament, Oistrakh tosses off masterworks as if they were child's play. His cadenzas in all three compositions last night were magical.

And I have rarely heard the orchestra play more fluently or with better balance under Mitropoulos' hand. Gone was the familiar tension that seems to take hold of Mozart and Brahms when he is at the helm. Only in the Tchaikovsky concerto, where it was logical, did some theatrics assert themselves. The orchestra was, by the way, sensibly reduced in size for the Mozart performance.

If ever there was one, this was a concert not to be missed.

Music: Oistrakh Plays

Soviet Violinist Heard in Three Concertos

By HOWARD TAUBMAN

DAVID OISTRAKH, the Russian violinist, gave a party at Carnegie Hall last night. It was a party that the houseful of paying guests will long remember. For Mr. Oistrakh played three concertos — Mozart's A major (K. 219) and those by Brahms and Tchaikovsky, two of the towering works for violin and orchestra.

Joining with Mr. Oistrakh as hosts were the New York Philharmonic-Symphony and its permanent conductor, Dimitri Mitropoulos. They were all playing for the orchestra's Pension Fund, and they were all contributing their services.

Mr. Oistrakh had left no doubt at his recitals that he was one of the outstanding fiddlers of our day. Playing great music like the Brahms concerto last night, he reinforced the first impression and added to it. He is a master fiddler by any standards, technical or interpretive.

Once again one was stirred by the quality of his perceptions and the sturdiness of his intellect. This was playing that had a fine mind behind it. There was also a warm, enkindling sensitivity. Head and heart were inextricably linked in performaces that ranged from delicate tenderness to magisterial force.

Mr. Oistrakh's approach to the Mozart concerto was his own. It seemed to be based on the assumption that the classical eighteenth-century style need not stress refinement alone. There was virility in this Mozart and also, if you please, the style of the aristocrat.

The Brahms was on a level that few violinists in this listener's experience have matched. The tone took on more body and glowing color, and the style became more commanding. Every phrase of this work came to ardent life. The long-breathed song of the slow movement had an incomparable purity and eloquence that made it the most memorable playing of the evening.

Anyone who thought that the Tchaikovsky would be an anti-climax after all this was mistaken. For this sovereign musician had a surprise up his sleeve. He took Tchaikovsky's lush tunes and gave them dignity without robbing them of their essential character; he was lyrical without being maudlin.

Mr. Mitropoulos and the orchestra rose to the occasion and to the inspiration of Mr. Oistrakh's performances. They, too, played with vitality and color; they were fit companions for the violinist.

Tschaikowsky Concerto Week at Carnegie Hall

By LOUIS BIANCOLLI.

This is Tschaikowsky violin concerto week at Carnegie Hall.

Twenty-four hours after David Oistrakh gave us his version of the Tschaikowsky classic in Carnegie Hall, Erica Morini was giving us hers last night.

A further parallel was in the fact that the Philharmonic was again the accompanying orchestra, though this time George Szell conducted, not Dimitri Mitropoulos.

There were similarities, too, in the reading, as well as marked divergencies—all, I would say, in the interest of variety, which is the spice of music, too.

Like Mr. Oistrakh, Miss Morini is a first-class fiddler, with a commanding tone and technic. She long ago came to terms with this concerto.

Like Mr. Oistrakh, she reeled off a beautiful melodic line last night, tossed off the passage work like child's play, and wooed the slavic spirit.

One difference between the readings was in the approach, call it poetic, emotional, or expressive.

Miss Morini put herself into the music until it became a personal communication. It was ardent, intense, exuberant, like herself, no doubt.

The factor of personality was stronger than it had been the night before. Mr. Oistrakh seemed more inclined to step aside and let the music speak for itself rather than for him.

Both were excellent performances, Miss Morini's the warmer and more sensuous; Mr. Oistrakh's the more probing and controlled.

As Romain Rolland said of the second and third "Leonore" overtures, "let us prefer both."

Mr. Szell and Miss Morini have teamed up in this concerto so often and so brilliantly that it wasn't surprising to find them teaming up again in the same vein.

A further Tschaikowsky classic came in for powerful rendering last night—the Fourth Symphony. This has been a kind of season of the Fourth, and Mr. Szell's reading challenges all contenders.

Oistrakh Dazzles With Mitropoulous

By LOUIS BIANCOLLI.

After giving other parts of the country the benefit of his winged art, David Oistrakh was back again in Carnegie Hall last night, this time with an orchestra.

The orchestra was the Philharmonic Symphony, the occasion a Pension Fund Concert to which both Mr. Oistrakh and Maestro Dimitri Mitropoulos contributed their services.

We have now heard Mr. Oistrakh play with piano, with orchestra, and alone, and we find him superlative all three ways. He was again the facile master and searching artist last night—to the greater glory of Mozart, Brahms and Ischaikowsky.

Three-Ply Concerto.

For this was a three-ply concerto assignment, varied in style and mood and period, diversified in technic, yet finding the Soviet fiddler ever ready with endless stores of tone and feeling suited to each composer.

Mr. Mitropoulos was the perfect leader for this cross-country survey of concerto styles—versatile, dynamic and alert—and the Philharmonic men were equally eager and responsive fellow adventurers.

Mr. Oistrakh was first heard in Mozart's A major violin concerto. There, the elegance and pin-point precision of tone were a marvel, but, even more, there were the strength and vigor that underlay them.

More to the Fore.

The strength was more to the fore in the Brahms concerto, where the style is naturally more rugged and heroic. Yet, in all that turmoil and commotion, the tone sang sweetly and luminously—as if from the very heart of Brahms.

I have never heard that first movement cadenza so thrillingly played—everything so snugly and effortlessly in peace, the outer and inner voices weaving into an enchanted web of sound and feeling.

Warm as the response was to both the Mozart and Brahms concertos, what followed the Tschaikowsky concerto was a mass upheaval by comparison. People stood up and cheered.

Cast Changes In Met's 'Un Ballo'

The roles of Renato and Oscar in Verdi's "Un Ballo in Maschera" were embodied for the first time this season by Leonard Warren and Laurel Hurley, respectively, at the Metropolitan last evening. The rest of the cast were as previously, Jan Peerce, Herva Nelli, Marian Anderson being the other principals. Dimitri Mitropoulous again conducted.

Mr. Warren's Renato has been for some time now, a notable portrait. If anything, it seems to have grown in dramatic and musical values, not omitting greater subtlety all round. Vocally his impersonation of this character has always been an opulent one. Last night it was no less so, but with more significance, more point and finish than when he first assumed it. Clearly (to this listener, at least) the difference between then and now is spelled M-i-t-r-o-p-o-u-l-o-s.

The page boy turned in by Miss Hurley last night added considerably to the proceedings. She sang cleanly, with much gusto, and she moved about the stage like one completely at home in the music, as well as the scenic action. It remains to be reported that Miss Nelli, who sang the Amelia, had one or two uncertain moments with high notes in her second act aria, and that Miss Anderson's Ulrica, though musically adroit, lacked the necessary concentration and dramatic thrust.

The Fieldhouse Was Filled With Music

SOME 350 Iowans participated in one of the great musical events of the year this spring when they presented the Hector Berlioz "Requiem" in the State University of Iowa fieldhouse. They were members of the S.U.I. symphony orchestra, chorus and four brass choirs, and they were directed by Dimitri Mitropoulos, world-famous conductor of the New York Philharmonic Symphony. The impressive Berlioz "Requiem" is seldom presented because of the vast number of instruments and voices required, and the Iowa performance was the first one Mitropoulos ever had conducted in the United States. These photographs were taken during rehearsals in the fieldhouse.

LaVONNE CLINE (left) of Omaha, a freshman, helps Nancy Norman of Denison lift her bass viol on to the concert stage. The symphony rehearsed for more than a month before Mitropoulos arrived. The university fieldhouse, 464 feet long and 430 feet wide, is the only building in Iowa City large enough to provide space for all the musicians who joined forces for the "Requiem."

TYMPANI SECTION alone took up considerable space. Players at left are Bruce Appleby (nearst camera) of Monticello, Robert Quinn of Marion, and John Whitlock, assistant director of S. U. I. bands. At right are Carol Chinn (nearest camera) of Moorhead, Minn., Fred King of Des Moines, Susan Fay of Jefferson. Ten kettle drums were used.

A RARE INSTRUMENT the Berlioz arrangement calls for is the bass trumpet held by Richmond Matteson (right) of Rock Island. Holding standard trumpet is Wayne Ludwigson of Rock Rapids.

MITROPOULOS shakes hands with Mrs. James H. Winter of Iowa City, cellist. Others are, from left, Mrs. Winter's husband, Jenny Cullen and John Van Nice of Findlay, Ohio. Miss Cullen is from Minneapolis, where she played with the symphony when Mitropoulos conducted it. She came to Iowa City to play the viola for the "Requiem."

PETER HAUG OF FORT MADISON, here being welcomed by the maestro, was one of 25 musicians from other eastern Iowa cities who asked to play in the "Requiem" under Mitropoulos. James Dixon, regular conductor of the S. U. I. Symphony Orchestra, is at left, and Herald Stark, director of the chorus, is at right. Other cities represented by guest players included Cedar Rapids, Davenport, Dubuque and Ottumwa.

Music: A New Concerto

Oistrakh in Premiere of Shostakovich Work

By ROSS PARMENTER

EACH of David Oistrakh's Carnegie Hall appearances has generated its particular excitement. First came the two recitals. Last week there was the excitement of his playing three concertos with the New York Philharmonic-Symphony. And last night, with the same orchestra, was the United States première of the new Shostakovich Violin Concerto.

The concerto, to this listener's way of thinking, was a bleak, gloomy, rather lonely work, thorny in technical difficulties and intense in personal feeling, but thin in musical invention.

What gave the work its especial quality of loneliness was the way the solo part was written to stand so much in isolation. It was isolated because the rest of the violins had hardly anything to do, and because the timbre of the solo part stood out against the prevailingly dark scoring that sometimes was foggily atmospheric, sometimes growling and, in the fast movements, often a little hectic.

The concerto is highly unconventional. Besides being so unsymphonic in character, it has four movements against the usual three. The first and last movements have descriptive names — Nocturne and Burlesca. And the whole work strongly suggests a programmatic content.

It was hard not to feel that it was war-haunted. This was not so evident in the opening Nocturne, which suggested a long mournful solo (with a very simple tune that was hardly developed at all) played by the edge of a misty sedge-bordered lake. But the war feeling came out in the ensuing Scherzo, which echoed some of the same sort of mordant wit of "L'Histoire du soldat," the work that Stravinsky wrote after the close of the earlier World War.

When it came to the Andante, surely that was some of the heavy tread of people left homeless by war that was described. And the muted drum roll that was heard under the long phrases of the keening violin suggested the thunder of distant guns. And as Oistrakh developed the praintive melody in the cadanza it seemed to become a threnody.

The final Burlesca had some

some of the relief after the tension of war, but it had the frenetic quality of people trying to have a wildly happy time, and not really succeeding.

That it communicated describable things so vividly was in large part the result of Oistrakh's intense absorption in its inner meaning. He played it so personally, that despite its pyrotechnics it did not sound like a display piece. And his dexterity, clarity of articulation, accuracy of intonation, and purity of sound were all phenomenal.

The audience responded with tumultuous applause, with the men of the orchestra joining in. Six times the violinist was recalled and he only took two of the bows alone. He insisted that Dimitri Mitropoulos, the conductor, share the others.

In the final one Mr. Mitropoulos lifted the score from the stand and held it up before the audience so the work itself could be applauded. One did not notice a perceptible stepping up of the plaudits, though.

The Overture to Mozart's "Don Giovanni" and Vaughan Williams' Fourth Symphony were the other works of the program. Mr. Mitropoulos led both with a rugged intensity that was more suitable to the latter than to the former. And though the Vaughan Williams work is an impressive one, its austerity did not hold all of the capacity audience to the end.

DAILY NEWS New York, N.Y.
DEC 30 1955

By DOUGLAS WATT

Whatever else Dmitri Shostakovich's Violin Concerto, introduced here last night at Carnegie Hall, may have to offer, it makes great demands on the soloist for practically its entire 35 minutes. And since David Oistrakh, to whom the work is dedicated, was the soloist, these demands were met so splendidly that the performance won an ovation from the packed house. The audience cheered and applauded Oistrakh, conductor Dimitri Mitropoulos and the members of the Philharmonic-Symphony well into the scheduled intermission period.

This is Shostakovich's latest creation and it has been heard before only in Leningrad, where Oistrakh introduced it in October. The long first movement, titled "Nocturne," is songful but brooding—almost lugubrious. It is not until the second section, a scherzo, that Shostakovich gets his motor started, and here the orchestra percolates merrily for some six minutes.

No Rest for the Weary

The third movement, a passacaglia, is the heart of the work and in it the soloist finds his fullest expression. It ends with a long and difficult cadenza which, when completed, leads the violinist directly into the brisk and frolicsome final section, identified as "Burlesca."

The concerto is a showpiece and bears rehearing, but it must be reported that this listener found little satisfaction in the work as a whole on first aquaintance. Oistrakh's brilliant performance was breathtaking, but the orchestral part was not very impressive.

One curious aspect of the work is the absence of a brass section —at least of trumpets and trombones. This tended, at times, to make it almost a concerto for solo violin and strings with the result that long passages seemed lacking in tonal color.

All quibbling aside, though, Shostakovich's first violin concerto demonstrated once more before a full house what a gem of a musician this Oistrakh is.

Shostakovich Concerto A Triumph for Oistrakh

By LOUIS BIANCOLLI.

A large and deeply stirred Philharmonic audience gave David Oistrakh another standing vote of acclamation in Carnegie Hall last night.

Dignified Philharmonic patrons rose and cheered the Soviet violinist after he finished the American premiere of Shostakovich's violin concerto (written for him)—one of the most eagerly awaited novelties of the season.

Mr. Oistrakh was brought out repeatedly after what was in all respects one of the most exciting new scores of our time.

Much of the credit for the triumphant premiere goes to Dimitri Mitropoulos who provided an over-all reading that was steadily gripping in its living dynamism and absolute control.

Shostakovich has done it again—sent us a composition bristling with technical surprises, bold new idiom, and a lunging vitality. There is also a haunting poetry — serene and majestic—in its opening "Nocturne."

It is a concerto of many moods—the calm breadth of the opening; a blithe and darting scherzo; an almost classical passacaglia, a whirlwind finale that is one of the heartiest frolics in music.

Through it all stalks the probing, daring mind of one of the alertest innovators of our time. There is here a time for gravity, a time for sweet and soaring melody and most of all a time for comedy.

The middle movements are a bit less readily absorbed at a first hearing, lacking both the lyric fervor and design of the first and the rollicking sweep and sparkle of the last.

That last movement comes without a break after what would have appeared a superhuman cadenza if Mr. Oistrakh hadn't made it sound like child's play in the boundless ease that is his secret.

It is a fiendish concerto to play, with its swirling speeds and leaping intervals, its laughing rhythms and bustling double-stops. Mr. Oistrakh made it all seem a joy to play—as it was to hear.

The orchestra behind him was also kept busy in a wealth of watchful commentary on the solo fiddle and on itself. What rich and pungent episode lurks there, and what a brilliant job Mr. Mitropoulos did!

There was further brilliance in the reading of Vaughan Williams' turbulent fourth symphony — plus a massive strength and searching insight—as there was in Mozart's "Don Giovanni" overture that opened the concert.

Conductor, Dimitri Mitropoulos; soloist, David Oistrakh, violinist. The program: Overture, "Don Giovanni" ..... Mozart Violin Concerto, Op. 99 (first performance in U. S.) ..... Shostakovitch.. Symphony No. 4 in F minor, ... Vaughan Williams

LAST night's concert by the Philharmonic under the direction of Dmitri Mitropoulos was notable for the premiere of Shostakovich's new violin concerto, played by our distinguished guest from Russia, Mr. Oistrakh.

The concerto is a difficult musical genre. In earlier times it was a wonderfully integrated type of music, but already in Beethoven's time it presented problems that stumped the serious composer. Beethoven himself gave up writing concertos at an early stage in his career, and after his time the genre degenerated into empty display pieces from which only a handful of concertos stand out as great works of art. But in more recent times the concerto—now a thoroughly integrated symphonic composition—again found favor with some of the greatest composers.

Shostakovich's new concerto is not a significant contribution to the literature that contains such masterworks as Bartok's or Profofiev's concertos. In the first place it is too obviously tailor-made for Mr. Oistrakh's dazzling bow and fingers; in the second, there is a plethora of commonplace detail with only a few glimpses of a wider view.

The first movement is a plaintive piece in which the meandering "endless melody" of the solo instrument is accompanied by rather monotonous low strings. When played by a violinist of Mr. Oistrakh's stature the wailing, Gypsy-like melody has a certain charm, but I found it lacking in variety.

If the first movement was Russian in mood only, the second was a real Russian piece in that rather innocuous neo-Rimsky way. It goes fast, abounds in clever orchestral scenes and there is plenty of hustle and bustle.

The third movement, a passacaglia, starts with a nice orchestral introduction that for the first time shows a definite state of mind as opposed to mere routine and expert composing. But after a while Shostakovich's weakness—lack of organic development—becomes evident and the flowing melody gives way to rather meaningless figuration set against the ostinato bass.

The cadenza at the end of this movement I found embarrassingly commonplace, but Mr. Oistrakh's marvelous playing saved the day. Rimsky, the eternal Everyman of Russian music, was back in the last movement, as a consequence the concerto ended on a lively tone.

The soloist was in his element. Russian music without any problem except one: virtuoso fiddling. But that's no problem for Mr. Oistrakh, who treated the audience to a real feast.

The concert began with a potpourri from Mozart's "Don Giovanni." The program said "Overture to Don Giovanni," but what we heard was Mozart as amended by the late Mr. Busoni. It is inexcusable in this day and age, to ignore Mozart's own ending of the overture in favor of an arranger's work. I might add that Mozart's own introduction calls for "Andante" and not "Adagio."

The evening ended with that grand and sweeping symphony of Vaughan Williams, his fourth. This is one of Mr. Mitropoulos' favorites and he played it very well indeed. We again witnessed that curious after-intermission phenomenon that caracterizes the New York Philharmonic. They come back and play like another orchestra. Everything was fresh, sonorous, and convincing. Perhaps they should have two intermissions.

Philharmonic Symphony:

Shostakovich Art Called Momentous

By MILES KASTENDIECK

FOR THE FRIENDS of contemporary music the Philharmonic-Symphony concert in Carnegie Hall last night was a momentous occasion. They heard the American premiere of Shostakovich's Violin Concerto opus 99 with none other than David Oistrakh as soloist and, for good measure, one of the most challenging scores of the 20th Century, Vaughan Williams' Fourth Symphony. (For the enemies of modern music it was probably a grim evening as a number sought the nearest means of escape.)

Dedicated to the Soviet violinist, the Shostakovich concerto appears to have been written for him primarily. The solo part is almost too conspicuous for a modern concerto. It is a prodigious part, requiring constant alertness and almost continuous playing throughout the 35 minutes. In consequence the orchestra plays an accompanying role for at least two whole movements. Otherwise the score is forward-looking in content and in sound.

The work is in four movements, something of a novelty in itself. The first, marked "Nocturne," is just what it is called: A Night Piece. Its darker hues have a melancholy strain as the movement pursues an introspective lyric course, not too easily assimilated on a first hearing. A "Fiddling Scherzo" works up into a rhythmic, virtuoso ending. In the Passacaglia that follows, Shostakovich's gift for melody takes hold. A brilliantly rhythmic "Burlesca" full of Shostakovich wizardry generates plenty of excitement for a grand finale.

Important Work

That this is an important work is unquestionable. Tailor-made for Oistrakh, it showed him off as the supreme technician and musician that he is. In the cadenza bridging the third and fourth movements, he displayed mastery enough to make any violinist breathless and then matched Shostakovich in the scintillation of the finale.

Mitropoulos and the orchestra did much more than play along with Oistrakh. They excelled in their own way. That they did even more in the Vaughan Williams is a story in itself, impossible to tell here. Theirs was a magnificent account of a disturbingly powerful work.

The only possible excuse for having the overture to Mozart's "Don Giovanni" open the concert must have been the anniversary year. Neither in choice nor in performance did it belong on this program.

Oistrakh Plays for Pension Fund

David Oistrakh, Soviet Russia's leading violinist, played three concertos last night in Carnegie Hall as soloist with the Philharmonic-Symphony and helped the orchestra take in over $15,000 for its pension fund.

Dimitri Mitropoulos was on the podium throughout the evening with scores before him of the Mozart Concerto in A Major, K. 219; The Brahms Concerto in D Major and the Tchaikovsky Concerto. As all music lovers know, Mitropoulos almost invariably accompanies his soloists, minus score.

He had taken on the notes at Oistrakh's request. The violinist felt nervous playing with a conductor who didn't have the music before him.

It was in the Brahms Concerto that the 47-year old violinist came into his own and did the fullest justice to himself and the composer. Being a master technician with impeccable intonation, a remarkable bow arm and the rest of the virtuoso skills, he had no trouble surmounting with mastery the problems before him in any of the three works.

But the Mozart Concerto was heavy-handed both on the part of soloist and orchestra in its initial movement. The slow movement had a compelling intensity and beauty though Oistrakh's tone was too able-bodied for the transparency of Mozart. The final movement was the most satisfying. As a whole, however, the interpretation was without buoyancy or the elegant aerial grace of the Mozart style.

There was a gypsy nonchalance to the performance of the Tchaikovsky, which made the mood or the inspiration of the moment whip up the tempo or retard it as the spirit moved. Mitropoulos went to town with a synthetic Russian fervor and there was much schmaltz.

In the Brahms Concerto, the violinist played with a penetrating understanding of the work's big architecture. Oistrakh's variation in phrasing, color and dynamics also demonstrated his big vocabulary of expression. He and Mitropoulos showed a marked sympathy of attitude in the interpretation, with a superb result.

With The Orchestras

New York Philharmonic-Symphony

On Oct. 27, the New York Philharmonic-Symphony featured a performance of Act III of Wagner's "Goetterdaemmerung" sung by an excellent cast from the Metropolitan Opera roster with Dimitri Mitropoulos conducting. While we have certain reservations about the projection and musicianship of Ramon Vinay as Siegfried, we must cheer the Immolation Scene as performed by Astrid Varnay. This was a great interpretation, sung with dramatic intensity. The work was preceded by a short Sinfonia Concertante (K. Anh 104) by Mozart.—W.F.L.

Rudolf Serkin was guest soloist in the first concert of the Senior Series of Young People's Concerts of the Philharmonic at Carnegie Hall, Oct. 29. He played Mendelssohn's First Piano Concerto. At the age of 12, he performed this very same work with orchestra, in public. Now, as a mature artist, he played the concerto with freshness and enthusiasm, with every phrase beautifully defined. The orchestra also played works by Wolf-Ferrari, De Filippi, Beethoven and Strauss, and also demonstrated the string instruments. Wilfrid Pelletier did a fine job on the podium, and Jim Fassett was commentator.—S.C.C.

The Philharmonic's program on Oct. 30, repeated the concert version of Act III of Wagner's "Goetterdaemmerung," surpassed the earlier presentation in effectiveness. Astrid Varnay's Brunnhilde was dramatically electrifying, while Mr. Mitropoulos and his orchestra brilliantly captured the excitement of this powerful score.—H.L.F.

The Philharmonic-Symphony's Nov. 3 concert, led by Mitropoulos, opened with Beethoven's "Fidelio" Overture, in tribute to the reopening of the Vienna Opera House, followed by the Mozart Piano Concerto in E flat, K. 482, with Pietro Scarpini as soloist. It was in the latter part of the program, comprising the Prelude and Passacaglia, Op. 42, by Ben Weber — a first performance one would wish to hear repeated as an ensemble of 12-tone composition—and Strauss' "Also Sprach Zarathustra," that the conductor and the ensemble achieved the high caliber of music-making one has come to expect of them. — H.L.F.

A rather strange program was presented by the Philharmonic Nov. 10. Half was devoted to inconsequential Weber and the other half to contemporary music, William Schuman's "Judith," and Robert Casadesus' Concerto for Piano and Orchestra in E minor. The performances were excellent throughout. Mr. Schuman's "Judith" is a stark work, with melancholy air, and with much substance. Mr. Casadesus' Concerto is nothing to be ashamed of, and he played it with vigor and enthusiasm. Oddly enough, the beauty of his playing was more apparent in Weber's "Konzertstuck," in which he achieved delicacy of texture and transparent hues that were utterly enchanting. The program opened with Weber's symphony No. 1.—S.C.C.

The family Casadesus visited the N. Y. Philharmonic, Nov. 13. First papa and mama (Gaby and Robert) gave an excellent, subtle reading of the E flat major Piano Concerto by Mozart. Then son Jean played the G minor Concerto by Saint-Saens. He had a clean, beautiful tone, and played with mature insight. The program also included Schuman's "Judith," the Strauss' "Dance of the Seven Veils" from "Salome." Mitropoulos conducted.—W.F.L.

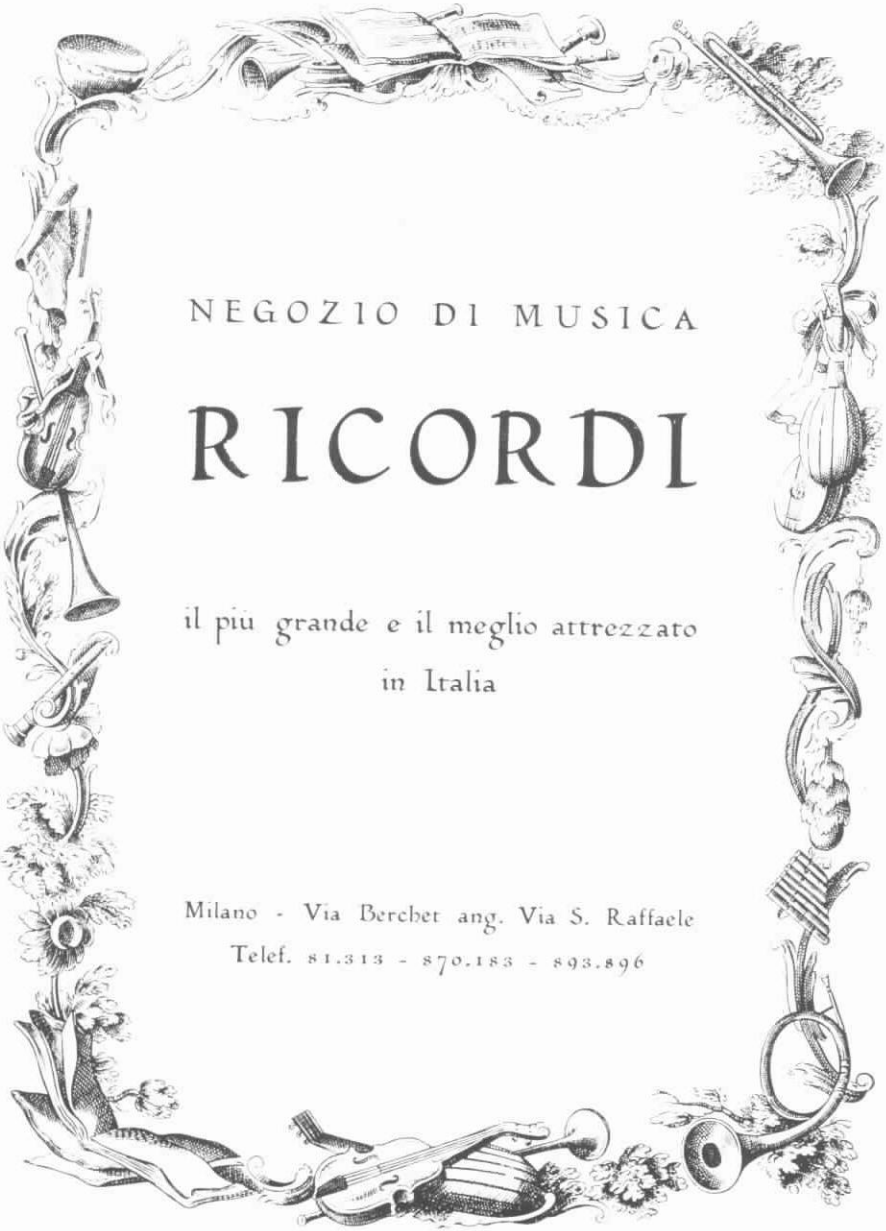
Philharmonic Renames Dimitri

Dimitri Mitropoulos, former conductor of the Minneapolis Symphony Orchestra, has been reappointed musical director of the New York Philharmonic-Symphony for the 1956-57 season, marking his sixth year in this capacity.

Leonard Bernstein and Paul Paray have been named as new guest conducters for the season, and Bruno Walter and Guido Cantelli will return as guest conductors for the orchestra's CBS Radio broadcasts, heard Sundays at 2:30-4 p. m. on WCCO Radio.



The 27th consecutive season of the New York Philharmonic-Symphony on CBS Radio will open Oct. 21, 1956. Again, the regular broadcast season will extend 28 weeks. A roster of soloists is to be announced at a later date. Meanwhile, the famed musical organizations continues its 26th season of distinguished concerts on the network.

NOVITA PER MILANO

ALBAN BERG
MUSICISTA OLTRE IL VERO

Alban Berg nacque a Vienna il 9 febbraio 1885; suo padre era un commerciante benestante. Allevato con le normali cure di una buona famiglia borghese, soltanto verso i quattordici anni si ebbero i primi segni manifesti della sua vocazione musicale. Del resto anche i suoi fratelli coltivavano l'arte dei suoni, sua sorella minore suonando il pianoforte, suo fratello maggiore cantando.

Purtroppo questo sereno ambiente familiare doveva essere funestato, nel 1900, dalla morte del padre il che provocò un abbassamento delle condizioni finanziarie, per cui soltanto l'intervento economico d'una parente potè consentire al giovane Alban di continuare gli studi.

In quel tempo comincia a scrivere musica e restano molte composizioni per canto e pianoforte. Continua contemporaneamente gli studi e dimostra, dalle lettere rimaste, una cultura ed un gusto superiori alla sua età. Ciononostante, agli esami liceali viene bocciato proprio in composizione tedesca!

Nel 1904 supera gli esami ed è costretto per ragioni finanziarie, ad accettare un posto di funzionario, posto che occuperà durante due anni. Nello stesso anno avviene l'incontro con Arnold Schoenberg, incontro che modificherà addirittura il corso della sua vita.

Era stato il fratello a combinare la cosa: di nascosto egli si era recato dal maestro, portandogli delle composizioni di Alban perchè le esaminasse. A seguito di questo esame Schoenberg l'aveva accettato come allievo.

Questo tirocinio durerà sei anni.

Nel 1907 ha luogo la prima esecuzione pubblica d'un lavoro suo.

Continua a scrivere, sempre sotto la guida del maestro, guida che cessa di esercitarsi nel 1910.

Nel maggio del 1911 si sposa. Continua a lavorare intensamente e le esecuzioni di musiche sue hanno luogo sempre più frequentemente.

Nella primavera del 1914 Berg assiste alla rappresentazione dei frammenti di Wozzeck di Büchner e pensa subito ad una realizzazione operistica, ma richiamato alle armi deve soprassedere a concretare il progetto. Nel '20 l'opera è terminata, ma soltanto nel '25 venne rappresentata a Berlino. Seguì da allora anche le vicissitudini politiche, il regime nazista avendone proibito la rappresentazione e la diffusione. In Italia venne eseguita per la prima volta a Roma nel 1942; dopo la guerra a Napoli. In questi ultimi anni, del resto, tutto il mondo occidentale (ancora recentemente il governo cecoslovacco ne ha proibito la rappresentazione) ha fatto posto, nei maggiori teatri, a quest'opera accolta con enorme interesse e notevole successo.

Dal 1920 sino al '28 lavora a varie opere strumentali e pensa da quel momento alla composizione d'un'altra opera. Dopo aver pensato a vari soggetti si decide per Lulù, che è la fusione di due tragedie di Wedekind (Lo spirito della terra e Il vaso di Pandora). L'opera sarà finita soltanto nel '34 e la sua strumentazione resterà incompiuta.

Il 24 dicembre 1935 infatti la morte lo sorprende: un avvelenamento del sangue, contro cui inutilmente si tentano cure (persino un'operazione ed una abbondante trasfusione di sangue) ha ragione del suo fisico che inutilmente aveva tentato di vincere il male.

Presentare un'opera nuova è un impegno sempre. In certi casi questo impegno può diventare un pericolo, perchè difficile è mantenere un equilibrio e dare una esatta visione dell'oggetto. Nei tempi passati queste presentazioni non si rendevano necessarie. Era il pubblico stesso che accorreva alle opere nuove con una sete che sembrava inestinguibile. Oggi il pubblico ha necessità di queste presentazioni perchè troppo si è allontanato dall'artista.

Il lettore si stupirà di questa affermazione, abituato com'è a sentir dire il contrario, a sentir dire che l'artista ha abbandonato il pubblico. Non è vero. Il processo è tutt'altro. L'uomo, durante tutta la sua storia, quella almeno che conosciamo, dimostra la necessità d'una sollecitazione qualsiasi che lo porti al di sopra e al di là di se stesso, che lo esalti oltre le normali pulsazioni del suo cuore: la lotta con le belve, la lotta coi suoi simili, l'estasi religiosa, l'amore per la cultura e per l'arte non sono che diversi sentimenti, di diversi momenti, nati dalla stessa necessità. Necessità di credere in qualcosa, sia pure nella sollecitazione fantastica che l'artista gli fornisce.

Il trionfo dell'arte, da un punto di vista popolare e di diffusione, si ha logicamente nell'800, quando appunto la fantasia dell'artista supera ogni barriera formale. Il romanticismo era stato la giustificazione ideale alla rivoluzione; questa conclusa, l'arte aveva continuato a lievitare nello spirito le speranze di un qualcosa d'inespresso forse, di non raggiunto, che trovava soddisfazione nella fantasia dell'artista.

Questa è la grande fortuna del melodramma: dare agli uomini un contrappeso di fermento alla loro quietudine.

Ma un nuovo fattore avrebbe nuovamente spostato l'animo degli uomini: le scoperte elettro-meccaniche prima e poi atomiche avrebbero dato un nuovo senso alla vita dell'individuo, staccandolo dall'arte e portandolo su di un altro sentiero. Nel giro di due generazioni la vita ha subìto tale una spinta che lo spirito umano è proteso verso le scoperte che quasi giornalmente ci esaltano e sconvolgono, così che l'arte è impallidita nel suo progressivo sviluppo e in essa l'uomo non trova più ciò che vi trovava nell'800, ma desidera trovare esattamente l'opposto: il riposo, la contemplazione, l'angolo remoto nella selva dei suoi pensieri. L'artista innovatore non interessa più, perchè non interessa la sollecitazione dell'arte. Beato Verdi che ebbe la grande fortuna d'essere amato, dal Nabucco sino a Otello, in tutte le fasi del suo prodigioso cammino in continua evoluzione. Una simile ventura non è capitata a nessun altro e nel suo nome oggi, da parte dell'ascoltatore, anzichè l'indizio del progresso costante si sottolinea la costante, diciamo così, perfezione.

Questa, ci pare, la ragione del distacco del pubblico dall'opera d'arte che insiste a voler sollecitarne una fantasia che non c'è più, attratta da altri oggetti.

La storia (ma evidentemente non si può pretendere che tutti conoscano nei più minuti particolari la meravigliosa avventura della musica) insegna, indica i graduali passaggi dell'arte da uno stadio ad un altro, nella quotidiana evoluzione del suo manifestarsi; insegna anche, così in musica come in tutte le cose, che lo stupore di oggi è norma di domani, che il gesto rivoluzionario di oggi, domani è legge. Ma, distratta la mente dell'uomo da troppe immagini caoticamente apparse davanti ai suoi occhi, il teatro musicale è fermo, paurosamente in bilico sull'orlo della sua stessa fossa.

È storia nota: più che storia, cronaca quotidiana: il repertorio non si rinnova. Verdi e Wagner, le due grandi colonne del teatro ottocentesco sembrano aver esaurito le possibilità del teatro, seguiti appena da uno sparutissimo nucleo di musicisti di qualità infinitamente inferiore.

Preso l'esterno per il tutto, come sempre avviene dell'arte, la formula verdiana e la formula wagneriana seguirono, come titoli in borsa, diverse quotazioni. Ma la formula wagneriana era certamente più attraente perchè prometteva « un avvenire ». Questo avvenire peraltro sarebbe miseramente naufragato nella mancanza di genio di chi credeva nella formula e non si accorgeva del contenuto essenziale dell'opera wagneriana. Verdi per contro, suonato anche dagli organetti all'angolo della strada, sembrava troppo banale a chi (desiderio legittimo non solo, ma obbligatorio per ogni artista) desiderava andare avanti ed in alto. Succedeva il fenomeno inverso a quello che si verificava per Wagner: là si assumeva la formula senza arrivare al contenuto, qui la formula si rifiutava e con essa il contenuto. La melodia infinita e il sinfonismo si contrapponevano alla forma chiusa (distillato d'antica saggezza musico-teatrale) e il teatro perdeva l'orientamento.

E con esso il pubblico.

In questa situazione cosa rappresenta Alban Berg e la sua prima opera Wozzeck? Rappresenta un momento della storia del teatro e dell'arte: rappresenta l'espressionismo. E l'espressionismo cosa rappresenta?

Non c'è periodo dell'arte che non sia strettamente legato ad un periodo dell'umanità: non c'è espressione d'arte che non sia stretta manifestazione dello spirito dell'intera umanità. Anche se l'umanità rifiuta quella manifestazione d'arte. Il rinascimento, il barocco, il classicismo, il romanticismo non sono che apporti dell'artista alla vita dell'uomo e ne sono nel contempo la raffigurazione. Così l'espressionismo.

In Italia, diciamo meglio, nei paesi latini, dell'espressionismo, nelle sue manifestazioni originali, giunsero, più o meno, soltanto gli echi, non avendo dato questi paesi, un reale apporto alla nuova manifestazione d'arte. L'espressionismo trovò la sua culla e sviluppò la sua breve vita in terra tedesca. L'arte prevedeva e presentiva la condizione del paese: condizione politica, sociale, ideale che avrebbe portato alla guerra e avrebbe dovuto portare ad un totale rivolgimento della vita (se non fosse intervenuto il nazismo con la sua atroce filosofia). La guerra avrebbe messo l'umanità di fronte a quel vero tragico che ad un certo momento era stato appannaggio dell'arte (il verismo) e avrebbe riportato la discussione che ha ripercussioni vastissime sino alla teologia, sulla qualità del vero e sulla sua interpretazione e sulla possibilità di rappresentazione. L'espressionismo, ad onta delle apparenze, che ad un esame superficiale possono suggerire il contrario, è il controverismo: il verismo è la rappresentazione del vero; l'espressionismo ne è l'interpretazione. Non v'ha dubbio che la ragione sia da questa parte piuttosto che da quella.

Anche se in fondo sia l'una che l'altra manifestazione scendono nella corrente del romanticismo (1).

L'espressionismo ebbe artisti ed opere d'arte di notevole importanza in ogni campo, dalla poesia alla pittura, dalla letteratura alla musica. Ma fu movimento che pur lasciando tracce che ancor oggi s'avvertono sensibilissime in molte opere contemporanee, ebbe breve vita. Nel tragico materialismo in cui la guerra aveva piombato l'umanità, nella falsa idolatria pagana che il nazismo istaurava (il nazismo come qualsiasi regime totalitario che crede di riassumere in se anche tutte le ragioni dell'arte, creando quel non senso che si chiama arte di stato e via dicendo), la forza spirituale dell'espressionismo doveva cedere ineluttabilmente, come qualsiasi forza spirituale deve cedere, apparentemente, alla forza bruta. Ma il seme era gettato e non al vento: oggi ancora, come già s'è detto, vive, nell'opera di molti contemporanei, il senso di quella verità.

Alban Berg crebbe nell'atmosfera dell'espressionismo ed evidentemente, accingendosi a scrivere un lavoro di teatro non poteva dar vita che ad un'opera espressionista. Di tanto maggior interesse e valore, vorremmo dire, in quanto questo espressionismo sarebbe risultato dalla sua collaborazione con un poeta vissuto cent'anni prima di lui, Georg Büchner. Anche Büchner cercava una verità e la cercava con un anticipo di cent'anni. Nato nel 1813 (come Verdi e Wagner, vedi coincidenza) egli è in anticipo sulla sua stessa generazione, quella generazione che vedeva tutto entusiasticamente, nella aspirazione al sublime, nell'abbandono fantastico, nella ricerca del bello nel fantastico, del sublime anche nell'orrido: Büchner guarda alla terra. Egli vede il vero e lo interpreta: la miseria può anch'essa esser fonte di poesia e poesia sono spesso le parole di Wozzeck. Ma questo stato di grazia, questa poesia è opera di Büchner poeta, ma v'è un Büchner polemico, un autore contemporaneo di Bellini e di Chopin, di Meyerbeer e di Schumann, di Mendelssohn e di Donizetti, un autore che vive la sua giovinezza nel clima pieno del romanticismo e che si accorge dell'enorme distanza che intercorre tra sogno e realtà, questa prendendo come scopo della sua arte. È forse anche questa una maniera di essere romantici.

Ma negli anni attorno alla prima guerra mondiale il senso di questo realismo era un altro: la polemica da morale si fa sociale, da ideale si fa politica e, desiderando con questi termini segnare degli estremi, preghiamo di comprenderli proprio nella loro estrema accezione. Alban Berg trova nel dramma di Wozzeck il dramma di un simbolo, il simbolo del miserabile; il miserabile, preda eterna di ele-menti eterni: la paura, l'ignoranza, la gelosia, da una parte e dall'altra uomini come il Dottore, che della miseria altrui fa un « esperimento », il Capitano che ne fa un « divertimento », il Tamburmaggiore che ne fa un oggetto di scherno. La tragedia (ed ecco l'interpretazione poetica, il realismo fatto opera d'arte) non è tanto in Wozzeck che la provoca uccidendo Maria e suicidandosi, quanto nell'abbandono ad essa, nella impossibilità di ribellarsi ad essa: la tragedia non sta nella coltellata, ma nella miseria totale dell'essere che la vibra, nell'essere che non può non vibrarla perchè è l'unica cosa che possa fare, l'unica cosa si direbbe che gli possa dare una parvenza di dignità umana. Ma sopra tutto la tragedia è nella responsabilità del Dottore e del Capitano che sprofondano sempre più, nella sua miseria, il soldato Wozzeck: questo è l'elemento polemico. Negli anni intorno alla prima guerra mondiale come un secolo prima, come forse un secolo dopo ancora sarà. Com'è sempre stato.

(1) È straordinario come, allontanandosi nel tempo, ogni manifestazione dello spirito umano trovi collocazione nel romanticismo dal quale ad un certo momento sembra sia necessario distaccarsi violentemente e non ci si accorge che non dal romanticismo ci si stacca, ma dalla romanticheria che è la scoria di quello.

Intorno al soldato Wozzeck stanno poi gli altri personaggi, simboli del dramma: il Capitano (l'ipocrita); il Dottore (l'esaltatore del materialismo); il Tamburmaggiore (l'animalità maschile); Maria (la debolezza). Tutti egualmente miserabili, ma nessuno così ineluttabilmente oppresso come Wozzeck. Da ciò la sua assunzione ad una condizione mitica, che è condizione indispensabile al teatro.

Si ripropone di frequente il problema dell'impegno (1) morale dell'artista di fronte all'umanità oltrechè di fronte all'opera d'arte (2). Certo che se mai questo impegno si è mostrato, ciò fu per opera dei poeti e dei musicisti espressionisti.

La polemica sociale, violenta e senza quartiere, del poeta, trova un corrispettivo nella violenza espressiva del musicista: il canto si spezza perdendo ogni « bellezza » per acquistare solo espressione, qualunque essa sia, comunque sia raggiunta (il maggior esempio è la Dreigroschen Oper di Kurt Weill che nessuno osa mettere in scena...). Da ciò l'ammissione di altre formule d'enunciazione, vicino al canto: il parlato cantato (Sprachgesang), il parlato ritmico, il parlato libero, che si alternano al canto propriamente detto; da ciò lo sfruttamento timbrico di ogni singolo strumento (in contrasto con l'ideale romantico culminato nell'impressionismo che curava specialmente l'impasto strumentale, cioè l'annullamento di ogni singolo timbro in un vasto e composito colorismo sinfonico), addirittura la ammissione nelle orchestre normali di strumenti particolari (risulta evidente a chiunque che una fisarmonica in orchestra dà un particolare colore, per esempio) quando non addirittura, come in Wozzeck, di interi complessi quale un'orchestra campestre. Il fine, si suol dire, giustifica i mezzi, ma in questo caso sono i mezzi che esclusivamente danno il fine: non sarebbe concepibile un'opera espressionista che non usasse di questi mezzi.

(1) Imperfetta traduzione del termine « engagement » ritornato in questo dopoguerra oggetto di discussioni senza fine. Termine nato in Francia, con un particolare significato, sopra tutto politico, che una qualsiasi traduzione italiana non rende nel suo valore più intimo.

Ma giunti a questo punto può da taluno sorgere la domanda se fosse veramente indispensabile avviarsi su un terreno che evidentemente era minato se, tanto raramente, da allora l'opera d'arte ha avuto affermazioni quali contava per il passato.

Anche questo ragionamento, se si voglia farlo, porta su un terreno minato: porta cioè all'amara constatazione sulle precarie condizioni dell'arte contemporanea, condizioni cui si è arrivati non per colpa (o merito, la storia solamente potrà dirlo) solo dell'espressionismo, ma certo in quel periodo iniziatesi e tali rimaste sinanche ad oggi. Discorso vecchio ormai e pieno di risorse dialettiche, acquisite appunto dalla lunga, ahimè troppo lunga esperienza e che ineluttabilmente lascia immutate le opinioni e i fatti quali sono.

Il ciclo si richiude sul discorso iniziale di questo scritto, ma riporta in evidenza quella forza che continuamente, dalla voce di Orfeo in poi ha spinto l'artista a rinnovare i suoi mezzi d'espressione in una sempre rinnovata gara d'emulazione tra la fantasia e la sensibilità dello spettatore e la sua opera.

Verdi, lo si è detto, è un meraviglioso esempio che va dal periodo che diremo, tanto per intenderci, risorgimentale fino alla più potente umanità che teatro musicale abbia visto. Forse a nessun musicista fu data una così aperta genialità e una vita tanto lunga e così ben collocata nel tempo da consentire questo progressivo rinnovamento dei propri mezzi d'espressione. Agli altri è dato di arrivare come meteora su questo mondo, lanciando, quando vi sia, il suo fascio di luce, sconvolgendo quel tanto di terra che si trova d'intorno, lasciando qualche traccia di se e infine scomparendo. Altri ancora, e sono i più, si interrano senza luce, confondendosi con la materia esistente e in essa scomparendo.

Certo è che dopo Verdi e dopo Wagner (un teatro e un altro teatro), dopo Mussorsky e dopo Debussy (ancora un altro ed un altro teatro) non restava che la via di Puccini, l'unico degli operisti postverdiani che abbia saputo dire qualche cosa, tutti gli altri arrivando a dire una cosa, anche se gloriosamente.

Era il trionfo del verismo, nato da una cattiva interpretazione degli epigoni che prendevano il lato esteriore dell'operismo anche verdiano (forse che la storia di Otello è molto diversa, appunto nei suoi lati esteriori, da quella dei Pagliacci? Un corto di vista non ne vede le enormi, abissali differenze operate da due artisti di così differente levatura quali Verdi e Leoncavallo) e credevano di poter ripetere all'infinito la formula ottenendo sempre lo stesso risultato. Fu anche questa fiducia nella formula, questa mancanza di genio che portò alla stanchezza un teatro che non sapeva dare più niente di nuovo. Nel campo del fantastico, si ridicevano cose che altri aveva dette con tanta più efficacia; nel campo del veristico non si faceva che ripetersi (anche il brivido più violento, quando diventi abitudinario cessa di provocare brivido). Occorreva dunque ritornare a più antiche origini, sia pure con mezzi diversi, ritornare alle fonti addirittura, così come, quando un ruscello s'intorbida, se ne risale la corrente a trovare il tratto ancor limpido, sia pure sino alla sorgente. Ecco perchè in quel tempo si fece gran parlare di Monteverdi: perchè Monteverdi era la sorgente purissima del teatro musicale. Monteverdi era stato il primo espressionista del teatro musicale: era stato il primo cioè che aveva fatto cantare un dramma, mettendo in quel canto una vibrazione che, da sola diventava dramma, era stato il primo a creare un dramma musicale. Ricreare il dramma in questa via era l'intento, conscio o no dell'artista espressionista.

Alla lunga, ogni disputa sull'arte si esaurisce in un gioco verbale sul quale si può capirsi perfettamente e non capirsi affatto a seconda che dietro le parole ci sia una particolare sensibilità che faccia capire ciò che le parole non arrivano ad esprimere. Ciò che poi conta è vedere la vitalità dell'opera d'arte. Ma conta anche vedere di dove parte l'artista per arrivare alla sua creazione.

Berg stesso dà alcune spiegazioni della sua opera d'arte, in qualche scritto sulla musica e sul teatro. Ad un certo momento egli afferma la necessità di fare della musica tanto buona che ne risulti del buon teatro. In ciò si vede la preoccupazione del musicista, quella preoccupazione che purtroppo molti musicisti non hanno, intenti soprattutto a fare del teatro con musica, tutt'al più. Da questa preoccupazione nasce a sua volta la necessità di racchiudere la propria materia in forme prestabilite che abbiano già in quanto forme, un preciso carattere emotivo e quindi drammatico; in questa libera ma cosciente scelta non c'è nessun amore d'arcaismo e nessun desiderio di riforma (è lo stesso Berg che ce lo rivela): c'è sempre e soltanto il desiderio di servire il dramma senza peraltro rinunciare alla musica, anzi di servirsi di questa per potenziare quello.

Ma cosa s'intende per musica? Per il profano è musica «Questa o quella» come «Casta Diva» come il «Credo» di Jago, come infine una Sonata di Beethoven. Il che è solo parzialmente vero. È vero (un paragone può servire), con quelle differenze che intercorrono tra un disegno a tratto ed un quadro, opere d'arte figurativa ambedue, ambedue espressive ed efficaci, ma evidentemente in modo diverso. Il disegno melodico dei primi operisti dell'800 ad un certo momento evidentemente si esaurisce sino a richiedere dell'altro. Ed ecco che il teatro si avvia poco a poco verso il sinfonismo sino ad arrivare ad essere, come ironicamente dice Schoenberg «una sinfonia per grande orchestra con accompagnamento di canto ». E allora perchè mettere delle voci che cantano sul palcoscenico se si ha fiducia soltanto nel sinfonismo d'una grande orchestra? (1). Nello stesso periodo, più o meno si affievolisce l'importanza del canto come mezzo d'espressione solo e insuperabile (il colorismo sinfonico di Verdi è avvertibilissimo nelle sue ultime opere pur senza la completa abdicazione dell'espressivismo canoro); d'altro canto la voce umana, oltre che strumento è veicolo della parola: in un tessuto musicale più elaborato, queste funzioni possono essere espletate in altro modo, ma non abolite, evidentemente. Ecco allora la voce che si piega alle molte esigenze dell'espressionismo che cerca anche con quel mezzo di raggiungere quella verità espressiva nella quale l'artista crede: la voce canta, la voce parla, la voce sillaba, la voce recita. Sono sfumature forse, ma ognuna ha una sua importanza, una sua funzione in quel determinato momento, per quel determinato personaggio.

Tutto ciò, è inutile dirlo, è fatto per stupire. Vogliamo dire che tutto questo complesso di novità, questa libera (ancorchè vigilata e misurata) scelta dei mezzi e la loro enunciazione non può lasciare indifferenti. Può entusiasmare chi veda in una siffatta opera una speranza di sopravvivenza del teatro musicale (il teatro non è la verità, ma una interpretazione della verità; il teatro musicale è una superinterpretazione d'una verità già traslata) e può irritare chi, senza saperlo, dorme tra le tombe di un teatro che sopravvive per opera delle sue più alte imprese passate. Le considerazioni sulla « nobiltà di fattura », la « serietà d'intenti » ecc., dietro cui si nasconde la noia del vieto luogo comune cui da anni (salvo eccezioni, in su o in giù, ma rarissime) siamo abituati, qui non è pronunciabile. Qui siamo di fronte ad un'opera che è invenzione di mezzi nuovi, ad un'opera che è espressione d'un periodo della storia dell'uomo, che ha lasciato un solco, ad un'opera infine che raggiunge una maturità vorremmo dire inspiegabile se si pensa che si trattava della prima opera d'un musicista ancor giovane che creava un modello da cui solo l'ignoranza (e altre cause affatto estranee all'arte) può prescindere. Essa giunge, sebbene storicamente logica, come fulmine a ciel sereno per un pubblico normale, per un pubblico cioè che basa i nove decimi della sua conoscenza all'operismo di repertorio (selezionato e del più alto valore non v'ha dubbi, ma nondimeno di repertorio) e che ha arrestato a quello la sua conoscenza e quindi la sua sensibilità e la sua possibilità d'apprezzare certi valori che lo sbalordiscono e possono renderlo diffidente come di un tentativo di lesa maestà.

Questo è veramente il segno della frattura lamentata nel nostro

(1) Un'altra forma di aberratio theatralis è quella enunciata da certi « puristi della musica » che, entrati in un teatro d'opera, chiudono gli occhi... e ascoltano. Teatro deriva dal verbo greco « theaomai » che significava contemplare, guardare ed in ciò sta l'assurdo di quel teatro che pretende di non farsi guardare.

secolo: non tra arte e pubblico, non tra arte passata e presente, ma frattura nella coscienza stessa dell'uomo che non sa ritrovare se stesso se non in manifestazioni non artistiche, in una assuefazione ad una condizione spirituale statica, piuttosto che nella ricerca d'un equilibrio tra la sua anima ed il suo corpo in una vita che non è stasi ma divenire continuo.

L'uomo che ha visto cadere una ad una (e altre vedrà) le « verità » nelle quali credeva e si assuefà giornalmente alle successive verità che si vanno scoprendo, non vuol assuefarsi alle nuove verità dello spirito. Quegli stessi che già hanno prenotato un posto sul primo mezzo in partenza per la luna, fremono ancora di commozione alle avventure del melodramma (e ciò non sarebbe male), ma restano incerti quando addirittura non indignati delle manifestazioni d'arte contemporanea (e questo è male).

E restano sempre più soli in questo mondo che poco a poco vedrà cancellati quei sentimenti per i quali soltanto mette conto di vivere.

Ma ciò non è colpa dell'artista che disperatamente lavora per dare al suo simile qualcosa.

Il capolavoro? no: solo una piccola chiave per entrare in un mondo diverso nel quale il vero e il bello, l'orrido ed il fantastico solo esistono perchè dalla nostra stessa vibrazione ci creiamo ciò che l'arte, interpretando ci suggerisce.

L'OPERA NEL SUO ASPETTO DRAMMATICO E MUSICALE

L'opera Wozzeck si avvale del dramma stesso di Georg Büchner, come libretto. Come abbiamo già detto, il poeta, morendo, ha lasciato più che un'opera organicamente compiuta, una serie di frammenti, di scene, che forse poteva pensare di sviluppare e distendere in un « testo » teatralmente più compiuto ed organizzato. Se ciò fosse avvenuto, probabilmente il musicista avrebbe dovuto operare una riduzione, tagliare, sfrondare nella distesa prosa e tenere per la sua necessità di drammaturgo-musicista solamente il nocciolo del dramma. Essendo qual'era rimasto dalle mani del poeta, il dramma invece è servito tal quale al musicista che solo ha dovuto scegliere le scene più adatte a questa trasfigurazione musicale e, concatenandole l'una all'altra (e nulla meglio della musica si presta a questi legamenti) formarne tre atti e ricostruirle in opera in musica. Le parole stesse che Büchner scrisse, la sua stessa prosa sono diventate musica, abolendosi anche qui il concetto di necessità poetica, diciamo meglio di versificazione (che spesso nulla aveva a che fare con la poesia) dell'ottocento melodrammatico.

Il dramma originale si compone virtualmente di ventisei scene; diciamo virtualmente perchè alcune di queste non hanno che la durata di poche battute e non possono quindi esser dette delle vere e proprie scene; oltre a ciò rimane il fatto che sappiamo esser rimasto il testo semplicemente allo stato d'abbozzo. Comunque di queste ventisei scene, Alban Berg ne ha colte quindici, cinque per ogni atto, come vedremo nell'analisi dell'opera, raggiungendo quella « organizzazione » drammatica indispensabile alla rappresentatività di un'opera teatrale. Esse sono collegate da interludi che, per lo più conchiudono la precedente e preparano la seguente.

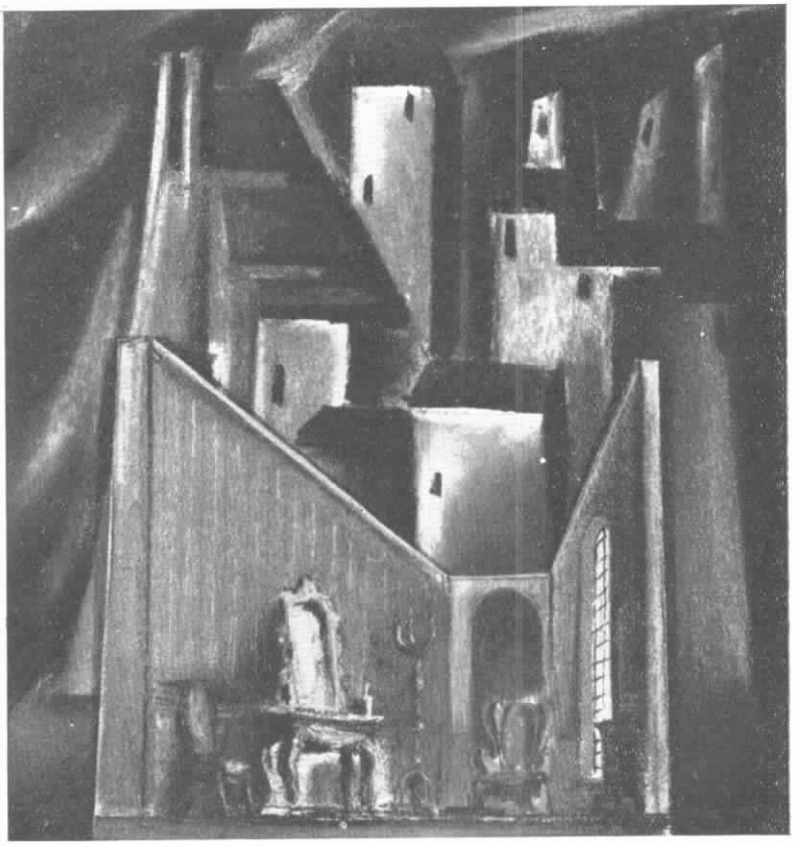
L'orchestra ha un organico molto grosso così che si può dire vi siano tutte le possibilità coloristiche concesse dal più vasto assortimento di strumenti: in scena trova posto oltre a ciò una banda militare ed un'orchestra da osteria (un'orchestra campestre si direbbe con una terminologia abbastanza comune).



Infine, sempre sulla scena, compare anche un organetto, o per meglio dire un pianino meccanico.

L'uso dei singoli strumenti e dei vari gruppi è severamente alternato per una esatta caratterizzazione dei personaggi e dei loro sentimenti.

Le voci dei cantanti sono usate spesso non soltanto col loro valore melodico, ma anche come « Sprechstimme » ovverosia come voce declamante, via di mezzo tra il canto aperto e la fredda recitazione: genere instaurato da Arnold Schoenberg nel suo Pierrot lunaire. Teniamo subito a dire che non si deve pensare a questo Sprechstimme come al parlato dei Singspiele tedeschi (il Fidelio per esempio) dove il recitativo italiano diviene proprio il parlato, come nella commedia. Qui si tratta di una quasi-melodia, scritta con note musicali che stanno ad indicare un'altezza dell'intensità della parola, un ritmo preciso che deve coincidere col ritmo dell'orchestra: è insomma veramente qualcosa che si avvicina al recitativo secco del melodramma italiano.

Ma oltre a questo vi è anche un vero e proprio parlato, come vedremo, assommandosi così a tre i tipi di « pronuncia » del testo.

Atto Primo. - L'opera non ha sinfonia e nemmeno preludio. La prima scena rappresenta « La stanza del capitano ». L'ufficiale seduto su di una seggiola mentre Wozzeck lo rade, parla del tempo, della virtù, della morale; Wozzeck si limita a rispondergli a monosillabi e poi, sollecitato dal capitano, con frasi che denotano una specie di stupore rassegnato di fronte alla sua miseria. La seconda scena « Aperta campagna e nello sfondo la città » vede Wozzeck che taglia legna con Andres; fa strani discorsi di paure, di misteri che denotano la sua psiche oppressa, si direbbe dai complessi d'inferiorità della sua condizione. La terza scena ci porta nella « Camera di Maria »; la donna tiene il bimbo in braccio e ammira il Tamburmaggiore che passa con la banda militare. Poi arriva Wozzeck, che non entra nemmeno, e racconta le sue fantasticherie. Sulla miseria di Wozzeck s'innesta la miseria di Maria, donna di dubbi costumi, si direbbe da certe allusioni successive d'una vicina. Nella quarta scena siamo nello « Studio del dottore »: qui è il contrasto tra la quasi-demenza di Wozzeck e la presuntuosa scienza del dottore che lo giudica come un caso interessante e nient'altro. Nella quinta scena siamo « Davanti alla porta di Maria »: la donna guarda estasiata il Tamburmaggiore che la corteggia ed alla fine si abbandona al suo abbraccio. È il trionfo dell'animalità sensuale di questo essere privo di spirito.

Bozzetto di Gianni Ratto per la I Scena del Primo Atto

Nello svolgersi di queste prime cinque scene già si delineano le figure del dramma e la loro consistenza, vorremmo dire, puramente fisica, materiale; non v'è, almeno per il momento, nessuna traccia di quelli che comunemente si chiamano sentimenti: non amore, non pietà, non speranza. L'anticipazione di Georg Büchner in questo è veramente straordinaria: se si pensa al momento in cui tale dramma, o abbozzo di dramma, fu scritto, momento in cui l'esistenza dell'uomo sembrava essere solamente un inno all'amore, alla gioia, alla bellezza, una continua aspirazione al sublime, tradotto in quella che fu la espressione primoromantica dell'arte, si vedrà come Büchner sia stato un uomo non del suo tempo o almeno che del suo tempo ha scelto quel lato meno esteriore meno apparente. Quel lato che, sfumata l'ebbrezza del primo incontro romantico, sarebbe poco a poco giunto sino al verismo e più tardi all'espressionismo di cui, il dramma di Wozzeck è, con cent'anni d'anticipo, il più straordinario esempio.

Forse per quest'opera drammatica era necessario l'incontro con la musica. Diciamo meglio questo incontro con la musica di Alban Berg.

Come abbiamo detto nelle prime pagine, la frammentarietà del testo anzichè nuocere al musicista, gli diede la possibilità di raggiungere la sua espressione che doveva essere necessariamente antiwagneriana e, diremo per brevità anche se con una certa improprietà, antiverdiana: non poteva cioè accedere alla melodia infinita o alla forma chiusa espressa nel convenzionale taglio melodico. Doveva essere una forma diremo quasi, aforistica che consentisse la creazione di altrettanti momenti, legati tra di loro da un'architettura ideale, ma esauriti ciascuno in se stesso. Altri musicisti tenteranno, in altra forma, la stessa strada, evidentemente l'unica che possa essere ancora aperta per il teatro musicale: si pensi a Darius Milhaud con le sue opéra-minute, a Gianfrancesco Malipiero con le sue Sette canzoni. Tentativi diversi, ma egualmente geniali, per raggiungere uno stesso scopo.

Tanto più importante storicamente quest'opera poichè per essa nuovamente si stabiliscono delle fondamenta su cui praticamente si innalzerà tutto l'edificio del teatro musicale contemporaneo, quello che conta appunto, storicamente almeno, se si ristabilirà quella tradizione che ancora tentenna. Un'altra volta si può fare il parallelo tra Alban Berg e Claudio Monteverdi, entrambi essendo riusciti per primi a dar vita ad una creazione di cui solo esistevano i presupposti.

Ognuna delle cinque scene che formano il primo atto può essere presa musicalmente per un brano a se stante così che parimenti cinque saranno i brani musicali: una Suite, una Rapsodia, una Marcia militare e berçeuse, una Passacaglia e un Andante affettuoso.

Naturalmente questi termini non devono essere presi strettamente alla lettera, ma accolti con una certa liberalità: la suite iniziale ad esempio non può certo essere apparentata con la suite bachiana... anche se di quella mantiene alcune forme e sopra tutto alcune terminologie, ma semplicemente come un seguito di brani musicali che stanno l'uno all'altro in rapporto per un, vorremmo dire, consequenziale contrasto: contrasto perchè alternati di ritmo e di movimento e di colore strumentale, consequenziale perchè nati l'uno dall'altro per esigenze espressive e dinamiche.

La Suite si compone di: un Preludio, composto delle prime trenta misure; una Pavana che inizia sulle parole del capitano « Il mondo mi fa spavento, quando penso all'eternità... »: una Giga sulle parole « Che tempo abbiamo oggi... »: una Gavotta su « Morale: ciò vuol dir costumato ». Un'Aria in tre parti durante la quale si svolge il dialogo tra il Capitano e Wozzeck. Terminato questo riprende, pur variato, il preludio che nelle sue variazioni appunto prepara la seconda scena.

Forse a non segnalare all'ascoltatore tutte queste suddivisioni, c'è da pensare che nemmeno se ne accorgerebbe e ciò per varie ragioni: prima di tutto per la fluidità con cui la materia è condotta onde la composizione formale-musicale e l'enunciazione verbale s'intersecano e si fondono, rendendosi l'una all'altra succedanea e complementare: oltre a ciò sta una certa unità tematica che dipende dallo sfruttamento di un nucleo melodico e ritmico nei molteplici aspetti delle variazioni, che pur presentandosi sempre diverse, mantengono sempre una fondamentale fisionomia che naturalmente ingenerà quella unità di cui poc'anzi si parlava e crea quella quadratura formale che delimita e anima le singole scene nella loro singolarità e nel loro sviluppo di contrasti e di conseguenze.

La seconda scena è una Rapsodia, ma non è da intendere con questo nome niente di improvvisatorio o di folcloristico, anche se il canto di Andres assume un tono popolaresco, bensì una forma libera in cui si svolge il dialogo di Wozzeck e di Andres, su un tessuto musicale sviluppato in forma di variazioni. In questa scena, per la prima volta viene usato il « parlato-cantato ». Riteniamo di straordinaria efficacia soprattutto la fine di questo brano, dopo che i personaggi in scena si tacciono, per un senso così spettrale e allucinante dell'orchestra, in cui s'insinua, quasi come unico elemento « vero », una tromba che sembra preannunciare col suo scandito ritmo militaresco, la scena successiva, quasi un « segno » di tutto il dramma.

Siamo nella camera di Maria: a quell'atmosfera di prima si sovrappone, sempre più marcata quella della banda militare che è la vera protagonista della scena, quasi lo spirito immanente della perdizione di Maria la cui vita dipende, si potrebbe dire, dalle mani di due soldati: Wozzeck e il Tamburmaggiore. Segue una Berçeuse che Maria canta al suo bimbo, brano altamente melodico e ricco di un

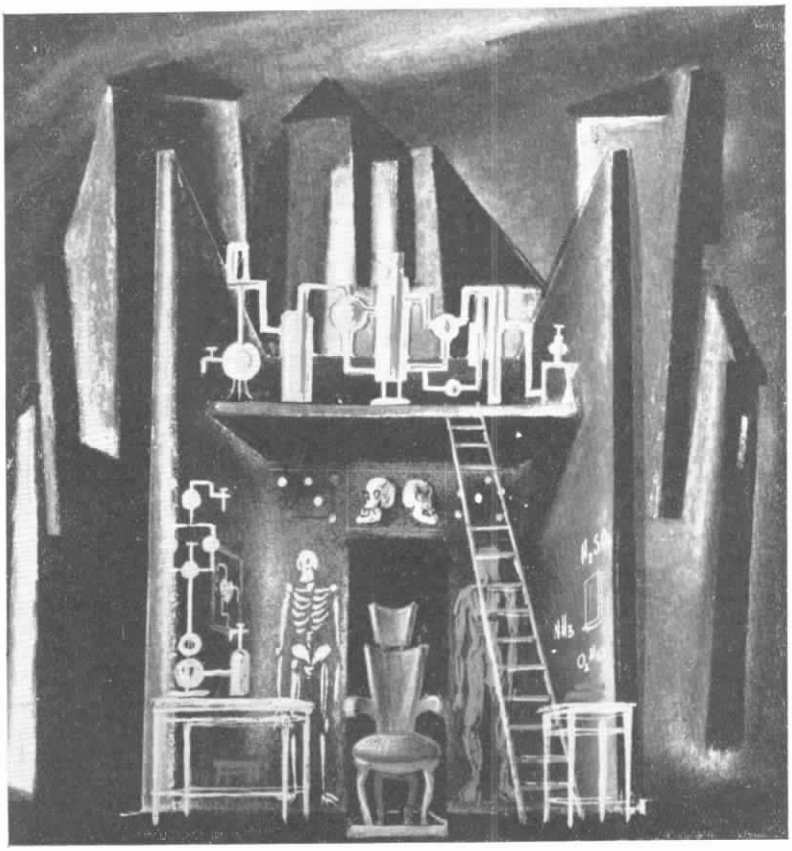
e la I del Secondo e del Terzo

colore particolare che dà maggior rilievo a questo personaggio che è il meno rilevante tra tutti: questa scena è concatenata ad un successivo affrettato dialogo tra Franz e Maria in cui il soldato fa strani accenni a cose che sta scoprendo: frasi sconnesse apparentemente di una mente che sta tra la malattia, l'insipienza e la morbosità. Ancora una volta qui la musica si fa ponte tra una scena e l'altra, sviluppando elementi melodici e ritmici della scena passata e affacciandone altri che troveremo sviluppati nella successiva, una Passacaglia.

Questa Passacaglia è forse il brano più interessante e composito di tutta l'opera ed è l'unico che sia scritto in tecnica dodecafonica anche se qui e là altrove fan capolino dei procedimenti seriali. La passacaglia era un'antica danza spagnola secondo alcuni, italiana secondo altri che nella sua formazione non differisce gran che dalla ciaccona di cui serba le ragioni costruttive, cioè il seguito di variazioni e, originariamente, costruita su di un « ostinato », generalmente affidato al basso. In tempi più recenti la passacaglia si è un poco distaccata dalla forma prima, abbandonando l'ostinato: è assai usata dai compositori contemporanei che vedono nella forma delle variazioni successive, una vasta possibilità di costruzione.

Questa di Alban Berg si compone di un tema e di ventuna variazioni. È interessante, crediamo, vedere il perchè della scelta di questa forma ed il meccanismo che muove parole e musica.

Ci si permetta osservare che sempre, nella storia dell'opera in musica, si è avuta una difficoltà, costituita dalla inevitabile necessità di far narrare qualcosa ai personaggi: tra un'aria, una cabaletta, un duetto ed un concertato, vogliamo dire, vi sono pur sempre, vi debbono essere delle parti di legamento che sono la narrazione, se così si può dire, in confronto all'espansione lirica di quei momenti che si sublimano appunto in aria cabaletta e via dicendo. Nell'opera italiana questi legamenti erano rappresentati dai recitativi, secchi o accompagnati che fossero; nell'opera tedesca (il Singspiel) queste parti erano addirittura sostituite dalla parola parlata; più tardi tutto diviene melodia e si canta tanto la sublimazione lirica della poesia quanto la materialità cronistica della narrazione (Wagner). Il dissidio però in nessun caso si colma; delimitata o no, vi è sempre una differenza tra quelle che chiameremo lirica e prosa, tanto per intenderci. Differenza che può (abbiamo detto può, soltanto) risolversi in un nuovo elemento che si sostituisca alla somma di quelli prima enunciati.



Il melodramma romantico e prima ancora l'opera buffa, sintetizzavano in poche parole di recitativo, intere situazioni che si esprimevano poi liricamente nelle effusioni delle romanze, dei duetti, ecc. Successivamente questa necessità di spiegazioni (il recitativo) si fa più analitica, trasferendosi talvolta dalla situazione avventurosa, in situazione spirituale: la parola, purtroppo rimane sempre tale, cioè un mezzo piuttosto freddo e limitato, la melodia non sempre si presta alla delimitazione di queste indagini psicologiche, per cui deve subentrare la musica come tessuto e come materiale costruttivo: ecco la punteggiatura dei Leitmotive wagneriani che creano con una immagine prefissata una ragione lirica ai racconti dei personaggi. Più tardi si farà un altro tentativo: una costruzione musicale che quasi indipendentemente dalla parola cantata, crei nella sua plastica mobilità quell'interesse, quella situazione, quella emozione che la parola non riesce da sola a dare e che la musica da sola (si pensi alla sinfonia, alla sonata, ecc.) può perfettamente creare. Ma raramente una forma (appunto la sonata o la sinfonia) può avere la plastica dinamicità indispensabile a seguire un dialogo, per esempio ed ecco la necessità di scegliere forme più agili e plastiche: le variazioni, conglobate nella passacaglia, per esempio o nella ciaccona. Questa è fondamentalmente la ragione della fortuna contemporanea di queste forme cui s'aggiunge la possibilità di essenzialità espressiva, di economia fantastica, di sintesi che la variazione presenta.

La Passacaglia del primo atto di Wozzeck è forse il punto cruciale di tutta l'opera e per questo Alban Berg ha scelto questa forma, che mette conto di seguire nei suoi sviluppi.

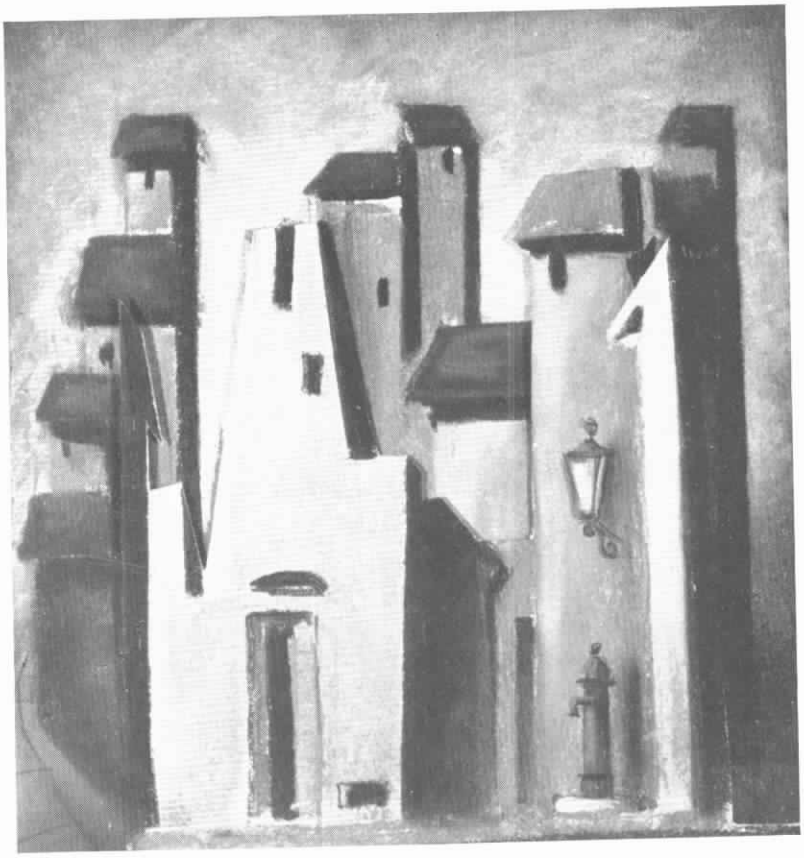
Nessuna forma musicale può, quanto le variazioni, essere paragonata ad una narrazione. Per meglio rendere l'idea (e ne mette conto per l'importanza dell'esempio che abbiamo in esame e per la comprensione di tante cose al di là dello stesso esempio) apriamo il primo capitolo dei Promessi sposi e leggiamone qualche riga: « Quel ramo del lago di Como, che volge a mezzogiorno (tema), tra due catene non interrotte di monti (prima variazione), tutto a seni e a golfi (seconda variazione), a seconda dello sporgere e del rientrare di quelli (terza variazione, quasi una unione della prima e della seconda), vien quasi a un tratto, a restringersi e a prender corso e figura di fiume (quarta variazione), tra un promontorio a destra e un'ampia costiera dall'altra parte (quinta variazione): e il ponte, che ivi congiunge le due rive, par che renda ancor più sensibile all'occhio questa trasformazione e segni il punto in cui il lago cessa e l'Adda rincomincia, per ripigliar poi il nome di lago dove le rive, allontanandosi di nuovo, lascian l'acqua distendersi e rallentarsi in nuovi golfi e in nuovi seni (sesta variazione) ». Non c'è nessuno, pensiamo che abbia un minimo di dimestichezza con la musica che non veda, pur se non vi aveva mai prima pensato, articolarsi le sei variazioni che musicalmente se ne potrebbero trarre, così che la parola anche se semplicemente nata ad una narrazione, quindi non ad una funzione lirica, potrebbe assumere attraverso la forma musicale appunto, questa funzione lirica, cioè d'un'espressione di più alta ed intensa emotività. Si verrebbe insomma ad avere in un certo senso una appropriazione, da parte della musica, di valori espressivi e finalmente una restituzione in nuova materia.

Questo crediamo sia il processo creativo di questo brano del-

Bozzetto di Gianni Ratto per la IV Scena del Primo Atto

l'opera di Berg, che consente oltre alla creazione d'una pagina di musica assoluta, una connessione strettissima col testo e quindi il più alto risultato drammatico.

Il tema ha esatto inizio sulle parole del Dottore « Cosa vedo Wozzeck? », e continua « Ho ben visto Wozzeck, tossisci nuovamente »: vi è dunque un tema anche letterario, nella tosse del soldato e nel fatto che da ciò prende inizio il discorso del Dottore. « Signor Dottore, a volte vien l'impulso », dice Wozzeck e su queste parole ripetute dal Dottore, ha inizio la prima variazione: « Vien l'impulso. Pregiudizio, ridicolo pregiudizio... ». Ma un nuovo elemento, che pur trae origine dal tema (la tosse) forma la seconda variazione: « Hai già mangiato i tuoi fagioli, Wozzeck?... » e continua « ... La settimana prossima mangeremo carne »: sulla parola mangeremo ha inizio la terza variazione. Probabilmente Alban Berg se avesse possibilità di leggere queste nostre parole sorriderebbe di esse e se ne stupirebbe come spesso accade all'artista che si vede attribuito dal critico e dallo storico intenzioni che spontaneamente ha tradotto in realtà senza pensarci, come una semplice istintiva necessità logica del suo spirito di creatore. Ma noi non possiamo, ciononpertanto, fare a meno di sottolineare questo fatto: che la parola « mangeremo » partecipa della passata e della futura variazione, quasi un ponte, un legame tra le due. Legame perfettamente logico che forma la continuità di questo brano musicale, oltre la sua stessa logica formale: si mangiano fagioli nella seconda, si mangia carne nella terza. Sono due variazioni di un'idea che poi si sviluppa come meglio può e crede, anche musicalmente, come nelle parole, ma, vogliamo dire, dando un significato, meglio, potenziando il significato, drammatico e lirico di queste parole.



Quarta variazione: « Io non m'arrabbierò... » fino alle parole « Accidenti, Wozzeck. Tu non dovevi più tossire » che si rifanno all'idea melodica del tema iniziale: la tosse. Seguono due brevi variazioni (la quinta e la sesta) in cui Wozzeck spiega a suo modo, prima, che viene l'impulso e poi quali sono le conseguenze di questo impulso. La settima variazione è formata da una sola battuta, su di una esclamazione di Wozzeck e la musica è a sua volta una semplice esclamazione. Potrà sembrar polemico dare ad una intera variazione il peso di una sola battuta, ma il rigore ideale del compositore lo rendeva indispensabile, rendeva indispensabile isolare questo pensiero che si manifesta in una sola esclamazione, ma che racchiude tutto un pensiero, un pensiero che non appartiene alla precedente ed alla seguente variazione, pur nascendo da una e concretandosi nell'altra che nasce sul nome Maria, il nome della donna di Wozzeck unito alle parole « E quando si fa buio... ». Il testo prende tutto un altro sviluppo ed anche la musica si snoda in nuove variazioni che portano al manifestarsi della « aberratio mentis » come dice il Dottore del soldato: « Dottore, quando il sole è sul mezzodì, ed è come se il mondo salga in fiamme (nona variazione), una voce spaventosa (decima variazione) mi ha di già parlato ». Qui il Dottore dice « Wozzeck, tu mi hai un'aberratio » e le sue parole stanno ancora una volta a cavallo delle due variazioni (il ponte di cui si parlava prima) ancora affidate a Wozzeck: « I funghi (undicesima variazione). Non avete mai visto a terra gli anelli dei funghi nei prati? Sembran cerchi (dodicesima variazione) figure. Chi saprà capirli ». Tredicesima variazione: « Wozzeck, tu vai al manicomio ». Quattordicesima: « Aberratio mentalis partialis ». Quindicesima: « Wozzeck, ricevi il soprassoldo ». Sedicesima: « Continui a fare come prima? ». Diciassettesima: « E i tuoi fagioli? ». Diciottesima: « Sei un caso interessante ». Diciannovesima: « I fagioli e poi del montone... ». Ventesima (una delle più importanti e che arriva ad un impressionante crescendo, quasi lo scoperto manifestarsi della follia del Dottore cui s'unisce la disperazione di Wozzeck, culminando sulle parole di quello): « Oh, La mia teoria. Oh, la gloria. Divento immortale... ».

Potrà sembrare al profano, il nostro e sopra tutto quello del compositore, un bizantinismo: si potrà usare ancora da taluno la parola di fuoco che bolla, e tenta di bollare, gran parte dell'arte contemporanea: cerebralismo. Non è questo il momento di discutere di ciò: lo facciamo in altra parte di questa presentazione. Solo vogliamo far notare ancora una volta che anche qui, vorremmo dire proprio qui, sopra tutto, nella scelta di questa forma e nel suo sviluppo, si manifesta la scelta di una necessità espressiva, tal quale un compositore del '700 o dell' '800 che sceglieva un'aria piuttosto che una cabaletta o una cavatina, forme che rispondevano ad una esigenza espressiva prima ancora d'esser musica: che erano cioè un concetto, prima d'essere manifestazione d'arte. Anche questa Passacaglia è un concetto: è il concetto d'un compositore di musica che usa della parola come di un pretesto per creare una composizione musicale, così come Verdi usava i libretti del Piave o Wagner i suoi. Una composizione musicale che abdica parte dei suoi diritti a favore del dramma che meglio si identifica con la parola, ma che si rende perfetto in opera d'arte con la musica.

Questa Passacaglia è l'unica parte come già s'è detto, scritta nel concetto dodecafonico e ancora con una certa elasticità, anche se ricca di quegli accorgimenti formali che diventeranno un giorno dominio comune della più ortodossa tecnica dei dodici suoni. Una analisi dettagliata di essa ci porterebbe ad una troppo lunga perdita di tempo, ma non vorremmo nello stesso tempo che rimanesse nel lettore un'impressione sbagliata di quanto abbiamo detto sinora. In fondo, la spiegazione dello sviluppo formale era anche superflua: segua l'ascoltatore lo sviluppo del dramma. È questo ciò che conta: tutto il resto serve ai musicisti per imparare il mestiere.

Alcune misure puramente musicali legano questa scena alla successiva, l'ultima del primo atto: siamo nel vicolo davanti la casa di

Bozzetto di Gianni Ratto per la V Scena del Primo Atto, la III del Secondo e la V del Terzo

Maria. È la scena della seduzione del Tamburmaggiore che si presenta alla donna in tutta la sua arrogante mascolinità, vincendo senza grande fatica la sua ritrosia a cedergli. Anche qui poche sono le parole e tutto è detto dalla musica: se si esclude il poderoso crescendo che conchiude il contrasto dei sentimenti della donna, tentata di cedere e che alla fine cede all'amplesso del soldato, la scena si svolge su di una musica che non ha nulla d'enfatico pur sottolineando in maniera estremamente efficace anch'essa il contrasto, mentre, a scena vuota (quando Maria scompare nella casa col Tamburmaggiore) quasi che tutto fosse stato detto, la musica si affievolisce quasi ad un semplice mormorio ambientale. In realtà tutto è stato detto con le poche parole dei due personaggi: siamo lungi dai duetti romantici che tentavano di elevare la sensualità a sfere sublimi in cui l'amore era qualcosa di mitico e quasi astratto, tutto concretandosi nella grassa sensualità della musica. Qui non c'è amore in quel senso, ma una semplice, brutale attrazione dei sessi che tanto rapidamente si accende quanto si spegne. E sembra veramente che la musica voglia annullarsi, sino a scomparire, in un estremo pianissimo, in un tremolo di tutti gli archi, che più che musica sono sonorità.

Atto Secondo. - L'atto che si presenta strutturalmente, formalmente molto più compatto degli altri due (1) ha inizio anche qui con un breve preludio che porta all'apertura del sipario su « La camera di Maria »: la donna è sola e si guarda in uno specchio. Si rivolge al suo bambino imponendogli con minacce oscure, di star fermo; si guarda nello specchio e ammira gli orecchini, dono del Tamburmaggiore: « Una di noi ha solo un cantuccio al mondo e uno specchio rotto. Però la mia bocca è rossa come quella delle gran dame » (ancora una volta il contrasto tra la miseria spirituale e il trionfo della carne). Wozzeck entra non visto nella camera e Maria non fa a tempo a nascondere gli orecchini. Wozzeck la interroga e la donna dice di averli trovati. Il soldato evidentemente non crede, ma non indaga oltre e guarda il bimbo addormentato e sudato: « Lavoro sulla terra e sudore nel sonno! — commenta — Poveri noi... »; dà del denaro a Maria e se ne va. Rimasta sola la donna ha come un pentimento, ma ancora una volta il lato animalesco suo ha il sopravvento e conchiude « vada tutto al diavolo »... Un interludio porta alla seconda scena: una strada nella quale s'incontrano il Dottore e il Capitano. Anche su questi il Dottore sfoga la sua tranquilla follia medica dicendosi sicuro che gli verrà una paralisi (« un caso molto interessante ») essendo un tipo apoplettico. Possiamo dire veramente che questo è l'estremo tipo di dottore dell'opera in musica, il tipo gabbato e sberteggiato in innumeri libretti, dove fa la figura dello sciocco per lo più, dove la sua scienza viene presa bellamente in giro. Si è creata quasi una maschera del dottore e questa è l'ultima sua smorfia: una smorfia quasi tragica poichè ci mostra un tipo di dottore esaltato sino a rasentare la follia (chi non ricorda il Dottor Calligaris? e chi non ricorda ahimè, certi più tragici e recenti e veri esempi di esperimenti medici?). Siamo ancora alla caricatura, ma è una caricatura che non si esaurisce in sè: una caricatura di costume che raggiunge toni estremi, quegli estremi toni appunto del teatro che si chiama espressionista. Sopraggiunge Wozzeck e i due con rara perfidia gli fanno insinuazioni sul comportamento di Maria accennando al Tamburmaggiore. Wozzeck si esalta e trema (il Dottore gli conta le pulsazioni...) e fugge alla fine lasciando i due che commentano il suo comportamento paragonandolo a quello di un birbone.

(1) Willi Reich, primo analizzatore dell'opera, definisce questo Secondo atto come una « Sinfonia in 5 tempi ».

Siamo alla terza scena: « strada davanti alla casa di Maria ». Il sospetto ingigantisce in Wozzeck e gli fa dire frasi apparentemente sconclusionate, ma che tutte si rivolgono al dubbio che oramai lo rode. È una delle più importanti scene dell'intera opera (e ne vedremo poi gli elementi costitutivi musicali). Il contrasto tra Maria e Wozzeck alimentato dalla gelosia, diventa profondo e minaccioso.

Nella quarta scena siamo in un'osteria e due ubriachi cantano una canzone; gruppi di giovinotti e ragazze ballano un valzer. Anche Maria balla col Tamburmaggiore, mentre Wozzeck, non visto li spia e ancora pronuncia parole d'ira fin che fa per slanciarsi sui due, ma in quel punto la danza finisce. La scena si sviluppa indipendentemente dai personaggi principali, con l'inserimento di elementi che vorremmo dire decorativi, se ciò che si dice dai vari personaggi non divenisse a sua volta parte integrante della scena in cui si prepara il dramma di Wozzeck. Così una figura inserita nell'opera. Il pazzo, che si avvicina a Wozzeck e gli dice « Sento il sangue »: questo è quasi un pensiero di Wozzeck detto ad alta voce, mentre cresce in lui l'esaltazione contro la donna traditrice. Un lungo interludio porta alla quinta scena: il corpo di guardia della caserma di Wozzeck. Il soldato non riesce a dormire, ossessionato dall'immagine della donna e sveglia il suo compagno Andres che gli risponde male. Entra il Tamburmaggiore, ubriaco, che provoca Wozzeck e con lui alla fine si accapiglia soverchiandolo e conciandolo male. L'atto si chiude mentre un soldato, accennando a Wozzeck dice « Ha il fatto suo » e Wozzeck mormora quasi in risposta: « Uno dopo l'altro ».

Musicalmente questo è forse l'atto più unitario, chiaramente essendo ormai delimitata la figura d'ogni singolo personaggio, definitivamente entrato nel gioco drammatico che va conchiudendosi: la prima scena è scritta in forma di primo tempo di sonata in cui si concentrano vari elementi drammatici paralleli alla « forma » sonata: il vago senso di amoralità di Maria che si stempera nell'ammirazione degli orecchini d'oro (dono del Tamburmaggiore), nell'insopportazione del suo bambino, nell'ammirazione di se stessa e del suo peccato ch'ella sente come tale, sia pur vagamente, ma che giustifica quasi nella stessa qualità della sua vita; una seconda idea è data dall'apparizione di Wozzeck ed un terzo tema, si potrebbe dire nasca dalla presenza del bambino: sembra quasi che la trinità familiare trovi consistenza drammatica nella tripartita forma di sonata.

La seconda scena di quest'atto (l'incontro del Capitano e del Dottore) è, musicalmente, una vasta Fantasia e fuga intessuta, questa, di tre temi presentati in una estremamente poliedrica varietà ritmica; però tutta la prima parte di questa scena sembra essere qui una preparazione alla seconda, quando interviene Wozzeck, contro il quale si appuntano gli strali della grossolana ironia dei due. Qui infatti la materia musicale si condensa in una forma confermandosi così un'altra volta l'aderenza del compositore al dramma: dopo le prime parole scherzose all'indirizzo di Wozzeck, quando lo scherno prende corpo nell'amara presa in giro del soldato tradito, ha inizio una Fuga il cui tema si annuncia subito prima delle parole del Capitano « Sì, giusto... le lunghe barbe... ». Ma questo tema non nasce dal nulla: è lo stesso tema iniziale della scena, che qui diventa fondamentale per una prima esposizione, seguita da una seconda che si fonda su un altro tema che è il controtema iniziale. Questi due temi vengono enunciati, sulle parole del Capitano il primo e su quelle del Dottore il secondo, mentre, quando comincia a parlare anche Wozzeck si ha un terzo tema. Da questo momento lo sviluppo del brano musicale è affidato ai tre temi, così che si può parlare di una fuga tripla (anche se assunta dal compositore con notevole libertà), caratterizzante ciascun tema, un personaggio. Anche per questo brano dovremo rimandare il lettore a quanto detto per la Passacaglia del primo atto, vale a dire alla necessità della forma per la costruzione di un'architettura drammatico-musicale. Cosa che Alban Berg fa con estrema naturalezza ma con non minore importanza di risultati.

A questa scena ne segue una di estrema potenza drammatica e di un effetto che non esitiamo a definire allucinante, tutta completamente affidata all'orchestra, si può dire, se si vuol annettere poca importanza al parlato che qui per la prima volta assume una importanza fondamentale, dato che essa viene appunto quasi completamente declamata anzichè cantata. In questo brano che potremmo chiamare un vasto Largo entrano in gioco due nuovi fattori espressivi: il parlato, già citato (1) e la suddivisione dell'orchestra in due settori, grossa orchestra e orchestra da camera, che l'autore desidererebbe, se possibile, separata l'una dall'altra, come appunto se la sonorità di questo più piccolo complesso venisse da un'altra parte, da un luogo diverso da quello dal quale proviene l'altra parte di suoni. Ci dovrebbe essere dunque anche logisticamente, se così si può dire, una caratterizzazione che è già di per sè viva nell'attribuzione delle due orchestre ai due personaggi che agiscono sulla scena: Maria e Wozzeck. Alla donna la grande orchestra, al soldato la piccola. Sarebbe interessante sapere, se Berg si fosse curato di lasciarlo detto, per quale suo personale concetto avvenne questa scelta di mezzi diversi. A noi non resta che dare una spiegazione che può essere solamente una interpretazione personale: la caratterizzazione dei personaggi del melodramma (o dell'opera in musica che si voglia dire) è sempre stata sentita dai musicisti come un'assoluta necessità d'arte, oltrechè drammatica; e in cento modi diversi questa caratterizzazione è stata tentata (la stessa distribuzione delle voci, dal soprano al basso, dal tenore amoroso al basso comico non è che una risposta a queste esigenze); la scelta del timbro strumentale applicato ad un personaggio può essere un mezzo di caratterizzazione. In questa scena dell'opera berghiana) non solo la caratterizzazione dei due personaggi importava ed importa, ma anche e prima ancora la messa in luce dei loro sentimenti in quel momento: il dubbio di Wozzeck e la paura di Maria (non importa se Maria sembra ribellarsi a Wozzeck e se gli risponde con arroganza e sfrontatezza: in fondo al suo essere alligna sempre e soltanto la paura, che istintivamente sente, di un pericolo che si addensa sul suo capo). Il sentimento dell'uomo è un qualche cosa di intimo, di nascosto, di sottile, di una non analizzabile analisi (ci si passi il bisticcio) d'una situazione inesistente se non nella sua mente ammalata di dubbio e di gelosia; il sentimento della donna è invece qualcosa di assai più grossolano e scopertamente sensuale. Di qui la necessità, secondo questa nostra interpretazione, di scindere i mezzi espressivi: qualcosa di sottile, quasi un graffito sonoro che come una invisibile e pur sensibile ragnatela avviluppa la parola dell'uomo: come un più avvertibile, più trasparente mezzo d'espressione dei molti pensieri che più ancora che formularsi, attraversano il cervello e lo spirito di Wozzeck. Per la donna, personaggio minore, di riflesso, è usato, per contro, il solito mezzo d'espressione.

Il dialogo dei due personaggi (come abbiamo detto quasi sempre parlato; solo Wozzeck dirà quasi cantato « Tu sei bella — (e cantato) — come il peccato ») si svolge punteggiato da questa alternanza delle due orchestre, con estrema puntualità; in qualche momento, incrociandosi le parole dei due, si incrociano anche le due orchestre, ma il pezzo finisce con l'orchestra da camera su cui si inserisce l'orchestra normale, già col ritmo ed il colore dell'interludio che porta alla scena successiva.

Prima di lasciare questa pagina di musica ci sia permesso dire che essa è, a nostro avviso, una delle pagine più potenti che siano state scritte per il teatro musicale postverdiano e ciò anche e soprattutto se ad un primo ascolto essa ci lascia perplessi e confusi per la sua ardita novità, per la sua essenziale espressione che colpisce in maniera tanto inusitata. Soltanto il ripetuto ascolto, lo sappiamo, può renderci familiare questa scena.

Un procedimento analogo si avrà nella scena che segue, la scena dell'osteria (un vasto « Scherzo » in tre parti con due « Trii »): là un'orchestra da camera si contrapponeva all'orchestra normale, qui un'orchestra campestre (1) alla normale. Anche in ciò (e diciamo le nostre riflessioni anche se sanno di vivisezione) ci sembra di scorgere una ragione più che coloristica e ambientale, proprio d'indagine psicologica: abbiamo detto, per la scena precedente, del dualismo tra dubbio di Wozzeck e paura di Maria che si esprime e si concreta nel dualismo dei mezzi usati. Qui ancora la stessa cosa, ma ancora più marcatamente distinta: la crescente gelosia (che si tramuterà in follia omicida) di Wozzeck e la grossolana animalità del Tamburmaggiore che trascina Maria nel suo stesso gorgo. C'è insomma in queste due scene un certo parallelismo che anche nei mezzi usati l'Autore ha ritenuto di dover manifestare (e forse l'ha fatto inconsciamente, per una intima necessità espressiva).

La scena musicalmente ha un ritmo fondamentale: quello del Ländler (antica danza popolare austriaca) che può avere qualche affinità col valzer, ma è più pesante e naturalmente primitivamente grossolano. È l'orchestra normale che ambienta, ma già al levarsi del sipario si innesta la campestre che ne riprende lo spunto melodico, mantenendone naturalmente il ritmo. Ma dura poche battute e vi si sostituisce una canzone che lascia poi nuovamente il posto al Ländler che accelera e rallenta in un abbandonato ritmo di danza, in cui si insinua quasi la citazione del celebre valzer del Cavaliere della rosa di Strauss; alla fine di questo c'è un Coro cui segue un altro brano di danza che si appariglia però all'orchestra che sottolinea le parole di Wozzeck fino a quello che l'Autore segna come « Melodram ».

In Italia la parola « melodramma » sta a significare l'opera in musica ed è termine oramai correntemente usato (quasi per convenzione) per significare l'opera in musica dell'800; fuori d'Italia invece tale termine sta a significare una composizione drammatico-musicale quale una recitazione con una musica appositamente scritta per questa recitazione. La parola insomma non si fa canto e quindi non esaurisce nel fatto melodico la sua ragione espressiva e la musica ambisce a superare una sua ragione d'accompagnamento, per farsi quasi opera a se stante. Il genere conta esempi illustri anche se poco noti: Schumann, Liszt, Strauss. Pierrot lunaire di Schoenberg è un melodramma, in cui la recitazione (da parte della Sprechstimme) assume una funzione quasi musicale. Così intende questa parte della sua opera, Alban Berg.

(1) Nell'indicazione sulla composizione di questa orchestra, l'Autore usa un'espressione intraducibile in italiano, nella sua finezza: Fiedel in tedesco, vuol dire violino come Geige, ma viene usato in tono spregiativo (mentre per noi violino è quello del povero cieco all'angolo della strada e quello di Heifetz), così che ne nascono due verbi: fiedeln, traducibile come strimpellare e geigen, come suonare, il violino. Da ciò si capisce l'intenzione dell'Autore a proposito di quei quattro violini (Fiedeln, com'egli stesso li definisce) che formeranno l'orchestra campestre.

Questo brano, cantato da un garzone sulle parole « Però se un pellegrino si affaccia sul tempo che passa » è tutto basato su di una melodia di Corale; com'è noto il corale è il tipico canto religioso tedesco-protestante che venne sostituendosi gradualmente, dopo la riforma di Lutero, ai canti religiosi cattolici. Ma la particolarità del corale consiste nel fatto che poco a poco, dalla ricca polifonia cattolica, il corale assunse un aspetto affatto particolare di estrema semplicità: le melodie popolari che divenivano canti religiosi (facilitando in tal modo la possibilità di cantare anche a chi non conosceva la musica) si trasformavano anche ritmicamente assumendo una figurazione estremamente semplice (quasi sempre a note eguali) sulle quali anzichè contrappuntare, le altre voci si appoggiavano per la formazione di elementari accordi d'armonia, rendendo effettivamente possibile così il canto religioso alla intera massa dei fedeli in chiesa, anzichè alle dotte cappelle delle chiese cattoliche. Naturalmente Berg arricchisce questo corale di tutti i mezzi a sua disposizione: la melodia è affidata ad un bombardone (c'è in ciò un certo gusto del grottesco) a note uguali proprio come usava nei corali protestanti e come anticamente avveniva per il cantus firmus cristiano. Su questa specie di canto fermo, la voce ed altri strumenti ancora rifanno la stessa melodia a ritmi diversi finchè nuovamente tutto riprende il tempo iniziale di Ländler.

La breve apparizione del misterioso personaggio già citato, « Il pazzo », chiude la scena; notare anche qui il particolare valore ambientale creato dal compositore con la riunione delle due orchestre (quella... vera, per intenderci e quella campestre), quasi a simboleggiare lo stato d'animo di Wozzeck che sente sempre più crescere in se stesso quella sorta di follia che lo porterà all'omicidio.

Un vasto interludio collega questa scena all'ultima del second'atto: « Corpo di guardia nella caserma », ambientata da poche battute di coro maschile senza parole. Wozzeck nel sonno pronuncia frasi sconnesse in cui ritorna il suo pensiero costante di gelosia, invano calmato dal suo compagno Andres, che gli dorme accanto. Entra il Tamburmaggiore e da questo momento tutta la partitura assume un tono di violenza estrema, quasi sguaiata (ritorna qualche accenno melodico e ritmico della precedente scena) dominata dalla volgare tracotanza del Tamburmaggiore che provoca Wozzeck col quale alla fine viene alle mani soverchiandolo con la sua forza (parallelismo con l'ultima scena del primo atto dove anche la forza bruta del Tamburmaggiore sovrasta la debole resistenza di Maria).

La forma musicale di questa scena è libera e segue semplicemente lo sviluppo drammatico; naturalmente vi è una coesione estrema degli elementi musicali che la formano, quasi veramente a comporre una pagina di musica pura anche se si può arrivare a parlare, sia pure in maniera estremamente lata, di musica descrittiva: descrittiva del dramma che raggiunge qui, nel corpo di guardia d'una vecchia caserma, il suo punto massimo. Si potrebbe dire che la tragedia è già conchiusa qui, nelle sibilline parole infine, che pronuncia Wozzeck poco prima che si chiuda il sipario: « Una dopo l'altro » quasi a risposta di ciò che altri suoi compagni dicono di lui: « Ha il conto suo... È ferito... ».

Wozzeck, malato e fondamentalmente imbelle, vittima della sorte che lo vuol misero quasi suo malgrado, ha dovuto soccombere senza reagire agli avvenimenti che gli hanno fatto vedere il tradimento della sua donna, ha dovuto soccombere alla forza bruta del Tamburmaggiore; tanto più dura e spietata sarà la sua vendetta che si profila e drammaticamente si compie in questa scena e nelle ultime parole appunto che pronuncia. La stessa musica che si condensa, si gonfia, esplode, dall'entrata del Tamburmaggiore fino alla sua cruenta lite con Wozzeck, si placa alla fine e termina con pochi suoni, sempre meno sempre meno, sino ad uno solo, diciamo meglio al non-suono di un colpo di Tam-tam che sembra spalancare un vuoto immenso sulla scena che resta aperta ancora per qualche istante, teatro muto della tragedia di Wozzeck che trova la sua vendetta nel pensiero di ciò che sarà, di ciò che potrà essere, piuttosto che nella realtà di ciò che è.

Atto Terzo. - Nel terzo atto arriviamo all'esecuzione del delitto già compiuto, all'epilogo del dramma già conchiuso, mentalmente e spiritualmente, nel second'atto: Wozzeck è già un omicida perchè dentro di sè l'amore è stato soverchiato dalla gelosia che già gli ha tolto quei freni inibitori indispensabili a vivere.

Nella prima scena siamo nella « Stanza di Maria »; è notte e la donna, al lume d'una candela legge la Bibbia. Non canta, parla, mentre legge e solo canta quando, diciamo così, commenta ciò che ha letto. Un'altra volta si manifesta la puntualità espressiva del compositore che alterna la lettura (quasi una specie di riproduzione di ciò che è scritto all'infuori di noi) al commento (qualcosa che esce da noi, che in noi nasce) con due mezzi rispondenti alla necessità di manifestazione del personaggio.

Musicalmente tutta questa scena è una Invenzione su di un tema unico, articolato in cinque variazioni ed una fuga finale; il tema naturalmente subisce tali trasformazioni da rendersi ad un certo momento difficilmente riconoscibile, ma questo ha poca importanza evidentemente, dato che esso non è che un pretesto per il musicista che se ne serve liberamente per la sua costruzione. Ancora una volta, piuttosto, faremo notare come ogni variazione segua il variare stesso del testo e dei sentimenti espressi dalle parole, fino appunto alla fuga finale che assume ad un certo momento (quando il sipario si abbassa e si prepara la scena successiva) un valore autonomo formale e di contenuto.

Siamo ora alla scena più allucinante dell'opera: « Un sentiero nel bosco », lungo il quale si inoltrano Maria e Wozzeck. Solamente gli stolti possono pensare che le azioni degli uomini possano, sia pure per un istante, sia pure in una sola occasione essere slegate, possano presentarsi senza un nesso col passato o col futuro, senza una logica: e solo degli stolti possono pensare che l'opera d'arte che dell'uomo è interpretazione e rappresentazione, quanto di meglio cioè può esser dato dalla vita d'un individuo, solo degli stolti, dicevamo, possono pensare che l'arte sia una manifestazione improvvisatoria ed estemporanea. L'arte è e deve essere una manifestazione organizzata del pensiero dell'uomo. Solo come tale ha diritto di esistere. Diciamo questo perchè in questa scena e nella sua costruzione si può trovare la conferma di quanto abbiamo detto, anche se a molti ciò potrà sembrare una involuzione del pensiero dell'artista, un espediente cerebrale e cos'altro si può dire di ciò con la dilettantesca faciloneria dell'imparaticcio che purtroppo accompagna così di sovente l'arte gabellata per estrosa genialità.

Questa scena è ancora una Invenzione, nella quale però prende parte preponderante, diviene nucleo essenziale e principale un suono. Siamo abituati ai Leitmotive wagneriani, siamo abituati a questa specie di ricordi musicali che sono non la trovata di Wagner, ma la codificazione di un modo di costruzione musicale. In un certo senso « il suono » di cui parliamo (un si naturale) rappresenta l'estrema economia ideale cui Wagner ha avviato il dramma musicale: questo si naturale, questo suono semplice che può assumere una conformazione ritmica, ma evidentemente non tematica (un suono non può essere tema, melodicamente inteso perchè suono e melodia stanno alla musica come il punto e la linea alla geometria) rappresenta (o può rappresentare, diremo meglio, nella nostra interpretazione del pensiero del musicista) l'idea fissa di Wozzeck. Il soldato Wozzeck è arrivato all'estremo di sopportazione di se stesso e della sua propria miseria dalla quale non può togliersi che eliminando uno dei due elementi conduttori di questa condizione: se stesso o Maria. Ma per eliminare se stesso occorrerebbe ancora un minimo, un filo, una goccia appena di forza spirituale (sia pur malintesa, d'accordo) mentre più facile è abbandonarsi alla soverchiante violenza del più forte che sopprime il più debole, alla abbacinante e quasi consolatrice sensazione della « giustizia ». Durante tutta questa scena, il si naturale ricorre continuamente, ora al basso, ora all'acuto, ora al registro medio; ora tenuto da un lungo suono, ora ritmato; ora strisciato dagli strumenti a corda, ora rullato dal timpano; è il pensiero fisso di Wozzeck che incalza, e cresce e prende sempre maggiore consistenza fino al momento in cui pianterà un coltello nella gola della donna. Allora diminuisce e poco a poco scompare mentre cala il sipario. Ma ricompare in un nuovo doppio crescendo, da solo questa volta, alternato dapprima tra gli strumenti e poi a piena orchestra, lunghissimo. Attorno a questo suono, il compositore intesse idee musicali in parte nuove, in parte riprese di idee già precedentemente apparse, che, come abbiamo detto prima, dànno vita alla scena più allucinante e forse più potente del dramma. È interessante notare che nel momento in cui la donna sta per morire, compaiono in orchestra tutte le idee musicali che hanno accompagnato le avventure di Maria, quasi come, si dice, in punto di morte, appaiano tutti i momenti salienti della propria vita.

Segue a questa, e raramente contrasto è stato più vivo, la terza scena: « Un'osteria ». Un pianino scordato suona una polka ed un gruppo di ragazzi e ragazze ballano furiosamente. Wozzeck incita tutti a ballare e canta frasi sconnesse, poi danza con una ragazza di nome Margherita, l'abbraccia facendosela sedere sulle ginocchia e sempre il pensiero ricorre alla morte: finchè la ragazza gli vede delle macchie di sangue e tutti gli si stringono intorno. Musicalmente (ancora una Invenzione) questa scena non è particolarmente interessante; drammaticamente è una necessità, è il ponte che porta all'epilogo dell'opera.

Siamo alla quarta scena: nuovamente il « Sentiero nel bosco », come prima. Inesorabilmente Wozzeck è riportato sulla scena del suo delitto. Ma l'allucinato equilibrio di prima, l'equilibrio trovato nel pensiero costante del delitto, non ritorna; Wozzeck ora ha paura; egli ha nuovamente rotto l'equilibrio. La sua debolezza spirituale, diciamo meglio la sua assoluta miseria spirituale non gli consente la solitudine: egli aveva bisogno di Maria, poi della gelosia, poi del pensiero del delitto: ha bisogno che la sua tetra animalità sia esaltata da qualcuno o da qualcosa. Ora è solo e solo su di se stesso può compiere un gesto, che ormai senza esaltarlo, lo liberi anche di se stesso. Egli cerca il coltello, che può denunciarlo, inciampa nel corpo di Maria (ma ormai il suo pensiero è lontano) ed entra nello stagno che (anche se il testo non lo dice e gli « appunti » di Büchner fanno supporre un diverso epilogo, mentre nell'opera, Berg ha abolito questa duplicità fermandosi qui) diventerà la sua tomba. Se non è una tomba fisica, lo è moralmente e spiritualmente: si leva una luna rossa che illumina lo stagno e in Wozzeck l'immagine del sangue sovrasta (« ... Mi lavo dentro il sangue. Quest'acqua è sangue.... sangue....). Il soldato sente di non essere più che un assassino e in tale posizione Berg l'abbandona: la sua metamorfosi è compiuta e compiuto definitivamente è il dramma che potrebbe anche chiudersi qui.

La musica (quarta Invenzione dell'atto) scompare, vorremmo dire; una sonorità vasta e di un impressionismo crudo e acre, sottostà alle parole del Dottore e del Capitano che incoscientemente sentono l'immanenza del dramma, quasi l'orrore della scena: essi passano e la commentano, con un secco parlato, subendone soltanto l'incanto.

Poco a poco i suoni però si riorganizzano e nuovamente si fanno musica nell'interludio che porta all'ultima scena. L'epilogo musicale del dramma. A sipario abbassato ritornano in questo Interludio che è il più notevole e corposo di tutti, molti se non tutti i temi più importanti dell'opera (procedimento già tante altre volte usato del resto) quasi a formare un consuntivo musicale del dramma conchiuso, che scenicamente sopravvive nell'apparizione dell'innocente incoscienza del bimbo di Maria. Siamo ancora davanti alla casa della donna: giocano dei bimbi che parlano della scoperta del cadavere, mentre il piccolo si trastulla su un cavallo a dondolo e si guarda intorno senza rendersi conto di ciò che avviene. Un ritmo di dodici ottavi (quinta Invenzione, quasi moto perpetuo), ondulante e quasi un poco incerto accompagna il suo dondolìo sul cavalluccio e l'opera termina senza soluzione di continuità, senza accordo finale.

Come le avventure senza fine dell'umanità.

WOZZECK - ARGUMENT

Premier Acte - Premier tableau - La chambre du Capitaine. - Le Capitaine se fait raser par son attendant Wozzeck. Il se moque de la mentalité primitive du garçon et lui reproche d'avoir un fils sans être marié. Il affirme que Wozzeck ne possède pas de « sens moral », mais d'autre part il n'est pas à même de dire ce qu'est le « sens moral ». Wozzeck affirme d'avoir une « âme simple » : il est trop pauvre pour posséder une morale ou pour être heureux.

Deuxième tableau - Aux champs. - Wozzeck coupe du bois avec son ami Andres, qui essaye de le distraire par une chanson, mais Wozzeck est en proie à de sombres présages.

Troisième tableau - La chambre de Marie. - Marie est à la fenêtre avec son enfant et regarde passer la musique militaire. Celle-ci est précédée par le tambour-major, qui salue Marie. Un voisin se moque de Marie; elle ferme violemment la fenêtre. Seule avec l'enfant, fils de Wozzeck, la fille lui chante une courte et pathétique berceuse pour l'endormir. Mais voici que Wozzeck paraît soudain à la fenêtre, toujours en proie à ses sombres pressentiments. La fille tente de l'intéresser à l'enfant, mais il s'enfuit distraitement. Marie, encore seule avec l'enfant, prorompt en sanglots.

Quatrième tableau - Le cabinet du Docteur. - Pour le Docteur les êtres humains ne sont que du matériel pour les expériments cliniques. Il essaye quelques expériments de diète sur Wozzeck, lequel peut ainsi gagner quelques extras pour Marie et l'enfant. Le Docteur est vexé par la conduite de Wozzeck: celui-ci essaye de lui expliquer comme il se sent malheureux et comme le monde, autour de lui, lui semble méchant, mais il ne réussit pas à attirer sur lui la sympathie du Docteur, qui continue à le considérer comme un « cas intéressant ».

Cinquième tableau - La rue où demeure Marie. - Marie, debout, admire les vantardises du tambour-major; celui-ci lui fait la cour; après avoir résisté, la fille lui cède.

Deuxième Acte - Premier tableau - La chambre de Marie. - Marie admire des boucles d'oreille, lorsque Wazzeck entre et lui en demande la provenance: la fille élude da question. Wozzeck lui apporte l'argent qu'il a gagné avec le Capitaine et le Docteur. Marie l'en remercie et, lorsque Wazzeck est sorti, elle se sent prise de remords.

Deuxième tableau - Une rue. - Le Capitaine et le Docteur sont engagés dans une grotesque conversation. Le Docteur, toujours occupé par ses expériments, effraye le Capitaine en lui disant que lui aussi pourrait être un excellent matériel d'expériments cliniques. Wozzeck paraît: les deux le harcèlent en insinuant que Marie lui a été infidèle. Wozzeck, fort troublé, les prie de ne pas se moquer de lui.

Troisième tableau - La rue où demeure Marie. - Wozzeck accuse Marie et la menace, mais elle le chasse.

Quatrième tableau - Le jardin d'une auberge. - Des étudiants, des soldats et des filles de salle dansent. Deux étudiants ivres s'engouffrent dans des considérations philosophiques, tandis que Woxxeck, rageux, surveille Marie qui danse avec le tambour-major. Dans le plus beau de la gaîté, le fou du village entre en disant qu'il sent l'odeur du sang: ceci ne fait qu'enflammer davantage l'imagination de Wozzeck.

Cinquième tableau - Le corps de garde. - Les soldats dorment, mais Wozzeck est hanté par ce qu'il a vu au bal. Le tambour-major entre très ivre: il frappe Wozzeck, qui tombe au bout de ses forces.

Troisième Acte - Premier tableau - La chambre de Marie. - En proie au remords, Marie cherche la consolation dans la Bible et s'interrompt pour raconter à son enfant une petite fable. Puis, pensant à Marie Madeleine, elle implore la miséricorde divine.

Deuxième tableau - Un sentier dans la forêt, près d'un étang. - Pendant que tombe la rosée et qu'une lune rouge se lève, Wozzeck poignarde Marie.

Troisième tableau. - Une taverne louche. - Une danse sauvage se déroule. Marguerite aperçoit une tache de sang sur l'habit de Wozzeck: il s'enfuit terrorisé, poursuivi par les cris de la compagnie.

Quatrième tableau - Un sentier dans la forêt près d'un étang. - En cherchant le poignard taché de sang, Wozzeck veut passer l'étang et se noie. Le Capitaine et le Docteur, en passant, entendent des bruits et se doutent que quelqu'un va se noyer, mais il ne s'en intéressent pas.

Cinquième tableau - Devant la porte de Marie. - L'enfant de Marie joue avec d'autres gamins. Aussitôt qu'ils apprennent la nouvelle du meurtre, les gamins courent voir. L'enfant de Marie, trop petit pour comprendre, cesse de jouer et court après les autres.

WOZZECK - SYNOPSIS

First Act - Scene I - The Captain's room. - The Captain is being shaved by his batman Wozzeck. He mocks at Wozzeck's simple intelligence, and chides him for having a child born out of wedlock. He says that Wozzeck has « no moral sense » - but he cannot explain what « moral sense » is. Wozzeck says taht he is a « simple soul » and that he is too poor to have morals - or to be happy.

Scene II - An open field. - Wozzeck is cutting sticks with his friend Andres, who tries to cheer him with a song. But Wozzeck is full of dark forebodings.

Scene III - Marie's room. - Marie stands at the window with her child, watching the military band march past. It is headed by the Drum Major, who greets Marie. A neighbour jeers; Marie slams the window. Alone with the child - Wozzeck's child - she sings it to sleep with a pathetic little lullaby. Then Wozzeck suddenly appears at the window, still full of dark presentiments. She tries to interest him in their child; but he rushes off distractedly. Marie, alone with the child again, breaks out in sudden anguish.

Scene IV - The Doctor's study. - For the Doctor, human beings are material for clinical experiments. He is trying out experiments in dieting on Wozzeck, who thereby earns a few extra pence for Marie and the child. The Doctor is angry with Wozzeck's behaviour. Wozzeck tries to explain how miserable he feels and how the world seems dark around him. But he cannot enlist any sympathy from the Doctor who continues to consider him merely as « an absorbing case ».

Scene V - Street before Marie's dwelling. - Marie stands admiring the swaggering Drum Major. He makes advances to her, and, after a struggle, she gives way.

Second Act - Marie's room. - Marie is admiring some ear-rings when Wozzeck enters and asks her where she got them. She evades his question. He brings her the money he has earned from the Captain and the Doctor. She thanks him and then, when he has gone, she is overcome with remorse.

Scene II - A street. - The Captain and the Doctor engage in a grotesque conversation. The doctor, still full of his experiments, frightens the Captain by suggesting that he too will form excellent clinical material. Wozzeck enters and they both taunt him with insinuations that Marie has been unfaithful. Wozzeck, very distressed, warns them not to make fun of him.

Scene III - The street before Marie's dwelling. - Wozzeck accuses Marie and threatens her. She wards him off.

Scene IV - A tavern garden. - Apprentices, soldiers and servant girls are dancing. Two drunken apprentices engage in « philosophical » reflections whilst Wozzeck angrily watches Marie dancing with the Drum Major. At the height of the gaiety, the village idiot enters and says that he smells blood. This inflames Wozzeck's imagination.

Scene V - The guard room. - The soldiers are sleeping but Wozzeck is haunted by what he saw at the dance. The Drum Major enters, very drunk, and beats Wozzeck who sinks down exhausted.

Third Act - Scene I - Marie's room. - Marie, full of remorse, seeks consolation in the Bible. She breaks off to tell a sad little tale to her child; then, thinking of Mary Magdalene, she implores God's mercy.

Scene II - A forest path by a pool. - As the night-dew falls and the moon rises red, Woozzeck stabs Marie.

Scene III - A low tavern. - A wild dance is in progress. Margret sees blood on Wozzeck's sleeve. He rushes out in terror, pursued by the cries of the company.

Scene IV - A forest path by a pool. - Wozzeck, searching for the blood-stained knife, wades into the pool and is drowned. The Captain and Doctor, passing by, hear noises, suspect that someone is drowning, but do nothing about it.

Scene V - In front of Marie's door. - Marie's child is playing with other children. At the news of the murder, the children run off to see; Marie's child, too young to understand, merely pauses in his play, then runs after the others.

Un Gran Director: Dimitri Mitropoulos al Frente de la Filarmónica de N. York

EL segundo concierto de la Orquesta Filarmónica de Nueva York, realizado en el Colón, no hizo más que confirmar la magnífica impresión que suscitara el conjunto al presentarse en la sala municipal. Insistir sobre el ajuste, la sonoridad, la precisión, perfección y unidad cohesiva de este admirable organismo sinfónico —uno de los más importantes y antiguos del mundo— resulta ya obvio, pues nadie que haya tenido oportunidad de escucharlo olvidará fácilmente la exactitud, el vigor expresivo, la insuperable técnica de sus interpretaciones que no se reducen a meras muestras de una estupenda labor sincronizada, si no que están regidas por la sensibilidad aguda y el calor humano de cada uno de los componentes de la orquesta. De ahí, la fuerza vital, la envolvente seducción que emana de sus ejecuciones en que el virtuosismo personal o colectivo no llega a empañar jamás la autenticidad ni la claridad de los textos. Después de Leonard Bernstein, se presentó al frente de la Filarmónica de Nueva York, el director griego Dimitri Mitropoulos, figura de relevante prestigio en el campo de la música sinfónica. Su línea y su estilo son otros que los de su colega. Nada de concesiones al público en cuanto a espectacularidad. Sobrio, de una energía avasallante, dominador absoluto de sus subordinados, imprime a la orquesta su propia vibración, poniendo de relieve una poderosa individualidad musical, en que se alían a una perfecta identificación con las obras interpretadas, una memoria excepcional y un dominio completo de todos los elementos sonoros, regido por una batuta firme y pujante y una mano izquierda singularmente expresiva que exalta, atenúa, impulsa y controla los diversos movimientos, dentro de una línea elegante y austera. Con tales cualidades, lógico fué que el maestro Mitropoulos nos brindase versiones incisivas y brillantes, a través de un programa en que a la deliciosa Obertura del Fausto criollo, de Alberto Ginastera —cuyo autor recibió en el proscenio los aplausos del público— siguió la "Sinfonía número 2, en re mayor", de Beethoven, cuya noble serenidad fué traducida con justeza y vigor, y "Noche transfigurada", de Arnold Schoenberg, vertida en forma magnífica y donde el grupo de cuerdas acreditó su espléndida calidad, exaltando la romántica y subjetiva esencia de la composición. Clausuró la audición la Meditación y Danza de la Venganza, de "Medea", del norteamericano Samuel Barber, inspirada en la tragedia de Eurípides; trabajo de una vigorosa orquestación, pero de escasa originalidad conceptiva. El concierto tuvo un insospechado y gratísimo final: para corresponder a las entusiastas ovaciones del público, Mitropoulos agregó al programa la danza final de "El sombrero de tres picos", de Falla, vertida con un dinamismo y una riqueza sonora tan arrebatadores que no quedó la menor duda de que es uno de los directores más capacitados y talentosos de nuestro tiempo.

La Orquesta Filarmónica de Nueva York se despedirá hoy con el programa ya conocido, dirigiendo Dimitri Mirto Mitropoulos.

Personalidad de un Gran Director Reflejada en una Orquesta Fabulosa

CON una maestría que llega al virtuosismo y con una pasmosa personalidad musical se impuso el sábado en el Teatro Colón el director de orquesta Dimitri Mitropoulo, cualidades excepcionales éstas que si bien de ninguna manera podían sorprendernos ya que en la actualidad el nombre del maestro griego figura entre los de mayor brillo en todo el mundo, y a pesar de que su arte era conocido en nuestro país a través de su labor fonográfica, sobrepasaron nuestros cálculos más optimistas.

Mitropoulos es el artista nervioso, de mirada penetrante, de manos cuya expresividad se ha hecho famosa (siempre supimos que dirigía sin batuta; en cambio ahora la usó) de gestos y movimientos personalísimos que todos conocíamos a través de fotografías, del cine o de notas periodísticas, o sea decir características externas inconfundibles que ahora tuvimos oportunidad de confirmarlas. Pero Mitropoulos es mucho más que todo eso. Cuando lo vemos dirigir, cuando lo hemos visto ensayar, o cuando, momentos antes de dar comienzo el concierto, lo distinguimos entre los músicos colocando personalmente o cambiando de lugar algunas sillas porque no consideraba conveniente su ubicación anterior, tuvimos la impresión de estar ante una de esas personalidades únicas. Mitropoulos no es solamente un intérprete genial. Es sobre todo un verdadero recreador de la música.

Quien haya escuchado el sábado "Noche transfigurada" de Schonberg tiene que haberlo sentido. Porque si espléndida es la obra del compositor vienés, mucha más bella pareció ahora. Todo el misterio toda la poesía y el dramatismo que encierra la música del Schonberg anterior a su etapa dodecafónica, es decir al Schönberg que todavía no ha superado la influencia wagneriana; todo el lirismo que emana de ella ha sido exaltado en esta versión que hizo de este concierto uno de los más bellos que nos sea dado recordar. Luego de haber escuchado esa "Noche transfigurada", esa versión insuperable tal vez, muy difícil resultó escuchar o gozar el resto del programa.

Es necesario recordar que a la excepcional dirección de Mitropoulos se sumó la labor de ese fabuloso instrumento que es la Orquesta Filarmónica de Nueva York, conjunto acerca de cuyas virtudes ya comentamos con motivo de su presentación en Buenos Aires bajo la dirección de su actual titular el maestro Leonard Bernstein. Ella fué en efecto, el espejo fidelísimo donde se reflejó en todas sus variados matices la personalidad de Dimitri Mitropoulos. Sin ese instrumento de perfección casi abrumadora hubiéramos tenido quizás una visión esfumada, opaca, menos pura del arte de este genial artista. Y al mismo tiempo sin la presencia de Mitropoulos tampoco hubiéramos sabido hasta qué punto la Orquesta que nos visita puede dejar de ser el organismo musical más perfecto quizas, que se haya creado para convertirse en materia sensible que vibra y se transforma al menor estímulo.

Para su presentación en Buenos Aires Dimitri Mitropoulos incluyó en su programa la Obertura para el "Fausto" criollo de Ginastera, la "Sinfónica Nº 2 en re mayor" de Beethoven; "Noche transfigurada" op. 4, de Arnold Schönberg y "Meditación y danza de la venganza de Medea" op. 23 de Samuel Barber.

La interpretación que Mitropoulos hizo de la segunda Sinfonía de Beethoven puede ser apreciada con algunas reservas por quienes nos sentimos inclinados hacia las más clásicas versiones que hemos escuchado. Es posible que el temperamento de este director no se someta a algunos de los cánones que muchos consideramos inviolables cuando a la obra de Beethoven se refiere. Se advirtió en esta Sinfonía un "algo de la personalidad de Mitropoulos que no coincide con la del genio de Bonn. Sin embargo de ninguna manera pudimos dejar de reconocer a través de esta interpretación lo mejor, lo más significativo del espíritu beethoveniano.

En la segunda parte del detalle fué donde indiscutiblemente Mitropoulos se sintió como en terreno propio. A la ejecución de "Noche Transfigurada", escrita por Schönberg primitivamente como sexteto para orquesta de cuerda inspirándose en un poema del vate alemán Richard Dehmel, y arreglada luego por el mismo compositor para gran orquesta de cuerda, siguió "Meditación y danza de la venganza de Medea" del compositor norteamericano Samuel aRber, obra no carente de interés y sustancia que se vió empalidecida por la emoción que en el auditorio produjo la versión anterior a pesar de su, por momentos, excesiva sonoridad.

La ovación que siguió a la terminación del concierto llevó a Mitropoulos a ofrecer fuera de programa (hecho desusado en los conciertos sinfónicos) la danza final del "Sombrero de tres picos" de Manuel de Falla que si bien no fué un ejemplo de fidelidad en su espíritu fué un ejemplo de virtuosismo orquestal, lo que sólo consiguió desencadenar una ovación mayor aún del público, síntoma de que en nuestro cincuentenario coliseo ocurría ese día algo memorable..

Se Despidió en el Colón la Filarmónica de N. York

D. MITROPOULOS

Nuevamente bajo la dirección de Dimitri Mitropoulos actuó en el teatro Colón la Orquesta Filarmónica de Nueva York, despidiéndose así del público argentino. Una vez más se pudo comprobar que el organismo neoyorquino posee calidades y cualidades sobresalientes. Su grado de perfección llega a alturas muy elevadas, al extremo de que lo sitúa cómodamente en uno de los primeros puestos del panorama sinfónico internacional. Esto se pudo advertir en todos los momentos del programa preparado por Mitropoulos. Es posible que sus versiones satisfagan en mayor o menor grado y dejen al oyente en libertad de expresar sus gustos personales, prefiriendo otros modos de interpretar esas mismas obras (particularmente el "Don Juan", de Strauss), pero lo innegable es que la orquesta actuó siempre con deslumbrante brillo y precisión. Si hubo en el transcurso del concierto algunas vacilaciones en el ataque e imperfecciones muy pálidas en la ejecución de ciertos pasajes, esto se debe, sin duda, al cansancio de los profesores que en esta gira están sometidos a un régimen de actividad tupido y exigente. La Filarmónica ha tenido tiempo y oportunidad para demostrar sus méritos y estos menudos inconvenientes no cuentan para el caso.

El maestro Mitropoulos volvió a demostrar que es un gran director, con un dominio ejemplar de su oficio y con una autoridad que se impone sobradamente en su numeroso equipo. Ello no quita que esté animado por un discutible placer suyo de subrayar más de la cuenta los perfiles efectivistas de algunas partituras, lo que si bien aumenta el lucimiento técnico de la orquesta, disminuye en seriedad la labor del director. Con todo, la "Quinta Sinfonía", de Prokofieff —obra eje del programa que se comenta— fué objeto de una versión ejemplar, ajustada como una pieza de joyería, con sus mismos atributos visuales magníficamente destacados. Se incluyó en programa una obra de un joven autor americano: Turner, titulada "Encounter", que es, desde todo punto de vista: formal y substancial, un trabajo nada interesante. Con ideas comunes, el compositor elabora su obra con recursos que denotan poco ingenio y escasa musicalidad. El público, corresponde consignarlo, ocupaba esta vez con exceso todas las instalaciones del teatro. Pocas veces se ha visto el Colón tan concurrido. El aplauso que le brindó a Mitropoulos y a la Filarmónica fué tan tenaz y entusiasta, que éstos decidieron regalarle, en despedida, la Obertura de "La forza del destino", de Verdi.

Argentinisches Tageblatt. 4/6/58.

New Yorker Philharmoniker unter Dimitri Mitropoulos im Teatro Colón

Der südamerikanische Kontinent, von dem grossen Bruder im Norden grundlos vernachlässigt, ist, wie die letzten Ereignisse bewiesen, seinen Emissären nicht immer ein guter Gastgeber. Wenn die New Yorker Philharmoniker nach ihrer "good will"-Reise in ihre Heimat zurückkehren, werden sie allerdings berichten können, dass man bei kulturellen Belangen rückhaltlos die im Norden erreichte Superiorität anerkennt. Der enthusiastische Empfang, der dem Orchester und seinen Dirigenten überall zuteil wurde und der sich in Buenos Aires in nicht endenwollendem Beifall eines überfüllten, festlich gestimmten Hauses äusserte, wird hoffentlich dazu führen, dass dieser Art von wirkungsvoller Propaganda ein grösserer Platz eingeräumt wird.

Die beiden Konzerte des New Yorker Philharmonischen Orchesters, die unter der Leitung von Dimitri Mitropoulos standen, erbrachten den Beweis der unerreichten Disziplin und klanglichen Homogenität dieses Ensembles, das heute wieder in die erste Reihe der Symphonieorchester Nordamerikas gerückt ist. Dies ist vor allem das Verdienst des griechischen Stabführers, der in den letzten Jahren als ständiger Leiter dieses Orchesters die Krise, in der sich die ausschliesslich Gastdirigenten ausgelieferten New Yorker befanden, zu überwinden half und diesem Ensemble erneut zu einem, durch bemerkenswerte Präzision des Zusammenspiels, tonliche Ausfeilung und Dukdilität auffallenden Klangkörper gemacht hat. Die New Yorker sind mit der einganwilligen, ungemein starken Persönlichkeit Mitropoulos derart verwachsen, dass sie auf die leiseste Andeutung dieses, sich einer ziemlich sparsamen Gestik bedienenden Dirigenten mit minutiöser Genauigkeit reagieren. Es geht daher alles wie am Schnürchen: nichts ist der Improvisation überlassen, sondern alles von vornherein festgelegt, in jedem Detail besprochen und bedacht.

Das Ergebnis der intensiven Erziehungsarbeit des von schärfsten Intellekt gekennzeichneten Dirigenten, der allerdings bei seinen Untergebenen dank der geistigen Disziplin und eines daraus resultierenden Arbeitswillens auf das entsprechende Material stiess, ist etwas, von dem wir uns in Buenos Aires letztens distanziert hatten: ein Orchester

Denn ein Orchester im wahren Sinne des Wortes ist viel mehr als eine Masse musikmachender Menschen, es ist ein Ganzes, bei dem jedes Individuum sich in den Dienst einer Gemeinschaft und eines sie einenden Führerwillens stellt, ohne seine eigenen Werte auszulöschen. Der analytisch zuhörende Konzerttellnehmer hat den sicher richtigen Eindruck, dass hier jeder einzelne hervorragende Musiker willig in seiner Gruppe aufgeht und diese, auf höherer Ebene, sich mit den andren Instrumntenfamilien zu einer makellosen Einheit zusammenschliesst.

Wenn wir jetzt aus diesen Mitropoulos-Konzerten, die auf lange Zeit als Gipfel-Leistung eines Symphonieorchesters in unserer Erinnerung haften bleiben werden, Einzelnes herausgreifen wollen, so müssen wir vor allem der herrlich gestuften, in ihren Verästelungen plastisch gestalteten "Verklärten Nacht" von Schönberg gedenken, die der Dirigent von billiger Sentimentalität entkleidete und zu einer ohrenberauschenden Klangorgie werden liess. Der Streichkörper der New Yorker, präzis und zuverlässig in den Geigen, prächtig sonor in den tiefen Instrumenten, bewies hier seine bemerkenswerte Superiorität. Die das zweite Konzert beschliessende Symphonie von Prokofieff gehörte auch zum Besten, was uns der Dirigent und sein Ensemble boten; die schnellen Sätze, wohl die bedeutendsten des Werkes, wurden mit motorischer Kraft, dabei fein ziseliert im Dynamischen und voll gesunder Rhythmik, die die Urwüchsigkeit dieser Musik unterstrich, zu Gehör gebracht.

Mitropoulos, dessen geistige Ueberlegenheit sich in seiner beispiellosen gedächtnismässigen Beherrschung der Materie spiegelt, ist ein eifriger Vorkämpfer der Moderne, deren Ausdruckswelt seinem Gestaltungsvermögen besonders nahe liegt. Logischerweise enthielten seine ziemlich bunt zusammengestellten Programme auch Werke nordamerikanischer zeitgenössischer Komponisten, doch war die Wahl hier nicht besonders günstig: auf jeden Fall ziehen wir die brillant orchestrierte, inhaltlich nicht allzu originelle "Meditation und Rachetanz" aus "Medea" von Samuel Barber dem faden und nichtssagenden "Encounter" von Charles Turner vor, dessen wirkungssicheres "Obertura para el Fausto criollo" fiel in dieser Nachbarschaft geradezu angenehm auf.

Beim klassischen Repertoire, das spärlich vertreten war — eigentlich könnte man bereits Richard Strauss "Don Juan" dazu rechnen, der in Wohlklang getaucht, einen der Höhepunkte dieser Konzerte bedeutete — wollen wir Mitropoulos skrupulöse Genauigkeit in der Befolgung der Dynamik — und Phrasierung-Bezeichnungen hervorheben. Der Dirigent, um Klarheit und Uebersichtlichkeit bemüht, vermittelt uns einen charaktervollen Weber ("Freischütz"-Ouvertüre) und einen überaus plastischen, scharf pointierten Beethoven (Zweite Symphonie), bei dem nur einige eigenwillige Temporückungen im "Larghetto" und "Finale" befremdend wirkten. Diese Einwände sind aber belanglos und unbedeutend, um den Gesamteindruck, der überwältigend war, zu schmälern. Wir ziehen ehrfurchtsvoll den Hut vor dieser, ein Vorbild an Disziplin und leuchtendes Beispiel für unsere einheimischen Ensembles bedeutenden Leistung der New Yorker und sind ihnen für das Gebotene, im Musikgeschehen unserer Hauptstadt geradezu Einmalige, zu tiefem Dank verbunden. So empfand es auch das Publikum, dem Mitropoulos als willkommene Ergänzung der Programme nach jedem Konzert eine Zugabe gewährte: im ersten — den Schlusssatz aus "Sombrero de tres picos" von Falla, der mit atemberaubender Virtuosität wiedergegeben, die Zuhörer von ihren Sitzen aufspringen liess, — im zweiten — die Ouvertüre zu "Macht des Schicksals" von Verdi, deren mitreissender Schwung in dem griechischen Dirigenten einen kongenialen Interpreten fand.

EN UN DIA UN HOMBRE

Dimitri Mitropoulos

Griego de nacimiento, norteamericano por adopción, ya tenía una brillante reputación europea como director antes de su presentación en los Estados Unidos, en 1936, frente a la Sinfónica de Boston. En la temporada 1940-1941 condujo por primera vez la Filarmónica de Nueva York.

Inició su carrera como pianista virtuoso y compositor de gran talento; pero tras su primera experiencia como director de orquesta quedó encauzada su verdadera vocación.

Fue nombrado director de la Filarmónica de Nueva York en la temporada 1950-1951 y director musical desde 1951 hasta 1957. En la temporada 1957-1958 comparte con Leonard Bernstein los deberes inherentes a director en propiedad de la Filarmónica.

Fue Dimitri Mitropoulos quien llevó por primera vez una orquesta de los Estados Unidos al Festival Internacional de Edimburgo. Allí, en agosto de 1951, la Filarmónica de Nueva York, alcanzó uno más de sus tantos triunfos artísticos. En 1955 volvió con la Filarmónica a intervenir en el Festival de Edimburgo y la condujo en una extensa jira por Europa.

Mitropoulos llevará a la Filarmónica de Viena en una jira por varias ciudades europeas, dirigirá la Sinfónica de Israel y se hara presente conduciendo en el Festival de Salzburgo.

Tiene 62 años, pero aparenta más. Es calvo, alto, delgado.

Nos acercamos a él y nos recibe amablemente, dispuesto a iniciar, de inmediato, el diálogo.

No habla español, pero sí inglés, griego e italiano. En la lengua del Dante logramos entendernos, aunque nuestros conocimientos en italiano, son limitados.

Nos dijo que se sentía muy contento de dirigir en Montevideo, ciudad de la cual tenía referencias muy elogiosas de diversos artistas norteamericanos y europeos.

¡Lástima, agrega, que mi contacto sea tan fugaz!

Nos habla de su patria de origen, con emoción.

Y agrega:

—Cuando visito Atenas, me parece que a la vuelta de la esquina, me he de encontrar con Sócrates, el mayéntico, padre de la ironía que a mi también me gusta cultivar.

Mitropoulos es menos expansivo que Berstein, el otro Director de la Filarmónica de Nueva York.

Quizás la diferencia de edad entre uno y otro (23 años), distintos ideales estéticos, otra formación intelectual.

Le presentamos a Héctor Tosar Errecart, que llega en esos momentos al Hotel donde se hospeda el Maestro y se habla de las nuevas corrientes musicales en los Estados Unidos, que nuestro compositor conoce ampliamente. Mitropoulos le exhorta a seguir produciendo.

—Crear, dice, no debe ser una operación lujosa, sino un estímulo a nuestra imaginación y un quehacer casi dramático. Desde Pitágoras a Wagner, estamos rodeados de músicas. Quizás no advierta ello el hombre común, pero es así. Por eso no ha reparado en Orfeo, que se quedó en el mito. Pero, termina, hay que seguir esperando. He ahí la suprema sabiduría.

EL ULTIMO CONCIERTO DE LA FILARMONICA DE NUEVA YORK

Otro director de renombre, Dimitri Mitropoulos, asumió la batuta en el último de los tres conciertos brindados en el Sodre, por la famosa orquesta visitante. Percibiéndose en él de inmediato una compleja personalidad, que llama poderosamente la atención por su "modo", tan personal y contradictorio de usar la batuta, que obliga, para poder admirar su empaste y creación de director, a desentenderse del juego de sus dos manos, que exageran los movimientos con que dibujan los acentos o conducen la frase melódica y se confunden en una mímica de expresión nada clara.

En la primera parte se escuchó Obertura "Académico-festiva", Op. 80 (en primera audición) de Brahms, en la que se aprecia el inconfundible genio creador del autor. Obra magna, que sobre temas sencillos elabora una grandiosa arquitectura de arrebatadora elocuencia sinfónica. Siguió luego la Sinfonía Nº 2 en re-mayor Op. 36 de Beethoven. Mitropoulos quiso ser él, imponiendo un empaste sonoro que mantuvo la sonoridad del "mezzo-forte al fortísimo", especialmente en el primero y segundo tiempo. En el Scherzo-Allegro, rindió una fusión de sonoridad y elegancia, llena de acentuaciones precisas, con asombrosa liviandad. Las cuerdas, en su riqueza rítmica de variantes golpes de arco, parecían un solo instrumento por su maravilloso ajuste: los pasajes de las escalas en rápidos movimientos, eran perfecto juego de equilibrio y sonoridad. Y en el Finale "Allegro Molto" llevó Mitropoulos la orquesta en un tiempo avasallador, tenso de poesía, en el que relampagueaba en lucientes contrastes el esplendor temático del gran genio de Bonn.

En la segunda parte: "Noche Transfigurada", Opus 4 de Schomberg—primera audición—, obra esta que por ser de las primeras del autor, está todavía dentro de una línea de transparencia melódica, si bien apunta en ella ya el autor que tienta caminos distintos y que en sus últimas obras concreta en mera matemática de combinaciones. "Medea", Poema Sinfónico de Barber—primera audición—, original para ballet y luego reestructurada para gran orquesta, fue la última obra de programa. Barber, como Harris, tienen en común la riqueza de la partitura, en la que predomina sobre la melodía el virtuosismo efectista de la masa orquestal. En la versión de todo el programa la orquesta hizo gala del gran dominio instrumental de cada componente, tanto en la parte solista como en la técnica y de todas esas virtudes, que hacen que su paso por Montevideo, quede señalado como un acontecimiento inolvidable.

FUIMOS AL CONCIERTO Por J. H. F.

D. Mitropoulos Supo Demostrar la Calidad y Capacidad de una Orquesta

Por tercera —y última— vez actuó en el SODRE, la Orquesta Filarmónica de Nueva York. Y por tercera vez nos embelesó un óptimo sonido orquestal, en extremo opulento, pero también claro, barnizado y fragante.

Por tercera vez fue también plausiblemente marcado con "fff", el entusiasmo del auditorio.

Y este hecho es quizás el más importante: La experiencia de la calidad y capacidad de una orquesta. De la materialización sonora. Pero no podría ser interesante este hecho, si se tratase tan sólo de algo material o auditivo-sensual. El efecto es musical. La excelencia del sonido sirvió a, o vistió, las obras. Se escucharon versiones serias. Con la doble característica de esta orquesta, que, por su parte, es exponente de un carácter musical norteamericano, y del intérprete.

El intérprete moldea la orquesta igual que la ejecución de la música tratada. De ahí que también ejerce su influencia sobre el mismo sonido.

Se nos presentó, precedido por un prestigio amplio y ya bastante largo, en el puesto de mando de la Filarmónica visitante Dimitri Mitropoulos. Ya antes de su entrada pudo observarse un cambio; Bernstein sentó a su derecha, las violas. Ahí ubica Mitropoulos, los violoncelos. La colocación es parecida a la ahora acostumbrada de nuestra OSSODRE. Las cuerdas están muy juntas. A la izquierda, el grueso enorme de los violines; del centro (violas) a la derecha, todas las cuerdas bajas.

En cuanto lo podemos juzgar, ya que desde puntos distintos de la platea puede ser también distinta la percepción, es el sonido procurado por Mitropoulos en general más denso, más pesante (no diremos: pesado). En contraste, el concepto interpretativo es menos el de la condensación que el de la exposición de fases sucesivas, y, a menudo, también del análisis.

De todos modos volvió a experimentarse el extraordinario poderío físico de esta orquesta, cuya masa sonora desborda la tarima y la sala. Mas el desborde y el derroche son afines.

Dimitri Mitropoulos, director: Se manifiestan su autoridad y su dominio. Los profesores le siguen con atención y respeto. Se imponen un intelecto y un temperamento peculiares.

Mitropoulos vigila, anima y conduce la parte y el total. La técnica directriz es personal y casi extraña. Prepondera la mano izquierda, que da la mayoría del fraseo, separados los dedos como hojas de un abanico. El brazo a veces describe semicírculos. La derecha, con la batuta, a menudo marca solamente el compás. Menos que una puntería de precisión se efectúa una especie de ondulación, con sacudidas. No busca Mitropoulos lo mágico e irracional. No produce la tensión más alta ni la emotividad más honda. Apenas la espectacularidad. Este músico cuyo conocimiento seguro queda por donde quiera patente, ni es académico ni superficial. Robustez se mezcla con nerviosismo, sobriedad respetuosa con acentuación subjetiva que subraya el efecto sin perderse en el efectismo. No hay fascinación, pero interés; no hay arrebato, pero energía.

Tocados con brío los dos Himnos Nacionales, se nos dio —realidad curiosa, como primera audición— la Obertura Académico-Festiva de Brahms: La partitura magistral usa canciones estudiantiles alemanas, trenzándose en su coronación las melodías de "Habíamos edificado magnífica" (parecida al canto del cuarto movimiento de la Primera Sinfonía) con "Gaudeamus igitur": Sin embargo tiene todo el inconfundible sello brahmsiano. Mitropoulos señaló inteligentemente el juego de temas y episodios y sus relaciones polifónicas: No detallista, pero analizador. No tanto se sintieron el empaste, la plenitud iluminada, el pulso orgánico. El rendimiento orquestal por sí, fue, desde luego, magistral.

Parecido, el tratamiento de la Segunda Sinfonía de Beethoven: Por momentos difirió de la acostumbrado. El primer movimiento no nos convenció por completo en su interpretación; el total debe ser respetado. Se trasmitió la grandeza de la obra. Quizás faltó, en ese comienzo, algo de continuidad y vuelo; la poesía y la gracia no priman en la concepción y manera de Mitropoulos. Pero el Larghetto fue desarrollado con dignidad. Y el Scherzo y el Finale tuvieron brillo, flexibilidad, pujanza y plasticidad de voces y fraseo: Concluída la ejecución con toda su solvencia orquestal, se había acusado la dramaticidad del sinfonismo beethoveniano.

Empero, la culminación del concierto fue, sin duda, la admirable reproducción, ofrecida como audición primera también ella, de "Noche transfigurada" de Arnold Schoenberg, esta bellísima y hasta sentimental obra temprana que aún es predodecafonista y postroromántica: Su autor, quien con ella hizo gala de un soberbio saber de escritura e instrumentación, ha confirmado su validez con una revisión tardía que amplía el reparto del Sexteto de Cuerdas original. En ella la escuchamos como maravilloso canto de cuerdas. Es verdad: Aquí todo fue canto. De diafanidad y dulzura exquisitas. De aliento sostenido y cálido. Fácilmente pudieron detectarse el cromatismo y clima siquico de "Tristán" y la cercanía de Mahler, amigo y protector de Schoenberg, siendo esta música nada austera y nada cerebral, sino casi demasiado efusiva, emparentada con el caro Adagietto de la Quinta Sinfonía de Mahler. Aquí estuvo Mitropoulos, evidentemente del todo en su elemento, indicando, plasmando, matizado con soltura e intensidad. Resplandecieron los grupos y el conjunto de la orquesta de cuerdas; nos enredaron destaques solísticos como el precioso del primero de los violines segundos; la soberana superioridad técnica sirvió para lograr el encanto y la emoción.

El poema sinfónico "Medea" del destacado compositor norteamericano Samuel Barber, primera audición parcial, se ofreció como exteriorización y vehículo de virtuosismo formidable. La doble pieza es aparatosa e instrumentada con mucho colorido y eficacia, empleando hábilmente los recursos de la orquestación moderna: Su originalidad es inferior a su elán. La versión fue un alarde de la Filarmónica, y ésta no es poca cosa. Y con tanto júbilo agradeció el público al director y a la orquesta, que esta bienvenida y bien despedida embajada norteamericana le obsequió, significativamente, con un "bis" hispano: La Danza General o Final de "El Sombrero de Tres Picos" de Manuel de Falla: A manera de un gigantesco despliegue de fuerza. Otra vez acentos personales, otra vez, virtuosismo. Descarga eléctrica. Repercusión.

Antes de empezar la segunda sección del concierto entregó, el Profesor Alberto Mortero como delegado de la OSSODRE, una ofrenda floral a la Orquesta Filarmónica de Nueva York, y un pergamino a Dimitri Mitropoulos. Recalcó en su breve alocución la amistad trabada entre la orquesta neoyorquina y la montevideana, y, con eso, un saldo saludable de una visita que constituye un acontecimiento mayor en la historia musical de nuestra ciudad.

Al retirarse ovacionado, de la tarima, se llevó Mitropoulos, con gesto elocuente, el nutrido canasto de flores.

SE DESPIDIO CON MITROPOULOS LA FILARMONICA DE NUEVA YORK Y CONQUISTO ROTUNDO TRIUNFO

Ante una enorme expectativa hizo su primera aparición entre nosotros el maestro griego Dimitri Mitropoulos, conduciendo a la orquesta Sinfo-Filarmónica de Nueva York. Mitropoulos no sólo no defraudó esa expectativa, sino que además logró un rotundo triunfo frente a un público numerosísimo que con anterioridad había sido reticente en el aplauso.

Mitropoulos ya es otra cosa. Es un director más sobrio y austero, gran dominador de la orquesta y de las obras que dirige, y se muestra más inclinado a buscar en las partituras lo sustancioso y profundo, sin mirar tanto el efecto que pueda ir directo al público.

Pero tampoco Mitropoulos, músico europeo, ha podido sustraerse de lo que parece ser una modalidad muy norteamericana de hacer música: tiempos generalmente acelerados, ritmos bien marcados, grandes contrastes dinámicos, carencia de mayores sutilezas en beneficio del armado a grandes trazos de las obras, siempre con tendencia a lo espectacular, a sonoridades impresionantes donde se logran fácilmente —y con admirable afinación, ajuste y calidad sonora— intensidades que van del f al fff.

La audición se inició con la Obertura académico - festiva op. 80 de Brahms, que al parecer —increíblemente— se ofrecía por primera vez en el Sodre. Luego de esta correcta versión de Brahms, Mitropoulos encaró la deliciosa Segunda Sinfonía en Re Mayor op. 36 de Beethoven; una obra llena de encanto, gracia, fino lirismo. El resultado sonoro fue tenso, sin la levedad ni flexibilidad deseables como para cantar las bellas frases beethovenianas, alejadas de todo intento trascendentalista. Mitropoulos le imprimió generalmente tiempos rápidos, un poco machacados en el ritmo; la orquesta, en cuanto a ejecución se refiere, confirmó otra vez su notable solvencia, su afinación, ajuste, precisión impecables. La mecanicidad que muchas veces evidencia es mayormente atribuíble a los directores, que no parecen preocupados de conseguir refinamientos ni detalles de sutileza.

La obra que más legítimamente conquistó al público fue "Noche transfigurada", op. 4 de Schonberg, lírica, de esencia romántica, entroncada en el espíritu wagneriano y heredera de su supercromatismo. En cierto modo, poco representativa del creador del sistema docetonal, por lo menos en su faz más especulativa y compleja. Mitropoulos vertió con brío esta hermosa partitura, fraseando con inteligencia y, sobre todo, consiguiendo de las cuerdas de la Filarmónica —uno de sus puntos más fuertes— un rendimiento formidable. Fue una versión magnífica asentada primordialmente en la calidad sonora tan pareja de todos los sectores de esta excelente cuerda.

Sin embargo, el maestro Mitropoulos fue ruidosamente aplaudido en le exterior, aunque interesante, "Medea" de Barber, que el programa proponía como primera audición (también "Noche transfigurada") y que, si mal no recordamos, fue hecha el año pasado por Antal Dorati.

El director griego culminó así las presentaciones de la famosa Orquesta Sinfo - Filarmónica de Nueva York, organismo de primera, con grandes virtudes, generalmente desaprovechadas en manos de directores competentes pero escasamente musicales, que apuntan casi siempre al efecto grueso de alcance directo, fácil. Dimitri Mitropoulos es la gran figura dentro de la Filramónica y tiene credenciales para serlo. Aparte de los detalles anotados, comunes a lo que bien puede llamarse una modalidad directriz norteamericana, es un músico cabal. La orquesta le responde ampliamente a sus indicaciones, que él suele hacer con bastante anticipación, diferenciándose netamente de la mayoría de los directores que conocemos. Para un conjunto que conozca su modalidad, ello debe dar una gran seguridad y confianza.

"ARTE É UM INSTRUMENTO DIPLOMÁTICO MUITO EFICIENTE PARA O ENTROSAMENTO DOS POVOS"

O Maestro Dimitri Mitropoulos, que conduziu, ontem, a Orquestra Filarmônica de Nova York, em entrevista coletiva à imprensa metropolitana, declara, também, que "A arte viceja, sob qualquer regime, mesmo os discricionários, pois o artista paira acima de qualquer discriminação" — Dimitri Mitropoulos foi agraciado, em Pôrto Alegre, com a inauguração de uma placa comemorativa, do magnífico concêrto que a Orquestra Filarmônica realizou, no Auditório da Universidade do Rio Grande do Sul

Na noite de ontem, num intervalo do magnífico concêrto, realizado pela Orquestra Filarmônica de Nova York, que constituiu um dos maiores acontecimentos dos últimos anos, em nossa cidade, foi inaugurada uma placa, no saguão do Auditório da Universidade do Rio Grande do Sul, marcando a passagem mais famoso conjunto orquestral por nossa cidade. Coube ao romancista E'rico Veríssimo, nome de projeção continental, fazer a saudação aos músicos norte-americanos, que nos visitaram, e ao dr. Elyseu Paglioli, Reitor da Universidade, decerrar a primeira placa que foi encrustada na parede daquela moderna casa de espetáculos.

Uma entrevista

Dimitri Mitropoulos, regente-titular da Orquestra Filarmônica de Nova York, concedeu, ontem à tarde uma entrevista coletiva à Imprensa metropolitana, no City Hotel, onde se encontrava hospedado.

Ressaltamos, de início, sua declaração:

— "O Artista vive em mundo à parte. Mas isso não quer dizer que a música não deva ter uma base de dignidade moral"!

Arte e diplomacia

— "A Arte é um instrumento diplomático da atualidade — prosseguiu o célebre regente — Julgo não haver nada mais eficiente para o entrosamento dos povos, do que o intercâmbio entre cultôres da arte. Concluo, portanto, que a representação internacional, por executantes de arte, venha a ser a mais eficaz diplomacia, tanto agora, como no futuro".

Independência da Arte

— "A Arte viceja, tanto em países, subordinados a regimes discricionários, como naqueles em que impera a democracia. Pois Arte constitui necessidade imanente e imperiosa, na vida de um povo. Ela se desenvolve, em face da ansiedade de criação e manifestação artística do Dimitri Mitropoulos, quando concedia a sua entrevista coletiva à Imprensa.

homem. De tal maneira isso é verdade que, entre povos submetidos a regimes de fôrça, durante o Renascimento, pôde haver homens como Miguel Ângelo, Rafael, e outros".

Schoenberg e Mitropoulos

Em dado momento, alguém arriscou uma pergunta, a respeito do controvertido musicista Schoenberg. Mitropoulos falou com entusiasmo:

— "Agrada-me sobre maneira reger Schoenberg. E não me eximo de dizer que, quando mais jovem, estudei o processo dodecafônico, que em verdade abriu novos caminhos para a música. E não me custa contar também que, inclusive, cheguei a compor algumas músicas, baseadas na escola de Schoenberg. Mas acabei convencido de que deveria abandonar minhas veleidades de compositor e permanecer em minha verdadeira missão, que é a regência".

Indagamos, estão: — segundo consta, o senhor pretende aposentar-se, ainda êste ano. Abandonará a regência?

— "Apenas me aposentarei de meu cargo de regente-titular da Orquestra Filarmônica de Nova York. Mas, de forma alguma, deixarei de empunhar a batuta. Não, não pretendo retirar-me para um rancho, ou ficar pescando à beira de um rio. Sigo com a música. Até onde ela me levar".

O Maestro e a Orquestra

— Qual a verdadeira importância de um maestro, dentro da Orquestra?

— "Simplesmente a de facilitar o trabalho dos músicos. Já foi tentado a experiência, na Rússia, de orquestra, sem condutor. Afinal acabaram convencidos de que aquela figurinha irriquiéta e gesticulante, à frente dos instrumentos, não era de todo desnecessária para um mais perfeito entendimento entre os músicos".

Música brasileira

Antes de encerrarmos, pedimos ao regente, que falasse, a respeito da música brasileira:

— "O que conheço é de primeira qualidade: Villa-Lobos e Camargo Guarnieri. Aliás, no ano passado, Villa-Lobos regeu um concêrto para a Filarmônica de Nova York, na qual foram apresentadas músicas de sua autoria e de Camargo Guarnieri. Sinceramente, de primeiríssima qualidade!"

GRANDE SUCESSO O CONCÊRTO DA FILARMÔNICA DE N. YORK ONTEM

Constitui um dos mais retumbantes êxitos na vida artística de nosso Estado o concêrto realizado ontem à noite no Auditório da Universidade do Rio Grande do Sul a cargo da Orquestra Filarmônica de NovaYork sob a regência do maestro Dimitri Mitropoulos. Mais de três mil pessoas lotaram o amplo Auditório da U.R.G.S., ovacionando delirantemente à grande Filarmônica. Foi tão elevado o número de espectadores que as localidades foram insuficientes, tendo havido até tumulto entre o público que não se conformando de assistir de pé o grande concêrto penetrou no restaurante da Universidade a fim de retirar cadeiras. Os aplausos calorosos do grande público que afluiu ao Auditório na noite de ontem duraram mais de três minutos após o último número, tendo o maestro Dimitri Metropoulos sob aclamações gerais, numa verdadeira apoteose, concedido uma extra nesta memorável noite de arte em que foi mostrada à Pôrto Alegre a maior orquestra filarmônica no momento, a mais antiga dos Estados Unidos, tendo sido regida por Toscanini. Dentre os 106 instrumentos da orquestra, 65 são de corda, podendo-se salientar que o violino "spala" é um legítimo Stradivarius. Grande multidão lotou totalmente o auditório da Universidade do Rio Grande do Sul (dezenas de pessoas em pé, por falta de lugares) aplaudiu, empolgada, a apresentação da Orquestra Filarmônica de Nova Iorque, sob a regência do maestro Dimitri Mitropoulos. Foi, inegàvelmente, um acontecimento artístico inesquecível para os anais de P. Alegre, quer pela categoria do conjunto, constituido por 106 figuras, quer pelo programa apresentado, quase na totalidade constante de páginas contemporâneas. Excetuando Brahms cujo 125.o aniversário de nascimento transcorreu no mês passado, os demais autores devem ter constituido absoluta novidade para a maioria da platéia. Para muitos, segundo soubemos, as interpretações dadas representaram verdadeiro impacto, inclusive do nosso Guarnieri, lamentàvelmente ouvido tão pouco em nosso meio. Na foto, um aspecto da memorável noitada no auditório da Universidade do R. G. S., vendo-se a Orquestra Filarmônica de Nova Iorque e parte da assistência. FILARMÔNICA DE NOVA YORK TOCARÁ ESTA NOITE NO AUDITÓRIO DA URGS

Concêrto sinfônico que constitui o "high-musical" do ano — Um pouco de história sôbre o regente Dimitri Mitropoulos — Como nasceu e atingiu seu climax o maior conjunto filarmônico do mundo — Programa para nossa capital — Transmissão pela Rádio Guaíba e pela Rádio da Universidade Certamente a apresentação da maior filarmônica de nossos dias, constitui um acontecimento ímpar em nossa vida artística, mòrmente nestas temporadas carentes de valores em face da elevação da moeda estrangeira. Logo à noite, no amplo auditório da Universidade do Rio Grande do Sul, à Avenida Paulo Gama, veremos concentrar-se elite e povo para apreciar um fato raro e de larga envergadura no setor cultural de nossa progresista metrópole. A um dos mais célebres regentes do mundo caberá a direção desta noite.

DIMITRI MITROPOULOS

Dimitri Mitropoulos nasceu em Atenas a 18 de fevereiro de 1896; fez seus primeiros estudos no Conservatório de sua cidade natal, estudando com Ferrucio Busoni em Berlim. Durante certo número de anos esteve a cargo da Sinfônica de Atenas como Diretor em Propriedade. Tendo grandes dotes de pianista virtuose e compositor de grande talento, ao começo de sua carreira lhe resultava difícil entregar-se por inteiro a uma só atividade. Mas com sua primeira experiência como diretor de orquestra, deu-se conta que havia dado com sua verdadeira vocação.

Dimitri Mitropoulos é bem conhecido como um grande intérprete de clássicos, além de ser um convencido paladino dos compositores modernos. Graças a seu interêsse e devoção muitas obras modernas importantes foram apresentadas por primeira vez. Suas óperas em concerto com a Filarmônica, incluindo "Elektra", de Strauss "L'Heure Espagnole" de Ravel, "Wozzeck" de Berg e "Christophe Colombe" de Milhaud, resultaram em grandes acontecimentos musicais. Nos últimos anos introduziu em New York a Liebermann, assim como obras de um grande número de compositores da música norteamericana por meio de seus concertos com a Filarmônica.

UM POUCO DA HISTORIA DA FILARMONICA

Quando o renomado crítico musical James Hunecker escreveu, faz alguns anos, "A História da Filarmônica é a história da música nos Estados Unidos", não apenas fez uma epítome dos anos que tinha a orquestra a produzir música sem interrupções desde 1842, mas de seu espírito criado no estabelecimento da tradição musical, apresentando desde seu início, nova música junto ao repertório estabelecido. A inspiração de grupos sinfônicos mais recentes em outras cidades nasceu de sua idéia, e ao iniciar sua "tournée" êste ano, a Filarmônico pode orgulhar-se de contar entre sua geração mais de 1.000 orquestras sinfônicas através dos Estados Unidos dedicada à criação de música séria, sem mencionar outras ramificações em 15.000 orquestras sinfônicas de estudantes aficionados.

A lista de diretores da Filarmônica através dos anos parece uma relação tirada do "Quem é quem na música". Muitos dos mais famosos vieram associar-se indelevelmente com a história da orquestra: nos primeiros anos, Theodore Thomas, Leopold Anton Seidl, Emil Paur, Leopold e Walter Damrosch, Gustav Mahler e Willem Mengelberg; e mais recentemente, Arturo Toscanini, Bruno Walter, Dimitri Mitropoulos, Leonard Bernstein, Leopold Stokowsky, Wilhelm Furtwaengler, Serge Koussewitzky, Otto Klemperer, Erich Kleiber, Sir Thomas Beecham, Felix Weingartner, Pierre Monteux, Guido Cantelli, George Szell, Sir John Barbirolli e Artur Rodzinski.

O grande publico ouvinte e telespectador terá na noite de hoje a grande e feliz oportunidade de ver e ouvir a famosa Filarmonica de Nova Iorque, através da transmissão que a Televisão Tupi e a Radio Difusora estarão fazendo em conjunto, da estreia da organização sinfonica mais antiga dos Estados Unidos, no Teatro Municipal. Sob a regencia do maestro Dimitri Mitropoulos, a Filarmonica executará o seguinte programa: 1.a parte — Camargo Guarnieri: "Prologo e Fuga"; Johannes Brahms: "Sinfonia n.o 3 em Fá Maior Opus, 90 (Allegro com brio, Andante Poco Alegretto, allegro); 2.a parte — Arnold Schoenberg: "Noite Transfigurada (para orquestra de cordas Opus 4); Samuel Barber: "Meditação e Dança da Vingança de Medes" (Opus 23-A). Sobre o maestro Dimitri Mitropoulos, podemos informar que é grego de nascimento e, atualmente, cidadão dos Estados Unidos. Uma reputação brilhante na Europa precedeu sua estreia na America em 1936 com a Sinfonia de Boston. Desde 1937 até a primavera de 1949, suas atividades se encontram no Meio Oeste, onde era diretor musical da Sinfonia de Minneapolis, porem, com outras orquestras importantes prontamente lhe assegurou o favor de um publico devoto de costa a costa dos E.U.A. A proposito dessa apresentação excepcional, convem salientar que alem de ser a organização sinfonica mais antiga da America, a Filarmonica de Nova Iorque acaba de terminar a sua 116.a temporada. Através de sua historia, tem mantido sua supremacia no ramo, oferecendo ao publico os mais destacados compositores e solistas do mundo inteiro. Todos os anos a Filarmonica oferece mais de 120 concertos na cidade de Nova Iorque, proporcionando à cidade dos arranha-céus mais eventos musicais que qualquer outra orquestra nos Estados Unidos. Por outro lado, a Filarmonica constitui uma atração certa da cadeia radiofonica da CBS, calculando-se que cerca de quinze milhões ouvem todos os meses seus memoraveis concertos. Sem duvida alguma, o espetaculo de hoje, pela Televisão Tupi e Radio Difusora, está fadado a constituir-se no acontecimento musical do ano.

MITROPOULOS, UM MAESTRO JOVIAL

Diário de S. Paulo 6-5-1958

Em S. Paulo para um concerto a Orquestra Sinfonica de Nova York

"Considero o rock'n'roll um genero de musica, igual a tantos outros do gosto popular. Apenas não peçam a mim que execute musicas desse genero", disse o maestro Dimitri Mistropoulos aos jornalistas, reunidos para uma entrevista coletiva, no "foyer" do Teatro Municipal, pouco depois de ter desembarcado em Congonhas, juntamente com os 125 componentes da Orquestra Sinfonica de Nova York. A orquestra, sob a regencia de Mitropoulos e de Leonard Bernstein, cuja chegada é prevista para hoje, dará um concerto em nossa Capital, de acordo com um programa especialmente elaborado pelo presidente dos Estados Unidos, visando dar cumprimento a um maior intercambio cultural entre aquele pais e a America Latina.

O maestro Dimitri Mitropoulos que regerá o concêrto da Sinfônica de Nova York

Com a sua bagagem volumosa, em que os instrumentos musicais ocupam 82 caixas enormes, os musicos americanos percorreram a Argentina e o Uruguai. Formam eles um grupo curioso, de variadas origens — em sua maioria, americanos naturalizados, originarios de diversos paises: Italia, Grecia, Venezuela, Estado de Israel, Polonia e Russia, entre outros. Dentre todos, porem, o tipo mais curioso é o do maestro que durante a entrevista coletiva deu mostras de sua jovialidade.

PROGRAMA: UM CARDAPIO

Na entrevista, referindo-se aos criterios que adota para a organização do programa de um concerto, disse o maestro Mitropoulos:

— "Organizar um bom programa é como preparar um cardapio, pois o publico que assiste a um concerto é um consumidor que só compra o que lhe agrada".

No programa elaborado pelos promotores da "tourniée" constam em cada apresentação obras de dois autores contemporaneos: Vila Lobos e Camargo Guarnieri. A esse respeito, assim se expressou o entrevistado:

"Se me fosse dado escolher o programa, teria incluido no mesmo compositores classicos e antigos, a fim de dosar melhor o seu conteudo. Por outro lado, teria preferido executar uma só peça mais longa de um autor, ao invés de duas curtas".

Sobre suas preferencias pessoais, esquivou-se o maestro de dar respostas definitivas. Para ele existem muitos bons compositores e, por isso, não pode dizer quais os melhores. O mesmo no tocante a musicos. Referindo-se à musica popular asinalou:

"Não se pode condenar ou desprezar nenhum genero musical: todos se enquadram na categoria de sons harmonicos. Devemos colocar cada coisa em seu respectivo lugar: para mim são necessarios tanto a musica erudita, quanto a popular".

E disso o maestro Mitropoulos não exclui o "rock and roll". Tambem musica concreta para ele é necessaria: "Trata-se de uma das muitas variações de uma gama que varia de cima a baixo".

O maestro Mitropoulos que nasceu em Atenas em 1896 e vive nos Estados Unidos desde 1936, quando estreiou regendo a Sinfonica de Boston, continua sendo no seu sexagesimo segundo ano de vida, um homem extremamente ocupado. Segundo nos informa, em meio a concertos e ensaios, alem de viagens (esta é a quarta tournée que realiza através do mundo, tendo sido ele quem levou a Sinfonica à Europa pela segunda vez), sobra-lhe pouco tempo para atender ao seu gosto pelo estudo da filosofia. O maestro alem da leitura, tem um outro "hobby": o alpinismo.

"Não podendo mais escalar montanhas, dedico-me agora a subir o estrado do teatro", diznos ele.

"Logo depois desta excursão tenho viagem marcada para Tel-Aviv", informa. "Dali seguirei para Salzburg, Atenas e Viena e somente em outubro voltarei para os Estados Unidos. Não vejo nenhuma perspectiva de poder repousar antes de 1960"

Os componentes da Orquestra Filarmonica permanecerão em São Paulo até domingo proximo, quando seguirão para o Rio. Em sua chegada ao aeroporto de Congonhas foram recebidos pelo consul geral dos Estados Unidos em São Paulo e sua senhora, ministro Richard P. Butrick e pelo chefe do Serviço de Informações dos Estados Unidos em nossa cidade Dwight B. Herrick, os quais ofereceram à tarde um coquetel aos musicos e à imprensa, no "foyer" do Teatro Municipal.

Com 120 elementos e 9 toneladas de carga chegou a Filarmonica de N. York

Chegou ontem a São Paulo a Orquestra Filarmonica de Nova York, que dará três concertos nesta Capital. Quatro aviões foram necessarios para transportar os 120 elementos da Filarmonica, 107 dos quais são musicos. Os professores do famoso conjunto sinfonico levam consigo seus instrumentos, que pesam nove toneladas, e já se acham no Teatro Municipal de São Paulo. Regerão os concertos de São Paulo os maestros Dimitri Mitropoulos e Leonard Bernstein. O primeiro chegou ontem e á noite concedeu entrevista á imprensa. Bernstein deverá chegar hoje a São Paulo. A viagem da Orquestra Filarmonica de Nova York faz parte do programa de intercambio cultural com a America Latina, em desenvolvimento pelos Estados Unidos. O notavel conjunto visitou diversos países do Continente, antes de vir ao Brasil, onde já se exibiu, anteontem, em Porto Alegre. Depois dos concertos de São Paulo, a Filarmonica de Nova York tocará no Rio.

Foi bastante concorrida a entrevis ta de ontem do maestro Mitropoulos

ENTREVISTA

Dimitri Mitropoulos é uma das figuras mais representativas da musica contemporanea. Nascido na Grecia, sua carreira musical estende-se por todos os Continentes. As palavras diretas, quase rispidas, apesar da intenção afavel, com que se dirige aos reporteres e responde ás perguntas formuladas indicam uma personalidade forte, marcada. Por outro lado, revela, nas primeiras palavras, profunda preocupação pelos problemas "humanos", revelando sensibilidade ao se referir varias vezes ao papel que a musica e as artes desempenham na aproximação dos povos. "Se há esperanças de confraternização e de revalidação dos conceitos de fraternidade universal — diz — residem elas nos artistas, e não nos politicos.

O maestro não hesita em começar a falar, assim que termina a breve apresentação á imprensa. "Representamos uma pequena minoria que se interessa pelas artes" — diz. "E' uma ocupação um tanto inusitada e evidentemente não de primeira necessidade. Muitos acham que essas atividades servem apenas para crianças e senhoritas".

Logo depois, Mitropoulos se revela: "Mas a musica é a unica linguagem universalmente inteligivel. Para que os povos cheguem á compreensão, só há um meio: trocar culturas. Vimos o que os russos fazem e como obtêm exito, enviando seus melhores artistas ao exterior. Nos países que visitamos, a reação do povo é prova concludente de tudo que eu disse" — concluiu.

GENEROS

Falando sobre musica popular e musica concreta, o maestro Mitropoulos foi explicito: considera toda forma de musica e de arte util, necessaria e boa. Acha, porém, que cada um deve permanecer no seu estilo, na sua especialidade. Acredita que não se pode pedir a um regente de orquestra sinfonica que toque musica popular. "Se eu fosse fazê-lo — disse — fa-lo-ia mal".

No pouco tempo livre de qu dispõe, Mitropoulos gosta de l filosofia e humanidades. Rege opera e concertos nas maiores c pitais do mundo mas afirma: "Ap sar de sua fama, o Metropolita Opera House é ainda o teatro qu dá os melhores espetaculos".

OS PROGRAMAS EM S. PAULO

O sr. Dimitri Mitropoulos, comentando o programa dos concertos da Filarmonica de Nova York em São Paulo, declarou que, pessoalmente, não os teria assim organizado. Afirmou que se pudesse escolher livremente o programa, tocaria uma peça contemporanea, um dos primeiros classicos e um romantico. O Departamento de Estado, porém, organizando essa temporada da Filarmonica, exigiu que fossem tocadas duas peças contemporaneas em cada programa, uma de compositor norte-americano e outra de musico latino-americano.

Mitropoulos, contudo, admitindo que assim é obrigado a tocar obras de menos folego dos compositores do Continente, afirma que essa orientação das autoridades contribuiu consideravelmente para o conhecimento da musica escrita em nossos dias. Disse que as 30 orquestras sinfonicas de primeira categoria que existem nos Estados Unidos tocam todas hoje musica contemporanea.

A ORQUESTRA

A Filarmonica de Nova York — que primeiramente se chamou Sociedade de Sinfonia Filarmonica de Nova York — existe desde 1842. Através dos anos, figuras de excepcional relevo na historia da musica regeram essa notavel orquestra, Seidl, Damrosch, Mengelberg, Toscanini, Stokowsky, Rodzinsky, Szelli Barbirolli, entre outros. Rachmaninoff, Stern, Guiomar Novais, Casadesus, Menuhin, Francescatti e Brailowsky.

COMO VIVE

A orquestra não recebe nenhuma ajuda do governo por suas atividades regulares em Nova York. Para ajudar a financiá-la, foram organizadas entidades particulares, como a Sociedade dos Amigos da Filarmonica e a Junta Auxiliar da Filarmonica.

A presente excursão é realizada sob os auspicios do Programa Internacional Especial do Presidente dos Estados Unidos para Apresentações Culturais. A temporada iniciou-se na cidade de Panamá, a 29 de abril, e será encerrada depois de 44 concertos, realizados em 30 cidades de 12 paises diferentes.

MITROPOULOS

Mitropoulos exerce desde 1951 as funções de diretor musical da orquestra. Dentro de alguns meses, entregará a Bernstein a responsabilidade de orientar o famoso conjunto. Mitropoulos é responsavel por algumas das mais ousadas iniciativas da Filarmonica. Lançou a decima sinfonia e o concerto para violino de Shostakovitch e o concerto para jazz band e orquestra de Liebermann.

Como regente de operas, Mitropoulos se tem apresentado em varias capitais europeias. Foi o responsavel por apresentações de operas modernas, como "Eletra", de Strauss, "A Hora Espanhola", de Ravel, "Wossek", de Berg e "Cristovão Colombo", de Darius Milhaud, e também de obras mais antigas do genero, como "Salomé", "O Baile de Mascaras", "Tosca", "Carmem", "As Valquirias".

Ultima Hora 2a

FILARMONICA DE N. I. ESTREOU ONTEM — Pode-se dizer que foi um dos maiores acontecimentos do ano, até aqui, a estreia, ontem, no Municipal, da Orquestra Filarmonica de Nova Iorque, sob a regencia de Dimitri Mitropoulus. O teatro estava à cunha. Havia gente — inclusive regentes nossos — sentados nas escadas, postados nos corredores. Adotando velho costume europeu, foi permitido que parte da assistencia se acomodasse por trás da rotunda, no palco. Tudo cheio. Mitropoulus, com seu sorriso simpatico e gestos largos foi recebido e mantido num clima de grande simpatia. Seus comandados mostravam-se euforicos e tocaram magnificamente, conforme o registraremos a seu tempo em nossa secção especializada. Na gravura, o famoso condutor grego.

A GAZETA — S. PAULO — SEXTA-FEIRA, 6 DE JUNHO DE 1958

Entrevista com Mitropoulos

Foi feita, no "foyer" do Municipal, quarta-feira, às 17 horas, a apresentação à imprensa, radio e televisão de São Paulo do maestro Dimitri Mitropoulos, um dos atuais regentes da Filarmônica de Nova York, que visita a nossa cidade. Serviu de "mestre de cerimonia" e interprete o nosso [illegible] sr. Tito Silveira, do Consulado Americano. Observou o sr. Silveira, ao lado de Mitropoulos, que a visita da Orquestra se prendia ao "Plano Eisenhower de Intercambio Cultural", e que essa excursão da Filarmônica de Nova York tinha por objetivo solidificar mais ainda os laços culturais que nos unem ao país amigo.

A seguir, em nome de Dimitri Mitropoulos, colocou-se à disposição para as perguntas habituais. Respondendo a diversas indagações, o maestro fez notar que deixará brevemente a Filarmônica, passando-a a Leonard Bernstein (no momento viajando para o Brasil). Motivo: tempo totalmente tomado no Metropolitan de Nova York. Acrescentou que há muito está afastado da Filarmônica, apenas retomando seu posto faz uma semana. Elogiou a musica brasileira, observando (a uma indagação) que considera todo o tipo de musica importante: a comédia burlesca, o popular e o erudito.

— "Mas assim como um pintor não sabe fazer sapatos e um reverendo não conta piadas, também êle não pode discutir sôbre musica popular. Cada qual no seu setor... Eu fico no meu".

Após essa excursão da Orquestra de Nova York, Mitropoulos irá para Tel-Aviv e Viena, onde regerá a Filarmônica desta ultima cidade. Irá com ela à Grecia e depois aos Estados Unidos, juntamente com Herbert Von Karajan. Irá trabalhar até 1960. Então tirará umas férias.

— "Aprendi hoje uma grande lição — terminou Mitropoulos. A musica é muito mais eficiente para aproximar os povos do que os politicos".

Terminada a entrevista coletiva, o maestro autografou discos. Logo após, ladeado do consul americano e sra. e outros elementos de destaque do corpo consular estadunidense no Brasil, Mitropoulos recebeu os cumprimentos do publico presente ao "foyer" do Municipal.

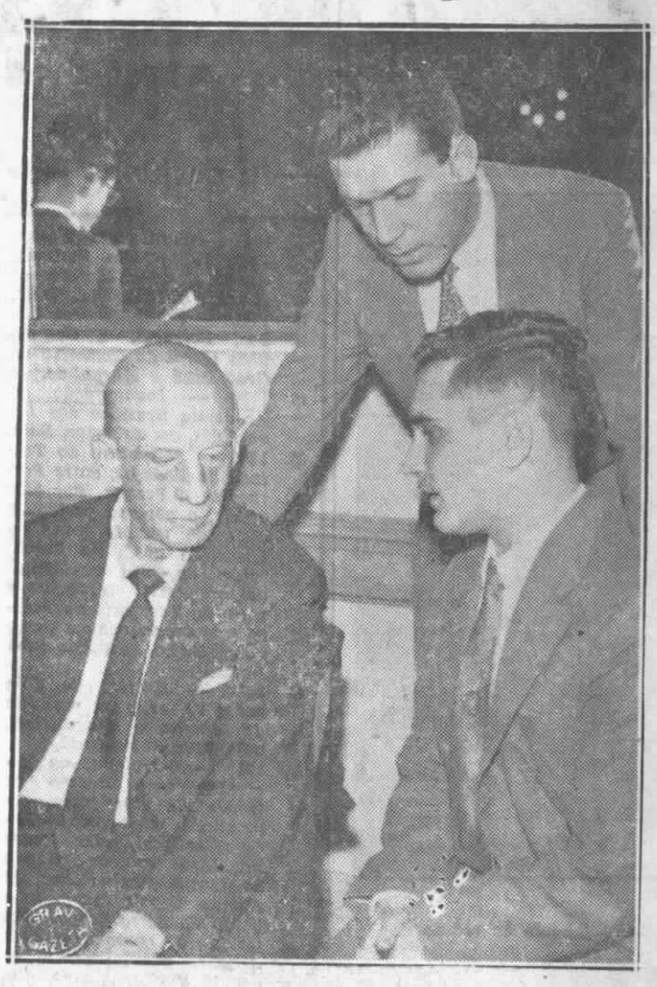
MITROPOULOS FALA A "GAZETA"

A nossa reportagem teve uma entrevista exclusiva com Mitropoulos. O maestro é um homem de respostas simples e objetivas.

Perguntamos-lhe: "De Toscanini a Bernstein, qual o regente da Filarmônica que marcou época, por inovações ou personalidade?" Ao que êle respondeu:

— "O objetivo de todos é o mesmo: destacar-se. Se eu apontasse um nome, estaria mentindo. Mentindo também estaria se dissesse que meu próprio objetivo não é êsse".

"E' verdade, perguntamos, que Stokowsky não foi bem visto na Orquestra durante o tempo em que a regeu, por causa de seus arranjos?



— "Não é verdade que Stokowsky deixou a Orquestra por essa razão. Seus arranjos são discutidos, é verdade. Mas a maioria dêles é boa. Do contrario Stokowsky não seria popular como é".

Indagamos a seguir sôbre alguns "astros" da Filarmônica, como o violoncelista Leonard Rose, o flautista John Wummer, o pistonista William Vachiano e o oboísta Harold Gomber (êste ultimo considerado por Rudzinsky como o maior oboísta do mundo).

— "Estão todos ainda na Orquestra, menos Rose, que saiu faz uns 7 anos".

Perguntamos a Mitropoulos sôbre o compositor americano, vivo ou morto, que mais o impressionava.

— "Todos êles são bons. E' dificil destacar um ou outro".

Mitropoulos fala à A GAZETA

Fizemos a seguir a pergunta:

Que faz de uma orquestra uma organização perfeita, como sonoridade e técnica?

O maestro respondeu:

— "As duas coisas e outra que o sr. esqueceu: um bom regente!"

E finalmente:

Que sente o maestro quando ouve uma gravação sua?"

— "Nada — respondeu. Acho que já senti tudo antes!" E sorriu, encolhendo os ombros.

OS MUSICOS DA FILARMÔNICA

No coquetel estavam presentes diversos musicos da Orquestra Filarmônica de Nova York. Todos jovens, aparentemente com poucos anos de orquestra. Travamos amizade com o bateria, que confessou estar impressionado com nossa cidade, apesar de estar entre nós por poucas horas. A uma pergunta sôbre qual a obra que mais gostava de tocar, respondeu não ter nenhuma em especial, mas gostar muito de Bach, Beethoven e "jazz". Um dos violoncelistas (rapaz de vinte e poucos anos) confessou-se também maravilhado com a recepção e a terra. Perguntamos-lhe sôbre os maestros com os quais tocou, dizendo ter tocado com Bruno Walter, Mitropoulos, Bernstein e Villa-Lobos. O nosso maestro impressionou-o sobremaneira. Dois dos "violas" da Filarmônica teceram comentarios elogiosos com respeito a Stokowsky, Bruno Walter e Mitropoulos (não esquecendo de Bernstein), citando-os como dos melhores regentes que já passaram pela Orquestra. "Stokowsky principalmente — disse-nos um dêles — é sempre uma surpresa. O musico nunca sabe o que êle vai querer. Imaginação fértil, espirito insatisfeito, exerce forte influência sôbre a orquestra".

Não estavam presentes à reunião alguns dos principais solistas da Filarmônica de Nova York, como Vachiano, Wummer, Corigliano ("concert-master") e Harold Gomber. Este ultimo, cansado pela viagem, preferiu permanecer no Hotel.

O Estado de S. Paulo

Dimitri Mitropoulos, natural da Grecia e naturalizado cidadão norte-americano, regeu a Filarmonica de Nova York pela primeira vez, como regente convidado, em 1940; dois anos depois era regente permanente e desde 1951 é o diretor musical da orquestra. Famoso como profundo interprete dos classicos e romanticos, distinguiu-se também pela apresentação de obras modernas, muitas das quais lhe devem a primeira audição. O seu talento transformou em verdadeiros acontecimentos no mundo musical norte-americano as apresentações de Electra de Strauss, A Hora Espanhola de Ravel e Cristovão Colombo de Milhaud.

Folha da Manhã

Dimitri Mitropoulos em São Paulo:

"A MUSICA É A LINGUAGEM QUE O MUNDO TODO PODE ENTENDER"

Entrevista do regente titular da Orquestra Filarmonica de Nova Iorque — Hoje, no Teatro Municipal, a primeira apresentação — Peça de autores brasileiros serão executadas nos espetaculos em nossa capital

Encontra-se em São Paulo, desde ontem, devendo estrear hoje no Teatro Municipal, a Orquestra Filarmonica de Nova Iorque. Seu regente titular, Dimitri Mitropoulus, concedeu à imprensa, na tarde de ontem, uma entrevista coletiva.

— "A musica é a unica linguagem pela qual toda as pessoas do mundo podem entender-se", iniciou o maestro, nascido n... Grecia e radicado desde 1936 nos Estados Unidos. "E se há esperança de uma paz mundial — acrescentou — essa deverá ser encontrada através dos artistas e não dos politicos."

A vinda da Orquestra Filarmonica de Nova Iorqu — que tem 108 figuras — a São Paulo é parte de uma excursão que esse grupo musical faz atualmente pela America Latina, em cumprimento do programa de intercambio cultural do governo dos Estados Unidos. Vinda de Porto Alegre, a orquestra seguirá para o Rio de Janeiro, após três apresentações em São Paulo.

Dimitri Mitropoulus, que sucedeu a Toscanini na regencia da Orquestra Filarmonica de [illegible]a Ior ue, informou que deixará essa orquestra em 1960, para dedicar-se com mais tempo ao "Metropolitan Opera House", tambem de Nova Iorque. Será substituido na Filarmonica pelo jovem maestro norte-americano Leonard Bernstein. Alem de maestro, Mitropoulus é pianista, compositor e regente de operas.

MUSICA BRASI' RA

Mitropoulus informou que conhece de há muito os compositores brasileiros Vila-Lobos e Camargo Guarnieri, aos quais considera "musicos universais". Nas [illegible]resentações da Filarmonica de Nova Iorque em São Paulo, serão executadas varias peças desses autores. Perguntado sobre se a musica brasileira é apreciada nos Estados Unidos, disse o maestro: — "O povo, em geral, gosta do que é conhecido, e não conhece a musica brasileira. Para que o povo norte-americano aceitasse de bom-grado as composições brasileiras era necessario que essas fossem acondicionadas em "pilulas musicais", de facil manejo e transporte. Entretanto, a Orquestra Filarmonica de Nova Iorque tem executado peças de autores brasileiros que têm merecido boa receptividade."

Mitropoulus declarou que espera seja a Filarmonica compreendida pelo publico paulista e que a sua apresentação valha "como um elo a mais de aproximação entre os povos norte-americano e brasileiro".

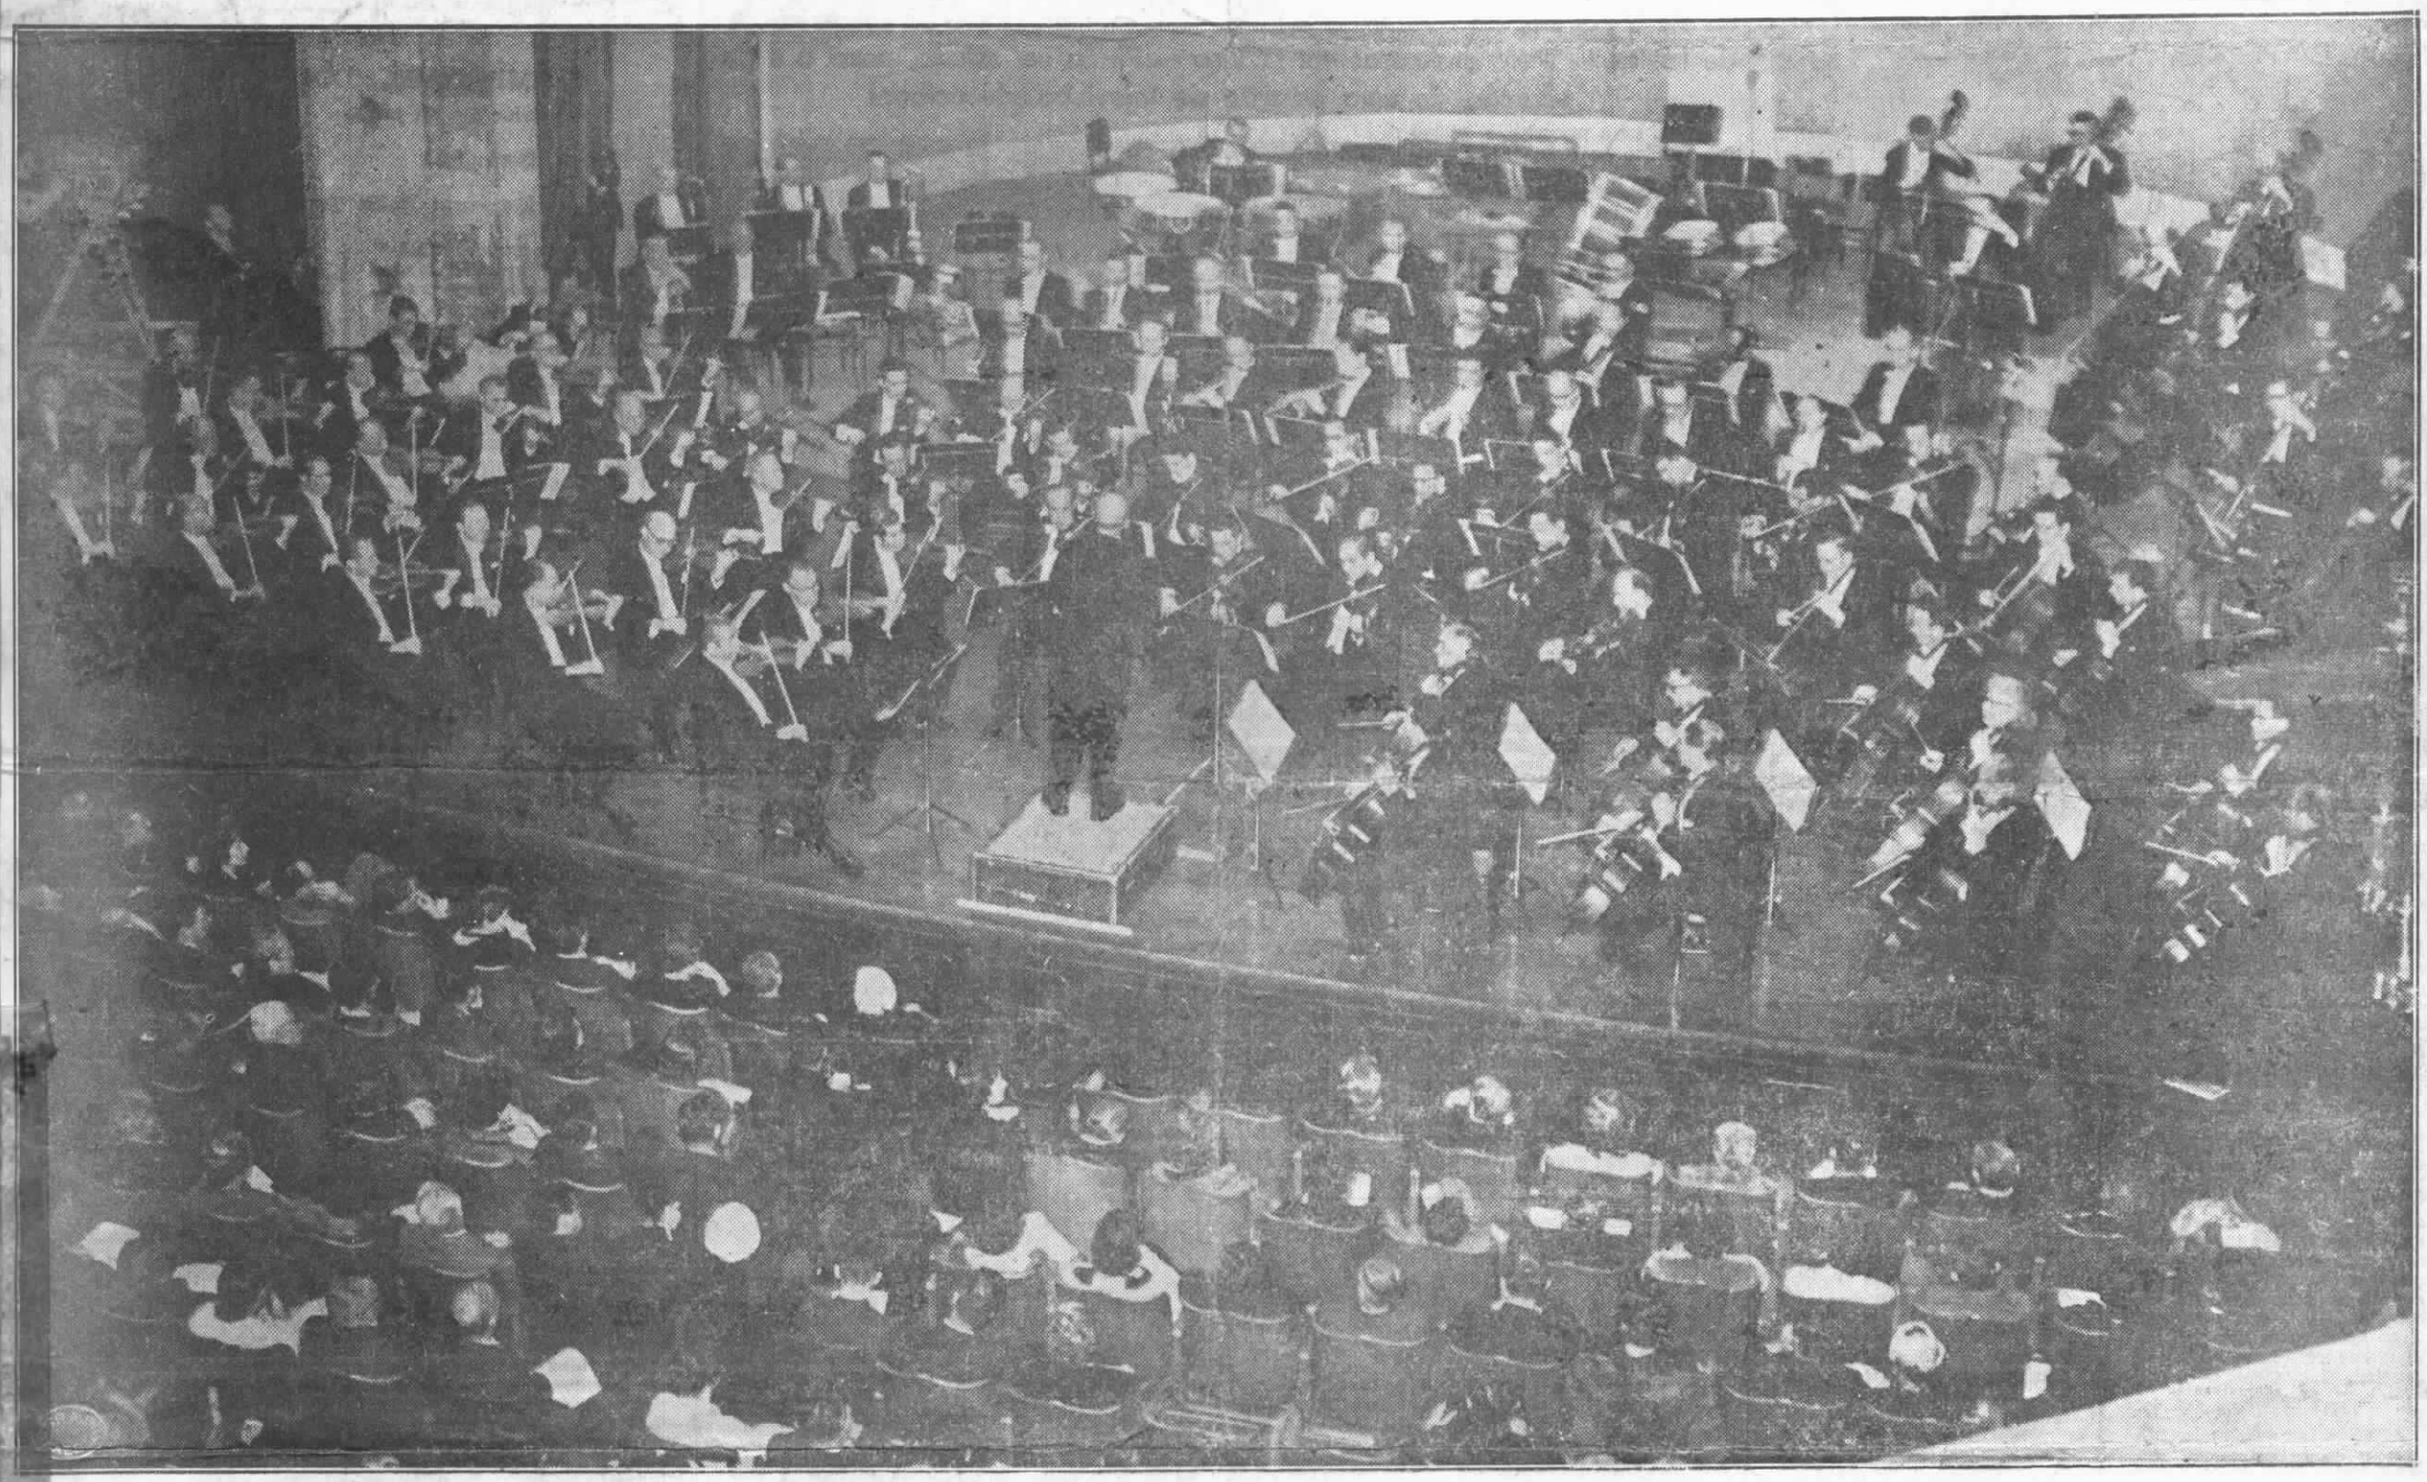
MUSICA POPULAR

Perguntado sobre se interpreta musica popular, respondeu o famoso maestro: "A Humanidade trabalha em equipe na musica. Aqui impera o "jazz", ali a musica arabe, acolá o samba, em outro local a opera. Cada uma desas categorias tem os seus especialistas. Assim como um padre não pode contar anedotas ou um pintor não faz sapatos, eu não interpreto musica popular, embora isso não inclua que eu desgoste dela."

Sobre "musica-concreta", que tem encontrado seguidores em varias partes do mundo, inclusive em São Paulo, afirmou o famoso musico: "Todas as expressões da alma humana são bonitas. Tanto é bela uma apresentação da Orquestra Filarmonica quanto é belo um "show" burlesco. Apenas uma ressalva: eu jamais farei um "show" burlesco."

Desmentiu o maestro Dimitri Mitropoulus que a Orquestra Filarmonica de Nova Iorque tenha viagem marcada para a União Sovietica. A Orquestra Filarmonica de Bost n, esta sim irá, acrescentou.

Informou que, após sua excursão pela America Latina, acompanhará a Orquestra ao Oriente Medio e à Europa, tendo programa fixado até 1960. "Nesse tempo eu poderei descansar um ou dois dias", acrescentou o musico, que tem 62 anos de idade e ainda pratica o alpinismo.



Finalmente, o sr. Dimitri Mitropoulus deu noticia de que existem nos E.U.A. 30 orquestras filarmonicas de "primeira linha" e que dos 108 componentes de sua orquestra a metade não é norte-americana de nascimento.

"A paz no mundo só poderá ser conseguida através dos artistas", diz o maestro Dimitri Mitropoulos

Musica e Espetaculos

A Filarmonica de Nova York no Teatro Municipal de S. Paulo

Tivemos a satisfação de ver e ouvir, ontem, no Teatro Municipal, a famosa Orquestra Filarmonica de Nova York, que veio a S. Paulo sob o patrocinio da Empresa Viggiani, em colaboração com a Associação Internacional de Cultura dos Estados Unidos e da American National Theatre and Academy.

Com o proprio da Municipalidade inteiramente lotado, inclusive os corredores de acesso e as proprias escadas, desenrolou-se num clima de intensa ansiedade, emoção e entusiasmo o concerto, que teve a direção desse fabuloso regente que se chama Dimitri Mitropoulos. E temos certeza de que essa noite de arte sinfonica ha de ficar marcada em nossa vida, como das melhores coisas que já vimos e ouvimos em todos os tempos de nossa atividade musical.

Impressionante é e a direção de Mitropoulos, um regente cuja atuação à frente do conjunto orquestral é capaz de nos proporcionar momentos da mais pura arte e recolhimento. E' mentos do proprio rosto, dos olhos e dos labios, a sugerir o que os seus professores devem fazer, para dar à partitura não uma interpretação, mas a sua personalissima e equilibrada interpretação. Mitropoulos nos pareceu, ontem à noite, um espetacular diretor de orquestra. E' desses artistas que estabelecem uma relação espiritual conosco e que com eles passamos a viver as obras de arte nos seus minimos detalhes e com uma força emocional extraordinaria. Aliás, acompanhando-se a regencia de Mitropoulos tem-se a impressão de que a orquestra é ele e que seria possivel ele mesmo realizar o que fez no Municipal com a Filarmonica de pasmar. Enfim, a Filarmonica de Nova York, que já conheciamos através de gravações, nos deu agora, muito perto, uma impressão mais real de suas possibilidades. E', não temos duvida, um dos maiores e melhores conjuntos do mundo.

Do programa apresentado, a execução que mais nos impressionou foi a da "3.a Sinfonia" de Brahms, onde pudemos perceber, de maneira objetiva, especialmente por razões da interpretação de um romantismo sonhador, diferente do que estavamos acostumados a ouvir, a extraordinaria integração de Mitropoulos ao conjunto de Nova York. Ao terminar a obra, ele o verdadeiro interprete-executante da grande massa de instrumentos, a ele todos estão identificados de maneira maravilhosa. Quando sobe ao estrado da regencia, os mestres dos diferentes setores da Filarmonica têm os olhos voltados a ele, e nada fazem sem que, de vez em vez, seus olhares estabeleçam um contacto com ele mesmo. E Mitropoulos se apresenta como o dominador excelente da orquestra e das obras que retêm na sua memória privilegiada. Do começo ao fim de uma execução, funciona, já dissemos, como o verdadeiro interprete-executante. Sua linguagem de gestos — braços, ante-braços, mãos, dedos e até falanges — é entendida por todos e, através da sua expressão, obtem as "nuances" mais delicadas, que só um regente de seu porte tecnico e estético poderia conseguir. Tambem, dirige com os movimentos da Filarmonica de Nova York com outro conjunto orquestral, valorizando, inclusive, com a sua direção de mestre, não só as orquestras mas tambem as proprias obras que executam.

O segundo destaque da memoravel noitada de ontem deve ser feito à propria e estupenda Filarmonica de Nova York, que óra nos visita. Do primeiro violino à percussão, não há, no conjunto, um só ponto discordante. Tudo é o melhor que se poderia desejar. Seus integrantes são todos virtuoses de primeira qualidade e tambem conhecem como poucos as suas responsabilidades dentro de uma orquestra. Ninguem deseja se destacar, colocar-se em plano de superioridade em relação a outrem. E por isso, equilibradissimo, afinado e homogeneo, o conjunto pode executar todas as obras que deseja com uma propriedade realizada com a aspirada perfeição que estava dentro de nós, tivemos quase a certeza de que jamais a ouviriamos executada como naquele momento. Se Brahms fosse apresentado sempre como o ouvimos ontem, ele seria bem mais apreciado pelo nosso publico e não seria acoimado de pesadão, como muita gente ainda o faz.

Depois da "3.a Sinfonia" de Brahms, tambem nos chamou a atenção a interpretação exatissima e bastante valorizada que deu a Filarmonica ao "Preludio e Fuga" de Camargo Guarnieri. Como pudemos bem apreciar o nosso Camargo Guarnieri, compositor dos melhores da Americsa! E comparando, poderiamos dizer, como ele deixou longe o americano Samuel Barber, de que foram apresentadas "Meditações" e "Dans: da Vingança". Seria uma felicidade para a propria divulgação da nossa musica, que as obras dos compositores brasileiros pudessem ser executadas por conjuntos como a Filarmonica de Nova York.

Outra impressão que não nos deixará tão cedo foi a da execução da "Noite Transfigurada" de Schoenberg, em que as cordas da Filarmonica deram mostra soberba das suas excelentes qualidades e onde Mitropoulos mais uma vez comprovou que é um dos grandes mestres da regencia de todo o mundo.

Com Mitropoulos e a Filarmonica de Nova York, S. Paulo assistiu, ontem, a um dos maiores e melhores concertos de toda a sua vida artistica. Foi uma felicidade estarmos presentes!

A iniciativa que faltou

Na proxima vez será injusto dizer que em São Paulo não ha publico para os empreendimentos artisticos de grande arrojo.

A visita de um conjunto numeroso reclama como é natural despesas consideraveis, desde a viagem, os salarios extras e os gastos de hoteis. E' normal assim que a tournée de uma orquestra sinfonica, por exemplo, imponha preliminarmente um patrocinio, seja ele oficial ou não, de sorte que a cobertura de seu custo não vá diretamente recair unicamente sobre o publico interessado nos concertos.

Foi isso exatamente o que se verificou na visita da Orquestra Sinfonica da NBC com Arturo Toscanini, e tambem quando Leopoldo Stokowsky trouxe até São Paulo a sua All American Youth Orchestra, formada pela juventude musical americana, especialmente para uma excursão pelos Estados Unidos e por varios paises no Continente. Sob o patrocinio de poderosas organizações industriais e comerciais e ainda com o apoio do governo americano, a famosa orquestra de radio, fundada, organizada e dirigida pelo falecido maestro italiano, e o maravilhoso conjunto juvenil de estupendos musicistas, criada pela regente da Sinfonica de Filadelfia, puderam chegar aos publicos que salvo pouquissimas exceções nunca haviam conhecido uma orquestra sinfonica de renome universal. Os preços dos ingressos aos concertos, desse modo, se tornaram perfeitamente acessiveis à totalidade dos entusiastas da musica. Mas o enorme interesse pelas sensacionais audições, foi restringido pelo numero das localidade existentes no Teatro Municipal para os dois concertos de cada uma daquelas orquestras.

Ora, o caso repete-se agora, com a visita da Orquestra Filarmonica de Nova York e [illegible] Mitropoulos e Leonard Bernstein. Igualmente, um conjunto de fama mundial. Tambem, como naqueles anteriores casos, verifica-se o patrocinio do Departamento do Estado americano. E por consequencia o custo dos três concertos (ou seja das viajens, da estada, etc.) não veiu pesar sobre o preço dos ingressos. De fato, não era possivel desejar importancia mais modica do que a se cobrou para a entrada no Municipal nestes dias da Philharmonic com Mitropoulos e Bernstein. O efeito, pois, é o que se conhece. Momentos após anunciada a venda de ingressos para os três concertos, foi totalmente esgotada a lotação do teatro. Mas, cessou aí, com esse numero de publico, o interesse enorme gerado pela vinda da mais antiga orquestra americana e uma das mais notaveis do mundo? Claro que não. Houvesse lotação no Teatro Municipal para outra igual ou maior quantidade de candidatos aos ingressos, e da mesma maneira estes encontrariam imediatos compradores.

Verificamos nós mesmos, em ligeira reportagem junto à bilheteria, a procura que incessantemente se faz ali de bilhetes para os concertos, muito embora desde varios dias se tenha difundido que as lotações se tinham prontamente esgotado. Não somente inumeras pessoas da Capital se empenharam continuamente para lograr essa desejadissima chance. Do interior de São Paulo e de cidades proximas do Estado, vieram visitantes expressamente para conhecerem a Filarmonica de Nova York. Todavia, inutilmente. Por maiores que fossem suas insistencias, dispondo-se a aceitar qualquer lugarzinho, de qualquer altura do teatro a possibilidade de presenciar os concertos lhes ficou totalmente barrada. Pudemos inclusive, conhecer a decepção de um senhor que como presente de aniversario de casamento à sua esposa, viajou com ela de outro Estado a fim de lhe proporcionar uma das audições.

Neste ponto da presente reportagem é que desejamos lembrar aquelas linhas: "Na proxima vez será injusto dizer que em São Paulo não ha publico para os empreendimentos artisticos de grande arrojo". Porque a verdade é que publico existe, de sobra. O que não existe são lugares...

E que fazer nessa emergencia? Simples. Apenas faltou um pouco de cabeça no comando desta temporada. De outra sorte, tudo se ajustaria amplamente, e logo uma quantidade de publico três vezes maior do que a atual poderia ter sido atendida. A Filarmonica de Nova York veiu para uma permanencia de três dias em São Paulo, e, unicamente, nessas 72 horas, nos consente apenas 6 horas de musica, as três "soirées".

Qual a razão de não se haver providenciado a apresentação de outros ou dos mesmos programas, nas vesperais desses dias? Recorde-se, por cima, que ontem, dia da estréia, foi feriado total! E vamos adiante ainda: Que é que impediu, inclusive, a realização de concertos tambem matinais — quando então, em lugar de três concertos, teriam sido possiveis (de manhã, à tarde e à noite) nove concertos, portanto atendendo-se triplicadamente à imensa ansiedade do publico de São Paulo pela presença da Filarmonica? As manhãs, nem as tardes, foram por acaso dedicadas a ensaios. A Orquestra não ensaiou, nem precisava. E esses admiraveis musicos que aqui se encontram haveriam com certeza apreciado muito essas triplicadas oportunidade de tocar para um publico ao qual pela primeira vez se apresenta, e quem sabe a ultima!

MITROPOULOS VOLTA A REGER HOJE A FILARMONICA DE NOVA IORQUE

Folha da Noite ...6-6...1958

Não chegou a tempo o maestro Leonard Bernstein — O esporte predileto de Dimitri Mitropoulos continua sendo alpinismo... em cima da banqueta de regencia — Amanhã, às 16 horas, no Anhangabaú, concerto ao ar livre da famosa orquestra

Com um programa que incluiu peças de Camargo Guarnieri, Brahms, Schoemberg e Samuel Barber, a Orquestra Filarmonica de Nova Iorque, sob condução do maestro Dmitri Mitropoulos fez sua apresentação inicial ontem à noite em nossa capital, no Teatro Municipal.

Hoje, o famoso conjunto musical se apresentará novamente ao publico de São Paulo, com o mesmo regente, muito embora estivesse programado a participação do maestro Leonard Bernstein à sua frente. O avião que conduzia aquele regente norte-americano chegou com atraso, e assim a responsabilidade do concerto desta noite caberá outra vez ao maestro grego Mitropoulos.

Amanhecer numa Floresta Tropical, de Vila-Lobos, Sinfonia n.o 6, de Schumann, e Sinfonia n.o 4, de Tchaikovski compõem o programa desta noite.

Ainda na tarde de hoje, os componentes da Filarmonica de Nova Iorque, a convite do Seminario de Musica Pró-Arte e da Academia Paulista de Musica, participaram de um churrasco, no sitio das Figueiras, situado pouco alem de Interlagos.

ENSAIO

Hoje pela manhã, aquela orquestra ensaiou no Teatro Municipal durante pouco mais de uma hora. À saida, o maestro Mitropoulos mostrava-se satisfeito e, com seu permanente bom humor, expressando-se mais em italiano do que em inglês, disse que a orquestra estava em "belissimas condiciones".

Indagado sobre se tinha algum passa-tempo predileto, quando dispõe de tempo livre, respondeu o regente grego que antigamente era o alpinismo.

— E hoje, qual é?

— "Continua sendo o alpinismo, porem em cima da banqueta de regencia. É ali que pratico esse esporte, de uma maneira toda especial..."

Dimitri Mitropoulos

CASADO, NAO

Já na rua, enquanto se dirigia para o onibus que o conduziria ao churrasco no sitio das Figueiras atendeu a uma nova pergunta:

— O maestro é casado?

Mostrou a mão esquerda, que nada ostentava no anular. E, depois, falou:

— "Não sou casado, nem penso nisso. Minha companheira permanente, de todas as horas e para todos os momentos bons e dificeis, é a musica. Apenas com ela e só para ela tenho compromissos."

CONCERTO AO AR LIVRE

Patrocinado pelo Programa Cultural Internacional dos E.U.A. e pela Prefeitura de São Paulo, a Orquestra Filarmonica de Nova Iorque realizará amanhã, às 16 horas, no Vale do Anhangabaú, proximo do viaduto do Chá, um concerto ao ar livre.

A orquestra ficará colocada de frente para a estatua de Carlos Gomes, na lateral esquerda do Teatro Municipal. Os assistentes poderão ocupar os jardins ali existentes, sendo visivel uma parte da famosa orquestra desde o viaduto do Chá, proximo da praça Ramos de Azevedo.

Por volta das 14 horas de hoje tiveram inicio os trabalhos para a instalação de uma concha acustica para ali ser alojada a orquestra. Prevê-se que somente amanhã pela manhã os trabalhos de montagem do palanque fiquem concluidos.

Microfones deverão ser instalados em varios pontos do Anhangabaú, a fim de possibilitar audiencia àqueles que não conseguirem lugares proximos da Filarmonica.

A regencia caberá ao maestro Dmitri Mitropoulos, e o programa ainda não foi organizado oficialmente. Deverá constar de composições executadas no concerto de ontem e do que será apresentado hoje à noite.

A Filarmonica de Nova Iorque dará hoje um concerto ao ar livre, no Anhangabaú

Vitima de intoxicação o regente Leonard Bernstein, que deverá chegar ainda hoje a esta capital — Caberá ao maestro Dimitri Mitropoulos conduzir a orquestra no espetaculo publico desta tarde — (Pag. 8)

Com um programa que inclui peças de Camargo Guarnieri, Brahms, Schoemberg e Samuel Barber, a Orquestra Filarmonica de Nova Iorque, sob condução do maestro Dimitri Mitropoulos, fez sua apresentação inicial anteontem à noite em nossa capital, no Teatro Municipal.

Ontem o famoso conjunto musical se apresentou novamente ao publico de São Paulo, com o mesmo regente. O programa compreendeu as seguintes obras: Amanhecer numa Floresta Tropical, de Vila-Lobos, Sinfonia n.o 6, de Schumann, e Sinfonia n.o 4, de Tchaikovski.

LEONARD BENSTEIN SOFREU UMA INTOXICAÇÃO ALIMENTAR

O maestro Leonard Bernstein, que deveria chegar ontem a São Paulo, a fim de reger a Orquestra Filarmonica de Nova Iorque, não pode embarcar em Santiago do Chile, em virtude de ter sofrido uma intoxicação alimentar. O regente, que estará à frente do famoso conjunto, deverá chegar ainda na tarde de hoje a esta capital.

O primeiro concerto da Filarmonica de N. York

Conforme previramos, constituiu verdadeiro acontecimento a estréia da Orquestra Filarmonica de Nova York, quinta-feira ultima, no Teatro Municipal, sob a regencia de Dimitri Mitropoulos. Para tanto muitas razões terão contribuido. Entre elas, de um lado, a complexidade do problema que é fazer viajar um conjunto dessa amplitude, o que torna coisa rarissima para os estrangeiros ouvir orquestra dessa qualidade em seu proprio País; e de outro, o valor excepcional do conjunto e dos regentes, capaz de atrair multidões, como aconteceu nessa estréia. O Teatro Municipal estava tomado além da sua capacidade; via-se gente comprimida em todas as portas e muitas pessoas sentadas pelo chão no corredor central da platéia. Criou-se assim um ambiente festivo mas intranquilo e de incompleto recolhimento, o que foi acentuado pelo fato de se terem conservado acesas todas as luzes durante a execução. A orquestra permaneceu no palco durante cerca de vinte minutos, tempo empregado em exercicios e repasse dos trechos, o que provocava àquela cacofonia já tradicional em tais circunstancias. Fez-se o silencio quando entrou o primeiro violino. Procedeu-se à afinação geral. Terminada esta, entrou Dimitri Mitropoulos. À salva de palmas que o acolheu desfez-se a seriedade da fisionomia e com um sorriso de irradiante simpatia conquistou imediatamente o publico. Bem humorado, não obstante a agitação do ambiente, fez executar o Hino Nacional Brasileiro e o Hino Nacional dos Estados Unidos e sempre sorridente é que compareceu ao proscenio todas as vezes que foi chamado e agradeceu os estrondosos aplausos do publico.

Iniciou-se então a execução do programa, constante de: Prologo e Fuga (1947) de Camargo Guarnieri; Sinfonia n.o 3 em Fá maior, op. 90, de Brahms; Noite Transfigurada (para orquestra de cordas), op. 4, de Arnold Schoenberg e Meditação e Dança da Vingança do balé Medeia de Samuel Barber. Entrando propriamente na apreciação do concerto, não sabemos por onde começar, pois orquestra e regente, no caso, fazem uma só coisa, constituem uma só entidade musical informada por uma unica alma sonora. Mas a atenção é desde logo atraida pela figura de Dimitri Mitropoulos, esguia, extremamente flexivel, de enorme vibratilidade e muito versatil nas atitudes. Nos momentos calmos ele que se imobiliza a pacificar o oceano orquestral com a serenidade do gesto: braço esquerdo estendido horizontalmente e o direito caido ao longo do corpo. A animação ritmica e dinamica é indicada por mimica de natureza tão diferente — seria normal que parlisse de alterações da atitude de calma — que parece provir de outra pessoa: dentro da grande gesticulação geral aparecem estremecimentos quase convulsos, uma especie de "tremolo" muscular para obter um vibrato mais apaixonado das cordas ou uma emissão mais modulada nos sôpros. Mas não se trata do bailado a que se entregam alguns regentes, para os quais reger orquestra é reagir coreograficamente à partitura, é extrair dela uma versão dançavel — e dançada perante o publico — e não impor e dirigir uma interpretação musical. É verdade que Dimitri Mitropoulos tem também os seus exageros, mas dirigidos à orquestra que certamente saberá interpretá-los. Suas indicações são predominantemente expressivas, referem-se mais à côr e à carga emotiva do que ao "tempo" propriamente dito. E a versatilidade da mimica impossibilita-lhe a redução a um sistema, a uma fixação convencional. Tudo ali é vivo e espontaneo, mal se podendo assinalar o uso das mãos e dos dedos para lembrar a maneira de terminar os motivos e as frases, e o emprego dos braços e por vezes de todo o corpo para as estruturas fraseologicas mais amplas. Às vezes parece dialogar com a orquestra, e esta certamente entenderá a eloquencia muda que irradia de toda a sua personalidade. Contemplando-lhe a regencia e ouvindo os resultados sonoros desta é que nos damos conta de quanto estamos longe dos pseudo-regentes, marcadores de compasso facilmente substituiveis por um metronomo.

E isto nos leva a considerar estes resultados sonoros, ou seja, a orquestra visitante. É excelente, uma das mais conceituadas do mundo, mas, diga-se a verdade, pode ainda ser melhor, não porque apresente defeitos ou imperfeições, mas somente porque não esgotou as possibilidades de aperfeiçoamento que lhe estão ao alcance. Ela se beneficia de condições quase privilegiadas, entre as quais a severa escolha dos componentes e esta outra, preciosissima: a permanencia do regente, de um só, por largo periodo. Daí aquele entendimento profundo entre as duas partes, orquestra e regente; a liberdade e espontaneidade de atuação de ambos; a segurança da execução e a convincente autoridade da direção. A Filarmonica de Nova York não pode deixar de possuir as qualidades gerais de precisão, unanimidade, equilibrio de sonoridade e qualidade de som, de cujo aperfeiçoamento resultam outras virtudes, estas já distintivas, que a caracterizam e lhe dão personalidade artistica. Uma delas é a capacidade de realizar as mais sutis gradações de intensidade e de côr, as quais transformam cada peça num grande quadro animado pelos jogos de luz e de sombra, pondo em relevo o que é preponderante em cada caso e dando a devida situação ao que é relativamente acessorio. É uma orquestra que canta aquilo que toca, e que frasela com absoluta propriedade; que faz ouvir os desenhos secundarios com perfeita nitidez; que é capaz de produzir um som dotado de substancia, de conteudo, de densidade, o que torna desnecessarios os fortissimos trovejantes e valoriza ao extremo os pianissimos imponderaveis. E é principalmente uma orquestra flexivel que nunca soa com rigidez ou dureza; antes conduz o pensamento sonoro por todos os meandros da expressão e todas as curvas das acentuações emotivas, numa ductilidade sempre admiravel. Acreditamos encontrar-se a orquestra ressentida com as viagens e os concertos seguidos; fora dos seus comodos, sujeita a um regime de exceção inteiramente diverso do que lhe é habitual, alguma alteração deve ter-se dado no seu organismo com inevitaveis consequencias na execução. Além disso, a colocação de parte dela no tablado que recobre a fossa de orquestra no Municipal (consequencia da reduzida area aproveitavel do palco para esse tipo de espetaculo) projetando aquela parte para dentro da sala, muito perto dos ouvintes, terá prejudicado o efeito sonoro geral e, em consequencia, alterado a justeza de apreciação.

Da conjugação de regente e orquestra de tal valor resultaram interpretações magnificas das obras inscritas no programa. É possivel que nos enganemos, mas pareceu-nos que as peças de Guarnieri e de Barber aproximam-se naqueles momentos informados por uma especie de primitivismo, de aprofundamento psiquico, de mergulho nas camadas profundas do ser, embora permaneçam distintos em tudo o mais que as caracteriza como idéia e como orquestração. A Sinfonia de Brahms foi excelentemente tratada no seu lirismo e o final de Noite Transfigurada de Schoenberg destacou-se entre os dos grandes momentos do concerto.

Ao terminar, Mitropoulos foi alvo de consagradora ovação a que correspondeu com seu irresistivel sorriso. Será falso ou será sincero o sorriso de quem sorri num palco para o publico? Falso ou verdadeiro, pouco importa, desde que seja util, que realize os fins visados. Mas o de Mitropoulos foi sincero; acreditamos nele porque assim o sentiram todos e porque completa os traços tão simpaticos da sua personalidade, revelados no contacto com a imprensa. Ao deixarmos o Teatro, iniciava-se uma peça dada fora do programa em vista do entusiasmo do publico.

A Filarmonica de Nova York no Anhangabaú

Será realizado na tarde de hoje, no Vale do Anhangabau', um concerto publico da Orquestra Filarmonica de Nova York — o mais antigo conjunto sinfonico dos Estados Unidos e que, com tanto exito, ora se apresenta em São Paulo. O regente será o maestro Dimitri Mitropoulos, e o inicio do espetaculo foi marcado para as 16 horas.

A apresentação da famosa orquestra norte-americana, que, com a iniciativa, procura corresponder á calorosa acolhida do publico paulistano, é patrocinada pelo Programa Especial do presidente Eisenhower, para Apresentações Culturais.

O concerto de hoje á tarde, assim, embora represente um esforço a mais para os integrantes da orquestra (que á noite realizarão espetaculo no Municipal), é homenagem do conjunto e de Dimitri Mitropoulos á cidade que — em suas palavras — tão fidalgamente os acolheu.

MITROPOULOS VOLTA A REGER HOJE A FILARMONICA DE NOVA IORQUE

Não chegou a tempo o maestro Leonard Bernstein — O esporte predileto de Dimitri Mitropoulos continua sendo alpinismo... em cima da banqueta de regencia — Amanhã, às 16 horas, no Anhangabaú, concerto ao ar livre da famosa orquestra — (3.ª pagina)

Por volta das 14 horas de hoje operarios da Prefeitura iniciaram os trabalhos de armação da concha acustica, no Anhangabaú, onde amanhã se apresentará a Filarmonica de Nova Iorque, ao ar livre

Bernstein não virá; Mitropoulos regerá

Por ter sofrido intoxicação alimentar em Santiago do Chile, onde se encontra, o regente Leonard Bernstein não virá a São Paulo, a fim de dirigir a Orquestra Filarmonica de Nova York que se exibiu ontem á noite, pela segunda vez no Teatro Municipal, sob a regencia do maestro Dmitri Mitropoulos.

Hoje o conjunto se exibirá pela terceira e ultima vez em nossa Capital, mas tudo indica que Bernstein estará ausente, pois se encontra acamado. Foram estes os termos do telegrama expedido pelo maestro, comunicando o imprevisto :"Distressed unable appear SP due serious food poisoning".

PROGRAMA ROMANTICO

Depois de ressaltar que o acontecido com Bernstein era "uma coisa humana", o maestro Dmitri Mitropolus, de quem já nos ocupamos em notas anteriores, declarou que "com muito prazer, regeria mais uma vez, no nosso principal teatro, a mais velha orquestra norte-americana. Fez questão de dizer que escolhera para executar, na noite de ontem, as seguintes peças: "Ouverture" do Festival Academico e Sinfonia n. 2, de Brahms e a 2.a parte, sinfonia n. 2 de Beethoven. Caso Bernstein não pudesse vir, lamentava o fato, pois São Paulo perde boa oportunidade de aplaudir o jovem regente, pois Bernstein conta apenas 40 anos.

ESTRÉIA HOJE NO MUNICIPAL A FILARMONICA DE NOVA YORK

Concedeu entrevista coletiva à imprensa o maestro Dimitri Mitropoulos — "A musica é a unica linguagem pela qual todos se entendem" — Lição do ditador Mu solini em beneficio dos compositores modernos — Programa da Sinfonica de Nova York em nossa Capital

Realiza-se hoje, no Teatro Municipal, sob a regencia do maestro Dimitri Mitropoulos, a primeira apresentação em nossa capital, da famosa Filarmonica de Nova York.

O maestro de reputação mundial, Dimitri Mitropoulos, interprete tanto dos classicos como dos modernos, tornou-se uma personalidade de destaque na vida musical dos Estados Unidos, país onde se radicou e cuja cidadania acabou por adotar.

Ontem, às 17 horas, Dimitri Mitropoulos, no "Foyer" do Municipal, concedeu uma entrevista coletiva à imprensa.

MUSICA: LINGUAGEM MUNDIAL

"A musica é a unica linguagem pela qual todos os seres humanos se entendem no mundo", disse a certa altura da sua entrevista o ilustre maestro.

Mitropoulos nasceu em Atenas, em 1896, realizando seus primeiros estudos musicais no Conservatorio daquela cidade. Pianista e compositor de talento sua carreira a principio inclinou-se nesse sentido. Ao ter o primeiro contato com a regencia, Mitropoulos compreendeu que aquela era sua verdadeira vocação.

Falando aos jornalistas, disse que deixará a Filarmonica tão logo termine a excursão que com ela está empreendendo através da America Latina, depois irá a Israel, Alemanha, Austria, Grecia. Espera, nesse ritmo, trabalhar até 1960.

MUSICA BRASILEIRA

Em São Paulo, sob sua regencia, a Filarmonica tocará musica brasileira e norte-americana contemporaneas. "Apesar da musica moderna não atrair muita gente, contudo tem sua razão de existir e precisa ser executada para receber o devido valor". Disse, ainda, a esse proposito, que as musicas de Vila-Lobos são muito apreciadas nos Estados Unidos.

LIÇÃO DE UM DITADOR

Sobre a situação dos compositores modernos, Mitropoulos salientou que se fosse organizador de programas, colocaria sempre um compositor contemporaneo, classico e romantico. Pois essa é a melhor maneira de manter relações amistosas entre os povos. Lembrou que durante o governo do ditador Mussolini, na Italia era obrigado por lei, em todo concerto incluir uma peça de autor moderno. Apesar de não gostar de ditador, disse que isso foi uma grande medida em beneficio da musica naquele país, especialmente para os compositores novos. "Essa medida — prosseguiu — deveria ser adotada por todas as nações para valorizar seus elementos".

COM A FILARMONICA

Dimitri Mitropoulos regeu a Filarmonica de Nova York, pela primeira vez na temporada de 1940-1941, e nos anos seguintes teve varias oportunidades de conduzi-la. Em 1950, foi convidado para seu regente regular, e desde 1951 exerceu as funções de diretor musical da orquestra. Na ultima temporada, dividiu com Leonard Bernstein as responsabilidades de principal regente.

Suas atuações com a Filarmonica têm sido notaveis: foi ele quem lançou em Nova York, nos ultimos anos, a Decima Sinfonia e o Concerto para Violino, de Shostakovitch, o discutido Concerto para "Jazzband" e Orquestra, de Liebermann, bem como varios trabalhos de jovens compositores norte-americanos.

OPERA

Disse Mitropoulos, que tem regido muitas operas modernas, como "Electra", de Strauss, "A Hora Espanhola" de Ravel, "Wozzeek" de Berg e "Cristovão Colombo" de Darina Milhau, e varias outras.

Na temporada de 1954-1955, regeu no Metropolitan House uma serie de operas tradicionais, como "Salomé", "O Baile de Mascaras", "Tosca", "Carmen" e diversas outras de grande fama. Na ultima temporada, regeu a primeira apresentação de "Eugene Onegin" e o lançamento da opera "Vanssa", do compositor norte-americano Samuel Barber.

Em 1957 foi premiado pelo Conselho Nacional de Musica dos Estados Unidos, pelos bons serviços prestados.

VIAGEM

Foi Toscanini quem levou a Filarmonica à Europa, pela primeira vez, em 1930. Coube a Mitropoulos repetir a façanha, já que organizar a excursão de uma orquestra de 108 figuras, alem dos regentes e tecnicos, é tarefa das mais dificeis.

Em 1951, a Filarmonica, conduzida por Mitropoulos, tocou no Festival de Edinburg, tendo sido a primeira orquestra norte-americana a fazê-lo. Em 1955, voltou à Europa, visitando varios países do Velho Mundo. Durante a excursão foram visitadas 15 cidades nas quais a orquestra efetuou 27 concertos. Foi nessa viagem que Mitropoulos teve a oportunidade de rever, pela primeira vez, sua patria. A consagração dada pelo publico de Atenas foi tão expressiva que a orquestra teve de dar um concerto extra, alem de dois previamente programados.

Delirio no Teatro Municipal com os Embaixadores Americanos da Musica

Autenticos embaixadores da cultura de seu povo, os 125 componentes da Orquestra Sinfonica de Nova York, com a sua musica, levaram ao delirio calculadamente 2.500 pessoas que ontem à noite superlotavam todas as dependencias do Teatro Municipal. De pé, o publico aplaudiu sucessivas vezes, proporcionando à figura central desse acontecimento, o maestro Dimitri Mitropoulos, uma ovação consagradora.

A noite iniciou-se com uma homenagem da grande Orquestra Sinfonica à musica brasileira: 30 violinistas, 11 violas, 12 violoncelos, 9 contrabaixos, 3 flautas, 1 flautim, 3 oboes, 1 corno inglês, 2 clarinetes, 1 clarone, 3 fagotes, 1 contra-fagote, 6 trompas, 4 trompetes, 4 trombones, 1 tuba, 1 timpano, 3 percussões, 2 harpas e um piano-orgão funcionaram na execução do "Prologo e fuga", de Camargo Guarnieri. Desfilaram ainda, no programa elaborado pela Associação Internacional Cultural dos Estados Unidos, Brahms, em sua Sinfonia n.o 3, em Fá Maior, Arnoldo Schoenberg, em Noite Transfigurada, para orquestra de cordas, e Samuel Barber, em Meditação e Dança da Vingança de Medea.

UM ESPETACULO À PARTE, NA TELEVISÃO

Um espetaculo à parte daquele que podia ser presenciado pela platéia do Teatro Municipal, foi proporcionado a um publico bastante superior em numero, através das cameras do Canal 3 de Televisão, que transmitiu todo o desenrolar do concerto. Pela televisão foi possivel acompanhar de perto os movimentos, as expressões fisionomicas, a mimica do maestro Dimitri Mitropoulos, que é, sem duvida, uma das figuras mais singulares de regente. Quando dirigi, faz transparecer em todos os gestos as emoções que o envolvem durante a execução. Seu semblante se mostra ora sombrio, ora alegre, acompanhando o clima criado pela musica.

Para transmitir ordens, não lhe bastam apenas os dedos: durante todo o tempo, põe em função todas as partes do corpo. Seu busto se verga, agita-se em ondulações e volta aprumar-se, ao sabor da melodia. E impressiona, sobretudo, o olhar benevolente e o sorriso discreto. Seus labios também se movimentam, transmitindo ordens e, às vezes, advinha-se neles um chiste dirigido aos musicos. Tudo isto foi registrado, com felicidade, por três camaras da Televisão Tupi, postadas ao redor do palco.

Um contacto mais direto com os componentes da Orquestra Sinfonica, nos bastidores do teatro, durante os intervalos, permite fazer-se uma idéia do que representa, como elemento qualitativo, esse agrupamento do que existe de melhor no mundo musical norte-americano. A composição nacional da orquestra, já em si, forma uma gama representativa da população do país, cuja cultura representam. Na relação dos integrantes da orquestra iremos encontrar nomes que lembram as multiplas nacionalidades que formam o cerne do povo americano: ali se encontra um David Rosenzweig, israelita, ao lado de um Louis Carlini de origem italiana; Laszlo Varga, hungaro ou William Bell, inglês. Existem americanos de origem irlandesa, como o clarinetista Robert McGinnis, e outros de origem francesa, como Armand Neveux. Uns são filhos ou netos de imigrantes, outros são imigrantes que adquiriram a cidadania americana em época remente, como o proprio maestro Mitropoulos que deixou a Grecia em 1936 para dirigir a Orquestra Sinfonica de Boston. O outro maestro, Leonard Bernstein, é americano, filho de imigrantes pobres da Russia, de origem judaica. A ele caberá reger o concerto de hoje à noite.

Julliard School of Music é o nome da escola frequentada pela maioria dos componentes da orquestra. E' o grande celeiro da musica sinfonica norte-americana. Contudo, não é sem esforços e longos anos de pratica intensa que conseguem os formandos dessa e doutras escolas musicais dos Estados Unidos chegar até a Sinfonica de Nova York — o passo mais alto que atingem em sua carreira, dentro de orquestras. Ali, a seleção dos candidatos é rigorosa: a média aguarda um minimo de 10 anos até se colocar no nivel exigido. Apesar disso, encontraremos alguns elementos bastante jovens, como, por exemplo, Cristine Stavrache, da harpa, também formada pela Julliard School e por sinal, a unica mulher componente da orquestra.

"Paz Mundial Através de Artistas e Não de Políticos": Declarou Mitropoulos!

(Entrevista a VERA MOGILKA, fotos de WILMAN RODRIGUES)

Encontram-se em nossa Capital os cento e vinte elementos da Orquestra Filarmonica de Nova Iorque, acompanhados pelo seu famoso regente, o grego naturalizado americano, Dimitri Mitropoulos e Leonard Bernstein, co-regente. Em coquetel oferecido no "foyer" do Teatro Municipal, no dia de sua chegada e que contou com a presença de altas personalidades do mundo politico, social e musical de São Paulo, Mitropoulos respondeu em entrevista à imprensa, a uma serie de perguntas que a reportagem lhe fez sobre a musica atual, sobre a sua atuação na Filarmonica e a excursão que vem realizando, como parte do plano de intercambio cultural através da musica, do presidente Eisenhower, por toda a America Latina. Três espetaculos foram marcados para nossa cidade, respectivamente, o de quinta-feira, o de hoje e o de sabado. Encontram-se tomados, há uma semana, os lugares para os espetaculos que terão em seu programa, composições brasileiras de Villa-Lobos e Camargo Guarnieri.

Fala Mitropoulos

Falando ora em inglês ora em italiano, o maestro Mitropoulos, principiou suas declarações à imprensa, dizendo sentir-se satisfeito por estar em nossa cidade. Falando sobre o objetivo principal de sua visita: «Musica, declara Mitropoulos, ainda não é um artigo de primeira necessidade, mas, na realidade é a unica linguagem pela qual todas as pessoas se entendem». Perguntado se deixaria de reger, proximamente, a Filarmonica de Nova Iorque, declarou que de fato deixaria, pois, divide seu tempo entre a orquestra e a opera e se dedicará mais a esta ultima. Quanto à receptividade da musica brasileira nos Estados Unidos, disse que «as pessoas comuns naturalmente não gostam daquilo que não entendem e é estranho a elas, mas, pouco a pouco, através da propria Filarmonica e dos entendidos de musica, a difusão da musica sinfonica brasileira tem penetrado no seio do povo, tornando-se compreendida e apreciada. Ainda a melhor maneira de intercambio entre os povos, estou seguro que sejam a musica e a cultura». Mitropoulos fala, agora, da diferença de nivel existente entre o amante de musica, europeu e o americano. «Nestes tempos inseguros, conta o maestro, quando as opiniões tanto variam, só posso afirmar que a boa musica é apreciada por todos. Os russos, seguindo uma politica de intercambio cultural que, como afirmei, muito mais aproxima os povos que qualquer outra, têm enviado a todos os países do mundo, com grande sucesso, os seus melhores artistas no campo do «ballet», do teatro e da musica. Se há uma esperança de paz mundial, posso assegurar que será através dos artistas e não dos politicos».

Musica Concreta e "Rock and Roll"

«A melhor prova, continua o maestro, de que temos agradado ao povo latino que nos ouve tocar, é a afluencia aos nossos concertos. Espero que tambem aqui, nesta cidade, a Filarmonica de Nova Iorque possa estreitar os elos existentes entre Brasil e Estados Unidos».

Perguntou-lhe a reportagem, o que pensa sobre a nova modalidade de musica concreta que ora invade e divide as opiniões na Europa. "Todas as expressões de vida são importantes, responde Mitropoulos. Musica é uma das mais elevadas e dentro dela, existem centenas de expressões novas. Considero-as todas importantes. O que nos cabe é não misturá-las. Por exemplo, eu não poderia, é claro, fazer um ato musical de variedades, mas isso não quer dizer que eu não goste dele!" E o "rock' and roll"? Sorrindo, Mitropoulos diz que "gosto de tudo que é interessante".

Perguntado se irá à Russia em excursão, informou que não, mas que a Filarmonica de Boston o fará, ainda este ano. Acha a vida musical italiana a mais interessante do mundo e já regeu inumeras operas no "Scala" de Milão, em Viena, Berlim e Nova Iorque, no "Metropolitan", que, na sua opinião, é, apesar do bom nome dos outros teatros, a melhor "perfomance" que já teve na sua vida".

Um Maestro Filosofo e Alpinista

O problema central de Mitropoulos é a falta de tempo. Nas excursões que realiza se descansa, quando muito, um ou dois dias em cada cidade. Dará concertos até 1960, já programados: Tel Aviv, Salzburg, Viena, Atenas, Viena outra vez em outubro, depois Estados Unidos e assim por diante... Nas horas vagas, gosta de estudar fiolosfia e lê humanidades. "Só pararei de tocar se morrer", diz o maestro. "Quando não estudo as partituras, leio filosofia. Meu passatempo predileto é escalar montanhas mas, infelizmente, a unica coisa que me é dado fazer atualmente é subir em plataforma de teatros..."

Perguntamos, agora, qual o criterio estabelecido na seleção dos programas da Orquestra Filarmonica nesta excursão pela America Latina. "E' como um menu, diz Mitropoulos. Se eu tivesse liberdade de escolha, organizaria o roteiro musical com um compositor classico, antigo, outro romantico e o terceiro contemporaneo. Mas há a limitação do tempo nos programas atuais, e assim, temos que apresentar sempre um prato principal, isto é, um compositor importante, ao lado de um latino e de outro norte-americano, pois este é o objetivo da excursão. Na verdade, há serias restrições. Uma boa medida, resultante embora de uma ditadura, foi a tomada antes da guerra, na Italia, quando Mussolini estava no poder. Em qualquer concerto era obrigada a inclusão de um autor italiano, quisesse ou não o publico ouvi-lo. Isso redundava geralmente num silencio já antecipado da plateia, que não aplaudia ao fim da execução. Mas, com o tempo, passada a guerra e após a queda de Mussolini, essa medida veio beneficiar os bons e novos autores italianos: tornaram-se conhecidos universalmente".

Três Perguntas Finais

A reportagem de ULTIMA HORA, como encerramento da entrevista, fez-lhe três perguntas à queima-roupa: — Se era verdade que a maioria dos integrantes da Orquestra Filarmonica não era de nacionalidade americana e sim, estrangeiros? Mitropoulos disse que não, que eram todos americanos... naturalizados. De origem, apenas a metade e a outra de fato, estrangeiros; Italianos, poloneses, alemães, e outras nacionalidades. Segunda pergunta: — Qual o seu compositor preferido? "Gosto de todos, diz Mitropoulos. O que me interessa mais é a "perfomance", não o autor" E terceira: — Qual o compositor da atual geração que tem mais sucesso nos Estados Unidos? Mitropoulos hesita e depois responde vagamente: "São tantos... não posso precisar".

DIMITRI MITROPOULOS, entre jornalistas, responde às perguntas formuladas sobre a Filarmonica de Nova Iorque.

CALAZANS DE CAMPOS

Filarmonica de Nova Iorque

NADA mais dificil a um critico musical do que opinar sobre artistas ou conjuntos celebres. Estes adquirem foros de perfeição; não há o que dizer deles; não é possivel fazer reparos. Eles atingiram, presumidamente, aquele grau de maturação artistica para a qual não pode haver senão as palmas do aplauso entusiasmado e convicto. E cairá no ridiculo o que, com ares de "magister dixit", se abalança a apontar "falhas". Em resumo: diante da Filarmonica de Nova Iorque, tendo à frente Dimitri Mitropoulos, não há o que dizer, notadamente diante da missão de intercambio que traz até nós esse conjunto. A extranheza que já manifestamos em cronica anterior, quanto à precariedade do programa a ser cumprido entre nós pelo renomado conjunto, respondeu com franqueza o proprio Mitropoulos quando nosso colega Shnorrenberg lhe perguntou, na entrevista coletiva, usando de nossas palavras (que certamente desconhecia) sobre as razões da programação. Mitropoulos disse logo que, em meio a tanta pergunta mais ou menos pueril, que aquela era "a good question". E explicou que a programação fôra feita pela direção da sociedade e não por ele que, se tal lhe atribuissem, bem outras seriam as peças escolhidas para executar no Brasil. Isto aumentou o credito que, para nós, Mitropoulos e sua gente já tinha em relação ao assunto.

O primeiro concerto nos pareceu (dentro da ordem de pensamento que mantivemos até aqui) indigesto, pela predominancia dos contemporaneos, em detrimento dos classicos. Muito conveniente para o intercambio, que constitui fundo da missão cultural que trouxe a orquestra até o sul do continente, a exibição de Camargo Guarnieri, embora através de peça das menos representativas do compositor. Se não fôra a presença de Brahms, o espetaculo estaria irremediavelmente comprometido.

Mas, não é este o assunto central desta cronica. Precisamos e devemos dizer, em função de longo contato com a musica sinfonica no Brasil, que a presença da Filarmonica nos serviu de estimulo e de lição. De estimulo, porque vimos a que ponto pode chegar um conjunto quando toca com a ideia central de fazer boa musica e não, apenas, a de cumprir os deveres de um oficio. Essa gente, que faz de um pianissimo um pianissimo... que se ouve, e de um fortissimo um fortissimo que não nos atordoa, que tem tão nobre noção de disciplina, nunca jamais alcançada por nenhum conjunto brasileiro, que tem tão alta e fiel capacidade de transmissão, não merece só palmas, mas flores e florões. Lição, porque demonstrou, à evidencia, o que vimos sustentando há muitos anos: aos conjuntos brasileiros, o que falta é regente. Não regentes feitos por deliberação pessoal ou por impositivos de lei. Mas regentes que, como tal, tenham nascido e para o qual apresentem, não só a vocação, mas a capacidade. O mau veso brasileiro de afastar de nosso meio todos os grandes regentes que tentaram nos ajudar e pretenderam fixar-se entre nós (Szenkar, Baldi, Mehelich), deu nisso o que ai está. Temos excelentes equipes de musicos, que formarão uma grande orquestra a qualquer tempo, mas não temos nenhúma grande orquestra. E quando um musico, da estirpe de Eleazar de Carvalho, pretende corrigir esse engano, sofre as campanhas que esse moço cearense tem sófrido, no Brasil, porque na Europa e em certos centros musicais norte-americanos, ele é respeitado e querido.

De resto, basta que se diga o que o povo já sabe: Mitropoulos e seus homens, conquistaram nossa plateia. O grego, cordial, bem humorado, por certo incapaz para com seus musicos, das brutalidades dos regentes indigenas (há exceções honrosas), entrou de cheio no coração dos brasileiros. Não há, pelo menos nesta nossa primeira manifestação, nenhuma observação positivamente tecnica a fazer. Basta dizer que ele e a Filarmonica de Nova Iorque, trouxeram uma mensagem de amor e de fraternidade através da musica universal. Nós entendemos perfeitamente essa linguagem. Dulles e Macedo Soares podem conversar à vontade. Mas fiquem certos de que, especificamente nesta hora, Mitropoulos já fez o que eles ainda pensam fazer. E' o milagre permanente da Cultura, é o prodigio perene da Beleza.

Concerto popular da Filarmonica de Nova Iorque

"O Aplauso Deste Povo Foi a Maior Homenagem Que a Orquestra Recebeu"

Com o patrocinio da Prefeitura Municipal, realizou-se sabado, às 16 horas, na Esplanada do Municipal, ao lado do Vale do Anhangabau, um concerto popular da Orquestra Filarmonica de Nova Iorque, regida pelo maestro Dimitrio Mitropoulos.

O povo que acorreu ao local uma vez que os preços das entradas dos espetaculos levados no Teatro Municipal, são elevados, aglomerou-se a volta da concha acustica erguida pela Prefeitura especialmente para o concerto.

Aplausos Gerais

Os aplausos foram uma forma de agradecimento pela oportunidade que lhe foi dada de assistir pessoalmente a famosa orquestra. O povo assistiu de pé o espetaculo. Apenas algumas cadeiras foram colocadas junto a orquestra, a estas sentaram-se altas autoridades e personalidades do nosso mundo artistico.

O concerto terminou com a execução do Hino Nacional, vivamente aplaudido pelo povo.

Fim da "Tournée"

E concluiu:

«O povo daqui tem calor o entusiasmo que transmitem através de seus aplausos para nós artistas têm muito significado. Em toda a nossa viagem essa foi uma das maiores emoções que senti».

FILARMONICA DE NOVA IORQUE CONQUISTOU POVO DE S. PAULO

A GRANDE e famosa Orquestra Filarmonica de Nova Iorque, ora em visita a São Paulo, conseguiu amplo sucesso na sua primeira apresentação e arrancou da massa popular que a foi ouvir os mais entusiasticos aplausos. Mas, se o entusiasmo dos paulistas foi grande ante a maravilhosa execução dos musicos americanos, não menos impressionado ficou o maestro Dimitrio Mitropoulos, a grande figura da Filarmonica, que sentiu o calor dos aplausos, não escondendo uma frase de emoção: "O aplauso deste povo foi a maior homenagem que a orquestra recebeu". De fato, a multidão que se aglomerou em frente às escadarias do Municipal, assistindo ao concerto que ali se realizou não só foi extraordinariamente numerosa como, principalmente, traduziu em calorosas ovações a alegria que belas musicas magnificamente executadas lhe proporcionaram. No flagrante acima, apanhado das scadarias do nosso principal teatro, vemos um sugestivo aspecto da belissima festa musical: a orquestra executando uma famosa pagina musical e o povo, embevecido, ouvindo.

GRANDE MULTIDÃO NO ANHANGABAÚ APLAUDIU A SINFONICA DE NOVA YORK

Espetaculo festivo na tarde de ontem no centro da cidade — Bernstein, intoxicado em Santiago do Chile, substituido pela segunda vez — Observação popular: "Esse maestro é fabuloso; rege sem partitura"

A esplanada do Anhangabaú, na tarde calma de ontem, apresentava um aspecto festivo. Diante da estatua de Ruy Barbosa, às 16 horas, os componentes da Orquestra Filarmonica de Nova York — o mais antigo conjunto sinfonico dos Estados Unidos — apresentava-se diante do publico paulistano.

A multidão apinhou-se no parapeito do viaduto do Chá, ao redor do Parque, pendurando-se no alto e ao lado das estatuas, acotovelando-se em torno do celebre conjunto.

Afluindo de bairros distantes, apareciam mães carregando crianças, sentando-se no gramado, ao lado de velhos e jovens. Figuras aristocraticas, vestidas com elegancia, foram vistas ao lado de comerciarios ou simples operarios, vestidos modestamente. Enquanto a orquestra tocava, o silencio pairava por toda a praça, interrompido apenas pelo ruido de onibus e automoveis que passavam. Após a execução de cada numero, de Brahms ou Verdi, a multidão aplaudia entusiasticamente e ouviam-se frequentemente observações como esta: "E' fabuloso esse maestro. Rege sem partitura".

O maestro Bernstein não veio, por ter sofrido intoxicação alimentar em Santiago do Chile, onde se encontra. Substituiu-o, pela segunda vez, o regente Dmitri Mitropoulos, cujos movimentos impressionaram vivamente os paulistanos.

EXITO DA SINFONICA

Na tarde de ontem, a Sinfonica ratificou o exito alcançado na noite anterior no Teatro Municipal, que se apresentou repleto, espalhando-se pelos corredores da platéia e dos balcões o grande numero de pessoas que não conseguiram suas reservas de lugares a tempo.

A orquestra é constituida pelos melhores representantes na vida musical norte-americana e pela composição multinacional do conjunto. Muitos dos componentes são filhos e netos, outros são imigrantes que adquiriram recentemente a cidadania americana, a exemplo do proprio maestro Mitropoulos, nascido na Grecia e radicado nos Estados Unidos desde 1936. Leonard Bernstein, por sua vez, é americano filho de imigrantes pobres da Russia, de origem judaica.

Julliard School of Music é o nome da escola frequentada pela maioria dos componentes da orquestra. Contudo, não é sem esforços e longos anos de pratica intensiva que conseguem, ao sair dessa e de outras escolas musicais dos Estados Unidos, chegar até a Sinfonica de Nova York — escalão mais alto de sua carreira de musico de orquestra.

A seleção dos candidatos é rigorosa: a maioria aguarda um minimo de 10 anos até se colocar no nivel exigido. Apesar disso, encontram-se na Sinfonica alguns elementos bastante jovens como, por exemplo, a harpista Cristina Stavrache, tambem formada pela Julliard School e, por sinal, a unica mulher componente da orquestra.

A apresentação da famosa orquestra norte-americana foi patrocinada pelo Programa Especial do presidente Eisenhower, para Apresentações Culturais.

Os numeros apresentados no Anhangabaú foram encerrados com a execução do Hino Nacional Brasileiro.

Grande numero de caçadores de autografos subiu depois ao palanque, apresentando seus cadernos tipicos aos componentes da orquestra.

O maestro Mitropoulos impressionou vivamente, sobretudo devido aos seus movimentos.

Orquestra Filarmonica de Nova Iorque

A pequena serie de concertos que a Orquestra Filarmonica de Nova Iorque realizou nos ultimos dias da semana finda, no Teatro Municipal de São Paulo, constituiu sem qualquer duvida, o mais importante acontecimento artistico dos ultimos anos.

Para concretização dessa magnifica ocorrencia tornou-se necessario e indispensavel o previo e perfeito entendimento havido entre os dirigentes da Associação Internacional Cultural dos Estados Unidos, da American National Theatre and Academy, auxiliadas pelo Departamento de Estado do Governo Norte-americano, tudo conforme os planos traçados para a extensa excursão artistica que a Orquestra Filarmonica de Nova Iorque presentemente realiza através de varios paises Latino-americanos.

A origem e o desenvolvimento, ou melhor a historia da Orquestra Filarmonica de Nova Iorque, hoje um dos mais perfeitos conjuntos de instrumentistas do mundo, a biografia de seus atuais regentes e integrantes já foram amplamente divulgados por todos os jornais paulistanos o que nos autoriza evitar a repetição desses mesmos fatos. Nossa nota ficaria incompleta se deixassemos todavia de falar algo sobre o "modus vivendi" da orquestra e em particular sobre os problemas ligados à sua manutenção.

A estrutura desse grande conjunto sinfonico está apoiada exclusivamente no trabalho intenso e honesto de seus responsaveis que cumprem e fazem cumprir fielmente todas as obrigações contidas nos estatutos da sociedade. Esta por sua vez mantem financeiramente a orquestra sem qualquer intromissão da politica ou de politicos. Os integrantes da Filarmonica são contratados (não nomeados) e tudo fazem depois para não desmerecerem o posto tão dificilmente conquistado e nunca tentam desrespeitar as exigencias consubstanciadas nos rigidos contratos de trabalho que assinam. Isto faz com que os musicos da Orquestra Filarmonica de Nova Iorque, naturalmente muito bem pagos, consagrem todo o seu tempo em beneficio da poesia e do encantamento sem nenhuma perda desse mesmo e precioso tempo.

Os recursos financeiros da orquestra provem exclusivamente das contribuições dos ouvintes em geral, de socios benfeitores e de uma imensa multidão de ouvintes das transmissões radiofonicas para todo o territorio norte-americano.

Que mais poderiamos dizer dessa grande orquestra, desse notavel "instrumento" de precisão absoluta sinão repetir o que dela já foi dito por um afamado critico: A historia da Orquestra Filarmonica de Nova Iorque é a propria Historia da Musica dos Estados Unidos. Isto basta!

Seus integrantes, desde o "Spalla" (principal primeiro violino) até o mais modesto instrumentista de percussão são os mais completos musicos virtuoses que tivemos oportunidade de conhecer. Seus regentes não são e não tem sido meros e impassiveis metronomos marcadores de tempos de compasso, porem eximios interpretes que sabem "tocar" magistralmente nesse delicado e ao mesmo tempo dificilimo instrumento de mais de cem almas, como pouquissimos solistas o fazem ao piano ou ao violino.

A sonoridade da Orquestra Filarmonica de Nova Iorque já adquiriu personalidade e pode ser qualificada como soberba. Mesmo quando a serviço de obras intensamente expressivas não vem distorcida ou deformada a pedido de desejos de efeitos faceis.

E, Dimitri Mitropoulos é um dos preparadores desse ambiente de encantamento e magia sonora. A ele cabem indubitavelmente os principais titulos honorificos pela autenticidade e completa realização das obras que interpreta ardorosamente sem desrespeitar os designios dos autores.

As apresentações da Orquestra Filarmonica de Nova Iorque em São Paulo foram transformadas em verdadeiros festivais de arte e euforia. Nosso teatro infelizmente foi pequeno demais para receber todos aqueles que desejaram ouvir, de pé ou sentados, o famoso conjunto norte-americano. Sua capacidade foi excedida em, pelo menos cinquenta por cento.

O primeiro concerto obedeceu ao seguinte programa: "Prologo e Fuga" de Camargo Guarnieri; Sinfonia n.o 3 de Brahms; "Noite Transfigurada" de Schenberg e "Meditação de Medeia" e "Dança da Vingança" de Samuel Barber.

Ouvimos inicialmente o "Prologo e Fuga", importante trabalho do ilustre compositor paulista Camargo Guarnieri. Os diversos elementos, uns ritmicos, outros manifestamente expressivos, logicamente ordenados no curso desse excelente trabalho de Guarnieri, principalmente a sobreposição de todos os elementos tematicos, uns na forma primitiva, outros aumentados e inteligentemente modificados, tiveram tratamento primoroso só ao alcance de conjuntos semelhantes ou muito proximos em qualidade, deste que nos honrou com sua visita.

Dimitri Mitropoulos

A maneira clara, vigorosa e exata com que Dimitri Mitropoulos apresentou a composição de Camargo Guarnieri é aliás a unica compativel com a propria natureza da obra: perfeita! Todos os detalhes sutis dos "divertimentos" onde a trama polifonica é confiada aos pequenos instrumentos de sopro (oboés, fagotes, clarinetas) transpareceram de maneira extraordinariamente nitida.

Ainda na primeira parte do primeiro concerto ouvimos a Sinfonia n.o 3, em Fa Maior, op. 90 de Brahms. Esta terceira de Brahms é talvez mais importante do que as duas precedentes e possivelmente a melhor obra sinfonica do grande mestre germanico.

Dirigindo a Orquestra Filarmonica de Nova Iorque Dimitri Mitropoulos realizou o grande milagre da perfeição na arte. Os planos sonoros se destacaram de modo admiravel; estilisticamente estivemos diante de Brahms com tôda sua nobreza, grandiloquencia emotiva e paixão.

Ouvimos na segunda parte o poema "Noite Transfigurada" (Verklaerte Nacht) de Arnold Schenberg. Esse musico é justamente considerado uma das mais importantes personalidades da musica contemporanea, um grande inovador. Dele dependeram a abertura de novos horizontes e a verdadeira revolução processada no campo da criação musical da atualidade. Alguns de seus biografos dividem sua musica em três periodos distintos o primeiro dos quais é chamado Periodo Tonal, datando dessa epoca a composição que ouvimos.

Mitropoulos deu-nos uma "performance" veemente e romantica desse trabalho de Schenberg, fazendo-nos esquecer sua extensão. Os virtuoses da Orquestra Filarmonica de Nova Iorque (somente cordas, nessa peça) permitiram-nos ouvir a torrente sonora de "Noite Transfigurada" sem um minuto de fastio.

O programa foi encerrado com a execução de dois impulsivos trabalhos coreograficos de Samuel Barber: "Meditação de Medeia" e "Dança da Vingança". A concepção de Mitropoulos foi das mais autorizadas e fieis ao texto.

No programa do segundo concerto ouvimos: "Abertura para um Festival Academico" de Brahms; Sinfonia n.o 2 de Beethoven e Sinfonia n.o 2 de Brahms.

A tecnica de tomada de sonoridades verdadeiramente efervescente e a transparencia dos sons de todos os instrumentos fez da execução do numero inicial do programa, da "Abertura para um Festival Academico" de Brahms um espetaculo comovente. Podemos qualificar essa versão como uma das mais logicas e atraentes que ouvimos do trabalho jovial de Brahms.

A seguir foi-nos dado oportunidade de ouvir a Segunda Sinfonia em Ré Maior, Op. 36 de Beethoven Não podemos dizer que a interpretação de Mitropoulos dessa vez se tenha revestido daquela intraduzivel "gemutlichkeit", daquele clima vienense ingenuamente lirico, porem estamos certos de que o regente conseguiu traduzir o espirito brilhante dessa obra.

O programa do segundo concerto da Orquestra Filarmonica de Nova Iorque foi encerrado com a execução da Sinfonia n.o 2, em Ré Maior de Brahms. A realização foi soberba desde a total reprodução do lirismo contagiante das lindas frases tão sabia e intimamente confiadas aos violoncelos e magistralmente executadas pelos comandados de Mitropoulos, até a efusiva energia do ultimo movimento. Não escaparam nenhum dos comoventes detalhes nem o profundo sentido de beleza interior do "Adagio". Uma versão que sempre será lembrada com saudade.

Em ambos concertos tivemos o imenso prazer de ouvir magnificamente interpretados os Hinos Nacionais do Brasil e dos Estados Unidos, assim como "extra-programa" mais duas otimas peças uma de Falla ("El Sombrero a Tres Picos") e outra de Verdi (Abertura da opera "La Forza Del Destino").

O publico soube aplaudir entusiasticamente os esforços e o magnifico trabalho de Dimitri Mitropoulos e dos musicos da Orquestra Filarmonica de Nova Iorque.

6-9-58 MITROPOULOS, UMA REVELAÇÃO

MULTIDÃO APLAUDIU SABADO A SINFONICA NO ANHANGABAÚ

Espetaculo festivo no centro da cidade — Bernstein, intoxicado em Santiago do Chile, substituido pela segunda vez — Observação popular: "Esse maestro e fabuloso; rege sem partitura"

A esplanada do Anhangabaú, na tarde calma de ontem, apresentava um aspecto festivo. Diante da estatua de Ruy Barbosa, às 16 horas, os componentes da Orquestra Filarmonica de Nova York — o mais antigo conjunto sinfonico dos Estados Unidos — apresentava-se diante do publico paulistano.

A multidão apinhou-se no parapeito do viaduto do Chá, ao redor do Parque, pendurando-se no alto e ao lado das estatuas, acotovelando-se em torno do celebre conjunto.

Afluindo de bairros distantes, apareciam mães carregando crianças, sentando-se no gramado, ao lado de velhos e jovens. Figuras aristocraticas, vestidas com elegancia, foram vistas ao lado de comerciarios ou simples operarios, vestidos modestamente. Enquanto a orquestra tocava, o silencio pairava por toda a praça, interrompido apenas pelo ruido de onibus e automoveis que passavam. Após a execução de cada numero, de Brahms ou Verdi, a multidão aplaudia entusiasticamente e ouviam-se frequentemente observações como esta: "E' fabuloso esse maestro. Rege sem partitura".

O maestro Bernstein não veio, por ter sofrido intoxicação alimentar em Santiago do Chile, onde se encontra. Substituiu-o, pela segunda vez, o regente Dimitri Mitropoulos, cujos movimentos impressionaram vivamente os paulistanos.

EXITO DA SINFONICA

Na tarde de ontem, a Sinfonica ratificou o exito alcançado na noite anterior no Teatro Municipal que se apresentou repleto, espalhando-se pelos corredores da platéia e dos balcões o grande numero de pessoas que não conseguiram suas reservas de lugares a tempo.

A orquestra é constituida pelos melhores representantes na vida musical norte-americana e pela composição multinacional do conjunto. Muitos dos componentes são filhos e netos, outros são imigrantes que adquiriram recentemente a cidadania americana, a exemplo do proprio maestro Mitropoulos, nascido na Grecia e radicado nos Estados Unidos desde 1936. Leonard Bernstein, por sua vez, é americano filho de imigrantes pobres da Russia, de origem judaica.

Julliard School of Music é o nome da escola frequentada pela maioria dos componentes da orquestra. Contudo, não é sem esforços e longos anos de pratica intensiva que conseguem, ao sair dessa e de outras escolas musicais dos Estados Unidos, chegar até a Sinfonica de Nova York — escalão mais alto de sua carreira de musico de orquestra.

A FILARMONICA DE NOVA IORQUE EMPOLGA SÃO PAULO

O Teatro Municipal está vivendo noites de intenso movimento social e artistico com a apresentação da Orquestra Filarmonica de Nova Iorque, com um numero fabuloso de componentes, e com as figuras impressionantes de Dimitri Mitropoulos e Leonard Bernstein na regencia.

O publico está vibrando com tais espetaculos, pois a fama de tal Orquestra é conhecida mundialmente e não será tão brevemente que teremos outra oportunidade igual a esta, para ver e ouvir a outra espetacular temporada.

A noite de estreia que apresentou no programa obras de Camargo Guarnieri, Johannes Brahms, Arnold Schoenberg, Samuel Barber e Ravel, teve na regencia o magistral Mitropoulos.

Seria impossivel querer transcrever uma regencia desse famoso maestro; não existiriam termos que pudessem relatar fielmente a magistral sensibilidade e conhecimento que Mitropoulos tem das peças que rege. Primeiramente, o que nos impressiona é a simplicidade com que ele toma a regencia, depois, o ambiente que forma entre osmusicos, indicando silencio e atenção. O publico a esta altura chega a prender a respiração para depois emocionado, levantar-se a uma só vez ante a execução imprevista do Hino Nacional Brasileiro. Logo após este, segue-se o Hino Americano, permanecendo a plateia em pé.

O ambiente a esta altura já é dos mais simpaticos e si então Mitropoulos dá inicio ao programa.

A abertura, com «Prologo e Fuga» de Camargo Guarnieri, traz aos espectadores o ritmo brasileiro, enchendo o ar de graça e brejeirice, fazendo com que seja o compositor, ali presente, alvo do mais carinhoso aplauso. Cumprimentam-se regente e compositor tambem com palmas; Mitropoulos dá sequencia ao Concerto, agora com Brahms, «Sinfonia» n.o 3 em fá maior, apus 90, em quatro movimentos.

Os aplausos se sucedem findo o numero com o qual se encerrava a primeira parte do programa.

Os assistentes que tinham suas localidades reservadas saiam ao saguão, os que não tinham, nem se moviam de seus lugares (escadas, corredores, cadeiras sobressalentes), estando porem todos bastante felizes, mesmo os mal acomodados, por terem a oportunidade de ouvir (mesmo sem ver) a Filarmonica.

A segunda parte apresentou Schoenberg, «Noite Transfigurada», para orquestra de cordas, opus 4, com ritmo bem diverso da Sinfonia que acabaramos de ouvir. Arnold Schoenberg falecido em 1951 nos conta musicalmente falando, a historia de um casal enamorado, passeando num bosque enluarado. A mulher conta seu pecado ao homem, dizendo que havia perdido a fé na felicidade e que sua unica aspiração era uma vida plena, pela maternidade e havia se rendido a um homem que não conhecia, mas a vida vingou-se fazendo-a amar o homem que estava a seu lado.

O homem fala: não deixe sua alma confusa com pensamentos de culpa. Olhe o luar que nos ilumina e que envolve o universo... Atiram-se um aos braços do outro e seguem pela estrada sob o luar maravilhoso.

Este enredo deu origem a uma belissima composição, executada pela orquestra com 109 figuras, numa riqueza de sons e de instrumentos, perfeitamente acordes e unissonos, sob os movimentos ora suaves ora nervosos de Mitropoulos que falava com as mãos, de maneira impressionante.

Talvez se Mitropoulos tivesse estudado arte dramatica ou dança, não tivesse tamanha linguagem nas mãos como tem quando está à frente de sua orquestra.

Dimitri Mitropoulos é a alma de todo aquele enorme conjunto de homens, partituras, instrumentos, e apenas uma mulher, a harpista. A regencia toda é feita sem partitura, o que traz ainda maior valor ao espetaculo.

Barber tambem esteve presente com «Meditação e Dança da Vingança de Medea» opus 23-A.

Depois de uma sucessão de temas e vozes a composição termina por um pianissimo, até sumir de vez. Os violinos são os ultimos a silenciar, diante de um abrir de braços impressionante de Mitropoulos, ficando a orquestra e o publico por alguns segundos ainda sob a influencia dos ultimos sons.

A expectativa é geral em torno do descansar da batuta, e quando o maestro vira-se para o publico, este eleva uma verdadeira consagração ao já consagrado Dimitri Mitropoulos e à Orquestra Filarmonica de Nova Iorque.

Chamado varias vezes ao palco o maestro, oferece mais um numero, uma dança com ritmo de habanera, onde entram todos os instrumentos em ação. A nota diferente foi dada pela introdução de marimba com parte destacada nesse numero, que finalizou com um «crescente» vibrante, quase ensurdecedor.

O publico não deixava seus lugares na expectativa de mais um numero, que não veio.

Esta foi, em linhas gerais, a primeira apresentação da Filarmonica de Nova Iorque, no Teatro Municipal sob condução de Dimitri Mitropoulos, revestida do maior brilhantismo que se pudesse esperar.

Sobre a segunda apresentação, falaremos amanhã.

Filarmonica de Nova York — O Estado de S. Paulo — 6-8-1958

Uma conversa com os musicos

Um dos acontecimentos culturais mais importantes deste ano, em S. Paulo, refere-se á vinda da Orquestra Filarmonica de Nova York, patrocinada pelo Departamento de Estado Norte-Americano. Tal excursão reveste-se de grande importancia, não só por se tratar de acontecimento dos mais faustosos no nosso meio musical, mas também por ter um carater propagandistico inegavelmente benefico aos Estados Unidos da America do Norte. Com muita felicidade, o Departamento de Estado ianque escolheu, como instrumento de união interamericana, esta orquestra, que, sem favor nenhum, ombreia com as melhores do mundo.

A fim de que o publico pudesse aquilatar melhor a importancia que os Estados Unidos deram a essa excursão, procuramos ouvir a "voz da orquestra", isto é, tivemos com alguns de seus musicos uma conversa informal, despida de protocolo que, geralmente, constitui o ambiente de uma entrevista oficial.

Portanto, o que agora apresentamos aos leitores é o resultado de uma conversa amigavel com dois dos componentes do conjunto orquestral — e não uma entrevista com perguntas já de antemão formuladas.

O PUBLICO BRASILEIRO "GOSTA DE MUSICA"

O curioso, contudo, é que fomos também "entrevistados" pelos dois musicos, que nos indagaram muitas coisas sobre os costumes e o modo de ser dos brasileiros, particularmente dos paulistas.

Um deles — Mr. Lora — aliás, é italiano radicado nos Estados Unidos e, em consequencia, suas observações foram muito agudas, visto ser o seu modo de pensar eminentemente latino.

Eutre outras coisas, perguntamos-lhe o que achava da recepção do publico brasileiro á vinda da orquestra. Respondeu-nos que, tanto ele quanto os demais membros, sentiram a simpatia do nosso publico, que nesse ponto não se diferencia do publico dos demais paises por eles visitados. Acrescentou, ainda, que como publico musical, o brasileiro pode ser comparado aos melhores da Europa e dos Estados Unidos. "Sente-se que o publico brasileiro entende de musica e, acima de tudo, "gosta" de musica", salientou ele.

"ESTRANHOU O PROGRAMA"

"Entretanto — continuou — tive a impressão nitida de que o publico estranhou o programa que apresentamos, talvez por faltarem mais peças classicas, que são as mais conhecidas e que está acostumado a ouvir nas nossas gravações. Creio mesmo que o programa organizado para os nossos concertos pecasse por excesso de modernismo — com algumas peças de cunho mais classico para contrabalançar. Parece-me que, afora alguns entendidos, poucos conhecem Barber e os modernos compositores americanos.

A MUSICA BRASILEIRA NOS E.U.A.

Por ser Mr. Lora um dos mais antigos violinistas da orquestra (onde milita há quase dez anos), quisemos, em virtude disso, saber como era recebida a musica brasileira nos Estados Unidos. Eis a sua resposta:

— "A musica brasileira, bem como a musica de todos os outros paises, para ser bem aceita pelos norte-americanos, deverá, antes de mais nada, receber um carinho todo especial quanto á propaganda, e isto porque é quase totalmente desconhecida pelo grande publico norte-americano".

Na verdade — acrescentou ele — apenas, nós, que vivemos no meio musical, conhecemos Camargo Guarnieri, Villa-Lobos e outros. Se os brasileiros cuidarem bem da propaganda, não tenho a menor duvida de que a musica brasileira será recebida pelo nosso povo — e com agrado.

Aproveitamos uma pausa, e indagamos se, na sua opinião, o publico brasileiro já estava educado para ouvir a musica erudita. Respondeu-nos, com muita propriedade, que um povo, qualquer que seja, poderá não saber musica, não entender de musica, mas "sentirá" a musica. E o brasileiro — ajuntou — parece-me um povo grandemente sensivel; e a sensibilidade é a condição "sine qua non" para a perfeita percepção musical.

Informamo-lo de que o governo procurava difundir a musica erudita entre o povo, e ele: "Parece-me idéia das mais louvaveis, e devo cumprimentar-vos e ao vosso governo por tão inteligente iniciativa".

FALA O PIANISTA DA ORQUESTRA

Neste ponto, o pianista da orquestra, Mr. Bruce Prince-Joseph, interrompeu-nos:

— "Quanto a mim, creio poder afirmar que o publico brasileiro tem uma inclinação muito forte para a musica romantica. Observei uma marcante preferencia por Tschaikowsky e seus seguidores — prova da vossa sensibilidade".

Revela, porém, Mr. Bruce, nos modos e nos gestos, extrema sensibilidade e inteligencia — além de ter revelado extraordinaria cultura musical.

Observamos tudo isso, e perguntamos-lhe o que achava da idéia de dar concerto publico no Vale do Anhangabaú.

Respondeu-nos que a idéia, para ele, era esplendida, e deveria ser seguida por todas as demais orquestras, nacionais ou de fora. Prosseguindo, salientou: "O povo não detesta musica, apenas impedem-no de a conhecer. Tal iniciativa não interessa apenas ao povo, mas também á propria Orquestra Sinfonica de Nova York, pois devemos mostrar que a democracia de que tantos nos orgulhamos (nós norte-americanos), não se restringe apenas ás palavras, mas principalmente aos atos".

O "ROCK AND ROLL"

Uma conversa despretensiosa não tem um rumo traçado, em consequencia passa-se muito facilmente de um a outro assunto. E tocou-se no "rock and roll".

Perguntamos aos dois musicos o que achavam desta forma de musica popular. As opiniões foram, todavia, um tanto dispares.

Mr. Lora, por exemplo, afirmou que o "rock" não passava de uma exteriorização da mocidade, em forma musical. Declarou que não achava no "rock" uma forma escandalosa que muitos alardeiam: "Lembrem-se de que tivemos, na decada dos 20, o "charleston", também muito combatido; e muito antes, no começo deste seculo, tivemos o "cake alke", especie de valsa que estarreceu nossos avós. A epoca do "rock and roll" passará, como passaram todas as outras", notou ele.

Já Mr. Prince Joseph pensa que o "rock" é simplesmente uma nova forma de musica comercial. Alegou ele que quando os grandes "managers" norte-americanos perceberam que a epoca do "cold" e das grandes orquestras havia passado, resolveram criar uma nova especie de musica, que agradasse á mocidade — dando portanto mais lucros. E surgiu o "rock".

MUSICA RUSSA E NORTE-AMERICANA

Pulando de um polo a outro, indagamos se a arte musical norte-americana equilibrava-se á russa. Mr. Lora, prudentemente, acredita que sim, porque na corrida politica, cientifica e cultural entre os dois povos, ambos estavam equiparados.

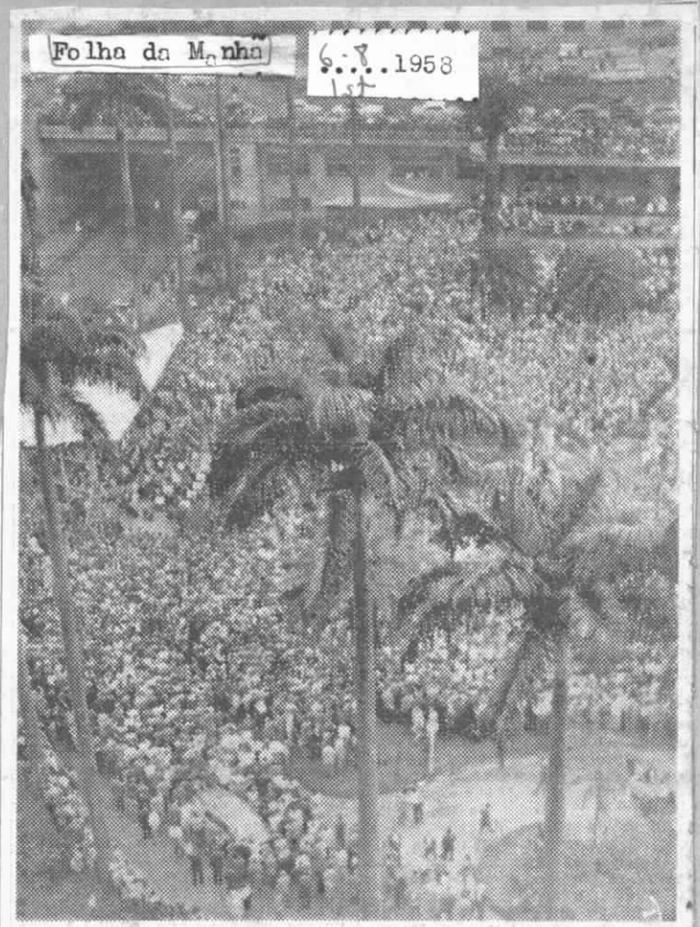
Porém, tal não é a opinião de Mr. Bruce Prince-Joseph que afirmou: "Não estão, nem poderiam estar equilibrados, pois há uma diferença de base entre ambas as musicas. O compositor russo compõe para ocasiões especiais — compõe por "encomenda"; já o compositor norte-americano compõe por compor, ou quando sente que deve compor. Logo, não é possivel estabelecer-se um termo de comparação".

Aproveitamos o assunto, e perscrutamos qual a arte mais aceita na Europa: a norte-americana ou a russa.

Mr. Prince-Joseph declarou que, no seu entender, aceitavam muito mais a arte russa, pois "nós americanos sofremos uma propaganda nociva: toda a Europa nos chama de "crazy Americans". Consequentemente, não levam a serio a nossa arte".

Um compositor desprezado injustamente

Já que falamos sobre a arte norte-americana, perguntamos como era recebido Ferde Grofé, autor da suite "Grand Canyon". Ambos os musicos concordaram nas respostas, que podem ser assim resumidas: Não consideram um musico digno de figurar num programa de gala — o que é uma injustica, além de incongruencia. A obra citada é uma excelente peça descritiva, possuindo todos os caracteristicos de uma peça classica; mas, infelizmente, os "snobs" musicais "torcem o nariz em se tratando de Grofé". E' uma injustiça flagrante a este grande compositor, um dos melhores dos Estados Unidos.



Os "snobs" da musica

Por "snobs", Mr. Prince-Joseph disse que deveria entender-se aqueles que, tendo uma cultura das mais superficiais, fingem entender a musica. "Eles só aceitam o que o formalismo aponta como sendo bom —e torcem arrogantemente o nariz ao resto", sublinhou.

Instados, em seguida, sobre o que achavam da opera "Porgy and Bess". de Gershwin, responderam, em sintese: "Esta é uma das mais perfeitas operas norte-americanas — perfeita por refletir o espirito e o modo de ser do povo. Porém, os indefectiveis "snobs" olham-na de alto — esquecidos de que a musica classica de um país é aquela mais sincera, e a que melhor representa um povo e seu modo de pensar".

E finalizando, Mr. Lora observou que o povo norte-americano parece desprezar os seus musicistas: "Note-se que os maestros mais afamados não são de origem norte-americana: Mitropoulos, Stokowsky, Rodzinsky... Entretanto, devo dizer que este estado de coisas está terminando, felizmente".

CONCERTO PUBLICO DA FILARMONICA DE NOVA IORQUE — Perante cerca de trinta mil espectadores, que se comprimiam (como se pode observar na foto) sobre toda a area dos jardins do Anhangabaú, a Orquestra Filarmonica de Nova Iorque realizou ontem sua esperada audição ao ar livre. O grande publico pôde assim, numa rara oportunidade, apreciar ao vivo o desempenho do famoso conjunto sob a regencia de Dimitri Mitropoulos. (Reportagem na ultima pagina deste caderno)

UM GENIO NA TERRA BANDEIRANTE

O publico paulista delirou na noite de ontem com a magistral apresentação da Filarmonica de Nova Iorque, sob a regencia do insigne maestro Mitropoulos. O Teatro Municipal completamente lotado foi pequeno para os aplausos que ali eclodiram, pela execução perfeita de uma das orquestras mais famosas do mundo.

Vinte minutos antes do espetaculo. Mitropoulos estava euforico e feliz como uma criança.

«Só quando estou regendo é que sou verdadeiramente feliz e sinto-me realizado», afirma o maestro.

Foi o que pudemos constatar no decorrer do concerto. Uma transfiguração operava-se no rosto de Dimitri. Expressões fisionomicas e jogo de mãos impressionaram de tal forma a assistencia, a ponto de causar suspense durante toda a apresentação. Suas mãos pareciam mais gaivotas debatendo suas asas nos «agittatos» e «fortissimos», para logo mais, esmorecerem numa terna expressão de suavidade e leveza, nos «pianissimos».

Mitropoulos fala da angustia, do amor, da inutilidade, do desespero dos classicos e dos modernos através de sua batuta. Foi assim que falou da obra de Camargo Guarnieri penetrando no amago do sentimento de brasilidade, como se fora da terra e conhecesse de perto o colorido contrastante de uma natureza agreste em luta com os elementos cosmopolitas que compõem ou formam na sua totalidade a civilização brasileira e dos tropicos. Se bem que não uma obra representativa da terra, o «Prologo e Fuga», de Guarnieri, que se equipara aos trabalhos de grande folego universalmente conhecidos, conservou sob a regencia de Mitropoulos, a essencia caracteristica brasileira.

O proprio Guarnieri afirmou ver desta vez a sua ideia plenamente compreendida e realizada pela Filarmonica de Nova Iorque, numa concepção genial do maestro grego.

Felizmente, a Columbia registrou em gravações, obras das mais importantes regidas por Mitropoulos que poderão ser apreciadas por aqueles que não tiveram oportunidade de ve-lo e ouvi-lo de perto.

Vinte mil pessoas ouviram a Filarmonica de Nova York — Espetaculo inedito constituiu a apresentação da Orquestra Filarmonica de Nova York, em concerto publico ao ar livre, oferecido ontem á tarde ao povo de São Paulo pelo governo norte-americano, sob os auspicios da Prefeitura Municipal. Vinte mil pessoas lotaram totalmente a area compreendida entre o Teatro Municipal e o Vale do Anhangabau, assim como o Viaduto do Chá e adjacencias. As palmeiras imperiais, estendendo-se ao longo do tablado improvisado emprestaram ao ambiente uma nota pitoresca, transformando-o em cenario natural. O local, apesar da sua pronunciada inclinação, prejudicou de certa forma a visibilidade, o que não teria acontecido se tivesse sido construido o palanque para a orquestra em nivel mais elevado. Sob a regencia do maestro Dimitri Mitropoulos foram executados o Hino Nacional Brasileiro, e o Hino Nacional Norte-Americano; "O caçador", de Weber; "Festival Academico", de Brahms; "A força do Destino", de Verdi; e uma peça de Villa-Lobos, e outra de Falla, com que se encerrou o programa. Num intervalo entre uma peça e outra o maestro Mitropoulos recebeu uma flor como homenagem de uma criança paraplegica. Á noite, a Orquestra apresentou-se em terceira e ultima recita, no Teatro Municipal, encerrando assim sua temporada nesta Capital.

CONCERTO

Ante o sucesso que está obtendo a Orquestra Filarmonica de Nova Iorque, em sua passagem por São Paulo, cumprindo mais uma etapa da excursão que está realizando em todo o mundo sob os auspicios do Departamento do Estado norte-americano, as autoridades diplomaticas do Consulado dos Estados Unidos em nossa Capital, resolveram organizar um concerto ao ar livre. No Vale do Anhangabau, na altura da praça Ramos de Azevedo, foi levantado um palanque, onde ficaram os musicos. Nas proximidades, multidão incalculavel postou-se, aplaudindo delirantemente Dimitri Mitropoulos. Durante todo o concerto, que se realizou das 16 às 17h00 foram tocadas, musicas conhecidas, mais acessiveis ao grande publico. Quando se retirava do palanque, Dimitri Mitropoulos foi solicitado por numerosas pessoas, a dar seu autografo.

EXIBIU-SE PARA O POVO A MAIS FAMOSA ORQUESTRA DO MUNDO — Na tarde de ontem, no vale do Anhangabaú, a Orquestra Filarmonica de Nova York, sob a regencia do maestro Dimitri Mitropoulos, executou um programa de musica erudita para a população de São Paulo. Desde muito antes da hora marcada para o concerto da grande orquestra norte-americana já o local se achava completamente lotado por milhares de aficionados da musica fina, — calcula-se 15.000 — o que causou entusiasmo ao proprio maestro, que declarou jamais haver pensado existir nesta Capital tamanho interesse pela musica elevada como estava observando entre a população da Capital. Antes de dar inicio ao concerto, o maestro Mitropoulos cumprimentou pessoalmente diversas crianças paraplegicas que se achavam presentes ao local, em suas cadeiras de rodas, tendo abraçado e beijado nas faces a uma delas, gesto que despertou profunda emoção na massa popular, que o aplaudiu longamente.

19 NAÇÕES — ORQUESTRA FILARMONICA

Oitenta americanos, oito italianos, cinco russos, três hungaros, três franceses, três alemães, dois rumenos, dois poloneses, dois austriacos, um argentino, um guatemalteço, um dominicano, um costariquenho, um inglês, um belga, um israelense, um turco, um lituano e um grego (Mitropoulos), são os componentes da Orquestra Filarmonica de Nova Iorque, que, apesar de ser constituida por elementos de nacionalidade tão diferente, forma um todo homogeneo.

O segundo espetaculo, de ontem, foi alterado, quanto ao programa, pois deveriam ser executadas peças de Villa-Lobos, Roy Harris, Chaves, Peter Ilych Tchaikovsky, tendo na regencia Leonard Bernstein, que não pôde estar presente devido a um acidente que sofreu, ferindo-se em uma das pernas, e por tal motivo não se apresentou ao publico de São Paulo tendo que ser substituido por Mitropoulos.

Fez-se presente ao espetaculo o governador da cidade de São Paulo, sr. Adhemar de Barros e senhora, que ofereceram no decorrer da apresentação, uma taça como homenagem e recordação à Orquestra Filarmonica de Nova Iorque, entregue a Dimitri Mitropoulos que, de maneira simpatica, com um italiano perfeitamente compreensivel, virou-se para a plateia e disse: «Presente del Prefeto».

Como dissemos, Mitropoulos domina perfeitamente bem o italiano e no inicio do programa subiu à regencia, anunciando ao publico o motivo de sua presença em lugar de Bernstein e a modificação do programa, sendo cada numero anunciado seguido de calorosa salva de palmas.

A Orquestra executou a «Fantastica», Brahms, Beethoven e por insistencia do publico, apresentou extra-programa a Abertura de «La Força Del Destino.»

Os numeros foram aplaudidissimos pelo publico que lotou completamente todas as dependencias do Teatro Municipal. Até o palco estava tomado por numerosas pessoas que se colocaram atrás da Orquestra.

Entre os presentes, encontravam-se Eleazar de Carvalho e senhora, Sousa Lima e senhora, alem de conhecidos musicos e pessoas de destaque em nossa sociedade.

O que o maestro gosta mais de fazer, sem ser reger? — «Eu só gosto de reger, sou como um frade que se entrega à adoração de Deus e só sabe adorar Deus. Eu tambem só sei que gosto de reger».

O segundo concerto da Filarmonica de N. York

Talvez maior do que na primeira noite era a expectativa do publico numerosissimo presente ao Teatro Municipal para ouvir a Filarmonica de Nova York. Para surpresa geral — esperava-se Bernstein — surgiu outra vez Dimitri Mitropoulos, esbelto, alerta e sorridente, e anunciou que seu colega não poderia reger por achar-se acamado e que ele lhe faria as vezes. Suas ultimas palavras foram cobertas por uma ovação. A surpresa sucedia-se o agrado, pois a simpatia de que é dotado fê-lo queridissimo de todos. Foi então que anunciou o programa a ser observado: "Na primeira parte, a Abertura Academica, de Brahms e Segunda Sinfonia de Beethoven. Na segunda parte, Segunda Sinfonia de Brahms. E depois, quem sabe?" Mitropoulos falou em português correto, quase sem sotaque estrangeiro, o que o prendeu ainda mais ao publico.

Quanto à execução em si cremos haver dito o suficiente em nosso comentario sobre o primeiro concerto. Mas é claro que a admiração persiste e provoca observações. Inicialmente notamos a autenticidade da interpretação reveladora do espirito peculiar à obra, do seu caracter expressivo, daquilo que Couperin, depois de fazer considerações sobre a parte material das obras, chamou "l'espirit et l'âme qu'il faut y joindre". Encontrar este espirito e realizá-lo pela execução, torná-lo sensivel ao ouvinte, eis a grande tarefa do regente e de todo interprete, pois aquele, em ultima analise, é um interprete como os outros e, como eles, utiliza-se de um instrumento, no caso a orquestra. E é por isso que o germanismo da Abertura de Brahms soava tão lindamente, por vezes com uma ponta de "humour"; que a Segunda Sinfonia de Beethoven foi todo um poema de frescor e de espontaneidade sonoras e a Segunda Sinfonia de Brahms ergueu-se com tal pureza de contornos. Assinalamos também esta preocupação com a maneira de apresentar certos pormenores, maneira que pode por vezes atingir o nivel de voluntario exagero, mas sempre justificavel. Claro é que na verdadeira obra de arte nada existe gratuitamente; tudo ali tem uma razão de ser subordinada ao caracter fundamental da peça, caracter que pode variar de natureza quanto à época mas que é garantia de unidade e por isso é o ponto essencial a ser atingido pela interpretação. Nesta verificase o poder que tem Mitropoulos de aliar inteligencia e sensibilidade, aquela baseada na tecnica, na reflexão, na analise espiritual, esta na apreensão do "caracter" e na infusão de vida, de ação, de comunicação que legitimam a interpretação e lhe dão a autenticidade acima assinalada, aquela verdade talvez indemonstravel logicamente mas realmente apreensivel pelas antenas artisticas da personalidade do interprete. E acreditamos que é o equilibrio entre sua alta inteligencia e profunda sensibilidade que faz de Mitropoulos uma personalidade artistica esclarecida, lucida, compreensiva, avessa a preferencias exclusivistas e capaz de sempre reagir em sentido criador à expressão musical da sensibilidade alheia. Certamente, os resultados por ele obtidos só são possiveis quando se entende a musica como linguagem dotada de poderes proprios de comunicação, de calorosa expressão, não simples e "pesquisado" arranjo do material sonoro, o que lhe tira a vida, a razão de ser enquanto expressão do homem total ou da totalidade da sensibilidade humana.

Estendendo à orquestra a observação dos pormenores, de novo nos surpreendemos com a admiravel precisão em todas as entradas; a unanimidade de elocução (ou de dicção ou ainda de exposição melodica) que transforma num só os numerosos instrumentistas de cada grupo; a perfeição dos metais, sempre macios e flexiveis, por vezes suavissimos; o tratamento completo de todos os elementos da expressão e esta "limpeza" de execução que sugere, mesmo nos trechos mais densos, um clima de montanha, um ar fino que circula por entre todos os instrumentos e faz dizer que uma entre as qualidades da boa execução é ser "arejada".

A reação do publico foi entusiastica. Aplausos irromperam nas varias vezes em que Mitropoulos veio ao proscenio, após a entrega de um mimo e ao final do concerto, o que o leva à concessão de uma peça extraprograma. O excesso de lotação normalmente tolerado e atendido pela colocação de cadeiras nas pontas das filas de poltronas, foi, desta vez, um pouco... excessivo. O Teatro foi tomado por verdadeira multidão que se comprimia em todas as passagens, portas e vãos. A volta do publico à sala após o intervalo provocou empurrões, apertos e outras violencias, pois as entradas estavam todas bloqueadas. A uma senhora, envolvida no turbilhão e deslocada de seu lugar, chegaram a arrebatar a cadeira em que se encontrava! Em resumo: um espetaculo deprimente e um abuso em relação àqueles que pagaram bem caro as suas localidades, viram-se privados delas (casos numerosos foram observados) e sujeitos a um tratamento de rua. E pensaram os responsaveis no que aconteceria se, por este ou aquele motivo, se verificasse um panico? A tragedia assumiria proporções incriveis porque, para a eventualidade de rapida evacuação, o Teatro se encontra totalmente desaparelhado: poucas as saidas, estreitas as portas e todas com escada. Nada aconteceu, providencialmente; mas não há necessidade nenhuma de provocar situações perigosas.

ORQUESTRA FILARMONICA DE NOVA YORK

A Orquestra Filarmonica de Nova York proporcionou anteontem ao publico paulistano um espetaculo dos mais importantes na vida musical destes ultimos anos. Aqueles que vivem nesta capital e não tem a oportunidade de visitar os grandes centros estrangeiros só conhecem as orquestras famosas através de discos. E com toda a alta fidelidade que a moderna tecnica de gravação conseguiu, a verdade é que a audição direta revela uma infinidade de minucias, uma riqueza que o melhor disco e o melhor aparelho não traduzem.

O programa constou, em sua primeira parte, do Prologo e Fuga de Camargo Guarnieri e da Sinfonia n.o 3 em fá maior, de Brahms. Camargo Guarnieri é um compositor cuja riqueza contrapontistica se realiza através de uma serie de combinações ritmico-timbristicas. Por isso mesmo a interpretação de suas obras requer uma orquestra extremamente agil e que possibilite a devida valorização do trabalho. Em caso contrario, aquela melodica e a ritmica que se desdobram e se transformam pelos varios timbres instrumentais se perdem numa confusa massa informe. Confesso que tive a impressão de ouvir e de sentir pela primeira vez o tecido contrapontistico do compositor paulista, em toda a sua riqueza.

Em Brahms esse notavel regente que é Dmitri Mitropulos realizou um trabalho de variação de dinamica, dentro daquela atmosfera tipica brahmsiana, que culminou no terceiro movimento, o belissimo "Poco Allegro" da Sinfonia.

A segunda parte do programa foi constituida tambem por duas obras: a "Noite Transfigurada" de Schoenberg e "Meditação e Dança da Vingança de Medeia", do norte-americano Samuel Barber. Meus receios sobre essa parte final felizmente nao se confirmaram, graças a Mitropulos e a Samuel Barber. Mitropulos é um regente que tem um dominio sobre a orquestra, que chega quase à fascinação. Ele dirige tudo, vê tudo, a menor "nuance" é dosada, o jogo de timbres é equilibrado à sua vontade e a valorização da obra é total. Cheguei quase a me reconciliar com esse wagneriano e acromegalico poema sinfonico de Schoenberg.

"Meditação e Dança da Vingança de Medeia", de Samuel Barber foi de certo modo uma surpresa para mim. Eu não esperava um trabalho tão bem tecido sob o ponto de vista instrumental, contendo certa dose de originalidade. A execução dessa obra final obteve entusiasticos aplausos do publico. Mitropulos foi obrigado a voltar inumeras vezes ao palco e conceder finalmente um numero extraprograma.

FOLHA DA MANHÃ

ANO XXXIII — Assuntos Gerais — São Paulo — Domingo, 8 de junho de 1958 — N.º 10.465

A Filarmonica de Nova Iorque tocou no Anhangabaú

O povo compreendeu a musica classica e aplaudiu freneticamente Mitropoulos

30 mil paulistanos ouviram em silencio absoluto e aplaudiram com entusiasmo incomum — Ocupados o jardim do parque e o viaduto do Chá — Mitropoulos gostou do crioulinho trepado na estatua de Rui

Um sussurro que começou timido e sumido, tomou corpo e se fez audivel, varrendo todo o jardim do vale do Anhangabaú. Um espirro, uma tosse ou um pigarro, aqui ou ali, fora o bastante para que toda aquela multidão de cerca de 30 mil pessoas, compenetradas e embevecidas, exigisse silencio absoluto, enquanto no palanque improvisado, Dimitri Mitropoulos regia, de olhos cerrados, aquele extraordinario organismo uno, gerador de emoções, que se chama Orquestra Filarmonica de Nova Iorque.

Na tarde bonita de sabado, um espetaculo diferente e animador foi reservado para os paulistanos. Os que sempre consideraram a arte pura um privilegio dos ricos e da elite, tiveram ontem um desmentido cabal, naquela demonstração convincente de que o povo todo entende e sente as mensagens que nos foram legadas pelos maiores da musica. Comerciarios e operarios, estudantes modestos e homens analfabetos, brancos e pretos, brasileiros e estrangeiros, todos se curvaram ante o impacto descomunal da musica. Um espetaculo deveras comovente foi oferecido por aquela mole humana, constituida, em sua maior parte, de pessoas de condições modestas, que ouvia embevecida os acordes dos instrumentos privilegiados daqueles virtuoses, e aplaudia estrepitosamente, mãos no alto, numa ansia de dobrar o vigor de suas palmas, ao silenciarem os violinos e os oboes.

Um crioulinho esguio, prototipo do baliza de escola de samba, encarapitara-se no topo da estatua de Rui, e assistiu a todo o espetaculo entre mudo e compenetrado na audição, e explosivo e arrebatado nos aplausos.

Mitropoulos, ao se findar uma das execuções, virou-se em direção ao publico para agradecer os estrepitosos aplausos que recebia. Percebeu o entusiasmo do crioulinho e, querendo demonstrar-lhe simpatia, perguntou-lhe, apontando para Rui:

— «Quem é?»

A verdade é que o rapaz não conhecia Rui Barbosa. Não se constrangeu, porem, limitando-se a encolher os ombros e sorrir amarelo. Continuou aplaudindo com entusiasmo: conhecera naquele momento — confessou — alguem que tocava umas musicas diferentes das que ele conhecia, da Barra Funda. Mas ele «sentira» a grandiosidade da mensagem.

A DISPUTA DE UM CENTIMETRO DE CHÃO

Muito antes das 16 horas, o jardim do vale do Anhangabaú, ao lado do Municipal, começou a ser tomado pelos populares avidos de ouvir a orquestra. Quando o maestro levantou a sua batuta, para os primeiros acordes do «Don Juan», de Strauss, já o jardim e toda a balaustrada do viaduto do Chá, da praça Ramos até a Patriarca, estavam literalmente cheios. Havia gente nas janelas do C.B.I., nas sacadas do Municipal, no parapeito da via publica, na praça Ramos de Azevedo, nas escadarias do jardim, sobre as estatuas de Carlos Gomes, ao longe, e de Rui Barbosa, bem defronte ao palanque, nos postes de iluminação publica e na marquisa da Cruz Vermelha.

TODOS QUERIAM VER A ORQUESTRA

A reportagem das FOLHAS percorreu o jardim, espremida por entre a massa humana, e ouviu não poucas lamentações dos "baixinhos". Todos queriam ver a orquestra. Os que se haviam acomodado sobre a relva, sentados, foram obrigados a se levantar. Os fotografos não podiam trabalhar; conseguido o seu flagrante, eram empurrados pelos que se espichavam às suas costas. O silencio, entretanto, era absoluto, só interrompido pelo roncar enervante dos veiculos que trafegavam pela avenida do vale.

Havia um automovel estacionado numa das ladeiras do jardim. Em seu interior, um homem invalido, sem uma perna e com a outra ainda engessada. "Não podia perder — disse-nos — aquele espetaculo."

O mais absoluto respeito foi observado pelo povo, que demonstrou uma maturidade que se desconhecia. Quem não conhecia, sequer de nome, Brahms, nem nunca ouvira falar da "Heroica", de Beethoven; quem de musica, não foi até agora muito mais longe de Vila Isabel, admirou a musica erudita, empolgou-se com a execução precisa de algumas obras celebres, cujas notas, "jogadas" por sobre o jardim por um conjunto harmonioso, arrancou aplausos freneticos e conquistou um publico diferente e ignorado.

E, quando Mitropoulos, findo o espetaculo de uma hora, obrigou os virtuoses a tirarem novamente os seus instrumentos de suas caixas, para executar o hino nacional brasileiro, em que os violinos "cantaram" mais alto que os instrumentos de precisão, lagrimas correram por faces de humildes trabalhadores, por faces marcadas pelo sofrimento de uma vida sem o conforto espiritual da musica divina.

MITROPOULOS, UM "MONSTRO"

Dimitri Mitropoulos, batuta na mão, é verdadeiramente, um "monstro". Vive a musica que rege. Rega a musica com a batuta firme, com os dedos nervosos, com a cabeça calva, com a expressão marcante de seu rosto, com os braços, com as pernas, com o corpo todo. E uma orquestra obediente, sincronizada, faz exatamente aquilo que a sua sensibilidade sentiu.

Os arcos dos violinos sobem e descem como se tocados por uma só mão, percutem-se os bumbos e sopram-se as clarinetas e os fagotes num sincronismo perfeito, revelando, em seu todo, a grandiosidade da musica classica.

Suave na execução do "Don Juan", de Strauss, vigorosa, no "Caçador", de Weber, agradavel, no "Festival Academico", de Brams, empolgante na "Força do Destino", de Verdi, e melodiosa, nas "Três Danças", do Balé do "Chapéu de Três Bicos", de De Falla, a Orquestra Filarmonica de Nova Iorque, conquistou ontem, o homem da rua, de São Paulo. Fez do José da Silva, do Antonio de Sousa e da Maria Ferreira, pessoas mais felizes, dentro de um mundo aspero. Eles compreenderam a mensagem dos classicos.

CEIA PARA MITROPOULOS E OUTRAS NOTICIAS

* Melhor embaixada não poderia mandar os Estados Unidos, que a Orquestra Filarmonica de Nova York e o seu regente Dimitri Mitropoulos. Em alguns dias apenas de permanencia em São Paulo, os musicos americanos conseguiram atrair e conquistar simpatia e admiração. Demonstraram claramente, o alto nivel de cultura musical que já atingiu a America. Mostrou uma faceta dos Estados Unidos que precisava ser mais divulgada, mais explorada, mostrada ao mundo, ao vivo, como foi no "Municipal". Só um grande povo, só uma grande cidade — não só do ponto de vista material — pode possuir uma orquestra de tanta classe, tão perfeita. Uma orquestra que não é, absolutamente, apenas reflexo de um bem-estar material, da capacidade de importar professores graças ao péso de dollars. É preciso lembrar que a Filarmonica é uma das cinco mais antigas orquestras do mundo, seu prestigio não vem das ultimas decadas, nem depois da Guerra. É uma tradição de Nova York, hoje em dia um dos centros de cultura musical de todo o mundo.

Dimitri Mitropoulos conquistou São Paulo, todos os que tiveram a oportunidade rara de vê-lo no "Municipal" e todos os que acompanharam seus movimentos, reproduzidos na transmissão da TV, numa das suas maiores e mais felizes noites. Um regente apaixonante, preciso em todos os instantes, comandando realmente a orquestra, impregnando a execução de sua personalidade forte.

Na pessoa de Dimitri Mitropoulos, a Orquestra Filarmonica de Nova York foi homenageada pelos artistas que são a pianista Jocy de Carvalho e o maestro Eleazar de Carvalho, na residencia do senhor e senhora Jaime Carvalho de Oliveira.

* Dona Jandira é, por vocação e temperamento, sincera amiga, simpatica "hostess" de artistas. Recordava ela, ainda na noite da recepção ao maestro Mitropoulus, que a primeira recepção que deu em sua casa, depois de seu casamento, foi dedicada a ilustre pianista brasileira, já desaparecida. Durante muitos e muitos anos, todos os artistas encontram sempre aberta a porta de sua casa, centro de reunião de intelectuais e musicos. Foi neste ambiente que cresceu e viveu sua filha, dona Jocy, atualmente senhora Eleazar de Carvalho, hoje em dia uma concertista que já ganhou nome, nos Estados Unidos e na Europa.

* Depois da sua segunda apresentação em São Paulo, Mitropoulos visitou a casa simpatica da avenida Euzebio Queirós Mattoso. Ele, que é arredio às reuniões sociais, permaneceu durante algumas horas, na casa do casal Jaime Carvalho de Oliveira. Disse que sentia como se estivesse em sua casa.

* Uma ceia gostosa foi servida. Um creme de palmito que Mitropoulos repetiu duas vezes. Depois, gostoso peru, um perfil de paladar americano, muitos outros pratos.

* Mitropoulos nunca havia visto, nem experimentado fios de ovos. Adorou. E ninguem conseguiu convencê-lo que o nome daquilo não era "braziliam spaghetti"...

* O maestro Eleazar de Carvalho fez a saudação ao ilustre regente. Mitropoulos respondeu em italiano (e um autentico poliglota, falando em inglês, grego, francês, italiano e já dizendo algumas palavras em português), fazendo um apelo aos presentes: São Paulo precisa possuir uma orquestra como a que os Estados Unidos mandou para esta visita de boa vizinhança. "Pouca coisa vos falta: já São Paulo tem o maestro Eleazar de Carvalho, que poderá organizar e reger uma orquestra que em pouco tempo teria a mesma qualidade da Filarmonica de Nova York. É apenas preciso alguns benemeritos, que permitam o contrato de profissionais autenticos".

* No final da noite, apareceu um "cake" enorme, que representava bem o espirito da reunião: duas bandeirinhas feitas de açucar, com as cores das bandeiras brasileira e americana.

* O caderninho funcionou: senhor consul geral dos Estados Unidos e senhor Ricahrd Butrick, senhor consul geral de França e viscondessa de Lehelec, dona Bia e senhor Armando Simone Pereira, dona Marina e senhor Julio Cruz Lima, dona Dina e senhor Sebastião Portugal Gouvêa, dona Isolda e senhor José Armando Araujo de Almeida, dona Colita e senhor Marcelo Khiel, dona Olivia e senhor Adalberto Ferreira do Valle, dona Marilu e senhor Luiz Otavio Novais Pinto dona Ruth e senhor Dwight Herrik, dona Nenê e Luiz Merlici, dona Maria e Dante Viggiani, dona Zezé e senhor José Infante Vieira, dona Antonietta Rudge, dona Lenita Ribeiro, dona Celia Pereira Barreto, dona Dinorah de Carvalho, dona Odette Faria, dona Evangelina de Mattos Soumis, dona Ligia Ferreira Lopes, dona Stela Assumpção, dona Haydée Lee, dona Helena Rudge Muller, dona Cristine Stavrache, senhores José Bittencourt Muricy, Ruy Toledo Leite, Bernardo Segal, John Wort, Silas Egman, Wanderley Kampanhan...

PIANISTA E REGENTE — A simpatica e bonita d. Jocy de Carvalho e o regente Dimitri Mitropoulos

* A jovem senhorita Jocely Carvalho de Oliveira tambem ajudou, tomando conta da "brotolandia" presente.

* Muito decorativo o efeito dos candelabros com velas coloridas, na decoração da sala de jantar.

* Dimitri Mitropoulos usava casaca, mas camisa e colarinho moles. "Senão não posso reger", explicou.

* Dimitri Mitropoulos elogiou, para o colunista, a beleza de dona Marilu Novais Pinto. "Uma senhora jovem não deve usar maquillage. Dona Marilu é um exemplo. Ela é tão bonita quanto a sinfonia".

SÃO PAULO, BRASIL — ACONTECIMENTO ARTISTICO DO ANO — Diário da Noite 1a. — 6-4-/1958

Transmitirá amanhã a TV-3, do Municipal, o concerto da Filarmonica de Nova York

O Canal 3 e a Radio Difusora transmitirão em conjunto, dia 5, diretamente do Teatro Municipal, a primeira apresentação de gala da famosa Filarmonica de Nova York.

Sob a regencia do maestro Dimitri Mitropoulos, a Filarmonica de Nova York executará o seguinte programa: 1.a parte — Camargo Guarnieri: "Prologo e Fuga"; Johannes Brahms: "Sinfonia n. 3 em Fá Maior, opus 90 (Allegro con brio, andante, poco alegretto, allegro). 2.a parte — Arnold Schoenberg: "Noite transfigurada (para orquestra de cordas, opus 4); Samuel Barber: "Meditação e Dança da Vingança de Medea" (Opus 23-A).

A proposito dessa apresentação excepcional, é conveniente informar que a Filarmonica de Nova York, a organização sinfonica mais antiga nos Estados Unidos, acaba de terminar sua 116.a temporada. Através de sua historia, tem mantido sua supremacia no ramo, oferecendo ao publico os mais destacados compositores, diretores e solistas do mundo inteiro.

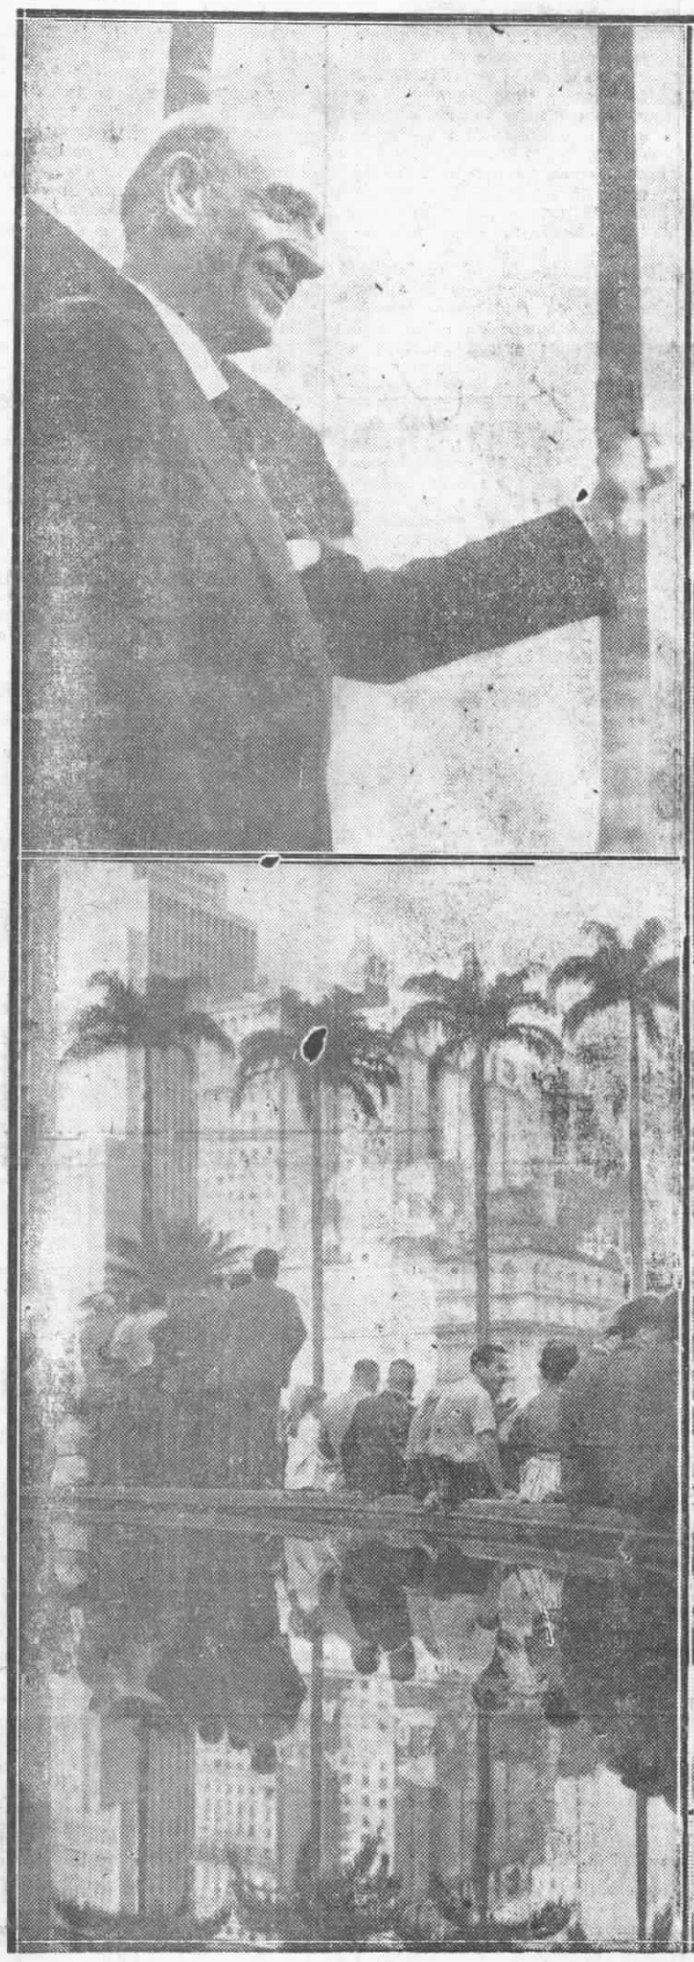
Todos os anos, a Filarmonica oferece mais de 120 concertos na cidade de Nova York, proporcionando à cidade mais eventos musicais que qualquer outra orquestra do país. Também conta com maiores ganhos em suas temporadas do que qualquer outra orquestra nos Estados Unidos.

Calcula-se que quinze milhões de pessoas ouvem todos os meses os concertos que transmite a cadeia radiofonica da CBS, que na ultima temporada terminou seu vigesimo oitavo ano consecutivo de oferecer os concertos da Filarmonica. Muitos mais ouvem a Filarmonica em funções regulares no Carnegie Hall a preços mais baixos por acordo especial.

Sobre o maestro Dimitri Mitropoulos, podemos informar que é grego de nascimento, e atualmente, cidadão dos Estados Unidos. Uma reputação brilhante na Europa precedeu seu debut nos Estados Unidos em 1936 com a Sinfonica de Boston. De 1937 até a primavera de 1949, suas atividades se encontraram no Meio Oeste onde era diretor musical da Sinfonica de Minneapolis, porém com outras orquestras importantes prontamente assegurou-se o favor de um publico devoto de costa a costa.

Durante a temporada de 1940-1941 se apresentou pela primeira vez com a Filarmonica de Nova York. Nos anos subsequentes, aumentou sua reputação musical e popularidade apresentando-se regularmente com a Orquestra. Foi nomeado diretor da Orquestra na temporada de 1950-1951 até a de 1956-1957. Na temporada de 1957-1958 compartilhou com Leonard Bernstein nos deveres inerentes ao diretor em propriedade da Filarmonica.

Sem duvida alguma, o espetaculo de amanhã, que terá inicio às 21 horas, está fadado a constituir-se no acontecimento musical do ano.



— Esta é a famosa Filarmonica de Nova York, regida pelo maestro Dimitri Mitroupoulos.

FILARMONICA DE NOVA YORK

A exibição do celebre conjunto no Vale do Anhangabaú

Em nenhum momento de nossa vida cultural, São Paulo deu mostras de tanto vigor artistico como quando, agora, se exibiu, na esplanada do Teatro Municipal, a estupenda Filarmonica de Nova York, dirigida por Dimitri Mitropoulos. Anunciado, horas antes, que o conjunto norte-americano se exibiria no centro da cidade, ao ar livre, no sabado à tarde, não se poderia esperar, jamais, que a afluencia fosse das maiores. Mas, quando chegou a hora da apresentação, havia no local um numero superior a trinta mil pessoas que com ansiedade incontida esperavam o momento de ver e ouvir o notavel conjunto de Nova York. Foi realmente comovedor, logo ao inicio da execução, ver aquela massa imensa de povo entrar num grave silencio para ouvir o celebre conjunto americano. Mas, orquestra não é banda, e, não havendo sido dado adequado local a essa atraente exibição, o efeito foi muito prejudicado, como era facilimo de prever. Musica orquestral na praça publica, através de comuns alto-falantes, perturbada incessantemente pelo barulho do trafego, não pode evidentemente exprimir grande coisa. A iniciativa que haveria marcado epoca na vida musical de São Paulo apenas teve o merito de demonstrar, de um lado, o grande interesse popular pela arte, e, por outro, a grande incapacidade dos nossos organizadores! No clichê aspectos da grande reunião popular no Anhangabaú, com o mastro Mitropoulos.

MITROPOULOS COM A FILARMONICA DE NOVA YORK

ORLANDO NASI

O acontecimento dêstes dias em S. Paulo, com a visita da Filarmônica de Nova York, já tinha por certo bem assegurado o seu efeito artistico sensacional, por se tratar da orquestra de mais longa e prestigiosa tradição nos Estados Unidos e de um dos mais famosos conjuntos sinfônicos atuais em todo o mundo. Mas avultou sobremaneira e até surpreendentemente êsse aspecto, pelo motivo da presença do maestro Dimitri Mitropoulos e as renovadas ocasiões da sua regencia.

Não foi só a célebre orquestra a razão óbvia do enorme interêsse em volta das audições, e é claro que se podiam prever em excepcional extensão uma afluência magnifica de público ao Teatro Municipal, uma total euforia dentro da sala, o que veio nos três dias culminar em estupendas aclamações fazendo ressoar o triunfo memoravel da visita da Filarmônica. Simultaneo com a orquestra, mas sobrepondo-se pessoalmente na sensação entre o auditório, o regente centralizou, de forma especial as atenções, o entusiasmo e a simpatia gerais. Assim, na realidade, dois vigorosos centros de atração e de sucesso artistico impressionante se verificaram durante as "soirées" devidas à grata iniciativa do Departamento do Estado americano: a orquestra, com tôdas as condições que a classificam como uma das máximas entre Estados Unidos e Europa, e Mitropoulos, com as caracteristicas de sua vibrante individualidade de musicista completo, de diretor nato, de artista sensibilissimo.

A arte dêste maestro, a sua invulgar qualidade de regente não nos eram desconhecidas, recordando-se as gravações, onde se pode constatar a sua ciência de diretor. Entretanto a presença física de Mitropoulos é importantissima, mais do que se deve crer com outros grandes maestros, porque é para o ouvinte uma concatenção vísivel instantânea da expressividade, da aderência do interprete com a obra executada. O público já não apenas a orquestra, colhe sùbitamente as minúcias e as grandezas da execução de Mitropoulos. Aquela, por norma, nos diferentes gráus de sua sonoridade, precisão, ímpeto, destaque de ritmos, de nuanças, e na imponência dos seus "tutti" reflete o valor do maestro e a sua capacidade para saber o que quer e conseguir o propósito na execução. Mas êstes fatôres, com uma Filarmônica de Nova York, tanto mais sob programas longamente previstos e apresentados, foram obtidos nos ensaios; durante os concertos cessam quase de ser causa e são simplesmente efeitos. Para o conjunto, pois, a presença do maestro é só o comando vibrante que recorda e impõe os valôres já amplamente elaborados. No concerto, porém, depois, uma relação bem una, que pode importar muitissimo na receptividade, na compreensão e no prazer motivados pela obra, é a do maestro, já não tanto para com a orquestra quanto para com o público.

Êste caráterístico é um dos relêvos da arte de dirigir do maestro Dimitri Mitropoulos. A maneira como êle estabelece a comunicabilidade da execução com o ouvinte, ou então, o traço-de-união indissolúvel que Mitropoulos logra produzir através da sua própria vibração emotiva, sob o domínio da música, as exteriorizações das figuras mímicas da sua regência, formam um aspecto da direção da orquestra a cujo fascinio o público não pode senão se submeter, com largo benefício para o seu prazer musical.

Há muitos anos, na Orquestra Sinfônica de São Paulo, tivemos no maestro Lamberto Baldi um diretor desta mesma classe de temperamento, como atualmente Edoardo de Guarnieri, eletrizando-se no seu intento de arrancar da orquestra o conteúdo divisado na partitura. Mas Baldi ligava-se mais que tudo ao grupo sob seu comando, com o pensamento apenas numa execução quanto possível ideal, enquantro Mitropoulos usa em verdade para seu próprio prazer artistico a chance de ter entre as mãos um instrumental possante e docil. Não existe afetação nos gestos do regente, é sincera e natural a sua mímica, ela é uma exigência do seu temperamento vibratil, com o que afinal se compraz amplamente o ouvinte, continuamente advertido do sentimento da interpretação. A verdade é que o auditório manifestou inteira receptividade a tudo o que a Filarmônica tocou, inclusive ao Schoenberg — que bem longe do dodecafônico se revela absolutamente tonal e romântico na "Noite Transfigurada".

Se nos perguntassem dos momentos culminantes nas execuções desta curtissima temporada responderiamos que foram todos os seus números no programa e mais os extras! Mas mesmo assim prevaleceram, a nosso juizo, a "Noite Transfigurada" (ponto em que começamos a ouvir o primeiro programa); a Sinfonia de Beethoven e a ouverture de "La Forza del Destino" como extra, no segundo; e no terceiro, o "Don Juan" de Strauss, onde o climax de uma portentosa intensidade de tôda a orquestra, Mitropoulos rompe-o, antes da peroração, numa estacada fenomenal, um golpe de gelar o sangue, quando ainda estava sôbre o alto da nossa cabeça a onda calorosa de sons do virtuosismo straussiano. Ainda dêsse último concerto, o maior da série, ficou-nos gravada a esplendida "performance" da 5.a Sinfonia de Prokofieff. Quem sabe quando se terá outra que se pareça!

"SHOW" DE MUSICA

BRILHOU A FILARMONICA NO VALE DO ANHANGABAÚ

APLAUDIU O POVO A APRESENTAÇÃO AO AR LIVRE DA FAMOSA ORQUESTRA DE NOVA YORK —— DIMITRI MITROPOULOS, O REGENTE: UM ESPETACULO A' PARTE —— CINCO PEÇAS EXECUTADAS —— POR QUE NÃO SE OFERECEM AO PUBLICO MAIS ESPETACULOS COMO ESSE A PREÇOS POPULARES? —— TRABALHADOR E' FILHO DE DEUS E GOSTA TAMBEM DA BOA MUSICA —— (LEIA TEXTO NA PAGINA 13)

Multidão incalculavel se aglomerou no Vale do Anhangabau' para assistir ao grande concerto popular. Essas criaturinhas inocentes vitimas da paralisia infantil aplaudiram tambem o renomado conjunto orquestral

Cumprindo contrato com o publico paulista, sabado ultimo, a Orquestra Filarmonica de Nova York apresentou-se em concerto popular no Vale do Anhangabau', sob a condução do maestro Dmitri Mitropoulos.

A reunião artistica esteve bastante concorrida, vindo o povo todo á praça para ver de perto o festejado Conjunto Orquestral da cidade novaiorquina.

ORQUESTRA BRILHANTE

A Orquestra Filarmonica de Nova Iorque deu um espetaculo simplesmente grandioso, mostrando seus grandes predicados. Deu mesmo um «show» de musica erudita, deixando todo o publico paulistano extasiado. As musicas, muito bem interpretadas, foram ouvidas com atenção pelo povo. Um grande espetaculo, sem duvida alguma.

DMITRI MITROPOULOS: ESPETACULO A' PARTE

Os numeros executados foram regidos pelo grande maestro grego, radicado nos Estados Unidos, Dmitri Mitropoulos. Grande regente incontestavelmente. Deu ele um espetaculo á parte. «E' todo musica", conforme expressão de populares, que assistiram extasiados á programação apresentada. Dmitri Mitropoulos mostrou ao publico de S. Paulo o quanto compreende a musica e o quanto a ama.

O PUBLICO

Imensa multidão se aglomerou no parque do vale do Anhangabau' para assistir ao presente que nos ofereceu a consagrada orquestra novaiorquina. Acotovelaram-se como podiam para ver de perto o grande maestro Mitropoulos e os membros da Orquestra Filarmonica.

Por todo lado, onde fosse possivel haver alguem, lá encontrava-mos uma pessoa estatica impressionada com o espetaculo. Havia-as em cima de estatuas, arvores, viadutos. Sentados, de pé, agachados ajoelhados, assistiam á execução das peças primorosamente escolhidas para a apresentação.

E não regatearam aplausos. Foram os membros da grandiosa orquestra ovacionados calorosamente. Foram bem pagos pela grandiosa demonstração que proporcionaram ao povo.

AS PEÇAS EXECUTADAS

Foram os numeros apresentados, cuidadosamente escolhidos, para agradar a todos os que se aglomeravam no Vale do Anhangabau'. Assim, não foram apresentadas obras pesadas, tal como sucedeu no dia da estreia, no Teatro Municipal.

O primeiro numero executado foi a «Abertura da opera Don Juan», de Richard Strauss. Primorosamente executada, a obra do compositor alemão recebeu muitos aplausos.

O segundo numero foi a Abertura da opera «Der Freichutz», de von Weber.

Em seguida tivemos a «Abertura da Festa Academica», de Brahms.

A abertura da opera «La Forza del Destino», do genial compositor italiano, Giuseppe Verdi, foi a execução que mais aplausos recebeu. Executada, com toda a maestria, impressionou profundamente o publico, por se tratar de uma peça bastante conhecida.

Teria sido essa a ultima apresentação; mas como os aplausos foram muitos, resolveu Demitri Mitropoulos executar, como ultimo numero, a abertura «Chapeu de Três Bicos», do compositor espanhol De Falla.

Terminou assim o espetaculo, apesar de querer o publico mais um numero, o que não aconteceu, devido ao adiantado da hora.

O ESPETACULO EM SI

Iniciou-se a apresentação, com a magistral execução dos hnos brasileiro e norte-americano. Foi tle encerrado, ainda uma vez, com o Hino Nacional Brasileiro.

Agradou, de maneira geral, a execução da Orquestra Filarmonica de Nova York. Bom maestro, bom conjunto de professores e musicos. O povo saiu satisfeito com o espetaculo.

Note-se como curiosidade, o fato de terem os membros da orquestra tirado fotos do povo, que se aglomerava no vale. Quantas vezes a execução permitia, tantas os musicos se aproveitavam para bater fotografias.

O maestro agradou a todos pela sua expontanea simpatia, demonstrando um espirito alegre e jovial, apesar da idade já avançada.

APELO

Fazemos agora um apelo á Prefeitura e ao governo estadual, para que se repita sempre demonstrações artisticas como aquela que assistimos no ultimo sabado. Tambem o povo gosta da boa musica. Mas com os preços exorbitantes que se cobram nos teatros, para se assistir a um espetaculo puro, não é possivel. A musica erudita tornou-se hoje artigo de luxo. Somente as pessoas de posse podem assistir a execuções classicas.

Nosso povo precisa de instrução artistica. Somos um povo que nada entendemos do que é belo. E tudo por que? Porque não é possivel assistir-se a um espetaculo puro, sem gastar-se uma exorbitancia.

Despedida da Filarmonica

Gazeta Esportiva 6-11-58

Sabado à tarde, uma tarde maravilhosa de luz, de côr, de euforia, o vale do Anhangabau' foi tomado por enorme multidão que ali acorrera para ouvir um concerto ao ar livre da Filarmonica de Nova York, sob a regencia de Dimitri Mitropoulos. Num galpão improvisado, de madeira, colocado na parte de baixo do parque, perto da rua Formosa e com a abertura voltada para cima, na direção do Teatro Municipal, alojou-se a orquestra, a principio incomodada pelos raios do sol poente. Houve saudações, uma delas pelo maestro Eleazar de Carvalho e depois, com a execução dos Hinos Nacionais do Brasil e dos Estados Unidos, iniciou-se o concerto. Não pudemos acompanhá-lo devido à inoperancia dos altifalantes ante as condições do local. Em outros tempos, a banda da Força Publica — a excelente banda do Antão — colocava-se na pequena esplanada hoje ocupada pelo monumento a Carlos Gomes (e por isso hoje inutilizavel) e o povo se dispunha pelas imediações, subindo e descendo as aleas laterais ou estacionado no plano horizontal ao nivel da banda. Não havia amplificadores, mas a audibilidade era suficiente para prender os ouvintes por duas horas amenas e recreativas. No concerto sinfonico em apreço os ouvintes menos proximos da orquestra ouviam por fragmentos trazidos pelo capricho da direção dos ventos. Em todo caso satisfez-se a curiosidade do publico, atingiu-se o objetivo de confraternização e proporcionou-se aos presentes uma distração diferente daquela que lhe é frequentemente oferecida em outro vale da cidade. No caso presente, os pés foram utilizados somente para elevar um pouco a cabeça dos baixinhos.

À noite, no Teatro Municipal, o ultimo concerto da serie programada para S. Paulo. No programa: Abertura de Freischutz, de Weber; Encontro, de Charles Turner; D. João, poema sinfonico de Strauss e Sinfonia n.o 5, em si bemol maior, op 100, de Prokofieff. Ambiente igual ao das noites anteriores: muita animação, muita cordialidade e muita gente, gente demais. Dimitri Mitropoulos, incrivelmente bem disposto, não obstante a sobrecarga de trabalho decorrente da ausencia de Bernstein, levou o bom humor ao ponto de indicar lugares ainda não ocupados a pessoas que se apinhavam, de pé, no corredor central da platéia. Em tudo a execução situou-se no mesmo alto nivel das noites anteriores, quer se trate da exposição melodica ou da valorização dos timbres, da gradação das intensidades ou da precisão nas entradas, do acerto das acentuações ou da correção fraseologica. A abertura de Weber decorreu clarissima, num verdadeiro encanto para os ouvidos. A peça do norte-americano Charles Turner — intitulada Encontro por ser bitematica e por se darem encontros entre os temas no decorrer da composição — interessou pela natureza da construção dialogada, pelo carater agradavelmente moderno da harmonia e pela orquestração. É uma peça que, sem pretender ser uma grande obra, soa bem e é agradavel de ouvir. À interpretação expressiva e cantante de Strauss seguiu-se a não menos excelente versão da Sinfonia de Prokofieff, em que foram valorizados o espirito da tematica do autor, a vida interior que sustenta o desenvolver ritmico e melodico de trechos por vezes longos, e esta "limpeza" de orquestração, analoga à palheta "limpa" de certos pintores, que é uma das caracteristicas do celebre compositor sovietico.

O concerto alcançou exito identico ao dos anteriores e mais uma vez houve uma peça extraprograma. O publico era ainda excessivamente numeroso. O atropelo, porém, foi menor e atenuada a violencia; pelo menos a nenhuma pessoa foi subtraida a cadeira em que se sentava... Assim, e se outra tivesse sido a causa dos tumultos anteriores, estavamos quase a concordar com os gregos quanto à suavização dos costumes pela musica. Tudo isso, porém, faz parte dos grandes acontecimentos e servirá para marcar mais fundamente a lembrança da visita da notavel orquestra norte-americana e a presença dessa rara figura humana que é Dimitri Mitropoulos.

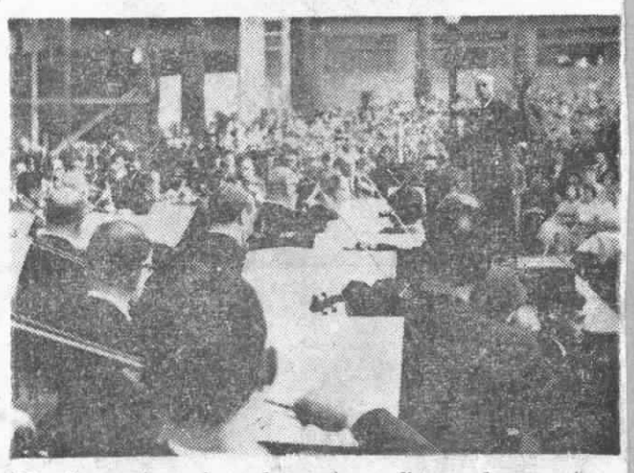
FOLHA DE MUSICA RICARDI

FILARMONICA DE NOVA IORQUE

Com dois esplendidos concertos, realizados sexta-feira e sabado ultimos, a Orquestra Filarmonica de Nova Iorque encerrou a sua curta mas brilhante e atuante permanencia nesta capital, em boa hora empresada por Dante Viggiani, em cooperação com a Associação Internacional de Cultura dos Estados Unidos e sob os auspicios da American National Theatre and Academy. Circunstancia ocasional — molestia do consagrado regente Leonard Bernstein — importou em ficar a direção de todos os concertos, inclusive o que foi realizado para o publico no vale do Anhangabaú, a cargo do insigne Dimitri Mitropoulos, que esteve sempre cercado de ambiente de autentica e espontanea consagração delirante. Nos nossos longos anos de exercicio da critica musical, jamais vimos o nosso teatro maximo reunir tão avultada afluencia de publico, nem este manifestar tão vivo e ostensivo interesse e entusiasmo. Foram três noites de contagiante euforia coletiva, o que veio corresponder à altura a missão artistico-cultural e de confraternização de que foram dignos portadores o esplendido conjunto instrumental e os seus ilustres diretores.

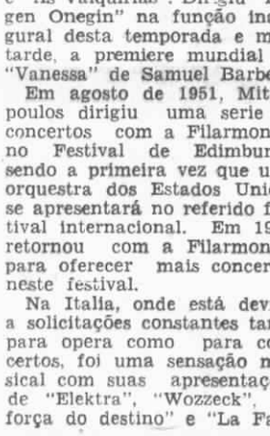


Aquele impedimento fortuito do maestro Bernstein, a quem estava indicada a regencia do concerto de sexta-feira, ocasionou subisse o estrado de direção o famoso Mitropoulos. O programa, tambem, foi integralmente alterado e, acreditamos, com vantagem para o publico que superlotava o teatro maximo. Inicialmente, tivemos a bonacheirona e alegre abertura "Festival Academico", de Brahms. Sem duvida, essa obra entusiasmará sempre muito mais os estudantes universitarios alemães, porque é uma tessitura viva de canções estudantis alemãs tradicionais — "Wir Hatten Gebaut ein Staettliches Haus", "Der Landesvater", "Fuchelied". Entretanto, até ignorando-se a sua origem, essa "ouverture" repousa o espirito e o alivia, pela sua bem humorada fluencia e a cordialidade dos seus acentos. Sem falar na sua solida, magistral escrita. A obra se caracteriza, antes de mais nada, por uma arte requintada de modulações e desenvolvimento, traço esse que ficou inteiramente sublinhado na esplendida execução do conjunto.

Ainda na 1.a parte, a 2.a Sinfonia, de Beethoven, obra escrita quando o filho de Bonn já sentia os primeiros sintomas da sua implacavel surdez. Entretanto, nada há nela que indique melancolia; pelo contrario, sente-se, ali, o repouso espiritual que se segue ao longo pranto; o arco-iris da tranquilidade que se forma no céu do espirito, aplacando todo tumulto passional. Estruturalmente, não é, como pretendem alguns, uma absoluta emancipação dos moldes mozartiano e haydiano, independencia que só aparece na "Heróica". Apesar disso, é evidente a evolução, comparada com a 1.a. Na 2.a temos um Beethoven mais personalizado: o "Larghetto", do 2.o movimento, se afasta decisivamente do tradicional "Adagio cantabile", para firmar-se numa linha melodica propria, aqui languidamente insinuante, mais alem dramaticamente pronunciada. A execução apresentada pelo famoso conjunto foi irrepreensivel: todas as incontaveis virtudes da partitura ficaram ressaltadas com absoluta valorização. A interpretação de Mitropoulos foi a de um grande artista, de fino gosto.

Na imensa 2.a Sinfonia, de Brahms, fundem-se na vastidão do edificio sonoro as vozes da natureza, o sentimento popular, as emoções do mestre, numa perfeita e maravilhosa amalgama. Essa sinfonia "em Ré menor", como suas irmãs, é toda impregnada de uma unica palpitação espiritual que lhe confere cunho unitario, pulsante de uma mesma vida expressiva. Polifonia e lirismo, tematica escultorea e efusão poetica, instrumentação complexa, tradição classica e psicologia individual compõem o acento dessa musica. Tanto na exposição do tema principal, sugestiva canção suave e insinuante, apresentada pelas trompas e madeiras, evocadora de uma aria popular veiculada por uma melodia corrente, como na celebre e soberba "Coda", cujo riquissimo material tematico é sabiamente explorado, sem turbação da sua limpida e cristalina clareza, e, ainda, no cantico sombrio do "Lento", a orquestra houve-se com integral exatidão de acentos e absoluta fusão sonora. Mitropoulos, interpretando aquela pagina, demonstrou comoção transbordante, comunicativa. O pormenor, ali, é de valor essencial. Obra complexa, tem de ser trabalhada com cinzel sutil, mas tambem com o escopro decidido e energico. E foi o que fez o ilustre regente. Depois, o delirio do publico, e a exigencia e o atendimento do indefectivel extra: "Forza del Destino", abertura, numa execução vibrante.

O concerto de sabado foi tambem regido por Mitropoulos. Novo retumbante sucesso e nova imensa multidão. Após a execução dos hinos nacional e norte-americano, a abertura de "Der Freischütz", de Weber. Aquela pagina viveu o seu nobre e grande romantismo, cuidada, nos menores detalhes, nas intenções mais fugazes, como pura jóia, sem que, entretanto, a estrutura formal sofresse o minimo deslise. Não podemos esquecer, ouvindo os trechos de irresistivel agilidade daquela "ouverture", que Weber foi contemporanco de Rossini. Bem dentro da tradição, soou, aligera, e palpitantemente romantica, aquela famosa pagina. "Encounter", de Charles Turner, jovem musicista norte-americano, revela uma extrema habilidade de composição, mas ainda não sedimentada, de modo a permitir uma sistematização de idéias. De qualquer modo é obra brilhante, que põe em foco quase todos os setores da orquestra. A execução cintilante interessou realmente. "Don Juan", o poema sinfonico celebre, tão vulgarizado pelo disco, veio a seguir. Richard Strauss foi um dos maiores cultores da musica de programa. Os poemas sinfonicos constituem o ponto alto da sua produção, "Vida de herói", "As aventuras de Tiel Eulenspiegel", "Don Quixote", "Morte e Transfiguração" e "Don Juan", são paginas do repertorio "standard" das orquestras. Mitropoulos atingiu, ali, à verdadeira grandiosidade, sem falsa e vacua enfase, sem efeitista teatralidade. Musical sempre, sempre dum perfeito gosto. Assim, aquela esplendida construção musical, com oposições violentas, onde a arte de arquitetar os sons atinge altissimo nivel, especie de canto de triunfo, teve o mais expressivo desempenho.



Encerrou o programa a 5.a Sinfonia, de Prokofieff, obra escrita sob a impressão do desalento, do desespero, do odio da luta que então dominava a Russia. E é tudo isso que transparece nos seus quatro movimentos, de uma escritura vigorosa, ostentando uma orquestração variada como timbre e rica de sonoridades, aqui e ali, "dechirantes", como dizem os franceses, porque integrada na concepção da arte hodierna, porem, sem os excessos de inovações audazes. O "Andante" é indeciso, avança e recua em seus propositos, dentro, sempre, de um dinamismo crescente, altaneiro; o "Allegro marcato" pende mais para os moldes classicos, unindo desenhos que se desenvolvem com sutileza; o "Adagio" é o mais belo e significativo movimento, na sua constante exaltação, na qual descreve paixões desencadeadas, enquanto o "Allegro giocoso" tem a sublinhá-lo o final, de uma intensa vibração. Impossivel analisar, amiudadamente, a magnifica execução da orquestra e a fidelissima interpretação do ilustre regente. Exorbitariamos ainda mais os limites já superados para estas considerações. Fique o registro da excelencia da versão. No final, como sempre, o delirio do publico e a concessão de um extra.

No flagrante acima desponta a figura do maestro, parte da orquestra e ao fundo a grande massa popular. De mais espetaculos como esse é que o povo tem necessidade

«Flash» de Dimitri Mitropoulos

Dimitri Mitropoulos é grego de nascimento e atualmente cidadão dos Estados Unidos. Uma reputação brilhante na Europa precedeu seu debut nos Estados Unidos em 1936 com a Sinfonia de Boston. Desde 1937 até a primavera de 1949, suas atividades se concentraram no Meio Oeste onde era Diretor Musical da Sinfonia de Minneapolis, porem com outras orquestras importantes prontamente lhe assegurou o favor de um publico devoto de costa a costa.

Durante a temporada de 1940-1941 se apresentou pela primeira vez com a Filarmonica de New York. Nos anos subsequentes, aumentou sua reputação musical e popularidade apresentando-se regularmente com a orquestra. Foi nomeado diretor da Orquestra na temporada de 1950-1951 sendo Diretor Musical desde a temporada de 1951-1952 até a de 1956-1957. Na temporada de 1957-1958 compartilhou com Leonard Bernstein nos deveres inerentes ao Diretor em Propriedade da Filarmonica.

Dimitri Mitropoulos nasceu em Atenas a 18 de fevereiro de 1896; fez seus primeiro estudos no Conservatorio de sua cidade natal, estudando com Ferrucio Busoni em Berlim. Durante certo numero de anos esteve a cargo da Sinfonica de Atenas como Diretor em Propriedade. Tendo grandes dotes de pianista virtuose e compositor de grande talento, ao começo de sua carreira lhe resultava dificil entregar-se por inteiro a uma só atividade. Mas com sua primeira experiencia como diretor de orquestra, deu-se conta que havia dado com sua verdadeira vocação.

Dimitri Mitropoulos é bem conhecido como um grande interprete de classicos, alem de ser um convencido paladino dos compositores modernos. Graças a seu interesse e devoção muitas obras modernas importantes foram apresentadas por primeira vez. Suas operas em concerto com a Filarmonica, incluindo "Elektra" de Strauss "L'Heure Espagnole" de Ravel. "Wozzeck" de Berg e "Christophe Colombe" de Milhaud, resultaram em grandes acontecimentos musicais. Nos ultimos anos introduziu em New York a Liebermann, assim como obras de um grande numero de compositores da musica norte-americana por meio de seus concertos com a Filarmonica.

Os amanes da opera nos Estados Unidos tiveram sua primeira oportunidade de ouvir Mitropoulos no Metropolitan Opera House de New York quando fez seu debut na temporada de 1954-1955. Entre as operas que regeu se encontram "Salomé", "Un balle in maschera", "Tosca", "Boris Godunov", "Carmen". "Madame Butterfly", "Manon Lescaut" e "As Valquirias". Dirigiu "Eugen Onegin" na função inaugural desta temporada e mais tarde, a premiere mundial de "Vanessa" de Samuel Barber.

Em agosto de 1951, Mitropoulos dirigiu uma serie de concertos com a Filarmonica no Festival de Edimburgo, sendo a primeira vez que uma orquestra dos Estados Unidos se apresentará no referido festival internacional. Em 1955, retornou com a Filarmonica para oferecer mais concertos neste festival.

Na Italia, onde está devido a solicitações constantes tanto para opera como para concertos, foi uma sensação musical com suas apresentações de "Elektra", "Wozzeck", "A força do destino" e "La Fanciulla del West". Durante o verão de 1954 dirigiu na Alemanha e na Austria pela primeira vez em 1932, com um êxito grandioso em Munich, Colonia e Salzburgo. No verão e outono de 1956 dirigiu operas pela primeira vez em Salzburgo e Viena, "Don Giovanni" em Salzburgo e "Manon Lescaut" em Viena. Tambem dirigiu um grupo de concertos da Filarmonica de Viena em Salzburgo, Viena e Veneza. No verão passado (1957), "Elektra" no Festival de Salzburgo, "Ernani" em Florença e "Madame Butterfl" em Viena, alem de varios concertos em Viena, Milão, Salzburgo, Lucerna e Colonia.

Nos Estados unidos foi ouvido por um publico sempre crescente, havendo levado a Filarmonica ao sul em uma tournée de duas semanas em 1954. Realizou outra tournée de cinco semanas na primavera de 1955, que compartilhou com o falecido Guido Cantelli, levando a orquestra através do continente até a costa do Pacifico e Nordeste pela primeira vez desde 1921. Em abril de 1957, Mitropoulos levou a Filarmonica numa tournée de uma semana pelo Estado de New Rork terminando com um concerto em Toronto.

Em outubro de 1955, Mitropoulos regressou a sua terra natal pela primeira vez depois de uma ausencia de dezessete anos, no itinerario da primeira tournée da Filarmonica desde 1930. A estrepitosa benvinda que lhe deram seus compatriotas impôs a necessidade de oferecer outro concerto para poder comprazer aos atenienses que não puderam comprar localidades para os dois concertos anunciados previamente.

Alem da tournée atual da Filarmonica, Mitropoulos acaba de terminar varias semanas de excursão nos Estados Unidos e Canadá com o Metropolitan e mais tarde no verão levará a Filarmonica de Viena numa excursão a varias cidades europeias. Tambem dirigirá a Sinfonica de Israel em varias cidades israelitas, e dirigirá novamente no Festival de Salzburgo.

CALAZANS DE CAMPOS

Filarmonica de Nova Iorque

COM os concertos do Parque Anhangabaú e o do Municipal, no ultimo sabado, a Filarmonica de Nova Iorque encerrou suas apresentações em São Paulo. Pouco há que dizer-se do concerto ao ar livre, se não que ele demonstrou aos nossos visitantes como o povo brasileiro ama a boa musica e necessita dela. As peças foram as mesmas de programas anteriores. Mitropoulos e sua orquestra receberam os mais vivos aplausos. A noite, foi a despedida. "Der Freischuetz", a controvertida abertura de Weber, iniciou o programa. Controvertida, porque não se deseja muito situá-la como precursora da musica romantica, quando o é, verdadeiramente. Foi tocada com um brio inexcedivel e um brilho contagiante. Nós, no Brasil, que lutamos tanto com os instrumentos de sopro, ouvimos, deliciados, o ataque inicial das trompas, acompanhadas pelo clarinete (tocado este por um mestre de imenso valor) até que cede às cordas a iniciativa de exposição do tema. Todos os detalhes mais aparentemente insignificantes foram cuidados com mão de mestre, que mestres são esses homens que viajaram tanto para nos dar uma tão comovente demonstração de musica verdadeira, da que confirma a presença de Deus entre os homens. O "Encontro", do norte-americano Charles Turner, é uma peça sem pretensões e, monotematica; consegue não ser monotona, o que já é muito, numa obra que é incluida num programa eclético de certa envergadura. Mostrou que Turner não havia amadurecido quando a compôs. O ponto alto da noite foi, sem duvida, Strauss, com o poema sinfonico "Don Juan". Ouvimo-lo inumeras vezes à mão de gente consagrada. Mas nunca sentimos a deleitosa impressão de gloria e triunfo que o poema nos transmitiu, tratado por Mitropoulos, sem exaltações sonoras, a que tanto se presta, mas com adequada propriedade na sua estranha musicalidade, empregada nos contrastes de construção, tão de gosto de Strauss e de que "As Aventuras de Tiel Eulenspiegel" é a melhor amostra. Tudo soou brilhante, translucido, limpo, extraordinariamente belo. Coube a Prokofieff, com sua 5.a Sinfonia (Si Bemol Maior), encerrar o programa. Relembra mais o Krokofieff da "Sinfonia Classica", mais do que o moderno integrado nas estravagancias atuais. Mitropoulos soube apresentá-lo tal como é, sem nenhuma preocupação de fazer com que o publico brasileiro se interessasse mais do que devia. E assim aconteceu. E, como o auditorio se mantivesse na sala, sem nenhuma vontade de afastar-se desse extraordinario homem, que se chama Dimitri Mitropoulos, este, que já conhece a nossa plateia suficientemente, brindou-a com a notavel versão das "Vesperas Scicilianas", que a todos levou quase ao delirio. Muitos regentes famosos nos têm visitado. Poucos, entretanto, entraram tão profundamente no coração do nosso povo como ele.

Mitropoulos Sensibilizado Com o Publico Brasileiro

6-13-58 O Tempo

Milagre Tipicamente Norte-Americano a Orquestra Filarmonica de N. Iorque

«A existencia da Orquestra Filarmonica de Nova Iorque é um dos milagres que os Estados Unidos tornaram possiveis», declarou o maestro Dimitri Mitropoulos, diretor musical da Filarmonica, na entrevista coletiva que concedeu à imprensa desta Capital.

O maestro explicou que a Filarmonica não recebe normalmente nenhuma subvenção oficial, ficando o seu custeio inteiramente a cargo da iniciativa privada. Isso não ocorre em nenhuma outra parte do mundo, pois as grandes orquestras sinfonicas são sempre subvencionadas pelos governos dos respectivos paises.

O orçamento anual da Filarmonica de Nova Iorque é de um milhão e quinhentos mil dolares. A renda da bilheteria, dos discos e das audições no radio e televisão proporcionam-lhe 75% dessa importancia. O deficit normal de 250 mil dolares é coberto exclusivamente pela iniciativa particular, através de doações, contribuições mensais, clubes de amigos da Filarmonica e outras associações.

A SELEÇÃO DOS MUSICOS

Interrogado sobre os processos de seleção dos musicos da Filarmonica, o maestro Mitropoulos explicou que o unico criterio é o da qualidade não havendo qualquer restrição de cor, origem ou credo.

Existem na orquestra musicos nascidos na Alemanha, Italia, França, em paises latino-americanos, sem qualquer favoritismo.

SENSIBILIZADO COM O BRASIL

Respondendo a uma pergunta sobre qual a maior emoção de sua carreira musical, o maestro Dimitri Mitropoulos respondeu que tem tido muitas oportunidades de se emocionar. Acentuou, porem, que uma das impressões que mais o sensibilizaram foi a recepção que teve no Brasil, cujo publico já conhecia como dos mais generosos do mundo, mas tambem dos mais exigentes.

Falando dos musicos brasileiros, ressaltou o valor de compositores como Vila Lobos e Camargo Guarnieri, conhecidos universalmente, e de regentes como Eleazar de Carvalho, cujo talento é reconhecido em todo o mundo.

PREFERENCIAS

Interrogado sobre suas preferencias musicais, o maestro declarou que como regente não fazia distinções, indo da musica sinfonica à opera, com igual satisfação.

Entre os compositores modernos, vivos, lembrou um nome: Stravinski.

Disse, ainda, que no começo de sua carreira dedicou-se à composição, tendo escrito musica dodecafonica, ou atonal.

A EXCURSÃO DA ORQUESTRA

Nesta excursão que está realizando pela America Latina, e que teve inicio na cidade do Panamá, em 29 de abril ultimo, a Filarmonica executará um total de 44 concertos, em cerca de 30 cidades de 12 paises.

A excursão está sendo realizada sob os auspicios do Programa Internacional Especial do Presidente dos Estados Unidos para apresentações culturais.

Exito da Filarmonica de Nova York, no Rio

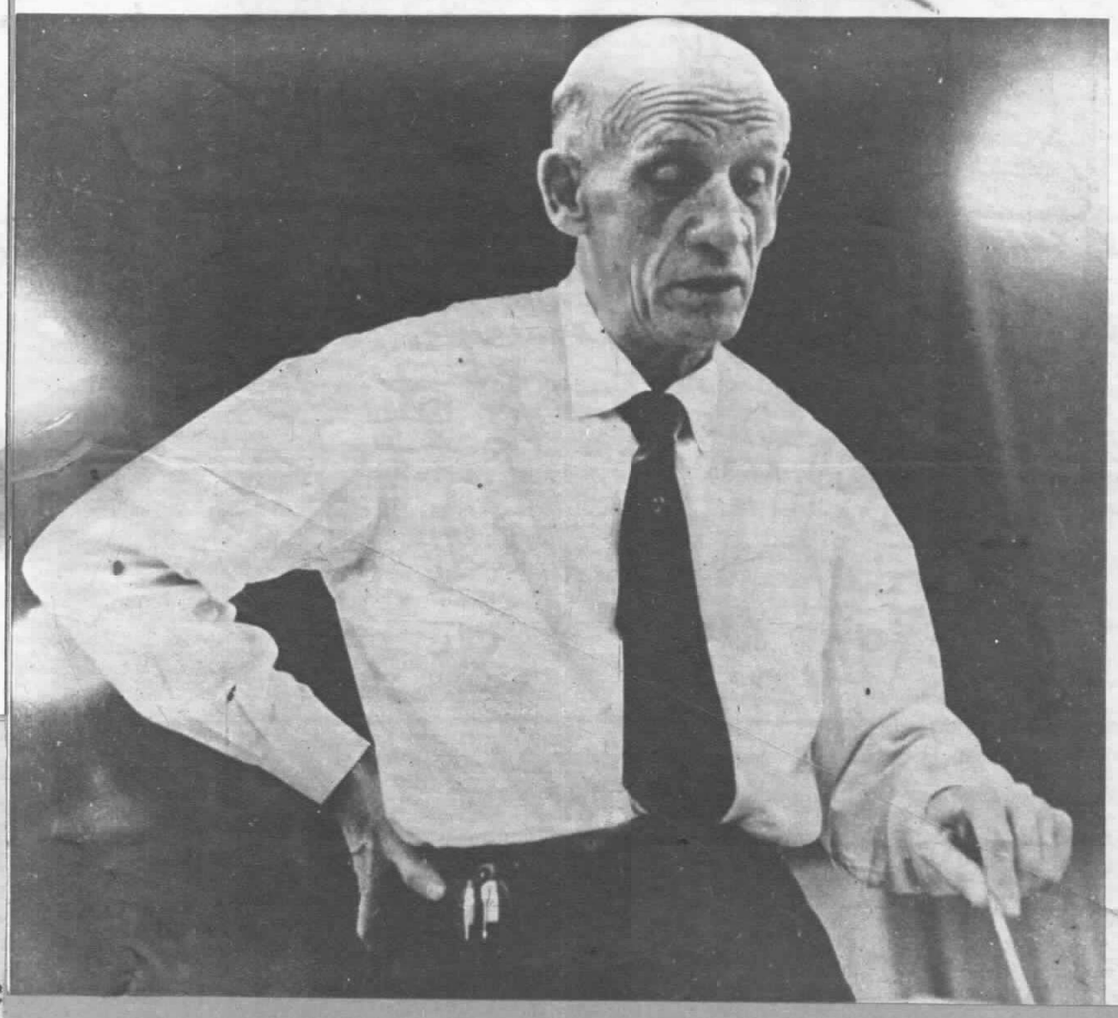
6-12-58 O Estado de S. Paulo

Apresentando-se dia 9 no Teatro Municipal do Rio de Janeiro, sob a regencia do maestro Dimitri Mitropoulos, a Orquestra Filarmonica de Nova York alcançou pleno exito. A platéia, que lotava completamente o teatro, aplaudiu de pé, demoradamente, o regente e os musicos, exigindo numero extra. Do programa fez parte uma composição de musico brasileiro, "Prologo e Fuga", de Camargo Guarnieri, cuja execução emocionou o publico.

Os outros concertos foram realizados no dia 10, também no Teatro Municipal, e no dia 11, no Maracanãzinho, a preços populares, em beneficio das "Pioneiras Sociais". Nesta ultima apresentação, a Filarmonica executou "Amanhecer numa Floresta Tropical", de Villa-Lobos.

Para todos os concertos da Orquestra, no Rio de Janeiro, São Paulo e Porto Alegre, esgotaram-se os bilhetes com grande antecedencia, tal o interesse despertado pelas audições do conjunto.

A Filarmonica de Nova York realiza atualmente uma excursão pela America Latina, sob os auspicios do Programa Internacional Especial para Apresentações Culturais do Presidente dos Estados Unidos e do Departamento de Estado.



Do Brasil, a Filarmonica viajou para o Mexico, retornando em seguida aos Estados Unidos.

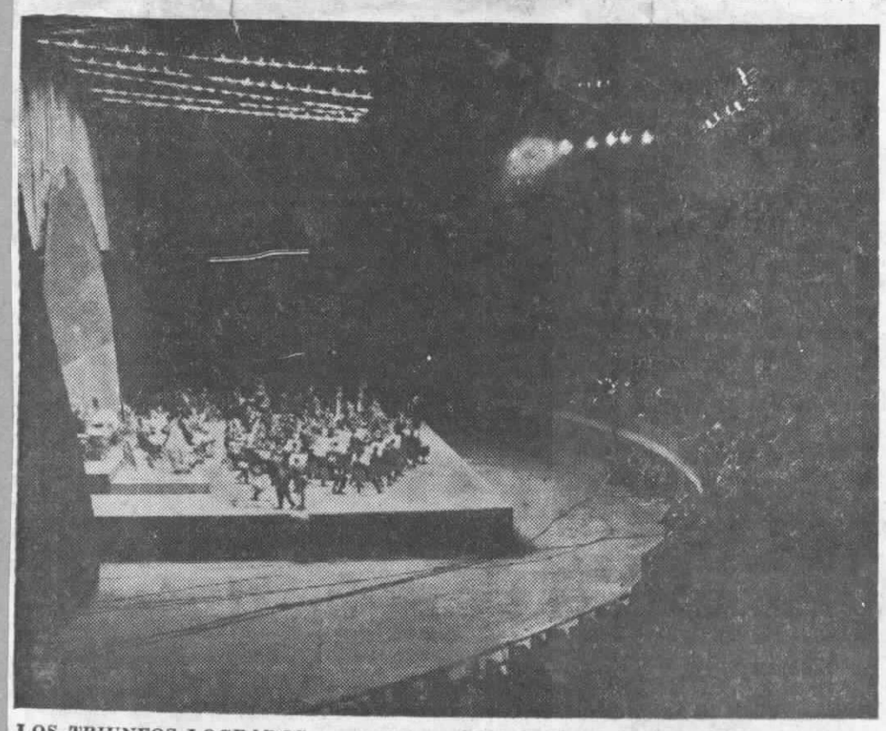
SENSIBILIZADO COM O BRASIL

O maestro Dimitri Mitropoulos afirmou que tem tido muitas oportunidades de se emocionar. Acentuou, porém, que uma das impressões que mais o sensibilizaram foi a recepção que teve no Brasil, cujo publico já conhecia como dos mais generosos do mundo, mas também dos mais exigentes.

Falando dos musicos brasileiros, ressaltou o valor de compositores como Villa-Lobos e Camargo Guarnieri, conhecidos universalmente, e de regentes como Eleazar de Carvalho, cujo talento é reconhecido em todo o mundo.

"...Es poseedor de una escuela muy europea..."

Según nuestro criterio y también quizás por las condiciones en que escuchamos el concierto del domingo (en gradas donde el sonido se oía opaco y obscuro, por falta de acústica en el Auditorum) nos pareció que la Orquesta Filarmónica de Nueva York, suena mejor cuando la dirige Bernstein, pues este logra una perfecta sincronización en las diferentes secciones de la Orquesta, él extrae una preciosa gama de colores musicales que al público le fascinan, la orquesta por razones de acústica como antes decíamos la oímos opaca, Dimitri Mitropoulos, es poseedor de una Escuela muy Europea, sus movimientos en el podium son sencillos, calmados, elegantes, él se profundiza más en los temas orquestales logrando así, ejecuciones sobrias; así su programa lo comenzó con la Obertura "El franco tirador" de Weber, después oímos una segunda Sinfonía de Beethoven que poco nos satisfizo.



La segunda parte del programa se cambió ese día tocándose en lugar de "Noche transfigurada" de Schoenberg la Obertura de la Opera "La Fuerza del Destino" de Verdi, esta obra llena de una gran sensibilidad produjo los aplausos del público; de Barber, escuchamos: "Meditación y Danza de la Venganza de Medea" Opus 23-A ésta es la derivación de una partitura dedicada a la Bailarina Martha Graham, en esta obra la pieza aumenta gradualmente en intensidad hasta culminar con la frenética "Danza de la Venganza de Medea" la hechicera que descendía del Dios del Sol.

En esta ocasión el público premió también con grandes ovaciones al Director y a la Orquesta ofreciéndonos como número extra la Danza final del "Sombrero de Tres Picos" de De Falla, produciendo un enorme impacto en las trece mil almas que se encontraban esa mañana en el Auditorium Nacional.

Así nuevamente con la visita de este Grupo Filarmónico en nuestro México, fructifican más las relaciones de dos países, por medio de la música, que atraviesa las fronteras y une a los hombres para cantar todos un himno de paz.

LA MUSICA AMISTOSO INSTRUMENTO DIPLOMATICO

LOS TRIUNFOS LOGRADOS por la Filarmónica de Nueva York en Iberoamérica, no son sino resultados de su invariable política de estímulo a los compositores y solistas de los paises al sur del rio Bravo.

Resultados más efectivos que una gran conferencia internacional o una sistemática campaña de propaganda, en lo que se refiere al estrechamiento de los lazos amistosos entre los Estados Unidos e Hispanomérica, obtuvo la Filarmónica de Nueva York en su primera gira por Centro y Sudamérica. Cuarenta y cuatro conciertos en más de 30 ciudades de 12 países y con un auditorio de más de 2 millones de personas, fueron la base de esta labor de acercamiento.

Los conductores de este conjunto —uno de los 5 más antiguos del mundo— Bernstein y Mitropoulos, al regresar a su país, han pregonado a los cuatro vientos que la acogida que se les dispensó en Iberoamérica, superó a todos sus cálculos.

En realidad, la Filarmónica no ha hecho sino comenzar a cosechar la siembra de estímulos que desde hace muchos años ha hecho en favor de compositores, solistas y obras musicales producidas al sur del rio Bravo.

Ha sido al través de este conjunto como el globo ha conocido las composiciones de los brasileños Camargo Guarnieri y Heitor Villa-Lobos, del cubano Pedro Sanjuán y de los argentinos Roberto Caamaño, Juan José Castro, Alberto Ginastera.

Posteriormente, la Filarmónica ha interpretado las Sinfonías India y Antígona y la Suite "H.P." de Chávez, y el poema sinfónico Sensemaya, del malogrado Silvestre Revueltas.

LAS OBRAS DE NUESTROS compositores Carlos Chávez y Silvestre Revueltas, han sido dadas a conocer en todo el mundo por la Filarmónica de Nueva York, que concluyó su fructífera gira con un concierto en el Auditorio Nacional.

A FILARMONICA DE NOVA YORK NO ANHANGABAU'

Diario Popular 6-2-1958

Constituiu espetáculo de extraordinária beleza o concerto realizado sábado último, na esplanada do Anhangabaú, pela Orquestra Filarmônica de Nova York, sob a regência do maestro Dimitri Mitropoulos. Depois de dois magnificos concertos no Teatro Municipal, cujas dependências ficaram literalmente lotadas, os dirigentes da temporada resolveram proporcionar ao povo uma audição especial, escolhendo para esse fim o Vale do Anhangabaú, onde foi improvisada uma concha acústica. O êxito foi absoluto. O maestro Mitropoulos, que já regêra os dois concertos anteriores, na ausência do maestro Leonard Bernstein, que adoeceu em Santiago do Chile, confirmou o seu virtuosismo e a Orquestra, sob sua batuta, proporcionou magnífica demonstração á massa humana que acorreu ao Anhangabaú. Na gravura, três aspectos fixados durante o concerto

CALAZANS DE CAMPOS

Segundo Concerto da Filarmonica

ERA grande, não há como negar, a curiosidade que se tinha de conhecer Leonard Bernstein. Alem disso, o programa que ele ia reger incluia peças em torno das quais havia nitido e justificado interesse. Quando Dimitri Mitropoulos se dirigiu para o estrado, entre palmas da viva admiração de que já havia se tornado credor entre nós, muita gente ficou admirada. O grego explicou, num português correto, quase que até sem sotaque algum, que seu companheiro ficara em Porto Alegre, doente. E pediu, humildemente, que aceitassem o seu trabalho, com outro programa, cuja sequencia anunciou. "Rei Morto, Rei Posto". A plateia sentiu, de imediato que, se não ia conhecer Bernstein, gozaria ainda uma vez mais do intraduzivel prazer de ver, sentir e aplaudir aquele mesmo Mitropoulos que já conhecia e admirava. Uma salva de palmas referendou tacitamente o novo estado de cousas. Brahms abriu a noite com sua "Abertura Para um Festival Academico". Trata-se de uma peça tipicamente alemã, com tudo o que de esquematico tem o notavel hamburguês. Pois Mitropoulos a fez soar com um tom gracioso e leve, fazendo ressaltar com pericia que diriamos matematica a inteligencia e o espirito da peça. Em seguida, a Segunda Sinfonia, de Beethoven, obra composta em 1802, numa fase aguda e triste da vida do Mestre. Pois nada disso contem a Sinfonia, que é graciosa e leve. Há uma intenção de fuga ao mozartiano da Primeira. Do seu primeiro movimento se poderia dizer que é o maximo em expressão num maximo de simplicidade. Os impetos marciais do segundo foram dosados por Mitropoulos com habilidade interpretativa verdadeiramente encantadora. As transições para o larghetto foram devidamente preparadas; a alegria quase infantil, o desejo de libertação aquilo que só Beethoven sabia dizer para que o mundo o julgasse às vezes alegre, foi explorado pela sensibilidade vigilante dos interpretes. O final, Allegro Molto, em que Beethoven começa a prenunciar o filosofo do romantismo musical do seculo XIX que haveria de eclodir dentro dele, pôs em evidencia o contraste que este movimento oferece aos estudiosos, em relação aos demais. Nada se perdeu do que a obra tem de fundamental, mesmo quando, aqui ou ali se pudesse, por um capricho tecnico de aluno estudioso, discordar do regente.

Na segunda parte da noite, a Segunda Sinfonia de Brahms. Este autor não dá margem a caprichos, não favorece devaneios. Sua estrutura é tão solida e inteiriça que tudo nela parece ter sido escrito para ser interpretado de uma unica forma. Mas não com Dimitri Mitropoulos. Sua cultura e sua sensibilidade se irmanaram, frente à peça, que teve uma versão, não apenas escorreita quanto à fidelidade ao original, mas brilhante e expresiva quanto às emoções que ela esconde e que precisam ser descobertas, a fim de serem transmitidas. Este, o triplice trabalho de um regente que tenha cultura e honestidade artistica. E foi o que se viu e sentiu através dessa versão magnifica; os metais flexiveis, as cordas lançando a base da musicalidade intrinseca na peça, embora por vezes escondida, tudo isso apurado com esmero beneditino, fez com que, ao terminar, Mitropoulos fosse aplaudido de pé, por muita gente que tinha, tambem, as mãos crispadas e os olhos umidos. Como numero extra (a plateia não se mostrava nada disposta a abandonar Mitropoulos tão facilmente), foi executada a abertura da "Força do Destino". O teatro só não veio abaixo porque é solido mesmo. Caso contrario não aguentaria as clamorosas e irritantes irregularidades na concessão de entradas acima da lotação, o que provocou cenas desagradaveis de gente sem acomodação a importunar, a atropelar, a fazer barulho, enfim, a dar pessima amostra da nossa educação. Quanto ao estado sanitario do Teatro Municipal, é preciso que se diga que ali não se cumpre a lei referente à desinfecção da casa, como, de resto, em nenhum outro teatro ou cinema da "Capital artistica". A musica da Filarmonica de Nova Iorque, a presença amavel e sorridente e comunicativa desse extraordinario regente que é Dimitri Mitropoulos, fizeram com que o povo se esquecesse de tudo o mais. Essa gente conhece — e bem — a arte de tornar o povo feliz por algumas horas. Que Deus as abençoe por isso.

Triunfal Gira de la Filarmónica de N. Y.

NUEVA YORK, 16 de junio. (AFP).—El director de la Orquesta Filarmónica de Nueva York, Dimitri Mitropolus, declaró hoy que la gira de su conjunto por Hispanoamérica habia sido más fructifera que el viaje de no importa qué político.

A su regreso a Nueva York después de las siete semanas de gira al través de Latinoamérica, Mitropolus afirmó que: "ya era hora de que los norteamericanos comprendieran que su mejor propaganda es la de la cultura y de las artes de su pais".

A FILARMONICA DE NOVA IORQUE NO ANHANGABAU' — Grande multidão, calculada em cerca de 30 mil pessoas, reuniu-se na tarde de anteontem no Anhangabaú, para assistir à apresentação da Orquestra Filarmonica de Nova Iorque, dirigida pelo maestro Dimitri Mitropoulos. Muito antes das 16 horas, o jardim do vale do Anhangabaú e as imediações da praça Ramos de Azevedo e do Teatro Municipal começaram a ser tomados por populares, que disputavam entre si os melhores lugares, pois, alem de ouvir, todos queriam ver os movimentos de cada componente da orquestra. A apresentação de numeros de musica classica, como "Don Juan", de Strauss, "Força do Destino", de Verdi, "Festival Academico", de Brahms, e outros, agradou plenamente, tendo a multidão ovacionado entusiasticamente a orquestra e o maestro Mitropoulos. A maior parte dos presentes se compunha de pessoas das camadas mais humildes, as quais demonstraram, entretanto, grande interesse pela musica executada e se mantiveram em absoluto silencio durante a apresentação dos diversos numeros. A Orquestra Filarmonica de Nova Iorque seguiu ontem para o Rio, onde ficará quatro dias, partindo então para o Mexico, em prosseguimento à sua temporada nas principais cidades dos paises sul-americanos. AS MÃOS QUE DOMINAM A ORQUESTRA

O maestro Dimitri Mitropoulos, à frente da Orquestra Filarmônica de Nova Iorque, em sua apresentação, na noite de ontem, no Teatro Municipal

MITROPOULOS REVELA

Música concreta pede é inspetor de tráfego

O maestro Dimitri Mitropoulos, regente da Orquestra Filarmônica de Nova Iorque, d'sse ontem, no auditório da embaixada americana, aos jornalistas cariocas, que a música concreta ou eletrônica necessita mais de um inspetor de tráfego para dirigi-la que de um intelectual da música. Êle considera Vila Lobos «um valor universal», admira Eleazar e conhece Camargo Guarnieri, cujo «Prólogo e Fuga» executou ontem no concêrto do Teatro Municipal

A Filarmônica de Nova Iorque — disse ainda — apresenta um déficit anual de 250 mil dólares e o seu orçamento atinge a quantia de 1 milhão e 500 mil dólares, arrecadados pela Sociedade Amigos da Filarmônica (de Nova Iorque) e em concertos ou exibições na televisão.

O REGENTE

Dimitri Mitropoulos nasceu em Atenas, na Grécia. Tem 62 anos mas aparenta menos. E' alto, forte e muito corado. Seus primeiros estudos musicais foram realizados no Conservatório de Atenas e, mais tarde, em Berlim, onde foi discípulo de Ferrucio Busoni.

Em 1936 estreou nos Estados Unidos, regendo a Sinfônica de Bostou. Acabou por adotar a cidadania norte-americana. Compositor e pianista de talento, Mitropoulos pode abster-se de compor para se dedicar à regência, por ser esta a sua verdadeira vocação.

A MÚSICA NÃO TEM PÁTRIA

A Filarmônica de Nova Iorque é composta por músicos de vários países, principalmente norte-americanos, alemães, italianos, russos e apenas três ou quatro sul-americanos.

Respondendo a uma pergunta sôbre os melhores músicos, o regente da Filarmônica de Nova Iorque disse que "a música não tem pátria" e, em tom brincalhão, acrescentou:

—O essencial é que os músicos sejam sindicalizados.

Dos espetáculos da Orquestra, sua direção recebe 75% do total da renda apurada. Não sendo autofinanciada, nem recebendo qualquer subvenção do Govêrno, a Filarmônica depende muito das contribuições de particulares. Esta tournée da orquestra na América Latina é, no entanto, financiada pelo Govêrno norte-americano.

PRIVILÉGIO

Mitropoulos declarou que gosta tanto das óperas — velhas ou novas — como da música sinfônica e considera essa ambiguidade um privilégio. Por distinguidos serviços prestados à divulgação da música francesa, o regente da Filarmônica de Nova Iorque recebeu a Legião de Honra, da França, no grau de oficial. Êle se orgulha desta medalha e usa a botoneira na lepela do palitó.

MULHERES, NÃO

— Por que não há mulheres na Filarmônica? perguntou um repórter.

— As mulheres nas grandes orquestras — respondeu — constituem um problema para o diretor durante as excursões. Só por isso não trago mulheres nesta Orquestra. Depois — prosseguiu — há sempre casos entre músicos, quando existem mulheres tocando com êles. Esta orquestra é muito apurada e é importante que ela volte para Nova Iorque com o mesmo efetivo com que iniciou a "tournée".

— Se tivéssemos mulheres na orquestra — frisou — eu não teria, agora, a certeza de que o conjunto voltaria completo.

FUMANTE COSMOPOLITA

Durante a entrevista, que durou uma hora, o maestro Mitropoulos fumou muito e quando observado pela reportagem que os cigarros eram paulistas, respondeu rindo, que era um fumante cosmopolita.

— Em cada cidade que chego — disse — procuro saber qual a marca de cigarros mais fortes e compro vários maços. Não tenho preferência por fumo de qualquer país. Em matéria de vício, não se deve ter preferências.

O PROGRAMA

Ontem, no concêrto do Teatro Municipal, a Filarmônica de Nova York executou os seguintes números: 1 — Prólogo e Fuga, de Guarnieri; 2 — "Encounter", de Turner; 3 — Poema Sinfônico de Don Juan, opus 20, de Strauss; e, 4 — Sinfonia nº 5, opus 100, de Prokofieff.

Hoje, no mesmo local e sob a regência de Dimitri Mitropoulos, serão executados: Overture "Der Freischutz", de Weber; Sinfonia nº 2 (em ré maior), opus 36, de Beethoven; "Verklaerte Nacht" opus 4, de Schoenberg; e, Meditação de Medéia e Dança da Vingança, de Barber.

Para maestro americano a música concreta é como amor por correspondência

O regente da Orquestra Filarmônica de Nova Iorque, Sr. Dimitri Mitropoulos, atualmente em excursão pela América do Sul, declarou-se durante a sua entrevista coletiva à imprensa, ontem, na Embaixada Americana, "um apaixonado da verdadeira música", acrescentando que "a música concreta é tão sem graça como o amor por correspondência".

O regente — que respondeu às perguntas falando ora em inglês, ora em italiano — declarou considerar o maestro Eliazar de Carvalho o maior regente sul-americano. Durante a entrevista, que se prolongou por mais de uma hora, o Sr. Mimitri Mitropoulos consumiu vários cigarros brasileiros (devidamente filtrados por uma piteira).

MULHERES AUSENTES

— A nossa Filarmônica esclareceu — o regente — não tem mulheres, mas não quero dizer com isto que tenho alguma coisa contra elas: até pelo contrário, as admiro muito como homem e como artista. Mas acontece que elas criam muitos problemas durante as execuções e, além disso, temo o estabelecimento de algum romance entre os meus músicos. Arte é arte, amor é amor. E eu espero sempre voltar para os Estados Unidos com o mesmo número de pessoas de que quando saí. Sem mulheres na orquestra estamos livres de muita coisa.

A MÚSICA BRASILEIRA

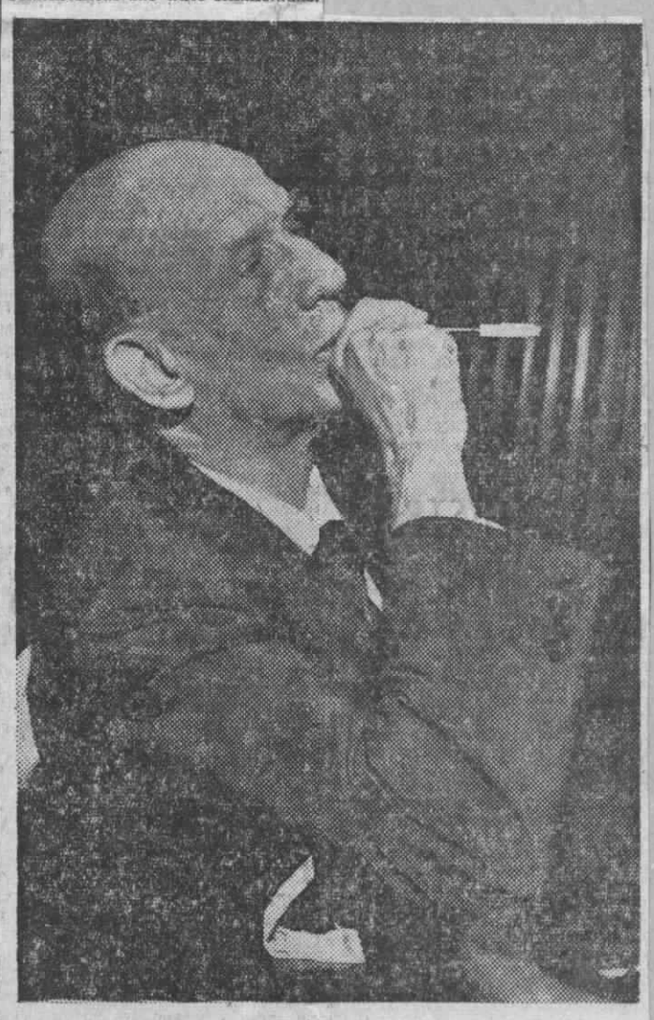
— Sou admirador sincero da música brasileira e tenho acompanhado a sua penetração em outros países. Eleazar de Carvalho é um gênio na batuta e tem uma personalidade assombrosa. Vila-Lobos e Camargo Guarnieri são músicos de rara sensibilidade e suas peças há muito fazem parte do repertório da Orquestra Filarmônica de Nova York. Agora, no Rio, terei a oportunidade de apresentar ao público carioca várias composições dêsses dois músicos cuja fama já é grande nos Estados Unidos.

OS MAIORES DO MUNDO

Perguntado quais os maiores músicos do mundo na sua opinião, o Sr. Dimitri Mitropoulos respondeu:

— Quando eu falo em música refiro-me sempre à música de classe, feita para marcar uma época e atravessar o tempo, sempre admirada e emocionante. Músicos mortos houve muitos que assombraram o mundo e cujas obras ainda são executadas e aos quais a humanidade reverencia cada vez mais através dos séculos. Entre os músicos vivos, sou admirador incondicional de Stravinsk, Winderbilk e do francês Milót. Em música de teatro, penso que o maior de todos é o italiano Gian Carlo Menotti.

REGENTE É UM ATOR



Em resposta a uma pergunta sôbre a necessidade do regente de orquestra usar ou não usar a partitura, o Sr. Mitropoulos respendeu:

— O regente deve ser ator e ter todos os requisitos de um ator. É claro que sòmente um maestro que confia plenamente em sua memória deve comparecer perante o público para reger de cor a sua orquestra. Estou convicto, no entanto, que se deve ser 200% regente para não usar partitura. O que diríamos de ator que se apresentasse no palco de teatro com um livro na mão? Regência de orquestra é a mesma coisa. O ator de teatro ainda leva uma vantagem que é o "ponto".

UM MILAGRE

Falando sôbre as orquestras sinfônicas dos Estados Unidos o Maestro Dimitri disse que há naquele País umas 30 orquestras que podem ser consideradas de fato como tais.

— Nenhuma orquestra sinfônica da América do Norte recebe subvenções dos poderes públicos. Considero a existência delas um verdadeiro milagre, pois vivem tôdas por conta própria e auxiliadas por grupos de amigos e admiradores da boa música. As Filarmônicas são auto-financiadas.

Maestro Dimitri Mitropoulos: "Música concreta é tão sem graça como o amor por correspondência"

A nossa orquestra apresenta anualmente um deficit de cêrca de 250 mil dólares dentro de um orçamento de um milhão e quinhentos mil dólares. Temos uma "Sociedade de Amigos da Filarmônica", composta de 500 pessoas que nos ajudam a contrabalançar o deficit anual. Como a nossa, tôdas as outras vivem da mesma forma. Somos uma coisa completamente à parte de qualquer órgão governamental.

MÚSICO AMERICANO OU NATURALIZADO

A respeito dos componentes das orquestras sinfônicas americanas o Maestro Dimitri explicou:

— Todo e qualquer músico deve pertencer ao sindicato. Como tal, tem que ser americano ou naturalizado.

A FILARMÔNICA DE NOVA YORK NO RIO — Para a última etapa de sua excursão através dos países da América Latina, chegou ontem ao Rio a Orquestra Filarmônica de Nova York, com seus 113 componentes. Desembarcaram no Aeroporto Santos Dumont, e, em ônibus especiais, dirigiram-se para o hotel, em Copacabana. Sua temporada no Rio será de apenas três dias, pois terão dois concertos (hoje e amanhã), no Teatro Municipal, e um no Maracanãzinho (quarta-feira), viajando no dia 12 para a cidade do México. A foto nos mostra um aspecto do desembarque, vendo-se o regente Dimitri Mitropoulos (ao centro, de gravata escura). De Beethoven a Barber

Novo triunfo, no Municipal, da Filarmônica de Nova York

Regida, como em seu primeiro concêrto pelo maestro Dimitri Mitropoulos a Orquestra Filarmônica de Nova York nos trouxe ontem à noite, no Municipal, seu segundo programa: obras de Beethoven, Weber, Schönberg e Barber, segundo a ordem cronológica em que foram criadas. Pode-se dizer que o concêrto — sem o menor intuito de se forçar, arbitràriamente, a classificação — se colocou, pelo menos no que se refere às três primeiras partituras, sob o signo do Romantismo. É essa a fase, aliás, como se sabe, debaixo do influxo do gênio dos mesmos, de maior e definitivo desenvolvimento técnico da orquestra moderna, num da idade clássica da música ou, que vem a dar no mesmo, pródomo da romântica, tivemo-la, ontem, com a segunda Sinfonia de Beethoven: uma nova ordem de coisas que se inaugura, e nitidamente se anuncia, na partitura. Pleno, poético, efervescente, efusivo, romantismo germânico, na "Ouverture" do Freischütz, de Weber. Fim do romantismo wagneriano, impasse estético e, aparentemente, um beco sem saída, na história da evolução musical, em A Noite Transfigurada, de Schönberg.

Aquela transição de estilos que se dera em Beethoven passou, de tão consabida, a lugar comum. Já a posição de Schönberg, colocado na linha divisória seguinte, entre o wagnerianismo absorvente e... as interrogações e perplexidades que pareciam sem resposta, não estará, no mesmo grau, vulgarizada. O que Mitropoulos e a Filarmônica de Nova York nos fizeram novamente verificar é que essa bela obra do maior revolucionário da música do século — A Noite Transfigurada, mostra Schönberg, de fato, prêso a Wagner, escravo de uma tonalidade evoluída para o cromatismo, em que todos os recursos tradicionais, nos quadros da música centro-européia, estavam, transparentemente, à pique de esgotar-se. Por isso mesmo, em face da própria impossibilidade que êle revela de realizar-se com personalidade própria, tornou-se Schönberg, depois da Verklärte Nacht e de outras obras do começo do século, o destruidor da já comprometida ordem tonal, caminhando do atonalismo para o sistema dodecafônico. A transfiguração, no sentido estético do têrmo, aceita ou relida, só viria depois.

A seqüência das obras, no concêrto, quanto a Weber e a Beethoven, não poderia ser, naturalmente, aquela indicada pela cronologia rigorosa. Tivemos, primeiro, é claro, a Abertura do Der Freischütz. Há sempre algo de viril, de franco, na sonoridade da Filarmônica, mesmo no cantabile dos arcos, que não afetam, nunca, excessiva doçura, até nas frases que poderiam induzir a um maior grau de sentimentalidade melódica — e isso constitui uma das características da ambiência sonora do conjunto, que lhe marca bastante a fisionomia. Tanto os detalhes sombrios da partitura de Weber — admiráveis os longos apêlos das trompas, ao início — como sua irresistível graciosidade rítmica e sua inebriante fluência melódica revestiram magistral relêvo na concepção de Mitropoulos, a que o conjunto aderiu com precisão infalível. E no curso ainda das primeiras observações que nos enseja êsse extraordiário organismo sinfônico, quantos aspectos surpreendentes ressaltam! É a qualidade individual de instrumentos, como a primeira flauta, de eficácia incrível de sôpro, sobrenadando nos fortes; são outros instrumentos, como o óboe, ou nas cordas, o violoncelo spala, e também, com maiores razões, o spala dos violinos. E é sobretudo a percepção una que nos vem da grande orquestra como instrumento vasto e multiforme, sensibilíssimo às indicações de Mitropoulos.

O Beethoven da segunda Sinfonia, que soava estranho e extravagante, para os contemporâneos, soa, para nós, curiosamente caprichoso. A grandeza está nêle, em germe. Ainda não se encontra de todo, e parece bizarro. Não vale insistir sôbre a reconhecida beleza melódica do "Larghetto". O que há de mais importante, na obra, à parte êsse movimento, é a busca, a inquietação, a audácia. A execução da Filarmônica esculpe a obra, que se tem de tomar pelo que representa como etapa evolutiva de um sinfonista supremo. Mesmo para nós, habituados a todos os arrojos, a segunda Sinfonia, já distante do clima do classicismo, e prenunciando, apenas, o gênio de Beethoven, soa como algo de insólito. Tem, por isso, um mérito de novidade. É música incomum. Houve momentos particularmente preciosos, na execução, a exemplo de trechos do "Allegro", penúltimo tempo.

Quanto a Schönberg, não se chegue a interpretar como reproche e crítica, feita acima, sôbre a influência de Wagner, que foi uma fatalidade histórica. A verdade é que, no concêrto, nenhuma das obras atingiu mais empolgante beleza do que essa Noite Transfigurada. Para grande orquestra de arcos, pôs à prova, de maneira excepcional, êsse nobre contingente da Filarmônica, levando-o a uma espécie de rendimento que se admitiria antes provir de um conjunto só de cordas, especializado nas obras do gênero, como os há vários no mundo, do que da respectiva secção de uma grande orquestra sinfônica. A dificílima polifonia de Noite Transfigurada, com seus "élans" passionais à Tristão — mas sempre mantidos dentro de sóbrio equilíbrio musical — teve de fato uma clareza exemplar. Mais do que isso: foi uma das dádivas mais gratas de grande música que nos trouxe a Orquestra nova-iorquina.

Com Barber, depois do romantismo, atingimos ontem a música moderna. Meditação de Medéia e Dança da Vingança, op. 23-A, são as denominações da partitura que ouvimos. O norte-americano Samuel Barber pesquisa e obtem, na obra, efeitos de riqueza atraente de timbres, não apenas decorativos, mas expressivos. Na Meditação se destacam, principalmente, sôbre um frêmito dos arcos, breves frases solistas de recitativos dos sopros. E a Dança da Vingança se ergue sôbre um ritmo que não deixa de lembrar, em fundo pianístico, o do incisivo final da sétima Sonata de piano de Prokofieff. Aos poucos, há a adesão do "tutti"", e a obra se encaminha para um termo de eloqüente, imperioso, paroxístico brilho.

Lotado, festivamente, o Teatro, forçaram os aplausos várias vêzes ao retôrno do maestro à cena. E trouxeram-nos a Filarmônica e Mitropoulos uma versão extraprograma de capitoso colorido, de "salero" quase explosivo, da Dança final do Sombrero de três picos, de Manoel de Falla. (Para efeito de registro jornalístico fica dito que, anteontem, no primeiro concêrto, houve também uma composição extraprograma, aliás admiràvelmente bem executada — a Abertura da Forza del Destino, de Verdi).

Hoje, a Orquestra se despede, no Maracanãzinho, em audição que certamente atrairá enorme público. E ficam, a lembrança, o exemplo, a saudade, a marca destacada da visita da Filarmônica, nos fastos da vida musical carioca.

O MAIOR ACONTECIMENTO MUSICAL DO ANO — O Teatro Municipal viveu ontem uma noite histórica com a primeira apresentação, no Rio, da Orquestra Filarmônica de Nova York, dirigida pelo maestro Dimitri Mitropoulos. O célebre conjunto, com 108 professôres de renome internacional, agradou inteiramente o grande público que lotou totalmente a nossa melhor casa de espetáculos. A platéia aplaudiu entusiasticamente e os telespectadores, pelo Canal 6, da Televisão Tupi, tiveram oportunidade de se deleitar com as peças musicais do programa incluindo a de abertura — "Prólogo e Fuga" — do nosso Camargo Guarnieri. Grande expectativa cerca a segunda apresentação recital, que será realizada hoje à noite. Na foto acima, o notável conjunto orquestral num flagrante da sua memorável apresentação de ontem no Teatro Municipal. Amanhã, a Filarmônica de Nova York dará um concêrto, a preços populares, por iniciativa das Pioneiras Sociais, no estádio do Maracanãzinho

Sua Fonte de Renda São as Recitas e as Contribuições Particulares — Milagre Dos Americanos — Sucesso na Estréia, Ontem, no Municipal — O Que Disse Dimitri Mitropoulos Aos Jornalistas — Bernstein Esperado Amanhã, Para Reger no Maracanãzinho

O FAMOSO regente Dimitri Mitropoulos concedeu ontem uma entrevista a jornalistas cariocas, na Embaixada americana. Falou de música e de compositores, de processos de reger e até da Legião de Honra da França, de que é oficial. Mas, sobretudo, deixou pasmos os jornalistas com a sua "verve", seu espírito alegre e folgazão, sua franqueza, sua personalidade fascinante e a graça e habilidade de suas "blagues". Mitropoulos dominou inteiramente a todos, naturalmente, como um homem vivido, bem vivido, batido de todos os ventos e cheio de um humanismo e compreensão de tudo que lhe dá um ar de cidadão do mundo. Fala correntemente o inglês e o italiano, pronunciou palavras portuguêsas com perfeição, denotando grande facilidade para línguas. E' grego de nascimento, naturalizado americano (vive nos E.U.A. há 22 anos), tem 62 anos, foi compositor, pianista, e abandonou a composição quando percebeu que "nascera mesmo para reger". Está no Rio com a Filarmônica de Nova York, da qual é regente efetivo há oito anos.

Falando de Música

Perguntaram-lhe sôbre música. Respondeu a tudo, com segurança e graça. Dos compositores modernos destacou Stravinski e Windermith. Falou da música de Giancarlo Menotti, instado pela Professôra Magdala da Gama Oliveira. Afirmou ser êle ímpar na música para teatro. Depois, disse que não se impressiona com os que regem sem partitura. Acha que só se deve fazê-lo quando se tem muita segurança e conhecimento absoluto da peça. E foi enumerando: duzentos por cento de segurança, trezentos por cento de honestidade profissional! Afirmou que já viu gente reger sem partitura e sem conhecer o que regia...

O Público Sustenta a Orquestra

Mitropoulos afirmou que se passa nos Estados Unidos uma "coisa fabulosa" em matéria de música. E' que lá existem cêrca de trinta grandes orquestras que se mantêm com a contribuição dos amantes da música. A Filarmônica de Nova York, por exemplo, cujo orçamento anual é de um milhão e quinhentos mil dólares, tem tido "deficits" de duzentos e cinqüenta mil dólares, na renda de suas apresentações no rádio e televisão. Pois bem, os "Amigos da Filarmônica", sociedade que congrega quinhentos "doentes por música" em Nova York, garantem a cobertura do grande saldo negativo. Também pelo Correio chegam, de todo o País, milhares de contribuições de radiouvintes e telespectadores amantes da música. Vêm desde notas de um dólar até cheques de milhares dêles...

Primeira Vez na América do Sul

A grande orquestra possui cento e oito membros e vem à América do Sul pela primeira vez, numa "tournée" sob os auspícios do Govêrno americano. Várias vêzes tem-se apresentado na Europa, a partir de 1950. Entre os compositores brasileiros, fazem parte de seu repertório Villa-Lôbos e Camargo Guarniéri. Mitropoulos teve, também, palavras de louvor para a regência de Eleazar de Carvalho.

Finalmente, perguntaram ao maestro sôbre óperas e música concreta. Mitropoulos aceita de bom grado ambas as formas de expressão musical, para surprêsa de alguns presentes. E explicou, no caso da música concreta, que está longe de apoiá-la com entusiasmo. Fêz até a respeito dela muitas "blagues", que divertiram os jornalistas. Mas acha que, se ela existe, tem alguma razão de ser. E, se desaparecer, ainda assim terá deixado algum rasto de si, na inspiração de novas formas que acaso venham a ser encontradas para a expressão futura da beleza através da música.

A Estréia

Com os camarotes 6 e 7 vazios, num teatro repleto, onde os corredores das localidades altas estavam todos tomados com público de pé ou sentado nos degraus, o concêrto de estréia, no Rio, da Orquestra Filarmônica de Nova York foi iniciado com o Hino Nacional Brasileiro e o Hino Nacional dos Estados Unidos. Ouviu-se depois o "Prólogo e Fuga" do brasileiro Guarniéri. Sendo os demais números obras do repertório internacional: "Encounter", de Charles Turner; "Don Juan", poema sinfônico de Richard Strauss; e a "5.ª Sinfonia de Prokofieff". A vibração do público, ao final do programa, todo de pé, aplaudindo Mitropoulos e o conjunto, fêz com que o regente executasse um número extra: a abertura da ópera "A Fôrça do Destino", de Verdi.

Como se sabe, Mitropoulos deixará dentro de algum tempo a direção da Filarmônica para dedicar-se exclusivamente à regência de ópera, no Metropolitan. Ali o seu contrato terá exclusividade para o gênero. Êsse aspecto aumentou a curiosidade do público, quando êle iniciou a execução da abertura.

Os Armários da "Boston"

Antes do concêrto, o palco do Municipal parecia pequeno para conter tanta gente. E' que os músicos da Filarmônica trazem umas grandes malas individuais, quais grandes baús-armários, que dispuseram ao longo do palco, onde cada um trocou de roupa. Referidas malas, entretanto, não pertencem à Filarmônica de Nova York, mas à Boston Symphony Orchestra, tendo a reportagem obtido informação de que elas haviam sido cedidas por empréstimo. A Filarmônica viaja muito, mas sempre menos que a Boston, e, embora esta seja a mais séria rival do conjunto que nos visita, segundo declaração de um dos seus dirigentes administrativos, essa rivalidade artística não prejudica a boa compreensão, havendo assim entre as duas organizações perfeito entendimento. A Filarmônica apenas indenizará a reforma que precisar ser feita nos baús-armários que se quebrarem.

Irmão de Ormandy

Martin Ormandy, violoncelista, é irmão do famoso regente Eugène Ormandy. Tornou-se de repente uma atração no palco. Perguntamos-lhe se já se tinha enveredado também pela regência:

— Gosto muito do meu violoncelo; — respondeu — de reger, não.

Com Ormandy fêz-se um grupo de que participavam o primeiro trompista da Orquestra do Teatro Municipal, Jairo Ribeiro, o primeiro trompista da Orquestra Sinfônica Brasileira, e o primeiro trompista da Filarmônica, James Chambers. Jairo tomou o instrumento do americano e o tocou, elogiando sua sonoridade, enquanto o americano elogiou o nosso patrício. Perguntamos ao músico da Orquestra do Municipal por que não tinha um instrumento idêntico, dizendo-nos que em razão do preço: 675 dólares. "Para quem tem apenas treze mil cruzeiros de salários mensais..."

A uma pergunta, disse-nos o músico James Chambers:

— Tocarei sòmente a primeira parte do programa. Na segunda parte entrará um colega também primeiro trompa.

De quase todos os instrumentos de maior responsabilidade, a Filarmônica tem dois "spalas".

Veio Com Toscanini

John Wummer, o primeiro flautista, é considerado como um dos maiores mestres do seu instrumento. Moacir Liserra, flautista da Sinfônica Brasileira, elogiou-o com entusiasmo. Há quinze anos toca na Filarmônica e já estêve no Brasil integrando a Orquestra de Toscanini, na N.B.C. John Corigliano, violino "spala", falou-nos dos três dias em que estiveram agora em São Paulo, tendo admirado o público que lotou completamente o Vale do Anhangabaú, no concêrto ao ar livre. O violinista Joachim Fishberg rememorou a simpatia que seu tio Mischa Mischakoff nutre pelo Brasil, desde que aqui estêve integrando a Orquestra de Toscanini.

Fala o Presidente da O.S.B.

Após a execução de "Don Juan", de Richard Strauss, o presidente da Sinfônica Brasileira, senhor Mário Polo, disse à reportagem ter ouvido essa mesma obra pela Filarmônica de Viena, quando aqui estêve com Weingartner e depois com o próprio Richard Strauss, e pela da N.B.C., com Toscanini, mas a que ora nos visita o impressionou muito mais pela sua sonoridade. Perguntamos-lhe por que não temos aqui uma orquestra semelhante:

— Porque não nos dão o artista — disse. Dêem-nos uns quinze músicos de que precisamos e nossa orquestra fará proezas também. Nós temos oitenta músicos enquanto esta tem mais de cem.

"Corbeille"

Ao final do programa, e não no intervalo, como é de hábito aqui, foi oferecida a Mitropoulos uma grande "corbeille", remetida pelo Sr. John Korba, regente geral dos Discos Colúmbia, dos quais é exclusivo o artista.

Programa Para Hoje

Ainda há a esperança de que Bernstein chegue amanhã pela manhã, para reger o concêrto do Maracanãzinho, cuja lotação está esgotada. O de hoje, no Municipal, será dirigido por Mitropoulos, apresentando o seguinte programa: a abertura "Der Freischutz", de Weber; a "2.ª Sinfonia de Beethoven"; "Noite Transfigurada", de Schoenberg; e, de Samuel Barber, "Meditação" e "Dança de Medéia".

MÚSICA

Orquestra Filarmônica de New York

DIMITRI MITROPOULOS

FÊZ a sua esperada estréia no Rio a famosa Orquestra Filarmônica de Nova York, constituindo o fato um grande acontecimento artístico e social.

Tocou êsse conjunto de cento e nove músicos, cada qual um mestre no seu instrumento, sob a direção de Dimitri Mitropoulos, grego naturalizado americano, figura impressionante de regente.

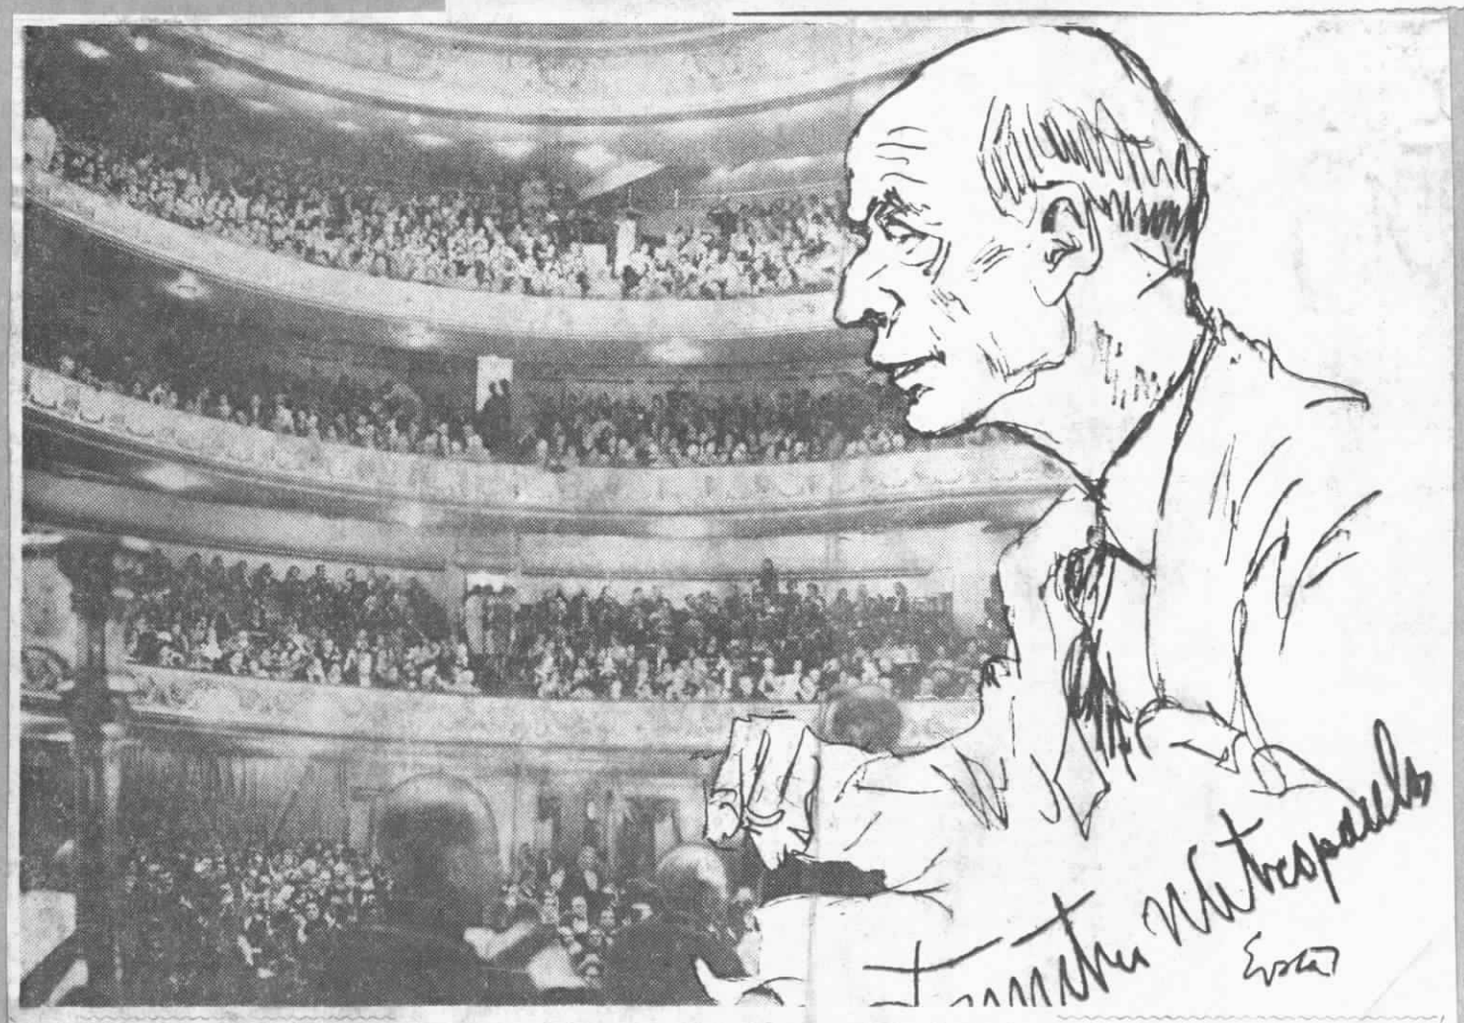
Magro, alto, esguio, êle é todo nervos, todo alma, todo coração quando maneja as mãos em gestos ondulantes e com elas transmite aos seus comandados uma variedade infinita de sentimentos, emoções as mais várias, arrancando do quanto interpreta, frase por frase, tudo quanto possam dizer ou apenas sugerir de poesia, de paixão, de transbordamento o mais íntimo. A docilidade sonora que ora impõe à orquestra, é o reverso da energia, do impulso irresistível que mais adiante consegue lhe incutir. E assim vai caminhando e enriquecendo as passagens dêste ou daquele trecho, revelando belezas ocultas no cumprimento de uma missão genial, sem cair jamais no monótono, no banal, na cópia de outras interpretações.

Mitropoulos em certos momentos, é quase um criador, sem que isto importe dizer que fuja às diretrizes do autor.. É apenas um criador porque ressalta efeitos e situações colhidas na profundidade impressionante da sua análise das obras executadas. Fixa-as e as exterioriza plenamente, como que cristalizando a inspiração alheia.

Esta é a razão tôda peculiar da sua regência. E dela surgem realizações que se podem chamar, sem dúvida de errar; de modelares.

Não vamos aqui nos deter em detalhes sôbre o programa. Diremos simplesmente, que todo êle teve uma realização primorosa não só pela dinâmica expressiva, pela grandiosidade das execuções, como pela precisão da orquestra, a certeza das suas entradas, a harmonia do conjunto, a afinação inatacável, a disciplina a mais perfeita, movendo-se tôda aquela massa sonora e aquelas dezenas de homens, como se fôssem um só instrumento, uma só personalidade, uma única sensibilidade.

A primeira parte constou do "Prólogo e Fuga" de Camargo Guarnieri, valorizando; de "Encounter" de Charles Turner e dessa página cheia de ficção, de expansão e de triunfante eloqüência que é o poêma sinfônico "Don Juan", de Richard Strauss, conduzida de maneira contagiante.



Entretanto, se nos fôsse permitido apontar a mais admirável execução num programa de tal estatura, não vacilaríamos quanto à "Sinfonia nº 5, em si bemol maior, opus 100", de Prokofieff.

Todos os meios de expressão foram então empregados para realçar como realçou, esta obra que mal tocada seria de uma insignificância a mais completa, tal o arroubo da concepção, as flutuações incertas do pensamento que a criou impregnando-a de uma côr pessoal.

Essa côr, no entanto, êsse arroubo, essas flutuações rebrilharam sob a batuta de Mitropoulos. O "Allegro marcato", sobretudo, foi um encanto pela maneira como foi traduzido.

Parece-nos que mais nada nos cumpre dizer senão que o público fêz ao regente e orquestra das maiores manifestações que temos presenciado, e como extra, foi então tocada, depois de um programa daquela ordem, a "Ouverture" da ópera "Fôrça do Destino", de Verdi, como jamais ouvimos.

A ESTRÉIA DA FILARMÔNICA — Foi um dos mais expressivos acontecimentos culturais da cidade, nos últimos tempos, a estréia, ontem, da Orquestra Filarmônica de Nova York, que teve a regência do Maestro Dimitri Mitropoulos. Sob o título "Vive sem ajuda oficial a Filarmônica de Nova York", publicamos, na sexta página, uma reportagem e uma entrevista com o famoso condutor. New York Philharmonic's First Concert In Rio

By HANS A. HINRICHSEN

To describe events like the concert which the N. Y. Philharmonic Orchestra gave under its conductor Dimitri Mitropoulos two nights ago at the Municipal Theatre, one would like a little more time than is at the disposal of a journalist supposed to catch up with the news. A little more time to decide exactly which feature of Monday night's magic performance most took one's breath away — which piece of music played stood out most — finally, to reminisce a little with regard to other performances, by different orchestras, of some of the works played on Monday — not to make odious comparisons as to "levels of perfection," but to gain a clearer picture of the style of performance of the orchestras and the musical personalities of the conductors concerned. Since however I have not so much time at my disposal, I shall have to hasten to press with what is likely to become a disconnected jumble of enthusiastic raving.

First of all, a big Thank you to all the private and public bodies and individuals responsible for and connected with the arrangement of the tour which made this concert possible. On Monday night, last night, and again tonight at the Maracanãzinho Stadium, Rio finds itself at a milestone in the history of its concerts. It is having the living experience of a musical ensemble that future generations will read about with the same kind of reverent thrill which seizes contemporary music-lovers at the mention of the great names belonging to the classical past.

Monday's program consisted of the "Prologue and Fugue" by Brazil's Camargo Guarnieri, the "Encounter" by the American composer Turner, the "Don Juan" by Richard Strauss, and the 5th Symphony by Prokofieff. An encore was granted to the excited audience in the form of Verdi's "La forza del destino" overture.

Before the first notes of these works sounded, we heard the Brazilian and American National Anthems in a truly stirring rendering. During the latter Mr. Mitropoulos would sometimes let his arms sink as if saying to his musicians, "You do not need a Greek leader to play your own music", and then begin to conduct again carried away by the general fervour.

Guarnieri's work received a virtuoso interpretation in which the imperturbable assurance of the most complex rhythms and cross-rhythms was perhaps the most outstanding element. The Turner work by contrast felt much quieter, even in its moments of passion, supplication and confession. But the outmost brilliance was attained in the first half, by the "Don Juan", by Richard Strauss. From the first soaring powerful violin passage (rendered in exquisite unison) to the short coda in the minor key, which so tragically kills the ecstasy of Strauss' Nietzschean lover, orchestra and conductor were like one instrument swayed by the romantic spirit of this music — apart from each being a superlative virtuoso capable of carrying out to the letter the intentions of one of the most consummate virtuosi in the art of orchestral scoring.

As for the last work, Prokofieff's 5th Symphony, which took up the second half of the program, listening to it on Monday confirmed once again my growing conviction that this work is going to "last" — that it will remain on the repertoire of the great orchestras even if the Russian's other orchestra works should fall into neglect. It speaks with a seriousness and grandeur which this master of parody of styles and sentiments does not usually pour into his musical moulds. The almost stationary but irresistible force of the measured first movement, the "suggestion diabolique" of the scherzo, the searing sorrow of the third movement together prepare the last movement, in the final indescribable climax of which they culminate. A truly wonderful note on which to end such a concert.

After a successful tour of Brazil and other Latin American countries, the New York Philharmonic Orchestra, under the direction of co-conductors Dimitri Mitropoulos and Leonard Bernstein, is leaving Rio de Janeiro early Thursday on three special Pan American World Airways Clippers for Mexico City.

One of the three special Clippers is a cargo plane carrying eight tons of equipment including musical instruments valued at U. S. $173,000. One of the 31 violins is a $25,000 Stradivarious dating back to 1716.

The orchestra's 117 musicians and administrative personnel will proceed to Galeao International Airport immediately after their final concert at Rio's Maracanãzinho stadium Wednesday night (June 11) The Clippers will take off at short intervals between midnight and 1 a. m. Thursday.

Besides the Stradivarius violin, called "Baron Wittgenstein," and its two bows valued at $1.500-dollars, the famous orchestra's equipment includes 30 other valuable violins, 11 violas, 11 cellos, nine bass violins, and wind, brass and percussion instruments, including a "lion's rear."

All this equipment and accessories are packed in 111 trunks.

The New York Philharmonic Orchestra's series of concerts in Brazil include one in Porto Alegre, three in São Paulo and three in Rio.

RIO CONCERT LED BY MITROPOULOS

Philharmonic Gets Standing Ovations at First Program in Brazilian Capital

Special to The New York Times.

RIO DE JANEIRO, June 10 —Dimitri Mitropoulos and the New York Philharmonic received standing ovations from the Brazilian audience that filled Rio de Janeiro's Municipal Theatre last night at the orchestra's first concert here.

The first ovation came at the end of the first half of the program, after the orchestra had played a composition by the Brazilian composer Camargo Guarnieri, "Encounter" by the United States composer Charles Turner and Richard Strauss' "Don Juan." Mr. Mitropoulos had to return several times to the podium for the bows before the audience finally filed out for the intermission.

The second part of the program, devoted to Prokofieff's Fifth Symphony, brought even louder cheers and applause, and Mr. Mitropoulos had to return to conduct an encore, Dukas' "The Sorcerer's Apprentice."

The music critics of Rio de Janeiro's newspapers were unanimous this morning in praising the Philharmonic and Mr. Mitropoulos. In Correio de Manha, Enrico Nogueira da Franca wrote that the concert was "one of the great historic nights of the Municipal Theatre" and that "since we were visited by the N. B. C. Symphony with Toscanini many years ago, yesterday was the most beautiful symphonic night we have had at the Municipal Theatre."

The concert was televised. The audience at the theatre included Assistant Secretary of State for Inter-American Affairs Roy R. Rubottom Jr., who is on a visit here; United States Ambassador Ellis O. Briggs, high Government officials and foreign diplomats.

Tonight Mr. Mitropoulos is conducting a second concert at the Municipal Theatre and tomorrow Leonard Bernstein will lead the Philharmonic in a "popular concert" at the big Maracanazinho Basketball Stadium.

CONSAGRADORA A VIAGEM ARTÍSTICA DA ORQUESTRA FILARMÔNICA DE NOVA YORK

«Diário de Notícias» Colhe as Impressões de Dimitri Mitropoulos

A influência de Busoni sôbre a sua carreira — Desistiu de ser compositor para ser regente — Não tem predileções quanto às partituras — Sòmente homens no famoso conjunto — As mulheres têm complicações de amizades e outras mais... — Orquestra mantida pelo povo, como tôdas as demais da Norte-América — Admiração pelos nossos compositores — Encantado com o público latino-americano.

ANTES de se apresentar ao público numerosíssimo que superlotou o Teatro Municipal para assistir à estréia da Orquestra Filarmônica de Nova York, Dimitri Mitropoulos, seu regente titular, concedeu-nos uma entrevista em que cavalheirescamente respondeu às perguntas que lhe fizemos acêrca de sua vida artística e das impressões que têm pontilhado a sua longa carreira de um dos maiores regentes da atualidade. Revelou Mitropoulos que não pensava em ser regente: «Minha primeira idéia era ser compositor», disse. E prosseguiu: «Foi Ferrucio Busoni que me fêz mudar de pensamento. Nossa primeira entrevista durou da manhã à noite. Quando acabamos de conversar eu me havia decidido a ser regente. Creio que fiz bem. Jamais eu poderia condensar numa composição tudo o que me vai n'alma. Se tivesse me dedicado à composição talvez não passasse de um incompreendido. Como regente, porém, transmito e resumo, sob as ordens da minha batuta, êsse mundo de emoções que representam tôdas as partituras desde os mais antigos aos mais modernos mestres».

Mitropoulos, apesar da sua idade (62 anos) é de um dinamismo admirável. Chegou, há pouco tempo, a dar nove concertos numa só semana. E prova disso também é a sua presente temporada na América Latina, realizando concertos diários e viajando de um lado para outro com a maior disposição física e espiritual.

Perguntamos-lhe como é feita a admissão na grande orquestra que dirige desde 1950 e da qual está para se afastar entregando a sua liderança a Leonard Bernstein.

— O músico candidato faz uma audição, sendo admitido ou recusado conforme seus méritos. Não há proteção de nenhuma espécie. Qualquer pequena transigência no julgamento do candidato seria prejudicial à Orquestra, respondeu.

— Quantos elementos femininos figuram na orquestra?

— Nenhum. A participação feminina criaria problemas num conjunto que se desloca freqüentemente para diversas cidades e países. A direção da orquestra prefere que a orquestra volte com o mesmo número de executantes que iniciam as excursões. Onde há mulher, há complicações de amizade e outras...

— Quais os compositores preferidos do maestro?

— O regente deve gostar de todos os compositores, transmitir tôdas as obras ao público sem interferência de suas predileções pessoais.

— Qual foi a maior emoção de sua vida?

— Tive muitas, mas, das maiores está sendo esta excursão à América do Sul. Público entusiasta e culto.

MITROPOULOS E OS COMPOSITORES PATRICIOS

— Que acha da música brasileira? — indagamos.

— Admiro-a através de Villa-Lôbos, que é uma figura de valor universal; de Eleazar de Carvalho, regente muito apreciado nos Estados Unidos; do compositor Camargo Guarnieri; de Francisco Mignone e outros. Regi Villa-Lôbos pela primeira vez em Veneza, em 1937, e, juntamente com Chavez, o coloco entre os primeiros da América.

— Sua opinião sôbre os maiores compositores da atualidade?

— Entre os vivos: Stravinsky, Hindemith, Milhaud, disse de maneira positiva o maestro.

— Sua opinião sôbre Gian Carlo Menotti?

— Trata-se de um artista especializado em teatro. Seria uma injustiça compará-lo a compositores sinfônicos, pois dentro do rigor estético dêsse gênero (sinfônico) sua música não seria de primeira classe. Mas, no ambiente da música para teatro, Menotti é grande compositor.

— O que pensa sôbre o sistema do decafônico?

— Todo sistema é bom; depende de como é usado.

O QUE SE EXIGE DE UM REGENTE

— O regente deve reger de cor? Dispensar a partitura? Qual a sua opinião a respeito?

— O maestro é como um ator. Não se pode imaginar um ator que faça o «Hamlet» de Shakespeare com o livro sob os olhos... Os gestos dos maestros são importantes. Ele é que transmite tudo ao público. Não é cabotinismo o regente comportar-se como um ator. Mas, o conselho que dou aos meus discípulos é que êles não conduzam a orquestra de cor, antes de conhecerem cem por cento a partitura a executar. E, para dispensar a partitura nos concertos, o regente deve ser 200 por cento seguro e 300 por cento honesto.

COMO VIVE A FILARMÔNICA DE NOVA YORK

— A Orquestra Filarmônica é autofinanciada ou recebe subvenções do govêrno?

— Possuem os Estados Unidos 30 grandes e excelentes orquestras. Nenhuma é subvencionada pelo govêrno. São mantidas por pessoas que pensam que uma cidade que não tem uma boa orquestra não é uma cidade civilizada. A iniciativa é, pois, particular. (Esta excursão à América Latina, todavia, é patrocinada pelo Estado).

— Qual o orçamento anual da Orquestra Filarmônica? Poderá nos informar?

— Um milhão e 500 mil dólares por ano.

— Há «deficit»?

— Sim. O «deficit» anual é de mais ou menos 200 mil dólares.

— Do total, quanto fica com a orquestra?

— A Filarmônica recolhe 75 por cento por ano com concertos, gravações, televisão. Para compensar o «deficit», pessoas remetem contribuições pelo Correio, a partir de um dólar. Na cidade existe uma Sociedade de Amigos da Orquestra Filarmônica que consegue dinheiro para equilibrar o orçamento.

A revelação admirável nos levou a outras perguntas:

— Há muitos latinos na orquestra?

— Temos músicos de várias nacionalidades. O principal é que êles pertençam ao Sindicato de Músicos.

Maestro Dmitri Mitropoulus.

AS DUAS PAIXÕES DO MAESTRO

— O maestro gosta de ópera? arriscamos.

— A ópera me distrai... Sou um homem privilegiado, pois tenho duas amantes: a música sinfônica e a de ópera...

— Que pensa da música «concreta»?

— E' algo de parecido com o amor por correspondência... Essa música não necessita de regente, mas de um policia de tráfego de sonoridade. O que me desagrada é que não sou útil numa música dêsse gênero... Mas, ela me interessa, pois mais tarde se provará que surgiu no momento em que devia surgir.

UM POUCO DE POLITICA COM RESPOSTAS EVASIVAS...

— Que acha de De Gaulle?, foi a nossa pergunta talvez indiscreta.

— Se uso esta comenda da Legião de Honra, eu a ganhei do Instituto Acadêmico de França por meus serviços culturais, e não por politica. Grau oficial. O maestro Bruno Walter também recebeu a Legião de Honra.

E Mitropoulos saiu às pressas para os últimos retoques da estréia.

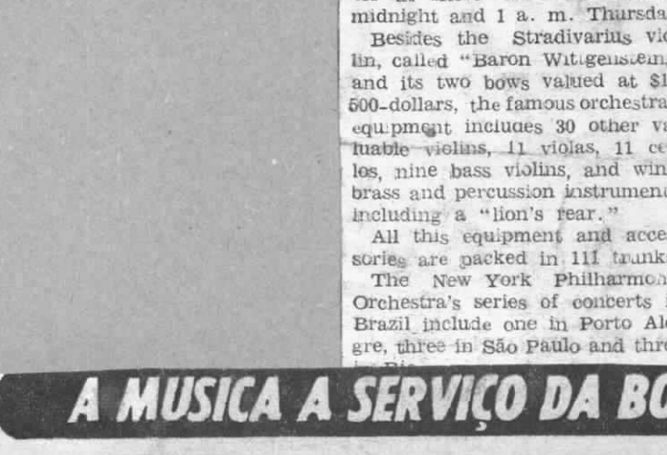
A MUSICA A SERVIÇO DA BOA VIZINHANÇA



SÃO PAULO, BRASIL 6-15 1958
Folha da Manhã

DARA BEM SERVIR a causa da boa vizinhança entre os povos a musica é incontestavelmente a embaixatriz mais credenciada; a mais indicada para levar a bom termo tão importante missão diplomatica. Principalmente quando a musica nos chega representada por uma orquestra da categoria da Filarmonica de Nova York, e se faz ouvir sob a batuta de um regente da excepcional envergadura de um Dimitri Mitropoulus.

Não é de estranhar portanto tenha se imposto como qualquer coisa de inesquecivel a breve temporada realizada no Teatro Municipal pela Orquestra Filarmonica de Nova York. Seus concertos constituiram memoravel acontecimento artistico que os aficionados da musica erudita souberam prestigiar devidamente superlotando as as dependencias do principal teatro da cidade, expandindo sua admiração, seu enlevo e seu entusiasmo através de prolongada, extraordinaria ovação.

Na noite da segunda apresentação da notavel orquestra, em seguida ao concerto, a Filarmonica de Nova York, na pessoa do seu magistral condutor Dimitri Mitropoulus, foi homenageada pelo famoso maestro patricio Eleazar de Carvalho, e por sua esposa, a pianista Jocy de Carvalho, com uma elegantissima recepção levada a efeito na residencia do casal Jandira-Jaime Carvalho de Oliveira

Em torno da figura simpatica e cordial de Mitropoulus os anfitriões reuniram artistas, gente da sociedade, representantes da colonia norte-americana aqui radicada. Pudemos registrar as seguintes presenças: sra. e sr. Richard Butrick, consul geral dos Estados Unidos em São Paulo, sra. e sr. Paulo Le Mintier de Lehélec, consul geral da França, sra. e sr. DEPOIS DA VISITA DA FILARMONICA DE N.I.

Folha da Manhã 6-10-58

Ao fim de uma temporada brevissima, foi-se embora a Orquestra Filarmonica de Nova Iorque, Mitropoulos e seu celebre conjunto deixando atrás de si um rastro de simpatia e de popularidade. Os artistas norte-americanos, em sua rapida estada na cidade, provocaram as mais gratas impressões. Uma delas, à vista do extraordinario exito do concerto popular de sábado ultimo no Anhangabaú, é a receptividade do povo a iniciativas culturais e recreativas de alto nivel, o que de resto não surpreende ninguem. Mas sempre deveria servir de lembrete aos orgãos da administração publica, sobretudo o atual governo municipal, que por sinal inscreveu em sua plataforma um capitulo consagrado ao assunto e que, como tantos outros, se vem mostrando letra morta.

Mitropoulos Directs Today's Concert

By JAIME O'FARRILL L.

One of the many reasons for the success of the New York Philharmonic Symphony is due directly to the tremendously popular Greek-American director Dimitri Mitropoulos, who will direct the orchestra's second concert in Mexico this morning at the National Auditorum.

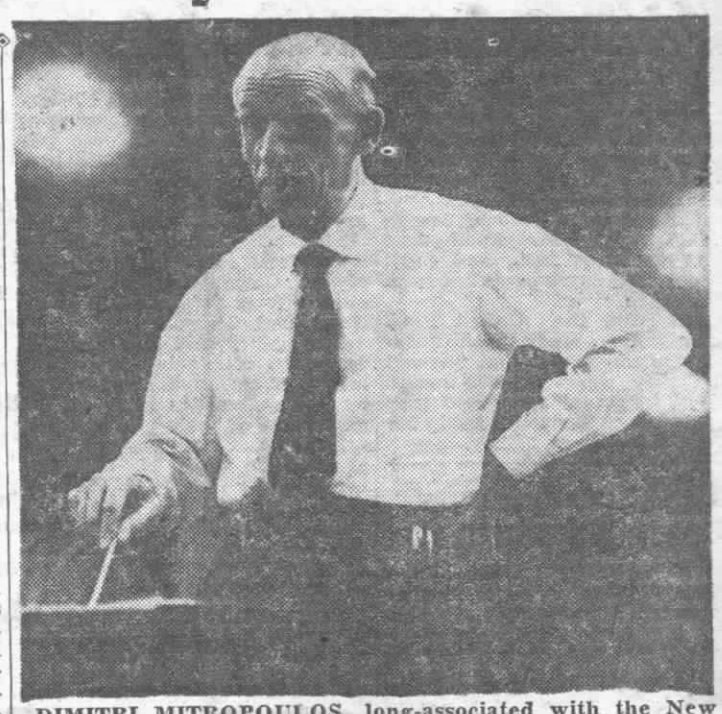
This morning's concert, which is scheduled to get underway at 11 o'clock in the Paseo de la Reforma auditorium, includes the Overture Der Freishnetz by Weber, Beethoven's Symphony No. 2 in D minor, Opus 36, Schoenberg's Noche Transfigurada, Opus 4 for stringed instruments and Samuel Barber's Meditation and Dance of the Vengeance of Medea, Opus 23-A.

Mitropoulos' brilliant reputation in Europe gave him a running start in the United States, where he made his debut with the Bostom Symphony in 1936. From 1937 until the spring of 1949 he centered his activities around the Middle West, but his direction of the Minneapolis Symphony and various guest appearances around the U. S. soon gave him a coast-to-coast following.

During the 1940-41 season he appeared for first time with the New York Philharmonic. In the following years he augmented his popularity with regular appearances as director of the Philharmonic and in 1950 he was named director of the group for the 50-51 season. He served as director from 1951 until 1957. During the past season in New York he shared the director's duties with Leonard Bernstein, who last night directed the Symphony in its Bellas Artes performance.

Mitropoulos was born in Athens in 1896 and underwent his first musical studies in the Athens Conservatory. He later continued under the direction of Ferrucio Busoni in Berlin. He spent several years as head director of the Athens Symphony, but found it difficult to hold himself to one field of music, also being a piano virtuoso and a highly talented composer. His first orchestra direction experience proved both to Mitropoulos and to his teacherst hat this was the field to which he should devote his abilities.

He's recognized the world over as a leading interpreter of the classics, besides being a champion of the modern composers. Thanks to his interest and devotiion, many modern works have found almost instant receival and praise.



His operas presented in concerts with the Philharmonic, which include Strauss' Elektra, the Spanish Hour by Ravel Wozzeck by Berg and Milhaud's Christophe Colombe, have proven to be outstanding musical events in New York City. Recently Mitropoulos has presented the 10th Symphony for violin by Shostakovitch and the much-discussed concert for orchestra and jazz band by Libermann, as well as numerous works by United States-born composers.

Opera lovers in the U. S. had their first opportunity to hear Mitropoulos in the 1954-55 season when he directed the orchestra of the Metropolitan Opera House. Among the operas he has directed are Salome, A Masquerade Ball, Tosca, Boris Godunov, Madame Butterfly, Manuon Lescaut and world prepremier of Barber's Vanessa.

In August of 1951 Mitropulos directed a series of concerts with the Philharmonic at the Edinburgh Festival, which was the first time a U. S. orchestra appeared in an international music festival. In 1955 he returned with the Philharmonic for another series in Edinburgh.

In Italy, where he is in constant demand both for opera and concert performances, he was a musical sensation with his presentations of Elektra, Wozzeck, the Force of Destiny and Girl of the Golden West.

He last appeared in Germany in 1954 and in 1932 made his Austrian debut. Mitropoulos won unanimous acclaim for his work in Munich, Cologne, Salzburgh and Vienna. He also handled a series of concerts by the Vienna Philharmonic.

DIMITRI MITROPOULOS, long-associated with the New York Philharmonic Symphony Orchestra, this morning will take the podium when the world-famed orchestra presents its second concert in Mexico at the National Auditorium on the Paseo de la Reforma. The concert begins at 11 a.m.

DIMITRI MITROPOULOS CON LA FILARMONICA DE NUEVA YORK, EL DOMINGO 15

Dimitri Mitropoulos nació en Grecia y es ciudadano norteamericano. Una reputación brillante en Europa precedió su debut en los Estados Unidos en 1936 con la Sinfónica de Boston. Desde 1937 hasta la primavera de 1949, sus actividades se concentraron en la región del Medio Oeste; fue director musical de la Sinfónica de Minneápolis, pero sus giras con esta orquesta y sus frecuentes actuaciones con otras orquestas importantes pronto le aseguraron el favor de un público devoto que se extendía de costa a costa.

Durante la temporada de 1940-41 se presentó por primera vez con la Filarmónica de Nueva York. En los años subsiguientes, aumentó su reputación musical y su popularidad al presentarse regularmente con dicha orquesta. Fue nombrado director de la orquesta en la temporada de 1950-51, y director musical desde la temporada de 1951-52 hasta la de 1956-57. En la de 1957-58 compartió con Leonard Bernstein los deberes inherentes al director en propiedad.

Dimitri Mitropoulos nació en Atenas el 18 de febrero de 1896; hizo sus primeros estudios en el conservatorio de su ciudad natal, y después con Ferrucio Busoni en Berlín. Durante algunos años estuvo al frente de la Sinfónica de Atenas como director en propiedad. Con grandes dotes de pianista virtuoso y compositor de gran talento, le resultaba difícil al comienzo de su carrera entregarse por entero a una sola actividad. Pero con su primera experiencia como director de orquesta, se dio cuenta que había dado con su verdadera vocación.

Dimitri Mitropoulos es bien conocido con un gran intérprete de los clásicos, además de ser un convencido paladín de los compositores modernos. Gracias a su interés y devoción, muchas obras modernas importantes han encontrado acogida. Sus óperas presentadas en conciertos con la Filarmónica e incluyendo la Elektra de Strauss, La Hora Española de Ravel, Wozzeck de Berg y Christophe Colombe de Milhaud, han resultado grandes acontecimientos musicales. En los últimos años, presentó por primera vez en Nueva York la Décima Sinfonía y concierto para violín de Shostakovitch, el debatido concierto para orquesta y banda de jazz de Libermann, así como obras de un gran número de compositores norteamericanos. En reconocimiento de su empeño en favor de la música, recibió en octubre de 1957 una mención honorífica del Consejo Nacional de Música.

Los amantes de la ópera en los Estados Unidos tuvieron su primera oportunidad de poder escuchar a Mitropoulos en el Metropolitan Opera House de Nueva York, cuando hizo su debut en la temporada de 1954-55. Entre las óperas que ha dirigido se cuentan Salomé, Un Baile de Máscaras, Tosca, Boris Godunov, Carmen, Madame Butterfy, Manúon Lescaut y Las Walkirias. Dirigió Eugene Onegin en la función inaugural de esta temporada, y más tarde, la premiere mundial de Vanessa, de Samuel Barber.

En agosto de 1951, Mitropoulos, dirigió una serie de conciertos con la Filarmónica en el Festival de Edimburgo, siendo la primera vez que una orquesta de los Estados Unidos se presentó en dicho festival internacional. En 1955, volvió con la mencionada Filarmónica para dirigir otros conciertos en ese festival.

En Italia, donde está en demanda constante tanto para ópera como para conciertos, fue una sensación musical con sus presentaciones de Elektra, Wozzeck, La Fuerza del Destino y La Muchacha del Dorado Oeste.

En Alemania dirigió en 1954 y en Austria por primera vez en 1932, con un éxito grandioso en Munich, Colonia, Salzburgo y Viena. Don Giovanni en Salzburgo, y Manón Lescaut en Viena. También dirigió una serie de conciertos en la Filarmónica de Viena en Salzburgo, Viena y Venecia. En Estados Unidos le escucha un público siempre en aumento.

LOS DISTINGUIDOS directores Dimitri Mitropoulos y Leonard Bernstein, de la Orquesta Filarmónica de Nueva York, consideran el medio musical mexicano como uno de los más importantes de Hispanoamérica, no solamente por lo numeroso y entusiasta del público, sino por la trascendental labor creadora de compositores tales como Chávez, Revueltas, Galindo y otros.

México fue Calificado Como Paraíso de Artistas por L. Bernstein y Mitropoulos

LOS DIRECTORES de la Filarmónica de Nueva York, señores Dimitri Mitropoulos y Leonard Bernstein (en segundo y tercer lugar, de i. a d.) en los momentos de llegar procedentes de Río de Janeiro, en un avión especial de la Pan American. Al extremo derecho, aparece el agregado cultural a la embajada de Estados Unidos, señor Jacob Canter.

DURANTE LA CONFERENCIA de prensa que ayer ofrecieron los directores de la Filarmónica de Nueva York, que debutará esta noche en Bellas Artes, fue captada esta gráfica, en la que aparecen, de izquierda a derecha, el señor Jacob Canter, agregado cultural a la embajada norteamericana, y los directores Dimitri Mitropoulos y Leonard Bernstein.

Leonard Bernstein y Dimitri Mitropoulos, directores que hoy y mañana podrá admirar México al frente de la famosa Filarmónica de Nueva York, expresaron ayer su admiración hacia nuestro país, al que calificaron de verdadero paraíso para los artistas.

Bernstein que debutó como director de la Filarmónica cuando tenía 25 años de edad, dijo que siempre ha tenido gran interés por el movimiento musical en México, por su paralelo con el de Estados Unidos, especialmente en el aspecto folklórico apoyado en la técnica europea. Así, encuentra semejanzas entre Chávez y Copland, Revueltas y Bowles, Blas Galindo y Morton Gould.

El maestro, considerado como el más versátil en la escena musical de Estados Unidos, fue llamado en un tiempo "el niño prodigio" y ayer cuando se le hizo notar esto, dijo en forma humorística, que desecha el título porque ya casi tiene 40 años.

El próximo otoño asumirá la dirección musical como titular de la Filarmónica de Nueva York, la organización sinfónica más antigua de Estados Unidos y una de las cinco más antiguas del mundo.

Sobre la importancia de este hecho, el maestro Dimitri Mitropoulos señaló que será la primera vez en Estados Unidos que un conjunto musical no tiene que importar un director de Europa ya que Bernstein nació y se educó ahí, lo que demuestra la solidez de la cultura musical de la Unión Americana.

Y en la mente del joven director de la Filarmónica, Bernstein cuyos conciertos son escuchados por 15 millones de personas todos los meses al través de la cadena radial de la CBS, bullen muchos proyectos para el futuro.

Bernstein dijo que espera hacer una programación distinta, especial, para ligar cada programa a fin de que al terminar cada temporada se haya podido tener un escenario completo de la música.

Para ello hace estudios especiales de los músicos norteamericanos y planea no sólo tocar desde los más antiguos sino hasta los más jóvenes y hará festivales de cada autor, en sus fechas conmemorativas.

Sólo se enfrenta a un problema. La Filarmónica está a punto de quedarse sin sede cuando menos durante un año ya que se planea demoler el Carnegie Hall, en donde desde 1892 ha ofrecido 6 mil conciertos, pues se proyecta construir ahí un gran Centro Artístico Musical cuyo costo será de unos 200 millones de dólares (2,500 millones de pesos).

Estima que esto será una fase sumamente importante pues estarán juntas la Filarmónica y la Metropolitan Opera House, que tendrán así oportunidad de aproximarse y estrechar la colaboración.

Sobre la música y su preferencia, él opina sencillamente que le gustan todos los buenos compositores y que no tiene predilección por ninguno.

Bernstein, casado con la actriz chilena Felicia Montealegre y padre de dos hijos, dirigió en México en 1951 y además su batuta ha conducido también las principales orquestas de Estados Unidos, Roma, Praga Londres, Budapest, Viena, Milán, Munich e Israel y fue el primer director nacido en Estados Unidos que dirigió en La Scala.

Dado que fue hace siete años cuando estuvo en México consideró difícil opinar sobre el movimiento cultural en México, los compositores, directores y músicos.

Pero señaló que en todos los países hay un gran desarrollo cultural con públicos que aman la música. Advirtió además que hay numerosas variedades de niveles culturales.

Dijo que hay un movimiento muy activo en todos los países. Citó a Perú y a Uruguay y a México, pero señaló que de aquí nada podía decir porque acababa de llegar. Acerca del sonido 13 de don Julián Carrillo dijo que ha leído algo sobre

Magno Concierto de la Filarmónica Neoyorquina

Por ESPERANZA PULIDO

No solamente un encuentro internacional de boxeo puede colmar de público el espacioso Estadio Nacional: la Filarmónica de Nueva York logró un lleno casi completo para su segundo y último concierto de ayer por la mañana. Creemos que más de 8,000 almas escucharon a la orquesta máxima neoyorquina, dirigida esta vez por Mitropoulos.

Con este director greconorteamericano se palpa la voz de la experiencia y el saber. Su personal forma de dirigir (batuta baja y movimientos de gran economía) logra rendimientos de extrema eficiencia. Su arte es de aquellos que dejan su impronta indeleblemente en el seno de los conjuntos sinfónicos encomendados a su titular batuta, como sucedió con la de Minneápolis; como se palpa ahora con la de Nueva York, cuyo refinamiento actual es en gran parte obra suya.

Desde los primeros compases de la Obertura de Der Freischuetz, de Weber, se palpó la presencia del gran músico, conductor de huestes profesionales de primera, dóciles a su mando.

Escuchando la segunda obra del programa —la Sinfonía número dos de Beethoven— se preguntaba uno cuántas veces la habría ejecutado la orquesta desde su fundación, a mediados del siglo pasado. Cada generación de músicos debe haberle ensayado veintenas de veces. Llevan estos músicos en las venas todas las principales obras del repertorio clásico y romántico y entre las modernas muchas les son ya completamente familiares. Por tal razón, las ejecutan con una naturalidad inconcebible en orquestas jóvenes.

Mitropoulos decidió substituir La Noche Transfigurada de Schoenberg anunciada en el programa, con dos trozos sinfónicos de carácter más popular: el poema Don Juan, de Strauss y la Obertura de La Fuerza del Destino, de Verdi. La mayoría del público agradeció el cambio con entusiasmo.

La obra de Samuel Barber —Meditación y Danza de la Venganza de Medea— fue una prueba más de que los EE. UU. siguen produciendo excelentes compositores. El talento de Barber evoluciona a más y mejor. Esta su opus 23 A, aunque procedente de una obra ya decenaria, fue reorquestada por su autor en forma completamente nueva y novedosa. En la danza final, después de algunas páginas profundamente meditativas, parece que Medea baila una especie de boogie estilizado.

Como encore concedió Mitropoulos la Jota del Sombrero de Tres Picos, de Manuel de Falla, ejecutada con el fuego requerido.

Magnífica Embajada del Arte

LA presentación, en el Teatro de Bellas Artes ante un número muy limitado de espectadores, en el Auditorio Nacional ante un público mucho más extenso, de la magnífica orquesta Filarmónica de Nueva York, fue un éxito clamoroso: el éxito que todos esperábamos de la incomparable embajada artística que, bajo el patrocinio del Departamento de Estado de Washington, acaba de cosechar palmas delirantes de los melómanos mexicanos.

El acontecimiento, valiosísimo desde el doble punto de vista del arte universal y de las relaciones interamericanas, fue deslucido, sin embargo, por un hecho censurable que revela imprevisión o simple descuido: los boletos de entrada para el primer concierto, que desde la víspera se dijo al público que se habían agotado, en muy buena parte quedaron en manos de revendedores, que en las últimas horas abusaron descarada y desmedidamente.

La cantidad de boletos con que hicieron su ilícito agosto esos ladrones —que así pueden y deben ser llamados—, excluye casi la posibilidad de que hayan sido adquiridos con apariencia de normalidad en las taquillas, e induce la sospecha de que deliberadamente fueron destinados a la reventa por un empleado del propio Instituto Nacional de Bellas Artes, con responsabilidad personal de alguno o algunos de sus altos funcionarios. Lo cual, por desagradable y escandaloso que pueda resultar, debe ser investigado, a efecto de que se señale a los culpables de ese atentado contra los intereses del público, contra la decencia y contra el decoro del propio gobierno.

Bernstein y Mitropoulos Sastisfechos de la Gira

Declaran que en Hispanoamérica Recibieron Muestras de Cariño

NUEVA YORK, 17 de junio. (AP) — Los directores norteamericanos de orquesta, Leonard Bernstein y Dimitri Mitropoulos elogiaron hoy el sensacional recibimiento de que tanto ellos como la Orquesta Filarmónica de Nueva York fueron objeto durante su gira de siete semanas por doce países sudamericanos, y dijeron que los Estados Unidos deberían invertir mayores sumas en obras culturales de esa índole.

"El gobierno de los Estados Unidos no se ha percatado todavía de la tremenda importancia ni del valor de propaganda que tiene la música —dijo Mitropoulos—. Los rusos, por otra parte, le están sacando el mayor partido posible".

Los dos directores, que ofrecieron 39 conciertos en 21 ciudades, declararon en una entrevista de prensa que no advirtieron la menor señal de animosidad del pueblo iberoamericano hacia la orquesta.

"Hubo sólo cordialidad y entusiasmo entre nosotros y la gente de todos los lugares donde actuamos, dijo Bernstein".

La orquesta dio conciertos en ciudades como Lima y Caracas, donde sólo unos días antes se había apedreado y escupido al vicepresidente de los Estados Unidos, Richard Nixon.

"La diferencia consistió —dijo Bernstein— en que aportábamos bondad y amor, en tanto que el objeto del viaje de Nixon fue el de corregir un concepto erróneo. Pero la música es algo que los iberoamericanos comprenden. Las tarifas y el comercio son necesarios, pero no gratos. Cuando se vio claramente que la tarea de Nixon no representaba en concreto una nueva política, el pueblo lo resintió".

pectáculos distinto a los teatros de concierto tradicionales.

No cabía una sola persona más en el auditorio, que estaba atestado de gente desde la platea hasta las últimas galerías. Todos estaban ansiosos de escuchar a la orquesta que ha arrancado vibrantes ovaciones en diferentes países del mundo, por sus brillantes actuaciones musicales.

UN ESPECTACULO LLENO DE FERVOR

A las 11:15 de la mañana, exactamente, hizo su aparición el director de la Filarmónica, Dimitri Mitropoulous (nació en Grecia y se nacionalizó en Estados Unidos), de regular estatura, delgado, vestido con saco negro y pantalón a rayas. Su ascenso al podio arrancó la primera salva de aplausos, que fue súbitamente cortada por el comienzo de la Obertura Der Freischuetz, de Carl María von Weber. Quizás muchos de los espectadores esperaban ver un director de alborotada melena; pero no fue así. Mitropoulus (con 63 años de edad), es un director de movimientos suaves y rápidos y también de pocos cabellos en la cabeza.

Ni un solo ruido se oía dentro del recinto. La gente procuraba contener la respiración para no perder una sola nota del concierto ni un solo movimiento del director. Un camarógrafo que se atrevió a poner en marcha la cuerda de su filmadora, fue rápidamente acallado por los "¡sshh!"...

Nosotros ocupamos un lugar, —el 113— en la luneta central. Para conseguir el boleto, días antes, nos tocó batallar. Desde ese lugar, el espectáculo era este: sobre la plataforma, cerca de 103 músicos de la Filarmónica, cada uno en su asiento, y con ternos de diferentes colores, pegados a sus partituras, interpretaban el concierto, con sus diferentes instrumentos: violines (los más numerosos), violas, chelos, contrabajos, flautas, el picolo, el corno inglés, los oboes, los clarinetes, los fagots, los cornos, las trompetas, los trombones, el piano, las arpas. Detrás de los instrumentos de viento, los aparatos de percusión. Saul Goodman era uno de los músicos que más se agitaba al tocar sus timbales: las manos arriba, abajo, a los lados, con gran agilidad, hacia que el suspenso fuera más emocionante.

Detrás de nuestro asiento, hacia todas direcciones, los miles de personas que asistieron. El auditorio era un enjambre humano.

NUEVAS OBRAS EN EL PROGRAMA

Alrededor de 15 minutos duró la interpretación de la obertura de Der Freischuetz. Al concluir, largos aplausos resonaron por doquier. Los oyentes, puestos en pie, batieron las manos sin cesar. El comienzo de la Sinfonía No. 2 en Re Mayor, Opus 36, de Beethoven, volvio a acallar las ovaciones del público. Primero, el adagio molto; luego el allegro con brio; más adelante, el larguetto y, finalmente, el allegro molto, aumentan la emoción. Y así termina la primera parte del concierto —el segundo— presentado por la Filarmónica, bajo el patrocinio de la Dirección de Bellas Artes y en colaboración con el Programa Cultural de los Estados Unidos y The American National Theatre and Academy.

Todavía en el intermedio hubo de entrar más gente. Parte subió hasta las galerías y otra se quedó en los pasillos.

Y nuevamente Mitropoulus, el director serio, con cabeza en forma de águila, vuelve a mover la batuta desde el podio: empieza el "Don Juan" de Strauss.

La segunda parte del programa fue modificada, debido a imperfecciones en la acústica del Auditorio. "La Noche Transfigurada" del músico vienés Arnold Schoenberg, para instrumentos de cuerda, fue cambiada por el "Don Juan", de Strauss, y por "La Forza del Destino", de Giuseppe Verdi. Es en la segunda parte, pues, cuando los acordes retumbaban con mayor fuerza. Los instrumentos de viento se combinan con los de cuerda, produciendo más sonoridad. La interpretación de estas obras musicales provocó júbilo en el público.

Al concluir el concierto, las ovaciones se hicieron interminables. Una y otra vez, las personas, incorporadas de sus asientos, movían sin cesar sus manos. El director de la Filarmónica subía, bajaba, salía y volvía a entrar. Los músicos se levantaban una y otra vez de sus asientos a la indicación del director. El público pedía el encore.

Y el encore, con el cual terminan los grandes conciertos, resonó por fin. Esta vez, con la interpretación del último movimiento (finale) de "El Sombrero de Tres Picos", de Manuel de Falla. Las castañuelas se sacudían sin cesar. Y luego, con un acorde, en seco, que dejó atónitas a las gentes, finalizó el concierto. Nuevamente, los aplausos, los interminables aplausos...

LO QUE SUCEDE TRAS DE LOS BASTIDORES

En medio de los vitores y los "bravos", la orquesta abandonó el escenario.

Tras de los bastidores había también algarabía. Allí estábamos situados y vimos entrar a Mitropoulus, que se limpiaba el sudor de su amplia frente. Le preguntamos que cómo se sentía, y lacónicamente nos contestó: "Estoy muy emocionado... No puedo hacer declaraciones... Ahora me iré a almorzar..."

¿Quiere darnos su opinión sobre este concierto? El, mientras estampa su autógrafo en un libreto, dice que no acostumbraba conceder declaraciones.

La confusión detrás de los bastidores aumenta. Muchas personas quieren conocer y saludar al director de la Filarmónica y a los músicos. Se trepan al escenario, lo abrazan y luego se van. Presurosos, los músicos empacan y se van. Y Mitropoulus también se marcha en un "Cadillac" negro.

Lo seguimos hasta el hotel Reforma. Allí nos encontramos al director Leonard Bernstein, el notable músico norteamericano que apenas llega a los 39 años. "Estoy descansando —nos dijo— y en la tarde iré a los toros..."

En la Filarmónica hay un músico de la República Dominicana, a quien no pudimos entrevistar. Es el único hispanoamericano de la orquesta. Los demás son estadunidenses, generalmente de descendencia europea.

Nos encontramos, también, al gran maestro mexicano Carlos Chávez, quien visiblemente emocionado, nos dice: "Este concierto ha sido magnífico. Para mí ha sido uno de los momentos más gratos de mi vida el haber podido asistir a esta fiesta del espíritu".

New York Philharmonic Gives 2nd, Final Performance Here

An approximate 16,000 people paid clamorous tribute to the visiting New York Philharmonic Orchestra yesterday on its second and final appearance in Mexico.

Dimitri Mitropoulos directed yesterday's memorable performance at the National Auditorium, following a Saturday night concert conducted by Leonard Bernstein at the Palace of Fine Arts.

A strong accent on contemporary works marked the first, and to a lesser degree the second performance. This seeming preference for the modern and atonal over the classic media would possibly have dimmed the events' significance had the concerts been programmed by a less artistic ensemble.

Under Mitropoulis's dynamic baton, the works of De Falla and the North American composer Samuel Barber became living, pulsating things to follow up interpretations of Weber and Beethoven with a most esthetically logical and emotive finale.

Yesterday's concert opened with Weber's Overture Der Freischuetz, an inimitable interpretation of Beethoven's ...phony No. 2 in D Major, ... Strauss' "Don Juan"; ... Meditation and ...he Vengeance of ... overture to "La Fuerza del Destino" by Verdi and as an encore De Falla's "Three Cornered Hat."

Vacationers from Gotham, where Carnegie Hall's aura of musical grandeur has perhaps become a routine phenomenon, may have registered but mild surprise on hearing that the famed Philharmonic was in Mexico. To those of us who have relied for years on imperfect radio transmissions and hi-fi records —that still don't do justice to the renowned orchestra's superlative mastery—the appearances here were overwhelming.

The program listed for Saturday night's concert, saved from the rather grostesque perspective of complete dissonance by Tchaikowsky's Fourth Symphony, was somewhat disquieting.

The Mexico debut was, it seemed, merely another of a long series of triumphal concerts for the New York Philharmonic. But did the Philharmonic grasp the significance to Mexico of its first and unprecedented appearance here?

Several rather disturbing factors pointed to a possible Mexican tribute of lip-service, to the symphony's 2-concert series. One was a seeming preference for and belief in bygone European pre-eminence in the arts. The other that the New York Philharmonic, second to none, should sell itself short—so to speak —by interpreting works of secondary importance in a debut before a music-loving public in a foreign land.

Certainly Gershwin's "An American In Paris" would make excellent background music for a Gene Kelly dance act. But how can one sanely compare it with the sweeping grandeur found in Bach, Beethoven or Brahms? So the works of our contempraries must come before the public. Why can't they be saved for a performance on home ground?

Perhaps we could be accused of wanting an egg with our beer. But if U. S. talent is to be exported—where was Van Cliburn?

The Saturday night peformance at Bellas Artes was opened with Carlos Chavez' "Sinfonía India," an obvious goodwill gesture. An impeccable and sensitive performance of the indigenous themes probably revealed possibilities the able composer himself had envisioned but vaguely. It was followed by Symphony No. 3 of Roy Harris, also impeccably interpreted. We hope to be spared of Roy Harris in the future by any orchestra of lesser mastery.

These misgivings were all dispelled at Sunday's concert the only of the two we were able to attend — the other slightly distorted by television. Unrivalled excellence from start to finish was not marred, but rather enhanced by the atonal switch following intermission.

Samuel Barber's opus was striking even amid such fiery works as the Strauss, the Verdi and the De Falla. Its rhythmic monotony building in a gradual crescendo to thunderous climax made even the most highly dissonant passages esthetically justifiable.

Summing up personal impressions of these two imposing events, I would venture that the New York Philharmonic is a group of musicians of such stature that it could play nothing but contemporary atonal works to the ears of any audience in the world and make them love it—even to those of a heretic.

Despidiendo a la Filarmónica

DURANTE LA fiesta de despedida para la Filarmónica de Nueva York, se reunieron en el hotel Reforma cuatro figuras consagradas en el mundo: Carlos Chávez, Igor Markevich, Leonard Bernstein y Dimitri Mitropoulos

Para despedir a los miembros de la Orquesta Filarmónica de Nueva York y cerrar festivamente el largo recorrido realizado durante las últimas semanas a través de países hispanoamericanos, tuvo lugar una alegre fiesta mexicana con intervención de un conjunto de mariachis, bocadillos nacionales y cocteles a base de tequila.

El agasajo fue ofrecido por la gerencia del Hotel Reforma y se efectuó en el Salón Beethoven de la misma organización. Tanto el señor Leonard Bernstein como Dimitri Mitropoulos, conductores de la Filarmónica de Nueva York, se mostraron muy complacidos con la fiesta de despedida y departieron alegremente con los miembros de la orquesta y los invitados de la embajada de Estados Unidos.

Esta fiesta de despedida sirvió de marco para que se reunieran cuatro figuras consagradas en el mundo musical: Igor Markevich, conductor que disfruta de gran prestigio en Europa; Dimitri Mitropoulos, Leonard Bernstein y el destacado conductor y compositor mexicano Carlos Chávez, quien concurrió a la fiesta para saludar a los directores de la Filarmónica neoyorquina.

Leonard Bernstein y Dimitri Mitropoulos se mostraron muy complacidos del éxito alcanzado por la Filarmónica durante sus dos presentaciones en México y a pesar de que la gira había sido muy prolongada y durante muchas semanas habían estado fuera de su hogares, lamentaban tener que regresar a Nueva York el domingo por la noche, ya que hubieran querido disfrutar más tiempo del cariño y la hospitalidad que se les brindó en nuestro país.

Ambas figuras artísticas, quienes están entre lo más destacado que nos haya visitado en los últimos años, disfrutaron ampliamente la fiesta y le prestaron especial atención a la inesperada intervención del mariachi que amenizó la reunión para despedirlos. El maestro Bernstein se mostró muy interesado por "Las Golondrinas" y un funcionario de la embajada de Estados Unidos le explicó el significado de la melodía y su contenido sentimental en las despedidas.

Entusiasmado por la música folklórica, el violinista Mike DiStefano le pidió el instrumento a un violinista del mariachi y participó en la ejecución de varias melodías.

El momento más divertido de la fiesta fue cuando el maestro Bernstein empezó a dirigir al mariachi y le ordenó a DiStefano que abandonara el grupo por falta de calidad artística.

Después de recorrer miles de kilómetros y presentarse ante numerosos públicos, los artistas de la Filarmónica de Nueva York disfrutaron en México de un significativo agasajo en el que se combinaron la hospitalidad y el cariño mexicanos.

Musik

Die Frage lautet: Ist Jazz die lebendige Musik unserer Zeit? — Gewiß ist Jazz die lebendige oder zumindest eine lebendige musikalische Kraft von heute. Auch atomare Energie, die Fernlenkrakete, die unheimliche Ueberwindung der Schallgrenze sind lebendige Kräfte. Sie sind bereit zu unterdrücken und zu zerstören — und wohl auch selbst zerstört zu werden. Alle stellen sie wichtige Faktoren unserer gegenwärtigen Existenz dar. Sie sind praktisch unvermeidbar und daher nur zu lebendig. Sie sind der Ausdruck und das Bedürfnis der Epoche, in welcher wir leben.

Und doch hat die Natur im Laufe der Entwicklung, Billionen Jahre hindurch, nicht allein solche grauenerweckende Phänomene hervorgebracht, sondern sich auch an verhältnismäßig sehr schwachen, wollen wir sagen „zierlichen" Lebewesen, zum Beispiel den Mammalien, versucht. Trotz deren scheinbar leichten Verletzlichkeit haben sich diese bis zum heutigen Tage erhalten, während die Dinosaurier nur noch als Märchenwesen und Museumsstücke übriggeblieben sind. „Ueberleben" ist eine nicht vorherzusehende Angelegenheit.

Ich gerate immer in Verlegenheit, wenn mich Leute um meine Meinung über den Jazz fragen. Vielleicht erwarten sie von mir, daß ich dessen macht- und eindrucksvolle Existenz bekräftige oder vielleicht auch, daß ich ihnen sage, ich betrachtete ihn als die Musik der Zukunft. Die Tatsache, daß ich selbst Musiker bin, rechtfertigt solche Anfragen keineswegs. Selbstverständlich muß ich die Tatsache anerkennen, daß der Jazz Musik ist. Auch der unbegleitete Singsang des Hirten im Gebirge, das Weinen des Säuglings, das Zwitschern der Vögel sind Musik. Jedoch all dies hat nichts mit Jazz zu tun, und Jazz hat nichts zu tun mit dem, was ich selbst tue. Sie alle sind Elemente, und ich akzeptiere sie als solche; zur Verwendung als Ornamente, im Bestreben, ein monumentales musikalisches Bauwerk zu errichten. Dieses ist Ziel und Zweck der Musik, die ich vertrete. Ich arbeite für eine andersgeartete Welt, für jene der sogenannten „Musik-Denker", und da ich ein reproduzierender Künstler bin, habe ich mein Leben der Pflege von Werken solcher „Musik-Denker" gewidmet.

Die Musik, für die ich mich einsetze, erstand ursprünglich als Ausdruck religiöser Funktionen in der Kirche; sie wurde geschrieben von Menschen, die mit ihr Christus dienen wollten. Sie schufen Chormusik, bestimmt, Gott zu preisen. Später wurde der Wirkungskreis solcher Musik erweitert, sie verließ das Gotteshaus, wurde weltlich, indem sie nicht nur Anbetung, sondern auch menschliche Gedanken und Gefühle auszudrücken suchte Eine neue Kunst wurde geboren, die Kunst der Töne; das architektonische Empfinden des Zeitalters wurde auch auf die Konstruktion musikalischer Formen angewendet. Durch diese Wandlung wurde die symphonische Form geschaffen. Wir schulden dafür dem deutschen Geiste Dank. Die Musik, die ich darbiete, ist immer noch rein architektonisch gedacht, aus Tönen in eine bauliche Form gebannt.

Trotzdem Musik schon seit langem nicht mehr nur bestimmt ist, die Verherrlichung Gottes zu verkünden, so bewegt sie sich doch in einer geistigen Sphäre. Wir gehen in ein Konzert, um musikalisch-spirituelle Eindrücke zu genießen: es ist eben ein vergeistigter Genuß. Darum betrachte ich mich sozusagen als Priester, der in einer Versammlung seiner Gemeinde dient. Es würde mich in ziemliche Verlegenheit versetzen, wenn jemand, der meine Berufung kennt, mich fragen wollte, wie ich über eine burleske Revue denke. Als ob das Vergnügen, eine solche aufzunehmen, in einem Atem mit dem Empfinden genannt werden könnte, welche den Gläubigen im Gotteshaus überkommt — sei es, daß ein solches der Anbetung des Höchsten oder jener der Musik dient.

Und doch bin ich der erste, der bekennt, daß jede einzelne Ausdrucksweise des menschlichen Geistes ihre Berechtigung hat, und daß alle Empfindungen einen ungeheuren Umfang von Höhe zu Tiefe bezeigen, vergleichbar mit jenem vom Fuße eines hohen Berges bis hinauf zu seinem Gipfel. Einen Umfang, der in seiner Art als Aufstieg zur Idee des Göttlichen betrachtet werden mag.

Wogegen ich mich aber wehre, ist die Erwartung der Leute, daß ich Vergleiche ziehe. Es ist leicht zu behaupten, daß der Jazz und alles, was er verdolmetscht, hunderte Millionen Menschen erfreut, wohingegen Musik, wie ich sie vermittle, nur etwa zehn Millionen Freude bereitet. Der Begriff der Mehrheit muß stets anerkannt werden, und es ist wahrscheinlich, daß, wenn Musik, die ich die meine nenne, aus der Welt verschwände, außer jenen zehn Millionen keiner es bemerkte. Doch hat uns die Natur selbst in einer langen Folge des Prüfens und Widerrufens die Möglichkeit zu erkennen gegeben, daß gerade diese, auf den Bedürfnissen einer geringen Minorität beruhende Kunst, zum überleben bestimmt sei; weil ihre geistigen Kräfte beweisen, daß sie unzerstörbar und daher ewig ist.

Im übrigen benötige ich jene Hunderte von mir so verschiedene Millionen Menschen, um den Wert meiner eigenen Existenz zu beweisen. Vor kurzem hatte ich Gelegenheit, mit Duke Ellington zusammenzuarbeiten, nämlich im selben Konzert mit ihm und seinem fabelhaften Ensemble aufzutreten. Ich bot jene beunruhigende, hochgeistige Musik, von der die Rede war, und er jene andere, die er vertritt, angeblich die fortgeschrittenste Art des „Jazz", dieses unwiderstehlichen, enorm lebendigen Ausdrucks unserer Zeit. Ob man es mir glaubt oder nicht: nachdem ich meinen Teil des Programms beendigt hatte, setzte ich mich auf meinen Platz und genoß jede Minute von Duke Ellingtons Arbeit. Sie dünkte mir sehr gescheit und unterhaltend. Es schien mir keinen Augenblick, als ob ich etwa von einer höheren Plattform aus zuzuhören hätte. Meine eigene Welt war einfach nur eine andere; doch ich pries mich glücklich, nicht so engherzig zu sein, um diese von der meinigen so verschiedene Art genießen zu können, bloß weil sie einer anderen als meiner eigenen Welt angehörte.

Ich selbst wünsche nur der einzigen Art von Musik zu dienen, die zu vertreten ich berufen bin. Doch erkenne ich restlos das Recht der Menschen an, sich auf eine andere Art auszudrücken, und somit fühle ich gegen sie weder Haß noch Geringschätzung, nur um meinen eigenen Standpunkt zu rechtfertigen. Ganz im Gegenteil: ich versuche sie zu begreifen. Und ich danke Gott, daß es mir gegeben ist, auch dasjenige zu verstehen und zu schätzen, was so verschieden ist von allem, dem mein angeborenes Talent und meine Fertigkeit zu dienen berufen sind.

Um es kurz zu wiederholen möchte ich sagen, daß ich alle Geschöpfe Gottes mit gleicher Liebe zu lieben fähig bin, wie auch alle Schöpfungen des menschlichen Geistes, der menschlichen Eingebung; und mit dieser Liebe Zeugnis ablegen kann von meinem Glauben und meiner Hingabe an die Vorstellung eines allmächtigen, alliebenden, universalen Schöpfers.

„JAZZ" UND „KLASSISCHE MUSIK"

Nun glaube ich — um bei dem Bilde jenes hohen Berges zu bleiben — daß diese Minderheit den Gipfel und die Mehrheit den Fuß bedeute. Aber wie ich bereits sagte: wozu Vergleiche ziehen? Warum etwas beklagen, das im Wesentlichen Glanz und Glorie des Lebens bedeutet? Ueberall, wo wir den Kampf ums Dasein beobachten, finden wir eine riesige Linie des Ausdruckes, die von der Tiefe zur Höhe reicht. Was allein wichtig erscheint, ist, daß es den Berg überhaupt gibt, und wenn es einen gibt, so muß er Fuß und Gipfel haben. Ein jeder dieser beiden ist gleich wichtig. Man muß nicht einmal darüber streiten, welches der Fuß und welches der Gipfel sei. Man muß jedes Ding an seinem Platz annehmen und sich seiner freuen.

LATIN TOUR ENDED BY PHILHARMONIC

Morning Concert in Mexico Concludes 12-Country, 7-Week Trip South

By PAUL P. KENNEDY
Special to The New York Times.

MEXICO CITY, June 15—The New York Philharmonic Orchestra played the last of a series of thirty-nine concerts in twelve Latin-American countries here this morning.

This final concert, given in the National Auditorium, had an audience of 13,000. It was considered a resounding success both for the orchestra and for its conductor today, Dimitri Mitropoulos.

Last night a more formal concert in the Palace of Fine Arts was conducted by Leonard Bernstein before an overflow crowd of about 2,500. The audience staged a prolonged demonstration when Mr. Bernstein conducted the Sinfonia India by the Mexican composer Carlos Chavez and then invited Señor Chavez to the podium where the two embraced.

The entourage of 120 musicians and business officials was in high spirits today but obviously extremely tired. In the seven-week tour they have played in twenty-one cities. They have traveled about 15,000 miles in two chartered passenger planes, their instruments traveling by a commercial cargo plane. The musicians have played in altitudes ranging from Panama's sea level to the 12,500 feet of La Paz, Bolivia.

Bernstein 'Exhausted'

Mr. Bernstein, who declared that he was "absolutely exhausted" after last night's performance, quickly added that he was "very happy over the results of the tour." He received ovation after ovation following last night's program, which included, in addition to the Chavez Symphony, Roy Harris' Symphony No. 3, Gershwin's "An American in Paris" and Tchaikovsky's Symphony No. 4.

This morning Mr. Mitropoulos conducted Weber's "Freischuez" Overture, Beethoven's Symphony No. 2, Verdi's Overture to "La Forza del Destino" and Strauss' "Don Juan."

It is estimated by Philharmonic officials that the combined audiences of the tour totaled more than 200,000, excluding television and radio. Today's was the only morning concert of the tour. The only complaint on the tour was from thousands who were turned away at the box office, according to Philharmonic officials. In one location, they said, the line formed the night before the concert with ticket applicants sleeping on the sidewalk.

The tour was made under the President's Special Projects Program and was administered by the American National Theatre and Academy. The concerts, all on a commercial box-office basis, were handled in individual countries by a local impresario and a Department of State representative, usually the embassy's cultural attaché. The orchestra for the most part was paid on a concert basis, with the State Department footing the bill for the difference in expense and income.

Countries visited in the tour were Panama, Venezuela, Colombia, Ecuador, Peru, Bolivia, Paraguay, Chile, Argentina, Uruguay, Brazil and Mexico.

So They Say

It is time the United States recognizes its most powerful weapon—the cultural propaganda of this country . . . We accomplished much more than any politician has.

Philharmonic Hailed in New York

New York Staff Correspondent.

NEW YORK — A tired but triumphant band of musicians received the city's accolade today at City Hall ceremonies.

The musicians were the 120 members of the N.Y. Philharmonic Orchestra, which scored in 39 concerts in 21 South and Central American cities, the last one yesterday morning.

With their conductors, Leonard Bernstein and Dmitri Mitropoulos, the orchestra played as many as six concerts a week.

Mayor Wagner said that the tour, arranged under the President's special program for cultural presentation, was a cultural force that brought the people of South and Central America close to those of North America.

Heard by 200,000

Robert Dowling, chairman of the board of the American National Theater and Academy, which had charge of arrangements, asserted that more than 200,000 heard the programs. The orchestra went to 12 countries.

"I am sure," he said, "that our chestra left behind 200,000 good friends."

During the first seven weeks of the tour, Bernstein conducted 28 concerts and Mitropoulos conducted 11.

Both Bernstein and Mitropoulos received the city's medallion, each member of the orchestra was given a certificate of merit and David M. Kaiser, on behalf of the orchestra, accepted the city scroll for distinguished and exceptional service.

MUSICAL DIPLOMACY CALLED SUCCESSFUL

Music can make friends for this country where politicians fail, the two leaders of the New York Philharmonic declared yesterday.

Dimitri Mitropoulos and Leonard Bernstein, conductors of the orchestra, said its seven-week tour of Latin America had engendered immeasurable amounts of goodwill.

The orchestra members encountered "not one slight, solitary incident" such as those that marked the tour of Vice President Richard M. Nixon, Mr. Bernstein said at a press conference. The reason, he said, was apparent.

"This group came only to speak music, to do delightful things," he said. "The other mission came to present a new policy for the future, and didn't have one. We had a mission for all time—Haydn, Gershwin, and so on."

He conceded that it was "not necessarily the same people who clapped for us who attacked Nixon."

Mr. Mitropoulos said that the trip proved that "no doubt the world has more love for art than for politicians." If the United States is clever, he added, it will make more use of the arts.

Philharmonic Wins Acclaim in Latin America

New York

In "the language of B minors and F sharps" South American people have just demonstrated an affection for the United States that is little short of miraculous.

This is the story brought back by the New York Philharmonic which returned June 16 after giving 39 concerts in 21 South American and Central American cities. Its conductors Leonard Bernstein and Dimitri Mitropoulos, meeting with reporters for an hour and a half at the Sheraton-East Hotel, said the groundwork for something tremendously significant has been laid by the seven-week tour.

Listeners Slept Out

Within a few days of Vice-President Richard M. Nixon's experience with hostile students in Peru, the Philharmonic at an overwhelmingly successful concert in Lima, played the "Star-Spangled Banner" and "the house came down," said Mr. Bernstein.

In Santiago enthusiastic, autograph-hunting students had to be held back by the police. In Montevideo people brought food and mattresses 24 hours before the ticket sale and slept all night on the sidewalks.

In Sao Paulo, Brazil, a crowd of 30,000 gathered to hear an open-air concert. In Caracas, Venezuela, an overflow audience of 7,000, where 5,000 at most had been expected, paid wrapt attention. In some cities the brass band came out in welcome. Presidents and ministers came to listen.

People stood up to clap and clap. They threw kisses not missiles. There were times when the ovations were wild.

"There were no yankee-go-homes. There was not a single instance of the slightest insult," said Mr. Bernstein.

"This was a love relationship. I am not exaggerating."

Sun-browned, with the shaggy front lock and casual manner known so well to television audiences, he talked of the need for future "magnification of the project." But the undertones and overtones were not casual.

"We bumped into Mr. Nixon at Quito and had a wonderful few hours of talk. Mr. Nixon told how deeply affected he had been by our tour. He understands very well we want to take further steps and he vowed he would do something about it. There is a real awareness on the part of the people in Washington that we have made only a beginning."

He added that the two tours —Mr. Nixon's and theirs—were a contrast in languages. One dealth with tariffs and commerce, the other with B minors and F sharps.

Mr. Mitropoulos said that in some places they reduced prices and in other places gave concerts for nothing. Many people were turned away. Newspaper reporters in Latin-American countries said the visit had been a stimulus to support native orchestras.

Mr. Mitropoulos, too, urged much greater progress in recognition of the arts in building world brotherhood.

"We are just as important people as those who make bombs and work farms," he declared. "In Latin America we were front-page news. Do we get that here?"

Orchestra Feted

The tour was sponsored by the President's special international program for cultural presentations, and administered by the American National Theater and Academy. The 107 members traveled the 15,000-mile journey by air. They played to audiences totaling more than 200,000 persons.

In every city, when time permitted, they were feted by local officials, orchestras, and various cultural groups. Receptions were given them by United States Ambassadors in Venezuela, Colombia, Paraguay, Chile, Argentina, Uruguay, Brazil, and Mexico. David M. Keiser, president of the Philharmonic, Mrs. Keiser, and Mrs. Bernstein were members of the party.

American music was a basic part of the programing, including works by Aaron Copland, Roy Harris, William Schuman, Samuel Barber, George Gershwin, and Charles Turner.

In the unamplified hills of Venezuela, Mr. Bernstein said he found perfect acoustics. They played a Haydn symphony to an enthrailed audience.

"It was silver and gold," recalled Mr. Bernstein. "We had heard that there were only the two extremes, the very poor and the very rich. But here was a huge middle-class audience which adored music. You can tell when they like music. You know it by a feeling in your back."

'Ditch Politics for Art,' Longhairs Urge Brass

NEW YORK, June 18 (AP).— What this country needs, a couple of noted symphony leaders said yesterday, is more high official recognition of art's importance in winning friends abroad.

"Ive never been kissed by the President," declared Dimitri Mitropoulos as an example of how political leaders "are always too busy" to recognize endeavor.

"We have to use more art than politics to get friends in the future," asserted Leonard Bernstein, stressing a need for heightened awareness of the goodwill role of music overseas.

Return From Tour

Bernstein and Mitropoulos, who returned Monday from a seven-week triumphal tour of Latin America with the New York Philharmonic Orchestra, sat down with the press to summarize impressions and reactions.

The pair agreed that the 12-nation tour, along with others sent out for several years under the President's special international cultural exchange program, mark a first beginning in full effective enterprise.

"For the price of the wing of just one jet bomber," asserted Bernstein, "we could send an orchestra a great distance and achieve tremendous results. Maybe we'll learn we have to spend money for just such purposes.

"We have come a long way in a short time, but it is only a beginning. The fact that ties it all together is that there is a real awareness now in important circles in Washington that it is only a beginning."

Chief regret to Mitropoulos was that under present financing, admission had to be charged to all 39 concerts, limiting the listeners often to the socially elect.

Questioned about the warm reception given the orchestra in some cities where Vice President Nixon's tour ran into rioting opposition, Bernstein said they met "all love and kisses—there wasn't a single boo."

The reason was simple, he said.

"This group came only to speak music and do delightful things. The other was a goodwill mission to correct certain mistakes and give a policy for the future."

Mitropoulos then proceeded to clarify that matter of a presidential kiss.

Potent Symbol

He said the warm embrace given Van Cliburn, young U. S. pianist, by Premier Khrushchev of Russia, was the kind of potent symbol of appreciation which he feels art lacks in this country.

"I'm no snob," he said, "it's not for me, but for its effect on all those people.

"We are the sissy side of this country in some circles. The government must show we are just as important as the people who make the bombs before we can do our job abroad fully."

LAS DOS MASCARAS

Por CLARITA

La Orquesta Filarmónica de Nueva York se presentó el domingo pasado, a las once horas, en el Auditorio Nacional, en donde bajo la dirección de Dimitri Mitropoulus, obtuvo un éxito tan impresionante como el que logró en Bellas Artes la noche del sábado pasado. Y si nuestro máximo teatro se vió enteramente lleno de un público ansioso de escuchar a una de las más perfectas orquestas del mundo, el Auditorio, que tiene unos dieciocho mil asientos, se vió también colmado en forma impresionante. El prestigio de la Orquesta, el afán de nuestro público por escucharla y los precios al alcance de todas las fortunas, concurrieron a lograr este aspecto del éxito lo cual quiere decir que nuestro pueblo tiende a disfrutar

POPULAR June 18, 1958

El gran director Dimitri Mitropoulus, quien en el sensacional concierto que tuvo lugar la mañana del domingo pasado en el Auditorio Municipal de México, fué aclamado por más de quince mil almas que asistieron a escuchar a la Orquesta Filarfónica de Nueva York, en esta fugaz aunque sustanciosa actuación de tan brillante conjunto.

de estas grandes manifestaciones artísticas, y que por lo mismo debe hacérselas accesibles: es preciso que no sean privilegio exclusivo de quienes pueden pagar el alto costo de las localidades, sino de cuantos son capaces de sentir y comprender tales manifestaciones.

Comenzó el concierto con la Obertura Der Freischuetz, de Weber, profunda e inspirada, y que fué interpretada con toda la poesía y animación que puso el autor en ella. Los matices infinitos, rumores de la floresta, fueron puestos de relieve con transparencia que vuelve la obra luminosa y que conquistó al público de una vez por todas, estallando en aplausos incontenibles, que la Orquesta declinaba en su Director, y éste en ella, demostrándose así el gran afecto que ella le tiene.

Siguió la Segunda Sinfonía de Beethoven, la cual, a pesar de ser de las menores del autor, en todos sentidos, tuvo una magnífica versión: cada una de sus cuatro partes fué un alarde impresionante de precisión, de elegancia y de ingénua emotividad, que nos dió la idea de un Beethoven más vigoroso y juvenil.

Después del intermedio, se avisó un cambio de programa: en lugar de la Noche transfigurada, de Schoenberg, se interpretaría Don Juan, de Ricardo Strauss, y después de Meditación y Danza de la Venganza de Medea, de Barber, La Fuerza del Destino, de Verdi.

Don Juan, obra compleja y subjetiva, de brillante instrumentación, interpretada con toda la intención y emotividad propias del legendario personaje, gustó al público, ya impresionado por las obras anteriores y más sensible por momentos.

La Meditación y Danza de la Venganza de Medea, comienza lenta y dolorosa, como conflicto psicológico que se desarrolla en ambiente de tragedia, y que va ascendiendo anhelante y angustioso, hasta culminar en la Danza, subrayada con timbales, que llega al paroxismo. El público, impresionado, aplaudió la versión de la Orquesta, que fué magnífica y que hizo sentir el drama. También la obra de Verdi, con su espontánea inspiración, tan latina, hizo estallar una nueva ovación. Y como no cesaran los aplasos, el Director obsequió como "encore", El Sombrero de Tres Picos, de Falla, obra que fué interpretada con tanto carácter y gusto españoles, que no puede pedirse más. El público, delirante, no podrá olvidar la rara perfección de esta orquesta que ha pasado como un hermoso meteoro por el cielo azul de México.

Atisbos Musicales

POR J.M. ANZALDUA

EL segundo y último concierto de la Filarmónica de Nueva York, se efectuó en el Auditorio Nacional, donde, a pesar de su gran capacidad, casi se llenó. Se quiso dar oportunidad al pueblo de escuchar a esta gran orquesta, aunque dudo que a las localidades altas haya podido llegar la música con claridad y sin interferencias de resonancias, defectos ya proverbiales de nuestro gran Auditorio.

Dimitri Mitropoulos dirigió este programa. Por problemas de estacionamiento, nosotros llegamos cuando empezaba la Segunda Sinfonía de Beethoven, que puso en evidencia la gran cohesión y musicalidad de la orquesta. Mitropoulos, por su parte, le imprimió un sello de elegancia y dignidad admirables.

En lugar de "Noche Transfigurada", de Schoenberg, se tocó "Don Juan", de Richard Strauss, cambio que anunció al público el maestro Jesús Durón, explicando se hacía por las condiciones acústicas del local.

Se aplaudió con calor "Meditación y Danza de la Venganza de Medea", de Samuel Barber. Sólo un pequeño grupo se dedicó a silbar la obra de este compositor norteamericano.

Después vino algo inexplicable: obertura de "La forza del destino" de Verdi, muy tocada en los jardines públicos por las bandas de música italianas, para regocijo de las criadas que saborean las horas libres.

Beethoven y Barber fue lo mejor del programa. Dimitri Mitropoulos, sin ser tan espectacular como Leonard Bernstein, es un director muy completo, que se mueve dentro de la tradición clásica europea, apenas contagiado por el modo de vida de Norteamérica.

La cuerda y los alientos de la Filarmónica de Nueva York hacen de ella una orquesta magnífica, aunque todavía está muy lejos de llegar a la altura de una Orquesta Sin γαζε πρὸς στιγμὴν τὶς ἀντιθέσεις, αἰχμαλώτιζε τὶς συνειδήσεις. Καὶ καθὼς εἴπαμε αὐτὸ γινόταν ὄχι χάρη σὲ σχήματα ρητορικά, κραυγαλέα, τῶν δημαγωγῶν, ἀλλὰ μὲ μιὰ συνεχῆ ἀναφορὰ στὶς καλύτερες δυνάμεις τῆς ἁρμονίας: στὴ διαύγεια καὶ στὴν ἡρεμία.

Φυσικὰ ὅλη ἡ ὁμιλία ἔγινε ἀπὸ στήθους, χωρὶς χειρόγραφο. Σὲ πολλὰ σημεῖα καίρια καὶ εὐπαθῆ τοῦ "Εθνους, ποὺ οἱ λέξεις ἔπρεπε νὰ εἶναι ζυγισμένες, μιὰ-μιά, ἦταν πράγματι οἱ λέξεις οἱ μοναδικές, οἱ ἀνεπανάληπτες. Κι' αὐτὸ χωρὶς καμιά, ἔστω στιγμιαία, διακοπή, κανένα δισταγμό, ἀλλὰ μὲ μιὰ ροὴ συνεχῆ, μὲ μιὰ σιγουριά, ποὺ ἐξέφραζε βέβαια τὴν κατεργασία, τὴ ζύμωση τῶν σκέψεων μέσα στὴ συνείδηση πρὶν γίνουν ἀνακοίνωση στὴ Βουλή.

Πολὺ σπάνια ἔχουμε στὸν τόπο αὐτόν, ὅπου ὡστόσο κάποτε ἤκμασε ἡ ρητορική, τὴ χαρὰ ν' ἀκοῦμε ρήτορες ποὺ νὰ μιλοῦν, ὄχι νὰ διαβάζουν κείμενα. Στὴν περιοχὴ τοῦ καθαροῦ στοχασμοῦ, τοῦ πνεύματος, τέτοιο κατόρθωμα τὸ ἐπέτυχε στὶς μέρες μας, στὸν ὕψιστο βαθμό, πρωτίστως ὁ Εὐάγγελος Παπανοῦτσος. Μοῦ μένει ἀλησμόνητη, μέσα σὲ πολλὲς ἄλλες, ἡ ὁμιλία του προπέρυσι στὸ Βυζαντινὸ Μουσεῖο γιὰ τὴν Ἑλληνικὴ Φιλοσοφία καὶ τὸ Χριστιανισμό. Ἦταν μιὰ συνεχὴς κορύφωση τοῦ συνδυασμοῦ: ὀξύτατη παρατήρηση—διατύπωση μοναδική. Φυσικὰ χωρὶς κείμενο, ὅπως πάντα. Εἶναι, ἄραγε, ἄσκηση τῆς μνήμης, αὐτὴ ἡ ἀποδέσμευση ἀπὸ τὸ κείμενο, ποὺ δίνει τὴν ἄνεση τῆς ὁμιλίας, εἶναι ἡ πλήρης κατοχὴ τοῦ θέματος; Νομίζω ὅτι εἶναι πέραν ἀπὸ αὐτά: εἶναι τάλαντον, δῶρον Θεοῦ. Πολλοὶ σπουδαῖοι ἄνθρωποι διατυπώνουν, γραπτά, περίφημα τὶς ἰδέες τους. Εἶναι ἀνίκανοι ὄχι ἁπλῶς νὰ τὶς ἀναπτύξουν χωρὶς τὴ βοήθεια τοῦ κειμένου τους, ἀλλὰ οὔτε κἂν νὰ τὶς διαβάσουν ἀνθρωπινά. Μαρτυρία ἀψευδὴς τὸ Ραδιόφωνο ὅπου οἱ πάντες ἐπιμένουν νὰ ἀπαγγέλλουν οἱ ἴδιοι τὶς ὁμιλίες τους.

Παρεμφερὲς ζήτημα νομίζω εἶναι: οἱ διευθυνταὶ ὀρχήστρας ποὺ διευθύνουν χωρὶς παρτιτούρα τὰ δυσκολώτερα συμφωνικὰ ἔργα. Τὸ ἄθλημα εἶναι κολοσσιαῖο, ἀπαιτεῖ τεράστια σπουδή, τεράστια μνήμη, συγκέντρωση ἐκπληκτικὴ τὴν ὥρα τῆς ἐκτελέσεως. Γιατὶ αὐτὴ ἡ σπατάλη δυνάμεων; Κάποτε, σὲ μιὰ πολύωρη μοναχική μας συνομιλία μὲ τὸ Δημήτρη Μητρόπουλο στὸ διαμέρισμά του, στὴ Νέα Ὑόρκη, ὅπου ὁ μεγάλος φίλος μου εἶχε τὴν καλωσύνη νὰ μοῦ ἐξομολογηθεῖ πολλὰ πράγματα τῆς ψυχῆς, τὸν ρώτησα γι' αὐτό:

— Γιατὶ αὐτὴ ἡ σπατάλη δυνάμεων γιὰ νὰ συγκρατήσετε μὲς στὴ μνήμη ὅλο τὸ ἔργο, τόσα ἔργα ποὺ διευθύνετε;

— Ἀπὸ τὴ στιγμὴ ποὺ θὰ ἔχω ἀποδεσμευθεῖ ἀπὸ τὴν ἀνάγκη τοῦ κειμένου, τῆς παρτιτούρας, ἀπὸ τὴ στιγμὴ ποὺ θὰ ἔχω λυτρωθεῖ ἀπ' τὴν ἀνάγκη αὐτή, εἶπε, ἀρχίζει ἡ ὥρα τῆς καλύτερης δυνατῆς ἑρμηνείας του, τῆς καλύτερης συνεννοήσεως μὲ τὸ πνεῦμα τοῦ συνθέτου. Ἀπὸ τὴ στιγμὴ αὐτὴ συμβαίνει καὶ τοῦτο: ἡ ὀρχήστρα μου, οἱ μουσικοί μου ξαίρουν πιὰ νὰ σέβονται καὶ νὰ πειθαρχοῦν στὸ διευθυντή τους, γιὰ νὰ δοθεῖ ἡ ἑρμηνεία ποὺ πρέπει. Ξαίρουν πὼς κάποιος ἄλλος κουράστηκε καὶ ἀγρύπνησε περισσότερο ἀπ' τὸν καθένα τους γιὰ νὰ κατακτηθεῖ αὐτὴ ἡ ἑρμηνεία.

Εἶναι ἀπόλυτα αὐτά; Φυσικὰ ὄχι. Ὑπάρχουν θαυμάσιοι διευθυνταὶ ὀρχήστρας ποὺ ἔχουν πάντα μπροστά τους τὴν παρτιτούρα ὅταν διευθύνουν. Ὑπάρχουν λαμπροὶ ὁμιλητὲς ποὺ θέλουν νὰ ἔχουν τὴ σιγουριὰ τοῦ κειμένου μπροστά τους, καὶ νὰ τὸ συμβουλεύονται κάθε τόσο. Φυσικὰ σ' αὐτὴ τὴν τελευταία περίπτωση ἡ ἄρτια ἀπαγγελία τοῦ λόγου γίνεται ἐγχείρημα δυσκολώτερο, ποὺ θέλει καὶ αὐτὸ τάλαντον: ἐνῶ ὑπάρχει τὸ κείμενο καὶ ἐνῶ τὸ συμβουλεύεται ὁ ὁμιλητής, ὁ ἀκροατὴς ἔχει τὴν ἐντύπωση πὼς ὁ λόγος εἶναι ἀβίαστος, ὑπαγορευμένος ἀπ' τὴν ἀνάγκη τῆς στιγμῆς, ἀπ' τὴ ροὴ τῆς σκέψης ἐκείνης τῆς στιγμῆς, ὄχι κείμενο ποὺ τὸ διαβάζουν ἢ τὸ ἀποστήθισαν. Μιὰ τέτοια ὑποδειγματικὴ ὁμιλία ἦταν ὁ ἐφετεινὸς θαυμάσιος πρυτανικὸς λόγος τοῦ Ἀκαδημαϊκοῦ κ. Γεωργίου Μαριδάκη: λαμπρὸ κείμενο, ἔξοχη διάρθρωση τῶν μερῶν του, ἔξοχη ἀπαγγελία.

Τέσσερα ὀνόματα ἀναφερθήκανε στὸ σημερινὸ ἄρθρο: Γεώργιος Παπανδρέου, Εὐάγγελος Παπανοῦτσος, Δημήτρης Μητρόπουλος, Γ. Μαριδάκης. Ὁ καθένας στὴν περιοχὴ του θὰ μποροῦσε νὰ γίνει ὑπόδειγμα σ' ἕνα μάθημα περὶ λόγου καὶ μνήμης.

MUNDO MUSICAL

NACIONAL

Junio 20
6-20-58

Por Igor MORENO

Contemplar el espectáculo de doce o trece mil personas en nuestro Auditorio Nacional, bien dispuestas a escuchar a una orquista estadounidense de primer rango, es motivo de orgullo.

El hecho es revelador del alto grado de cultura musical a que el pueblo ha llegado y enseña también que, si Bellas Artes quisiera, podrían venir buenos directores estrellas a México a dirigir nuestra propia Sinfónica Nacional con la cifra de sus ejecutantes aumentada y hasta traerse orquestas del extranjero a actuar durante una semana o más tiempo, con la seguridad del éxito pecuniario.

La concurrencia en el Auditorio Nacional bien pudo ascender a las quince mil personas que en el recinto caben, según los datos oficiales. Pero mucha gente prescindió de la oportunidad de oír a la famosa orquesta, debido a que solamente les ofrecían entradas con precio de dos pesos.

Unos creen que esto fue por orgullo y otros que por ser de los rincones extremos del último piso, imaginándose que no podrían ellos oír bien.

Sea lo que fuere, se evidenció que hay público para llenar un recinto de quince y hasta veinte mil personas dispuestas a escuchar la buena música, lo que es una advertencia para el Estado, si es que está dispuesto a dar impulso a la cultura por medio de la música en general, del ballet y aún del teatro.

No vamos a decir que la audibilidad era perfecta, pero sí que era bastante buena.

La concha acústica, construída provisionalmente de malos materiales, con la deliberada intención de gastar poco, dio resultados excelentes. Poniendo el dinero necesario y estudiando el inteligente ingeniero o arquitecto constructor matemáticamente las relaciones de ésta con la disposición de la sala o recinto, mejor dicho, quedaría todo bien resuelto, tanto más si el sistema de micrófonos se perfecciona también, como se ha hecho admirablemente bien en otros países.

Pero dejémonos de estas cosas y hablemos del concierto. A Mitrópoulos se le recibió también con frenéticos aplausos de admiración y de reconocimiento a su valer y a la Orquesta Filarmónica por lo que representa como embajadora de arte y por su justa fama.

La obertura de El cazador furtivo, de Weber le valió a la orquesta un vibrante aplauso. Este fue dirigido de manera especial a los cornistas magníficos que tocaron la parte trascendental que a ellos les corresponde en la obra, con lujo de expresión.

Y siguió inmediatamente la Segunda Sinfonía de Beethoven que sí perdió algo por las pequeñas deficiencias acústicas, que seguramente se remediarán después de esta experiencia.

Conocemos las grabaciones incomparables de la Columbia Records de estas dos obras —las cuales recomendamos a los melómanos— y por eso nos atrevemos a emitir la opinión de que mucho desmereció en esto la Filarmónica de Nueva York en el Auditorio.

Por eso Mitrópoulos no quiso exponer su prestigio tocando con la cuerda sola de la Filarmónica la obra de Schoenberg, Noche transfigurada y vino lo bueno: cambió ésta por el poema Don Juan, de Strauss, y la bella obertura de la ópera de Verdi, La Fuerza del Destino.

Y la dramaticidad de ellas encendió el corazón del gran maestro, cuya disposición de intérprete es, ante todo, dramática, y aquello entusiasmó al público que aplaudió frenético largo tiempo.

Las pruebas de admiración para el director y los ejecutantes se contuvieron cuando Mitrópoulos hizo un ademán prometedor, dando a entender que tocaría un extra. L este extra fue la Jota de El Sombrero de Tres Picos, de Manuel de Falla. La interpretación tan impresionante nos recordó la de Ansermett cuando Massine bailó en México ese Sombrero de tres picos. La ovación se sintió como un estallido. Con respecto a la versión de la obra de Barber, compositor americano, vamos a escribir especialmente algo pronto y también de Harris y Gershwin.

הנזיר על הדוכן

מנצח דמיטרי מיטרופולוס
„מעט העזה, רבותי!"

אמר מי שאמר, כי דימיטרי מיטרופולוס, המנצח היווני העומד בסוף החודש לתת את הטון לחייה המוסיקליים של ישראל, נוהג לנצח על כל יצירה כאילו כתב אותה במו־ידיו. עקיצה עתונאית זו מאפיינת את יחס הביקורת הבינלאומית למנצח: יש לו שונאים, ויש לו מעריצים, אך אין מתייחס אל מיטרופולוס באדישות.

הסיפה המרה בכוסו של המנצח הדגול הוא כשלונו החרוץ ברפרטואר ה„שבלוני" החל בבאך וכלה בברהמס. מיטרופולוס, המנצח הראשון (והאחרון) שהעז להקליט את ה„קשה" באר פורות המודרניות, „וצק" של אלבן ברג, לא הקליט מימיו סימפוניה משל בטהובן. בשנת השמים לחייו התפטר מהנהלת התזמורת הפילהרמונית של ניו־יורק, הוריש את מקומו לליאונרד ברנשטיין, שנעשה למנצח אורפוס מבריק, וגילה — את ג'אקומו פוצ'יני. כשפתח את עונת 1957 באופרה המלכתית של ונה ב„מאדאם באטרפליי", קפצו מבקריה הותיקים של העיר מכסאותיהם: היתכן כי זהו אותו פוצ'יני סנטימנטלי־מתקתק אשר למנגינותיו הנדושות נאלצו להאזין זה למעלה מחמשים שנה? בידי האורח מיזון הפכה האופרה הרכרוכית לדבר מה מודרניסטית, עשירה בדיסונאנסים (אשר פוצ'יני אפילו לא חלם עליהם). הרגשנות התגדפה — אך הרגש נשאר.

פלא וחידה

המתחרים מאיטליה
הופעה וירטואוזית משוכללת

ד אם שמע מישהו מכם על ה„פלאטרון"? גם אני לא שמעתי — עד לפני שבוע, כשנזדמנתי בדרך מקרה להצגת „גיליבר בארץ הגמדים". האולם הקטן היה מלא מפה לפה. הילדים הרעישו עולמות — עד שהופיע לפני המסך יעקב טימן, איש „המטאטא" לשעבר, ופתח בהמנון הפלאטרין:

פלא פלא וחידה, / מי יחוד ומי ידע / מה זה פלאטרון?

ואחר־כך נפתח המסך והחידה נפתרה: הפלאטרון המיסתורי הוא תיאטרון בובות — ידווקא תיאטרון־בובות מוצלח, אומפה־אומפה־אומפפה — מלך ליליפוט, היה עשוי עץ, וכן אשתו המלכה ויועציו ושריו ומצביאיו למיניהם. רק גוליבר עצמו היה בשר־ודם. באולם התווכחו הילדים: „מה, הם חיים? הם באמת חיים?"

ואז נזכרתי בילדי הכפר הערבי, בילדי הכפר היהודי, בילדי המעברות, בילדי העולים, בילדי הקיבוצים, בילדי השכונות, בילדי הערים, בילדי הדרום, בילדי הצפון, בילדי כל הארץ. ואז נזכרתי, שיש לי חובה לילדים אלה, חובה לילדי ישראל, חובה לילדי העתיד, חובה לילדי הדור הבא, חובה לילדי הדור שיבוא אחרי הדור הבא, חובה לילדי כל הדורות.

כוכבים ומזלות

מאת נתן דונביץ

המבול בא

מבול הלחקות מן החוץ, עליו בישרו לנו בשבועות האחרונים, כבר גועש סביבנו. השבוע הבא יהיה שבוע־השיא מבחינה זאת. אני מתכוון למספר ההופעות, ואשר לקהל שיבוא — עדיין קשה להתנבא. מוטב לאמוד בזהירות.

מיטרופוליס כבר הגיע ובשבוע הבא ינצח. באמצע השבוע יבואו זמרי „טוסקה". רגע התיאטרון הצרפתי הבלתי־תלוי כבר התחיל בהצגות וב־ימים הקרובים יגיעו אמני „הבכורה". וכל זה בבת אחת, שלא לשכוח את „פיקולי".

יש לי מה לספר לך על אר־בעת זמרי „טוסקה". שלושה זמרים ישראלים עמדו להבחן אמש על ידי מר מיטרופולוס למילוי תפקידי־העזר. נתחיל בריצ'ארד טאקר.

טאקר הוא הטנור הראשון של בית־האופרה „מֶטרופוליטן" בניו־יורק, זאת אתה יודע, ואולי גם הגיע לאוזניך גילו — 42 שנה. אבל טאקר נוהג לעשות משהו ששום זמר אופרה אינו עושה: הוא לובש „טלית קטן" גם בעת ההצגות. הוא אדוק מאד. פרט משפחתי: הוא גיסו של הזמר יאן פירס.

צארק

טאקר

דוידסון

כאדאלי

מיטרופולוס אמר אתמול שבואו של טאקר לארץ יהיה, לדעתו, מאורע גדול בחיים המוסיקליים בארץ. „רק בגלל טאקר כדאי היה לכם להציג כאן את „טוסקה"".

ריצ'ארד (ראובן) טאקר הוא חזן בן חזן. תחילה זימר בבית הכנסת בברוקלין, מקום הולדתו, ואחר כך בשיקאגו. הוא הגיע ל„מֶטרופוליטן" — בגלל מלחמת העולם השניה. עד אז עסק במסחר במשי. המלחמה שמה קץ ליבוא המשי וטאקר החליט לעשות קאריירה מזמרתו.

בינואר 1945 הופיע לראשונה על במת ה„מטרופוליטן", בתפקיד אֶנצו ב„לה ג'יוקונדה" ומאז נעשה הטנור הראשון ב„מֶט". הכבוד הגדול ביותר בחייו נפל בחלקו בשנת 1949, כאשר בחר בו ארתורו טוסקניני לתפקיד ראדאמֶס ב„אידה" ששודרה, עם התזמורת הסימפונית של אן. בי. סי. בטלויזיה האמריקאית. בחירת זמר לתפקיד ראשי על ידי טוסקניני פירושה היה הכרה בו כאמן המעולה ביותר. גם היום ישנם רבם הסבורים שטאקר הוא הטנור הטוב בעולם, אף כי הוא מתקרב לשנתו החמשים. „הגיל המסוכן" לטנורים.

לפני כחצי שנה נסע טאקר להופעות באופרה הממלכתית בווינה. ב„טוסקה" הופיע יחד עם הילדה צארק והוא שהמליץ עליה לפני מיטרופולוס. המאסטרו אמר אתמול שכבר שמע פעם את צארק, ב„אלקטרה".

לסי מה שידוע לנו על צארק, ברור שנאזין לזימרה מעולה. אך מוטב שלא ישלו עצמם כמה אנשים, אם יש כאלה, שתהיה זאת זימרה ברמתן של קאלאס, טֶבאלדי, מילאנוב או דֶלוס־אנג'לוס.

אגב, בבקורה הקודם בארץ, בסוף 1955, שאלתי את הנברת צארק לדעתה על הקמת אופרה בארץ. על כך השיבה: „אופרה היא ענין למדינות עשירות. כי אופרה בינונית כמוה כשתית קפה לא־טעים לארוחת הבוקר".

שני הזמרים האחרים שיבואו ל„טוסקה" הם צ'אֶראֶ בראדאֶלי (באריטון) — לתפקיד המפקד המשטרה סקארפיה, ולורֶאנס דוידסון (באס) לתפקיד הקושר אנגֶלוטי.

מיטרופולוס, כאשר שמע אתמול מי יזמר את סקארפיה, אמר: „או! בראדאֶלי הוא זמר טוב". בראדאֶלי הוא איטלקי צעיר, ששומעים עליו לאחרונה בעולם האופרה באמריקה. „אופרה ניוז", היוצא בניו־יורק, הקדיש לו ב־מרס ש. ז. מאמר גדול, בכותרת „נסיך הבאריטונים". „נסיך", כי על התואר „מלך" לוחמים זמרים ותיקים וידועים יותר, אשר הופיעו בהצגות „טוסקה" ב„מֶט", כגון ליאונארד וורן, טיטו גובי, ג'ורג' לונדון.

דוידסון הופיע גם ב„מֶט", בתפקידים זעירים בדרך כלל. הוא יליד שיקאגו ומרבה להופיע בבתי האופרה מחוץ לניו־יורק.

כפי שאתה רואה, כל הארבעה כבר הופיעו ב„טוסקה", לא פעם ולא פעמיים. למיטרופולוס לא תהיה מלאכה רבה בחזרות עמם. אני חושש שיהיה עליו להקדיש הרבה זמן ומאמץ לחזרות עם הזמרים הישראלים, כפי שאירע לגיוליני בהכנות ל„ספר מסיבליה", אף כי הללו ממלאים את התפקידים הקטנים בלבד.

מיטרופולוס לא הסתיר את מול את דעתו, שהיה מעדיף לנצח על האופרה הישראלית. אם זאת היתה עומדת על אותה רמה של התזמורת הפילהרמונית, כי אין הצגת אופרה על הבמה כביצוע קונצרטנטי. אם תגיע בעתיד לרמה כזאת — אשמח לבוא ולנצח, אמר.

„אני מעדיף ביצוע קונצרטנטי רק כאשר מדובר באופרה הדורשת השקעות גדולות מדי, מסיבה זאת ומסיבות אחרות, רצוי שהתזמורת כאן תבצע אופרות שלא יהיה בהן משום תחרות בבית האופרה שלכם, אלא יצירות שאינן לפי כוחה של אופרה זאת. משום כך בחרנו ב„טוסקה"".

אך יש גם צד חיובי לביצוע קונצרטנטי. „בבית האופרה מקדישים הצגים תשומת לב רבה, ורבים באים רק בשל כך, להסתכל בנעשה על הבמה, ולהרבות בתשואות. בביצוע קונצרטנטי מופנית כל תשומת הלב למוסיקה, וזה טוב".

תחת שרביטו של דימיטרי מיטרופולוס

לפני עשרים שנה, בקירוב, התכוננה התזמורת הישראלית להקביל פיו של מנצח יווני, שכבר אז יצא שימעו הרחק מגבולות מולדתו: דימיטרי מיטרופולוס. הוא לא הגיע. סמוך למועד צאתו לדרכו, פרצה מלחמת־העולם ומנעה את הנסיעה.

בראשית השבוע הבא, לכשיניף מיטרופולוס את שרביטו המפורסם מעל בימת היכל־התרבות — תתגשם, איפוא, משאלה בת שתי עשרות שנים; ועונת־המנויים הנוכחית של התזמורת הפילהרמונית תגיע לסיום המבטיח להיות רב־רושם.

בראשית דרכו המוסיקלית התמסר מיטרופולוס לפסנתר וקומפוזיציה. וכאשר, במלאות שנתו ה־30, נתמנה כמנצחה

של התזמורת ההלנית שליד הקונסרבטוריה של אתונה — כבר היה למעשה פסנתרן רב־מוניטין ומחבר פורה. נקודת מיפנה בקאריירה הבינלאומית של מאסטרו מיטרופולוס חלה ב־1930, כאשר הופיע לראשונה עם התזמורת הפילהרמונית מברלין בתפקיד כפול של פסנתרן־סולייסט ומנצח — וזכה בשניהם להצלחה גדולה. מאז הוכר כאחד הכשרונות הדגולים ביותר באולמי הקונצרטים הבינלאומיים.

אחר הופעת־כבורה מוצלחת בארצות־הברית, עם התזמורת הסימפונית מבוסטון — נתמנה מיטרופולוס, בשנת 1937, כמנצחה הקבוע של התזמורת הסימפונית ממיניאפוליס, אותה הפך, במשך 12 שנים רצופות, לצוות ממדרגה ראשונה, ביצע עמה הקלטות רבות ונסה לאחר־מכן, כדי ליטול על עצמו את אחת המשרות הרמות ביותר בחייה המוסיקליים של אמריקה: הוא נתמנה מנהלה המוסיקאלי ומנצחה הקבוע של תזמורת פילהרמונית בניו־יורק.

בתולדות התפתחותה של המוסיקה האמריקנית החדשה שמור למיטרופולוס מקום מכובד, כמנצח מתקדם, שפעל, אולי יותר מכל מבצע אחר, להרמת קרנן של יצירות חשובות משל מחברים בני זמננו.

קומדיה רומאנטית־פיקאנטית למדי, המעמידה במרכזה נושא קולנועי־תיאטרוני ספרותי, שהוא מגוצל ושחוק כמטבע מימי הטורקים: בעיית „המשרלש הנצחי" — עוברת תהליך של ריכוך אמריקני אופייני ב־סרט „הצריף הקטן" („אסתר", ת"א). פרשת מעלליהם של סיר פיליפ אשלן (סטיוארט גריינג'ר), רעייתו הליידי סוזאן (אוה גארדנר) ו„ידיד המשפחה" הנרי (דנד ניבן), שספינת־השעשועים שלהם נטרפת בלב האר־קינוס והם מתמקמים יחדיו על אי בודד — בנוייה במקורה על דיאלוגים שנונים מפרי עטו של המחזאי הצרפתי אנדרה רוטן. עיבוד המחזה לתסריט קולנועי התפשר, במידת־מה, עם מושגי „הטעם הטוב" הרווחים בקרב „החברה האמריקנית — ובכך נישלה ממנו החריפות המציינת את המקור ונקודת־הכובד הרעתקה מן הדו־שיח אל הסיטואציות.

העלילה הצבעונית שלפנינו מסבכת, איפוא, „משולש" הקוף מן החברה הלונדונית הגבוהה בשורה של מצבים קומיים, העולים יפה למדי במחציתו הראשונה של הסרט ומתחילים לייגע משם ואילך. עוד (ואולי „העיקר") בסרט: אוה גארדנר היפה, בתלבושת מינימלית, הגזורה בהשראתו המפורסמת של כריסטיאן דיור.

„טוסקה"

אם נמחה על השמעת אופירות בצורה קונצרטית, יענו לנו בטון שאין לערער אחריו, שגם באמריקה נותנים ככה. ועוד נימוק מוכן בפי המארגנים, והוא: רק בדרך זו אפשר להביא הנה זמרות וזמרים מעולים ולתת לקהל אפשרות לשמוע זמרה מצויינת — כאי־לו אין אוראטוריות נהדרות בעולם, כאילו לא הושמעה בתוכנו זמרה נהדרת עם ביצוע ה„רקויאם" מאת ורדי.

ד. מיטרופולוס ינצח על סידרת קונצרטים בתזמורת המנצח (במרכז) מתקבל בשדה־התעופה בלוד על־ידי א. כהן וצ. הפטל, חברי הנהלת התזמורת הפילהארמונית. ראה כתבה בעמוד אחרון.

המנצח ד. דימיטרופולוס — בארץ

המנצח הנודע דימיטרי מיטרופולוס מתקבל בשדה־התעופה בלוד על־ידי צ. הפטל מהנהלת התזמורת הפילהרמונית

חוב של 20 שנה נפרע בליל ד' כשהגיע לשדה התעופה בלוד דימיטרי מיטרופולוס. ב־1939 עמד מיטרופולוס לנסוע לארץ, כדי להופיע עם התזמורת הפילהרמונית. אולם פרוץ המלחמה העולמית השניה מנע ממנו את הדבר.

מיטרופולוס חזר עכשיו מסיבוב עם התזמורת הניו־יורקית בדרום־אמריקה, שם הופיע יחד עם ליאונרד ברנשטיין, שהוא מגדיר אותו כ„ראשון בין המנצחים הצעירים בעולם".

Maestro Mitropoulos arrive en Israël

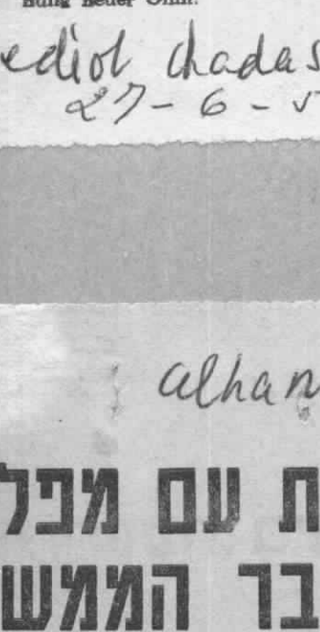
(d'un correspondant particulier)

"D'une famille croyante, j'avais toujours été profondément inspiré par la foi et la réligion juives. Mes meilleurs amis sont Juifs et c'est une dette de 20 ans que je paie en arrivant maintenant en Israel, puisque je devais y revenir juste à la veille de la Grande Guerre, en 1939 et j'ai été empêché alors par les événements, et depuis par un emploi de temps chargé en permanence", a déclaré notamment, le maestro Dimitri Mitropoulos, au cours du déjeuner offert vendredi en son honneur par l'Association des Journalistes au Beith Sokolov, sous le patronage de la Direction de l'Orchestre Philharmonique et en présence des rédacteurs en chef de tous les journaux israéliens.

M. Arieh DISSENTCHIK, au nom de la presse israélienne, M. SUPER, au nom des critiques musicaux, puis M. HAFTEL, de la direction de l'Orchestre ont souhaité la bienvenue au grand chef d'orchestre qui est à la fois le directeur musical de l'orchestre philharmonique de New-York et le chef de la "Metropolitan Opera".

Dimitri Mitropoulos revient maintenant d'une tournée triomphale à la tête de l'orchestre new-yorkais, en Amérique Latine, où il s'est rendu en compagnie de Léonard Bernstein, qu'il définit comme "le premier parmi les jeunes chefs d'orchestre du monde".

Le Maestro dirigera en Israel alternativement des concerts de l'orchestre Philharmonique (le premier a lieu ce soir) et une présentation de concert de "la Tosca" avec la participation de l'un des plus grands ténors actuels, Richard Tucker.



En répondant aux paroles de bienvenue des représentants de la presse israélienne, Maestro Mitropoulos a souligné combien il était touché de l'accueil qui lui a été fait dans notre pays, et notamment de la part de la presse : "Je savais, jusqu'ici, dit-il, que pour la presse un artiste était surtout un objet de curiosité, de critique ou de cancans; pour la première fois, je me sens l'objet d'une vive amitié. C'est celle-là même que je ressens pour votre peuple et pour votre pays tout entier".

Dimitri Mitropoulos eingetroffen

Von unserem Tel Aviver Berichterstatter

Der weltberühmte Dirigent Dimitri Mitropoulos, der in Israel eingetroffen ist, wird hier fünf Wochen bleiben, wurde gestern bei einer Pressekonferenz in Tel Aviv bekannt gegeben.

Er wird ausser der regulären Abonnentenserie die Oper „Tosca" in konzertanter Form dirigieren. An der Opernaufführung nimmt u. a. der Star der Metropolitan Oper Richard Tucker (Tenor) teil. Solist der Abonnementsserie ist der hiesige Künstler David Bar Ilan (Klavier).

Latin-American Paradox Points Moral

"NO DOUBT, the world has more love for artists than for politicians".

This rather bold statement came from one of the outstanding personalities of today's cultural life. It was made by Dimitri Mitropoulos at a press conference held upon the return of the New York Philharmonic from its triumphant South American tour.

On this tour, American musicians were sent by the Government, under the auspices of the "President's Program", to be precise. Although this was the first venture of the sort in the relationship between the two Americas, it got, in this country at least, relatively little attention.

At almost the same time the President sent Vice-President Nixon to our neighbors in the South with the mission to create "good will". The lurid details are known—they got a lot of attention.

AN INTERESTING parallel, indeed: Mitropoulos and Bernstein were mobbed by hundreds of Latin American people, but they did not have to be afraid. Body guards were superfluous, and occasional help was needed only to keep enthusiasm in proper proportions. Mr. Nixon was mobbed too, but for other reasons. Mr. Bernstein offered an explanation: "Our group came only to speak in F sharps and B flats, the other mission came to present a new policy and did not have one. . . ."

It makes a lot of sense. Of course, we cannot ask our Government officials to talk in F sharps and B flats, but we must ask them to know about the emotional and moral power of F sharps and B flats, to know that art is the strongest bridge between human beings.

"Why didn't our officials go there" exclaimed Mr. Mitropoulos, "and say: I present you the New York Philharmonic!" Panem et circenses. . . . Every successful statesman in history knew this phrase by heart.

It is not really necessary now to sing the "Cliburniana", to recall Khrushchev's bear-hug for our young pianist, to talk about the meager American showing at the Brussels world fair, about our Warrens and Sterns in Moscow, or the back-stage visit of John Foster Dulles after the Moiseyev performance in Washington. "Yes, there is real awareness in Washington today", said Mr. Bernstein, mentioning a long discussion with the Vice President when they crossed paths in South America.

BUT we need more than just "awareness". We need a wholehearted, basic evaluation and support of the arts by the people who guide our country. It must become a generous, big movement first of all within the nation itself, and then in our international relations. The "let's - do - a - little-bit-and-see-what-happens" policy won't do. The positive results of what we did so far are too striking, and time marches on too rapidly.

We are a fast-moving country in so many respects, why this slow, self contented pace in matters of art which are matters of concern to the psychological and cultural well-being of our people? The old story that we are a young nation which must take its time to compete with the time-honored cultures of other parts of the world does not hold true. On the contrary, having all the traditions of the world within our boundaries, we are by far more fortunate than any other country. And, as Beardsley Ruml pointed out, it takes a period of only about a dozen years to implant a basic culture in the mind of man—the period between the age of two and the age of fourteen. In a psycho-biological sense, history, tradition, and custom are only about twelve years old.

The truth of this quotation is immediately proved, when we look back upon the last twelve years. Germany, after the "year zero" is today the leading nation in one of the most important creative developments, electronic music. France added existentialism to philosophy and literature, and the gigantic steps Russia is taking in building up a completely new cultural force need no further mention.

IN NONE of these countries does the artist stand alone. He is recognized, encouraged, and needed by the State. Mr. Mitropoulos was right when he bitterly observed that "artists here are not given as much attention by far, as people who make bombs".

"But there is awareness in Washington . . ." Let us hope some quick and thorough action will result from it.

With The Orchestras

By Shirley Cecille Cash

New York Philharmonic

The New York Philharmonic and its conductors, Dimitri Mitropoulos and Leonard Bernstein, were welcomed back to New York City with an official reception on the steps of City Hall, June 16, following their 7-week tour of South and Central America. Mitropoulos and Bernstein were presented with Medallions of the City of New York, and each member of the orchestra received an individual Certificate of Merit from the City.

At 39 concerts in 21 cities the orchestra played to audiences totaling more than 200,000 people. Countless more saw and heard the orchestra on TV and radio in many of the countries visited. Thousands were turned away from box offices after the houses had been sold out. This was the first visit of an internationally noted orchestra to many of the cities, and the only non-local orchestra ever heard in some of them. During the first 4½ weeks of the tour, Mr. Bernstein conducted all concerts, with as many as six in a week. On May 31, Mitropoulos, who during the earlier portion of the tour had been with the Metropolitan Opera on its Spring Tour, joined the Philharmonic in Bueros Aires and conducted 11 of the final 13 concerts. These were Mitropoulos' first appearances in South America; Bernstein had conducted in Brazil in 1954.

The orchestra traveled by air throughout its 15,000 mile journey. Two planes were required for the men, and one to two planes for the more than 8 tons of instruments and other baggage.

Whenever time permitted, the orchestra and its conductors were feted by local officials, orchestras and various cultural organizations. Attendance at the concerts included heads of states and their cabinets. In each capital city, David M. Keiser, President of the Philharmonic, presented a collection of the orchestra's recordings to educational and cultural groups, through the courtesy of Columbia Records, Inc.

American music was a focal point in programming; some of our native composers included were Aaron Copland, Roy Harris, William Schuman, Samuel Barber, George Gershwin and Charles Turner.

The tour was sponsored by the President's Special International Program for Cultural Presentations, administered by the American National Theatre and Academy (ANTA).

Next season at the Philharmonic. The 117th Philharmonic season will open Oct. 2, 1958. Some of the special works using other than instrumental forces to be performed next year include: Handel's "Ode for St. Cecilia's Day" and "St. John Passion"; Bach's "Magnificat" and "St. John Passion"; Beethoven's Ninth Symphony; Debussy's opera, "Pélléas et Mélisande," to be given in concert form; and Elgar's oratorio, "The Dream of Gerontius." Each of these special works fits into an overall plan which will interrelate the Philharmonic programs for the entire year. Leonard Bernstein will offer a major view of American music from its earliest generation of composers to the present, and in addition to works from the standard repertoire, both old and new, will conduct several "festivals" devoted to specific composers, like Handel, Vivaldi and others. French music will be emphasized by Dimitri Mitropoulos, British music by Sir John Barbirolli, Beethoven and modern German works by Herbert von Karajan, and Scandinavian music by Thomas Schippers. Andre Kostelanetz will conduct three Special Sunday Evening concerts.

Résumés

New York Philharmonic: During 1957-58, 118 concerts were given during the regular New York season. Dimitri Mitropoulos and Leonard Bernstein were principal conductors, with guest conductors Ernest Ansermet, Andre Cluytens, Aaron Copland, Rafael Kubelik, Fernando Pre- Among the highlights of the season were the performances of three large-scale works for soloists and orchestra: Strauss' opera "Elektra," Honegger's "Joan of Arc at the Stake," and Haydn's "Creation." Of the 89 composers performed during the season, 41 are contemporary, of which 19 are American-born or resident.

3 הצעות לרכישת „פלאלום"

התחרות חריפה מתנהלת בין שלושה מעוניינים ברכישת מפעל „פלאלום", שהוצע למכירה על־ידי מקבל הנכסים.

תוך כדי התחרות מעלים ה־מעוניינים מדי פעם את המחיר, והסכום המוצע עלה כבר במידה ניכרת על ההצעה המקורית של 950 אלף ל"י תמורת שני חלקי המפעל — הישן ברמת־גן והחדש המוקם בהרצליה.

בינתיים הוחלט עקרונית ל־הפריד במכירה בין שני המפעלים. ייתכן שמפעל האמאיל בהרצליה יירכש בנפרד על ידי אחד המעוניינים בעוד שתימשך ההתחרות על המפעל ב־רמת־גן.

בעלי ההצעות הם: מפעל „תמאיל", שמנהלו הוא מר ש. גוטמן, מפעילי ענף המתכת ב־התאחדות בעלי התעשיה, מר הלטר, שהיה בשעתו פועל ב־„פלאלום"; מר ברוך פרידמן, תעשיין אלומיניום תל־אביבי.

עליה במספר הנוסעים ב„אל־על"

עליה ניכרת חלה במספר הנוסעים ב„אל־על" במחצית הראשונה, לעומת אותה תקופה אשתקד.

בסיכום עסקי החברה ומאז־נה לתקופה האחרונה מדגיש המנהל הכללי, האלוף א. בן ארצי, כי מטוסי „בריטניה", שהופעלו לפני 6 חדשים, הביאו לגידול כללי במספר הנוסעים. במיוחד בולט הגידול במספר הנוסעים שמחוץ לישראל. בעזרת המטוס החדיש הצליחה החברה לחדור למסגרת הטיסה הבינלאומית.

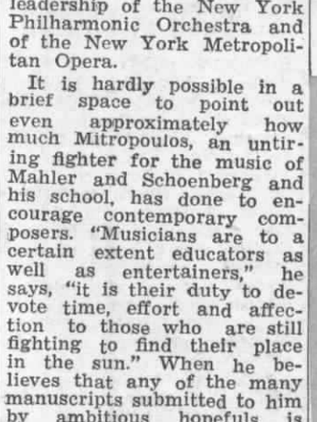
Dimitri Mitropoulos—Giant of the Podium



By Gisella Selden-Goth

Mrs. Selden-Goth, an old composer friend of Mitropoulos and an intimate of Bronislaw Huberman and Arturo Toscanini, is currently making her tenth visit to Israel.

TWENTY-two years ago Toscanini raised his baton for the first time to give the "go ahead" to the Philharmonic, and since then many conductors of international fame have continued his work. But perhaps the appearance of none has aroused so much curiosity, so much expectation, as that which greets Dimitri Mitropoulos, the fabulous Greek whose extraordinary human qualities are not less discussed than his magic power and authority over the musicians whom he leads to the loftiest interpretation of music, old and new, inspiring every single player to give his utmost to his work.

It was in February 1923 that Bela Bartok, who had just commenced to make an impression on progressive musical circles, arrived in the German capital to present a series of his latest compositions. He had just completed his ballet, "The Wonderful Mandarin," but found the piano version unfeasible for a single player and had to set it for four hands. Not finding a partner sufficiently familiar with the new technique to try it out with him, he asked me to get him someone with the necessary qualifications; it seemed almost a hopeless task. One day, however, I succeeded in presenting to him a thin, shy, close-mouthed, young man, who had been honoured by admittance to the very restricted composition class of Ferruccio Busoni. Son of a simple Greek family who wanted him to become a monk on Mt. Athos like two of his uncles, he had been mentioned by that master as having the gift of performing any music, however impracticable or crazy. The young man was Mitropoulos. Bartok sat down with him at the keyboard rather sceptically. After a dozen bars he stopped and said quietly: "This young man is all right."

And "all right" he has been wherever he has been called and wherever he has gone.

MITROPOULOS

He was "all right" at some modest jobs in the same Berlin, as accompanist to singers and as repetiteur and subsequently as assistant conductor at the State Opera; he did equally well in his fatherland when he was invited to fill the positions of conductor of the Athens Philharmonic Orchestra and the Athens Conservatoire. He made a sensational debut with the Berlin Philharmonic, conducting the première there of Prokofieff's Third Piano Concerto from the keyboard. After several important positions with European orchestras, he settled down in America; first, for 11 years in Minneapolis where he became the idol of all Minnesota music lovers and, finally, in one of the best positions the Western hemisphere has to offer to a musician; the leadership of the New York Philharmonic Orchestra and of the New York Metropolitan Opera.

It is hardly possible in a brief space to point out even approximately how much Mitropoulos, an untiring fighter for the music of Mahler and Schoenberg and his school, has done to encourage contemporary composers. "Musicians are to a certain extent educators as well as entertainers," he says, "it is their duty to devote time, effort and affection to those who are still fighting to find their place in the sun." When he believes that any of the many manuscripts submitted to him by ambitious hopefuls is worthy of attention, he never hesitates to secure a place for it on his programmes. And he does all this in a continuous battle against the conservative opinions of boards and committees who point to the effect of too radically modern programmes on the box-office.

A considerable portion of Mitropoulos' huge income is spent on helping to educate young students, on commissioning works of older but, in his opinion, not sufficiently appreciated composers, to the donation of new and better instruments to orchestras that cannot afford to buy them with their own means. Although striving to live up to the tenets of his venerated Patron Saint, Francis of Assisi, whose writings he never tires of studying, he does not despise the joys of living. He likes to stay in comfortable quarters, to eat and dress well, to enjoy quite a number of worldly things. But he always wants somebody less privileged to share his pleasures. He constantly says, "This person is not inferior to me in talent, skill, ability or what you will... He has just had less luck than myself..."

Today, at sixty-two, Mitropoulos, although physically and mentally indefatigable, no longer aims at doing as much as possible. He asked the New York Philharmonic to be relieved of his duty of permanent conductor. He thinks, "It is time to climb down and make room for the young men on their way up." Nevertheless, he performs tasks which would scare many a younger man. He has just returned from two extensive tours, one with the Metropolitan Opera of New York, covering nearly the whole of the U.S.A., and the other with the New York Philharmonic through a great part of South America. But he felt fit enough to fix the date of his departure for Israel only a very few days after returning to New York, "just to change luggage." Not long ago he said, "Israel is the only country I am still interested to get to know."

Israel has welcomed the Maestro with a heartfelt "Shalom" and with the most sincere wish for his well-being and well-feeling in this country. Also for his unspoiled satisfaction of working with the musicians who are looking forward to a great experience in studying and playing under and with him. And everybody vows that his first visit to this country shall be followed by other visits, and not too few of them.

MUSICAL DIARY

Israel Philharmonic Orchestra. Subscription Concert No. 14. Dimitri Mitropoulos, conductor, Mann Auditorium, June 29. Bach: Fantasy and Fugue in G-minor for Organ (transcribed for Orchestra by Dimitri Mitropoulos); Mendelssohn: Symphony No. 5 in D-minor, "Reformation"; Kabalevsky: Symphony No. 4.

THE Management of the I.P.O. could not have planned a more transcendent season close than the appearance of Dimitri Mitropoulos. Though the choice of the works in this programme was not very happy throughout the geniality of the Conductor's interpretation filled the lacuna. The highlight of the concert came with Mr. Mitropoulos' transcription of the Bach. Here he achieved a real tour de force: the work remained truly organ-like in sound but gained through the refined intensity that an orchestral body can produce.

As to the "Reformation" Symphony, thanks to this great conductor the first two movements did capture the attention of the listener; but the third could not.

The masterful symphonic development and rich orchestration of Kabalevsky's Fourth Symphony could in no way cover the poorness of its thematic material, which is often obsolete and commonplace, at least in the first three movements. When in the fourth the listener's attention is suddenly awakened — it is only to discover that the composer successfully imitates Shostakovich.

The success of the concert, however, was tremendous, and the enthusiasm of the audience was such that it joined the orchestra in "Hatikva" at the end of the Concert. AVIDOM

Star-Studded I.P.O. Season Scheduled

Dimitri Mitropoulos has decided to accept the invitation of the Israel Philharmonic Orchestra to return for a further concert series, Mr. Zvi Haftel, of the management, has told The Jerusalem Post. Before his current visit Mr. Mitropoulos was reluctant to make any promise for the future. Plans for the 1958-9 season were meanwhile completed without including him.

The orchestra's management is now gladly re-shuffling the schedule in order to fit in Mr. Mitropoulos' two-month stay. He will again wind up the season. It is understood that he will also be willing to make some recordings with the I.P.O.

The end of July will bring a well-deserved vacation for the musicians — after having played before an estimated 50,000 persons in Tel Aviv, Jerusalem and Haifa this month.

They will cut down their usual two-month holiday by a week this summer in order to welcome Artur Rubinstein, He is due here on September 25, to start off the season during which he will perform 15 piano concertos.

From Bucharest

The schedule right through the season, from Rubinstein to Mitropoulos, reads like a Who's Who of musicians. Among them will be the Rumanian conductor Silvestri, of the Bucharest Symphony Orchestra. He has been widely acclaimed by critics in both Eastern and Western Europe, and will be the first from an Eastern European country to conduct the I.P.O.

Other conductors scheduled for the coming season are Josef Krips; Jean Fourner, conductor of the Paris State Opera; Eugene Ormandy, conductor of the Philadelphia Symphony Orchestra; Charles Munch and Jean Martinu.

Mr. Martinu was here earlier this year on a five-day visit to make recordings with the orchestra for Decca. He is expected to stay here for a month next season, and conduct "Song of Songs," his oratorio for soloists, choir and orchestra. The Canadian tenor, Glenn Gould, is to appear in this work.

A two-month visit by Guilini, during which Verdi's "Requiem" and "Falstaff" will be performed, is another of the highlights of the coming season.

Musik-Chronik der Woche

DIMITRI MITROPOULOS

Es gibt wohl kaum einen Musikliebhaber, Radiohörer oder Grammophonbesitzer, der seiner Musik — wenngleich durch Vermittlung des Apparats — nicht mit Begeisterung gelauscht hätte. Und nun erschien er in eigener Person auf dem Podium des Hejhal Hatarbut, als Dirigent der 14. Serie des I. P. O. - Mitropoulos gehört bereits zu den beinahe legendären Gestalten des Taktstocks, und so ging seinem ersten Auftreten in Israel gespannte Erwartung voran. Mit strammen Schritten betritt der Meister das Podium, und sofort nach den ersten Takten füllte sich der Saal mit einer elektrischen Spannung, die bis zum Abschluss des Konzerts nicht nachgelassen hat. Damit wäre schon das Wesen seiner Dirigenten-Kunst bezeichnet. Was noch dazu kommt, ein unnachgiebig exakter, sauberer, üppiger, höchst geschliffener, betörend schöner Orchesterklang, — der in grossem Bogen aufgezogene Aufbau der Details, wie des Ganzen, — und nicht zuletzt der mit einer sakralen Weihe durchtränkte vergeistigte und dennoch unerhört impulsive und dynamische Ausdruck. Seine deutenden, faszinierenden Gebärden sind einmalig.

Dimitri Mitropoulos, geboren 1896 in Athen, als Sprössling einer griechisch-orthodoxen Priesterfamilie, wollte in seiner Jugend selbst ins Kloster gehen. Die Musik durchkreuzte aber seine Pläne. Als Student des dortigen Konservatoriums schrieb er 1919 eine Oper „Soeur Beatrice", deren Uraufführung auch der zufällig dort weilende grosse französische Komponist, Saint-Saens begewohnt hat. Dieser schrieb dermassen begeisterte Berichte in französischen Zeitungen über das junge griechische Genie, dass er die Aufmerksamkeit der Oeffentlichkeit auf ihn gelenkt hat. Nach Beendigung des 1. Weltkrieges ermöglichten ihm griechische Mäzene seine Studien in Brüssel fortzusetzen. Dort studierte er Komposition und Orgel. Bald nachher zog er aber nach Berlin, wo er Schüler Ferruccio Busonis wurde. Dieser schätzte zwar die kompositorische Begabung des jungen Dimitri sehr hoch ein, dennoch entdeckt er in ihm eine noch stärkere Fähigkeit: nämlich den Dirigenten. Diese Entdeckung war schicksalsschwer für Mitropoulos. Von nun an widmete er sich hauptsächlich der Interpretation, und wurde bald Korrepetitor der Berliner Staatsoper, in unmittelbarer Nähe von Bruno Walter, Erich Kleiber, Leo Blech, Wilhelm Furtwängler u. anderer Grössen, im Zauberkreis von Busoni lebend. Gelegentlich wurde ihm auch das Dirigieren einiger Opern, Lohengrin oder Faust, anvertraut. Von dort berief man Mitropoulos an die Spitze der Athener Philharmoniker, — seine Weltkarriere begann jedoch erst 1930 mit dem Engagement bei den Berliner Philharmonikern, als Gastdirigent. Höchst charakteristisch ist das Programm seines dortigen Antritts-Konzerts: die C-Dur Symphonie von Dukas, das 3. Klavierkonzert von Prokofieff, in dessen Solopart infolge Erkrankung des Pianisten er selbst — mit grösstem Erfolg — eingesprungen ist, — und sein eigenes „Concerto grosso."

Es vergingen seitdem beinahe drei Dezennien, aber seine Vorliebe für die neue Musik liess nicht nach. Stets ergriff er jede Gelegenheit, zeitgenössische oder moderne Werke aus dem Unbekannten hervorzuholen, und als ihn Serge Kussewitzky nach Boston a.G. einlud, fand er in seinem jüngeren Kollegen einen gleichgesinnten Schwärmer für den Fortschritt. Während seiner langjährigen Tätigkeit in Minneapolis oder beim New York Philharmonic-Symphony führte Mitropoulos unter anderem Ernest Blochs Violinkonzert, David Diamonds, Morton Goulds Werke, Kreneks 3. Klavierkonzert — (selbst am Klavier), — Hindemiths Es-Dur Symphonie, dann später Robert Starers „Ballade für Geige und Orchester" und jetzt bei uns auch sein 2 Klavierkonzert erstmalig auf. Im Sommer wird der Meister bei den Salzburger Festspielen die europäische Erstaufführung der neuen Barber-Menotti'schen Oper „Vanessa" dirigieren, und beabsichtigt das nächste Jahr die sehr vernachlässigte Oper seines einstigen Meisters Busoni, „Dr. Faust" neu einstudieren.

Diese unglaubliche Energie, strotzende Lebenskraft, grenzenlose Begeisterung, die sein Dirigieren so sehr charakterisieren, sind auch für den Menschen bezeichnend. Seine Liebe wendet sich aber immer mehr der Opernbühne zu. Die Lieblinge sind: Verdi, Puccini und auch Richard Strauss, selbstredend neben den zeitgenössischen Neuheiten. Zu seinen Leidenschaften gehört auch das Studium der Franziskaner Literatur.

Das Programm des ersten Konzerts der 14. Abonnements-Serie wurde mit der von Mitropoulos für Orchester übertragenen G-Moll Orgel-Phantasie — und Fuge von J. S. Bach eröffnet. Diese und die nachfolgende Reformations - Symphonie verrieten, wie sehr Musik und Religion sich in ihm zu einer Einheit verschmelzen. Obwohl ich persönlich die schlichte, primitive, alte Orgel von Bach in seiner ursprünglichen Form jeder noch so prunkhaften Neubekleidung gegenüber vorziehe, ist diese Bearbeitung von Mitropoulos, die geniale Uebertragung der Orgel-Register auf diverse Orchester-Instrumente, der (bei uns nur durch die Akustik gefährdete) grossatmige Bau der Fuge, so überwältigend, dass man theoretische Erwägungen aufgibt. — Mendelssohns V. Reformations-Symphonie dürfte auch als „religiöse" Musik gebucht werden, nicht nur angesichts des „Dresdner Amens" oder des Bachschen Chorals „Ein' feste Burg ist unser Gott", sondern infolge der Bestrebung des 21-jährigen Komponisten, seiner neuen Kirchengemeinde die devote Treue zu bekunden. Deshalb schien uns diese zweite „Bach-Transkription" des Abends weniger aufrichtig, als jene von Mitropoulos.

„Zeitgenössisch" wurde zu einer ästhetischen Definition. Ob Dimitri Kabalewskys jetzt hier erstmalig aufgeführte 4. Symphonie diesem Begriff entspricht, ist mehr als zweifelhaft. Sie wurde, Gott weiss, auf wessen Befehl, mehr als populär, stellenweise operettenhaft banal geschrieben. Ausnahme bildet der Largo-Satz, der durch Gustav Mahlers Manier zu aufrichtigen Empfindungen mit schönem Orchestersatz führt, oder im Finale ein von Prokofieff inspiriertes, munteres, groteskes Matrosenlied — Thema, das mit Humor verarbeitet wird.

Dimitri Mitropoulos wurde beim Antrittskonzert mit solcher Begeisterung gefeiert, dass er einen Satz wiederholen und zum Schluss die Hatikwa anstimmen musste.

Im Sonder-Abonnement am Mittwoch Abend wurde anstelle der Mendelssohn Symphonie Robert Starers 2 Klavierkonzert und Schumanns „Introduktion und Allegro appassionato" für Klavier und Orchester mit David Bar-Ilan als Solist unter Mitropoulos gespielt. Starer, ein gebürtiger Wiener, verbrachte 10 Jahre hier, setzte dann seine Studien in Amerika fort, wo er längere Zeit als Professor der Juilliard School tätig war. Von seinen Werken wurden in den U.S.A. mehrere, so die „Ballade" für Geige und Orchester, „Prälude und Rondo" für Orchester, wie das 2. Klavierkonzert häufig gespielt. Die ersteren — die wir an dem vorangehenden Abend im Milo-Künstlerklub von Schallplatten gehört haben, weisen mehr orientalisch-israelische Charakterzüge auf, als das jetzt gehörte Konzert. Dieses ist auffallend von Gershwin und von Schönberg beeinflusst: von ersterem in der jazz-gefärbten Rhythmik, von letzterem in der Harmonisation. Sogar die nicht ganz tränen — echte Resignation des sehr schönen, langsamen Satzes bekennt sich ebenso zu Gershwin, wie auch zur „Verklärten Nacht"-Stimmung Schönbergs. Die Eckssätze sind mit spielerischer Leichtigkeit, geistreich, mit viel Humor geschrieben. Sehr amerikanisch, — aber sehr begabt. (Das „aber" nicht als Gegensatz, nur als Vorteil gemeint). Eine frische, lebendige, ausgezeichnet durchgearbeitete Musik, die von dem Haifaer, seit mehreren Jahren in Amerika lebenden 28jährigen Pianisten David Bar-Ilan glänzend, mit grösster technischer Ueberlegenheit, hochmusikalisch gespielt wurde. Es ist ein doppelter Gewinn, zwei solche wertvolle Landsleute — hoffentlich auf die Dauer — wieder bei uns zu haben. Maestro Mitropoulos verlieh der Begleitung seine volle Leidenschaft und devote Hingabe. — Bar-Ilan machte uns auch mit Schumanns 1859 in Dresden geschriebenem Konzertstück in zwei Sätzen, op. 92 bekannt, und wir müssen dem Schumann-Biographen Walter Dahms beistimmen: „Das Seelische keimt und sprosst nur zur vollen Blüte gelangt es nicht." Der vorzügliche Bar-Ilan ist zwar weniger auf romantische Musik eingestellt, liess dennoch sein brillantes Klavierspiel „zur vollen Blüte gelangen."

Die Konzerte unter Mitropoulos schufen eine feierliche Atmosphäre, die nur durch grosse Persönlichkeiten hervorgerufen werden kann.

ערב גדול

בתזמורת הפילהרמונית

מאת צבי סנונית

ביקורו הראשון של דימיטרי מיט־רופולוס בארץ הוא מאורע גדול, שכן ניתן לנו בזה להתוודע מקרוב לאחד מענקי־המנצחים של זמננו, אחד מאלה שלא שכחו עדיין את סוד החזדהות הגמורה עם המוסיקה ועם האדם. ניצוחו של מיטרופולוס הוא חרבה יותר מעיצוב עילאי של מיצורים מוסיקליים, הרבה יותר מ־מיצוי מירוא משמעותם האמנותית: זוהי התגלות של דינאמיקה אנושית אדירה, היודעת להפיח במוסיקה את כוח ה„דיבור" ולשתף בחוויותיה אנשים רבים. עם כל הדרמאטיות הגדולה שבו, רחוק מיטרופולוס מכל פוזה תיאטרלית; כל מאמציו מכוונים לעיצוב המיצור במלוא יפעתו ולתת ביטוי ממצה לתוכפו ומשמעותו. בתנועות ידיו עשירות־ההבעה הוא מוליך את התזמורת על־פני קשת־גוונים בעלת שפע לא־יתואר שבין רחש דק ביותר ועד להרמת־קול רועמת של פורטיסימו, שהוא רם ביותר, אך לעולם לא צעקני. קרשנדו שלו (הגברה מודרגת של תוזק הצליל) הוא חוויה בלתי־נש־כחת בשל המתח הפנימי המפעם בו בצורה מוחשית כל־כך. אך כל אלה רק אמצעים הם בידו, ואין הוא מא־בד את מראה היער מרוב העצים. קויי־הנעימה, טוויי־האקורדים, כתמי־הגוונים משתלבים זה בזה בהתאם למשמעותם בחזיון הכולל, הניצב ל־עיני רוחו של מנצח זה בחיוניות מיוחדת במינה. אכן מנצח גדול, עליו אפשר לומר בפה מלא: הוא יוצר את המיצור מחדש (ולעתים אף מעניק לו יותר ממה שיש בו). הדי־נאמיות החריפה של מיטרופולוס היא ללא ספק, תכונה הדצדדית מובהקת; אינני יודע, למשל, באיזו מידה עשויה תפיסה זו להתאים ל־מוסיקה של הרוקוקו, להיידן ומר־צרט. אך מצד שני זהו סימן לגדו־לתו: התגלייה ממבצע שידע להת־אים עצמו במידה שווה לכל סגנון היא תגלייה נואלת, שכן מתעלמת היא מקשר ההזדהות הפנימי של ה־מבצע עם המוסיקה הקרובה ללבו — הזדהות שרק היא עשויה להפוך את ביצועו לחוויה.

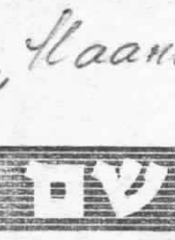
„אין אדם כשרוני ואין אדם בלתי כשרוני — אומר מר מיטרופולוס — יש רק אדם ששיחק לו מזלו ואדם שלא היה לו מזל". בהבחנה דקה זו מתבטאת תפיסתו ההומניטרית המע־מיקה, האופינית כל כך לאמן גדול. מהומניות זו נובעת אולי גם אהבתו ליהודים.

כל המועדונים הסגורים במיניאפוליס מהרו להציע חברות למיטרופולוס, אך הוא דחה באדיבות את כל ההצעות, מלבד אחת: הוא נרשם למועדון ה־י ה ו ד י.



הגוים נעלבו מאד. „מר מיטרופולוס — שאל אותו, בטון נפגע, נכבד מ־נכבדי המקום — מדוע דוקא המועדון היהודי?".

„אגלה לך סוד — השיב לו מיטרו־פולוס ברצינות מעושה — המטבח ה־יהודי הוא הטוב ביותר".

פרסום בטלביזיה

בי בן 80 ורב בקהיר. אנחנו שב־עה אחים ואני ה מ ט ו ר ח ש־בהם" — מציג את עצמו רחמים (קל־מנט) הררי, המנהל האמנותי והשחקן הראשי (וולפונה) של התיאטרון הצר־פתי המבקר עתה בארץ.

„הצגת תיאטרון רצינית — מספר מר הררי — ראיתי לראשונה בהיותי בן 17 — בשנת 1936 — עת הופיעה „הבימה" עם ה„דיבוק" באלקסנדריה. מאז נכנס בי דיבוקו של התיאטרון ו־לאחר שגמרתי את לימודי (פילוסופיה) בסורבון, יסדתי להקה נסיונית בפריס".

מר הררי אף שיחק בסרטים רבים — היה הטבה ב„טמנ־גו" והנאצי ב־„אני והקולונל" (עם דני קיי) — וכל מה שהר־ויח מהקולונע, השקיע בלהקתו. „לפני 4 שנים — הוא מספר — הצגנו מחזה של פרוספר מ־רימה, שנמשך תשע שעות. ההצלחה האמנותית היתה כבירה. הפסדתי עליה את פרוטתי האחרונה".

כל שאני מרבה לקרוא את דנטה, אני מבין אותו יותר. אך ככל ש־אני מרבה לקרוא את שקספיר, נדמה לי ש ה ו א מבין א ו ת י יותר. ובזה, חושבני, עיקר גדולתו". — אר־מר אנטוני קווייל, הידוע עתה אצלנו כמשה ב„הבכור" ובעולם — כאחד ה־מומחים הגדולים למחזות שקספיר.

הוא התישב בג'יפ. חשבתי בלבי ש־אני חייב לומר משהו. „לא קווינו — אמרתי — שאדוני יוסוה לקולונל של חיל האויר".

צ'רצ'יל הסמיק מרוב כעס: „יוסוה?" מה זאת אומרת „יוסוה?" להוי ידוע לך, אדוני הצעיר: „הנני קולונל של האוירי־ה הבריטית".

„פגעתי בציפור נפשו. כי וינסטון צ'רצ'יל, ראש ממשלת בריטניה בשער־תיה הקשות ביותר, גדול האנגלים ב־כל הדורות, גאותו היתה על כך שהוא קולונל בחיל האויר הבריטי".

תחת הפסנתר

דימיטרי מיטרופולוס הוא בודאי המוסיקאי היחיד בעולם, שקריירה שלו התחילה — מתחת לפסנתר.

הוא היה מנצחה של התזמורת ה־פילהרמונית באתונה, כאשר דלתות ה־תהילה העולמית נפתחו בפניו — והוא הוזמן לעמוד בראש התזמורת הגדולה של מיניאפוליס.

„היה זה בשנת 1938 — מספר המ־נצח הדגול, סכנת המלחמה נתנה את אותותיה באירופה והנתינים האמרי־קאים חזרו ב־המוניהם ליבשת הם הבטוחה. ב־אניה, בה היי־תי צריך להס־ליג, לא היה מ־קום. התחננתי שיקבלוני עד שפרשו מזרון

KLANG und SCHATTEN

MUSIKTAGEBUCH von MAX BROD

Das letzte Abonnementkonzert weckte besonderen Enthusiasmus. Dimitri Mitropoulos kam, dirigierte und siegte. Wir haben ihn schon lange erwartet, seit Jahren. Die grossen Erwartungen wurden nicht im Mindesten enttäuscht, wurden sogar womöglich übertroffen. Mitropoulos, der Star der New Yorker Philharmonie, gehört zu jenen wirklich vom Herzen aus verständnisvollen Musikern, die selbstverständlich keinen schroffen Unterschied zischen moderner und traditioneller Musik machen, die das Schöpferische und Grosse ehren, wo auch immer es auftaucht und hohe Wellen schlägt. Er hat Klassiker und Romantiker mit grösster Intensität gepflegt, er hat sich für Mahler und für so extreme Neuerer wie Alban Bergs „Wozzek" feuereifrig eingesetzt. So war auch das Programm, das er uns brachte, eine gesunde Mischung von Alt und Neu.

Die Bearbeitung von Fugen Bachs für Orchester wird immer eine problematische, von der Musik-Orthodoxie angefeindete und angekreidete Angelegenheit bleiben, Bach selbst hat bekanntlich nicht gerade in Klangfarben den Höhepunkt seiner Ausdrucksform erblickt, er hat öfters einzelne seiner Werke von einem aufs andere Intrument transponiert. Auch ist ja die Orgel, für welche die von Mitropoulos transkribierte „Phantasie und Fuge" ursprünglich geschrieben ist, eine Kombination fast sämtlicher Orchesterfarben, ein Kollektiv-Instrument. Diesen rationalen Argumenten zum Trotz gestehe ich, dass ich bei Einleben in die Aufführung durch eine gewisse Nicht-Frömmigkeit, die vom Glanz des Orchesters und seines Schlagzeuges (gegenüber dem reinen Orgelklang) ausstrahlt, behindert war. Auch die grandioseste Interpretation, die das Geflecht der Stimmen kristallklar freilegt und damit sogar der Orgel-Deutung überlegen ist, kann über diesen Echtheitsunterschied der beiden Fassungen nicht hinwegbringen.

Ganz in sein eigenes Gebiet geriet der Gast in der Symphonie No. 4 von Kabalevsky. Dieser begabte Sowjetkomponist kommt von Tschaikowsky, mit dem er die Vorliebe für das Sangbare, aber auch für grelle Lärmeffekte und kontrastierendes Erstreben im Melancholischen teilt. Aber er bringt auch viel Eigenes, er ist vermöge der folkloristischen Elemente, die er verarbeitet, origineller als der überschätzte Schostakowitsch. Im Allegro bietet er eine natürlich fliessende und doch tonartmässig vom Trivialen erfreulich abweichende Melodie. Sehr ergreifend ist das einsam meditierende Largo. Und alle guten Geister der Komposition vereinigen sich im rhytmisch aparten Capriccisio, das sogar Zusammenhänge mit Brahms ahnen lässt. Dann aber, im letzten Satz, kommt es plötzlich zu einer stellenweise banalen Radaumusik, deren „Lustigkeit" nicht ganz unoffiziell anmutet. Man freut sich, dass sich später auch im Finale wieder edlere Episoden finden.

Wie nun der Dirigent in sämtlichen Sätzen die guten stimmungsvollen Einzelheiten auszumalen wusste, wie er das wirklich Fröhliche leicht dahintanzen und das Leidumflorte verklingen liess: das war ein Kunsterlebnis sui generis. Auch optisch! Die schlanke Gestalt strafft sich, wird zu etwas Machtvollem, Dominierendem, der ganze Körper, vor allem der linke Arm schüttelt sich zuweilen, um gleichsam die Glut der Empfindung über das Orchester auszugiessen, das diesmal den Intentionen des Gastes besonders andächtig gehorchte. Mitropoulos hat eine Art, den von ihm geleiteten Klangkörper in Ekstase zu versetzen, — dann aber wieder sanft zu beruhigen, wobei er die schwebenden Hände wie beschwörend, wie segnend bis zur Augenhöhe erhebt. Es gibt Dirigenten, die gern mit gesenkten Armen stossweise Zeichen geben. Mitropoulos dirigiert „von oben", er baut mit schützenden Händen gewissermassen ein Dach über den Klangmassen, die er zärtlich und mit Leidenschaft betreut. Das war sein Signum auch während der (nicht häufig gespielten) Reformationssymphonie von Mendelssohn, mit ihrem auffallenden Parsifal-Motiv (Wagner und Mendelssohn haben aus der gleichen kirchlichen Quelle geschöpft). Ein schwächeres Werk des grossen Komponisten, aber eben doch ein Mendelssohn. — Zuletzt gab es Beifallsstürme von selten gehörtem Elan, die Wiederholung einer kantablen Kabalevsky-Stelle und, um den Saisonschluss festlich zu begehen, eine gross dirigierte „Hatikvah", bei der der Meister das Publikum zum Mitsingen fortriss und erstaunlich wirksam zu leiten wusste.

MUSIK

Meister des Klanges

Letztes Abonnementskonzert des IPO unter Dimitri Mitropoulos

Bach: Phantasie und Fuge in g-moll für Orgel, für Orchester bearbeitet von Dimitri Mitropoulos;
Mendelssohn: Symphonie No. 5 („Reformation");
Kabalevsky: Symphonie No. 4.

In der eben endenden Saison hat das IPO verhältnismässig viele der wenigen Kapellmeister und Solisten der ersten Reihe eingeladen. Am Dirigentenpult folgt nach Münch und Kubelik — erstmalig — Dimitri Mitropoulos, ein Meister des Klangs und der Gestaltung von märchenhaftem Format. Seine Beziehung zum Orchester und dessen restlose Beherrschung einerseits, und die magische Wirkung der von ihm beseelten Musik auf den Zuhörer andererseits machen sein Konzert zum grossen Erlebnis sowohl für den Musiker als auch Musikfreund und Laien. Um den Hörer seine gewaltige Persönlichkeit erkennen zu lassen, ist ihm das Werk des Altmeisters Bach das geeignetste. Zu Bachs Zeiten lag bei der Interpretation das Hauptgewicht vielmehr auf der Balance der Stimmen als auf der Klangfarbe, die erst später in gleichem Masse wichtig wurde wie alle anderen Faktoren der musikalischen Gestaltung. Es war durchaus angängig andere Instrumente zu verwenden als vorgeschrieben war, etwa eine Flöte statt einer Oboe, einer Geige statt einer Flöte. Orgelwerke blieben allerdings der Orgel vorbehalten. Dabei klangen die Orgeln doch so verschieden — von der Stimmung ganz abgesehen. Wenn wir zuende denken, gelangen wir zu der Ueberzeugung, dass die Orchestrierung eines Orgelwerkes, die überdies so vorgenommen ist, dass der Klang dem der Orgel möglichst ähnlich ist, gutzuheissen ist. Die Bearbeitung der g-moll-Phantasie und Fuge seitens Mitropoulos ist derart vollkommen, dass man stellenweise sich mit den Augen vergegenwärtigen muss, dass keine Orgel da steht, sondern ein symphonisches Orchester. Dies liegt allerdings nicht nur an der Instrumentation, sondern auch an der klanglichen Balance, der Dynamik und der grossen Linie in der plastischen Interpretation des mächtigen Werkes seitens des genialen Meisters des Taktstocks.

VIEL DEUTSCHER ALS WAGNER

Die Reformationssymphonie zählt im allgemeinen zu den weniger aufgeführten Werken Mendelssohns (bei uns wird sie gern im Wunschprogramm des Radios gespielt), und dies mit Recht. Es liegt in der Natur der Sache, dass wenn jemand sich vornimmt, in einem fremden Heim sich möglichst frei zu benehmen, als wäre es sein eigenes, er Übertreibungen nicht vermeiden kann. Mendelssohn ist zwar schon von Jugend auf Christ, aber wenn es dazu kommt, dies in einem künstlerischen Bekenntnis darzutun, hat er nicht die nötige Unbefangenheit. Das Vermögen der objektiven Darstellung wie in der „Fingalshöhle", der dritten und vierten Symphonie, schwindet, und die mit grosser Kunst angewandte Lutherische Hymne „Ein' feste Burg ist unser Gott", wirkt nicht erlebt. Auch das im ersten Satz verwendete „Dresdener Amen", das der Tradition sowohl der katholischen als auch der protestanischen Kirchen Dresdens angehört, vermag hier nicht zu überzeugen. Dasselbe „Dresdener Amen" benützte später Richard Wagner für das Gralsmotiv im „Parsifal". Dort wirkt es vollkommen organisch, als hätte Wagner es selbst erfunden. Während wir bei „Parsifal" in erster Linie die religiöse Tendenz emfinden, drängt sich uns in der Fünften Symphonie von Mendelssohn weniger der christliche, als der deutsche Charakter des Werkes auf. Dies manchem, der das Werk Wagners oder zumindest die Ouvertüre nicht kennt, zu beweisen, ist hier schwer, da, trotz aller Beschlüsse, die beschämende Diskriminierung der Werke Wagners andauert! (Wie lange noch wird dem Publikum der Genuss Wagnerscher Meistermusik vorenthalten werden? Wie lange noch wird die heranwachsende Musikergeneration um die Kenntnis dieses wichtigen Gliedes in der Entwicklung der Musik betrogen werden? Mit einer Tristanplatte im Konservatorium kann man mit dem Genius Wagners nicht vertraut werden. Seine Musik muss erlebt werden!!). Der Meldelssohnsche Stempel haftet natürlich seiner Fünften Symphonie an, aber sie ist seinen grossen Meisterwerken nicht ebenbürtig, ihr Hauptgewicht liegt im äusseren Effekt.

GLEICHGESCHALTETE MUSIK

Die den Abend abschliessende Symphonie von Kabalevsky ist alles eher als ein originelles Werk. Es gibt keinen Meister, der nicht vom bereits dagewesenen ausgegangen wäre und neue Wege beschritten hätte. Aber hier kann man überhaupt nicht von neuen Wegen sprechen. Wir treffen lauter alte Bekannte: Tschaikowsky, Schostakowitch, Khachaturian, Prokofiev, auch Mahler und sogar Grieg. Besonders letzterer klang so fremd, dass einem unwillkürlich ein dummer Witz einfallen musste: „Nie wieder Grieg!" Und dann: Viel Lärm, Trommelgepolter ...

DAS ERLEBNIS

Und dennoch sprachen wir nicht anfangs von magischer Wirkung der Musik, von einem grossen Erlebnis, das für uns das Konzert war? Jawohl, und so war es auch! Es war die grosse Kunst des Meisters, der die Werke beseelte, der ihnen Wert und Kraft verlieh, der sie adelte. Wie oft sprachen wir davon, dass gerade an mit Mängeln behafteten Werken ein Interpret sein Können beweisen kann. Hier hatten wir ein beredtes Beispiel für die Richtigkeit dieser Erkenntnis.

Warum der Meister wohl dieses Programm gewählt hat! Es scheint, dass er eine falsche Vorstellung von unserem Publikum hatte und daher auf äusseren Effekt grossen Wert legte. Er wird genug lange im Lande weilen, um — sicher zu seiner Freude — zu erkennen, dass das Publikum auch anspruchsvollere Musik verträgt. Wir sind glücklich, dass der grosse Gast in unserer Mitte weilt und wir sind überzeugt, dass die folgenden Konzerte, die er uns bieten wird, mit denselben stürmischen Ovationen quittiert werden, wie das erste.

דמיטרי מטרופולוס

ישראלים על במת הפילהרמוניה

שני אמנים ישראליים היו מבצעי הקונצרט המיוחד למנויים (מס' 12) מטעם הפילהרמוניה הישראלית. המנצח גארי ברתיני: מייסד ומנצח מקהלת „רינת", מנהל ומייסד תנועת „הנוער המוסיקלי", וקומפוזיטור. והזמרת הערלה מפולין עליזה לבנדובסקה.

גארי ברתיני, שזו לו הופעתו הראשונה בקונצרט למנויים — הוא כבר ניצח על הפילהרמוניה בקונצרטים לנוער — הגיש תחילה את הסימפוניה (ברה מז'ור) „פריז" (ק. 297) למוצרט. גארי ברטיני הוכיח מיד שהוא שולט בפרטיטורה ויש לו מה לומר, ברם עדין אין הוא שולט לחלוטין על תנועותיו שיש והן מוגזמות או מיותרות, כמו למשל סימני ההתחלות המופרזים. שלשת פרקי היצירה השקופה והקלורה בשלובי־קולות שקולים להפליא לא זכו להתעלות נפשית. מרכז הערב עבר לשתי היצירות הבאות ה„אהבה בכבלי קסמים" לדה פליה, מוסיקת הבאלט הזו שכולה להט גוונים ספרדים באמנות אימפרסיוניסטית היה אולי מהטובות ביותר בספרות ספרד. כאן הגיע ג. ברתיני לרמה גבוהה יותר של ניצוח והפעמה כשהזמרת המשתתפת רק בכמה פרקים שרה בקול נעים תרבותי, אך עדיין לא שווה צליל בכל הסולם ובלתי מעובד די צרכי לאולם רחב ידיים. גם יצירת קודאי „וריאציות על שיר עם הונגרי הטוס" לתזמורת סימפונית — ביצוע בכירה כאן — זימנה לגארי ברתיני הפעלת כשרונותיו המבטיחים לו עתיד של מנצח בעל משקל

חזרה עם דימיטרי מיטרופולוס

דימיטרי מיטרופולוס כבש בסערה את שוחרי המוסיקה בארץ. לאחר כל יצירה שניצח עליה רעם אולמו של היכל התרבות רגעים רבים. הוא חזר ועלה לבמה בצעדים מהירים, החווה קידה, לחץ את ידי המנגנים פעם אחר פעם.

היו שאמרו כי ניצוח כזה לא היה בארץ מאז ביקר בה טוסקניני, אחרים נזכרו בשארל מינש, כאשר ניצח על הסימפוניה הפנטסטית לברליוז, או בסרגאי קוסביצקי בנצחו על הסימפוניות של צ'יקובסקי. לדעת הכל, נסתיימה עונת התזמורת בקראשאנדו אדיר.

צלמים אוהבים את מיטרופולוס לא רק בגלל גדולתו כמנצח. הם אוהבים את היווני בן הששים ושתים גם משום שאפשר לצלמו בלי סוף.

סם פרנק, צלם־עתונאי תל־אביבי, ישב באחת החזרות של התזמורת, על ספסל המקהלה, מאחורי מושביהם של הנגנים, וצילם את המאסטרו גבה־הקומה והקרח, בנצחו על התזמורת, בסחטו ממנה צלילים שמעולם לא הפיקה. הוא ראה את מיטרופולוס מזמר, מחייך, מדריך, מתלהב, רוגש, מרקד מוכיח ומרחף.

"Tosca" by Giacomo Puccini. Dimitri Mitropoulos conducting the Israel Philharmonic Orchestra, with Hilde Zadek (Tosca), Richard Tucker (Cavaradossi), Cesare Bardelli (Scarpia), Lawrence Davidson (Sacristan) and Leah Crohn (Shepherd), Ephraim Biran (Angelotti), Haim Flashner (Spoletta), Shlomo Hermon (Sciarrone) and the Tel Aviv Chamber Choir (Director Eitan Lustig). (Binyanei Ha'oomah Concert Hall, July 17).

A packed house and a standing ovation may be taken as proof that the IPO did well to bring "La Tosca" to the concert hall. There can be no question of competition with our reborn opera company, as Jerusalem (and Haifa) does not benefit from this institution. An opera in concert form is better than no opera at all, and a performance of international standard is far better than anything else.

Dimitri Mitropoulos led the performance with superb sovereignty, inspiring everyone. Stage props, costumes, lighting etc. were hardly missed, as the guest artists sang with such intensity that their spare indications of acting were sufficient to create the proper frame for the drama. Hilde Zadek sang and acted convincingly. Richard Tucker overwhelmed the audience again with his strong, well-set voice. Cesare Bardelli's Scarpia was carried by a forceful actor and an experienced singer, who made this brutal man of power a nearly likeable figure. Lawrence Davidson showed a highly developed stage personality in his relatively small part and made his interpretation a most positive contribution.

Everything should be done to persuade the IPO to remain in the Exhibition Concert Hall in the next season. Bringing the hall up to standard would cost much less than what other undertakings have swallowed, and the additional seats would fill the long-standing need of many prospective concertgoers. It must be realized that primitive surroundings are no longer acceptable, and concerts and other artistic performances must take place in dignified surroundings.

Mitropoulos Waiting To Conduct Full Opera

Jerusalem Post Reporter

TEL AVIV. — Maestro Dimitri Mitropoulos, who arrived Wednesday night for a five-week season with the Israel Philharmonic Orchestra, indirectly gave the I.P.O. perhaps the highest praise he had to bestow.

At a press conference in Beit Sokolow a few hours after his arrival, Mr. Mitropoulos, in discussing the concert version of the opera "Tosca" which he is conducting as the highlight of his programme, said that he will gladly conduct a full opera in Israel when Israel opera reaches the standard of the I.P.O.

American tenor Richard Tucker, who is also a cantor, and soprano Hilde Zadek will appear in "Tosca." The opera performances will be interspersed with symphony concerts during which the first Israel performances of three works will be played: a symphony by Kabalevsky, Mendelssohn's little-known "Reformation" symphony, and Mr. Mitropoulos' own arrangement of a Fantasia and Fugue by Bach. David Bar-Ilan will play in performances of Robert Starer's Second Piano Concerto and Schumann's Concerto.

Concerts Held in Mexico City

TO THE EDITOR OF THE NEW YORK TIMES:

It was with considerable interest that I read Frances R. Grant's letter in the June 26 issue of The New York Times concerning the Latin-American tour of the New York Philharmonic Orchestra.

In her letter Miss Grant writes that "it should be remembered that not many Latin Americans can afford the luxury of paying for a concert, which may amount to one or two days' salary."

I am happy to state that we of the United States Information Service in Mexico were able to anticipate Miss Grant's concern. The second concert in Mexico, conducted by Dimitri Mitropoulos on June 15, was given at the National Auditorium, which seated more than 12,000 persons for the concert. The direction of the Bellas Artes, upon the suggestion of the United States Information Service, offered seats to this concert at prices ranging from 2 pesos (16 cents) to 25 pesos ($2). It should be added that the house was sold out.

The first concert, conducted by Leonard Bernstein, was given at the Theatre of the Bellas Artes on June 14 at the customary prices. The theatre was packed, with hundreds of chairs placed in the aisles to take care of the overflowing crowds.

MUSICAL DIARY

Israel Philharmonic Orchestra, Special Subscription Concert No. 18. Dimitri Mitropoulos, conductor; David Bar-Illan, piano (Mann Auditorium, July 2): Bach: Fantasy and Fugue in G-Minor for Organ, transcribed by Dimitri Mitropoulos; Starer: Piano Concerto No. 2; Schumann: "Konzertstück," op. 92; Kabalevsky: Symphony No. 4.

THE two outer works of this programme having been reviewed in our last diary, we will deal with the two works for piano and orchestra, and it is good to state right from the start that we do so with a feeling of real satisfaction.

The composer Starer and the pianist Bar-Illan being both artists of high calibre, it is good that they carry the standard of Israel music around the world. If Robert Starer's concerto does not diffuse an atmosphere of what is generally felt to be Israel, it has nevertheless all the qualities of a masterfully conceived work, and although one can detect in it manifold influences of contemporary masters, one cannot deny him a quite strong personal note as well. This was proved by the middle movement which in our opinion has the breath of genuine inspiration.

Mr. Bar-Illan, whom we had the pleasure of hearing for the first time, is a revelation, and we are sure that he will not find it difficult to gain international fame within the not too distant future. It is not because of his technique — which is perfect — but through his purely unaffected musicianship that he will achieve it. He played the two works with the same intensity (by the way, this is his strongest and most obvious quality) but with due differentiation for the style of each.

What can be said of Mr. Mitropoulos that has not been said yet? Perhaps no one has thought of naming him "the miracle maker" yet, but even the Kabalevsky, which definitely is an empty work, seemed to gain some content under his crushing personality.

Violin Recital by Edna Michell, Z.O.A. House, June 28.

EDNA Michell, who has been studying in London with Rostal on a Menuhin scholarship, introduced herself to the Israel public in a programme of works by Locatelli, Mozart, Brahms, Walton and Stravinsky.

The young violinist made the impression of a sensitive artist whose main qualities are a beautiful — though not very voluminous — tone, sound digital dexterity and a fine bowing technique. Her natural musicality came best to the fore in the A-major Brahms Sonata, which found in Walter Anfhauser an excellent partner at the piano (strangely enough, the pianist's name was not mentioned on the programme). We liked the Walton Sonata less. It tends more to showmanship than to real musical values and if the performance was somewhat boring, the fault was more with the work than with the performers.

On the other hand the closing Stravinsky suite, as well as its interpretation, made for most enjoyable listening. AVIDOM

The Israel Philharmonic Orchestra, Dimitri Mitropoulos, conductor: Richard Tucker, tenor (Binyanei Ha'ooma Concert Hall, July 3). Mendelssohn: Symphony No. 5 ("Reformation"); Arias by Handel, Donizetti, Verdi, Tchaikovsky and Mascagni; Kabalevsky: Symphony No. 4.

IF given within a normal 10 or 12-concert subscription series, two symphonic works on one programme would have been taken in stride, but as Dimitri Mitropoulos' visit to our country is some sort of a sensation, it would have been much more gratifying had he chosen two more important works to show his greatness. But our public reacted just the same with overwhelming enthusiasm and received the distinguished guest with tremendous applause. Richard Tucker, too, managed to get immediate contact with our public through his rendition of Italian blood-and-thunder arias which he sang with much gusto and dramatic interpretation. His remarkable voice carried the audience away so that it even accepted with delight his interrupting the concert with announcements of his solo recital and the performance of "Tosca." The orchestra played as it had not played for some time and fully earned its share in the success of the evening.

Musik-Chronik der Woche

"Tosca" — m. b. H.

— Konzertante Aufführung der Puccinischen Oper durch das IPO unter Dimitri Mitropoulos.

Wir können es nur als einen Auswuchs des immer noch halbwegs traditionslosen Amerikanismus betrachten, wenn sich ein Dirigent hochsten Grades, wie Dimitri Mitropoulos zu solchen unkünstlerischen Aufgaben hergibt, wie die konzertante Aufführung einer Oper, „Tosca", die mit Fleisch und Blut mit der Bühne, mit dem Spiel der Personen, mit einer visuellen Handlung untrennbar verbunden ist. — Als Anfang dieses Jahres New York Philharmonic-ebenfalls unter Mitropoulos-„Elektra" von Richard Strauss gleichfalls konzertant aufgeführt hat, schrieb im „Aufbau" Artur Holde dasselbe, was ich wortwörtlich uber die hiesige „Tosca" schreiben möchte:

— „Diese dramaturgische Detailarbeit, in der Strauss (Puccini) eine Meisterschaft in der Beherrschung der Bühne erkennen lässt, verliert völlig ihren Sinn, sie wird sogar travestiert, wenn die Aufführenden in grosse Konzertaufmachung mit wahrhaft lächerlichem schauspielerischem Getue die Vorgänge der Tragödie anzudeuten bemüht sind."

— „Nein, dieses Werk wird selbst in einer herrlichen musikalischen Darstellung zu einer Karikatur, gegen die sich wahrscheinlich niemand mehr als die Autoren gewendet hätten. Das, was versönlich stimmen musste, waren die bewundernswerten Leistungen dieser Konzertfassung". (4 März, 1958).

Ob New York, oder Tel-Aviv, ob Richard Strauss, oder Puccini, kommt es letzten Endes vom künstlerischen Standpunkt auf das selbe an. „Tosca" wird erbarmungslos verstümmelt, wenn sie ihre Bühne, Masken, Kulissen, das Theater nur mit einigen unkontrollierten Gebärden oder Mimen angedeutet aufgeführt wird. Der arme Cavaradossi wird im Nebenzimmer gefoltert, seht!: er selbst steht aber seelenruhig zwischen Scarpia und Tosca auf dem Konzert-Podium, und der Oper unkundige Hörer schrickt verwundert auf, wenn dieser plötzlich scheinbar ganz unbegründet,—einen Schmerzenschrei ausstösst. —Tosca tötet den sadistischen Polizeichef. Ihr Opfer lässt sich aber von dieser, zweifelsohne unangenehmen Aktion kaum stören, denn er guckt während dessen etwas gelangweilt die Pyramiden des Hejhal Hatarbut an, wo er doch auf dem Boden liegend erleiden müsste, wie neben seinem Leichnam die blutrünstige, immer aber noch fromme Täterin andachtsvoll zwei brennende Kerzen aufstellt. Und wenn wir daran denken, wie einst für die Wiener Staatsoper von Puccini selbst eingestellte und von ihm so hochgeschätzte Maria Jeritza bei dieser Szene, jedes Wort wie einen Hammerschlag betonend, schauererregend, wie eine Salome mit dem Haupt des Jochanaan in der Hand, sagt: — „Und — vor — diesem — Mann — zitterte — ganz Rom!" — (E avanti a lui tremare tutte Roma!), dann können wir es nur bedauern, dass unsere vorzügliche Tosca, Hilde Zadek niemals d. Rolle von ihrer grossen Vorgängerin sah und so diesen Satz wie nur ganz nebenbei verklingen liess... Doch litt sie ebenso unter der Abwesenheit der Bühne, wie die anwesenden Opernfreunde selbst... Rossinis „Barbier von Sevilla" vertrug bei uns Anfang dieser Saison, nicht nur leicht eine stilisierte Konzertaufführung, sondern schien darunter noch zu gewinnen. Völlig verschieden ist es jedoch bei „Tosca", — deren dramatischer Ahne von Sardou meistens mit der grossen Sarah Bernhardt in der Titelrolle, etwa dreitausend Aufführungen auf der Bühne erlebt hat, bis Illica und Giacosa — ein Opernlibretto aus ihr verfertigten. Allerdings ursprünglich nicht für Puccini, der das selbst von Verdi bewunderte Textbuch mitHilfe seines Verlegers Ricordi, der es bereits kontraktlich dem Komponisten Alberto Franchetti veräussert hat, nur durch „Vorspiegelung falscher Tatsachen" (turpis causa) von diesem abpressen konnte.

Auffallend, dass Puccini nur Frauen als Heroinen auf die Bühne stellt: — Butterfly, Manon Lescaut, Mimi, „Turandot" Liu, und Tosca, die ausnahmslos im Glühofen der Liebe verbrennen... Vielleicht beneidete er seinen grossen Rivalen Verdi, dessen manche Opern im Banne des glühenden italienischen Nationalismus standen, — als er plötzlich, sich ins Politische verlierend, Cavaradossi als einen Held der Freiheitsliebe darstellt.

Für wen dieser seine „Vittoria" dahinschmettert, und gegen welche Tyrannen er zu Felde zieht, wurde bis heute niemandem ganz klar. So bleibt also auch dieser Held nur ein Schattenbild der Heroine Tosca, ein Idol, für das sie sich aufopfern kann.

Die konzertante Aufführung von „Tosca" litt ausser den schon erwähnten Umständen auch darunter, dass durch zusammengedrängte Aufstellung des Orchesters, Chors und der Solisten die von Puccini mit so herrlichem Theaterinstinkt abgemessene akustische Balance verloren ging. Das hervorragend spielende Orchester unter Mitropoulos niemals gehörte Details hervorhebend — deckte meistens die Sänger, die sei denn, sie sangen Begleitung,—häufig zum Forcieren zwungen wurden. Nicht das war aber der Hauptfehler sondern dass sich Puccini das Orchester unten, und die Sänger oben vorgestellt hat. Es klang aber hier beinahe so, als wenn das Orchester die Trompeten und Posaunen anstelle der Primgeigen postiert hätte... Dennoch bewunderten wir Mitropoulos der seine sengende Leidenschaft und sein herrliches Musikantentum dermassen eindringlich, packend und hochtheatralisch entfaltete!

Prachtvoll war auch der Metropolitan-Tenor Richard Tucker, der jedemVergleich mit seinem einstigen Rollenkollegen Gigli standhält. Eine wundervolle Stimme, dolcissimo in den piani, siegreich strahlend in den forti, hinreissend im dramatischen Ausdruck, — ein wahrer Traum jeder Opernbühne!

Anscheinend infolge der höheren Stimmung unseres Orchesters schwankte anfänglich die Intonation von Hilde Zadek (Toska), ihre grosse Kultur, die Wärme ihrer wertvollen Stimme, wie ihr immer mehr von Leidenschaften erfüllter Vortrag machten aber ihr Gebet und ihre Duette zu einem erlesenen künstlerischen Genuss.-Cesare Bardelli (Metropolitan Opera) sang den Scarpia mit eherner, höchst gepflegter angenehmer Stimme und mit sehr plastischer Deklamation, allerdings vielleicht nur weil unmaskiert und „konzertant", — nicht die Illusion eines gefürchteten Tyrannen erregend. — Bestens gefiel uns Lawrence Davidson (Metropolitan) als Messner, den wir gerne auch in grösseren Rollen hören möchten. Unsere einheimischen Sänger — warum denn mit Noten in der Hand? E. Biran (Angelotti), Chaim Flschner (Spoletta), Sch. Hermon (Schliesser) und die junge Lea Crohn als Hirtenknabe, bewährten sich tadellos, ebenso wie der Lustigsche Kammerchor.

Der Erfolg war stürmisch, und hätte Maestro Mitropoulos nicht wie Toscanini jede Wiederholung abgelehnt, so wären manche Arien von Cavaradossi und der Tosca vielleicht auch dreimal gehört worden

HÖHEPUNKTE DER TEL-AVIVER

"Tosca"

Dimitri Mitropoulos dirigiert
Puccini's Meisterwerk in konzertanter Form

Am 22. Juni jährte sich zum hundertsten Mal der Geburtstag Giacomo Puccinis. Dieser Umstand scheint den Veranstaltern entgangen zu sein, da ihn das Programmheft mit keinem Wort erwähnt. Puccinis Weltruf begründet sich, nach dem ansehnlichen Erfolg seiner „Manon Lescaut", auf das populäre Dreigestirn „La Bohème", „La Tosca" und „Madama Butterfly", das um die Jahrhundertwende entstand. Nach einem Abstecher zu einem Wildweststück „La Fanciulla del West" („Das Mädchen aus dem goldenen Westen") und der dem leichteren Gebiet angehörenden „Rondine" („Die Schwalbe") erschienen drei einaktige, höchst konzentrierte Opern, die im Jahre 1918 von der New Yorker Metropolitan Opera uraufgeführt wurden: die tragische Oper „Il tabarro" („Der Mantel"), die mystische „Suor (Schwester) Angelica", und die komische „Gianni Schicchi". „Turandot", die uns in die Märchenzeit Chinas führt (während „Madama Butterfly" an der Schwelle der Gegenwart in Japan handelt), sollte die Krone im Schaffen des Meisters sein, aber das grausame Schicksal riss ihm vorzeitig die Feder aus der Hand, und dies nicht ohne Ironie: er hatte gerade die Begräbnisszene der von ihm erdachten und auf sein Verlangen hin in die Handlung eingewobenen Gestalt der Liú beendet...

Musikalisch und szenisch knüpft Puccini an die „Cavalleria rusticana" von Mascagni und die viel feinere und vollendete Oper Leoncavallos „I Pagliacci" an. Beide hatten einst ihre Schöpfer über Nacht weltberühmt gemacht. Den folgenden Werken beider Meister ward nie mehr ein so glänzender Erfolg beschieden. Der „Verismus" — so heisst die von den beiden eingeschlagene Richtung in der Oper — wurde von Puccini im wörtlichsten Sinne erfüllt, ohne dass das Drama aus der Kunstwelt ins Alltägliche geriet. Gerade in der „Tosca" werden Grausamkeiten derart unverbrämt zur Schau getragen, dass man auf dem Wege logischer Ueberlegung ob des Kunstwertes in Zweifel geraten müsste. Dieser Umstand wird vielfach betont, wenn, was so oft geschieht, „Tosca" als „schwaches" Werk bezeichnet wird. In Wahrheit können wir gerade darin die Genialität des Meisters ahnen, dass er es verstand diese „Grausamkeiten" künstlerisch auszuwerten. Selten folgen in einer Oper Spannungen und Entspannungen so schnell aufeinander wie gerade in der „Tosca", und dieser Umstand allein verleiht ihr unschätzbaren Kunstwert. Mit Unrecht wird Puccini häufig äusserliche Nachahmung der Kunst Richard Wagners vorgeworfen, vor allem die Kopierung des Gebrauchs der Leitmotive. Letztere wurden aber schon von Puccinis Vorgängern Mascagni und Leoncavallo konsequent angewendet. Auch Wagner hat das Leitmotiv nicht erfunden, er hat es vielmehr ausgewertet und ihm eine besondere Bedeutung zuerteilt. Wir finden es bei Verdi noch bevor er unter dem Einfluss Boitos, nach langem inneren Ringen, in seinen letzten Opern der Wagnerschen Reform huldigte, ohne sich selbst untreu zu werden. Besonders in der „Tosca" hat Puccini das Leitmotiv sehr in den Vordergrund gestellt. Man kann sich eine Tafel von zwanzig bis dreissig klar zu unterscheidenden Motiven zusammenstellen und ihnen, gemäss der Stellen ihres Vorkommens, genaue Namen geben. Die ersten Akkorde sind unzweideutig das Motiv des grausamen Polizeichefs Scarpia, schnell in Synkopen absteigende Akkorde das des flüchtigen, der Gewalt Scarpias entkommenen Konsuls der ehemaligen Römischen Republik Angelotti. Zu Klängen eines Freiheitsmotivs, das später, im zweiten Akt, dem Revolutionslied des Malers Cavaradossi vorangeht, erscheint dieser zum ersten Mal kurz nach Beginn der Oper und enthüllt die von ihm gemalte Maria Magdalena. Das hier dem eindringlichen Freiheitsmotiv unmittelbar folgende liebliche Liebesmotiv erklärt uns, dass beim ersten Anblick des Bildes die Gedanken des Malers bei Tosca weilen. Aber hat er darin nicht die Züge seiner Geliebten mit denen einer unbekannten Schönen gemischt, die dort zum Beten zu kommen pflegt? Er sagt es in seiner Arie: „E te, beltade ignota" („Und du, unbekannte Schöne").

Richard Tucker

Die Besitzer der deutschen Uebersetzung von Max Kalbeck werden an dieser Stelle die Worte finden: „Und hier in sanfter Glorie". Kalbeck hat durch rücksichtslose Übersetzung so manches Werk entstellt. Hier hat er den strengen Zusammenhang mit der Phrase ausser acht gelassen, oder, wie anzunehmen ist, gar nicht bemerkt. Sie ist nämlich das Motiv der ihm „unbekannten Schönheit" Attavanti, der Schwester des Konsuls Angelotti, dem sie für seine Flucht in der Kapelle Frauenkleider hinterlegt hat.

Dimitri Mitropoulos

Cesare Bardelli

Die breite, von Harfenklängen begleitete Melodie, zu deren Klängen Tosca zum ersten Mal auftritt, ist das Tosca-Motiv. Und so finden wir noch eine ganze Reihe von Leitmotiven, deren Sinn sich genau definieren lässt.

Hat man auf dem Gebiete der Komposition als solcher manchmal ungerechterweise Kritik geübt, so ist sich die Musikwelt über die farbenreiche Instrumentation Puccinis einig. Speziell in der der „Tosca" vorangehenden „Bohème" fand er zauberhafte Klänge, und die gewonnene Erfahrung weitete er immer mehr und mehr aus.

Das Philharmonische Orchester mit den Gastsängern und dem Tel-Aviver Kammerchor brachte die Oper „Tosca" in konzertanter Form. Das Problem dieser Art von Darbietung einer Oper bleibt bestehen, denn für die Bühne lässt sich kein Ersatz finden, genau so, wie die symphonische Musik an das Konzertpodium gebunden ist. Besonders hier, wo wir um die Zukunft der Oper besorgt sind, sind konzertante Opernaufführungen schädlich. Es ist eine interessante Tatsache, dass an der Opernkasse dauernd Karten für „Tosca" verlangt werden. Der Umstand, dass die Israel-Oper noch immer mit finanziellen Schwierigkeiten zu kämpfen hat und noch nicht das nötige Verständnis der Behörden erworben hat, macht es ihr unmöglich, gegenwärtig durchwegs erstklassige Sänger heranzuziehen. Die „Konkurrenz" seitens des IPO steigert natürlich die Zurückhaltung breiter Publikumsmassen der Oper gegenüber, wodurch ihr Besuch naturgemäss geschädigt wird.

Wenn trotz Fehlens der Bühne die konzertante Aufführung der „Tosca" ein Erlebnis ersten Ranges war, so liegt die Ursache in der harmonischen Uebereinstimmung des ganzen Apparates der von unserem illustren Gastdirigenten geleitet und inspiriert wurde.

Geleitet? Inspiriert? Hat die Sprache keine anderen Worte, um das Unfassliche auszudrücken, mit dem Mitropoulos Künstler und Publikum berückt hat? Ja, sie hat, aber sie sind alle zu schwach, um die magische Kraft zu schildern, mit der er sich mitteilt. Sein Taktstock ist kein Taktstock, er ist ein Zauberstab, seine Hände sind die eines Bildhauers, der mit übernatürlicher Leichtigkeit eine Masse nach seinem Willen formt, denn die von seiner Persönlichkeit beseelte Musik ist so plastisch, dass man sie greifen könnte. Er formt das Kleine, und gestaltet das Ganze zu einer festen Einheit, von der nichts abfallen kann. Er arbeitet unermüdlich (auswendig) und man fühlt, wie er Sängern und Musikern das absolute Gefühl der Sicherheit verleiht. Das grossartige Spiel der Hände und Finger, die eleganten, geschmeidigen Bewegungen des Körpers, sein hochinteressantes Mienenspiel — soweit man es sehen konnte — trugen viel zum Verständnis der Musik bei. Wenn Musiker mit der Partitur verfolgen, hören sie so manches Schöne, was ihnen sonst entgangen wäre. Hier genoss nicht nur der Partiturkundige diesen Vorteil, sondern das ganze Publikum hörte mehr als es gehört hätte, wenn es den grossen Gestalter nicht an der Arbeit gesehen hätte.

Mehr als einmal geschieht es, dass das Talent eines Künstlers zuhause verkannt wird, und er erst seinen Erfolg im Auslande haben muss, um daheim gewürdigt zu werden. Zu unserem Trost sei vermerkt, dass dies auch anderswo vorkommt. Hilde Zadek lernte hier im Lande bei Frau Boroschek an der Jerusalemer Musikakademie Gesang und nahm Unterricht in dramatischer Interpretation bei Rose Pauly, der weltberühmten Wagner- und Strauss-Darstellerin, die sich nach Rückzug von der Bühne in Jerusalem niederliess. Hilde Zadek wurde hier nicht beachtet. Vielleicht wäre sie es später geworden, wenn sie da geblieben wäre. Aber sicher hätte ihr kein Unternehmen den hochehrbaren Titel „Kammersängerin" verliehen, auch nicht verleihen können, den sie an keinem geringeren Institut als der Wiener Staatsoper erwarb. Nachdem sie zehn Jahre hindurch weltberühmt ist — sie ist inzwischen vor einigen Jahren schon hier aufgetreten — konzertiert sie jetzt zum ersten Mal mit dem IPO. Sie ist eine hochkultivierte und musikalische Persönlichkeit und eine ideale Tosca. Mit ihrer Gebetarie im zweiten Akt erntete sie frenetischen Beifall.

Auch Richard Tucker, von der Metropolitan Opera, den wir alle von unzähligen Platten von Opern und Chasanut (kantoraler Gesang) kennen, ist erstmalig Gast des IPO und bot mit seiner schönen Tenorstimme einen ersklassigen Cavaradossi. Seine beiden Arien, besonders die zweite, rissen das Haus zu stürmischem Beifall hin.

Die dritte Hauptperson, Scarpia, sang der italienische Sänger Cesare Bardelli, ebenfalls von der Metropolitan, mit einer für den ersten Akt vielleicht zu weichen, aber für die buhlerischen Stellen im zweiten Akt umso geeigneteren hochkultivierten Stimme. Den Sakristan sang ebenfalls hervorragend Lawrence Davidson. Auch er singt an der Metropolitan in New York. Die Sänger sind offenbar nicht zufällig alle so gut, sie sind eben mit Vorsicht ausgesucht.

Unsere Sänger, die nicht die Gelegenheit hatten, die Tradition an grossen Bühnen mitzuerleben, stellten brav ihren Mann. Auch auf sie wirkte die zündende Kraft des Dirigenten, und sie gaben ihr Bestes: Efraim Biran als Angelotti, Chaim Flaschner als Spoletta, Shlomo Hermon als Sciarrone, und Schliesser im Gefängnis, und Leah Crohn als Schafhirt. Der Tel-Aviver Kammerchor (Leitung: Eitan Lustig) war ebenfalls auf der Höhe.

Eine interessante Sache sei hier zum Schluss erwähnt: In den Pausen, auch in denen der vorangehenden Konzerte unter Mitropoulos, sprach man nicht von schlechter Akustik. Sie ist nämlich in hohem Masse von der Balance des Klangapparates abhängig — und die liegt in den Händen des Dirigenten...

„TOSCA" MIT DEM IPO

Mit der Aufführung von Opern, wenn auch in Konzertform, begibt sich das IPO ausserhalb seines eigentlichen Aufgabenbereiches und betritt ein problematisches Gebiet. Wollen wir die Frage, ob die Wiedergabe eines Kunstwerkes in einer anderen als in der vom Künstler gedachten Weise künstlerisch gerechtfertigt ist, beiseite lassen. Aber auch in der Auswahl der bisher zur Aufführung gelangten Werke hat man regelmässig daneben gegriffen. Die Wiedergabe des „Barbier von Sevilla" kann man als gelungen bezeichnen, aber nur durch den Umstand, dass Spiel und Szene angedeutet waren. Ein voraussehbarer und daher vermeidbarer Missgriff waren die beiden Donizetti-Opern. Auch „Don Giovanni" als Konzert war unbefriedigend trotz des hohen musikalischen Niveaus, was anerkannt wurde. Zweifellos gibt es Opern, die sich als Konzert darstellen lassen. Es sind im allgemeinen Werke, die dem wahren Wesen der Musikbühne nicht entsprechen, wie etwa „Josef in Aegypten" von Mehul, „Idomeneo" von Mozart usw. Bei einer echten Opernkomposition ist die Trennung der Musik vom Bühnengeschehen eine Amputation und das Ergebnis ein Krüppel. Eine Oper ist keine Mischform, sondern eine feste Verbindung, die wie die katholische Ehe, weil sie ein Sakrament ist, unlösbar ist. Auch wenn ein Musikpapst eine Trennung ausspricht, bleiben Schäden zurück. Es wäre daher empfehlenswert, bei der Pflege der Vokalmusik sich an das Oratorium zu halten. Hier hat das IPO sehr grosse Leistungen aufzuweisen, es sei nur an die unvergessliche Aufführung des „Requiem" von Verdi erinnert.

Eine konzertante Aufführung der „Tosca" von Puccini kann man mit dem 100jährigen Jubiläum des Komponisten rechtfertigen, vielleicht auch damit, dass die wertvolle Partitur, die vom ersten bis zum letzten Takt nur Höhepunkte enthält und eine Musik voll blühender Melodik, Dramatik, symphonischen Zwischenspielen und zwei Oratorien an eine Bühnenhandlung gebunden ist die in ihrer Scheusslichkeit die Grenzen des Erträglichen überschreitet. Der Gedanke liegt also nahe die Handlung nicht sichtbar werden zu lassen und das Schwergewicht auf die wertvolle Musik zu verlagern. Durch die Heranziehung der besten Kräfte müssen aber alle prinzipiellen Bedenken schwinden. Die Besetzung ist nicht nur für ein kleines Land sensationell. In der Titelrolle Hilde Zadek, Kammersängerin an der Wiener Staatsoper, Gast der New Yorker Metropolitan-, der Covent Garden- und der Berliner Staatsoper, eine Künstlerin mit allen guten Eigenschaften, Stimme, dramatischer Ausdruckskraft, musikalischer Intelligenz, erlesenem Geschmack und obendrein eine blendende Erscheinung; Richard Tucker, der grosse Tenor der New Yorker Metropolitan, als Cavaradossi. Seine ausserordentlichen Stimmittel füllen das grosse Haus ohne Anstrengung, andererseits verfügt er über pianissimo und dolcissimo; Cesare Bardelli von der Metropolitan und Mailänder Scala, dessen Partie allerdings durch die fehlende Bühne ins Hintertreffen geriet, ein Bariton von Format, ein eleganter Scarpia; Lawrence Davidson, von der Metropolitan, ein stimmlich und darstellerisch hochinteressanter Bass-Bariton als Kirchendiener. In kleineren Rollen behaupteten sich daneben unsere einheimischen Kräfte, Ephraim Biram (Bariton), Chaim Flaschner (Tenor), Schlomo Hermon (Bass); Leah Crohn (Sopran) — als Hirtenknabe errang mit der kleinen Rolle einen Sonderbeifall. Als Chor wirkte der Kammerchor von Eytan Lustig, der wieder seinen grossen Tag hatte. Die gesamte Leitung war in der Hand des genialen Dimitri Mitropoulos.

Abgesehen davon, dass für den, der die Oper „Tosca" nicht kennt, vieles unverständlich bleiben muss, so ergeben sich diverse Verschiebungen, gewollte und ungewollte. Natürlich müssen scenische Vorgänge verloren gehen. Das unerwartete Erscheinen des Scarpia in der Kirche ist im Orchester durch das Scarpiamotiv gezeichnet. Diese Scene verpufft wirkungslos. Unklar bleibt besonders der zweite Akt. Auf den Anblick des gefolterten, blutbefleckten Cavaradossi wird man gern verzichten. Aber die Ermordung des Scarpia geht fast unmerklich vorüber, und der Schluss des Aktes braucht das Bühnenbild. Auch der stimmungsvolle Beginn des dritten Aktes mit dem Nachthimmel, den Umrissen der Kuppeln des fernen Rom bleibt blass. Hier gibt das Bühnenbild die Atmosphäre. Auch Verlagerungen oder Umkehrungen ergeben sich. Im Theater ist die Kantate des zweiten Aktes die Folge für die Diskussion, in deren Mittelpunkt Scarpia steht. Im Konzert wird aus der Kantate ein selbständiges Musikstück, das allerdings durch den ausgezeichnet singenden Chor mit der Tosca als Solistin und dem grossen Orchester unter Mitropoulos etwas Grandioses bekommt. Glanzstücke bilden natürlich die Soli und Duette, wie das sogenannte Gebet der Tosca, das berühmte Victoria des Cavaradossi, und der letzte Akt ist mit Worten nicht mehr zu beschreiben. Endloser Beifall belohnte die Mitwirkenden für eines der grossartigsten Konzerte, mit der Ueberschrift: Mitropoulos!

« Oui, je suis enchanté et je reviendrai l'année prochaine »

NOUS DECLARE DIMITRI MITROPOULOS

Mitropoulos aura donné aux mélomanes israéliens des concerts dont ils garderont longtemps le souvenir.

Car de telles soirées appartiennent à l'exception. Il est très rare que le rêve déborde le sommeil et entre dans la réalité... Et pourtant, c'est le cas, lorsque pour quelques instants, la salle F. Mann, grâce à Mitropoulos et à ses remarquables interprètes a retenti des merveilleux échos d'un chef prestigieux et d'un ensemble (notre Philharmonique) comme il en est peu dans le monde, de l'avis général.

Nous le savons, les connaisseurs ont vécu et vivront encore ce soir, un enchantement.

Que dire, qui n'ait déjà été dit de ces merveilleux serviteurs de la musique? Il faudrait trouver de nouveaux mots, plus éloquents, plus évocateurs encore que les habituels superlatifs employés pour situer leur incomparable valeur. Mais quand la perfection est atteinte (avec, pour Mitropoulos et l'Orchestre, une apparence de facilité qui est le signe incontestable de la classe et du talent pur), tout commentaire paraît superflu.

Les "puristes" de la musique, les mélomanes et aussi les profanes, ont été littéralement transportés par ces artistes qui ajoutent encore à la beauté et au sublime de l'oeuvre jouée dans leur interprétation.

Un tel dépaysement, une telle évasion d'ailleurs, ne sauraient s'exprimer. Leur couronnement, ce fut, et ce sera ce soir aussi, sûrement, une ovation délirante.

Nous avons voulu avoir quelques mots du Maitre, et celui-ci, en dépit de sa fatigue, nous a dit:

— Vous allez me demander mes impressions sur le pays? Je vous répondrai donc tout de suite: oui, je suis enchanté. Oui, c'est la première fois que j'y viens. Oui, tout m'a enthousiasmé: le peuple, la marche en avant...

Je l'interromps, à l'encontre de toutes les règles, mais la tentation est trop forte:

— Et l'Orchestre, Maitre? Votre avis sur l'Orchestre Philharmonique israélien?

— Il ne m'a pas étonné. Je m'explique: j'étais curieux de l'entendre, mais n'ai éprouvé nulle surprise, car j'en avais entendu parler et en termes si élogieux, que je savais qu'il était, en quelque sorte, une des merveilles du pays... Oui! Voilà le terme exact: une des merveilles de votre pays. Soyez-en persuadés.

— Venant de vous, l'appréciation n'en a que plus de valeur et nous vous en remercions. Avez-vous déjà signé un contrat pour un prochain retour?

— Oui. Je reviendrai l'an prochain, à la même époque.

— Où irez-vous en nous quittant?

— D'abord, à Strasbourg. Puis, Vienne, la Grèce, de nouveau, Vienne, et, en octobre, l'Amérique.

— Que donnerez-vous, pour votre concert d'adieux le 28?

— L'ouverture de "Leonore" de Beethoven, la Deuxième Symphonie de BRAHMS, et du Mendelssohn. (Symphonie No. 5 "Réforamtion").

OPERA AS CONCERT

Editor, The Jerusalem Post

Sir, — Referring to your reviewer's remark about the advisability of giving "Tosca" in concert form (your issue of July 9) I do not want to speculate about the reasons which led Mr. Mitropoulos to conduct Strauss' "Electra" in New York's Carnegie Hall nor do I intend to discourage the laudable efforts of the new opera company. But the fact is that for many years to come our public cannot hope to hear on a theatre stage Puccini's music at an artistic standard even remotely comparable with the level of performance we were treated to last Sunday by the IPO.

It is this yardstick of quality which is the decisive one. It should be uppermost in the mind of every artistic reviewer, musical or otherwise. It is to be regretted that the word quality was so conspicuously absent from Mr. Avidom's evaluation of this particular point.

Yours, etc.

Israel Makes Music Plans In Midst of Arabs

By PETER VERNON

Tel Aviv, July 29.

While international observers worry about the fate of tiny and courageous Israel in midst of the new Mid-East crisis, the Israelis themselves are going ahead importing and exporting great artists of music and planning the 1958-59 season. In the export-field, Israel has despatched a 71-piece youth orchestra to participate in the Brussels Youth Orchestra Week and first reports tell of the group's overwhelming success under conductor Shalom Riklis. Israeli conductor George Singer conducted the French Radio Symphony and the Berlin Philharmonic Orchestra in performances of Paul Ben-Haim's "Sweet Psalmist of Israel," a work to be introduced by the New York Philharmonic Orchestra to U.S. audiences in four performances next April. Composer Ben-Haim himself conducted the Hilversum and B. B. C. (London) Chamber Orchestras in programs of his own music and works by other Israeli composers, like Alexander, Salomon, and Partos.

Israel meanwhile plays host to Met star Richard Tucker who not only sang in the Philharmonic Orchestra's concert version of "Tosca" under the baton of Dmitri Mitropoulos, but also chanted liturgical Hebrew music at Tel Aviv's Great Synagogue service one Saturday morning. Mitropoulos himself, who last year declined to sign a contract with the Israeli Philharmonic for 1959, was apparently greatly satisfied with the group's playing for prior to his leaving Israel he signed up for a two months' visit in the summer of 1959 and expressed his willingness to conduct the orchestra in recordings.

Israel Philharmonic has already set the additional artists to take part in its forthcoming season. Artur Rubinstein will play 15 piano concertos, George Singer conducting, in October. Josef Krips, Jean Fournier, Eugene Ormandy, Charles Munch, Jean Martinon, and Carlo Maria Giulini will conduct and a newcomer will be the Rumanian conductor Silvestri. Among the soloists are Yehudi Menuhin, Zino Francescatti, Isaac Stern, George London, and the duo-pianists Luboshutz-Nemenoff. Mitropoulos' concerts will wind up the season.

(Visiting Israel at present is Alexander Tansman, the composer, who is the guest of the Israel Broadcasting Service, to conduct performances of his own works.)

LA STAGIONE MUSICALE IN ISRAELE

MITROPOULOS A TEL AVIV

TEL AVIV, agosto.

PER comprendere l'importanza della musica nella vita di Israele, e particolarmente in quella della sua città principale, Tel Aviv, basta andare dal parrucchiere. Appena vi ha messo l'asciugamano al collo, egli domanda: « Avete ascoltato il concerto di ieri? ». Al mio cenno affermativo esclama: « Com'era bello! Magnifico! sono ancora sbalordito di quel famoso direttore... ».

Esce una voce dalla cuffia vicina: « E come sa guidare il coro...! ». « Lei canta nel coro, signora? », chiedo e così entro in conversazione. Sì, la signora canta nel coro e tutti i soci, maschi e femmine, sono pazzi del Maestro; lei stessa vi ha preso parte sempre, dalla fondazione in poi. « E' la sua prima visita in Israele? » vorrebbe sapere. « No, la decima, esattamente ».

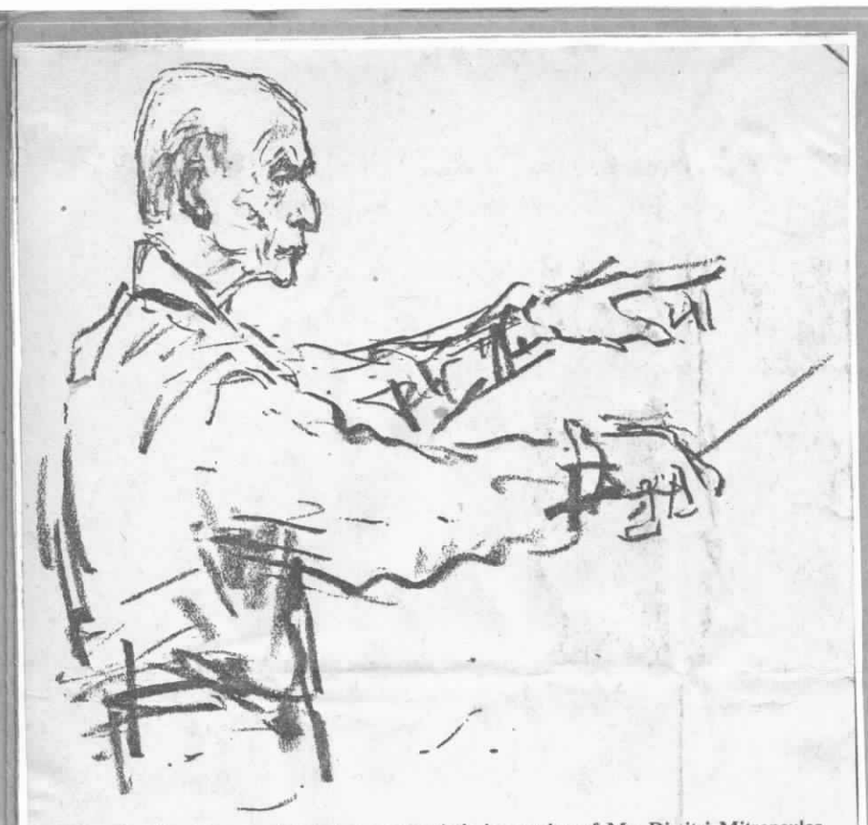
Qui entra in iscena la proprietaria del Salone che, conoscendomi bene, comincia a raccontare che è venuta a Tel Aviv ventidue anni fa, che ha parlato con Toscanini, che conosce personalmente più di ventinove professori dell'orchestra, di quelli anziani, i quali ancora lavorano instancabilmente; e così via. La conversazione prosegue sulla maniera di interpretare la Seconda Sinfonia di Brahms, finchè interrompo, dicendo: « E dove rimane quello shampoo...? ».

Gli stessi discorsi si fanno anche con la commessa del negozio di scarpe, con l'autista del taxi che vi porta al mare, col cameriere che vi serve il caffè espresso. (A Tel Aviv c'è un « Espresso » accanto all'altro nelle strade principali). Tutti domandano: « E' stato al concerto? e cosa le pare del nuovo maestro? ».

Israele ha una popolazione di meno di due milioni, della quale una cospicua parte formata da « ebrei orientali » — immigrati da pochi anni dal Yemen, dall'Africa, dall'India e più di tutti, dai paesi arabi così nemici del nuovo Stato —, i quali non hanno peso nel mondo culturale, almeno per ora. Ma in questo minuscolo Stato ci sono 22.500 cittadini abbonati ai concerti sinfonici; solo a Tel Aviv se ne contano quindicimila. Per soddisfare i quattro turni dell'abbonamento, bisogna ripetere ogni programma altrettante volte. Il cinque per cento dei telaviviani tutti, uomini, donne e bambini, hanno i loro posti fissi agli avvenimenti musicali. Ed i quindicimila spettatori a Tel Aviv, come le altre migliaia a Gerusalemme ed a Haifa, pagano tutti i loro biglietti d'ingresso; « l'omaggio » non esiste. Cosa veramente più unica che rara.

Si pensa a Firenze in questa calda « estate musicale », perchè regna supremo un musicista caro ai fiorentini forse più di tutti gli altri. Alludiamo a Dimitri Mitropoulos che, in occasione della sua prima scrittura nell'orchestra di Israele, è entrato nel cuore di questo pubblico, suscitando un entusiasmo come qui davvero non si era visto dai tempi di Toscanini. Con le sue qualità artistiche ed umane, egli ha conquistato l'ammirazione e l'affetto non solo di coloro che hanno lavorato sotto la sua guida, ma di tutti quelli che ebbero occasione di avvicinarlo in qualsiasi maniera.

Il maestro Mitropoulos (a sinistra) a Gerusalemme con il presidente Ben Zuoi



Durante questo mese Mitropoulos ha diretto ben undici concerti, con vari programmi; in più, otto repliche della « Tosca » in versione di concerto, perchè Israele non possiede un teatro d'opera e finora il pubblico non aveva mai conosciuto le creazioni di Puccini. Con la collaborazione di ottimi elementi come la soprano viennese Hilde Zadek, il tenore Richard Tucker, famoso Cavaradossi della Metropolitan Opera di New York, e il baritono italiano Cesare Bardelli, malgrado tutte le riserve che si potrebbero sempre esprimere circa la presentazione senza scene e senza azione di questo capolavoro, il più drammatico di Puccini, l'esecuzione ha ottenuto un successo clamorosissimo. Successo che è aumentato di volta in volta nelle otto repliche, che hanno veduto degli « esauriti » paurosi.

Il Maestro stesso ha riportato una profonda impressione di questo strano paese che gli sembrò, a lui musicista, una « meraviglia ». E' stato accolto dappertutto con la massima cortesia, dal Presidente della repubblica che gli ha offerto un cordiale ricevimento, fino al primo ministro Ben Gurion.

Mitropoulos asserisce di aver passato a Tel Aviv uno dei periodi più interessanti della sua vita, che è culminato nell'ultimo concerto della serie, offerto in omaggio alle Forze Armate israeliane, e che chiude regolarmente la stagione sinfonica.

L'effetto di questo avvenimento, svoltosi all'aperto sotto il limpidissimo cielo stellato di una notte orientale, nella cornice di un enorme campo militare dove più di duemila giovani di ambedue i sessi vengono addestrati a difendere il territorio di Israele, è stato indimenticabile.

Vom Formenspiel zur Gedankenmalerei

Dimitri Mitropoulos dirigierte im V. Orchesterkonzert der Festspiele Werke von Bach, Brahms und Richard Strauss

(Von unserem nach Salzburg entsandten Kulturredakteur Herbert Schneiber)

Ein weitgespannter Programmbogen: Bachs berühmtes d-moll-Klavierkonzert zu Beginn, ein Orchesterstück mit solistisch bevorzugtem Klavier, Musik der bewegten Form Gestalt gewordenen Klanges und der immerwährenden Spannung im Ablauf der Töne. Und zum Abschluß, nach dem tiefen Stimmungserlebnis der III. Symphonie von Brahms, die Tondichtung „Also sprach Zarathustra" von Richard Strauss, eine Folge Gedankenmalerei in acht Bildern, dessen allzu intime Verwandtschaft mit dem Nietzsche-Werk heute immer mehr (und mit immer mehr Erfolg) bestritten wird. Die in fulminanten Farbeffekten schwelgende Gedankenmalerei wirkt indessen eher stärker, wenn man sich der Textvorlage oder auch nur der gleichen ästhetischen Konzeption nicht zu erinnern braucht.

Dimitri Mitropoulos dirigierte. Er ist, nach Furtwänglers Tod, sicher der größte Ausdrucksmusiker unserer Zeit, der leidenschaftlichste Espressivo-Dirigent unter den musikalischen Heer- und Stabführern von heute. Autorität und Kraft seines Temperaments waren schon bei der Bach-Interpretation spürbar, machten das Melos plastisch, blutvoll und erregend, weil auch der Rhythmus in solcher Wiedergabe heftig, unruhig drängte. Glenn Goulds technisch überaus diszipliniertes, rhythmisch scharf akzentuiertes Klavierspiel paßte sich auch in seinem klanglichen Reichtum diesem ganz und gar nicht historisierenden Bach-Vortrag prächtig an.

Die alle extremen Ausdrucksbezirke meidenden, in vielen Zwischentönen eine differenzierte Klangphysiognomie gewinnende III. Symphonie von Brahms kam der spezifischen Musikalität von Mitropoulos weit entgegen. Über manche sehr breit genommene Tempi zu rechten, erscheint müßig: die Relation stimmte, die Proportionen blieben immer gewahrt, und der Inhalt hatte ganz in ihm gemäßen Charakter. Im Gegenteil: man hat diesen Inhalt, dessen Gehalt alle Empfindungsstufen der menschlichen Seele umschließt, selten so gefühlsschwer und doch unpathetisch, so „naturrein" in allen Stimmungen des Herzens, so kunstvoll nuanciert in der Reihung und Entwicklung der Gedanken gehört. Klassische Ausgewogenheit war in diesen vier Sätzen, die dennoch in jedem Takt vom Glück romantischer Naturpoesie erzählten.

Zuletzt verwandelte Dimitri Mitropoulos den musikalischen Niederschlag der Straussschen Nietzsche-Liebe in ein Hochfest brillanten Musizierens. Was immer sich der Komponist den Zarathustra entlang gedacht haben mag: die glanzvolle und zugleich morbide Musik hat ihre vielfältigen Reize, und der Dirigent ließ keinen von ihnen unter das Pult fallen. Seine energische und dennoch weiche, nervöse und doch bestimmte Art der Orchesterführung machte aus dem Concertgebouw-Orchester, das bei Brahms genau den herb-süßen Klang hatte, ein perfektes Strauss-Orchester, entzündete alle Lichter der Virtuosität, des Töneschwelgens, der Instrumentationspointen. Mit solch leidenschaftlichem Aufschwung wurde das Riesenwerk musiziert, daß alle Bedenken gegen die Komposition an sich in diesem Rausch der Artistik untergehen mußten.

Minutenlanger Beifall war das Echo. Also sprach das Publikum.

Salzburger Festspiele:

Concertgebouw-Orchester mit Mitropoulos

Bach, Brahms und Richard Strauss im Festspielhaus

Das Concertgebouw-Orchester übersiedelte mit seinem vierten Konzertabend ins Festspielhaus, wo die Amsterdamer Gäste zwar genügend Platz fanden, aber mit der weniger günstigen Akustik des Raumes zu rechnen hatten. Ihr Dirigent war diesmal Dimitri Mitropoulos, ein Künstler von außerordentlicher Suggestivkraft, ein resoluter Geisterbeschwörer mit einem lebhaften, quecksilberigen Temperament. Vorgeführt wurde ein Programm von beträchtlicher stilistischer Spannweite. Von Bach ging es über Brahms zu Richard Strauss.

Am willigsten gehorchten Dirigent und Orchester den Forderungen der Bachschen Formen- und Gedankenwelt, mit Glenn Gould am Flügel, einem ebenso passionierten wie technisch vorzüglichen Pianisten, der einen sehr präzisen, elastischen und modulationsfähigen Anschlag besitzt, der Sachlichkeit und strenge Auffassung mit lebhafter innerer Anteilnahme verbindet, erklang das Klavierknozert d-moll in überaus fesselnder Wiedergabe, in einer beinahe formalistischen Klarheit, die gleichwohl individualistisch bewegt und belebt erschien.

Mit Brahms aber verwandelte sich der kundige Geisterbeschwörer mit dem Dirigentenstab in der Hand in einen trunkenen Derwisch, der aus der F-dur-Symphonie ein spukhaft verzerrtes, phantomartiges Luftgebilde hervorgehen ließ. Gleich die ersten entscheidenden Takte schienen mit so viel Explosivstoff geladen zu sein, daß man eher einem gewalttätigen Theaterereignis als der Aufstellung eines der nobelsten und schwungvollsten Symphoniethemen beizuwohnen meinte. Und welche Übertriebenheiten in den Übergängen, im Rubato, in der Akzentgebung! Ganz zu schweigen von der preziösen und so wenig geschmackvollen Temporückung, die dem Eingang zur Überleitungsgruppe eine völlig falsche und wesensfremde Pikanterie unterschiebt. Willenskraft und Persönlichkeit eines Dirigenten in allen Ehren; aber es gibt Grenzen, die auch dem Größten gesetzt sind. Und die gerade das wirklich Große respektiert.

Auf Brahms folgte „Also sprach Zarathustra" von Richard Strauss, die lichte, leuchtende Tondichtung, die allerdings weniger von Nietzsche und Zarathustra als vom Komponisten selbst spricht, von seinem Kraftgefühl, vom Jubel in seiner Brust, von den kühnen künstlerischen Aspekten, die sich seinem geistigen Auge darboten. Was uns aus diesem Werk heute immer stärker und immer gewinnender entgegentritt, ist seine geniale Eigenschaft oder Fähigkeit, im Pathos so gänzlich unpathetisch verfahren zu können. Wie die meisten der symphonischen Dichtungen von Strauss ist auch die Zarathustra-Symphonie Selbstbekenntnis und Selbstdarstellung. Indessen, so ernst dabei die Kunst als solche genommen wird, dem Bekenntnis an sich fehlt es keineswegs an Selbstironie. Der Untertitel, den Strauss ursprünglich auf das Umschlagblatt setzen wollte, drückt es sehr deutlich aus: Symphonischer Optimismus in Fin-de-Siècle-Form, dem zwanzigsten Jahrhundert gewidmet...

Mit Strauss fand Mitropoulos wieder zurück in die Bahnen sachlichen und vernünftig ausgewogenen Musizierens. Er dirigierte im Sinne jenes hellen und heiteren Optimismus, von dem sich das Orchester und das Auditorium willig und begeistert erfüllen ließen. Die Amsterdamer spielten mit Bravour und die Solovioline des Konzertmeisters schwang sich herzhaft und geschmeidig auf in die lichte Region des Tanzliedes. Mit Strauss als wundertätigen Helfer gelang es den gemeinsamen Bemühungen schließlich auch, die Abenteuer der Festspielhausakustik erfolgreich zu bestehen.

Elektronengehirn mit Seele

Dimitri Mitropoulos im 5. Orchesterkonzert

Um das Concertgebouw-Orchester Amsterdam in seinen eigentlichen Qualitäten kennenzulernen, mußte man das 5. Orchesterkonzert hören, welches Dimitri Mitropoulos dirigierte. Sowohl durch die Art des Programms — Bach, Brahms und Strauss — als auch durch die hohe Künstlerschaft des Orchesterleiters war es den holländischen Musikern gegeben, sich auf einem musikalischen Boden zu bewähren, dem sie zweifellos näher stehen als speziell der Mozart-Musik oder zeitgenössischen Werken. Wobei nicht übersehen werden darf, daß naturgemäß auch das Publikum an diesem Abend weder den Vergleich mit österreichischer Musiktradition anzustellen, noch in das mehr oder minder fremde Gebiet heutigen Schaffens einzudringen verleitet wurde.

Nein, das Publikum im restlos besetzten Festspielhaus wurde diesmal nicht verleitet, vielmehr verzaubert durch einen Magier des Taktstockes. Dimitri Mitropoulos ist eine Persönlichkeit von nahezu unvorstellbarem Format. Ob er nun voriges Jahr in der Felsenreitschule „Elektra" einstudierte oder heuer Barbers „Vanessa" für die Alte Welt aus der Taufe hebt, ob er uns einmal mit moderner amerikanischer Musik bekannt machte oder nun Standardwerke der Musikliteratur bringt —, alles hat er unfehlbar im Kopf, braucht nie die Partitur, um bei den Proben sagen zu können: bitte, wir fangen fünf Takte nach 38 an! oder einer Sängerin anzugeben: bitte, Ihr Einsatz ist eine Achtel später! Das Bonmot von seinem Elektronengehirn hat tatsächlich Berechtigung, dabei zeichnet sich aber Mitropoulos zugleich durch einen Charakterzug aus, der durch Freundlichkeit gegenüber jedermann, durch stete Geduld und unermüdlichen Fleiß auch die schwierigste Arbeit unter seiner Führung angenehm und erfolgreich gestaltet. Rein musikalisch gibt es wenige Dirigenten mit einem so sicheren Gefühl für die einzelnen Zeitmaße, für die dynamischen Abstufungen und schließlich für den großen Gesamtablauf. Klar, daß unter Mitropoulos die Amsterdamer ihre besten Kräfte zur Entfaltung bringen konnten.

Mit einem Bachischen Klavierkonzert zu beginnen d-Moll), war an und für sich eine ungewohnte Einleitung, eine Intrada von überragender Wucht. Als das kühne Anfangsthema unisono in trotzigem Aufbegehren einsetzte, hielt man es kaum für möglich, daß der Solist diese Spannung gegenüber dem Orchester würde aufrechterhalten. Dennoch gelang es dem jungen Glenn Gould, sich durch ein technisch brillantes, die weiten Sequenzen unheimlich steigerndes Spiel großartig durchzusetzen. Im Adagio die einsame melodische Linie innig auszusingen und die dämonische Triebkraft des letzten Satzes bis zum Schlußakkord noch zu steigern. Nach diesem Bach-Konzert empfand man besonders stark die Poesie der Dritten Symphonie von Johannes Brahms, vor allem deshalb, weil Mitropoulos auch die heftigen Auseinandersetzungen in den Durchführungsteilen mit gesunder Ruhe ausmusizierte und die Themen allüberall in ihrer ganzen Schönheit auskostete. Höhepunkt dieser Wiedergabe wurde das „Poco Allegretto" in c-Moll, jenes verloren dahinträumende Zwischenspiel, das von unendlicher Sehnsucht und traurigem Verzicht kündet; unübertrefflich, ob nun das Thema zunächst in den Celli lag oder später von den Holzbläsern übernommen wurde. Auch das Finale entbehrte nicht einer edlen Ausgeglichenheit, so daß sich mit der zarten Rückerinnerung an das Hauptthema des ersten Satzes der Kreis einer erlebnisreichen Wanderung organisch abrundete.

Ein ganz anderer Romantiker als Brahms ist Richard Strauss, der mit hohem Intellekt und weitaus komplizierteren Orchestermitteln frei nach Nietzsche im Jahr 1896 in München die Tondichtung „Also sprach Zarathustra" vollendete. Die Ahnung vom Untergang in der Philosophie, das Bewußtsein, am Ende einer Epoche zu stehen in der Musik, das alles steht außer Zweifel, daß Strauss es verstanden hat, in imponierender Haltung den Schlußstein des romantischen Jahrhunderts zu setzen. Das C-Dur zu Beginn mit Orgel und strahlendem Blech ertönt wie die Trompeten von Jericho, und die folgenden Szenen zeugen durchwegs vom tiefen Wissen um die Grenzen aller menschlichen Weisheit. Mitropoulos und das Concertgebouw-Orchester fanden sich in dem Bestreben, über aller Farbigkeit und Klangfülle des Orchestersatzes den gedanklichen Sinn klar werden zu lassen, ob nun ein stilisierter Tanz von den Freuden des Lebens erzählt, eine Fuge den Ernst der Wissenschaft charakterisiert oder klagende Ideen das Unzulängliche des irdischen Daseins andeuten. Die enthusiastische Zustimmung zu den Leistungen sämtlicher Künstler konnte nur ein bescheidener Dank bleiben für den überwältigenden Eindruck dieses Konzerts.

By MILTON BERLINER

DIMITRI MITROPOULOS and the New York Philharmonic have come thru with one of their best performances for Columbia of nine episodes in the Prokofiev Romeo and Juliet Ballet suites (ML 5267).

This is among the Russian composer's happiest scores, and one that beautifully projects the Romeo and Juliet story. The rich instrumentation is seductively handled by the Philharmonic, with various first desk men turning in superb solo performances.

The sound engineering is of the best.

President Lauds Philharmonic

President Eisenhower has congratulated the New York Philharmonic on its artistic success and the good will it engendered in its recent seven-week tour of Latin America, during which it presented thirty-nine concerts in twelve countries. In a letter to David M. Keiser, president of the Philharmonic, the President stressed his pleasure at reports of the orchestra's tour, and said:

"By sharing with our neighbors to the South the skills of one of the great orchestras of our country, we have drawn closer to the ideal of mutual understanding and friendship which is our goal. I am especially glad to know that the success of the orchestra's mission, founded on the fine musicianship of each member of the orchestra and of the brilliance of the conductors, Dimitri Mitropoulos and Leonard Bernstein, was further enhanced by the personal friendliness and warmth of the conductors and musicians."

Musik im Zeichen Mitropoulos'

Bach, Brahms, Strauss - Vorletztes Programm mit dem Concertgebouw-Orchester im Festspielhaus

Das erste seiner beiden diesjährigen Konzerte brachte Dimitri Mitropoulos mit dem Concertgebouw-Orchester zusammen: Sein Programm enthielt J. S. Bachs Klavierkonzert d-moll, mit dem jungen kanadischen Solisten Glenn Gould, die III. Symphonie von Johannes Brahms und Richard Strauss' einst viel diskutiertes opus 30, die Nietzscheanische Tondichtung „Also sprach Zarathustra".

Also sprach Dionysos, — könnte man über diesen Mitropoulos-Abend sagen, wenn es nicht hieße die Dinge um einer Deutlichkeit willen in unzulässigem Maße vergröbern. Doch vielleicht versteht sich mit diesem Hinweis auf ein klassisches Temperament der vorherrschende Zug, welcher den Dirigenten in seiner Auffassung und schon in der Werkwahl zu bestimmen schien. Auch das Profil des Solisten Glenn Gould, eines „jungen Löwen" von ephebischem Wuchs, aber vollentwickelter Pranke ließ auf Wahlverwandtschaft der Temperamente schließen. Allerdings: Das von eigener Bravour leicht berauschte Debut des Kanadiers in Bachs d-moll-Konzert war, wie wir meinen, doch um einige Grade zu grell „aufgedreht"; elastisch federnd im Anschlag, formal prägnant, unsentimental und von höchster Geschmeidigkeit im konzertierenden Dialog, was die dynamische und farbige Übereinstimmung mit dem Orchester anbetraf, hatte dieses Bach-Spiel unter Mitropoulos im Gesamten fast schon zu tief aus jenem Klangideal geschöpft, welches uns auch in der Bach-Nachfolge (sogar bei Reger) das Urprinzip des Architektonischen dieser Musik mitunter als Problem empfinden läßt. Nichtsdestoweniger rief das mit vitaler Spannung und hoher Brillanz musizierte Konzert beim internationalen Publikum entzückten Beifall hervor.

Die Brahms'sche F-dur-Symphonie mit ihren zwei lyrisch-romantisch gestimmten Mittelsätzen, die dem Orchester unter Mitropoulos in den Kantilenen und dem Andante-Thema der Holzbläser ein schönes Maß des spontanen Musizierens erschlossen, erhielt bei diesem Interpreten eine denkbar hoch aufgeladene Polarität aus dem Verhältnis zu den dramatischen Ecksätzen. Noch überzeugender als das Allegro con brio gestaltete der Dirigent durch die rhythmische Klarheit und den zwingend einheitlichen Aufbau gewaltiger, eruptiver Steigerungen das in friedlicher Ruhe verströmende Finale.

Wenn sich Dimitri Mitropoulos mit seiner glänzenden Technik an der Palette von Orchesterfarben, mit dem virtuosen Schwung und der ganzen Faszination seines plastischen Formwillens für Richard Strauss' „Zarathustra" einsetzte, so war in diesem Geiste der Wiedergabe gewiß so etwas wie die legitime Silhouette des Meisters selbst am Werke. Die im Umriß großartige Tondichtung will Strauss bewußt als „symphonischen Optimismus" erlebt haben. In manchen Einzelheiten freilich — nicht zuletzt in der nachhaltigen Sprödigkeit des Ausklangs mit H-dur-Akkorden der Holzbläser und Pizzicato-Tönen der Kontrabässe — hat der Komponist dem „Programm" bloß die Idee eingehaucht. Solche Stellen bleiben hart, und das Concertgebouw-Orchester muß nicht verantworten, daß es dazu keine Wunder gewirkt hat; eher fragte man sich nach der letzten Lichte und Leichtigkeit im Walzerklang oder einem vollendeten Begriff von Biegsamkeit, wie ihn Mitropoulos' sehr individuelle, um nicht zu sagen, abstrakte Bewegungsangaben für die agogische Ausformung doch vorauszusetzen scheinen. Dennoch war das Gelingen gerade in den mannigfach wechselnden und modifizierten Tempi zu bewundern, wenn man von einem aus dem „Gegenruder" nicht völlig klar erfaßten Übergang zum letzten Teil absieht. Die Aufführung prägte sich vor allem durch die packenden Akzente ein, mit denen der Dirigent die Bilder der Tondichtung Gestalt werden ließ, wofür ihn ein volles Haus mit ebenso lautem Beifall feierte.

Ο ΔΙΑΣΗΜΟΣ ΑΡΧΙΜΟΥΣΙΚΟΣ

Ο ΔΗΜΗΤΡΗΣ ΜΗΤΡΟΠΟΥΛΟΣ ΕΡΧΕΤΑΙ ΕΙΣ ΤΑΣ ΑΘΗΝΑΣ

ΜΑΖΙ ΜΕ ΤΗΝ ΦΙΛΑΡΜΟΝΙΚΗΝ ΤΗΣ ΒΙΕΝΝΗΣ.—ΘΑ ΔΩΣΗ 4 ΣΥΝΑΥΛΙΑΣ

ΤΟΥ ΣΥΝΕΡΓΑΤΟΥ ΜΑΣ κ. ΓΕΩΡΓΙΟΥ ΒΩΚΟΥ

Τὶς λαμπρότερες μουσικὲς ἐκδηλώσεις εἴχαμε τὴν εὐκαιρία νὰ παρακολουθήσουμε κατὰ τὴν περυσινὴ μουσικὴ περίοδο στὸ Ὠδεῖο Ἡρώδου.

Καὶ κυρίως μὲ τὸ τραγούδι τῆς διασημότερης σήμερα πριμαντόνας τοῦ κόσμου, τῆς Μαρίας Κάλλας, τῆς ὁποίας ἡ ἀνυπέρβλητη τέχνη στάθηκε ὁ φωτεινὸς φάρος μιᾶς καλλιτεχνικῆς προσφορᾶς ἀληθινὰ ἰδανικῆς.

Καὶ ἐφέτος ὅμως ἕνα μεγάλο μουσικὸ γεγονὸς θὰ ἀποτελέση τὴν πεμπτουσία τοῦ ὑπέροχου νοήματος τῆς μουσικῆς τέχνης, σ' ὅλη της τὴν εὐγένεια καὶ τὴν ὁμορφιά.

Τὴν 1η Σεπτεμβρίου ὁ κολοσσὸς τῆς μπαγκέτας, ὁ ἀνυπέρβλητος μαέστρος Δημήτρης Μητρόπουλος, ἔρχεται στὴν Ἀθήνα, ἐπὶ κεφαλῆς τῆς Φιλαρμονικῆς τῆς Βιέννης, γιὰ νὰ δώση μὲ τὸ φημισμένο αὐτὸ ὀρχηστρικὸ σύνολο 4 συναυλίες στὸ Ὠδεῖο Ἡρώδου.

Δύο λοιπὸν τεραστίας σημασίας μουσικοὶ σταθμοὶ στὸν τόπο μας.

Πέρυσι ἡ Μαρία Κάλλας. Ἐφέτος ὁ Δημήτρης Μητρόπουλος. Γνήσια ἑλληνικὰ παιδιά, ποὺ σήμερα τιμοῦν τὸ ὄνομα τῆς μητέρας Ἑλλάδος στοὺς διεθνεῖς μουσικοὺς στίβους, ἐκεῖ ποὺ οἱ ἐπιφανέστερες καλλιτεχνικὲς φυσιογνωμίες δίνουν τὸ «παρὼν» σὲ μιὰ κοινὴ μουσικὴ λατρεία, ἐμπρὸς στὸν βωμὸ τῆς Θεᾶς Τέχνης.

Εὔλογη συγκίνησι ἔχει καταλάβει τοὺς μουσικούς μας κύκλους.

Ὁ μάγος τῆς μπαγκέτας πάλι κοντά μας. Καὶ κανεὶς δὲν μπορεῖ νὰ ἀμφιβάλλη πὼς μιὰ ἀπέραντη μουσικὴ εὐδαιμονία μᾶς περιμένει γιὰ νὰ μᾶς ἀγκαλιάση ὅλους σὲ λίγο.

Ζοῦμε ἀκόμη τὸ μουσικὸ ἐκεῖνο θαῦμα ποὺ ἐπετεύχθηκε σὰν τρία χρόνια πρίν, ὁ Μητρόπουλος μὲ τὴν Φιλαρμονικὴ τῆς Νέας Ὑόρκης μᾶς εἶχε μεταφέρει σ' ἄλλους κόσμους, μὲ τὶς ὀνειρώδεις ἑρμηνείες του...

Σὲ λίγες ἡμέρες λοιπὸν ἡ καταπληκτικώτερη σήμερα μπαγκέτα τοῦ κόσμου θὰ μᾶς περιβάλη μ' ἕνα σύννεφο μουσικῆς μαγείας.

Ἔχω ἀκόμη ζωντανὴ τὴν εἰκόνα, μὲ τὸν Μητρόπουλο ἀνεβασμένο στὸ βάθρο τοῦ μαέστρου, στὴν αἴθουσα τοῦ «Ὀρφέως», ἐξουσιαστή, κυρίαρχο, μὲ τὴν τρομακτικὴ ἐκείνη ὀρχήστρα τῶν ἑκατὸ δέκα ὀργάνων —τῆς Φιλαρμονικῆς τῆς Νέας Ὑόρκης — ποὺ τὰ φόρτε της δονοῦσαν ὁλόκληρη τὴν σάλλα.

Τί εἶνε τέλος πάντων αὐτὸς ὁ ἀρχιμουσικός; Ποιὲς ἀόρατες, ποιὲς ὑπερφυσικὲς, θὰ ἔλεγε κανείς, δυνάμεις κρύβονται στὰ χέρια του, στὴν ψυχή του, στὸ πνεῦμα του;

Ὑπνωτιστὴς αὐτὸς μεταβάλλει σ' ἀθύρματα τοὺς μουσικοὺς ποὺ διευθύνει. Κάθε κίνησί του εἶνε μιὰ ἐντολὴ ἡμιθέου, ποὺ δὲν ἀφήνει κανένα περιθώριο ἀνυπακοῆς ἢ στιγμιαίας ἀντιρρήσεως. Ἡ ὀρχήστρα νοιώθει ἀμέσως τὴν τρομερὴ δύναμί του, τὴν ἀκαταμάχητη ἐπιβολή του καὶ τὸν ἀκολουθεῖ πειθήνια στὸ ὠνειρεμένο μουσικό του ταξίδι....

Ἂν ὁ Μητρόπουλος ζοῦσε στὴν ἐποχὴ τοῦ Παγκανίνι, ἀσφαλῶς διαβόλου δύναμι θἄλεγαν πὼς εἶχε...

Αὐτὴ ἡ μπαγκέτα δὲν γνωρίζει φραγμούς, δὲν ἔχει ὅρια. Καὶ ὅταν ἀκόμη ἑτοιμάζεται νὰ δώση «ἀττάκα» κι' ἐκείνη ἀκόμη τὴν στιγμὴ ὁ ἀρχιμουσικὸς τοῦ Ἀρτοῦρο Τοσκανίνι, δικαιωματικὰ πλέον ὁ δικός μας Μητρόπουλος δὲν εἶνε ὁ «μαέστρος τῶν μαέστρων»;

Βλέποντας τὸν Μητρόπουλο, τότε νοιώθουμε πόσο μεγάλη, πόσο φιλοσοφικὴ εἶνε ἡ «τέχνη τοῦ διευθύνειν».

Ἔτσι καταπίπτει ὁ μῦθος κι' ἡ πλάνη ὅτι ἀρκοῦν 50 ἢ 100 ἀκαταλαβίστικα καὶ ἀλλοπρόσαλλα ρυθμικὰ σχήματα, γιὰ νὰ ἀρχίσουν οἱ μουσικοὶ τῆς ὀρχήστρας νὰ ἐξιδανικεύουν τὸν Μπετόβεν ἢ τὸν Μπράμς!...

Κι' ὄχι λίγες φορὲς ἔχουμε ὑποστῆ τὸ ἀκουστικὸ ἀλλὰ καὶ ψυχικὸ μαρτύριο τῆς ἀτιμωρητὶ κακοποιήσεως τῶν ἀριστουργημάτων τῆς κλασσικῆς ἢ ρομαντικῆς, μουσικῆς φιλολογίας, ἀπὸ τοὺς αὐτοτιτλοφορουμένους ὡς ἀρχιμουσικούς, τῶν ὁποίων ἡ δεξιὰ δὲν γνωρίζει τί ποιεῖ ἡ ἀριστερά. Αὐτὸς ὁ ἀετὸς τῆς μπαγκέτας σήμερα βρίσκεται στὴν κορυφὴ τῆς ἀποδόσεώς του.

Οἱ ἑρμηνεῖες ποὺ πραγματοποιεῖ ξεφεύγουν ἀπὸ τὰ στενὰ ὅρια ἑνὸς τυπικὰ ὡραίου.

Ἡ διεύθυνσις τῆς ὀρχήστρας γιὰ τὸν Μητρόπουλο παίρνει τὴν ἔννοια ἀπέραντων ψυχικῶν στοχασμῶν, μ' ἕνα πάντα σκοπό.

Τὴν κατάκτησι τοῦ ὀρχηστρικοῦ σώματος, σ' ὅλη τὴν κλίμακα τῶν ἁρμονικῶν του διαβαθμίσεων, μὲ μιὰ ἀτέλειωτη προσπάθεια. Ὅλο καὶ πιὸ ψηλά... Ὅλο καὶ πιὸ ψηλά.

Στὰ αἰθέρια πιανίσσιμά του μετὰ ἀπὸ μιὰ παρέλασι ἠχητικῶν κεραυνῶν ποὺ τραντάζουν συθέμελα τοὺς μουσικοὺς καὶ τοὺς ἀκροατάς.

Καὶ μιὰ ἀδιόρατη ἀκόμη γιὰ τὸ ἄπειρο μάτι κίνησι τοῦ χεριοῦ του, κρύβει θησαυροὺς ὁλόκληρους ἀνείπωτης μουσικῆς γοητείας.

Καὶ ἐκεῖνο ποὺ ζητεῖ ἀπὸ τὴν ὀρχήστρα του, εἶνε καὶ μιὰ θερμὴ ἐπίκλησι, κάτι σὰν σιωπηλὴ προσευχή, πρὸς τὴν μουσικὴ θεότητα ποὺ μόνον αὐτὸς ἐκείνη τὴ στιγμὴ ὁραματίζεται.

Salzburger Festspiele:

Barbers „Vanessa" — eine Konzession an das Publikum

Europäische Erstaufführung im Festspielhaus mit Dimitri Mitropoulos am Pult

SAMUEL BARBERS „VANESSA" IM FESTSPIELHAUS. Nach einem Libretto von Menotti ging diese Oper am Samstag zum erstenmal in Salzburg in Szene. Unser Bild zeigt Giorgio Tozzi als Doktor (links) mit Rosalind Elias als Erika und Nicolai Gedda als Anatol. Photo: Ellinger

Dafür bleibt ihm ein Trost, der gilt. Er kann sich sagen, daß in allen großen Zeiten der Oper sehr entschieden aufs Publikum Bedacht genommen wurde. Wer fürs Theater komponiert, darf es der Hörerschaft, die ihm einen ganzen Abend lang Aufmerksamkeit und Teilnahme schenken soll, nicht allzu schwer machen. Das 19. Jahrhundert hat da einige Verwirrung in die Begriffe gebracht und die Lizenz, die der Oper zusteht, außer Gebrauch gesetzt, weil sich der musikalische Fortschritt vorzugsweise auf dem Gebiet der Oper auswirkte.

Vanessa wartet zwanzig Jahre

Wenn nun in den Vereinigten Staaten eine Entwicklung einsetzt, die dem Opernkomponisten wieder Konzessionen ans Publikum zubilligt, so wird damit an Gepflogenheiten angeknüpft, die der Kunstform der Oper durchaus gemäß sind und zu ihrem Wesen gehören. Die Oper ist eine festliche und gesellschaftliche Manifestation. Ihre künstlerischen Inhalte müssen leichter zugänglich sein, müssen leichter erkannt, verstanden und aufgenommen werden können, als etwa die der Symphonie und Kammermusik. Der Oper kann sogar ein Quantum Äußerlichkeit konzediert werden, denn sie muß mit einem breiten Publikum rechnen, mit einem unkomplizierten Musiksinn, der gern mitgeht und dem das Mitgehen möglich gemacht werden soll. Ein „Tristan", der Jahrzehnte braucht, um erfaßt zu werden, bildet den Ausnahmefall. Ansprechende, handfeste Opernwerke, die sich ein paar Jahre zu halten vermögen und dem Repertoire brauchbaren Stoff zuführen, sollen die Regel sein.

Dieser Kategorie darf „Vanessa" zugezählt werden, und zwar als ein durchaus akzeptables und wohlgelungenes Exemplar. Das Schicksal jener Frau, die zwanzig Jahre auf die Rückkehr des Geliebten wartet, die die Spiegel verhängt, um den Hingang von Zeit und Jugend nicht zu sehen, die wirklich jung bleibt, um sogar mit einem jungen Anatol, der sie als der Sohn des Jugendfreundes überrascht, den alten Roman fortzuspinnen. Dieses Schicksal ist ein typisches Opernschicksal. Nicht anders steht es um Vanessas Nichte Erika, die sich von einem jungen Mann, der ein Luftikus ist, gleich beim ersten Zusammentreffen verführen läßt, dann aber doch lieber verzichtet, um das eingebildete Glück der älteren Frau nicht zu zerstören, die schließlich allein und verlassen zurückbleibt und ihrerseits das Los auf sich nimmt, die Spiegel zu verhängen, und zu warten, wahrscheinlich weitere zwanzig Jahre. Auch sie ist ein Operngeschöpf, das nur in der Opernluft gedeihen kann.

Nur Anatol selbst, der sich auch in der diffizilsten Situation seinen Humor bewahrt und ernsterem Seelenkonflikt unzugänglich ist, sinkt in seiner Herz- und Charakterlosigkeit unter das legitime Opernmaß. Dafür haben die Nebenfiguren und Nebendinge entschieden opernhafte Geltung: der Doktor, der heitere Reminiszenzen auffrischt und zur Lockerung der Spannung beiträgt, das Dienerpersonal, das zum Kirchgang antritt und mit Chorgesang das Finale des zweiten Aktes untermauert, oder die alte Dame, die das schlechte Gewissen verkörpert und als Vanessas Mutter und Erikas Großmutter den Kopf schüttelt über die erotischen Verwirrungen von Tochter und Enkelin.

Musik nach alten Prinzipien

Eine hübsche, wiewohl nur angedeutete und sporadisch durchgeführte Opernidee ist es ferner, im gegenwärtigen Erlebnis Vanessas Vergangenheitserlebnis nachzuerzählen und das eine als Spiegelbild des anderen erscheinen zu lassen. Jedenfalls ist dieses Libretto, das Menotti seinem Musikerkollegen zugedacht hat, typisch für seine Art, Alltagsrealität und opernhaftes Spiel einander zu konfrontieren.

Das Eigentümliche oder, wenn man will, das Neue an der Musik von Samuel Barber ist ihre Entschlossenheit, in Harmonie- und Melodiebildung alten, ja altmodischen Prinzipien zu folgen. Bis auf etliche theatralische Dissonanzen, wie sie der theatralische Augenblick erfordert, entwickelt sich diese Musik durchaus tonal. Auf dieser Basis aber verfährt sie mit bemerkenswertem Geschick. Formgefühl und glaubhafte Einfallskraft stehen ihr jederzeit zu Gebote. Namentlich im Lyrischen wirkt sie echt und unmittelbar. Sie besitzt außerdem die Fähigkeit, die Situation stimmungsmäßig zu erfassen und die Stimmung ausschwingen zu lassen. Es fehlt wohl nicht an Reminiszenzen und Anklängen, trotzdem ist in der Linienführung eine individuelle Nuance, eine persönliche Note überall spürbar. Daß sich immer wieder formal gerundete Sätze und geschlossene „Nummern" ergeben, Arien, Duos, mehrstimmige Ensembles, wird, kein Zweifel, zunächst von der Disposition des Textes bestimmt; aber es ist das besondere Talent des Komponisten, aus der Disposition musikalischen Gewinn zu schöpfen. Die meisten von diesen im allgemeinen sehr kantablen Sätzen sind reizend gemacht und mit einem hübschen, plastischen Melodiegedanken ausgestattet.

Den musikalischen Höhepunkt bildet ein groß angelegtes Quintett, das aus der Melancholie der Schlußsituation folgerichtig erwächst, das wirkungsvoll aufgebaut und kunstgemäß gesteigert wird. Das einprägsame Motiv, das das prächtig klingende Musikstück beherrscht, ist das eigentliche Leitmotiv der Oper; nicht im Hinblick auf Notenwert und Tonfolge, sondern dem spezifischen Charakter nach. Es könnte als das Motto, das musikalische Signalement der Komposition gelten.

Wohl gibt es auch Stellen, die zu wenig wiegen und vielleicht eine Konzession zu viel machen. Dafür gibt es wieder brillante Vor- und Zwischenspiele, die den Komponisten als perfekten Satztechniker zeigen. Es mag nicht alles Edelstoff sein, was er präsentiert; immer aber präsentiert er es mit Gusto und Animo.

Die Darsteller

Das Werk wird in englischer Sprache und in der Inszenierung der Metropolitan Opera New York vorgeführt. Eine Salzburger Originalproduktion wäre sicherlich stilvoller gewesen, aber es hat auch seinen Reiz, eine amerikanische Mustervorstellung in Salzburg zu sehen und zu hören. Die musikalisch künstlerische Perfektion wird durch Dimitri Mitropoulos am Dirigentenpult gewährleistet. Bühnenbild und Kostüme zeigen einen outrierten Realismus, der ins Karikaturistische umzukippen droht. Die interessanteste Persönlichkeit im Ensemble ist Rosalind Elias, eine junge Sängerin mit einem herrlichen Mezzosopran und einem hinreißenden Talent. Die Stimme, in allen Lagen gleich üppig und klangschön, wird mit natürlichem Impetus und technisch tadellos geführt. Womöglich noch packender wirkt die Intensität des Ausdrucks, die Gespanntheit der Darstellung. Eleanor Steber, der man als Vanessa begegnet, ist ebenfalls eine große Künstlerin und weiß auch, von ihrer Gesangskunst eindrucksvolle Proben zu geben. Aber ihrem Charakter und Habitus nach ist sie den Aufgaben, die ihr die Rolle stellt, einigermaßen entwachsen.

Glänzend ist ferner Giorgio Tozzi, der als hochbegabter Spielbariton die Rolle des Doktors in den Vordergrund rückt, eine volle, runde, klangvolle Stimme hören läßt und auch den prekärsten Situationen mit persönlichem Charme begegnet. Dem Anatol schenkt Nicolai Gedda seine hübsche, ansprechende Tenorstimme und sein verbindliches Wesen. Sehr viel ist mit der Rolle nicht anzufangen. Auch nicht mit der Rolle der Mutter und Großmutter, für die sich Ira Malaniuk zur Verfügung gestellt hat. Neben ihr waren noch Norman Foster und Alois Pernerstorfer ausersehen, das amerikanische Ensemble zu ergänzen. Und natürlich auch unsere Philharmoniker, die dem temperamentvollen Dirigenten mit Temperament und Hingebung folgten und ganz im Sinne dieser Oper musizierten, die eben eine Musizieroper ist.

Salzburg

Europäische Erstaufführung von Ba[illegible]essa" bei den Festspielen

Nun wissen wir es genau, denn die New Yorker Metropolitan Opera ist eigens nach Salzburg gekommen, um den Europäern zu demonstrieren, was die amerikanische Oper von 1958 ist: die vollkommene Rückspiegelung der Welt von 1905. Was vom Schauspiel schon lange bekannt war, daß nämlich das amerikanische Theater vom Gebrauchsdrama bis hinauf zu den Stücken von Tennessee Williams, Arthur Miller und William Faulkner das europäische Theater vom Anfang des Jahrhunderts, insbesondere das Theater von Ibsen und Strindberg wiederholt, bestätigt sich jetzt auch in der Oper. Das Land, das gerade dabei ist, die erste Rakete auf den Mond zu schießen, ist auf der Bühne um 50 Jahre zurück; das Land, in dem die Psychoanalyse zum Gesellschaftsspiel geworden ist, bohrt sich auf seinem Theater in die psychologischen Probleme des Fin de siècle, als seien sie von brennendster Aktualität.

Da haust irgendwo auf einem Schloß im hohen Norden eine alte Baronin, die mit ihrer Tochter Vanessa seit zwanzig Jahren kein Wort redet, weil diese, die mit verhängten Spiegeln die Zeit stillstehen heißt, nur auf die Wiederkehr ihres einstigen Jugendgeliebten wartet. Als der Ersehnte endlich eintrifft, ist es aber gar nicht jener Anatol von damals, sondern sein Sohn. Vanessa schreit entsetzt auf und flieht, während Anatol der Jüngere Vanessas Nichte Erika, die ihn über sein Eindringen zur Rede stellt, mit unbekümmerter Galanterie an den für seinen verstorbenen Vater gedeckten Tisch führt. Zwischen dem ersten und dem zweiten Akt verfällt sie ihm bereits ganz. Anatol aber, dem Vanessa alsbald ihre Liebe zugewandt hat, findet die Aussichten auf ein luxuriöses Hotelleben in Paris, Wien und Rom an der Seite der unermeßlich reichen, wiewohl gut zwanzig Jahre älteren Dame so verlockend, daß er beschließt, sie zu heiraten. Erika, darob in Verzweiflung gestürzt, entledigt sich in grauser Winternacht, während im Schloß bei einem glanzvollen Ball Vanessas und Anatols Verlobung gefeiert wird, auf mysteriöse, doch sichtlich anstrengende Weise des sie von dem flotten jungen Mann [illegible]erzen trug, denn sie wird im vierten [illegible]tlos in ihr Zimmer zurückgebracht, [illegible]en jedoch wieder so weit wohlauf [illegible] sie, nach einem Abschiedsquintett [illegible]s und Vanessas endgültiger Abreise [illegible]same Freudenleben, ihrerseits die [illegible]ängen läßt und sich zum freudlosen [illegible]chtsetzt.

[illegible]sser dieser in der thematischen Aus[illegible]llation vielleicht nicht einmal un[illegible]n, aber in der Ausführung völlig [illegible]n und mit peinlichen Flickszenen [illegible]te gestreckten Story ist der Italo-Gian Carlo Menotti, der Komponist [illegible]em Kriege für kurze Zeit zu un-Ruhm gelangten Opernreißers „Der [illegible]er das Libretto zu „Vanessa" hat er [illegible], sondern für seinen Freund Samuel [illegible]rieben, der, mit seinem eklektisch-Instrumentalschaffen auch in Eu-[illegible]t, damit zum ersten Sprung auf die [illegible] angesetzt hat. Daß er dabei in der [illegible]ieser Kunstgattung um ein halbes [illegible] zurückgesprungen ist, scheint er [illegible]t zu haben.

[illegible]m triolisch anspringenden Fortis-[illegible]: denkt man an den Baron Scarpia [illegible]sca", und es bestätigt sich alsbald, [illegible]matisierter Puccini, vermehrt um [illegible] Wagner, Strauß und Tschaikowsky [illegible]ritzer Debussy, die Grundsubstanz [illegible]sch mit routinierter Verve gearbei-[illegible]r bildet. Da sind alle Ingredienzien [illegible]kelten Opern-Verismo handwerk-[illegible]säuberlich wie unsauber im Geist [illegible]mischt: das Schlittengeläut, wenn [illegible](Anatol in den Schloßhof kutschiert [illegible]t mit Vanessa wieder abfährt), der [illegible]Sonntagsgottesdienst in der Schloß-[illegible]l hält auf Sitte und findet sich nach [illegible]lerendem morgendlichem Schlitt-[illegible]s Andacht ein — mit dem gesamten [illegible]steht sich), der Verlobungswalzer mit den Soloeinlagen des beschwipsten Hausarztes (er vertritt das „humoristische" Element in der sonst gänzlich humorfernen Magazingeschichte) und das larmoyante Lied aus den Highlands, das die melodische Grundlage des dramaturgisch geradezu absurd placierten Quintetts (nämlich mitten im Trubel der Abreise) bildet. Das ist 1957, wie gesagt, im Geist und in der Technik von 1905 geschrieben, ein glanzloser Reflex der Moderne von damals — wie schön, wie neuartig und wie wirklich modern war die Prinzessin Salome in jenem Jahr!

Es mag sein, daß man in den USA, einem Land ohne Tradition und folglich auch ohne Entwicklung auf dem Gebiet der Oper, dieses Pasticcio aus alten europäischen Reminiszenzen für zeitgenössische Kunst hält. Das Publikum der New Yorker Met, das eine so ausschließlich kulinarische Einstellung zur Oper hat wie in keinem anderen Theater der Welt, mag davon berauscht sein (und ist es, den Berichten über die Uraufführung der „Vanessa" im Januar dieses Jahres zufolge, in der Tat gewesen). Diese Oper ist per saldo nicht besser und nicht schlechter als hundert andere Epigonenopern, die jahraus, jahrein in aller Welt geschrieben, aufgeführt und vergessen werden. Die Met ist kein Ort, wo künstlerisch gewichtige Entscheidungen fallen. Wäre Barbers Oper auf sie beschränkt geblieben, der Fall „Vanessa" wäre längst erledigt. Nun aber kam dieses Stück mit dem New Yorker Ensemble und in der New Yorker Inszenierung nach Europa, an einen Ort, an dem sehr wohl über Wert und Bedeutung einer zeitgenössischen Oper entschieden wird. Und damit haben wir den Fall: „Vanessa" in Salzburg.

Es heißt, daß Dimitri Mitropoulos seine Mitwirkung in diesem Jahr von der Annahme der Oper Samuel Barbers abhängig gemacht habe, und nicht nur von der Annahme, sondern auch von der Übernahme der New Yorker Aufführung. Nun hat Dimitri Mitropoulos, der große und bewundernswerte Dirigent, wie auch seine oft sehr eigenartigen Konzertprogramme beweisen, nicht immer einen unbedingt sicheren Geschmack. Es ist durchaus anzunehmen, daß er „Vanessa" für ein künstlerisch wirklich bedeutsames Werk hält: Die Intensität seines Einsatzes am Pult, als ob es sich um „Elektra" oder „Wozzeck" handelte, spricht für diese Annahme. Aber Herbert von Karajan, dem nicht minder großen und bewundernswerten Dirigenten — ihm glauben wir als dem Direktor der Salzburger Festspiele die künstlerische Überzeugung im Falle „Vanessa" mitnichten. Er muß wissen, daß es sich hier um a second class matter handelt, deren Aufnahme in das repräsentative Programm der Festspiele den künstlerischen und mehr noch den geistigen Kredit Salzburgs schädigt. Insoferne nämlich, als sie denen recht gibt, die die völlige Unterordnung der künstlerischen unter die merkantilen Gesichtspunkte in Salzburg schon lange als eine vollendete Tatsache bezeichnen.

Wenn ein Verwaltungsdirektor — ich weiß nicht, wie es um diese Instanz in Salzburg beschaffen ist — im Hinblick auf die zahlungskräftigen Festspielbesucher aus den USA, weil er auf die Kasse sehen muß und also gewissermaßen aus seiner Amtspflicht heraus, den Import der „Vanessa" empfohlen hätte, so hätte der künstlerische Direktor aus seiner Amtspflicht, die ihm den Ruf der Festspiele zu wahren gebietet, dagegen protestieren müssen. Aber es war gar nicht die Verwaltung, sondern der künstlerische Direktor selbst, der diesen die Idee Salzburg nicht nur diskreditierenden, sondern sie sogar tödlich treffenden Import vorschlug und seinen weltberühmten Namen dazu hergab. Aus der Verantwortung dafür wird ihn niemand entlassen dürfen, auch wenn Karajan vielleicht über kurz oder lang am Dirigentenpult der Met als „Salzburg's chief conductor" der international leuchtenden Aura seiner Vaterstadt neuen Glanz verleihen wird.

Von der Aufführung ist zu berichten, daß sie ebenfalls ein vollkommen getreues Abbild des Operntheaters vor 50 Jahren war. Der platte Milieunaturalismus der Bühnenbilder von Cecil Beaton — die in den Ballsaal hereinwirbelnden Schneeflocken, als Erika die Tür zu ihrem nächtlichen Verzweiflungsgang aufstößt, erregten sogar beim Salzburger Festspielpublikum Gelächter —, die Regie Gian Carlo Menottis mit ihrer eine mißverstandene Filmrealistik auf die Opernbühne übertragenden Umständlichkeit und Akzentuierung belangloser Details, die mit „symbolischer" Beleuchtung versuchte Herstellung einer beklemmenden Strindberg-Atmosphäre: das alles war so antiquiert und verstaubt, daß man sich in die historische Rekonstruktion eines Theaterabends aus der Zeit der Wende vom Naturalismus zur Neuromantik versetzt glauben konnte.

Die gesanglichen Leistungen waren mit einer Ausnahme hervorragend — diese Ausnahme betraf jedoch leider gerade die Vertreterin der Titelpartie: Eleanor Steber, wohlvertraut mit allen wogenden Affekten und Attitüden der erfahrenen Primadonna, ist stimmlich über ihre Glanzzeit hinaus; auch ihre virtuose Gesangstechnik konnte fühlbare Mängel des an sich voluminösen und hochdramatisch durchschlagenden Soprans nicht verdecken. Zum Aufstieg in die erste Reihe der großen Bühnensängerinnen steht aber die junge Rosalind Elias (Erika) bereit, ein strahlender und dabei wunderbar weicher Mezzosopran von außerordentlicher Schönheit; ihre darstellerische Intensität müßte, von einer nicht psychologisch aufdröselnden, sondern übersteigernden und stilisierenden Regie geführt, faszinieren. Ira Malaniuk blieb als alter Baronin kaum etwas anderes übrig, als mit dem Stock zu stampfen, pergamenten auszusehen und im Quintett den sonoren Contralto abzugeben. Ihre berühmten Vorbilder mochte man außer bei Strindberg auch bei Tschaikowsky (die Gräfin in „Eugen Onegin") suchen. Nicola Gedda machte mit seinem glanzvollen und intelligent geführten Tenor die überaus unerfreuliche Gestalt des Anatol, eines Playboy von 1905, beinahe sympathisch, und der hervorragende Bariton Giorgio Tozzi dämpfte die Peinlichkeiten der Doktorszenen durch darstellerischen Takt und eine leise komische Grandezza wohltuend ab.

Dimitri Mitropoulos, wie skeptisch man seinem Wertinstinkt gegenüber auch sein muß, ist als Dirigent schlechthin phänomenal. Mit dem Eliteapparat der Wiener Philharmoniker machte er aus der epigonalen Partitur ein Stück lebendiger Musik — kein Kunstwerk, aber ein frappierendes Kunststück. Ihm und Rosalind Elias galten die Bravorufe, die bei dem Begräbnis erster Klasse im Salzburger Festspielhaus Samuel Barbers „Vanessa" im Beisein ihrer Autoren am Schluß verabschiedeten. K.H.Ruppel

VANESSA — ELEANOR STEBER

Die große Stimmung kleiner Seelen

Samuel Barbers „Vanessa" als Gastspiel der Met bei den Festspielen

VON MAX KAINDL-HÖNIG

Samuel Barber und Gian-Carlo Menotti, beide Altersgenossen als Endvierziger, beide aus einer mittleren amerikanischen Komponistengeneration bekannt, beide in ihrem Schaffen durch die Tradition der nachromantischen Musik befruchtet, wobei der eine seine Puccini-Vorliebe mehr mit Strawinsky, der andere dieselbe Neigung mehr — wie uns scheint — mit Strausschen Idiomen gekreuzt hat, beide Künstler und Freunde sind in der Oper „Vanessa" zu gemeinsamer Nutzanwendung gelangt. Der mit wachsender Opernerfahrung begabte Italo-Amerikaner Menotti — Komponist von Kurzopern und größeren Werken wie „Der Konsul" oder der eben in Brüssel zur Uraufführung gehenden „Maria Golovin" — hat sich bei der Erstlingsoper Barbers als Textautor eingestellt, so wie er bisher auch als Librettist der eigenen Kompositionen sich selbst versorgte.

Das Gemeinschaftswerk der Freunde kam dann, Mitte Jänner dieses Jahres, in einer repräsentablen Inszenierung Menottis unter dem Dirigenten Mitropoulos an der Metropolitan Opera New York heraus. Es wurde von einem überwiegenden Teil der dortigen Presse etwa in dem Sinne gefeiert, daß es sich um das Ereignis einer echten, abendfüllenden, der Entstehung und Sprache nach authentisch-amerikanischen Oper handle. Eine Errungenschaft also, die weit übers Wasser von sich reden machen durfte.

Bestes Pferd aus New York

Während an der Met mit gutem Erfolg — und entgegen moralischen Einwänden wegen des Textes — die Oper siebenmal über die Bretter ging, war es in Salzburg, auf Empfehlung Karajans, bereits beschlossene Sache, „Vanessa" im Sommer zu Festspielehren kommen zu lassen. Kommen zu lassen: als quasi „europäische Erstaufführung" in Form eines englischsprachigen Gastspiels der New-Yorker Metropolitan Opera, mit deren fertigem, musikalisch-solistischem und szenischem Apparat. — Eine „Programmidee" Salzburgs, die durch ein grundsätzliches Streitgespräch über Programme und Ideen dieser ältesten zentralen Festspiele Europas wiederum viel von sich reden machen mußte.

Und nun, ehe New York sich anschickt, das Werk im Spielplan für 1959 mit weiteren fünf Aufführungen auszuzeichnen, haben wir „Vanessa" also auf drei Male bei uns zu Gast. Wir bedauern, daß sie nicht deswegen allein einen glatten Willkomm der Kritik empfangen kann, weil sie an sich unschuldig und ihrer Geburt nach gar nicht für Salzburg bestimmt war; es scheint uns jedoch damit nicht viel anders zu sein als mit dem berühmten „falschen Demetrius", dessen Probleme den beiden Autoren (laut einer Anspielung im Libretto) nicht ganz unbekannt sein können.

Oper in Salzburger Perspektive

Da aber die Gefahr einer Usurpation nach dreimal „Vanessa" sicher als gegenstandslos erwiesen sein wird, darf hier das unschuldig Falsche an dem Eindringen des Werkes in die rechtmäßige Domäne derer von Mozart, Beethoven, Weber, Strauss (um nur die höchsten Garanten zu nennen) ohne jede Leidenschaft kritisch zergliedert werden. Für die Linie einer späteren, neuen Musik, der Salzburg zu dienen bereit ist, bringen wir als veritable, reife Beispiele einer Festspielkultur Carl Orffs „Antigonae" (1949) in Erinnerung, wegen ihrer kompositorischen Originalität auch „Dantons Tod" von Einem (1947), dann als eminentes Ereignis die Neuinszenierung des „Wozzeck" von Alban Berg (1951) und — mit geziemender Distanz — das gelungene Novum einer modernen Buffa, wie sie uns Rolf Liebermanns „Schule der Frauen" im vergangenen Jahr demonstriert hat. — Wie nimmt sich nun, absolut gemessen aus der gebotenen Perspektive der Salzburger Festspiele, die Oper vor 1958 aus, mit der die Freunde Barber-Menotti die Bühne belegt haben?

Da ist zunächst ein schaurig haltloser Tiefstand des Librettos festzustellen, wie er in Salzburg nur durch die Qualitäten der Liebermannschen „Penelope" von 1954 unterboten wurde. Menottis Textmacherei arbeitet ohne die geringste poetische Verklärung seines Handwerks. Sie beherrscht am besten oberflächlich-drastische, gedanklich kaum jemals schärfer durchzeichnende Mittel und schafft damit eine zwar vorteilhaft kleine, fünfköpfige Personenbesetzung von Figuren, die indes nur flau, in mehrfacher Hinsicht sogar widersprüchlich modelliert sind.

Die Handlung spielt um 1905. Schauplatz ist ein Herrschaftssitz in einem nördlichen Land, wo man mit der Geschichte von Dimitrij und Marina, also dem „Boris-Godunoff"-Stoff besonders vertraut und im Wohnstil etwa der Danziger Gotik, verblümt und verplüscht durch viktorianischen, Makartschen Kitsch, von ganzem Herzen verpflichtet ist.

Hysterie schürzt die Knoten

Hier trägt sich folgendes zu: Die unverheiratete Baroneß Vanessa hat vor zwanzig Jahren einen Mann namens Anatol aus den Augen verloren, doch nicht aus dem Sinn, und ist bis zur Stunde nicht für den Verzicht auf ein Phantom herangereift. Mit dem Wahn einer möglichen Wiederkehr hat sie sich in die blinde Hysterie einer Wartenden hineingesteigert, die mit verhängten Spiegeln ihren Salon zur Eremitage werden läßt. Heute aber, wie durch ein Wunder, ist der Tag, an dem der Mann namens Anatol seine Wiederkunft angesagt hat! Mit abgekehrtem Antlitz, ihr Glück langsam, sorgfältig auskostend, empfängt sie den Geliebten, bis sie entsetzt erkennt: es ist ein anderer Anatol! Lauthals huldigt sie einem typischen Zusammenbruch. Leise aber findet sich der junge Mann, es ist Anatols Sohn, in die nächstbeste Rolle: Da ihm das reiche Schloß gefällt, nimmt er die zum Empfang gedeckte Abendmahlzeit mit Vanessas empfindsamer Nichte Erika ein. Im zweiten Akt muß dann das Fräulein ihrer allergestrengsten Großmutter einbekennen: sie erwarte ein Kind von jenem Abend her, schlage aber die Ehewilligkeit Anatols aus, weil sie dessen wahre Gefühle für sich bezweifle. — Inzwischen haben sich ohne weiteren Zusammenbruch Vanessa und der Jüngling gefunden. Während in einer folgenden Neujahrsnacht (dritter Akt) auf dem Hausball durch den Arzt und Freund der Familie, wider den Willen der alten Dame, das Verlöbnis Vanessas mit Anatol II. verkündet wird, überläßt Erika sich und ihr ungeborenes Kind der Unbill einer stürmischen Winternacht. Als sie gefunden wird, ist sie nicht mehr Mutter. Die betagte Baroneß entzieht sich zürnend durch ein finster dauerndes Schweigen allen weiteren sittlichen Entscheidungen im Hause. Blindlings, von einer Ahnung gequält und bis zuletzt des Erwählten nicht sicher, geht Vanessa mit Anatol und übergibt Haus und Dienerschaft an Erika. (Zeigefinger: „But do not tell Anatol, please!" — Sonst überlegt er sich's noch und bleibt hier?). Erika, durch die dubiose Verbindung der beiden wiederum in einen zukunftsträchtigen Wahn versetzt, läßt nun ihrerseits die Spiegel verhängen, wie sie es vorher waren, und spielt die Wartende, wie Vanessa es tat... Ein nobler Zug des Librettisten bewahrt uns vor einem fünften Akt, in welchem die offene Frage Antwort heischen könnte, ob Anatol nochmals wiederkehren und die Spinnweben der Wartezeit mit männlichem Lohn vergessen machen könnte.

Außer dieser gespielten Noblesse eines nicht logisch, sondern pathologisch begründeten Schlusses fanden wir nichts Nobles an dem Textbuch; fiel es doch dem Autor — überflüssigerweise — ein, das Privatissimum einer Geburtverhinderung fürs Theater in Betracht zu ziehen. So stellt sich diese ganze Handlung dar als die anrüchige Geschichte eines Heiratsschwindlers, dem nichts von den Sympathien eines Don Juan und nichts vom Temperament einer solchen dramatischen Person zugute kommt. Was hier die Knoten schürzt, sind hingegen nichts anderes als die Komplexe zweier äußerst sentimentaler, um nicht zu sagen, hysterischer Heldinnen, deren Selbstbejammerung und innere Amoralität (wie jene des ganzen Hauses der Vanessa) durchaus den Zynismus verdient, den der im Drama völlig untätige junge Herr Anatol mitbringt. Der Textmacher hat es an nichts fehlen lassen, um die spärlichen äußeren Vorgänge fast alle durch diese Konstellation von künstlichem Verhängnis des Sentiments und kühler Nichtsnutzigkeit zu belasten. Auch die billigen Phrasen der Dialoge — wenn etwa Vanessa singt: „Wie der flammende Phönix stiegst du aus der Asche meiner sterbenden Träume..." — speichern soviel Banalität auf, daß jeder Ansatz zu echter Tragik Lügen gestraft wird.

Die Regie macht es gut

Um so mehr ist zu loben, daß die Inszenierung Menottis (für die in Salzburg der New-Yorker Regieassistent Nathaniel Merril mitverantwortlich zeichnet) nichts vergröbert, sondern mit einigen trefflichen Nuancen sogar dem eigenen Konzept ein vornehmeres Licht hat angedeihen lassen. Farblos und unbeholfen geführt erschien lediglich der Majordomus (Pelzszene!). Das Übergewicht einer schweren Wagnerschen Pathetik in der deutlich schief gelagerten Gestaltung der Titelpartie dürfte auf die Wahl der Besetzung zurückzuführen sein. Diese „Vanessa" wirkt als Erscheinung einer Neurasthenikerin, die ihre schwierige Psyche immerhin zwanzig Jahre lang falsch gebettet und gelegt hat, viel zu kernig und auch im Ausdruck entschieden überdimensioniert. So gerät manches unrettbar lächerlich; denn das ganze Innengelände dieser Plüschfeudalität bleibt doch in jeder Minute Herrschaftsgebiet und Tummelplatz ganz kleiner Seelen.

Der Mantel der Musik

Nun muß man die Leistung des Komponisten richtig ansehen und sagen: Er hat den Minimaltierchen dieses Menottischen Seelengemäldes wirklich den „Mantel" einer großen Stimmung umgelegt (um gleich mit Puccini zu sprechen). Samuel Barber war imstande, eine sehr dünne Dramatik in einen doch fest geformten Guß von Klängen einzuschmelzen, so als ob ihm nicht das fade Rezept einer Operette, sondern wirklich das Format eines Opernbuches vorgelegen hätte. Wie der hochbegabte Musiker dabei zu Werke ging, ist zum Teil sein Geheimnis (auf das wir im weiteren noch offen zu sprechen kommen müssen), zum besseren Teil legitimiert es sich als ein vorzügliches Können und unzweifelhaftes Geschick fürs musikalische Theater.

Wir heben hier hervor, was diesem Anspruch besonders zustatten kommt: das Talent für die knappe musikalische Formulierung; die spärlich, aber gewandt genutzte Motiventechnik (Spiegelthema zweiter Akt, motivisch als Schlußgedanke vierter Akt); wir anerkennen die klare, wenn auch zuweilen im Kolorit übergangslos zusammengerückte, einheitliche Anlage der Partitur; die durchgehend gute Sanglichkeit der Barberschen Vokalpartien; die wohlgesetzten Kantilenen (Erikas Winterarie) und einige geradezu originell klingende Instrumentalsätze (zweites Tanzarrangement „Under the willow tree"), sowie das schön transparent ausgeführte Quintett des letzten Aktes, worin sogar Andeutungen zu einer Ensemble-Charakterisierung à la „Figaro" versucht werden.

Staub von fremden Blüten

Mit dem Kapitel der Orchestrierung, die sich ohne auffällige Eigenwilligkeit einer herkömmlichen Palette der Nachromantik, mit vielen Harfen und Glöckchen (die Damen leben eremitisch!) zu bedienen weiß, kommt man unwillkürlich zur anderen Seite der Betrachtung: dorthin nämlich, von wo der Klangwelt Mister Barbers vielerlei fremder Blütenstaub zugeflogen ist, so daß man deutlich von einer verstaubten, weil nicht unmittelbar aus sich floriernden Musik dieser neuen Oper sprechen muß. Dort also winkten die großen Versucher. Vor allem immer wieder der Quintengänger Puccini: Krankt z. B. nicht eine blasse Mimi im Lehnstuhl, wenn Anatol in der süßen Greuelserzählung vom eisigen Seeufer und dem blutroten Mal einer „Christmas rose" den Parlando-Stil der Monotonie vor sich hinströmen läßt, „with great tenderness". Das ist puccinissime: ein Parfum, welches man förmlich schnuppern konnte. Wir vertrugen es aber viel weniger, wenn ungeniert auch nach Richard Strauss gegriffen wurde, so als hätte dieser der gut ausstaffierten Barberschen Schlittenfahrt zwischen dem Rom der „Tosca" und dem klirrenden Klima Sankt Petersburgs irgendwo zuwinken mögen! Es ist doppelt unstatthaft, wenn bei Strauss eine geradezu exklusive Tragik entliehen wurde, wie sie „Die Frau ohne Schatten" bestimmt; mehrere Takte der ersten Kaiserarie sind in Erikas Wintersong übernommen, gerade für jene Erika-Figur, die das krasse Gegenteil — eine Frau mit Schatten in umgekehrter Konsequenz — verkörpert. Solche und ähnliche Anleihen, die dem kritischen Hörer aus dem Vokal- und Orchestersatz häufig bewußt werden (Vorspiel dritter Akt gemahnt an „Meistersinger"-Töne!), verlieren vollends das Alibi einer gekonnten „Verneigung", wenn dazu noch wahllos Andachtsbildchen aus der Biblia pauperum des Operettengeschmacks herausgeschnitten und harmonikal diskret umrahmt werden. Wenn dies möglich ist — z. B. „Wien, Wien, nur du allein..." als Themenmaterial der ariosen Es-dur-Kantilene Vanessas („I love you, Erika") —, dann ist unserer Auffassung nach die ganze schöpferische Haltung eines opus in Frage gestellt. Aber, wie gesagt, Salzburgs Festspiele sind keinesfalls der Ort für Debatten um epigonales Mittelmaß. Der Komponist der „Vanessa" hat uns durch die guten Seiten seines Könnens vielleicht die Aussicht auf ein besseres Werk offengelassen: sofern er seines unleugbaren Talents in selbständiger, von allzu gerissener Librettokunst freier Bemühung noch glücklich habhaft werden kann. Der laute Beifall des großen, hauptsächlich englischsprachigen Publikums im Salzburger Festspielhaus sollte für Samuel Barber einen runden Vorschuß für den seriöseren künftigen Erfolg seiner Muse bedeuten.

Schluß mit Jubel

In die Früchte des Premierenapplauses teilten sich mit Recht vor allem der souveräne musikalische Leiter Dimitri Mitropoulos, der mit den Wiener Philharmonikern die Partitur wahrhaftig mitunter bis nahe an die Sterne erhob. Er meisterte das Werk in seiner Interpretation so überlegen, als hätte er von Anfang an (mit wirksamen Tempi und dynamischen Akzenten) manches besser gewußt als der um etliches jüngere Strauss-Kenner Barber.

Die Metropolitan Opera hat mit ihrer New-Yorker Sängerbesetzung, welcher sich Ira Malaniuk in der knappen Partie der alten „schweigsamen Frau" des Hauses mit allem Vorteil ihrer farbig ausgeprägten Stimmkultur und Gestaltung hinzugesellte, den verdienten Publikumserfolg vom Jänner hier wiederholen können. Eleanor Steber rief, ungeachtet der oben vermerkten Einwände zum Stil ihrer Vanessa-Auffassung, mit den hochdramatischen Mitteln eines großen Soprans starken Eindruck hervor. Ihrem Effekt stand in der einheitlicher ausgearbeiteten

Dienstag, 19. August 1958 Volksstimme

Salzburger Festspiele 1958:

Wie kam „Vanessa" nach Salzburg?

Es erschien einmal eine Musikkritik, die lautete kurz und bündig: „Fräulein X gab ein Klavierkonzert. Warum?" Man ist versucht, nach der letzten Premiere der diesjährigen Salzburger Festspiele ähnlich zu fragen: In Salzburg wurde die Oper „Vanessa" aufgeführt. Warum?

Ihr Komponist, der Amerikaner Samuel Barber, ist gewiß ein Musiker. Es gibt in „Vanessa" Episoden, die aufhorchen lassen; vor allem der erste Gesang Erikas mit seiner schönen, an alte anglikanische Volkslieder gemahnenden Melodik und das Kanon-Quintett kurz vor Schluß, das in seinem schwelgerischen Wohlklang vom Kanon-Quartett des „Fidelio", dem Quintett der „Meistersinger" und dem Terzett des „Rosenkavaliers" angeregt zu sein scheint. Aber Episoden machen noch keine Oper. Und durch Anklänge an das gute Alte entsteht noch nicht das gute Neue. Ueberdies sind, von dem einen Quintett abgesehen, nicht Beethoven und Wagner die Väter von Barbers Musik, sondern weit mehr Richard Strauß und vor allem Puccini. Auch eine in der Pause der Premiere laut gewordene Einschätzung, daß „Vanessa" ohne weiteres ein nachgelassenes Werk Erich Wolfgang Korngolds sein könnte, ist nicht von der Hand zu weisen. Nun schrieb Barber in einer kurzen Einführung zu seiner Oper, daß Musik uns nicht sage, was wir wissen, sondern was wir nicht wissen. Er hat recht: zumindest sollte es so sein. Aber die Musik der „Vanessa" sagt uns nur, was wir schon wissen, was wir bereits von anderen besser gehört haben.

Was uns freilich das Buch erzählt (es stammt von dem auch als Komponisten bekannten Gian Carlo Menotti), das hätten wir lieber nie erfahren. Da wartet Vanessa auf ihrem Landsitz seit zwanzig Jahren auf die Rückkehr ihres Geliebten Anatol. Mit ihr leben ihre Mutter, die alte Baronin, und ihre Nichte Erika. Endlich erscheint ein Anatol, doch es ist der Sohn des inzwischen verstorbenen Geliebten. Tut nichts. In der ersten Nacht schwängert er Erika, in den darauffolgenden Tagen macht er sich an die mehr versprechende Vanessa heran, ehelicht sie und reist mit ihr nach Paris. Nun ist die Reihe, zu warten, an Erika. Wie die Dinge liegen, wird sie wohl nicht zwanzig Jahre warten müssen. Doch möchte ich, was nach der Rückkehr dieses Anatol passieren wird, nicht mehr mit ansehen und mit anhören.

Wie kam nun „Vanessa" nach Salzburg? Es ist in der Nachkriegszeit hier üblich geworden, alljährlich die Uraufführung einer Oper in die Festspiele einzubeziehen. Da die Festspielleitung diesmal kein geeignetes, noch unaufgeführtes Werk fand, hätte sie entweder für einmal auf eine moderne Oper verzichten oder — noch besser — ein schon aufgeführtes, aber für das 20. Jahrhundert repräsentatives Musikdrama wählen können. Im Janecek-Jahr, das heuer gefeiert wird, wäre nicht zuletzt eine Oper dieses bahnbrechenden tschechischen Komponisten die Lösung gewesen. Doch man wählte ein bereits aufgeführtes und mittelmäßiges Werk. Um das Gesicht zu wahren, versprach man wenigstens die „deutschsprachige Uraufführung" der in New York schon gespielten „Vanessa". Der Dirigent Mitropoulos aber verlangte eine englischsprachige Aufführung mit den Solisten und in der Inszenierung der New-Yorker Metropolitan-Oper; andernfalls wolle er nicht mehr in Salzburg dirigieren. Die Festspielleitung hat, als sie diesem Druck nachgab, Salzburgs Gesicht preisgegeben. Hat sie dafür eine gute Aufführung gewonnen?

Hervorragend waren wohl der Dirigent Dimitri Mitropoulos, der, wo es ging, die Partitur im Licht seiner Persönlichkeit glänzen ließ, Rosalind Elias, die mit bestrickend voller Stimme und durchdachtem Spiel die Erika gestaltete, und Giorgio Tozzi, der eine Randfigur der Oper mit seinem Auftreten in den Mittelpunkt der Bühne stellte. Eleanor Steber hingegen konnte in der Titelrolle weder darstellerisch noch stimmlich befriedigen, während der kleine, hübsche Tenor Nicola Geddas gerade noch dem geringen Format des Anatol entsprach. Daß Ira Malaniuk als alte Baronin den größten Teil des Abends stumm auf der Bühne zu sitzen hatte, war ihres schönen Mezzosoprans wegen bedauerlich. Am bedauerlichsten jedoch war die verzopfte Regie, für die Menotti verantwortlich zeichnete. Als Erika die Tür des Landhauses öffnete, um in der Winternacht Selbstmord zu versuchen, während es von draußen Papierschnitzel hereinschneite, ging eine Welle der Heiterkeit durch den Saal.

Dennoch ist, was hier geschah, ernst zu nehmen. Denn zur selben Tür hinausgeworfen erschien das viele Geld, das für „Vanessa" und die Verpflanzung ihrer New-Yorker Aufführung nach Salzburg aufgewendet worden war. Es wurde — ohne jede künstlerische Rechtfertigung — ausgegeben zu einer Zeit, da die Intellektuellen unseres Landes ihre Entschlossenheit bekundeten, zur Durchsetzung der dringendsten Forderungen für die österreichische Kultur auf die Straße zu gehen.

Konzerte im Arkadenhof

Das Niederösterreichische Tonkünstlerorchester setzte die Reihe seiner erfolgreichen Konzerte im Arkadenhof des Wiener Rathauses fort, diesmal geleitet vom routinierten Dirigenten Etti Zimmer. Wie gewöhnlich enthielt das interessante Programm wenig bekannte Werke großer Meister: Schuberts Ouvertüre zum Singspiel „Die Zwillingsbrüder" und Beethovens „Musik zu einem Ritterspiel", ein gar nicht erschröckliches, sondern recht harmloses Jugendwerk des Komponisten. Die zeitgenössische österreichische Musik war durch ein abwechslungsreiches „Divertimento" von Otto Färber vertreten. Nach der Pause erfreute Franz Schmidts schöne 1. Symphonie ein Publikum, das diesmal, des unsicheren Wetters wegen, verhältnismäßig spärlich gekommen war.

M. R.

Das 14. Arkadenhofkonzert bot dem Mitglied des Streicherkörpers der Wiener Symphoniker Erich Rath Gelegenheit, seine Dirigententugenden an der Spitze des gutdisponierten Tonkünstlerorchesters zu erproben. Ein buntes Programm, das neben einer Haydn-Symphonie (Nr. 28) und den zur gehobenen Unterhaltungsmusik zu zählenden Intermezzi von Ernst Paul vor allem in der slawischen Musik (Dworak, Slawische Rhapsodie Nr. 3 und Tschaikowskis Romeo-und-Julia-Ouvertüre) seine reproduktorischen Höhepunkte hatte, wurde von dem jungen Dirigenten sehr stabsicher und mit musikalischer Einfühlung bestens bewältigt.

„Good by, Erika" oder „Vanessa" in altem Plüsch

Die Menotti-Barber-Oper in Salzburg — Ein Publikumserfolg, aber keine Festspieloper

Es ist nicht so, daß der Publikumserfolg ein Gegenwartswerk dem künstlerischen Gewissen verdächtig macht; Liebermanns „Schule der Frauen" hatte im Vorjahr Erfolg, und war wegen seines aparten Stils durchaus am Platz, Egks „Revisor" geht recht persönliche Wege und gefällt sehr — um nur zwei Werke der letzten Spielzeit zu nennen. Samuel Barbers Erfolg mit der Oper „Vanessa" aber ist für den Opernspielplan des Alltags recht erfreulich, als Aussage der Gegenwartsmusik, des Gegenwartstheaters ganz belanglos. Hätte man Giordanos „Fedora" aufgeführt, wäre der künstlerische Ertrag nicht geringer — das aber scheut man sich, zu tun; Puccini wird in Salzburg noch nicht gespielt, aber dessen Vorzugsschüler im Opernstil, Barber. Weil er in Amerika großen Erfolg hat? „Vanessa" war für Salzburg schon angenommen, bevor die Aufführung der New-Yorker Metropolitan Opera stattfand. Man muß sich vor Bosheiten hüten, die den Blick trüben, die in Salzburg üppig wuchern, und die sagen, daß damit Karajan Verbindung zur „Met" suche, daß damit der Dank für Care-Pakete abgestattet werde... Nein, Karajan und Mitropoulos, die beide in Salzburg intensiv arbeiten, legen ihr volles künstlerisches Gewicht in eine Puccini-Entstaubung in New York ebenso wie in Wien. Vielleicht wollen sie mit Barber wirklich die Puccini-Art fördern und in das weite Hörfeld Salzburgs setzen. Jedenfalls hat das Ereignis wie die Oper „Vanessa" selbst vier Teile: die grundsätzliche Einstufung, Menotti, Barber und die „Met".

Beginnen wir mit Menotti. Für seine selbstkomponierten Opern hat Menotti interessante, witzige oder tragische Stoffe, denken wir an „Konsul", an „Medium", an „Amelia geht auf den Ball", an „Amahal"... dazu schrieb er teils banale, teils recht mitreißende, meist persönlich redende Musik. Diesmal gab er den Text weiter — Selbstverleugnung seltener Art für einen Komponisten. Es ist ein handfester Theatertext, der seelisch nur primitive Anteilnahme ermöglicht.

Barber hat diese Geschichte interessiert, er hat dazu Musik geschrieben; dem Leid gab er viel Harfen- und Holzbläserbegleitung, dramatischer Auseinandersetung mehr Blech — er weiß genau, was sich in der Oper gehört, obwohl es seine erste Oper ist. Er hat schon geschmackvolle Orchesterwerke geschrieben, ist in der Instrumentation Meister. Das Opernhandwerk lernte er bei den Italienern, am erfolgreichsten eben bei Puccini. Das ergibt stimmungsvolle Untermalung der Vorgänge mit etwas mehr Süße und Schmalz als beim Vorbild, das ergibt den Versuch von Arien und Duetten, etwas weniger zwingend in der melodischen Erfindung als das Vorbild; das ergibt wirkliche Sangbarkeit, Effekt, Mischung von vielen Farben des Ausdrucks, mehr schmerzliche als heitere und freudige. Man hört zu und läßt sich musikalisch angenehm berieseln, kann auf nichts bös sein, sehnt sich aber in all dem Schlagobers nach einem Stück Schwarzbrot.

Das Duett etwa Vanessa-Anatol beginnt zu packen, gleich aber meldet sich das Gedenken an viele Duette von „Tosca" bis „Andrea Chenier". Die Sopranduette in ihrer aparten Wirkung kennen wir von Richard Strauss. Es gab Szenenapplaus, es gab viel Schlußapplaus, breite Schichten des Opernpublikums werden von „Vanessa" nicht nur patriotisch in Amerika erfreut werden, sondern auch hier in Europa. Erfreulich für den Spielplan, der ja täglich etwas bieten soll. Da aber in Salzburg nicht eine Mustermesse für Marktware ist, ist „Vanessa" fehl am Platz. Wenn man nicht „Tosca" und „Fedora" spielen will, darf man auch nicht „Vanessa" bieten, die nicht den geringsten Anspruch auf Gegenwartsaussage hat oder festliche Größe mit überkommenen Mitteln erzielt. Wer weiß, daß Zweig-Strauss' „Schweigsame Frau" noch auf eine Festspielmusteraufführung harrt, wird schamrot.

Mitropoulos hat sich der Aufführung wie in New York mit herzlichster Intensität angenommen, die Wiener Philharmoniker unterstützten ihn mit üppiger Klangpracht und mit subtilen Einzelstimmen. Leider sind Regie und Bühnenbild von noch älteren Ahnen als die Musik. Die Atmosphäre verstaubter Schlösser und verstaubter Gefühle mag getroffen sein, aber die Häßlichkeit dieser ins kleinste naturalistische Detail gehenden Mischung von Gotik und Plüsch ist unerträglich. Nicht minder die Überdeutlichkeit der Regie, die jede Gefühlsregung unerbittlich mit Händen und Füßen deutlich macht, wie den Schnee, der ins Zimmer weht. Zu Gregors Zeiten — vor dem ersten Weltkrieg also — inszenierte man so „Das Mädchen aus dem Goldenen Westen" in der Wiener Staatsoper. Soweit ist anscheinend jetzt die „Met". Dieses berühmte Institut war ja immer mehr eine Sängeroper. Sänger hat sie hier auch glücklich zu bieten. Eleonor Steber etwa, die etwas kühl, aber technisch sehr geschult, ihre lyrischen und dramatischen Höhepunkte nützt. Dann den jungen, blühenden, herzlichen Sopran Rosalind Elias, die der Erika Wärme und glaubhaftes Leid gibt. Ira Malaniuk stellt Wien bei, sie hat viel Gelegenheit, beobachtend zu sitzen und entsetzt abzuhumpeln, sie hat aber nicht viel Singgelegenheit; am meisten im Schlußquintett; da klingt ihr Singen zauberhaft bindend. Nicolai Geddas schöner, schlanker Tenor bedurfte keiner großen Emotion, ausgeglichen gibt er dem siegreichen Verführer das Belkanto, das in der Oper traditionell den Charakter ersetzt. Und da ist noch eine ziemlich überflüssige Gestalt, die einmal alte Tänze zur Unterhaltung aufwärmt, dann den Betrunkenen im Ballsaal erheiternd mimen muß und schließlich sentimental Abschied nehmen darf: der Hausarzt. Der wird von einem außerordentlichen Sänger gestaltet, von Giorgio Tozzi, dessen Bekanntschaft eine „Vanessa" wert ist. Diese fünf Stimmen vereinigten sich vorbildlich schön im opernhaften Höhepunkt, im Quintett.

„Vanessa" im gastfreundlichen Festspielhaus

EUROPÄISCHE OPERN-ERSTAUFFÜHRUNG IN DER NEW YORKER MET-INSZENIERUNG

Wieviel Kontroversen — beileibe nicht auf Salzburg beschränkt — sind diesem Gastspiel einer amerikanischen Oper vorausgegangen! Da nun die Premiere in Salzburg vorüber ist, stellt man fest: Es war viel Lärm um nichts. Das Publikum hat Beifall gespendet — den Sängerstars, dem Dirigenten, dem Komponisten. Und es klatschten durchaus nicht nur die vielen Amerikaner im Saal; die Korrespondenten der USA-Blätter (Musikkritiker waren nicht darunter, sie hatten die Oper ja schon im Jänner in New York gehört) mochten sich forschend umsehen, wie sie wollten, das Publikum applaudierte recht ausdauernd und tat es darin dem Hausherrn Herbert v. Karajan gleich. „Vanessa"-Komponist Samuel Barber kann also zufrieden sein.

Dem Publikum wurde tatsächlich kaum ein Anlaß zum befürchteten Protest gegeben. Zeitgenössische Oper — Problemoper? Samuel Barber, 1910 geboren, ist Zeitgenosse, aber diese seine erste Oper „Vanessa" stellt musikalisch keine Probleme. Musik der guten alten Art tönte durchs Festspielhaus, klangvolle Musik, für die Barber mit vorzüglichem Geschmack die Themen ausgewählt hat. Die originalen oder abgewandelten Zitate reichen von Beethoven über Wagner und Puccini bis zu Strauss und darüber hinaus, und sie sind alle mit dem Respekt behandelt, der großen Berufskollegen gebührt. Die Achtung für solche Vorbilder, von fernem Kontinent als Widerhall herüberklingend, freut den Europäer. Barber hat dazu eine bedeutende eigene Kunst des Instrumentierens, des kompliziert-effektvollen Verflechtens von Melodien, Harmonien und Rhythmen unter Beweis gestellt, entsprechend seinem Grundsatz, sich „jeder Technik ganz nach Belieben zu bedienen, unter Ausnutzung aller Möglichkeiten des modernen Orchesters". Die Frage nach dem Stil der „Vanessa" hat Barber selbst abgetan, indem er Thornton Wilder zitierte: „Stil ist nur das fast unwürdige Gefäß, in dem der bittere Saft der Welt empfohlen wird."

Gar kein Grund also, sich der Musik wegen zu erregen! Manch einen Grund aber böte das Libretto von Gian-Carlo Menotti. Er wollte — so ist zu vermuten — das ewigmenschliche Problem der Liebe erforschen helfen und erfand dazu ausgerechnet zwei Frauenschicksale, die wenig glaubhaft erscheinen. Vanessa, eine Dame „von großer Schönheit" (und beträchtlicher Reife) erwartet in ihrem weltfernen Landhaus nach zwanzig Jahren die Rückkehr ihres geliebten Anatol, doch kommt dessen junger Sohn gleichen Namens und verführt noch in selbiger Nacht Vanessas junge Nichte Erika. Er ist dann auch zur Heirat bereit, aber Erika verzichtet, die Flüchtigkeit seiner Gefühle erkennend — und auch aus Liebe zur Tante, als deren „Schatten" sie sich fühlt: Vanessa nämlich verjüngt sich in der Leidenschaft für Anatol den Jüngeren... und verlobt sich mit ihm. „Sein Kind soll nicht geboren werden", sagt Erika und wankt in den Schneesturm hinaus. Sie wird im blutgetränkten Gewand, anscheinend verletzt, geborgen und heimgebracht. Der Großmutter gesteht sie, was geschah, der Tante aber verschweigt sie es liebend und läßt Vanessa mit Anatol dem dunklen Landhaus entfliehen, hinaus in die heitere Welt. Ihr Los ist es nun, zu warten... Worauf? Wir wissen es nicht.

Wohl aber wissen wir, daß man in Salzburgs Festspielhaus noch keine Handlung von so grob naturalistischer Eindeutigkeit sah. Textautor Menotti nahm sich kein Blättchen vor den Mund. Und da er auch als Regisseur wirkte, lassen Bühnenbild und Spiel — getreu von der Metropolitan übernommen — an Naturalismus ebensowenig zu wünschen übrig. Falls irgend jemand solches wünschen sollte. (By the way konnte Erikas Gewand nicht vor der Premiere in Salzburg chemisch gereinigt werden, wenn schon in New York keine Möglichkeit dazu bestand?) Die Regieführung ist denkbar altmodisch, Vanessa zeigt sich als pathetische Heroine, Erika schlägt mit den Fäusten aufs Sofakissen, alles im Stil der Courths-Mahler-Blütezeit; Anatol hat es zwischen diesen armen Damen nicht leicht, leichtherzig zu bleiben. Vom „Konsul" her meinten wir Menotti, der immer schon sein eigener Librettist war, jetzt aber zum erstenmal für einen anderen das Libretto schrieb, anders und besser zu kennen. Er hat unseres Erachtens Samuel Barber in dieser Sache keinen Freundschaftsdienst erwiesen.

Die Peinlichkeit der Story wird nicht geringer, wenn man auf die beabsichtigten Parallelen zu „Arabella" hinweist, denn bei „Vanessa" ist fast alles ins Pathologische verzerrt. Zwanzig Jahre lang wartet Vanessa auf den Richtigen und nimmt dann in Torschlußpanik mit dem Falschen vorlieb; kaum einen Akt lang wartet Zdenka-Erika, eh' sie sich hingibt, sie weiß schon im zweiten Akt, daß dieser Anatol nicht der Richtige ist, und setzt sich dann doch zum bitteren Ende resigniert in Vanessas freigewordenen Sessel, um zu warten. Belastet ist Anatol, dem von jung auf der Name Vanessa „like a burning flame" in der Seele brannte. Warte-Komplex, Namenskomplex, Tantenkomplex... Einzig normal erscheint Erikas Oma, die aktelang grantig und schweigsam ist, dann aber in gerechtem Grimm auf den Tisch haut, als sie von der bleich im Alkovenbett liegenden Erika erfährt, Anatols Kind werde nicht geboren. — Wie wenig gastfreundlich Vanessa übrigens zu Opernbeginn ist! Sie möchte den jungen Mann, weil er nicht der Erwartete ist, aus dem Hause weisen. Die unerfahrene Erika erweist ihm, der sich schmeichlerisch aufdrängt, die an sich löbliche Gastfreundschaft und mehr. Wehmütiger Gedanke: Das ganze Malheur wäre nicht passiert, wär's bei der Abweisung geblieben!

Wie immer — Barbers Musik hat manche Peinlichkeit verwischt, denn sie unternimmt keine Deutung der Charaktere, und den englisch gesungenen Text kann man nicht so wortwörtlich verstehen. Reuig sei jede Klage zurückgenommen, daß Salzburg um die deutschsprachige Uraufführung des Werkes kam. (Am Rande sei vermerkt, daß die ersten Worte der Oper weder deutsch noch englisch, sondern französisch sind; sie lauten: „Potage crème aux perles" und betreffen eine Menu-Anweisung.) Die dramatisch wichtigen, tragischen Aufschreie der Tante, der Nichte und der Oma versteht man leicht. Der kunstreich durchkomponierte fünfstimmige Schlußkanon enthält eine philosophische Betrachtung über das Wesen der Liebe, Menotti ist also Realist und Poet dazu, letzteres jedoch nur ausnahmsweise.

Ein großer Gewinn der Aufführung lag in der Bekanntschaft, die man mit New Yorker Sängern machen durfte. Rosalind Elias sah als junge Erika charmant aus, und sie ist mit einem wundervoll kultivierten, in jeder Lage raumfüllenden, biegsamen Sopran begabt, Eleanor Steber besitzt als Vanessa die gehörige Reife und eine Stimme, die erstaunlich zur Höhe und in ungewöhnliche Tiefen führt, nach schwieriger Vorschrift. Giorgio Tozzi mimt einen guten Onkel Doktor liebenswert, lebendig und intelligent im Spiel, mit prächtig klingendem Bariton. Die anderen sind hier gut bekannt: Ira Malaniuk (Vanessas energische Mutter) und Tenor Nicolai Gedda (ein eleganter Anatol). Sie konnten alle ihren Gesang in großen, wohlgestalteten Arien frei verströmen lassen. Erikas Song „Must the winter come so soon" und Vanessas strophisches Liebeslied mit dem Refrain „I have waited for you" werden ganz gewiß die Schallplatten-Runde machen. — Daß Dimitri Mitropoulos die Sänger und die ihm willig durch alle Komplikationen folgenden Wiener Philharmoniker mit vollem Einsatz seiner starken Persönlichkeit führte, trug wesentlich zum Erfolg der Aufführung bei, an dem auch Chor und Ballett der Wiener Staatsoper und Kräfte des Mozarteum-Orchesters (Bühnenmusik) Anteil hatten.

Von unseren Bildern zeigt das rechts oben die Trägerin der Titelpartie, Eleanor Steber, mit Nicolai Gedda, der den Anatol verkörpert. — Nebenstehendes Bild veranschaulicht von links nach rechts: Rosalind Elias (Erika, Vanessas Nichte), Ira Malanjuk, der über weite Strecken der Oper lediglich eine stumm-dekorative Aufgabe als „alte Baronin" und Vanessas Mutter zufällt, und Giorgio Tozzi, der als „alter Doktor" eine erfreuliche Erscheinung innerhalb der Aufführung bildet.

Salzburger Festspiele 1958:

Alte Oper aus der neuen Welt

Zur europäischen Erstaufführung von Samuel Barbers „Vanessa"

Kein Ereignis der Salzburger Festspiele hat bis jetzt so viel Staub aufgewirbelt wie die europäische Erstaufführung von Samuel Barbers Oper „Vanessa" im Festspielhaus am vergangenen Samstag — zugleich die letzte Opernpremière des Festivals. Als man vor etlichen Jahren die Einbeziehung des zeitgenössischen Opernschaffens in das Festspielprogramm beschloß, mußte man sich darüber im Klaren sein, mit dieser Neuerung einen entscheidenden Einbruch in die programmatische Struktur der Festspiele gewagt zu haben. Man dachte natürlich primär an Uraufführungen und erhoffte wohl auch durch die gebotene, ehrenvolle Chance, im ehrwürdigen und durch beste musikalische Traditionen geadelten Salzburg zu Wort zu kommen, dem zeitgenössischen Opernschaffen einen mächtigen Impuls zu geben.

Nun, die zeitgenössische Musik ist gerade auf dem Gebiet der Oper bis jetzt nur mit ganz wenigen authentischen Werken hervorgetreten, und auch die bisherigen Salzburger Uraufführungen erzielten de facto lediglich Achtungserfolge. Heuer jedoch gab es keine Ur- sondern bloß eine europäische Erstaufführung, und über diese vermeintliche Degradierung erhitzten sich die Gemüter gewiß allzu sehr, denn es ist kaum anzunehmen, daß dadurch die Uraufführung eines epochemachenden Werkes verhindert wurde! Samuel Barber hat es aber auch wirklich nicht leicht, die zeitgenössischen Musikpäpste von der Größe seiner Begabung und seines Könnens zu überzeugen: er komponiert tonal und ist Amerikaner. Ein bisserl viel auf einmal! Und dennoch: allen Dogmatikern, die die zeitgenössische Musik nur insoweit gelten lassen, als sie in ein, besser: in ihr System paßt oder irgend einen „Fortschritt" repräsentiert, zum Trotz: der berühmte amerikanische Komponist hat ein entscheidendes Anrecht darauf, als ein markanter Komponist unserer Zeit angesehen zu werden. Seine „Vanessa" ist eines der ganz wenigen Opernwerke unserer Tage, die nach menschlichem Ermessen eine reelle Chance haben, sich auch beim breiteren Publikum durchzusetzen.

Eine schlichte Oper, nicht mehr, nicht weniger. Kein überwiegend zynisches Wühlen in pseudopsychologischen, meist nihilistischen Abgründen; kein Weltanschauungsdrama, keine Flucht in die äußerlich übernommene Stilisierung vergangener Epochen. Das Libretto — es stammt von Gian-Carlo Menotti — erklimmt, weiß Gott, keine gedanklichen Spitzenhöhen, sondern begnügt sich, wie „Tosca", „La Bohème" oder „La Traviata", mit einem durchaus vordergründigen, aber dramatisch eminent wirksamen Bühnenrealismus. Etwas extravagant — Vanessa heiratet schließlich mit Anatol, dem gleichnamigen Sohn ihres zwanzig Jahre lang sehnlichst erwarteten und inzwischen verstorbenen Geliebten, einen wesentlich jüngeren Mann — und makaber — Vanessas Nichte Erika war in der Nacht nach der Ankunft Anatols von diesem verführt worden, „Anatols Kind aber wird nicht zur Welt kommen". § 144 erstmals auf der Opernbühne! —, im ganzen aber von gediegener Faktur und konzisem dramatischem Aufbau.

Eine Synthese aus Puccini und dem expressionistischen Schönberg könnte man Barbers Musik nennen. „Der Stil, die Absicht von ‚Vanessa'? Gestalten, die mir lieb sind, ihre Stimmen frei verströmen zu lassen, mich jeder Technik ganz nach meinem Belieben zu bedienen, unter Ausnutzung aller Möglichkeiten des modernen Orchesters. Ich gehe von keinem soziologischen Standpunkt aus. Musik ist Musik: sie ist keine Funktion der Gesellschaft. Sie sagt uns nicht, was wir wissen, sondern, was wir nicht wissen: sie ist nicht allgemeines Wissen, sondern besonderes." In dieser vom Komponisten selbst stammenden Erläuterung ist das stilistische Wesen des Werkes mit aller erdenklichen Klarheit ausgedrückt. Barbers Musik hat dramatischen Impetus, psychologische Folgerichtigkeit; sie paßt sich dem Handlungsablauf jeweils genau an und bringt — wie in den glanzvollen Zeiten des Verismo — die Gefühle der Akteure mit effektvoller Übersteigerung und symphonischer Bravour zum Ausdruck. Barber arbeitet nicht mit symphonischen Leitmotiven, die bekanntlich auch in Puccinis Opern eine wichtige Rolle spielen, sondern nur mit kurzen Erinnerungsmotiven, die aber die Struktur der Musik nicht beeinflussen. Die Singstimmen haben ihr vokales und deklamatorisches Eigenleben und werden keineswegs vom anspruchsvollen und reich differenzierten Orchesterpart an die Wand gespielt. Das monothematische, leicht imitatorische Schlußquintett ist die eindrucksvollste Vokalnummer des Werkes, als sein bestes Orchesterstück sei das espressive, elementar gesteigerte Vorspiel zur zweiten Szene des vierten Aktes genannt. Hinsichtlich der Plastik des melodischen Einfalls an sich kann Barber gewiß nicht neben seinen erlauchten Vorbildern bestehen, dennoch enthält das Werk etliche Stellen, die schon nach dem ersten Anhören in der Erinnerung haften geblieben sind. Uns beeindruckt an dem Werk vor allem seine frische Unbekümmertheit, seine gänzlich ungekünstelte und unverkrampfte Rhetorik, das vollständige Fehlen einer intellektuell-stilistischen Determinierung, kurzum: die Vitalität seiner musikalischen Struktur.

Die Aufführung in englischer Sprache hatte festlichen Glanz und geziemendes Niveau. Eleanor Steber brillierte als Titelheldin und bot eine ausgewogene, abgerundete Leistung von großer Ausdruckskraft und dramatischer Leidenschaftlichkeit; stimmlich gingen bei ihr, vor allem in der Höhe, leider nicht mehr alle Wünsche in Erfüllung, wohl aber bei Rosalind Elias, die, mit einem fülligen, ausdrucksgesättigten, dramatischen Mezzo begabt, aus der nicht sonderlich dankbaren Rolle der Erika ein Optimum an Wirkung herausholte. Ira Malaniuk (Baronin) hatte große, eindrucksvolle Momente im Darstellerischen — stimmlich ereignet sich in dieser Rolle nichts von irgend welcher Bedeutung. Die stockgestützte, alte Dame schweigt zu Vanessas Tun mit fatalistischer, geradezu metaphysischer Beharrlichkeit; tenorale Grandezza und routiniertes Spiel zeichneten Nicolai Geddas Anatol aus. Giorgio Tozzi, ein Bariton von wahrhaft internationalem Format, gab den alten Doktor mit der Distinktion eines verstehenden, lebenserfahrenen alten Freundes des Hauses.

Man sah das Werk in der Inszenierung der Metropolitan Opera, New York, von Gian-Carlo Menotti. (Regie: Nathaniel C. Merrill, Bühnenbild und Kostüme: Cecil Beaton.) Alles durchaus konventionell, im Optischen oftmals geradezu „altväterisch", aber stets von starker Wirksamkeit und dramatischer Überzeugungskraft. Am Pult stand Dimitri Mitropoulos, der das musikalisch dankbare Werk mit schlackenreiner Meisterschaft und begeisterter Impulsivität dirigierte. Chor und Ballett stellte die Wiener Staatsoper; die Wiener Philharmoniker gaben ihr Bestes.

Samuel Barber wurde im Kreise seiner illustren Helfer stürmisch gefeiert.

Im Salzburger Festspielhaus: Europäische Erstaufführung der Oper „Vanessa" von Samuel Barber durch Mitropoulos

(Von unserem nach Salzburg entsandten Kulturredakteur Herbert Schneiber)

Samstag abend ist im Festspielhaus zu Salzburg die europäische Erstaufführung der Barber-Oper „Vanessa" mit allen Anzeichen eines außerordentlichen Nicht-Erfolges vor sich gegangen. Das an der „Met" uraufgeführte Werk, gegen dessen normale Verfrachtung in den Spielplan, in die Repertoiresaison irgend eines Theaters gewiß nichts einzuwenden gewesen wäre, hat den anspruchsvollen Rahmen und die verpflichtende Umgebung, die ihm großmütige Gönner und kurzsichtige Freunde mit der Europapremiere in Salzburg gegeben haben, nur schlecht vertragen und sich an den Festspielen grimmig gerächt. Und der Eindruck der „Met"-Aufführung war eher ehrlich denn faszinierend-ehrlich, vor allem insoferne, als die Vorstellung nicht zuletzt szenisch solche Mängel aufwies, daß von einem Kaschieren der Schwächen des Stückes nicht die Rede sein konnte. Die halbe Novität dieses Festspielsommers war somit die schwächste seit 1947, das Echo deprimierend gerecht — mochten auch die Amerikaner unter den Besuchern sich redlich Mühe geben, das patriotische Fest bei der Uraufführung in der „Met" zu wiederholen, mochte auch der weltweite Freundeskreis des Autorenpaares Barber-Menotti wohltemperierten Beifall spenden.

Das Unglück, das mit Barbers Musik nach rund drei Stunden endet, fängt schon bei Gian-Carlo Menottis Buch an. Der bekannte Komponist und nicht minder routinierte Librettist demonstriert an der „Vanessa" vier Akte lang eine staunenswerte schöpferische Pause — auch in dem Sinn, daß die wenigen (ausschließlich unmotivierten) Handlungsmomente in die Zeit des Umbaus, also hinter die Szene, verlegt sind, die ihrerseits voll Atmosphäre zu sein hat oder solches doch vortäuschen will. Zudem läßt sich nicht leugnen, daß Menottis Vorstellungen von den Beziehungen zwischen den Geschlechtern, wie er sie in dieser in einem nordischen Landhaus stationierten Steh- und Sitzballade vorführt, zumindest sehr eigenwillig sind. Eine knappe Inhaltsskizzierung diene als Beweis dafür.

Vanessa, eine nicht mehr junge, in der Salzburger Aufführung betont matronenhafte Frau, erwartet ihren Geliebten, den sie seit 20 Jahren nicht mehr gesehen hat. Doch nicht Anatol kommt, sondern dessen Sohn, der ebenso heißt, aber Vanessa mit seinem unvermuteten Anblick vorerst in die Flucht schlägt. Erika, Vanessas junge hübsche Nichte, erfährt von Anatol, daß sein Vater tot, und sie erfährt, nachdem der Vorhang gefallen ist, noch mehr von ihm in dieser stürmischen Winternacht. Dessenungeachtet macht Anatol anderntags Tante Vanessa, die vom jähen Glück der Nichte bis zum Ende des Stückes nichts weiß, schöne Augen, ja er verlobt sich mit der nicht mehr ganz knusprigen Vanessa, was mit der gleichaltrigen Erika zu tun er knapp zuvor aus prinzipiellen Gründen verweigert hat.

Ein Mitgiftjäger? Mitnichten, Vanessa überläßt nach ihrer Hochzeit mit Anatol das Landhaus ihrer Nichte. Die freilich fällt schon vorher, bei der Bekanntgabe von Vanessas Verlobung und wegen des Kindes, das sie erwartet, in Ohnmacht. Ein Selbstmordversuch bringt die Rettung: Erika stürzt zum Aktschluß in die kalte Winternacht hinaus, wird aber im nächsten Bild gesund geborgen und bekennt ihrer die Bühne entlang schweigenden Großmutter, daß sie nunmehr Anatols

„VANESSA": Rosalind Elias (Erika), Ira Malaniuk (die alte Baronin, Vanessas Mutter) und Giorgio Tozzi (der alte Doktor und Freund des Hauses) in der Samstag in Salzburg erstaufgeführten Barber-Oper nach dem Libretto Menottis

Kind nicht zur Welt zu bringen brauche (wie begonnen, so zerronnen, und alles hinterm Vorhang!). Zuletzt bleibt Erika mit der humpelnden oder sitzenden, nur einmal zu einem Quintett gebetenen Großmutter allein zurück und wartet wie weiland Vanessa bei verhängten Spiegeln auf einen neuen Librettisten. Und Baronin Großmutter schweigt, wie sie es zu Anfang tat. Sie ist böse, und das mit Recht.

Nun denn: So stell' ich mir die Liebe vor. Das hat ka Ibsen dicht, das hat ka Schnitzler gschriebn, ist von kan Hofmannsthal, von kan Genie. Das ist einfach sinnlos, degoutant, ohne Anmut und sehr langweilig. Und Barbers geschickt gearbeitete Musik, deren motivische Verwandtschaften auch innerhalb der eigenen Einfälle ebenso leicht erkennbar sind wie die Spuren einer reichen Vergangenheit, ist für dieses Dunkel nicht licht genug. Vor allem fehlt ihr das Licht der Persönlichkeit, der individuellen Gestaltungskraft.

Vor 70 Jahren wäre diese Musik revolutionär gewesen und Barber heute als Vorläufer von Puccini, Debussy, Strauss und Strawinsky zu preisen. So präsentiert er sich als Sammler, als Herausgeber einer klingenden Anthologie, die mit einigen Gramm Korngold leicht aufzuwiegen ist. Die rhythmische Heftigkeit bei dramatischen Auftritten gelingt Barber genauso unverbindlich wie die lyrische Aussage, derer sich die Sänger erfreuen dürfen; die Solo-Arie und das Rezitativ haben in der durchkomponierten Oper gegenüber großen Ensembles eindeutig den Vorrang. Besonders im Ohr bleibt die „Petruschka"-Musik vor dem Volkstanz im Ballsaal und die an den „Wozzeck" angelehnte Tanzszene danach. Barbers musikalische Literaturkenntnis verdient um so mehr Bewunderung, als Amerika ja nicht unbedingt ein Land der Oper ist.

Die Aufführung bewies, daß auch in Amerikas größtem Operninstitut mit warmem Wasser gekocht wird. Vor Tagen erst erklärte Rudolf Bing, der Inszenierungsstil der „Met" sei kaum veralteter als der großer europäischer Opernhäuser. Bing irrt. Eine Vorstellung, in der der Naturalismus mehrmals zur Lächerlichkeit wird, wie in der „Vanessa", ist hier doch kaum möglich. Menotti und Bühnenbildner Cecile Beaton konnten sich der Genauigkeit dort, wo sie nicht nötig war, gar nicht genugtun, sei es mit Fensterblumen, Schneeflocken in Persilpaketgröße, Pferdeschellen und Stehleitern, sei es in der gesamten realistischen Nachbildung der geschmacklosen Interieurs von 1905. Dafür war der Autor-Regisseur unpräzise in der Führung der Personen und gedankenlos beim Kostümwechsel, wenn zwischen zwei Akten nur eine halbe Stunde Zeit verstreicht, wie zwischen dem dritten und dem vierten.

Altes Theater spielen auch die Sängerinnen: die in der Erscheinung doch sehr abendfüllende Eleanor Steber als Vanessa, deren Organ in den zwanzig Jahren Wartezeit hörbar gelitten hat, und die nicht minder arg chargierende, dafür aber eindrucksvoll singende Rosalind Elias als Erika. Nicola Gedda singt den Anatol und versucht eine Charakterstudie am untauglichen Objekt, Giorgio Tozzi entwickelt in der kaum zum Spiel gehörigen und darum einzig gelungenen Figur eines alten Landarztes bemerkenswerte stimmliche und darstellerische Gaben. Ira Malaniuk gibt Menottis Ahnfrau, die schweigsame Baronin, Alois Pernerstorfer und Norman Foster wirken ebenfalls mit.

Der Dirigent der Aufführung ist Dimitri Mitropoulos. Man hat selten einen so herrlichen Musiker eine so wenig herrliche Musik dirigieren gehört. Die Philharmoniker spielten die Melange von Strauss bis Strawinsky so, als ob sie jeden im Original vor sich gehabt hätten.

Die letzte Premiere der Salzburger Festspiele: „Vanessa“

Die Geschichte von Anatol und seinen Frauen Menotti und Barber lieferten Opernschnulze

Von unserem nach Salzburg entsandten Kulturredakteur Karl Löbl

Der gesellschaftliche und kulturpolitische Höhepunkt der Salzburger Festspiele war auch heuer wieder, wie alljährlich, die Premiere der „modernen“ Oper, was nun nicht heißen soll, daß Salzburgs Festspieltouristen allzu avantgardistische Ambitionen hätten. (Da wären sie ja avantgardistischer als die Festspiele selbst, und die müssen und sollen es in dieser Stadt gar nicht sein.) Aber bei der „modernen“ Premiere gibt sich jedes Jahr alles, was in der Kunstwelt Rang und Namen hat und zu haben behauptet, Rendezvous, und deshalb ist gerade dieses Publikum nicht durch einen Zufall (lies: Fahrplan), sondern durch ein gemeinsames Interesse zusammengeführt. Schon allein deswegen — so snobistisch das klingen mag — sollte man unbedingt die Tradition, während des Salzburger Sommers auch die Produktion eines neuen Opernwerkes zu zeigen, beibehalten. Denn der propagandistische Erfolg dieser Ur- oder Erstaufführung stellt sich auch ein, wenn der künstlerische einmal ausbleiben sollte. Wie etwa heuer. Aber man kann ja schließlich nicht jedes Jahr ein Meisterwerk entdecken (wenn man in Salzburg auch schon länger auf ein solches wartet, sind vielleicht obrigkeitliche Spürnasen daran schuld, wer weiß?).

Schon bei der Generalprobe hatte sich der Zustrom der modernistischen Fans angekündigt, und bei der Premiere, die Samstag abend im Festspielhaus stattfand, sah man alles, was Rang und Bedeutung hat: Vertreter vieler europäischer Rundfunkstationen, Opernchefs (mit „Met“-Direktor Bing an der Spitze), Komponisten, Künstler, ein Heer von in- und ausländischen Kritikern. Ihnen allen wurde als europäische Erstaufführung eine amerikanische Oper namens „Vanessa“ vorgeführt. Ein Stück, das am 15. Jänner dieses Jahres in der New-Yorker Metropolitan Opera seine Uraufführung erlebte, und das hier in Salzburg nunmehr in der gleichen Ausstattung, Inszenierung und Hauptrollenbesetzung (in englischer Sprache) dreimal zu sehen ist. Der Theaterzettel nennt als Komponisten Samuel Barber, der damit sein erstes Opernwerk schuf, und als Librettisten dessen Kollegen Gian-Carlo Menotti, hier bisher nur als Komponist bekannt, der auch für die Inszenierung verantwortlich zeichnet.

Man sitzt also im Zuschauerraum in Erwartung einer — na, sagen wir: zeitgenössischen Oper, und dann ereignet sich folgendes:

Der Vorhang öffnet sich und gibt den Blick auf ein trüb erleuchtetes, vollgeräumtes Zimmer frei. Vor den Fenstern rieselnde Schneeflocken, auf der Bühne gotisch umrahmter Plüsch. Es riecht nach Strindberg und klingt nach heftig erregtem Puccini in einer d'Albert-Bearbeitung. Drei Damen sind im weiten Raum, alle sehr vornehm, was darin zum Ausdruck kommt, daß der Kammerdiener soeben ein Menü diktiert bekommt, in dem es nur so wimmelt von komplizierten französischen Leckereien. Die eine der drei Damen ist jung, hübsch und zart besaitet; sie heißt Erika, und der Zuschauer empfindet für sie sofort Sympathie. Ihre Tante gibt sich hektisch bis zur Hysterie und heißt Vanessa, ihre Großmutter heißt laut Programm gar nicht nur Baronin, und schweigt, was nicht auffällt, da die anderen beide genug reden. Man erfährt, daß Vanessa seit zwanzig Jahren auf einen Herrn namens Anatol wartet, der spätestens hier wird es dem Betrachter klar, daß Komplikationen eintreten werden, denn man ist im Jahr 1905 (in Skandinavien), und da hat solch ein Name auch bei Menottis wohl etwas zu bedeuten. Wegen der langen Wartezeit ist es wohl auch so duster auf der Bühne — Spiegel und Bilder sind verhängt, das Licht ist trüb. Bald hört man vor dem Haus muntere Glöckchen klingen, es ist ein Schlitten, er bringt just jetzt, wo das Publikum zusieht, den heiß Ersehnten, alle gehen diskret ab, um Vanessas Monolog nicht hören zu müssen, den sie mit dem Rücken zur Tür spricht oder singt. Dort ist inzwischen ein junger Mann eingetreten, ein geckenhaft gespreiztes Bürschchen — der Betrachter taxiert gleich: viel zu jung, doch Vanessa kann ihn ja nicht sehen, die gesteht ihm ihre unverändert heftige Liebe im Ton der Selbstanklage, dann dreht sie sich um, schreit laut (sogar sehr) und geht erregt ab, nicht ohne vorher ihre Nichte Erika zu Hilfe gerufen zu haben. Es ist nicht der Erwartete. Es ist, was er mit Tenorstimme gleich kundtut, dessen Sohn, der mal sehen wollte, mit wem es der Herr Papa seinerzeit so toll getrieben hat, denn er sprach immer von einer Dame namens Vanessa, der Papa, und jetzt ist er tot. Erika weist ihm zwar die Tür, aber draußen ist es kalt, und weil die Autoren mehr für die Wärme sind, bleibt Anatol da und verführt schnell, nach ein paar Schlucken auserlesenem Rotwein, das junge Ding, was Anno 1905 im hohen Norden offenbar zum guten Ton gehört haben muß.

Die Verführung bleibt dem Betrachter erspart, er erfährt Details erst im zweiten Akt, von Erika selbst, die schon Spuren künftigen Unheils trägt. Denn Anatol will sie zwar heiraten, aber, wie sie meint, nur als Ehrenmann und nicht aus Liebe. Sie will aber auf die große Liebe warten. So lange hat der Herr nicht Zeit, deshalb wendet er sich der anderen Dame zu, die zwar gut und gern seine Mutter sein könnte, aber das stört auch die Autoren nicht, warum soll's ihn also bekümmern. Bei munterem Getändel, an dem sich auch der fesche Hausarzt beteiligt, ist's bald klar: Erika wird sich anstrengen müssen.

Sie strengt sich aber nicht an. Deshalb wird nach der Pause, im dritten Akt, bei Ziehharmonikamusik die Verlobung Vanessas mit Anatol publiziert, auf einem gar prächtigen Ball, an dessen Klängen auch Richard Strauss seine helle Freude gehabt hätte. Erika kommt über eine Treppe herab, gesteht dem Publikum, daß sie ein Kind erwartet, und tut das, was ihrer Kollegin Zdenka zu tun erspart bleibt: sie stürzt in die Schneenacht hinaus.

Akt vier hat zwei Szenen. Zuerst sieht man in Erikas Zimmer alle warten. Vanessa ist wieder hysterisch, der Arzt beruhigend, die Großmutter, die inzwischen schon mehrmals das Wort ergriffen hat, schweigt. Erika wird gebracht; sie wurde bewußtlos im Schnee gefunden, von Blut gerötet, wie man in der Opernsprache zu sagen pflegt. Der ehrliche Finder ist natürlich Anatol; Vanessa kommen die näheren Umstände gleich seltsam vor, aber der junge Herr bestreitet, daß er vielleicht der Anlaß dieses Zwischenfalls sein könnte. Alle ab, außer der Omama, der nun Erika gesteht — damit das Publikum informiert bleibt —, daß sie die keimende Frucht in ihrem Leib getötet hat, was zwar medizinisch in diesem Fall unklar, aber immerhin ein strafbarer Tatbestand ist. Dazu ertönen puccineske Weisen, herb gewürzt.

Letztes Bild: Großes Abschiednehmen. Vanessa und Anatol reisen nach Paris, ein strahlendes, wenn auch ungleiches Paar, Erika bleibt als Schloßherrin zurück, mit der tröstlichen Gewißheit, daß es nun an ihr ist, zu warten, einsam, allein, im Dunkel. Worauf sie wartet, bleibt unklar. Vielleicht auf Anatol III, der in zwanzig Jahren in der Lage sein müßte, ihre inzwischen adoptierte Ziehtochter zu verführen und damit den Herrn Menotti und Barber zu einem neuen Operettenstoff zu verhelfen.

Das ist also „Vanessa“, und es ist ehrlich zum Weinen. Wir sind ja zwischen „Toter Stadt“ und „Medium“, „Kathrin“ und ähnlichen Machwerken einiges gewohnt, aber dieses Buch ist einfach degoutant. Strindberg mal Hofmannsthal, mit Menotti übergossen und Courths-Mahler gewürzt, auf Sudermann angerichtet und ohne jede tiefere Bedeutung serviert, dazu mit einem sangbaren, aber teilweise erschreckend banalen englischen Text versehen („life is so brief“) — daran wäre auch Menotti selbst als Komponist gescheitert.

Er überließ die Arbeit daher lieber seinem Kollegen Barber, mit dem er schon seit vielen Jahren wärmstens befreundet ist, um so mehr, als das Textbuch so viele persönliche Züge Barbers aufweist. Man kann das im Programmheft der „Met“ vom 15. Jänner nachlesen, wo mit rührender Naivität versichert wird, auch Barber liebe gutes Essen, auch er lese gern laut vor, auch er laufe gern Schlittschuh, auch er liebe Walzer, auch er spiele Orgel, auch er ... Also wohl gar ein autobiographisches Werk? Wir wollen's im Interesse des Familienlebens nicht hoffen.

Die Musik ist vorhanden. Sie stört nicht, klingt nach vielen bekannten Dingen, nimmt auf die Sänger Rücksicht. Immerhin etwas. Persönlichkeit wird man an ihr vergeblich suchen. Sie fließt dahin wie ein lauer Strom, aus dem manchmal Klippen aufragen, sie hat manchmal illustrative Funktion, und sie ist insofern ganz spannend, als man sich immer wieder auf der Suche nach ihrem Ursprung ertappt. Trotzdem sind mir „Bohème“, „Tiefland“ und „Arabella“ lieber.

Die Aufführung selbst ist ausgezeichnet: gut und sehr bühnenwirksam inszeniert, wenn auch manchmal zu dick aufgetragen, in vorzüglich dem Sujet angepaßten Interieurs von Cecil Beaton, mit Mitropoulos am Dirigentenpult, der aus dem Werk und den Wiener Philharmonikern ein Maximum an Effekten herausholt. Auf der Bühne zwei große Entdeckungen: die Libanesin Rosalind Elias als Erika, Besitzerin eines fabelhaft durchgebildeten, innigen Mezzosoprans und schauspielerisch stellenweise von einer erschütternden Intensität, dazu Giorgio Tozzi als Doktor, ein eleganter Sänger mit weichem, italienisch geschultem dunklem Bariton, der große Klasse ist. Nicolai Gedda liegt die Rolle des Anatol sehr, er kommt darin gut zur Geltung, was man von Eleanor Steber als Vanessa nicht behaupten kann, weil sie unvorteilhaft aussieht und stimmlich mit der Partie harte Kämpfe austrägt. Sehr gut gefiel mir Alois Pernerstorfer als Kammerdiener, er zeichnet da eine wirkliche Figur, obwohl er kaum zu singen hat; packend auch Ira Malaniuk als Baronin.

Trotz der guten Aufführung bleibt die Frage offen, wessen Interessen zuliebe man dieses Machwerk nach Salzburg gebracht hat. Diese Frage wurde auch durch den zwischen Höflichkeit und Herzlichkeit schwankenden Premierenbeifall nicht beantwortet.

'VANESSA' CRITICIZED

2 Viennese Writers Attack Opera Audience Hailed

VIENNA, Aug. 18 (Reuters) —Two Vienna music critics today described the European première of Samuel Barber's opera "Vanessa" as a "wretched work" and branded Gian-Carlo Menotti's libretto "disgusting."

The critics explained the enthusiastic reception accorded to the opera on its opening in Salzburg Saturday night as a result of the audiences's being mainly Americans and other foreign tourists.

The artists involved won praise, particularly Dimitri Mitropoulos, conductor, but as the critic of Neuer Kurier put it: "We have seldom heard so fine a musician conduct such poor music."

Neuer Kurier's critic described Mr. Barber as "a collector and publisher of a musical anthology * * *." The critic of The Express said the opera "is enough to make one cry * * * this book is simply disgusting."

Griechenlandtournee der Philharmoniker

Das Konzertprogramm für die kommende Saison

Die Wiener Philharmoniker geben soeben ihr Programm für die kommende Konzertsaison bekannt. Vor Beginn der Saison, und zwar unmittelbar nach dem Abschluß der Salzburger Festspiele, begeben sich die Philharmoniker nach Griechenland, in die Heimat Dimitri Mitropoulos', der in vier Konzerten das Orchester dirigieren wird. Schauplatz wird das große Freilichttheater „Herodes Atticus“ sein. Ein Abend gehört Werken von Brahms (Akademische Festouvertüre), Zweite und Dritte Symphonie, ein weiterer ausschließlich Werken von Richard Strauss. Da das Orchester in voller Besetzung fährt, wird es möglich sein, erstmalig in Griechenland die Symphonia domestica zu Gehör zu bringen. Zum Athener Reiseprogramm gehören auch noch Werke von Beethoven, Bachs „Phantasie und Fuge“ in der Bearbeitung von Mitropoulos und Schönbergs „Verklärte Nacht“.

Am 8. September sind Dirigent und Orchester wieder in Wien. Bekanntlich wird Mitropoulos im September eine Neueinstudierung von Verdis „Maskenball“ in der Staatsoper leiten.

Die nächste philharmonische Auslandreise ist für den November geplant. Es ist der Wunsch der Direktion, daß die Philharmoniker gerade diesen Termin für ihre Auslandfahrten in Anspruch nehmen, da voraussichtlich wieder im November das Ballett am Opernring das Hauptwort zu reden hat. Diese Herbsttournee leiten Schuricht und Knappertsbusch. Sie führt in die Schweiz, nach Madrid, Barcelona und Paris. In Paris bilden zwei Konzerte der Wiener Philharmoniker den Abschluß eines von der UNESCO veranstalteten großen Musikfestes. Im Rahmen dieser Konzerte gelangen Werke österreichischer Zeitgenossen zur Aufführung, und zwar als Erstaufführung Gottfried von Einems „Symphonische Variationen“ unter der Leitung Schurichts sowie Bergers „Rondo Giocoso“ unter Knappertsbusch. In diesem Konzert singt auch Sena Jurinac die vier letzten Lieder von Richard Strauss.

Das Programm für die Abonnentenkonzerte der Philharmoniker in der Saison 1958/59 sowie für das Nicolai-Konzert und das Furtwängler-Gedächtniskonzert lautet:

Abonnementkonzerte: 27. und 28. September, Dirigent Dimitri Mitropoulos: Couperin-Milhaud: Introduktion und Allegro. — Arnold Schönberg: „Verklärte Nacht“. — Franz Schmidt: Symphonie Nr. 2.

The European Debut Of Barber's 'Vanessa'

By FRANK HOWES

SALZBURG.

The choice of a new American opera to provide the modern element in Mr. von Karajan's schedule of two Mozart operas, one standard classic and two comparative rarities ("Arabella" and "Don Carlos") for this year's Salzburg Festival, naturally created the excitement of eager anticipation among an international audience when "Vanessa" was presented on August 16th. In the event, the reception was respectful rather than enthusiastic, though there was much well justified applause for Miss Rosalind Elias as Erika and for Mr. Giorgio Tozzi as the Doctor.

Same Cast

The production, conductor, principals, stage sets and direction were the same as at the Metropolitan premiere in January; only the chorus, orchestra and dancers, which were borrowed from Vienna, were different. Samuel Barber's opera had therefore an eloquent presentation, in which the chief fault that hindered the audience's appreciation of the queer Ibsenite psychology of the piece was defective enunciation of the words in some of the roles. The chief defect of the music would seem to be that it does not penetrate the repressed hysteria of the three women in their three generations among the gloom of a perpetual Scandinavian winter, but only illustrates it at surface level.

The quintet in the last scene, though in form and function a copy of the quintet in "Die Meistersinger," goes a bit deeper. The music of Gian-Carlo Menotti, who in this case is the librettist, usually does not go so very deep, though it has a sharp dramatic edge on it, and Barber's attempt to give musical substance to the theatrically clever libretto of his fellow-composer made one wonder whether Menotti would not have made a more consistent piece of work with more of the dynamic continuity that is found in both "The Medium" and "The Consul."

There is no need for me to inform New York readers that Mr. Mitropoulos understands the brittle, angular dissonant kind of music which Barber has written for "Vanessa" (with lapses now and then into a more innocent diatonic manner). He played the score for all it was worth and put rhythmic and dramatic drive into it—the dramatic tempo is one of the elements in the opera that is dead right.

Miss Elias' portrayal of Erika, strong at once vocally and psychologically, Mr. Nicolai Gedda's cheerfully bewildered Anatole conveyed in debonair fashion, and Mr. Tozzi's rich and brilliant portrait of the Doctor, are all familiar to New York opera goers, but they introduced to Europe singers whose acquaintance we are glad to make. Eleanor Steber in the title role seemed to be not quite so well cast, though she conveys the hysteria of the part faithfully enough.

Stage Design

English visitors to the Salzburg Festival were glad to take note of Cecil Beaton's stage designs, which avoid the extreme opulence of some of his contemporaries on the one hand and the gloom beloved of German producers on the other. The dramatic detail, required by Mr. Menotti in this strange hybrid of high-class verismo and Ibsenite psychopathology, was most admirably supported by Mr. Nathaniel Merrill's skillful production.

Zauberer des Klanges

Das Achte Orchesterkonzert unter Dimitri Mitropoulos

Mit einem von der Romantik über die Wiener Klassik zu Bach zurückschreitenden Programm rundete Dimitri Mitropoulos auch in diesem Jahre das Bild seiner von so unerhörter Dynamik erfüllten Dirigentenpersönlichkeit nach der Seite des Konzertdirigenten großen Stiles mitreißend ab. Unter dieser Leitung überboten sich die Wiener Philharmoniker, die nun bis zum Schluß wieder die Orchesterkonzerte bestreiten, an virtuoser Leuchtkraft der Bläser, affektbetonter Lyrik des Streicherklangs und an rhythmisch gestrafftem Musiziertemperament.

Der Höhepunkt dieser Matinee im Festspielhaus ergab sich, als sich mit diesem Dirigenten der Geiger Zino Francescatti zum Vortrag des Violinkonzerts von Brahms verband. Der in Marseille geborene und seit langem in New York wohnende Künstler verfügt heute wohl über den bestrickendsten Ton aller Geiger seit Kulenkampffs Tode, einen Klang von lebendiger Erfülltheit und Süße, der schon von der Seite des Musiziertemperaments her nie in die Gefahr des Salonhaften gerät. Selten wird man den wundervollen romantischen Gesang des Adagios so rein und so leidenschaftlich grundiert gehört haben wie hier, selten auch einem so blitzenden und geformtem Figurenwerk begegnet sein wie bei den Kadenzen und im Schlußsatz. Das Geheimnis dieses einzigartigen Könnens liegt wohl darin, daß Zino Francescatti nicht nur seinen Solopart glanzvoll wiedergibt, sondern ihn in jedem Augenblick gestalterisch erlebt. Dadurch kommt es auch, daß ihm in technischer Hinsicht gelegentlich ein paar Kleinigkeiten mißglükken, die für eine kühlere Natur kein Problem sind. Wie dieses sein Können sich mit der genau so von unten aus neuschaffenden Persönlichkeit des Dirigenten verband, das war ein wirklich seltenes Erlebnis. Kein Wunder, daß die stürmische Begeisterung sich kaum beruhigen wollte und beide Künstler immer wieder auf das Podium zurückrief.

Dimitri Mitropoulos hatte das Programm bereits mit einem Brahms begonnen, und zwar mit der „Akademischen Festouvertüre". Es war kaum zu überhören, daß dem Maestro die naive Heiterkeit dieser Gelegenheitskomposition und ihr echter Volksliedton weniger liegen. So wirkte denn diese witzige kleine Suite fast wie ein mit Dramatik geladenes, symphonisches Gedicht. Auch bei dem orchestralen Hauptwerk dieses Konzerts, der „Zweiten" Beethovens, ergab sich je nach der Einstellung des Hörenden ein nicht immer ungetrübter Eindruck. Zweifellos trägt eine Auffassung, die mit soviel höchstpersönlichen Eingebungen an ein Werk der Romantik oder der Klassik herangeht, mehr oder weniger ihre Rechtfertigung in sich. Aber diese Art des Nachschaffens bringt die durch das Auswendigdirigieren verstärkte Gefahr mit sich, ein Übermaß an Dynamik, an rhythmisch-agogischen Akzenten in die Partituren hineinzutragen. Das wurde besonders bei dem Scherzo deutlich, bei dem nicht nur die anmutige Naivität, sondern auch die dynamischen Kontraste etwas verwischt waren. Und auch bei dem abschließenden allegro giocoso schien das Spielerische dramatisiert. Es kommt dabei zu großen affektgeladenen Steigerungswellen, die Beethoven noch fremd sind. Aber das alles kann einer großartigen und ganzeinheitlichen Leistung von Dirigent und Orchester kaum Abbruch tun.

Das dann als Abschluß folgende Stück, die eigene Bearbeitung der Orgel-Fantasie und Fuge in g-moll von J. S. Bach, wirkte dann freilich in sich problematisch. Es soll damit nichts gegen die Orchesterfassungen Bachscher Werke an sich gesagt sein. Die Orgel ist die Königin der Instrumente und war zu Bachs Zeiten schon vollkommen durchentwickelt. Damit kam das Klangbild der für sie komponierten Werke durchaus schon dem heutigen (wiedergewonnenen) Ideal nahe, zumal diese Stücke auch rein spieltechnisch gesehen fortschrittlicher anmuten als manche anderen Werke, die auf den spezifischen Entwicklungsstand der Instrumente Rücksicht nehmen mußten. Auch wenn man sich die Namen der einzelnen Register ansieht, liegt eine Übertragung auf das große Orchester stilistisch nicht außer dem Bereich des Vertretbaren. Man denke etwa an Stokowskis Bearbeitung der d-moll-Toccata und -Fuge.

Dimitri Mitropoulos jedoch tut ein übriges und trägt ein romantisch-

Ein Vormittag mit Dimitri Mitropoulos

Das VIII. Orchesterkonzert der Festspiele brachte gestern Musik von Brahms, Beethoven und — Bach

(Von unserem nach Salzburg entsandten Kulturredakteur Herbert Schneiber)

Man wird den Musiker Mitropoulos nicht nach der Bearbeitung der Bachschen Fantasie und Fuge in g-moll beurteilen dürfen, nach der Orchesterfassung eines Orgelwerkes, die allen Anspruch auf ein bei solchem Unternehmen fast zwangsläufiges Mißlingen erheben darf. Zu bedeutend ist der Dirigent und Interpret Mitropoulos, als daß man ihm diesen gut gemeinten, freilich von keinerlei Gegenliebe gekrönten Dienst an Bach verübeln könnte. Außerdem: Wer seine Kraft und sein Talent drei Stunden lang an die wesenlose Musik von Barbers „Vanessa" verschwendet, darf auch einmal 20 Minuten lang ein nur halbgeglücktes Opus aus der eigenen Werkstatt aufführen. Sogar bei Festspielen. Wollte Gott, diese eine Konzession wäre die größte bei der Programmerstellung für den heurigen Kunstsommer gewesen.

Wohl aber sind der geistige Standort des Dirigenten und seine musische Mentalität an der Wiedergabe der Zweiten Symphonie von Beethoven zu erkennen gewesen. Es war, wenn das Gedächtnis nicht trügt, der erste Beethoven, den Mitropolous in Salzburg (und auch in Österreich) dirigiert hat — ein früher Beethoven, ein heiteres, spielerisches Stück, doch dessenungeachtet (wie alle anderen Kompositionen des großen Tonschöpfers) ein Werk, bei dem der Interpret Farbe bekennen muß.

Und Mitropoulos bekannte Farbe und Farben. Er war auch als Beethoven-Deuter der leidenschaftliche Ausdrucksmusiker, der geist- und blutvolle Ekstatiker, der den Klang erregend belebte und durch vielfältige Nuancen reich machte, der die Instrumente in feinen Rubati atmen und singen ließ, daß man ob solcher dynamischer Vielfalt die Form fast vergaß und das Tempo noch weit öfter verändert wähnte, als es in Wahrheit geschah. Im Larghetto freilich (und auch im Finale) brach dieses brennend intensive Inhaltsmusizieren mehrmals deutlich in das Ebenmaß der Struktur ein.

Mitropoulos befleißigte sich etlicher Vortragsfreiheiten, die bei der Aufführung einer Tschaikovskij-Symphonie durchaus gebilligt werden können. Bei Beethoven waren sie einfach eine Grenzüberschreitung, mochte die Handlung auch als glühendes Bekenntnis zur Musik erscheinen und durch ihre Spontaneität legitim wirken.

In der dramatisch konzipierten Wiedergabe des Brahms-Violinkonzertes, das Mitropoulos ebenfalls auswendig dirigierte, waren dann alle Kräfte des Gestaltens und selbst der höchste Anspruch des Werkes beglückend auf einer Ebene beisammen. Die Philharmoniker hat man seit Furtwängler ganz selten ein so beseeltes Espressivo spielen gehört, der Aufbau der Interpretation war wohlüberlegt und doch von faszinierender, ganz dem Augenblick zugehöriger Impulsivität, und Zino Francescatti spielte den Solopart ernst, männlich, selbst in den melancholischen Lyrismen, und mit souveräner Entfaltung bedeutender technischer und tonlicher Qualitäten. Das Publikum jubelte, der Dirigent klatschte, das Orchester trommelte Beifall: Francescatti und Brahms durften zufrieden sein.

Ganz zum Schluß gab es für Mitropoulos, der das Konzert mit der Akademischen Festouvertüre von Brahms eingeleitet hatte, noch viele Beweise der Wertschätzung und der Sympathie. Trotz des trüben Bachs am Ende.

SALZBURGER FESTSPIELE 1958

Mitropoulos — Francescatti

Taktstock und Geigenbogen wirkten Wunder im achten Orchesterkonzert

Ob sich jeder Besucher des achten Festspiel-Orchesterkonzerts diesen phänomenalen Eindruck erwartet hatte? Wir glauben fast, es dürfte manchem so ergangen sein wie dem Rezensenten, der nach anfänglicher Reserve geradezu überwältigt wurde von dem, was da an Musik und Virtuosität in Erscheinung trat. Die anfängliche Reserve war nicht unbegründet. Die Akademische Festouvertüre von Johannes Brahms fand das Orchester noch etwas morgendlich ungelenk, für die alten Studentenweisen „Was kommt dort von der Höh'" und „Gaudeamus igitur" brächte man bestimmt am Samstagabend leichter die erforderliche Stimmung auf als an einem Sonntag vormittag. So konnten also die Wiener Philharmoniker ihr Diplom als „principes artis musicae" nicht bei diesem ersten Stück, wohl aber auch bei Brahms erneuern, nämlich bei der Wiedergabe seines Violinkonzerts D-Dur, op. 77, mit dem in Amerika lebenden Italiener Zino Francescatti als Solisten.

Die wunderbaren Ideen, die der Hamburger Brahms niedergeschrieben hat, von der südlichen Schönheit der Kärntner Landschaft inspiriert und von seinem Freund Joseph Joachim, dem er das Violinkonzert zueignete, beraten und gefördert, — diese in ihrer elementaren Einfachheit zwingenden Ideen bedürfen ganz großer Künstler, um in das Bewußtsein weiterer Kreise überhaupt eindringen zu können. Denn die technischen Anforderungen sind derart hoch, daß nur einer, der über die höchste Meisterschaft verfügt, die edle musikalische Linie, den monumentalen Aufbau beherrschen und verständlich machen kann. Zino Francescatti erwies sich nicht nur dem Notenbild mit seinen allen Höhen und Tiefen durchmessenden Umspielungen, Trillern und Kadenzen, sondern, was weit mehr wiegt, dem Geist von Brahms völlig gewachsen. Herrlich strahlte die Stradivari, als sie zum ersten Male vom Orchester das ruhig wogende Hauptthema übernahm, schmiegte sich den ineinander verwobenen Melodien an oder schuf unerbittliche Kontraste in glasklar gegriffenen Akkorden. Im Adagio hob sie sich mit sanfter Gebärde aus der Gemeinschaft der Holzbläser und Hörner, in die höchsten Lagen aufsteigend, als wollte sie die irdische Welt verlassen. Im zündenden Finale bejahte sie dann wiederum die Freuden dieser Erde, bestätigte, daß ein Feuergeist niemals kapitulieren braucht vor den Mächten des Schicksals. Ein solches Instrument in den Händen eines solchen Künstlers vermag wahrlich Dinge auszusagen, die einem ans Herz greifen, Trost und Erbauung spenden.

War man nun atemlos den Spannungen dieses Violinkonzerts gefolgt, bedeutete nachher Beethovens zweite Symphonie die Einkehr in eine Welt, die über Stürme und Schatten bereits erhaben ist. Unfaßbar, daß diese Musik von einem geschaffen wurde, der sein unheilbares Leiden erkannt und mit dem Tod schon abgeschlossen hatte. Die Auffassung von Mitropoulos, dem die Wiener Philharmoniker großartig Gefolgschaft leisteten, brachte die Überwindung aller Schwere, aller inneren Not überzeugend zum Ausdruck. Das Larghetto war mit rührender Sorgfalt bedacht, das Scherzo ziemlich zurückhaltend, nur im ersten und letzten Satz ein rasantes Tempo eingeschlagen, daß es flimmerte wie Sonne über sommergoldenen Ährenfeldern. Auf diese Werke noch als viertes von Johann Sebastian Bach die Orgelphantasie und Fuge in g-Moll in der Orchesterbearbeitung von Dimitri Mitropoulos folgen zu lassen, sprengte fast die Grenze der Aufnahmefähigkeit und konnte nur als Verbeugung vor dem größten Musiker aller Zeiten gelten. Die freien Rezitative der Phantasie den Hörnern und Trompeten anzuvertrauen, sprengt aber auch fast schon die exakten Ausführungsmöglichkeiten; den tausendfach bewährten Bläsern, die nicht ihren besten Tag hatten, wollten einige der ihnen gestellten Aufgaben nicht restlos gelingen. Die Fuge mit ihren weiten Entwicklungen entfesselte schließlich die äußersten Gewalten, die man noch ertragen kann, Dirigent und Orchester gaben ihr Letztes. Aufgerüttelt von diesem Erlebnis ließ man sich zu nicht enden wollenden Ovationen mitreißen und trat wie betäubt in den lichten Tag hinaus. Dr. R. Wolf

OSTERREICHISCHE NEUE TAGESZEITUNG 26-8-58

In den Konzerten, die Dimitrij Mitropoulos mit den Philharmonikern musiziert, spürt man die Sympathie und gegenseitige Achtung. Das gute Klima stellt sich sofort ein und hält an. Mitropoulos hat den Ehrgeiz, dem Programm seiner Konzerte ein originelleres Profil zu geben. Und da geschieht nun oft Merkwürdiges, das sich mit der imponierenden Erscheinung dieses Musikers nicht recht vereinbaren läßt. So wählte er diesmal als Beginn die Akademische Festouvertüre von Brahms, doch eher ein Gelegenheitswerk linker Hand, das in den gewichtigeren Salzburger Konzerten kaum am Platz ist. Er musizierte den „Frühschoppen" allerdings glanzvoll. Reden wir gleich vom letzten Stück, um das Unangenehme beendet zu haben. Es ist wohl Stokowskijs unseliges Vorbild, das Mitropoulos veranlaßt hat die Phantasie und Fuge in g-Moll von J. S. Bach für ganz großes Orchester zu bearbeiten. Blechorgien wechseln in der Phantasie mit kammermusikalischen Teilen, es wird virtuoser Glanz entfaltet, die Fuge steigert sich großartig, ein Riesenorgelklang wird zu erreichen versucht. Solch eine Bach-Bearbeitung ist aber ein Sakrileg des Klanges, über das die hohe Achtung für Mitropoulos nur bedauernd berichten kann. „Freunde, nicht diese Töne..."

Die zweite Symphonie Beethovens bot ein Feld für kunstvolle Interpretation. Beethoven verleugnete später dieses Kind: „Das ist verfluchtes Zeug...": Er gab damit der Nachwelt einen Freibrief, „dieses Zeug" nach eigenem Geschmack zu servieren. Mitropoulos geht nicht den Weg unbeschwerten und fließenden Musizierens, er gibt dem ersten Satz betontes Brio und arbeitet am Larghetto wie ein Goldschmied. Durch wechselnde Dynamik und manches Rubato wird dieses einfache Stück kunstgewerblich beschwert, es wird prickelnd, fast nervös. Wirkungsvoll sicherlich. Der Erfolg war groß. Größer noch war der des wunderbar aufblühenden Violinkonzertes von Brahms, das Zino Francescatti spielte. Diesem Geiger eignet der große Ruf eines paganinihaften Technikers; dessen Berechtigung erwies er auch diesmal, darüber hinaus aber erfreute er durch subtilste Musikalität. Sein gutes Instrument sang bezaubernd und wenn ein einziges Mal ein exponierter Ton mißlang, so war der nur ein Zeichen der Menschlichkeit bei so viel göttlicher Kunst. Mitropoulos begleitete großartig. Er empfand das Konzert richtig als Symphonie, ließ dem Orchester seine Entfaltungsmöglichkeit. Es wurde teilweise zu einem Konzert der philharmonischen Violinen, die sich am Spiel des Meisters entzündeten, auch zu einem der Holzbläser, die sehr klangschön ihren Zauber wahrten. Das Orchester war sichtlich selbst von der gelungenen Aufführung beeindruckt, es schloß sich sehr lebhaft den Ovationen an, die dem Dirigenten, vor allem aber dem großen Geiger Francescatti galten.

Durch dieses Brahms-Konzert vor allem wurde das achte Orchesterkonzert zu einem festlichen. Daß es nicht gelang, liegt an der so oft zur Überlegung gestellten Programmwahl. Ist es gut und richtig, die festlichen Salzburger Konzerte wie die Abonnementkonzerte irgendeines berühmten Orchesters, das die großen Dirigenten der Welt berufen kann, im Programm dem Gutdünken der Dirigenten auszuliefern, das doch selbst bei solch echtesten Musikern wie Mitropoulos auch ein Schlechtdünken sein kann. Es müßte nicht starre, unbewegliche Doktrin im Programmbau herrschen, es sollte aber auch nicht ganz ungebundene Willkür die große Gelegenheit der künstlerischen Konzentration, die doch der Sinn der Festspiele sein muß, vergeuden.

Triumph der Geige

Zino Francescatti im Vierten Solistenkonzert

Man erzählt sich, daß erst nach dem sonntäglichen Orchesterkonzert mit Dimitri Mitropoulos, in dem Zino Francescatti eine atemberaubende Interpretation des Brahms-Violinkonzerts bot, der Kartenverkauf für das 4. Solistenkonzert am Montag im Mozarteum einsetzte. Jedenfalls fand der bei uns bis dahin nur von Schallplatten bekannt gewesene Künstler nun ein sehr zahlreiches und überaus beifallsfreudiges Publikum.

Zino Francescatti gehört heute ohne Zweifel mit Menuhin, Milstein und Oistrach zur allerersten Weltklasse der Geiger. Wie er die Intensität seiner musikantischen Natur ohne die geringste Konzession an irgendein technisches Problem an seinem prachtvollen Instrument immer noch weiter zu steigern vermag, findet heute kaum ihresgleichen. Dieser Eindruck wurde durch den Solistenabend nur noch verstärkt. Ebenso wie im Brahms-Konzert war aber auch in jedem einzelnen der stilistisch weit auseinanderliegenden Stücke dieses Programms die typisch amerikanische Eigenart zu bemerken, Bindungen zugunsten eines größeren Klangvolumens zeitweise bis zu einem ununterbrochenen breitgestrichenen détaché aufzulösen. Und ebenso problematisch erschien mir die Zusammenstellung des Programms. Warum berät man Dirigenten und Solisten der Salzburger Festspiele nicht besser? Wenn unser Publikum schon zu einem nicht unbeträchtlichen Teil aus Touristen besteht, dann wird diese Gruppe sowieso nur vom Klang tönender Namen angezogen und nimmt praktisch jedes Programm in Kauf. Die anderen aber erwarten auch hier mit Recht eine gewisse Linie.

Wir hörten im vorigen Jahre zwei begeistert aufgenommene Bach-Soloabende. Zino Francescatti hätte zweifellos ebenso gern und mindestens ebenso gut einen großen Sonatenabend gegeben, wenn man das von ihm verlangt hätte. Aber dieser Querschnitt durch die Violinliteratur dreier Jahrhunderte, der im üppig bestellten Gemüsegarten virtuoser Akrobatik endete, gehört in einen Kursalon und nicht zu den Salzburger Festspielen.

Auch sollte man bei zeitgenössischer Musik die Auswahl nicht den Zufälligkeiten persönlicher Freundschaften großer Interpreten zu mittelmäßigen Komponisten überlassen, wie das bei Francescatti und Paul Ben-Haim der Fall sein dürfte, von dem eine Solo-Sonate aus dem Jahr 1951 aufgeführt wurde, die ausschließlich gewissen geschickt eingearbeiteten Orientalismen einen mäßigen Reiz verdankt. In ihren technischen Erfordernissen und Effekten paßt sie aber nicht schlecht zu Camille Saint Saëns' „Rondo capriccioso" und Maurice Ravels unverwüstlicher „Tzigane", einer Konzertrhapsodie von tatsächlich hinreißender Wirkung.

Es bleibt zu berichten von einem wunderbaren Musizieren im ersten Teil: Wieder bei Johannes Brahms, der dem blühenden Klangsinn Francescattis besonders gut liegt, und von ihm auch offenbar besonders geliebt wird. Der sonst an diesem Abend von pianistischen Aufgaben völlig verschonte, sicher ausgezeichnete Eugenio Bagnoli war in der spannungsgeladenen d-moll-Sonate, op. 108, leider ein zu anpassungsfähiger Begleiter statt eines gleichberechtigten Partners. Völlig ohne ungelösten Rest blieb Johann Sebastian Bachs erste Partita für Violine allein in h-moll mit ihrer interessanten Erweiterung des Variationsprinzips durch Einbeziehung eines „Double" in jeden der vier Suitensätze. Hier wurden in der Ausformung jedes einzelnen Tones und in der Art, wie er zum Ganzen in Beziehung gesetzt wurde, höchste geigerische und musikalische Tugenden gezeigt.

HEINRICH KRALIK:

Salzburger Bilanz

Zum Abschluß der Festspiele 1958

Überblickt man die Festspiele dieses Sommers, so zeigt es sich, daß die Rolle der Musik abermals an Gewicht und Bedeutung zugenommen hat. Gewiß, „Jedermann" auf dem Domplatz übt nach wie vor unverminderte Anziehung, aber die überwältigende Mehrheit der Besucher kommt nach Salzburg, um Musik zu hören und musikalische Bühnenwerke zu sehen. Was sie erwarten, ist Musik und wieder Musik. Musik, nicht bloß in festlicher und exquisiter Zubereitung, sondern auch in spezifisch salzburgerischer Ausprägung. An dieser spezifischen Qualität der Kunstübung hat, kein Zweifel, der vielberufene Genius loci samt allen unwägbaren Elementen, die der Begriff umfaßt, seinen Anteil. Aber mehr als alles Unwägbare und Ungreifbare dienen diesem Zweck die sehr greifbaren baulichen Einrichtungen der Stadt, die den Vorzug haben, nicht willkürlich errichtet, sondern aus den historischen Beständen der Stadt hervorgegangen zu sein. Dazu gehören die suggestiven Theaterräume von Domplatz und Residenzhof. Dazu gehört vor allem das Felsentheater in der sogenannten Felsenreitschule. Auch das alte Festspielhaus darf dazu gezählt werden, wiewohl eine dicke, protzige Gipsauflage die ursprüngliche, beziehungsvolle Beschaffenheit des Raumes kläglich verdeckt.

Aber nun ist ein neues Festspielhaus im Begriff zu entstehen. Die Bauarbeiten sind bereits beträchtlich weit vorgeschritten. Charakter und Kontur des neuen Gebäudes zeichnen sich deutlich ab. Sehr eindrucksvoll in ihrer architektonischen Mächtigkeit erhebt sich die imponierende Rückwand des Neubaues. Die Gesamtanlage trägt das Signum unserer Tage, scheint aber aufs engste dem österreichischen und salzburgischen Charakter angepaßt zu sein. Das Motiv der abschließenden Giebellinien zum Beispiel kommt offenkundig von Hohensalzburg.

Die stärkste Wirkung übt jedoch der Umstand, daß man das neue Theater in höchst unmittelbarer und anschaulicher Weise aus der Steilwand des Mönchsberges hervortreten sieht. Es befindet sich dabei in vollster Übereinstimmung mit der Stadt selbst, von der man ebenfalls sagen kann, daß sie ein unmittelbares und sichtbares Produkt der geographischen Lage ist, daß man sie mit ihren Kirchen und Monumenten, mit ihren pittoresken Gassen und anheimelnden Plätzen aus dem Innern des Berges förmlich hervorquellen und den Raum zum Salzachufer malerisch ausfüllen sieht. So kann sich das neue Theater mit dem Hinweis auf dieselbe Herkunft, dieselbe Abstammung legitimieren. Es ist blutsverwandt, es gehört zur Familie.

Wir befänden uns nicht in Österreich, wenn nicht ein kompakter Chorus von Nörglern und Besserwissern das Schauspiel dieses sensationellen Theaterbaues mit Spott, Klage und schwarzer Prophetie begleitete. Das beiseite gelegte Projekt eines Festspielhauses außerhalb der Stadt gewinnt, seit das andere Projekt zur Ausführung gelangt, Tag für Tag an Anhängern. Zum Glück kommen alle Einwände zu spät. Das neue Festspielhaus kann nicht mehr hinwegtransportiert und auf einem mehr oder weniger anonymen Hügel aufgestellt werden. Es wäre sicherlich eine prächtige Anlage geworden. Mit bequemen Zufahrtsstraßen und ausgiebigen Parkgelegenheiten. Aber ohne Aura, ohne jenes Cachet, das für die Salzburger Festspiele von so wesentlicher Bedeutung ist. Komfortable Festspielhügel dürften sich im Umkreis jeder Stadt ausfindig machen. Einen Mönchsberg mit seiner architektonischen Trächtigkeit gibt es sonst nirgends. Da mag man denn auch einige Unbequemlichkeiten beim Parken mit in Kauf nehmen.

Die Hauptereignisse, um die sich das musikalische Programm diesmal gruppierte, wurden von „Don Carlos", „Fidelio" und „Verdi-Requiem" in der Felsenreitschule, von „Cosi fan tutte" im Residenzhof, von „Figaro", „Arabella" und „Vanessa" im Festspielhaus gebildet. Bei „Don Carlos" und dem „Verdi-Requiem" war es die Magie des Raumes, die den in objektivem Sinne vollendeten Aufführungen jene interessanten und attraktiven Züge einzeichnete. Ähnliches galt für „Fidelio", der die Inszenierung allerdings vor die prekäre Aufgabe stellte, die Singspielszenen der Exposition so zu führen, daß sie dem pathetischen Theaterraum organisch anhaften. Wie „Fidelio" war „Figaro" eine willkommene Repetition einer gepriesenen Darbietung vom vorigen Jahr. Die seit langem eingespielte Aufführung von „Cosi fan tutte" im Residenzhof erhielt durch italienische Gesangskräfte frische Blutzufuhr. Daß sich die Gesangskräfte auch als vorzügliche Spiel- und Komödienkräfte bewährten, verlieh der charmanten Vorstellung ihre Schwung- und Flugkraft. Aber die gewisse szenische Maschinerie wirkt nun doch schon recht abgespielt. Es ist hoch an der Zeit, Mozarts kostbarem Opernwerk eine neue Gewandung zu geben. Hoffentlich wird's das nächste Mal keine abstrakte Gewandung sein, denn Da Pontes abgezirkeltes und rationalistisch pointiertes Libretto ist schon abstrakt genug und braucht gerade in seiner Abstraktheit die konkreten Zutaten von Farbe, Illusion und wechselndem Bühnenbild. Die „Arabella"-Vorstellung verdankte dem Künstlerpaar Lisa della Casa und Dietrich Fischer-Dieskau ihren außerordentlichen Charakter. Der prächtige Abend war ein Triumph ihrer Persönlichkeiten.

Soweit handelte es sich's um ein Programm, das sich im üblichen Salzburger Rahmen bewegte, das etliche Spitzenleistungen aufzuweisen hatte und auch dort, wo keine Spitzen erreicht wurden, Niveau hielt. Ebenso verliefen die Konzerte nach gewohntem Brauch. Zur Bewältigung der Aufgaben erschien diesmal das Concertgebouw-Orchester aus Amsterdam als willkommener Hilfstrupp. Damit war wohl für eine reichere Ausstattung, aber nicht für eine bessere Systematik in der Programmbildung gesorgt. Offenbar geht es nicht anders, und der Gedanke einer geistigen oder stilistischen Organisation der Konzertprogramme muß als Utopie aufgegeben werden. Endlich hat sich auch darin nichts geändert, daß bei einer so reichen, bunten und wechselvollen Musikschau jede Art von Möglichkeit besteht, nach Temperament und Geschmack sich zu freuen oder Anstoß zu nehmen, zu loben oder zu tadeln.

Mit „Vanessa" aber kam diesmal ein Novum ins Kalkül und brachte die Gemüter vielfach aus dem Gleichgewicht. Das Novum bestand im Grund einzig darin, daß eine neue Oper nicht in einer eigenen Salzburger Produktion, sondern als Gesamtgastspiel der Metropolitan Opera New York vorgeführt wurde. Man erinnert sich, wie es dazu kam, wie die projektierte Aufführung in deutscher Sprache aufgegeben werden mußte und wie sich die Festspielleitung vor die Alternative gestellt sah, auf die neue Oper überhaupt zu verzichten oder das generöse Angebot der New-Yorker Oper anzunehmen. Die Vernunft entschied für die Annahme, und die vernünftige Entscheidung konnte um so mehr gutgeheißen werden, als die Annahme eine Ausnahme darstellte.

Was jedoch die Gemüter in so gewaltige Bewegung setzte, war nicht so sehr die Tatsache des amerikanischen Gastspiels als die amerikanische Oper selbst. „Vanessa" wurde nicht in normalem Ausmaß mit Spott und Hohn bedacht, sondern das Werk erfuhr eine geradezu leidenschaftliche Ablehnung. Gewiß, das Libretto bietet Angriffspunkte, die unschwer aufzufinden sind. Aber ebenso evident sind seine opernmäßigen Vorzüge. Es stammt außerdem von Gian Carlo Menotti, einem Künstler, der zu den erfolgreichsten Opernschöpfern unserer Tage zählt, der hinlänglich Proben geliefert hat, daß er sein Metier von Grund auf versteht und mit sehr kräftigen und sehr persönlichen Ideen betreibt. Sein Stil, seine Art, den Alltag opernhaft zu pointieren, ist auch in den „Vanessa"-Text eingegangen. Wie der Librettist, so ist auch Samuel Barber, der Komponist, kein unbeschriebenes Blatt, sondern ein sehr angesehener Tonkünstler, dessen bemerkenswerte Kompositionen allseits Achtung genießen. Allerdings, er komponiert nicht atonal, und seine Vorliebe für Melodie und Harmonie auf tonaler Grundlage tritt in seiner Oper besonders einprägsam hervor. Das mag einer radikalen Ästhetik gegen den Strich gehen, rechtfertigt aber kaum den Grad der Aufregung. Barbers Komposition ist in musikalisch technischem Sinn glänzend gemacht, reich an Einfällen und an ansprechenden, eingänglichen Stellen. Sie ist gewiß nicht von epochaler Bedeutung, aber aus dem künstlerischen Tatbestand, den sie darstellt, läßt sich die vehemente Reaktion, die sie hervorgerufen hat, nicht erklären.

Die Ursachen müssen tiefer liegen. Vielleicht ist es die instinktive Aversion gegen den glückhaften Optimismus und gegen die bewußte Naivität des Amerikaners, die sich auch in dieser Oper zweifellos kundgibt; die instinktive Aversion gegen eine Geisteshaltung, die daran geht, wie die Dinge des Lebens auch die der Kunst praktisch, zugänglich, gemeinverständlich, komfortabel und — bürgerlich zu gestalten. „Vanessa" scheint weniger eine künstlerische als eine weltanschauliche Verletzung ausgeübt zu haben. Die Ablehnung, die sie erfahren hat, gilt weniger den alten künstlerischen Doktrinen, die sie sich zu eigen gemacht hat, als der Neuen Welt, aus der sie stammt und die sie repräsentiert.

So eröffnete das „Vanessa"-Erlebnis gerade durch die Reaktion, die es ausgelöst hat, sehr interessante Aspekte. Wir möchten das Erlebnis nicht missen. Es fügt sich zwanglos in die Salzburger Festspielchronik, die von einer international und universell orientierten Tätigkeit berichten soll, von einer Tätigkeit, die an keine Doktrin, an kein Vorurteil gebunden ist, die einem bunten und vielgestaltigen Publikum künstlerische Freude, Anregung, Erhebung und wenn man will, Belehrung bieten, die nicht strengen ästhetischen Parolen folgen, sondern die Buntheit der Welt zum Ausdruck bringen soll. Salzburg ist nicht Donaueschingen. Je entschlossener die Festspiele an ihren universellen Aufgaben festhalten und sich in ihrer Universalität nicht irremachen lassen, desto erfolgreicher werden sie sich auch in der Zukunft behaupten.

Salzburger Festspiele:

Glanzvolles Orchesterkonzert unter Mitropoulos

Werke von Bach, Brahms und Beethoven — Zino Francescatti als Solist

Von unserem nach Salzburg entsandten Musikkritiker

Ein äußerst bemerkenswertes philharmonisches Sonntagskonzert dankt man der genialen Führung Dimitri Mitropoulos; es war auch in jenen Teilen bemerkenswert, in welchen man den Intentionen des Dirigenten nicht voll beipflichten konnte, wie dies bei dessen Orchesterbearbeitung der für Orgel geschriebenen Phantasie und Fuge in g-moll von Johann Sebastian Bach der Fall war.

Hier geht es vor allem um die Klärung einer prinzipiellen Frage, nämlich der willkürlichen Vertauschbarkeit einer vom Komponisten gewählten instrumentalen Einkleidung. Sie muß aus dem einfachen Grund problematisch wirken, da Bach durchaus, wie der Fachausdruck lautet, „für das Instrument" geschrieben hat, und dies im weitesten Sinn des Wortes. Denn die Thematik seiner Orgel- und Cembalowerke hat durchaus verschiedenen Charakter von dem der rein vokalen oder instrumentalen Komposition. Nimmt man die Kunst der Fuge aus — ein Werk, dessen abstrakte Haltung jeglichen tönenden Mantel offenläßt —, ergibt sich schon aus der Urzelle Bachscher Inventionen die Unmöglichkeit einer Transponierung. Sie stets von neuem zu versuchen, mag als Huldigung an den Genius Bach gewiß ein lockendes Ziel darstellen, welches indes kaum zu erreichen ist und in den Gefilden des Stilbruches versanden muß. Dies war das Schicksal des Bearbeiterfleißes Stokovskis, Dohnanys — um nur einzelne Namen herauszugreifen — und nicht zuletzt das Liszts, der eine Klavierbearbeitung eben der g-moll-Phantasie verfaßte.

Überflüsig, bei einem Könner vom Range Mitropoulos zu erwähnen, daß keine instrumentale Variante außer acht gelassen wird. Manchmal scheint er auf eine Annäherung an den Orgelklang hinzuzielen. So etwa, wenn aus dem Tremolo der Streicher die Holzbläser stimmführend hervortreten und das Klangbild der Vox coelestis heraufbeschwören. Ein andermal gebärdet sich sein Orchester wiederum neoromantisch, in den Bahnen himmelstürmender Crescendi Regerscher Ekstase wandelnd. Die Summierung dieser Kunstgriffe fördert jedoch nicht den Eindruck der Einheitlichkeit.

Letzterer stellte sich restlos beglückend bei der Wiedergabe des Brahmsschen Violinkonzertes ein. Dirigent, Orchester und der Solist Zino Francescatti vereinten sich zu ideal-unübertrefflichem Musizieren. Mag man sich im ersten Satz an manchen Stellen des Soloparts eine vollere Tongebung gewünscht haben, so erklang das Adagio in nicht zu überbietender Schönheit und Empfundenheit. Die Leistung Francescattis darf hier auf gleiche Stufe mit berühmtesten Interpreten wie Huberman oder Busch gestellt werden. Berechtigterweise nahmen die Beifallsstürme den Charakter von Ovationen an.

In blendender Leuchtkraft zog auch Brahms' Akademische Festouvertüre vorüber. Bewundernswert, wie Mitropoulos diese oft als Gelegenheitswerk abgestempelte und weniger hoch eingeschätzte Komposition durch Phrasierung zu beleben versteht und somit das Märchen vom „Grau in Grau" Brahmsscher Instrumentation widerlegt. An dieser Interpretation war alles festlich, nichts bloß akademisch.

Das Kernstück der zweiten Programmhälfte bildete Beethovens Zweite Symphonie, ein Lieblingswerk Richard Strauss', welches vielleicht ob seiner stilistischen Grundhaltung weniger Popularität besitzt als seine symphonischen Schwestern: bedeutet es doch den definitiven Abschied von der Welt des Rokoko, die in den Hauptmotiven der Ecksätze noch entfernt anklingt, und eine Hinwendung zu metaphysisch fundierter Musiksprache, die auch in ihren heiteren und hellen Momenten sich wesentlich von der Unbekümmertheit Haydnscher Symphoniesätze unterscheidet.

Mitropoulos' Deutung verlegt das Gewicht auf das Hintergründige, groß-dimensioniert Symphonische des Werkes, sie ist spannungsgeladen vom ersten bis zum letzten Takt und — um ein Wort Furtwänglers zu zitieren — „von innerem Tempo beseelt". So verschlägt es wenig, daß der Dirigent den Scherzo-Beginn ungewöhnlich langsam nimmt, ein Umstand, der der Kontrastwirkung zum Mittelteil nicht förderlich ist. Die Hauptsache aber blieb, daß bei größter Ausdrucksintensität nirgends die Grenzen von Beethovens Klangklima überschritten wird. Dies allein genügt, um Mitropoulos' Interpretation vorbildliche und nachahmenswerte Qualitäten zuzuerkennen.

27-8-58 Wiener Zeitung

Die Wiener Philharmoniker, am Sonntagvormittag unter Dimitri Mitropoulos, musizierten — nehmt alles nur in allem — unter einem glücklichen Stern. Man begann mit Brahms' in Ischl 1880 komponierten „Akademischen Festouvertüre", einem scherzhaften Dank des Geehrten für die Verleihung des Ehrendoktorates der Breslauer Universität in einer Paraphrase über Studentenlieder, die den Humor des Gefeierten amüsant aufleuchten ließ. Dann kam das herrlich-melancholische, in der romantischen Klangwelt verwurzelte, im Wörtherseesommer 1878 komponierte Konzert für Violine und Orchester, op. 77, in dem Salzburg eine Rolle insofern zugewiesen ist, als in Aigen die letzte Feile in einem Zusammentreffen zwischen Brahms, der Clara Schumann von Gastein abholte, und Joseph Joachim, dem ersten Werkinterpreten, der in Aigen seine Sommerferien verbrachte, angelegt wurde. Zino Francescatti spielte das Stück technisch brillant. Er wurde herzlich gefeiert.

Beethovens II. Symphonie in D-Dur, op. 36, entstand 1802 (zwei Jahre nach der I. Symphonie). Der Künstler stand vor der Ertaubung und verfaßte sein erschütterndes „Heiligenstädter Testament". Die Symphonie jedoch läßt nichts von dieser Tragik ahnen, sie spielt in einer heiteren Welt, in der helle und starke Töne mit sprühender Laune angeschlagen werden. Mitropoulos musizierte das Stück werkgetreu, voll Schwung und Rhythmus, Schade, daß er es nicht lassen konnte, an den Schluß die eigene Bearbeitung eines Bachschen Orgelkonzertes für Orchester zu stellen. Man hörte wenig Bach, dafür mehr Mitropoulos. Schade, es war sonst eine sehr gelungene Veranstaltung. Dr. G. P.

Salzburger Festspiele: Mitropoulos dirigiert 8. Orchesterkonzert

Das achte Orchesterkonzert, das unter dem Dirigenten Dimitri Mitropoulos im Salzburger Festspielhaus zur Aufführung gelangte, war ein bemerkenswerter philharmonischer Beitrag zum Programm der Salzburger Festspiele 1958. Eingeleitet wurde das Programm mit der akademischen Fest-Ouvertüre op. 80 von Johannes Brahms, dem das Violinkonzert in D-dur vom gleichen Komponisten folgte. Hier vereinten sich der Dirigent, Zino Francescatti, als Solist, und das Meisterorchester der Wiener Philharmoniker zu einer vom Publikum als geradezu ideal empfundenen Einheit.

Die II. Symphonie Beethovens in D-dur bildete das Kernstück der zweiten Programmhälfte. Mit diesem auf Grund seiner eigenwilligen Stilistik nicht sonderlich populären Werk bewies Mitropoulos den ambitionierten Zuhörern vorbildliche Qualitäten in der Interpretation.

Der Abschluß, den Phantasie und Fuge in g-moll von Johann Sebastian Bach bildeten, war vom Dirigenten für das Orchester bearbeitet worden. Die neue Instrumentation des vom Komponisten für Orgel vorgesehenen Werkes wurde vom Publikum als nicht sonderlich glücklich gewählt empfunden.

Dennoch gab es für Mitropoulos, den hervorragenden Dirigenten, den erstklassigen Solisten und für das prächtig musizierende Orchester lang anhaltenden Beifall.

SALZBURG.—Arriving in Salzburg for this year's Festival, the visitor stands on the rim of a caldron seething with people and vehicles and welded together with noise. The sage might listen, and withdraw. We plunged in, just in time to hear the first "Fidelio."

It was a new production, staged last year by Herbert von Karajan, who at that time became the artistic director of the Festival. To emphasize Fidelio's theme of freedom, and that alone, Karajan had taken some drastic measures. The clumsy comic element was completely excised, even Rocco's aria about the worth of gold. The principals were allowed only a few spacious gestures, and even the liberator Don Fernando stood immobile above Florestan's dungeon, never deigning to clasp his old friend's hand.

A lean, majestic tableau vivant emerged, in which the only action was reserved for the prisoners. As they faltered from their barred dungeons it appeared that every man had been coached for his individual part in the great surge toward freedom, and with the capacity of the Vienna Opera chorus and the Vienna Philharmonic for mellow, blended sound, it became unimportant whether this was opera or oratorio.

Christl Goltz' voice of quivering steel was not pleasant, but her singing was fortright and full of resolute energy, which was after all what Leonore had.

Gould Scores

This year's visiting orchestra, the Concertgebouw of Amsterdam, made its next-to-last appearance with Mitropoulos as conductor and Glenn Gould as soloist. Gould raced through the Bach D minor concerto with furious elan, omitting no marvelous detail of delicate articulation, and the orchestra supported him on a wave of pulsating sound (anything afterward was bound to be an anticlimax). Brahms' Third Symphony, broadly paced, showed the quality of the orchestra's various sections: fine brasses, woodwinds and lower strings, with a disappointingly harsh tone in the violins, despite the presence of new concertmaster, ex-Philadelphian Jacob Krachmalnick. Mitropoulos' version of Strauss' "Zarathustra" was slightly too brilliant for the size of the Festspielhaus, but otherwise exhilarating.

Courage in "Vanessa"

The courage shown by Karajan and his colleagues in producing Barber's "Vanessa" can be best understood by those who know the Austrian resistance to contemporary music. Previous Salzburg premieres have been mainly works of Germanic origin with at least the conciliatory feature of understandable text. But an American opera, sung in English, represented a brave step.

The production matched the Metropolitan's closely, except for slightly reduced sets. The original cast, lacking only Regina Resnik, wore their dashing Beaton costumes and sang confidently in their new surroundings. Steber, Elias, Gedda, Tozzi and Ina Maluniuk made the last act quintet stand out, as the strongest and most appealing music, confirming earlier impressions; (there is more that will require repeated hearings). Maestro Mitropoulos had the warmest ovation of anyone concerned, and the Vienna Philharmonic played with its most golden tone, thereby setting to rest rumors of near-sabotage at the rehearsals. The Salzburg staging of "Vanessa" had particular appeal.

Τῆς κ. ΑΘΗΝΑΣ ΣΠΑΝΟΥΔΗ

ΚΑΘΕ χρόνο, αὐτὴ τὴν ἐποχή, μιὰ ἀληθινὴ μέθη συνέχει τοὺς φιλόμουσους ὅλου τοῦ κόσμου. Καὶ ἴσως ποτὲ ἄλλοτε ἡ ἔλξις τῶν μεγάλων Φεστιβὰλ — ποὺ ξετυλίγουν τὶς μαγεῖες τους ἀπὸ τὴν ἀρχὴ τοῦ καλοκαιριοῦ ὡς τὸ τέλος τοῦ φθινοπώρου —δὲν εἶχε ἐκδηλωθῆ τόσο ἐντατικὰ ὅσο ἐφέτος. Ἕνα διεθνὲς κοινὸ συρρέει συνεπαρμένο στοὺς τόπους τῶν μουσικῶν αὐτῶν ἑορτασμῶν, στὴ Φλωρεντία, στὸ Σάλτσμπουργκ, στὸ Μπαϋρόϋτ, στὴ Λουκέρνη, στὸ Ἑλσίνκι, στὴ Χάγη, στὸ Μόναχο, στὸ Βερολῖνο, στὴ Βιέννη, στὴ Βενετία καὶ σ' ἄλλους ἀκόμη. Σ' αὐτὰ τὰ καθιερωμένα ἀπὸ τὴν παράδοσι εὐρωπαϊκὰ Φεστιβάλ, ἦλθε πρὶν ἀπὸ τρία χρόνια νὰ προστεθῆ ἡ ἑλληνικὴ καλλιτεχνικὴ πανήγυρις, μέσα στὸ ἀπαράμιλλο πλαίσιο τῶν ἀρχαίων μας θεάτρων μὲ τὰ γρανιτένια ἐδώλια καὶ τὴν ἱερὴ κόγχη τὴ σφραγισμένη ἀπὸ τοὺς ἑλληνικοὺς αἰῶνες. Τὸ ξεκίνημα αὐτὸ σημείωσε ἕνα σταθμὸ ἰδεαλιστικῆς νοοτροπίας στὴν κατεύθυνσι τῶν καλλιτεχνικῶν πεπρωμένων τῆς πατρίδας μας. Οἱ ὑψηλότερες δραματικὲς συγκινήσεις καὶ ἡ διάχυτη χαρὰ τῆς μεγάλης τέχνης γίνονται, μὲ τὴν καθιέρωσι τοῦ Φεστιβὰλ τῶν Ἀθηνῶν, ἕνα ἀπὸ τὰ προνόμια τοῦ θείου αὐτοῦ τόπου.

Τώρα, ὁ καταπληκτικὸς Δημήτρης Μητρόπουλος, ὁ μεγάλος αὐτὸς ἀρχιμουσικὸς ποὺ περιφέρει θριαμβευτικὰ τ' ὄνομα τῆς Ἑλλάδος στὸν παληὸ καὶ στὸν νέο κόσμο, ἔρχεται νὰ κλείση τὶς ἐκδηλώσεις τοῦ ἐφετεινοῦ Φεστιβὰλ ἐπὶ κεφαλῆς τῆς περιφήμης Φιλαρμονικῆς Ὀρχήστρας τῆς Βιέννης! Ἔτσι, ὕστερα ἀπὸ εἴκοσι ὁλόκληρα χρόνια μιᾶς ἀπαράμιλλης διεθνοῦς σταδιοδρομίας, ὁ μάγος ποὺ εἶναι ἱκανὸς νὰ ἐξαπολύη ὅλες τὶς δαιμόνιες δυνάμεις τῆς μουσικῆς, μὰ καὶ νὰ τὶς ὑποτάσση μ' ἕνα του νεῦμα, θὰ ἐμφανισθῆ μέσα σὲ ἰδανικὲς συνθῆκες, αὐτὴ τὴν ἑβδομάδα στὸ θέατρο Ἡρώδου τοῦ Ἀττικοῦ, ἑρμηνεύοντας μὲ τὴ δική του σφραγίδα συμφωνικὰ ἀριστουργήματα τοῦ Μπάχ, τοῦ Μπετόβεν καὶ τοῦ Μπράμς, μαζὶ μὲ κορυφαῖες σύγχρονες δημιουργίες τοῦ Ριχάρδου Στράους καὶ τοῦ Ἄρνολντ Σένμπεργκ.

Ὁ κάθε Ἕλλην ἀκροατὴς συνδέεται μὲ τὸν Δημήτρη Μητρόπουλο μὲ ἀδιάρρηκτες ψυχικὲς ἶνες. Ποιός δὲν θυμᾶται — ἀπ' ὅσους εὐτύχησαν νὰ τὸν παρακολουθήσουν ἐδῶ τὰ προπολεμικὰ χρόνια — τὸ κεραύνωμα τῆς μπαγκέττας του, τὴ θέρμη καὶ τὴν πειθὼ τῆς κάθε του δημιουργικῆς ἑρμηνείας; Ὁ Μητρόπουλος ἦταν τότε τὸ εἴδωλο τῶν ἐφηβικῶν μας χρόνων, ὁ μεγάλος μας διδάσκαλος τοῦ ἐνθουσιασμοῦ. Ἡ ψυχικὴ ὑποβολὴ ποὺ ἐξασκοῦσε ἐπάνω στοὺς μουσικοὺς τῆς ὀρχήστρας μὲ τὸ γαλανὸ μαγνητικό του βλέμμα, μὲ τὴν κάθε του ἁρμονικὴ κίνησι, ἦταν ἀκαταμάχητη. Τὸ ἀξίωμά του ἀποκτοῦσε ἔτσι στὰ μάτια μας ἕνα χαρακτῆρα μυστηριακὸ καὶ ὑπεράνθρωπο. Γιατὶ εἶχε πάντα τὴ δύναμι, ἀπὸ ἕναν κόσμο ὑλικὸ—τὸν ἐνόργανο κι' ἀπρόσωπο μέσα στὴν πολυπροσωπία του κόσμο τῆς ὀρχήστρας— νὰ δημιουργῆ τὸν ἄϋλο μεταφυσικὸ κόσμο, στὸν ὁποῖο μᾶς μετέφερε μεταρσιωμένους.

Ὁ Μητρόπουλος ὑπῆρξε ἀνέκαθεν ἕνας «ἀγαπημένος τῶν θεῶν». Ἀνήκει στὴ συνομοταξία τῶν μεγάλων ἐκτελεστῶν, αὐτῶν ποὺ δημιουργῶντας μαγευτικὲς χίμαιρες εἶναι ἄξιοι νὰ ἐκπλήξουν καὶ νὰ κατακτήσουν τὴν ἐποχή τους. Σήμερα ὁ Μητρόπουλος εἶναι ὁ Ἕλλην θριαμβευτὴς ποὺ στὴν ἀκμὴ τῆς ἡλικίας του συμπλήρωσε τὸν κύκλο μιᾶς ἀπίθανης σταδιοδρομίας καὶ συγκεντρώνει τὸν θαυμασμὸ καὶ τὴν ἐκτίμησι τοῦ διεθνοῦς μουσικοῦ κόσμου.

Τὸν θαυμασμό, γιὰ τὴν σπάνια μουσικὴ περίπτωσι ποὺ παρουσιάζει: τὴ μουσικὴ φλόγα, τὴν ἀκοίμητη καὶ τὴν ἀσάλευτη ὀρφικὴ ἀκτινοβολία. Τὴν ἐκτίμησι γιὰ τὴν ἀκατάβλητη καὶ τόσο ἐπίπονη ἐργασία ποὺ δὲν ἔπαυσε ποτὲ νὰ προσφέρη.

Καὶ στὸ ὕψος, ὅμως, αὐτὸ τῆς μουσικῆς, τῆς πνευματικῆς καὶ τῆς αἰσθητικῆς του ὡριμότητος, ὁ Δημήτρης Μητρόπουλος συγκρατεῖ ὅλο τὸν φλογερὸ αὐθορμητισμὸ τῆς πρώτης του νεότητος. Ὅλη ἐκείνη τὴν περιπάθεια τῆς ἰδιοσυγκρασίας ποὺ σημάδεψε τὸ μεγάλο του ξεκίνημα.

Στὴν πρώτη καὶ στὴν τελευταία του συναυλία, ὁ Μητρόπουλος θὰ διευθύνη τὴν περίφημη — καὶ τολμηρὴ — δική του μεταγραφὴ γιὰ ὀρχήστρα τῆς μεγαλειώδους Φαντασίας καὶ Φούγκας σὲ σὸλ ἔλασσον τοῦ Μπάχ. Ὁ καταπληκτικὸς δυναμισμὸς καὶ ἡ διονυσιακὴ χαρὰ μιᾶς παρόμοιας ἐνορχηστρώσεως — ποὺ ὁ ἄλλος μουσικολόγος Ἐμὶλ Βιλλερμὸζ ἐχαρακτήρισε κάποτε ὡς «ἀποθέωσι τῆς ἀντιστίξεως» — ἀποτελοῦν μιὰν ἐξαίσια προσφορὰ στὴν τέχνη τῆς φούγκας. «Ὁ ἴδιος ὁ Μπὰχ — ἔγραψε ὁ Βιλλερμὸζ — θὰ ἐνοιωθε θάμβος στὸ ἄκουσμα αὐτῆς τῆς ἐνορχηστρώσεως τῆς Φαντασίας του, ποὺ φωτίζει τὰ σκοτεινὰ καὶ πλατειὰ βελούδινα ἀκκόρντα του, μὲ τοὺς ἤχους τῶν σαλπίγγων. Οἱ ἐξαγγελτικοὶ αὐτοὶ ἦχοι μοιάζουν μ' ἐκτυφλωτικὲς ἀστραπὲς μέσα στὰ σύννεφα. Θ' ἀγαποῦσε ἀκόμη τὸ λεπτότατο ἀσημένιο δίχτυ ποὺ τὸ μικρὸ φλάουτο πλέκει γύρω ἀπὸ τὰ θέματα». Βαθειὰ μυημένος στὰ μυστικὰ τῆς θρησκείας τοῦ Μπάχ, ὁ διασκευαστὴς προσέδωσε στὴν ὀρχήστρα συνηχήσεις ἐκκλησιαστικοῦ ὀργάνου. Ἡ σύντομη αὐτὴ συμφωνικὴ σελίδα ἔχει κάτι τὸ ἀπέραντο στὸ μεγαλεῖο της.

Τὸ σημείωμα αὐτὸ δὲν εἶναι δυνατὸν νὰ τελειώση χωρὶς ἕνα ἀπόσπασμα ἀπὸ τὰ ἄρθρο ποὺ ἔγραψε ἡ μητέρα μου, ὅταν ὁ Ἕλλην ἀρχιμουσικὸς ἀνέλαβε τὴ διεύθυνσι τῆς μεγαλύτερης ὀρχήστρας τοῦ κόσμου, τῆς Φιλαρμονικῆς τῆς Νέας Ὑόρκης.

Λίγοι γνωρίζουν ὅτι ὁ Μητρόπουλος εἶχε ἐμφανισθῆ γιὰ πρώτη φορὰ — δειλὰ παιδὶ δεκαοκτὼ μόλις χρόνων — γιὰ νὰ συνοδεύση στὸ πιάνο τὴν Σμαράγδα Γενάδη σὲ μιὰ συναυλία της. Τότε δέχθηκε τὸ προφητικὸ ἀλήθινὰ χρῖσμα τῆς Σοφίας Σπανούδη, ποὺ ἀφοῦ ἀνακάλυψε καὶ καθιέρωσε τὴν ἑλληνικὴ αὐτὴ μεγαλοφυΐα, δὲν ἔπαυσε ποτὲ νὰ τὴν ὑμνῆ καὶ νὰ τὴν θερμαίνη μὲ ὅλη τὴ φλόγα τῆς καλλιτεχνικῆς της καρδιᾶς. Πολὺ ἀργότερα, ἐκεῖνος πρῶτος τὴν ἀπεκάλεσε «Μάνα τοῦ Μουσικοῦ» —σὲ παραλληλισμὸ μὲ τὴ Μάνα τοῦ Στρατιώτη. Πρὶν ἀπὸ τὸ δικό της κείμενο, παραθέτω ἕνα ἀπόσπασμα ἀπὸ τὸ τελευταῖο γράμμα ποὺ τῆς ἔστειλε...

ΜΕ ΧΑΡΑΝ θὰ ὑποδεχθοῦν αἱ Ἀθῆναι τὸν διαπρεπῆ ἀρχιμουσικὸν Δημήτρη Μητρόπουλον, ὁ ὁποῖος ἀφικνεῖται διὰ νὰ διευθύνη τὰς τέσσαρας συναυλίας τῆς Φιλαρμονικῆς τῆς Βιέννης τὴν προσεχῆ ἑβδομάδα εἰς τὸ Ὠδεῖον Ἡρώδου τοῦ Ἀττικοῦ. Ἡ πανηγυρικὴ αὐτὴ ἐπισφράγισις τῶν ἐκδηλώσεων τοῦ ἐφετεινοῦ Φεστιβὰλ Ἀθηνῶν θὰ δώση καὶ πάλιν τὴν εὐκαιρίαν εἰς τοὺς Ἀθηναίους μουσικοφίλους νὰ χειροκροτήσουν τὸ λαμπρὸν αὐτὸ τέκνον τῆς Ἑλλάδος, τὸ ὁποῖον διεθνῶς τὴν τιμᾶ χωρὶς ποτὲ νὰ λησμονῆ τὴν ἑλληνικήν του προέλευσιν. Ὁ Δημήτρης Μητρόπουλος εἶναι δημιούργημα μιᾶς μουσικῆς παραδόσεως τῆς ὁποίας οἱ κυριώτεροι πρωτεργάται εὑρίσκονται ἀκόμη ἐν ζωῇ καὶ συνεχίζουν τὸ ἐπίπονον ἔργον των ὑπὸ τὰς δυσχερεῖς συνθήκας τῆς ἑλληνικῆς πραγματικότητος. Αἱ ἐτήσιοι ἐπισκέψεις τοῦ Δημήτρη Μητροπούλου ἀποτελοῦν ἄλλην μίαν ἀπόδειξιν ὅτι αἱ προσπάθειαι αὐταὶ δὲν πηγαίνουν χαμένα. Διότι εἰς κάθε διέλευσίν του ἀπὸ τὴν πόλιν τῶν Ἀθηνῶν, ὁ παγκοσμίου φήμης Ἕλλην ἀρχιμουσικὸς μεταφέρει εἰς τὰς Ἀθήνας τὴν ἔκφρασιν τῆς ἐκτιμήσεως καὶ τοῦ κύρους τῶν ὁποίων ἀπολαμβάνει ὁ ἑλληνικὸς μουσικὸς κόσμος εἰς ὅλα τὰ μουσικὰ κέντρα τοῦ ἐξωτερικοῦ.

ΑΙ ΣΥΝΑΥΛΙΑΙ ΤΟΥ ΜΗΤΡΟΠΟΥΛΟΥ

Ἐκ τοῦ Ἑλληνικοῦ Ὀργανισμοῦ Τουρισμοῦ διευκρινίζεται, διὰ τὰς τέσσαρας συναυλίας τοῦ Μητροπούλου εἰς Ἀθήνας, αἱ ὁποῖαι θὰ δοθοῦν εἰς τὸ Ὠδεῖον Ἡρώδου τοῦ Ἀττικοῦ εἰς τὰ πλαίσια τῶν ἐκδηλώσεων τοῦ Φεστιβὰλ Ἀθηνῶν τὴν 2αν, 3ην, 5ην καὶ 6ην Σεπτεμβρίου, ὅτι ἐκτὸς τῶν θέσεων τῶν εἰσιτηρίων τῶν 40 δραχμῶν, αἱ ὁποῖαι ἀλλωστε ἔχουν διατεθῆ, αἱ ὑπόλοιποι θέσεις εἶναι καθημένων, ἤτοι: τῶν 80 δραχ. εἰς τὸ ἄνω διάζωμα καὶ τῶν 300, 220 καὶ 150 δραχ. εἰς τὸ κάτω διάζωμα.

ΟΙ ΙΣΡΑΗΛΙΤΑΙ ΚΡΙΤΙΚΟΙ ΓΙΑ ΤΟΝ ΜΗΤΡΟΠΟΥΛΟ

Αἱ ἐφημερίδες τοῦ Ἰσραὴλ ἐχαρακτήρισαν ὡς τὸ μεγαλύτερον καλλιτεχνικὸν γεγονὸς τῆς Ἱστορίας τῆς χώρας των τὰς συναυλίας τοῦ Μητροπούλου εἰς τὸ Ἰσραήλ, τὸ πρόγραμμα τῶν ὁποίων ἐπανελήφθη ἐννέα φορὰς ἐνώπιον 22.000 συνδρομητῶν τῆς συμφωνικῆς σαιζὸν ἐπὶ πληθυσμοῦ 2.000.000 ἀτόμων.

Παραθέτομεν περιλήψεις τῶν κριτικῶν τῶν κυριωτέρων ἐφημερίδων τοῦ Ἰσραὴλ: «Γεντιὸτ Ἀχαρονότ»: «Κάτω ἀπὸ τὸ μαγικό του χέρι, οἱ μουσικοὶ ἐμοιαζαν κατὰ εἴκοσι χρόνια νεώτεροι. Τὸ πρόγραμμα ὁλόκληρο μᾶς φάνηκε καινούργιο, σὰν νὰ τ' ἀκούγαμε γιὰ πρώτη φορά. Σὲ ὅλα τὰ ἔργα δόθηκε μιὰ πρωτότυπη ἑρμηνεία ἀπὸ τὸν Μητρόπουλο, ποὺ ἐλέγχει τὴν ὀρχήστρα σὰν νὰ παίζη ὁ ἴδιος τὸ κάθε ὄργανο. Εἶναι ἕνα μουσικὸ φαινόμενο». «Χααρέτζ»: «Τὸ μουσικὸ Ἰσραὴλ εἶχε τὴν εὐκαιρία νὰ διδαχθῆ ἕνα κεφάλαιο μουσικῆς, ποὺ δὲν εἶχε γνωρίσει ἀπὸ τὴν ἐποχὴ τοῦ Τοσκανίνι. Ὁ Μητρόπουλος μᾶς ἐδίδαξε κατὰ τὴν διάρκεια μιᾶς καὶ μόνης συναυλίας περισσότερα διὰ τὴν μουσικὴν οὐσίαν, παρὰ ὁποιοσδήποτε ἄλλος διάσημος μαέστρος». «Λαμερχάβ»: «Ὁ Μητρόπουλος διευθύνων εἶναι ἀξέχαστο ἀνθρώπινο καὶ καλλιτεχνικὸ δίωμα. Δὲν μποροῦμε νὰ θυμηθοῦμε ἄλλες στιγμές, ὅπου ἡ ὀρχήστρα μας νὰ ἔφθασε σὲ τέτοια ὕψη μουσικῆς καὶ καλλιτεχνικῆς τελειότητος». «Νταβάρ»: «Ἀπὸ αὐτὸν τὸν μαέστρον, τὸν πότε ἄγρεμο καὶ ξαφνικὰ θυελλώδη, οἱ νεώτεροι μαέστροι ἔχουν νὰ διδαχθοῦν πολλά». «Ἄλ Χάμισμαρ»: «Ἡ ἐπίσκεψις τοῦ Μητροπούλου εἰς τὸ Ἰσραὴλ εἶναι ἕνα ἀπὸ τὰ μέγιστα πνευματικὰ γεγονότα τῆς 20ῆς μας ἐπετείου. Οἱ ἀκροατές του μαθαίνουν τί εἶναι ἡ ἱερότητα τῆς μουσικῆς».

Ἡ Φιλαρμονικὴ Βιέννης

ΟΠΩΣ ἔχομεν ἤδη ἀναφέρει, τὴν 8ην ἑσπερινὴν τῆς προσεχοῦς Δευτέρας, 1ης Σεπτεμβρίου, φθάνει ἀεροπορικῶς εἰς Ἀθήνας ὁ διάσημος Ἕλλην ἀρχιμουσικὸς Δημήτρης Μητρόπουλος, ὁ ὁποῖος θὰ διευθύνη τὰς τέσσαρας συναυλίας τῆς Φιλαρμονικῆς Ὀρχήστρας τῆς Βιέννης εἰς τὸ Ὠδεῖον Ἡρώδου τοῦ Ἀττικοῦ τὴν 2αν, τὴν 3ην, τὴν 5ην καὶ τὴν 6ην Σεπτεμβρίου, μὲ τὰς ὁποίας θὰ κλείση τὸ πρόγραμμα τῶν ἐφετεινῶν ἐκδηλώσεων τοῦ Φεστιβὰλ Ἀθηνῶν.

Ἡ Φιλαρμονικὴ Βιέννης, τὴν ὁποίαν θὰ διευθύνη, ἀποτελεῖται κυρίως ἀπὸ στελέχη τῆς Κρατικῆς Ὀρχήστρας τῆς Βιέννης, ἡ ὁποία, ὡς γνωστόν, μετέχει τῶν παραστάσεων τῆς Κρατικῆς Ὄπερας Βιέννης. Πολλὰ μέλη της ἐπίσης ἀνήκουν εἰς τὴν Κρατικὴν Ἀκαδημίαν Μουσικῆς ἢ καὶ εἰς περίφημα συγκροτήματα Μουσικῆς Δωματίου, ὅπως τὸ κουαρτέττο «Μπάρυλλι», τὸ κουαρτέττο «Φιλαρμόνια» καὶ τὸ «Βίνερ Ὀκτέτ». Ἐκτὸς ἀπὸ τὰς τακτικάς της ἠχογραφήσεις μὲ ἀρχιμουσικοὺς παγκοσμίου φήμης, ἡ Φιλαρμονικὴ τῆς Βιέννης δίδει ἤδη ἀπὸ τοῦ 1870, κατὰ παράδοσιν, 8 συναυλίας σύνδρομητῶν εἰς Βιέννην κατ' ἔτος καί, κατὰ τοὺς θερινοὺς μῆνας, λαμβάνει μέρος εἰς τὰς ἑορτὰς τοῦ Σάλτσμπουργκ.

(Συνέχεια ἐκ τῆς 3ης σελίδος)

πογοήτευσα. Κρῖμα μονάχα ποὺ ἀναγκάσθηκα νὰ ἐγκαταλείψω τὴν πατρίδα μου — τὸν τόπο ποὺ μοῦ χάρισε τὶς πρῶτες, τὶς πιὸ πολύτιμές μου ἐντυπώσεις, τὶς βάσεις τῆς παιδείας μου, γιὰ νὰ ὑπηρετῶ τὴν τέχνη μου μακρυὰ ἀπὸ σᾶς. Θὰ ἤμουν, βέβαια, πολὺ πιὸ εὐτυχισμένος ἂν μποροῦσα ν' ἀφιερώσω τὰ φῶτα μου καὶ τὴν ἐργασία μου στὴ χώρα ποὺ γεννήθηκα, ἀλλὰ ἡ Μοῖρα θέλησε νὰ περάσω τὸ ὑπόλοιπο τῆς ζωῆς μου ἐδῶ καὶ νἄρχωμαι κάποτε, σὰν ἐπισκέπτης, στὴν ἴδια μου τὴν πατρίδα... Σοῦ στέλνω τώρα τὴν πιὸ θερμή, τὴν πιὸ εὐγνώμονη ἀγάπη μου, σὲ σένα, τὴν ἄγρυπνη Μάνα τοῦ Μουσικοῦ, καὶ σοῦ δηλώνω ὅτι πρέπει νὰ νοιώθης μιὰ βαθύτατη ὑπερηφάνεια γιὰ τὸν εὐεργετικό σου ρόλο καὶ γιὰ τὴν ἀνεκτίμητη συμβολή σου στὴ μουσικὴ ζωὴ τῆς Ἑλλάδος μας. Σὺ στάθηκες ἕνας ἀνυπολόγιστης σημασίας παράγων καὶ στὴ δική μου προσωπικὴ ἐξέλιξι, γιὰ τὴν ὁποία σοῦ χρωστῶ τόσο πολλά».

Τὸ ἀπόσπασμα ἀπὸ τὸ ἄρθρο τῆς Σοφίας Σπανούδη γιὰ τὸν Μητρόπουλο, γράφτηκε τὸν Ἰανουάριο τοῦ 1949:

«Στὸν μουσικὸ ἀπολογισμὸ τοῦ ἔτους ποὺ πέρασε, ἕνα ἑλληνικὸ ὄνομα σελαγίζει σὰν ἄστρο στὸ παγκόσμιο στερέωμα, μὲ ἀσάλευτη ἀκτινοβολία: Δημήτρης Μητρόπουλος. Τὸ ὄνομά του εἶναι ταυτόσημό μ' ἕναν ἑλληνικὸ θρίαμβο, ποὺ κατακυρώθηκε τώρα περιφανῶς μὲ τὴν ἐκλογή του ὡς διευθυντοῦ τῆς Φιλαρμονικῆς τῆς Νέας Ὑόρκης, ποὺ εἶναι ἡ μεγαλύτερη ὀρχήστρα τοῦ κόσμου. Ἡ μεγάλη αὐτὴ τιμὴ ποὺ ἀνεβάζει τὸ μουσικὸ παιδὶ τῆς Ἑλλάδος στὴν πρώτη θέσι μέσα στὴν παγκόσμια μουσικὴ συνείδησι, ἀντανακλᾶ σήμερα στὴν πατρίδα του. Τώρα ἡ Ἀμερικὴ τὸν παίρνει ὁριστικὰ ἀπὸ τὴν Εὐρώπη. Παραμερίζοντας τόσες ἄλλες διάσημες μουσικὲς προσωπικότητες ποὺ διεκδικοῦσαν τὴν ἴδια θέσι, διαλέγει τον «Ἕλληνα ἀρχιμουσικό», ἀναγνωρίζοντας τὴν ἀσύγκριτη ἀξία του, ποὺ ξεπερνᾶ κάθε ἄλλη μὲ τὴν ἐντελῶς προσωπική της γοητεία. Γιατὶ ὁ Μητρόπουλος παρουσιάσθηκε εὐθὺς ἀπὸ τὴν πρώτη του ἐμφάνισι στὴν Εὐρώπη, στὰ 1933, σὰν ἕνα μουσικὸ θαῦμα.

«Ἑλληνικὸ θαῦμα» τὸν χαρακτήριζε ὁ Ἀντρὲ Συαρές, σὲ μιὰ εἰδικὴ μελέτη γιὰ τὸν νέο Ἕλληνα ἀρχιμουσικό, τὸν ὁποῖο χαιρετοῦσε μὲ τὰ ἴδια αὐτὰ λόγια τοῦ μεγάλου Ρενάν. Ἔκτοτε, οἱ περιφημότεροι τεχνοκρῖται τῆς Εὐρώπης καὶ τῆς Ἀμερικῆς, ὑπερακοντίζουν ὁ ἕνας τὸν ἄλλον στοὺς διθυράμβους ποὺ γράφουν γιὰ τὸν Μητρόπουλο. Κι' ἀναφορικὰ μὲ τὴν περίπτωσί του, θυμοῦμαι τώρα τὰ ἐπιγραμματικὰ λόγια ποὺ ἔγραψε ὁ Λίστ γιὰ τὸν Βάγκνερ: «Εἶναι ἀδύνατον νὰ μιλήσῃ κανεὶς γι' αὐτόν, χωρὶς τὰ λόγια του νὰ πάρουν εὐθὺς ἀπὸ τὴν ἀρχὴ τὸν τόνο μιᾶς παράφορης ὑπερβολῆς». Ἔτσι ὁ Μητρόπουλος ἐπιβάλλει σὲ ὅλους τὴ μεγαλορρημοσύνη.

Σὰν συνθέτης, ὁ Μητρόπουλος μᾶς παρουσίαζε στὴν πρώτη του νεότητα, ἔργα - μανιφέστα τῶν παρακινδυνευμένων γιὰ τὴν ἐποχὴ τάσεων μιᾶς πρωτόφαντης μουσικῆς αἰσθητικῆς, τὸ καθένα ἀποκρυσταλλωμένο σὲ μιὰ ξεχωριστὴ φόρμα. Μὰ ὁ μουσικὸς Μητρόπουλος εἶναι ἀκόμη καταπληκτικώτερο φαινόμενο ἀπὸ τὸν Μητρόπουλο συνθέτη. Ἡ μουσικὴ του φύσις, ἡ μουσικὴ του ἰδιοσυγκρασία ποὺ τὸν δονεῖ ὁλόκληρο, ἐκμηδενίζει μὲ τὴ δύναμί της τὸ συνθετικό του δαιμόνιο.

Ἔκτοτε, τὸν συνεπαίρνει τὸ μεγάλο ωμφωνικὸ ποτάμι. Ἀπὸ τὴν Εὐρώπη τὸν φέρνει στὴν Ἀμερική. Ἐκεῖ, ὁ προφητικὸς στίχος τοῦ Γκαῖτε: «Πάντα ψηλότερα!...» πραγματοποιεῖται γιὰ τὸ δοξασμένο παιδὶ τῆς Ἑλλάδος, ποὺ ἔφθασε σήμερα στὴν ὑψηλότερη κορυφὴ τῆς Τέχνης».

Ὁ Δημήτρης Μητρόπουλος βρίσκεται τώρα μεταξύ μας. Καὶ ὅλη αὐτὴ τὴν ἑβδομάδα οἱ συγκλονιστικὲς ἁρμονίες τῆς ὀρχήστρας του θὰ ξεχυθοῦν στὰ κράσπεδα τοῦ ἱεροῦ βράχου. Μὲ τὶς ἄπειρες ἐναλλαγὲς τῶν ἐκφράσεων τῆς μορφῆς του —, μιᾶς μορφῆς ποὺ τὴν ἔχει ὁριστικὰ σφραγίσει ἡ ἔντασις τῆς σκέψεως— μὲ τὶς χαρακτηριστικὲς γραμμὲς τῆς κατατομῆς, ποὺ ξεχωρίζουν πότε μέσα σὲ θλιβερὲς σκιὲς πόνου καὶ πότε στὰ φωτερὰ νέφη τῆς μουσικῆς ἁτμοσφαίρας ποὺ τὸν περιβάλλει τὴν ὥρα ποὺ διευθύνει, ὁ Μητρόπουλος, ἀποκαλύπτοντας στὸ ἔκθαμβο πλῆθος τῶν ἀκροατῶν τὰ θαύματα τῆς ἑρμηνείας του, θὰ φωτίση μὲ τὴ φλογερὴ ἀναλαμπὴ ἑνὸς μετεώρου τὸν καλοκαιρινὸ οὐρανὸ τῆς πατρίδας μας.

ΤΗΝ 1ην ΣΕΠΤΕΜΒΡΙΟΥ ΘΑΝΕΙ Ο ΜΗΤΡΟΠΟΥΛΟΣ

Κατ' ἀνακοίνωσιν τοῦ Ἑλληνικοῦ Ὀργανισμοῦ Τουρισμοῦ, τὴν ἐσπέραν τῆς 1ης Σεπτεμβρίου ἀφικνεῖται ἀεροπορικῶς εἰς Ἀθήνας ὁ διάσημος Ἕλλην ἀρχιμουσικὸς Δημήτρης Μητρόπουλος, ὁ ὁποῖος θὰ διευθύνη τὰς τέσσαρας συναυλίας τῆς Φιλαρμονικῆς Ὀρχήστρας τῆς Βιέννης τὴν προσεχῆ ἑβδομάδα εἰς τὸ Ὠδεῖον Ἡρώδου τοῦ Ἀττικοῦ. Ἡ παγκοσμίου φήμης Ἕλλην ἀρχιμουσικὸς Δημήτρης Μητρόπουλος, ὁ ὁποῖος θὰ διευθύνη τὰς τέσσαρας συναυλίας τῆς Φιλαρμονικῆς Ὀρχήστρας τῆς Βιέννης τὴν προσεχῆ ἑβδομάδα εἰς τὸ Ὠδεῖον Ἡρώδου τοῦ Ἀττικοῦ. Ἡ πανηγυρικὴ αὐτὴ ἐπισφράγισις τῶν ἐκδηλώσεων τοῦ ἐφετεινοῦ Φεστιβὰλ Ἀθηνῶν θὰ δώση καὶ πάλιν τὴν εὐκαιρίαν εἰς τοὺς Ἀθηναίους μουσικοφίλους νὰ χειροκροτήσουν τὸ λαμπρὸν αὐτὸ τέκνον τῆς Ἑλλάδος, τὸ ὁποῖον διεθνῶς τὴν τιμᾶ χωρὶς ποτὲ νὰ λησμονῆ τὴν ἑλληνικήν του προέλευσιν. Ὁ Δημήτρης Μητρόπουλος εἶναι δημιούργημα μιᾶς μουσικῆς παραδόσεως τῆς ὁποίας οἱ κυριώτεροι πρωτεργάται εὑρίσκονται ἀκόμη ἐν ζωῇ καὶ συνεχίζουν τὸ ἐπίπονον ἔργον των ὑπὸ τὰς δυσχερεῖς συνθήκας τῆς ἑλληνικῆς πραγματικότητος. Αἱ ἐτήσιοι ἐπισκέψεις τοῦ Δημήτρη Μητροπούλου ἀποτελοῦν ἄλλην μίαν ἀπόδειξιν ὅτι αἱ προσπάθειαι αὐταὶ δὲν πηγαίνουν χαμένα. Διότι εἰς κάθε διέλευσίν του ἀπὸ τὴν πόλιν τῶν Ἀθηνῶν, ὁ παγκοσμίου φήμης Ἕλλην ἀρχιμουσικὸς μεταφέρει εἰς τὰς Ἀθήνας τὴν ἔκφρασιν τῆς ἐκτιμήσεως καὶ τοῦ κύρους τῶν ὁποίων ἀπολαμβάνει ὁ ἑλληνικὸς μουσικὸς κόσμος εἰς ὅλα τὰ μουσικὰ κέντρα τοῦ ἐξωτερικοῦ.

Κατ' ἀνακοίνωσιν τοῦ 'Ελληνικοῦ 'Οργανισμοῦ Τουρισμοῦ, τὴν 1ην Σεπτεμβρίου ἀφικνεῖται ἀεροπορικῶς εἰς 'Αθήνας ὁ διάσημος "Ελλην ἀρχιμουσικὸς Δημήτρης Μητρόπουλος, ὁ ὁποῖος θὰ διευθύνῃ τὰς τέσσαρας συναυλίας τῆς Φιλαρμονικῆς 'Ορχήστρας τῆς Βιέννης εἰς τὸ 'Ωδεῖον 'Ηρῴδου τοῦ 'Αττικοῦ τὴν 2αν, τὴν 3ην, τὴν 5ην καὶ τὴν 6ην Σεπτεμβρίου, μὲ τὰς ὁποίας θὰ κλείσῃ τὸ πρόγραμμα τῶν ἐφετεινῶν ἐκδηλώσεων τοῦ Φεστιβὰλ 'Αθηνῶν. 'Η ἐμφάνισις τοῦ Μητροπούλου εἰς 'Αθήνας ἀποτελεῖ τὸ μεγαλύτερον μεταπολεμικὸν μουσικὸν γεγονὸς εἰς τὴν 'Ελλάδα.

'Ο διάσημος "Ελλην μαέστρος ἐγεννήθη εἰς 'Αθήνας τὸν Φεβρουάριον τοῦ 1896. Τὰς πρώτας σπουδάς του ἔλαβεν εἰς τὸ 'Ωδεῖον 'Αθηνῶν ἀπὸ τοὺς καθηγητὰς Λοϋντβιχ Βασενχόβεν καὶ 'Αρμάνδον Μαρσὶκ καὶ ἀκολούθως τὸ 1920 μετέβη εἰς Βέλγιον, ὅπου ἐσπούδασε σύνθεσιν μὲ καθηγητὴν τὸν Γκίλσον. Τὸ ἑπόμενον ἔτος μετέβη εἰς Βερολῖνον καὶ εἰργάσθη μὲ τὸν Μπουζόνι. Τὸ 1924 ἐπανῆλθεν εἰς 'Αθήνας καὶ ἀνέλαβε τὴν διεύθυνσιν τῆς Κρατικῆς 'Ορχήστρας ἐπὶ μίαν 12ετίαν. Τὸ 1937 μετέβη διὰ πρώτην φορὰν εἰς 'Ηνωμένας Πολιτείας, ὅπου διηύθυνε σειρὰν συναυλιῶν τῆς Συμφωνικῆς 'Ορχήστρας Βοστώνης καὶ δύο ἔτη ἀργότερον διεδέχθη τὸν Εὐγένιον 'Ορμάνδη εἰς τὴν διεύθυνσιν τῆς 'Ορχήστρας Μιννεαπόλεως. Τὸ 1950 ἀνέλαβε τὴν διεύθυνσιν τῆς Φιλαρμονικῆς Νέας 'Υόρκης, ἡ ὁποία εἶναι ἀπὸ τὰς μεγαλυτέρας καὶ πλέον συγκροτημένας ὀρχήστρας τοῦ κόσμου, ἄξιωμα τὸ ὁποῖον διετήρησε μέχρι τῆς προσφάτου παραιτήσεώς του. Σήμερον ὁ Μητρόπουλος εἶναι ὁ κυριώτερος ἀρχιμουσικὸς τῆς Φιλαρμονικῆς Νέας 'Υόρκης, ἡ ὁποία εἶναι ἀπὸ τὰς μεγαλυτέρας καὶ πλέον συγκροτημένας ὀρχήστρας τοῦ κόσμου, ἄξιωμα τὸ ὁποῖον διετήρησε μέχρι τῆς προσφάτου παραιτήσεώς του. Σήμερα ὁ Μητρόπουλος εἶναι ὁ κυριώτερος ἀρχιμουσικὸς τῆς Φιλαρμονικῆς καὶ τῆς 'Ορχήστρας τῆς Μετροπόλιταν "Οπερας Νέας 'Υόρκης. 'Η διεθνὴς φήμη του εἶναι τοιαύτη, ὥστε νὰ εἶναι περιζήτητος ἀπὸ τὰ διεθνῆ μουσικὰ κέντρα, αἱ δὲ ἐμφανίσεις του ἀποτελοῦν μεγάλα μουσικὰ γεγονότα (καὶ σχολιάζονται μὲ τοὺς πλέον εὐμενεῖς μουσικοὺς ἐπαίνους). Κατὰ τὸ τρέχον ἔτος ἐπεξεργάσθη περιοδείαν εἰς Νότιον 'Αμερικήν, 'Ισραὴλ καὶ Εὐρώπην, ὅπου ἔτυχεν ἀπὸ τοὺς μουσικοκριτικοὺς καὶ τὸν μουσικὸν κόσμον ἀποθεωτικῆς ὑποδοχῆς. 'Ο Μητρόπουλος μὲ τὴν διεθνῆ του φήμην ἐλάμπρυνε τὸ ἑλληνικὸν ὄνομα καὶ εἶναι ἡ μεγαλυτέρα καλλιτεχνικὴ μορφὴ ποὺ ἐγεννήθη εἰς τὸν τόπον μας. 'Αλλὰ καὶ ὡς ἄνθρωπος, ὁ Μητρόπουλος, παρὰ τὶς δόξες ποὺ ἐγνώρισε, δὲν ἐξέχασε καὶ ἐβοήθησεν εἰς κάθε εὐκαιρίαν τὴν πατρίδα του. 'Ως μουσικὸς δὲ ἀνεδείχθη εἰς προσωπικότητα κύρους μεγάλης ἐπιβολῆς εἰς τοὺς διεθνεῖς μουσικοὺς κύκλους.

. 'Εξ ἄλλου, ἡ Φιλαρμονικὴ τῆς Βιέννης ἀποτελεῖται κυρίως ἀπὸ στελέχη τῆς Κρατικῆς 'Ορχήστρας τῆς Βιέννης, ἡ ὁποία, ὡς γνωστόν, μετέχει τῶν παραστάσεων τῆς Κρατικῆς "Οπερας. Πολλὰ μέλη της ἐπίσης ἀνήκουν εἰς τὴν Κρατικὴν 'Ακαδημίαν Μουσικῆς ἢ εἰς περίφημα συγκροτήματα Μουσικῆς Δωματίου, ὅπως τὸ Κουαρτέττο «Μπάρυλλι», τὸ Κουαρτέττο «Φιλαρμόνια» καὶ τὸ «Βίνερ 'Οκτέτ». 'Αναλυτικῶς τὰ προγράμματα τῶν τεσσάρων συναυλιῶν της εἰς 'Αθήνας ἔχουν ὡς ἀκολούθως: Τρίτη 2 Σεπτεμβρίου: Μπετόβεν: «Λεονώρα ἀρ. 2», «Εἰσαγωγὴ καὶ Συμφωνία ἀρ. 2». Σένμπεργκ: «'Εξαΰλωμένη Νύχτα». Ο ΜΗΤΡΟΠΟΥΛΟΣ ΣΤΗΝ ΑΘΗΝΑ

ΟΙ «ΦΙΛΑΡΜΟΝΙΚΕΡ» ΤΗΣ ΒΙΕΝΝΗΣ

ΤΗΣ κ. ΑΛΕΞΑΝΔΡΑΣ ΛΑΛΑΟΥΝΗ

'Η 'Αθήνα θὰ ὑποδεχθῆ τὴν βραδυὰ τῆς προσεχοῦς Δευτέρας τὸ μεγάλο της τέκνο, τὸν Δημήτρη Μητρόπουλο, ποὺ φθάνει ἀεροπορικῶς γιὰ νὰ μᾶς χαρίσῃ, γιὰ μιὰ φορὰ ἀκόμα τὴν ὑπέροχη τέχνη του, σὲ τέσσερις βραδυὲς —2, 3, 5 καὶ 6 Σεπτεμβρίου — ποὺ περιττεύει, νομίζω, νὰ τονίσω πὼς θ' ἀποτελέσουν τὰ πιὸ ἐξαιρετικὰ μουσικὰ γεγονότα τῶν τελευταίων ἐτῶν.

Αὐτὴ τὴ φορά, ὁ Μητρόπουλος μᾶς ἔρχεται ἐπὶ κεφαλῆς τῆς Φιλαρμονικῆς 'Ορχήστρας τῆς Βιέννης — τῶν «Βίινερ Φιλαρμόνικερ», ὅπως εἶναι ὁ σωστὸς τίτλος» — ποὺ θεωρεῖται σὰν μιὰ ἀπ' τὶς τρεῖς ἢ τέσσερις τελειότερες — καὶ μουσικότερες — ὀρχήστρες τοῦ κόσμου, μιὰ ὀρχήστρα μὲ ἀπέραντη παράδοσι καὶ ἱστορία καὶ ποὺ κάθε της μέλος εἶναι ἕνας καλλιτέχνης σολίστ.

Περιττὸ ἐπίσης εἶναι, νομίζω, νὰ μιλήσῃ κανεὶς γιὰ τὴν προσωπικότητα τοῦ Δημήτρη Μητρόπουλου ποὺ τὸ ὄνομά του ἔχει γίνει πιὰ θρυλικὸ σ' ὅλο τὸν κόσμο καὶ πού, ἀπὸ χρόνια ἤδη συγκαταλέγεται ἀνάμεσα στὰ τέσσερα ἢ πέντε ὀνόματα παγκόσμιας φήμης ἀρχιμουσικῶν, ποὺ ἡ ἐμφάνισί τους στὶς μεγάλες μουσικὲς ἐκδηλώσεις Εὐρώπης καὶ 'Αμερικῆς, ἀποτελεῖ ἕνα γεγονός. 'Εμεῖς ἐδῶ, στὸ ἀκρότατο αὐτὸ σημεῖο τῆς Εὐρώπης, νοιώθουμε ὑπερήφανοι πὼς αὐτὸ τὸ παιδὶ τῆς 'Αθήνας, ὁ παληὸς ἀριστοῦχος ἀπόφοιτος τοῦ 'Ωδείου 'Αθηνῶν, ἀναδείχθηκε διεθνὴς προσωπικότης μὲ κῦρος καὶ ἐπιβολή, ἐλάμπρυνε καὶ λαμπρύνει παντοῦ τὸ ἑλληνικὸ ὄνομα, θυμίζοντας σ' ὅλο τὸν κόσμο πὼς ἡ 'Ελλάδα τοῦ πνεύματος καὶ τῆς Τέχνης δὲν πέθανε, ἀλλὰ ζῇ ἀκόμα καὶ πάλλεται ἀπὸ δημιουργικὸ πνεῦμα, ἀφοῦ μπορεῖ νὰ χαρίζῃ στὸν κόσμο τέτοιους καλλιτέχνες, σὰν τὸν Μητρόπουλο.

Τί σημασία ἔχει τώρα πιὰ ν' ἀναφέρουμε τί σπουδὲς ἔκανε ὁ μαέστρος μας, ποῦ ἐμφανίσθηκε, πόσες περιοδεῖες ἔκανε... 'Ο Μητρόπουλος γεννήθηκε μουσικός, ἀλλὰ ἐργάσθηκε κι' ἐργάζεται σκληρὰ γιὰ νὰ ἀξιοποιήσῃ τὸ θεῖκο του ταλέντο καί, ἂν—ὅπως εἶπε μετριόφρονα κάποτε ὁ ἴδιος στὸ προπέρσινο πέρασμά του ἀπ' τὴν 'Αθήνα — τὸν βοηθήσε ἡ Τύχη, θἄθελα νὰ πῶ πὼς ἡ Τύχη δὲν βοηθάει παρὰ ἐκείνους ποὺ ἀξίζουν πραγματικά. Καὶ ἦταν ἑπόμενο ἕνα τέτοιο ταλέντο, μιὰ τέτοια μεγαλοφυΐα νὰ μὴν «χωράῃ» πιὰ στὴν 'Ελλάδα. Τὸν χαρήκαμε δώδεκα χρόνια ἐπὶ κεφαλῆς τῆς ὀρχήστρας μας, ἐνῶ παράλληλα ἐμφανιζόταν κάθε τόσο σὲ διάφορες Εὐρωπαϊκὲς ὀρχήστρες ὥσπου μᾶς τὸν ἅρπαξε ἡ 'Αμερικὴ (1937) κι' ἀπὸ κεῖ πιὰ ὅλος ὁ κόσμος. Σήμερα εἶναι περιζήτητος σ' ὅλα τὰ μεγάλα μουσικὰ κέντρα, σ' ὅλα τὰ διεθνῆ Φεστιβάλ, παντοῦ τὸν ὑποδέχονται μὲ ἀποθεωτικὲς ἐκδηλώσεις καὶ ὅλοι οἱ κριτικοὶ δὲν βρίσκουν πιὰ λέξεις γιὰ νὰ ἐκθειάσουν τὸ ταλέντο του, τὶς ἑρμηνεῖες του.

'Εδῶ, στὶς τέσσερις συναυλίες του, τὰ προγράμματα περιλαμβάνουν ἔργα γνωστὰ στοὺς φιλομούσους μας, ποὺ ἔτσι θὰ μποροῦσαν νὰ κάνουν ὡρισμένες συγκρίσεις καὶ παραβολές. Δυὸ ἀπ' τὰ ἔργα αὐτὰ εἶναι λιγώτερο γνωστά, ἢ μᾶλλον ἄγνωστα στοὺς νεώτερους φιλομούσους μας. Τὸ ἕνα εἶναι ἡ «'Εξαϋλωμένη Νύχτα» τοῦ Σένμπεργκ, τὸ ἄλλο ἡ «Συμφωνία Δομέστικα» τοῦ Ρίχαρντ Στράους. "Εδωσα μιὰ ἀνάλυσι τῆς «Νύχτας» τοῦ Σένμπεργκ πρὶν λίγες μέρες. Γιὰ τὴ «Συμφωνία Δομέστικα» μπορῶ νὰ πῶ λίγα λόγια σήμερα. Εἶναι ἕνα ἐ.Στὴ Συμφωνία Δομέστικα (Οἰκιακὴ Συμφωνία) ἐμπνέεται ἀπὸ ἕνα πολὺ λεπτὸ καὶ τρυφερὸ θέμα: ἀπ' τὴν ἴδια του τὴν οἰκογενειακὴ ζωή. Εἶναι ἕνα εἰδύλλιο τῆς οἰκογενειακῆς ζωῆς, ὅπου ἀντιπροσωπεύονται τρεῖς μορφές: 'Ο ἄντρας, ἡ γυναῖκα καὶ τὸ παιδί. Δυὸ θέματα ἐκφράζουν τὴν ἀντρικὴ δράσι καὶ τὴν ἀντρικὴ σκέψι. Δυό, τὴ ζωηράδα, τὴν ἰδιοτροπία, τὴν χάρι τῆς Γυναίκας τὸ ἕνα, τὴν τρυφερότητα τῆς καρδιᾶς της τὸ ἄλλο. "Ενα θέμα, τὸ παιδί. Κι' αὐτὰ τὰ θέματα, ἐπεξεργασμένα μὲ τὴν μοναδικὴ τέχνη τοῦ Στράους, συνθέτουν ἕνα φωτεινὸ σύνολο, κτίζουν τὴν Συμφωνία, ὅπου περνοῦν διάφορα ἐπεισόδια καὶ σκηνὲς τῆς οἰκογενειακῆς ζωῆς διάφανα καὶ συναρπαστικά. "Οταν πρωτάκουσα τὴν «Συμφωνία Δομέστικα» στὴ Βιέννη, οἱ Βιεννέζοι φίλοι μου ἐπέμεναν νὰ μὲ κάνουν νὰ διακρίνω τὶς «φωνὲς» καὶ τὶς φράσεις τοῦ ἴδιου τοῦ Στράους, εἰς παρατηρήσεις τῆς κυρίας Στράους, τὴ γκρίνια τοῦ μικροῦ Στράους!...

'Η «Συμφωνία Δομέστικα» ἔχει ἐκτελεσθῆ κιόλας στὴν 'Αθήνα ἀπ' τὸν ἴδιο τὸν Μητρόπουλο κατὰ τὸ 1935 ἢ 36—δὲν θυμᾶμαι καλά...

ΤΑ ΛΑΘΗ ΤΟΥ ΠΡΟΓΡΑΜΜΑΤΟΣ

Πληροφορῶ τὸ ἀθηναϊκὸ κοινὸ ὅτι δὲν ὑπάρχει «Κρατικὴ 'Ορχήστρα Βιέννης» καὶ ὅτι ἡ μετάφρασις τοῦ κειμένου τοῦ δρος Χέλμυτ Μπέζε, στὸ ἐπίσημο πρόγραμμα τοῦ Φεστιβαλ, εἶναι ἐντελῶς λανθασμένη. Τὸ γερμανικὸ κείμενο λέει πὼς οἱ «Βίινερ Φιλαρμόνικερ» εἶναι «στὸ σύνολο» τους μέλη τῆς 'Ορχήστρας τῆς Κρατικῆς "Οπερας τῆς Βιέννης, δηλαδὴ εἶναι ἡ ἴδια ὀρχήστρα ποὺ παρουσιάζεται ὡς «Φιλαρμονικὴ» καὶ ὡς ὀρχήστρα τῆς "Οπερας καὶ σὰν τέτοια παίζει κάθε βράδυ στὴν "Οπερα καὶ δὲν λαμβάνει ἁπλῶς «μέρος» στὶς 'Εορτὲς τοῦ Σάλτσμπουργκ, ἀλλὰ ἔχει ὡς «σύνολο» καὶ τὴν εὐθύνη τῶν Συμφωνικῶν Συναυλιῶν, καθὼς καὶ τῶν παραστάσεων τῆς "Οπερας. "Αν, ἄλλωστε, κάποιος ἀπ' τοὺς διευθύνοντας τὸ Φεστιβὰλ μας, εἶχε ταξιδέψει ποτὲ στὴ Βιέννη καὶ εἶχε ἐνδιαφερθῆ γιὰ τὴν μουσικὴ ζωή της, θὰ ἤξερε πὼς ἡ Βιέννη δὲν ἔχει «Κρατικὴ» 'Ορχήστρα. Καί, δυστυχῶς, δὲν εἶναι μόνο αὐτὰ τὰ λάθη...

ΘΑ ΔΙΕΥΘΥΝΗ ΤΗΝ ΦΙΛΑΡΜΟΝΙΚΗΝ ΤΗΣ ΒΙΕΝΝΗΣ

ΤΟ ΠΡΟΓΡΑΜΜΑ ΤΩΝ 4 ΣΥΝΑΥΛΙΩΝ

Κατ' ἀνακοίνωσιν τοῦ 'Ελληνικοῦ 'Οργανισμοῦ Τουρισμοῦ, τὴν ἑσπέραν τῆς 1ης Σεπτεμβρίου ἀφικνεῖται ἀεροπορικῶς εἰς 'Αθήνας ὁ διάσημος "Ελλην ἀρχιμουσικὸς Δημήτρης Μητρόπουλος, ὁ ὁποῖος θὰ διευθύνῃ τὰς τέσσαρας συναυλίας τῆς Φιλαρμονικῆς 'Ορχήστρας τῆς Βιέννης εἰς τὸ 'Ωδεῖον 'Ηρῴδου τοῦ 'Αττικοῦ τὴν 2αν, τὴν 3ην, τὴν 5ην καὶ τὴν 6ην Σεπτεμβρίου, μὲ τὰς ὁποίας θὰ κλείσῃ τὸ πρόγραμμα τῶν ἐφετεινῶν ἐκδηλώσεων τοῦ Φεστιβὰλ 'Αθηνῶν. 'Η ἐμφάνισις τοῦ Μητροπούλου εἰς 'Αθήνας ἀποτελεῖ τὸ μεγαλύτερον μετατολεμικὸν μουσικὸν γεγονὸς διὰ τὴν 'Ελλάδα.

'Ο διάσημος "Ελλην μαέστρος ἐγεννήθη εἰς 'Αθήνας τὸν Φεβρουάριον τοῦ 1896. Τὰς πρώτας σπουδάς του ἔλαβεν εἰς τὸ 'Ωδεῖον 'Αθηνῶν ἀπὸ τοὺς καθηγητὰς Λοϋντβιχ, Βασενχόβεν καὶ 'Αρμάνδον Μαρσὶκ καὶ ἀκολούθως τὸ 1920 μετέβη εἰς Βέλγιον, ὅπου ἐσπούδασε σύνθεσιν μὲ καθηγητὴν τὸν Γκίλσον. Τὸ ἑπόμενον ἔτος μετέβη εἰς Βερολῖνον καὶ εἰργάσθη μὲ τὸν Μπουζόνι. Τὸ 1924 ἐπανῆλθεν εἰς 'Αθήνας καὶ ἀνέλαβε τὴν διεύθυνσιν τῆς Κρατικῆς 'Ορχήστρας ἐπὶ μίαν 12ετίαν. Τὸ 1937 μετέβη διὰ πρώτην φορὰν εἰς 'Ηνωμ. Πολιτείας, ὅπου διηύθυνε σειρὰν συναυλιῶν τῆς Συμφωνικῆς 'Ορχήστρας Βοστώνης καὶ δύο ἔτη ἀργότερον διεδέχθη τὸν Εὐγένιον 'Ορμάνδη εἰς τὴν διεύθυνσιν τῆς 'Ορχήστρας Μιννεαπόλεως. Τὸ 1950 ἀνέλαβε τὴν διεύθυνσιν τῆς Φιλαρμονικῆς Νέας 'Υόρκης, ἡ ὁποία εἶναι ἀπὸ τὰς μεγαλυτέρας καὶ πλέον συγκροτημένας ὀρχήστρας τοῦ κόσμου, ἄξιωμα τὸ ὁποῖον διετήρησε μέχρι τῆς προσφάτου παραιτήσεώς του. Σήμερον ὁ Μητρόπουλος εἶναι ὁ κυριώτερος ἀρχιμουσικὸς τῆς Φιλαρμονικῆς Νέας 'Υόρκης καὶ τῆς 'Ορχήστρας τῆς Μετροπόλιταν "Οπερα Νέας 'Υόρκης. 'Η διεθνὴς φήμη του εἶναι τοιαύτη, ὥστε νὰ εἶναι περιζήτητος ἀπὸ τὰ διεθνῆ μουσικὰ κέντρα, αἱ δὲ ἐμφανίσεις του ἀποτελοῦν μεγάλα μουσικὰ γεγονότα (καὶ σχολιάζονται μὲ τοὺς πλέον εὐμενεῖς μουσικοὺς ἐπαίνους). Κατὰ τὸ τρέχον ἔτος ἐπεξεργάσθη περιοδείαν εἰς Νότιον 'Αμερικήν, 'Ισραὴλ καὶ Εὐρώπην, ὅπου ἔτυχεν ἀπὸ τοὺς μουσικοκριτικοὺς καὶ τὸν μουσικὸν κόσμον ἀποθεωτικῆς ὑποδοχῆς καὶ ὁ διεθνὴς Τύπος ἀπησχολήθη ἐκτενῶς μὲ τὰς ἐμφανίσεις του αὐτὰς κατὰ τρόπον ἰδιαιτέρως τιμητικόν. 'Ο Μητρόπουλος μὲ τὴν διεθνῆ του φήμην ἐλάμπρυνε τὸ ἑλληνικὸν ὄνομα καὶ εἶναι ἡ μεγαλυτέρα καλλιτεχνικὴ μορφή, ποὺ ἐγεννήθη εἰς τὸν τόπον μας. 'Αλλὰ καὶ ὡς ἄνθρωπος, ὁ Μητρόπουλος, παρὰ τὶς δόξες ποὺ ἐγνώρισε, δὲν ἐξέχασε καὶ ἐβοήθησεν εἰς κάθε εὐκαιρίαν τὴν πατρίδα του. 'Ως μουσικὸς δὲ ἀνεδείχθη εἰς προσωπικότητα κύρους μεγάλης ἐπιβολῆς εἰς τοὺς διεθνεῖς μουσικοὺς κύκλους. Διὰ τοὺς λόγους αὐτοὺς τὸ ἑλληνικὸν κοινὸν τοῦ ἐπιφυλάσσει ἰδιαιτέρως θερμὴν ὑποδοχήν.

'Εξ ἄλλου, ἡ Φιλαρμονικὴ τῆς Βιέννης ἀποτελεῖται κυρίως ἀπὸ στελέχη τῆς Κρατικῆς 'Ορχήστρας τῆς Βιέννης, ἡ ὁποία, ὡς γνωστόν, μετέχει τῶν παραστάσεων τῆς Κρατικῆς "Οπερας Βιέννης. Πολλὰ μέλη της ἐπίσης ἀνήκουν εἰς τὴν Κρατικὴν 'Ακαδημίαν Μουσικῆς ἢ καὶ εἰς περίφημα συγκροτήματα Μουσικῆς Δωματίου, ὅπως τὸ «Κουαρτέτο Μπάρυλλι», τὸ Κουαρτέτο «Φιλαρμόνια» καὶ τὸ «Βίινερ 'Οκτέτ». 'Εκτὸς ἀπὸ τὰς τακτικὰς της ἠχογραφήσεις μὲ ἀρχιμουσικοὺς παγκοσμίου φήμης, ἡ Φιλαρμονικὴ τῆς Βιέννης δίδει ἤδη ἀπὸ τοῦ 1870 κατὰ παράδοσιν 8 Συναυλίας Συδρομῶν εἰς Βιέννην κατ' ἔτος καὶ κατὰ τοὺς θερινοὺς μῆνας λαμβάνει μέρος εἰς τὰς ἑορτὰς τοῦ Σάλτσμπουργκ.

'Αναλυτικῶς τὸ πρόγραμμα τῶν τεσσάρων της συναυλιῶν εἰς 'Αθήνας ἔχουν ὡς ἀκολούθως:

Τρίτη 2 Σεπτεμβρίου: Μπετόβεν: Λεονώρα ἀρ. 2, Εἰσαγωγὴ καὶ Συμφωνία ἀρ. 2. Σένμπεργκ: 'Εξαΰλωμένη νύχτα, Μπάχ: Φαντασία καὶ Φούγκα (κατ' ἐνορχήστρωσιν Δ. Μητροπούλου). Τὸ Σάββατο ἑσπέρας ἔφθασε στὸ ἀεροδρόμιο τοῦ 'Ελληνικοῦ μὲ ἀεροπλάνο τῆς «Σαμπίνα» ὁ διάσημος "Ελλην ἀρχιμουσικὸς Δημήτρης Μητρόπουλος. 'Η ἄφιξις τοῦ περιφήμου μαέστρου ἦταν ἐντελῶς ἀπρόοπτη, διότι ἀνεμένετο νὰ φθάσῃ αὔριο τὸ πρωΐ. Διὰ τὸν λόγον αὐτόν, οὐδεὶς ἐκ τῶν ἐπισήμων καὶ τῶν ἄλλων θαυμαστῶν του παρευρίσκετο τὴν ὥραν ἐκείνην εἰς τὸ ἀεροδρόμιον. 'Εν τούτοις τὸ προσωπικὸν τοῦ ἀεροδρομίου ἀνεγνώρισε τὸν διάσημον ἀρχιμουσικὸν καὶ τοιουτοτρόπως, παρὰ τὸ αὐστηρὸν ἰνγκόγνιτο κατέστη γνωστὴ ἡ ἐλευσίς του ἐνταῦθα. 'Ο κ. Μητρόπουλος μετὰ τὴν ἄφιξίν του κατέλυσεν εἰς τὴν ἐπαυλὶν φίλου του εἰς προάστιον τῶν 'Αθηνῶν. Αὔριο στὶς 11 π. μ. θὰ δεχθῇ εἰς τὴν αἴθουσαν τοῦ «Πτὶ Παλαὶ» τοὺς "Ελληνας καὶ ξένους δημοσιογράφους. 'Επίσης χθὲς τὸ ἀπόγευμα στὶς 5.30' μ. μ. ἔφθασαν τὰ μέλη τῆς περιφήμου Φιλαρμονικῆς 'Ορχήστρας τῆς Βιέννης, ἡ ὁποία αὔριον θὰ ἐμφανισθῇ εἰς τὸ 'Ωδεῖον τοῦ 'Ηρῴδου τοῦ 'Αττικοῦ ὑπὸ τὴν διεύθυνσιν τοῦ Δημήτρη Μητροπούλου.

Μία τελευταία φωτογραφία τοῦ διασήμου 'Ελληνος ἀρχιμουσικοῦ Δημήτρη Μητροπούλου, ὁ ὁποῖος ἔφθασε προχθὲς τὸ βράδυ καὶ θὰ διευθύνῃ τὶς συναυλίες τῆς Φιλαρμονικῆς 'Ορχήστρας τῆς Βιέννης.

Ο ΔΗΜΗΤΡΗΣ ΜΗΤΡΟΠΟΥΛΟΣ ΑΠΟ ΠΡΟΧΘΕΣ ΕΙΣ ΑΘΗΝΑΣ

ΑΥΡΙΟΝ Η ΠΡΩΤΗ ΣΥΝΑΥΛΙΑ ΤΟΥ

ΑΠΕΣΥΡΘΗ ΑΜΕΣΩΣ ΣΤΗΝ ΕΞΟΧΗΝ

Ὁ διάσημος Ἕλλην ἀρχιμουσικὸς Δημήτρης Μητρόπουλος εὑρίσκεται ἀπὸ προχθὲς τὸ βράδυ εἰς τὰς Ἀθήνας. Ὅπως εἶναι γνωστόν, ὁ μεγάλος μαέστρος ἀπὸ πέρυσιν ἔχει συμβληθῆ μὲ τὴν διεύθυνσιν τοῦ Φεστιβὰλ Ἀθηνῶν καὶ ἦλθε διὰ νὰ διευθύνῃ εἰς τὸ Ὠδεῖον Ἡρώδου τοῦ Ἀττικοῦ τέσσαρας συναυλίας τῆς μεγάλης Φιλαρμονικῆς Ὀρχήστρας τῆς Βιέννης. Αἱ πληροφορίαι ποὺ ὑπῆρχον ἦσαν ὅτι ὁ Δημήτρης Μητρόπουλος θὰ συνεταξίδευε μὲ τὰ μέλη τῆς Ὀρχήστρας, τὰ ὁποῖα θὰ φθάσουν ἐδῶ ἀπόψε εἰς τὰς 8.30΄, προερχόμενα ἀπὸ τὸ Σάλτσμπουργκ. Ἐν τούτοις ὁ διάσημος Ἕλλην καλλιτέχνης συνεννοήθη ἰδιαιτέρως μὲ παλαιοὺς Ἀθηναίους γνωρίμους του, καὶ εἰδικώτερα τὴν κ. Κατσογιάννη, ποὺ θὰ τὸν ἐφιλοξενοῦσεν εἰς τὴν ἐξοχικήν της κατοικίαν, καὶ ἔφθασεν εἰς τὰς Ἀθήνας προχθὲς τὴν νύκτα μόνος του, θέλοντος νὰ ἀποφύγῃ τὴν ἐπίσημον ὑποδοχὴν καὶ νὰ ἔχῃ κατ' αὐτὸν τὸν τρόπον καὶ δύο ἡμέρας ἀναπαύσεως καὶ ἡρεμίας. Ἐταξίδευσεν ἰνκόγνιτο καὶ ἀπεβιβάσθη τὴν 10.30΄ νυκτερινὴν τοῦ Σαββάτου εἰς τὸ ἀεροδρόμιον τοῦ Ἑλληνικοῦ, ὅπου ὅμως, ὅπως ἦτο φυσικόν, ἀνεγνωρίσθη. Ἔλειψεν ἐν πάσῃ περιπτώσει ἡ ἐπίσημος δεξίωσις, δὲν ὑπῆρχε συγκέντρωσις καλλιτεχνῶν, φίλων καὶ θαυμαστῶν καὶ ἀπουσίαζον οἱ ...δημοσιογράφοι καὶ οἱ φωτορεπόρτερς. Ὁ Μητρόπουλος ἀπὸ τὸ ἀεροδρόμιον κατηυθύνθη ἀμέσως εἰς τὸ κτῆμα τῆς κ. Κατσογιάννη, τὸ ὁποῖον εὑρίσκεται εἰς τὸν δρόμον τῆς Ἁγίας Παρασκευῆς μεταξὺ Λυκόβρυσης καὶ Μαγκουφάνας, ὅπου καὶ κοτέλυσεν. Ἡ εἴδησις τῆς ἀπροσπτου ἀφίξεώς του — ἀγνοοῦσε τὸ πρᾶγμα ἀκόμη καὶ ὁ Ὀργανισμὸς Τουρισμοῦ, καθὼς καὶ ἡ ἰδία ἡ ὑπηρεσία τοῦ Φεστιβὰλ Ἀθηνῶν — μετεδόθη τὰς πρώτας μεταμεσημβρινὰς ὥρας τῆς χθὲς ἀπὸ τὰς θεατρικὰς ἐκπομπὰς τῶν δύο ραδιοστάθμων καὶ φυσικὰ ἀπὸ ἐκείνην τὴν ὥραν ἡ ἐπαυλις Κατσογιάννη ἐβομβαρδίζετο μέχρι βαθείας νυκτὸς ἀπὸ ἐπισκέψεις καὶ τηλεφωνήματα. Ὁ μεγάλος μαέστρος ὅμως δὲν ἐδέχθη καμμίαν ἀπολύτως ἐπίσκεψιν καὶ οὔτε εἰς τοὺς φωτορεπόρτερς ἐπετράπη νὰ τὸν φωτογραφήσουν. Ἐδηλώθη ὅμως ὅτι εἶναι ἐξαίρετα εἰς τὴν ὑγείαν του, ὅτι χθὲς ἐξύπνησεν εὐδιάθετος καὶ ἤτο ὅλην τὴν ἡμέραν παραπολὺ καλὰ καὶ ὅτι ἀπεμονώθη καὶ εἰργάσθη ἐπάνω εἰς τὰ προσεχῆ μελοδραματικὰ ἔργα ποὺ θὰ διευθύνῃ μετὰ τὰς ἀθηναϊκὰς συναυλίας του. Προστίθεται ὅτι ἡ ἀπομόνωσίς του θὰ ἐξακολουθήσῃ καὶ ὅλην τὴν σημερινὴν ἡμέραν καὶ ὅτι θὰ ἐπικοινωνήσῃ μὲ τοὺς δημοσιογράφους αὔριον τὴν 11ην π.μ. εἰς εἰδικὴν «πρὲς κόνφερανς» ποὺ ὀργανώνει ἡ ὑπηρεσία τοῦ Φεστιβὰλ Ἀθηνῶν εἰς τὸ ξενοδοχεῖον τῆς «Μεγάλης Βρετανίας». Δὲν ποόκειται καὶ πάλιν νὰ δεχθῆ καμμίαν ἐπίσκεψιν καὶ κοτὰ τὴν σημερινὴν ἡμέραν. Ἐν τῷ μεταξὺ ὅλα τὰ εἰσιτήρια τῆς αὐριανῆς πρώτης συναυλίας του ἐξηντλήθησαν. Τὸ βράδυ τοῦ Σαββάτου, ὅταν ἔκλεισαν τὰ ταμεῖα τοῦ Φεστιβάλ, ὑπῆρχον ποὸς διάθεσιν μόνον 13 εἰσιτήρια τῶν 300 δραχμῶν, ποὺ φυσικὰ καὶ αὐτὰ θὰ ἐπωλήθησαν σήμερον τὴν πρωΐαν. Ἐλάχιστα εἶναι τὰ ὑπολειπόμενα ἀκόμη εἰσιτήρια καὶ τῶν τριῶν ἄλλων συναυλιῶν.

2 ΣΕΠ. 1958

Μὲ ζωηρὸν ἐνδιαφέρον ἀναμένεται ἡ σημερινὴ πρώτη ἐμφάνισις τοῦ Δημήτρη Μητροπούλου στὸ θέατρον Ἡρώδου τοῦ Ἀττικοῦ στὶς 8.30.

—Ὁ διάσημος Ἕλλην ἀρχιμουσικὸς θὰ διευθύνῃ, ὅπως ἔχει ἤδη ἀναγγελθῆ, τὴν Φιλαρμονικὴν τῆς Βιέννης, ἡ ὁποία ἀποτελεῖται ἀπὸ τὰ καλύτερα μουσικὰ στελέχη τῆς Αὐστρίας.

—Ἡ σημερινὴ πρώτη συναυλία περιλαμβάνει τὰ ἑξῆς: Μπετόβεν: Λεονώρα ἀρ. 2, εἰσαγωγὴ καὶ συμφωνία ἀρ. 2. Σένμπεργκ: Ἐξαϋλωμένη νύχτα. Μπάχ: Φαντασία καὶ Φούγκα (κατὰ ἐνορχήστρωσιν Δ. Μητροπούλου).

—Ἡ δεύτερη ἐμφάνισις τοῦ μεγάλου μουσικοῦ θὰ πραγματοποιηθῆ αὔριον, ἡ τρίτη τὴν Παρασκευὴν καὶ ἡ τετάρτη καὶ τελευταία τὸ Σάββατον.

—Ἡ ἐμφάνισις τοῦ Μητροπούλου στὴν πρωτεύουσα ἀποτελεῖ τὸ μεγαλύτερον μουσικὸν γεγονὸς στὴν Ἑλλάδα μετὰ τὸν πόλεμο.

—Οἱ τέσσαρες συναυλίες τοῦ Ἕλληνος ἀρχιμουσικοῦ θὰ εἶναι καὶ οἱ τελευταῖες ἐκδηλώσεις τοῦ ἐφετεινοῦ καλλιτεχνικοῦ προγράμματος τοῦ Φεστιβὰλ Ἀθηνῶν.

—Γιὰ τὶς ἐμφανίσεις τοῦ Δ. Μητροπούλου στὸ Σάλτσμπουργκ ἐφημερὶς τῆς Βιέννης γράφει χαρακτηριστικὰ τὰ ἑξῆς: «Ἀνύψωσε πράγματι τὴν παρτιτούρα ἕως τὰ ἄστρα σχεδὸν καὶ ἐπεβάλλετο εἰς τὴν ἑρμηνείαν τοῦ ἔργου του τόσον ὑπερόχως, σὰν νὰ ἐγνώριζε μερικὰ πράγματα καλύτερα ἀπὸ τὸν συνθέτη».

—Ἡ «Μύνχενερ Τσάϊτουγκ» σημειώνει τὰ κάτωθι: «Εἶναι ὁ διευθυντὴς ὀρχήστρας πραγματικὸν φαινόμενον καὶ ἐντυπωσιακὸν θαῦμα».

—Εἰς τὴν ἀποψινὴν πρώτην παράστασιν θὰ παραστοῦν ἡ Κυβέρνησις, τὸ Διπλωματικὸν Σῶμα καὶ ἄλλοι ἐπίσημοι.

—Αἱ θύραι τοῦ Ὠδείου Ἡρώδου τοῦ Ἀττικοῦ θὰ ἀνοίξουν στὶς 7 μ. μ. Παρακαλοῦνται οἱ κάτοχοι ἰδιοκτήτων αὐτοκινήτων ὅπως χρησιμοποιήσουν ταξὶ γιὰ τὴν μετάβασίν τους, λόγῳ τοῦ περιωρισμένου χώρου ποὺ ὑπάρχει πρὸ τοῦ Ὠδείου γιὰ τὴν στάθμευσιν αὐτοκινήτων.

Ὁ Δημήτρης Μητρόπουλος ποὺ θὰ διευθύνῃ σήμερα τὴν συναυλία τῆς Φιλαρμονικῆς Ὀρχήστρας τῆς Βιέννης εἰς τὸ Ὠδεῖον Ἡρώδου τοῦ Ἀττικοῦ.

Ο ΑΡΧΙΜΟΥΣΙΚΟΣ Δ. ΜΗΤΡΟΠΟΥΛΟΣ ΕΙΣ ΤΑΣ ΑΘΗΝΑΣ

ΕΦΘΑΣΕΝ ΙΝΓΚΟΓΚΝΙΤΟ ΤΟ ΣΑΒΒΑΤΟΝ

Τὴν ἑσπέραν τοῦ Σαββάτου, ἀφίχθη ἀεροπορικῶς εἰς Ἀθήνας ὁ διάσημος Ἕλλην ἀρχιμουσικὸς Δημ. Μητρόπουλος. Ἀρχικῶς ὁ Μητρόπουλος ἀνεμενετο νὰ ἔλθῃ χθὲς τὸ βράδυ, μὲ τὰ μέλη τῆς φιλαρμονικῆς τῆς Βιέννης. Ἐν τούτοις, ὁ διάσημος μαέστρος μας ἐπροτίμησε νὰ ταξιδεύσῃ «ἰνκόγνιτο», διὰ ν' ἀποφύγῃ τὴν ἐπίσημον ὑποδοχὴν καὶ διὰ νὰ ἐξασφαλίσῃ δύο ἡμέρας «ἡρεμίας».

Ὁ Μητρόπουλος κατέλυσε εἰς τὴν ἐπαυλιν τῆς κ. Κατσογιάννη εἰς Ἁγίαν Παρασκευήν.

Σήμερον τὴν 12 μεσημβρινὴν θὰ δεχθῆ τοὺς ἀντιπροσώπους τοῦ τύπου εἰς τὸ «Πτὶ — Παλαί» εἰς τοὺς ὁποίους θὰ δώσῃ «πρὲς κόνφερανς». Τὰ προγράμματα τῶν τεσσάρων συναυλιῶν τῆς Φιλαρμονικῆς τῆς Βιέννης ὑπὸ τὴν διεύθυνσιν τοῦ Δημ. Μητροπούλου, μὲ τὰς ὁποίας θὰ κλείσῃ ἡ ἐφετεινὴ περίοδος τοῦ Φεστιβὰλ Ἀθηνῶν, ἔχουν ὡς ἀκολούθως: Τρίτη, 2 Σεπτεμβρίου: Μπετόβεν: Λεονώρα ἀριθ. 2 καὶ Συμφωνία ἀριθ. 2. Σένμπεργκ: Ἐξαϋλωμένη νύχτα. Μπάχ: Φαντασία καὶ Φούγκα (κατὰ ἐνορχήστρωσιν Δημ. Μητροπούλου. Τετάρτη, 3 Σεπτεμβρίου: Στράους: Δὸν Ζουάν, Θάνατος καὶ Ἐξαΰλωσις, Συμφωνία Ντομέστικα. Παρασκευή, 5 Σεπτεμβρίου: Μπράμς: Ἀκαδημαϊκὴ Εἰσαγωγή, Συμφωνία ἀριθ. 3, Συμφωνία ἀριθ. 2. Σάββατον, 6 Σεπτεμβρίου: Μπάχ: Φαντασία καὶ Φούγκα, Σένμπεργκ: Ἐξαϋλωμένη νύχτα, Στράους: Συμφωνία Ντομέστικα. Σήμερον τὴν 12ην μεσημβρινὴν ὁ Μητρόπουλος θὰ δεχθῆ εἰς τὸ «Πτὶ-Παλαί» τοὺς ἀντιπροσώπους τοῦ Τύπου, εἰς τοὺς ὁποίους θὰ δώσῃ «πρὲς - κόνφερενς».

Αἱ ἐμφανίσεις τοῦ Μητροπούλου εἰς Ἀθήνας χαρακτηρίζονται ἀπὸ τὸν διεθνῆ Τύπον ὡς τὸ μεγαλύτερον καλλιτεχνικὸν γεγονὸς τῆς ἐφετεινῆς περιόδου. Χαρακτηριστικῶς, ἡ ἐφημερὶς τῆς Βιέννης «Ντὶ Πρέσσε» γράφει: «Ἡ Φιλαρμονικὴ τῆς Βιέννης θὰ πάῃ στὴν Ἑλλάδα, τὴν πατρίδα τοῦ Δημήτρη Μητροπούλου, διὰ τέσσαρες συναυλίες στὸ μεγάλο ἀρχαῖο ὑπαίθριο θέατρο τοῦ Ἡρώδου τοῦ Ἀττικοῦ. Δεδομένου ὅτι ἡ ὀρχήστρα θὰ ταξιδεύσῃ μὲ τὴν πλήρη σύνθεσίν της, θὰ καταστῇ δυνατὸν νὰ παιχθῇ διὰ πρώτην φορὰν εἰς τὴν Ἑλλάδα ἡ «Συμφωνία Ντομέστικα» τοῦ Στράους. Κατὰ πληροφορίας ἐκ Σάλτσμπουργκ, ὅπου ὁ Μητρόπουλος διηύθυνεν εἰς τὸ Κτίριον τῶν Φεστιβὰλ τὴν εὐρωπαϊκὴν πρεμιέραν τῆς Ὄπερας «Βανέσσα» τοῦ Μπάρμπερ, οἱ κριτικοὶ ἀπεθέωσαν κυριολεκτικῶς τὸν διάσημο ἀρχιμουσικό. Ποτὲ αἱ κριτικαὶ τῶν Εὐρωπαϊκῶν ἐφημερίδων δὲν ἐξεφράσθησαν μὲ τόσον ἐνθουσιώδεις ἐπαίνους δι' οἱονδήποτε ἄλλον μαέστρον. Ἡ «Νόϋερ Κουριὲρ» γράφει: «Σπανίως ἔχει ἀκούσει κανεὶς ἕνα τόσο θαυμάσιο μουσικὸ νὰ διευθύνῃ μία τόσον ὀλίγον θαυμασία μουσικὴ». Ἡ «Ζάλτσμπούργκερ Νάχριχτεν»: «Ἀνύψωσε πράγματι τὴν παρτιτούρα ἕως τὰ ἄστρα σχεδὸν καὶ ἐπεβάλλετο εἰς τὴν ἑρμηνείαν τοῦ ἔργου τόσον ὑπερόχως σὰν νὰ ἐγνώριζε μερικὰ πράγματα καλύτερα καὶ ἀπὸ τὸν συνθέτη». Ἡ «Μύνχενερ Τσάϊτουγκ»: «Εἶναι ὡς διευθυντὴς ὀρχήστρας πραγματικὸν φαινόμενον καὶ ἐντυπωσιακὸν θαῦμα». Μὲ τοιοῦτου εἴδους κριτικὰς ὑπεδέχθησαν τὸν διάσημον Ἕλληνα ἀρχιμουσικὸν τὰ διεθνῆ εὐρωπαϊκὰ μουσικὰ κέντρα.

Ἐν τῷ μεταξύ, συνεχίζεται μὲ λίαν ἱκανοποιητικὸν ρυθμὸν ἡ πώλησις καὶ τῶν τελευταίων εἰσιτηρίων τῶν συναυλιῶν Μητροπούλου. Διὰ τὴν ἀποψινὴν συναυλίαν αἱ θύραι τοῦ Ὠδείου Ἡρώδου τοῦ Ἀττικοῦ θὰ ἀνοίξουν τὴν 7ην μ.μ. Ἐπίσης, παρακαλοῦνται, οἱ διαμένοντες εἰς Ἀθήνας κάτοχοι ἰδιοκτήσεων αὐτοκινήτων, ὅπως χρησιμοποιήσουν διὰ τὴν μετάβασίν των εἰς τὸ Ὠδεῖον Ἡρώδου τοῦ Ἀττικοῦ ταξί, λόγῳ τοῦ ὑπάρχοντος πρὸ τοῦ Ὠδείου περιωρισμένου χώρου διὰ τὴν στάθμευσιν αὐτοκινήτων. Εἰς τὴν ἀποψινὴν «πρώτην» συναυλίαν τοῦ Μητροπούλου θὰ παραστοῦν ἡ Κυβέρνησις, τὸ Διπλωματικὸν Σῶμα, καὶ ἄλλοι ἐπίσημοι.

Ὁ Δημήτρης Μητρόπουλος, ἡ διασημότερη σήμερα φυσιογνωμία στὴν διεύθυνσι ὀρχήστρας εὑρίσκεται στὴν Ἀθήνα ἀπὸ τὸ βράδυ τοῦ Σαββάτου.

Τὴν Κυριακὴ τ' ἀπόγευμα ἔφθασε στὸ ἀεροδρόμιο τοῦ Ἑλληνικοῦ, τὸ τεράστιο ἐνόργανο ὑλικὸ τῆς Φιλαρμονικῆς τῆς Βιέννης: Βιολιά, βιόλλες, βιολοντσέλλα, κοντραμπάσσα, τύμπανα, φαγκόττα, κλαρίνα καὶ ὅλος ὁ ὑπόλοιπος ἠχητικὸς ἐξοπλισμὸς τῆς παγκοσμίου φήμης ὀρχήστρας καὶ χθὲς ἀφίχθησαν οἱ μουσικοί.

Ὁ μάγος τῆς μπαγκέττας βρίσκεται καὶ πάλι κοντά μας μετὰ ἀπὸ τρία ὁλόκληρα χρόνια, ὅταν εἶχε ἔρθει μὲ τὴν περίφημη φιλαρμονικὴ τῆς Νέας Ὑόρκης.

Ἀπόψε στὸ Ὠδεῖον Ἡρώδου τοῦ Ἀττικοῦ δίδει τὴν πρώτη συναυλία της ἡ μεγάλη Φιλαρμονικὴ ὀρχήστρα τῆς Βιέννης μὲ διεύθυνσιν τοῦ Δημήτρη Μητροπούλου. Οἱ 99 ἐξαίρετοι καλλιτέχναι ποὺ ἀπαρτίζουν τὸ περίφημον αὐτὸ μουσικὸν συγκρότημα ἔφθασαν χθὲς στὶς 9 τὸ βράδυ στὴν Ἀθήνα ἀπὸ τὸ Σάλτσμπουργκ ὅπου ἔλαβαν μέρος εἰς τὸ ἐκεῖ φεστιβάλ. Ἦλθαν ἀεροπορικῶς — εἶχαν προηγηθῆ μ' ἄλλο ἀεροπλάνο τὴν Κυριακὴν τὰ ὀργανά τους — καὶ σήμερα στὶς 8½ ὑπὸ τὴν μπαγκέτα τοῦ διασήμου Ἕλληνος ἀρχιμουσικοῦ Θ' ἀποδώσουν τὴν εἰσαγωγὴ «Λεονώρα ἀριθ. 2» καὶ τὴν συμφωνία ἀριθ. 2 τοῦ Μπετόβεν, τὴν «Ἐξαϋλωμένη νύχτα» τοῦ Σένμπεργκ καὶ τὴν φαντασία καὶ φούγκα τοῦ Μπάχ, κατὰ ἐνορχήστρωσιν Μητροπούλου. Γιὰ τὴν ἀποψινὴ ἐναρκτήριον συναυλίαν δὲν ὑπάρχει οὔτε ἕνα εἰσιτήριο. Ὅμως τὸ πρόγραμμά της θὰ μπορέση νὰ τὸ ἀπολαύση ὅλος ὁ κόσμος διότι χθὲς τὸ ἀπόγευμα ἐπήλθε προκαταρκτικὴ συμφωνία ποὺ θὰ ὁλοκληρωθῆ σήμερα μὲ τοὺς ἐκπροσώπους τῆς ὀρχήστρας καὶ τόσον ἡ ἀποψινὴ συναυλία ὅσον καὶ ἡ τρίτη συναυλία — ποὺ θὰ δοθῆ τὴν Παρασκευὴν — θὰ ἀναμεταδοθοῦν ἀπὸ τὸν ραδιοφωνικὸν σταθμὸν Ἀθηνῶν. Γίνονται συνεννοήσεις γιὰ νὰ μπορέση τὸ Ε.Ι.Ρ. νὰ ἐκπέμψη καὶ τὸ πρόγραμμα τῆς αὐριανῆς συναυλίας τῆς Φιλαρμονικῆς τῆς Βιέννης ποὺ τὸ πρόγραμμά της τὸ συνθέτουν ἀποκλειστικῶς Ἔργα Στράους.

Ὁ Δημήτρης Μητρόπουλος διευθύνει.

Ὁ Μητρόπουλος, ἐν τῷ μεταξύ, ἔμεινε καὶ χθὲς ἀπομονωμένος εἰς τὴν ἐξοχικὴν κατοικίαν τῆς κ. Καίτης Κατσογιάννη, ἡ ὁποία τὸν φιλοξενεῖ ἀπὸ τὸ βράδυ τοῦ Σαββάτου ποὺ ἔφθασεν ἰνκόγνιτο στὴν Ἀθήνα. Εἶχα τὴν πολύτιμη εὐκαιρία νὰ ἐπικοινωνήσω χθὲς βράδυ μὲ τὸν διάσημον Ἕλληνα μαέστρον. Εἶμαι ὑποχρεωμένος εἰς τὸ σημεῖον αὐτὸ νὰ ὑπενθυμίσω ὅτι πέρυσιν ἀσκοῦσα τὰ καθήκοντα τοῦ καλλιτεχνικοῦ διευθυντοῦ τοῦ Φεστιβὰλ Ἀθηνῶν καὶ ἀπετέλεσε προσωπικὴν σκέψιν καὶ ἐνέργειαν ἡ δι' ἐφέτος μετάκλησίς του. Διὰ τὸν σκοπὸν μάλιστα αὐτὸν εἶχα πάει πέρυσι τὸν Ἰούνιον εἰς τὴν Φλωρεντίαν ὅπου τὴν ἐποχὴν ἐκείνην διηύθυνε στὴν Δημοτικὴ Ὄπερα τὸν «Ἐρνάνη» καὶ ἐκεῖ κλείσθηκε ἡ προκαταρκτικὴ συμφωνία διὰ τὸν αὐτὸν κύκλον τῶν συναυλιῶν τῆς Φιλαρμονικῆς τῆς Βιέννης ποὺ δίδεται τώρα εἰς τὰς Ἀθήνας. Ἦταν φυσικὸν συνεπῶς ὁ Δημήτρης Μητρόπουλος νὰ δεχθῆ νὰ κάμη μιὰ ἐξαίρεσι καὶ ν' ἀνταλλάξη λίγα λόγια μὲ τὸν ὑπογράφοντα.

— Περιττεύει νὰ σᾶς πῶ — ἦταν αἱ πρῶτες λέξεις του ὅταν τοῦ εὐχήθηκα τὸ «καλῶς ὥρισε» — τὸ πόση συγκίνησι δοκιμάζω ποὺ εἶμαι πάλι στὴν Ἀθήνα. Φυσικὴ ἡ νοσταλγία καὶ ἡ ἀγάπη γιὰ τὸν τόπο μου, ποὺ τὸν ξαναβλέπω δὲν ξέρετε μὲ πόση εὐχαρίστησι. Ἀλλὰ δὲν σᾶς κρύβω ὅτι καὶ εἰδικώτερα οἱ δυὸ ἡμέρες τῆς ἐδῶ ἀπομονώσεως, τῆς ἀναπαύσεως καὶ τῆς γαλήνης μοῦ ἦταν ἐντελῶς ἀπαραίτητες καὶ εὐεργετικές...

— Βέβαια ἔχετε συνεχῆ καὶ κοπιώδη δουλειά...

— Ποὺ δὲν πρόκειται νὰ σταματήση παρὰ τὸν ἐρχόμενον Ἰούνιον.

— Ἔχετε μέχρι τότε ἀνειλημμένες ὑποχρεώσεις συνέχεια;

— Βεβαιότατα. Θὰ φύγω γιὰ τὴν Βιέννη μόλις τελειώσουν οἱ συναυλίες τῆς Ἀθήνας. Καὶ μετὰ ἀπὸ τὴν Βιέννη θὰ γυρίσω στὴν Ἀμερική. Μὲ περιμένει καὶ ἐκεῖ ἀφάνταστη δουλειὰ καὶ γραμμὴ πάλι συμβόλαια καὶ ὑποχρεώσεις ἕως τὸ καλοκαίρι τοῦ 1959. Καταλαβαίνετε. λοιπόν, ὅτι ἔστω καὶ δυὸ ἡμερῶν ἀνάπαυσις καὶ μόνωσις πόσο εἶναι πολύτιμες...

Κατόπιν ὁ Μητρόπουλος ἔδειξε ζωηρότατον ἐνδιαφέρον γιὰ τὸ γεγονὸς ὅτι παρὰ τὸ μοιραίως ἀκριβὸ εἰσιτήριο ποὺ ἔχουν τὰ κοντσέρτα ποὺ θὰ διευθύνη παρουσιάζουν μεγάλην κίνησιν Κοινοῦ. Κίνησις ποὺ εἶναι — σημειώστε — κατὰ πολὺ ἀνώτερη ἀπὸ ἐκείνην ποὺ εἶχαν οἱ δύο συναυλίες τῆς Φιλαρμονικῆς τῆς Νέας Ὑόρκης ποὺ διηύθυνε πρὶν ἀπὸ τρία χρόνια. Τότε τὰ δύο κοντσέρτα μαζὶ συνεκέντρωσαν πλέον ἀπὸ πέντε χιλιάδας ἀκροατάς. Τώρα, αὐτὴν τὴν στιγμὴν ἔχουν πουληθῆ ὀκτὼ χιλιάδες εἰσιτήρια καὶ μὲ τὴν παρατηρουμένην ἀθρόαν ζήτησιν δὲν χωρεῖ ἀμφιβολία ὅτι θὰ ἐξαντληθοῦν μέσα ἐνὸς ὅλα. Ὁ μεγάλος μαέστρος ἄκουσε μὲ πρόδηλη συγκίνησι τὰ στοιχεῖα αὐτὰ ποὺ δείχνουν τὴν ἀπεριόριστη γοητεία ποὺ ἀσκεῖ ἡ προσωπικότης του στοὺς Ἀθηναίους φίλους τῆς κλασικῆς μουσικῆς. Ἔκαμε μόνον τὴν παρατήρησιν ὅτι ὁ ἴδιος προτιμοῦσε τὸ πρόγραμμα μ' ἔργα Μπράμς ν' ἀποτελοῦσε τὴν δεύτερη Ἀθηναϊκὴ συναυλία τῆς Φιλαρμονικῆς τῆς Βιέννης καὶ ἐπεφυλάχθη τελικὰ γιὰ μιὰ πλατύτερη δημοσιογραφικὴ ἐπικοινωνία μὲ τὸ ἑλληνικὸν ἀναγνωστικὸν Κοινὸν κατὰ τὴν σημερινὴν «Πρὲς κόνφερανς» ποὺ γίνεται τὸ μεσημέρι στὸ «Ξενοδοχεῖο τῆς Μεγάλης Βρετανίας». Συνεπῶς θὰ τὰ ξαναποῦμε ἢ μᾶλλον θὰ συνεχίσουμε αὔριον.

ΑΧ. ΜΑΜΑΚΗΣ

Ἀξίζει ἰδιαιτέρως ν' ἀναφερθῆ ὅτι οἱ ἐμφανίσεις τοῦ Μητροπούλου εἰς τὰς Ἀθήνας, χαρακτηρίζονται ἀπὸ τὸν διεθνῆ Τύπον ὡς τὸ ἐξαιρετικὸν καλλιτεχνικὸν γεγονὸς τῆς ἐφετεινῆς περιόδου. Χαρακτηριστικῶς ἡ ἐφημερὶς τῆς Βιέννης «Ντὶ Πρέσσε» γράφει: «Ἡ Φιλαρμονικὴ τῆς Βιέννης θὰ πάη στὴν Ἑλλάδα, τὴν Πατρίδα τοῦ Δημήτρη Μητροπούλου, διὰ τέσσαρες συναυλίες στὸ μεγάλο ἀρχαῖο ὑπαίθριο θέατρο τοῦ Ἡρώδου τοῦ Ἀττικοῦ. Ἐξ ἄλλου διθυραμβικὲς ὑπῆρξαν οἱ κριτικὲς γιὰ τὶς ἐμφανίσεις τοῦ Μητροπούλου εἰς τὸ Σάλτσμπουργκ, ὅπου διηύθυνε τὴν πρεμιέρα τῆς ὄπερας «Βανέσσα» τοῦ Μπάρμπερ. Ἡ «Νόυερ Κουριὲρ» γράφει: «Σπανίως ἔχει ἀκούσει κανεὶς ἕνα τόσο θαυμάσιο μουσικὸ νὰ δ ευθύνη μία τόσο ὀλίγον θαυμασίαν μουσικήν». Ἡ «Ζάλτσμπουργκερ Νάχοιχτεν»: «Ἀνύψωσε πράγματι τὴν παρτιτούρα ἕως τὰ ἄστρα σχεδὸν καὶ ἐπεβάλλετο εἰς τὴν ἑρμηνείαν τοῦ ἔργου τόσον ὑπερόχως σὰν νὰ ἐγνώριζε μερικὰ πράγματα καλύτερα ἀπὸ τὸν συνθέτη». Τέλος, ἡ «Μύνγενερ Τσάϊτουγκ» ἐτόνισεν ὅτι: «Εἶναι ὡς διευθυντὴς ὀρχήστρας πραγματικὸν φαινόμενον καὶ ἐντυπωσιακὸν θαῦμα».

ΣΥΝΑΝΤΗΣΙΣ ΜΕ ΤΟΝ ΜΕΓΑΛΟΝ ΑΡΧΙΜΟΥΣΙΚΟΝ

ΜΑΣ ΟΜΙΛΕΙ Ο ΜΗΤΡΟΠΟΥΛΟΣ...

Αἱ ἀπόψεις του διὰ τὸν δρόμον ποὺ παίρνει σήμερα ἡ Μουσική. — Ἐντυπώσεις του ἀπὸ τὸ Ἰσραήλ. — Τὸ ἑλληνικὸν κράτος πρέπει νὰ βοηθήση τοὺς νέους...

ΥΠΟ ΤΟΥ κ. ΓΙΩΡΓΟΥ ΛΕΩΤΣΑΚΟΥ

Μ' ἕνα πύρινο πάθος, συχνὰ παραπημένο ἀπὸ κάθε προσπάθεια νὰ κάμη πλαστικώτερο τὸν λόγο ποὺ τὸ ἐξέφραζε, ὁ Δημήτρης Μητρόπουλος μίλησε χθὲς τὸ μεσημέρι σὲ μιὰ ὁμάδα Ἑλλήνων καὶ ξένων δημοσιογράφων γιὰ τὰ μεγάλα αἰσθητικὰ προβλήματα ποὺ ὑποχρεώθηκε νὰ ἀντιμετωπίση κατὰ τὴν τριετία ποὺ μεσολάβησε ἀπὸ τὴν τελευταία του συνάντησι μαζί τους. Στὴν συζήτησι αὐτή, δόθηκε ὁλόκληρος μὲ μιὰ ζωντάνια ἐφηβικὴ, σὰν νὰ ἤθελε νὰ πείση τὸ μικρό του ἀκροατήριο ὅτι τὸ χρονικὸ αὐτὸ διάστημα τῶν τριῶν ἐτῶν ἀφαιρέθηκε μᾶλλον παρὰ προστέθηκε στὴν ἡλικία του. Κι' αὐτὴ ἀκριβῶς ἡ ἀκτινοβολία τῆς προσωπικότητός του κατάφερε,γιὰ ἕνα ὡρισμένο διάστημα, νὰ κρύψη ἀρκετὰ τὴν ἀτρία χρόνια, ὁ Μητρόπουλος μιλοῦσε μὲ ἀποτροπιασμὸ γιὰ τὴν «κατευθυνομένη τέχνη» καὶ τὸν σοβιετικὸ «σοσιαλιστικὸ ρεαλισμό». Σήμερα, ἡ ἐξέλιξι τῶν πραγμάτων τείνει νὰ τὸν ὑποχρεώσῃ νὰ συνταχθῆ μὲ τοὺς Φιλισταίους. Χωρὶς νὰ ἐγκρίνῃ τὶς πιέσεις κάτω ἀπὸ τὶς ὁποῖες ἐργάζονται ἕνας Σοστάκοβιτς, ἕνας Μιασκόφσκυ ἢ ἕνας Καμπαλέφσκυ, φτάνει στὸ σημεῖο νὰ συμφιλιωθῆ ἀρκετὰ μὲ τὴν δεοντολογία ποὺ τὴν ὑπαγορεύει. «Στὸ κάτω-κάτω, τὸ ρώσικο χῶμα μυρίζει κι' αὐτὸ μουσική, λοιπόν... Ἐπειτα μπορεῖ νὰ μὴ γράφουν πρωτότυπα πράγματα, ἀλλὰ γράφουν δμορφη μουσική...» Αὐτὰ ἦταν τὰ λόγια του. Πόση ἀλλαγὴ μέσα σὲ μιὰ τριετία!

Τελευταῖα συνεχίζει, τὸν ἐκάλεσαν

πελπιστικὴ ὀξύτητα τῶν προβλημάτων αὐτῶν.

Ἐκεῖνος ποὺ θὰ ἀποδυόταν σὲ μιὰ ἔντιμη προσπάθεια ἀξιολογήσεως τῆς φυσιογνωμίας τοῦ μεγάλου ἀρχιμουσικοῦ, θὰ ἔπρεπε νὰ τὸν ἰδῆ σὰν ἕνα ἀπὸ τοὺς παράξενους ἐκείνους καλοσυὸς ποὺ ἐδῶ κι' αἰῶνες στελλίζουν τὸ ναὸ τοῦ εὐρωπαϊκοῦ πνεύματος, μιὰ ἀπὸ τὶς τόσο χαρακτηριστικὲς εὐρωπαϊκὲς, ἀλλὰ καὶ ἰδιόμορφα «μεγάλες» διάνοιες ποὺ φιλοσοφοῦν κάνοντας αἰσθητικὴ καὶ κάνουν αἰσθητικὴ φιλοσοφώντας. Καὶ γι' αὐτὸν ἀκριβῶς τὸν λόγο, τὸ δίλημμα μιᾶς τέτοιας ἰδιοφυΐας μπροστὰ στὴν ἀπίστευτα παράδοξη ἐξέλιξι τῆς μουσικῆς κατὰ τὰ τελευταῖα δέκα χρόνια, δίλημμα μιᾶς διάνοιας ἀπ' ἐκεῖνες ποὺ συνηθίζουν μᾶλλον νὰ ἐκδιάζουν τὴν ἐξέλιξι τῶν καιρῶν, παρὰ νὰ ἐκδιάζωνται ἀπ' αὐτήν, παίρνει διαστάσεις ἀπίθανα δραματικές. Τὸ πρόβλημα τοῦ κοινοῦ, ποὺ ἀπὸ τὴν μακάρια ἐκείνη ἐποχὴ τοῦ Στραβίνσκυ ἀντιμετωπίζει τὸν νεωτερισμὸ μὲ μιὰ ἠττοπάθεια πού κοντεύει νὰ καταντήση παράδοσι, τοῦ κοινοῦ μὲ τὴν ἀναιμικὴ περιέργεια ποὺ οὔτε κὰν παίρνει τὸν κόπο νὰ ἱκανοποιηθῆ, ἔχει πιὰ περάσει σ' ἕνα δεύτερο πλάνο. Τὸ δίλημμα τῆς ἰδιοφυΐας εἶναι τώρα πρόβλημα ἐπιβιώσεώς της.

Ἡ μεσοβασιλεία τοῦ δωδεκατονισμοῦ, κοντεύει πιὰ νὰ τελειώση. Ὁ Σαῖνμπεργκ, ὁ Σκαλκώττας, ὁ Ἄντον φὸν Βέμπερν ἢ καὶ ἄλλοι ἀκόμη νεώτεροι ὅπως ὁ Ἀντρὲ Ζολιβέ, ἂν δὲν ἀποτελοῦν «παλαιοντολογίαν», κατὰ τὴν ἔκφρασι τοῦ μεγάλου ἀρχιμουσικοῦ, εἶναι ὁπωσδήποτε κομμάτια ἀπὸ τὴν Ἱστορία, μιὰ Ἱστορία νωπὴ βέβαια. Διάδοχοί τους εἶναι ὁ Πιὲρ Μπουλέζ, ὁ ἐξωφρενικὸς Ἐντγκὰρ Βαρέζ, ὁ Γιάννης Ξενάκης καὶ ὁ Στοκχάουζεν, ἕνας νέος Γερμανὸς ποὺ ὅσο κι' ἂν ζῆ σὰν μικροαστὸς συνεχίζει τὴν παράδοσι τῶν μεγάλων καλλιτεχνικῶν συνειδήσεων τοῦ 19ου αἰῶνος. (Γι' αὐτὸν ὁ Μητρόπουλος ἐξέφρασε ἀπεριόριστο θαυμασμό). Ἡ μουσικὴ ποὺ γράφουν ἀνάγει συνηθέστατα τὸν ἐκτελεστὴ σ' ἕνα ὄργανο ἀκριβείας καὶ τὸν μαέστρο σ' ἕνα παράδοξο τροχονόμο, ποὺ ἀκόμη δὲν ἔχει ἐξοικειωθῆ ἀπάλυτα μὲ τὰ καινούργια του καθήκοντα. Ὁ καλλιτέχνης βλέπει ἔντρομος τὴν μηχανὴ νὰ εἰσβάλλη ἀμείλικτη στὰ βασίλειά του, κατακερματίζοντας κάθε ἀνθρώπινο στοιχεῖο. Ἡ τέχνη τείνει νὰ ἐκφυλισθῆ σὲ μιὰ φύσει ἀδικαίωτη παραδοξολογία, ποὺ μόνο σὲ μιὰ διεθνῆ ἐμποροπανήγυρι, ὅπως ἡ Ἔκθεσι τῶν Βρυξελλῶν, εἶναι δυνατὸν νὰ βρῆ μιὰ θέσι. (Τὰ ἔργα τοῦ Ἐντγκὰρ Βαρὲζ ποὺ παίχθηκαν ἐκεῖ, ἔκαμαν πλῆθος σαγονιῶν ν' ἀνοίξουν ἀπὸ κατάπληξι). Πρὶν ἀπὸ νὰ διευθύνη μιὰ ὀρχήστρα ποὺ κάθε ὁμάδα ὀργάνων της ἦταν κλεισμένη σὲ χωριστὸ θάλαμο μὲ γυάλινα τοιχώματα. Κι' ἀντὶ γιὰ τὴν ὀρχήστρα, ὁ μαέστρος βρῆκε μπροστά του μιὰ... ὀθόνη τηλεοράσεως! Φυσικά, τὰ παράτησε ὅλα κι' ἀρνήθηκε νὰ διευθύνη. «Μπορεῖ κανεὶς νὰ κάνη ἔρωτα ἐξ ἀποστάσεως;» καταλήγει ὁ Μητρόπουλος μὲ μιὰ ἀπελπισμένη ἀποστροφή. Βέβαια, ὅπως ἐξωμολογήθηκε προηγουμένως, θὰ ἤθελε νὰ εἶναι ἀκόμη νέος, νὰ μὴν εἶχε ἀφήσει πίσω του ἕνα σωρὸ κρίσιμες καμπές, γιὰ νὰ παρακολουθῆση στοὺς πειραματισμούς της (ὅπως εἶχε παρακολουθήσει μὲ ἀγάπη καὶ τὶς προηγούμενες) αὐτὴν τὴν καινούργια γενιὰ ποὺ προτιμᾶ νὰ ἐμπνέεται ἀπὸ κάποιες ἀόριστες προφητεῖες γιὰ τὸ μέλλον, ἀντὶ ἀπὸ τὶς σίγουρες προοπτικές του ποὺ μᾶς παρέχει τὸ παρόν. Ὅμως ἔχει πάψει νὰ συνθέτη καὶ νὰ παίζη πιάνο ἐδῶ καὶ χρόνια. Τὸν ἐνδιαφέρει πιὰ μόνο ἡ ὀρχήστρα.

Μιλώντας ἐν συνεχείᾳ γιὰ τὰ ἑλληνικὰ μουσικὰ πράγματα, ὁ Δημήτρης Μητρόπουλος δὲν παρέλειψε μιὰ κινεζικώτατα εὐγενικὴ φιλοφρόνησι πρὸς τὸ κοινὸ ποὺ ἐπὶ τέσσερις βραδυὲς θὰ μαζευτῆ στὸ Θέατρο Ἡρώδου γιὰ νὰ τὸν χειροκροτήση (συγκεκριμένα ἐπῆνεσε τὴν μουσικὴ του διαπαιδαγώγησι) καὶ ἐκφράσθηκε μὲ τὰ καλύτερα λόγια γιὰ τοὺς σημερινοὺς ἐκπροσώπους τῆς μουσικῆς στὴν Ἑλλάδα. Ὅταν τὸν ἐρώτησαν ἂν θὰ ἦταν διατεθειμένος νὰ ἔλθη στὴν Ἑλλάδα καὶ νὰ ξαναμάδη στοὺς Ἕλληνες τὴν μουσική, ὑπὸ τὴν προϋπόθεσι ὅτι τὸ ἑλληνικὸ Κράτος θὰ τοῦ παρεῖχε κάθε ὑποστήριξι, ἀπήντησε: «Πιθανόν». Ἀλλ' ἀμέσως ἀναλογίσθηκε τὶς τρομακτικὲς συνέπειες ποὺ θὰ εἶχαν οἱ συγκρίσεις ποὺ θὰ ἀρχίζαν νὰ γίνωνται, μὲ ἀποτέλεσμα νὰ ἐπικρατήση καὶ πάλι ἕνα χάος σὲ περίπτωσι ποὺ θὰ ἔφευγε ξανά. Στὸ Ἰσραήλ, πάντως, ὅπου βρισκόταν τελευταῖα, τοῦ ἔγινε μιὰ ἀνάλογη προσφορά, τὴν ὁποία ἀρνήθηκε νὰ δεχθῆ, ὅσο κι' ἂν στὸ νεογέννητο αὐτὸ Κράτος βρῆκε μιὰ μουσικὴ Γῆ τῆς Ἐπαγγελίας. (Χαρακτηριστικὰ ἀνέφερε ὅτι ὑπάρχουν 22.000 συνδρομηταὶ γιὰ τὶς συμφωνικὲς συναυλίες, κι' αὐτὸ ἀναγκάζει τοὺς ἀρχιμουσικοὺς νὰ ἐκτελοῦν κάποτε καὶ... δέκα φορὲς τὸ ἴδιο πρόγραμμα. Τὸ ἴδιο συνέβη κατὰ τὴν παραμονή του ἐκεῖ κι' αὐτὸ στὴν ἀρχὴ τοῦ φαινόταν τρομερὰ βαρετό. Ἀργότερα ὅμως ἄρχισε νὰ δίδη κάθε φορὰ καὶ ἀπὸ μιὰ διαφορετικὴ ἐκτέλεσι, ἀλλάζοντας τὰ «τέμπι», τοὺς χρωματισμοὺς κλπ.). Πραγματικὰ σκέπτεται, καθὼς εἶπε νὰ ξαναπάη ἀργότερα στὸ Ἰσραήλ, τὸ ἐπίπεδο καὶ ἡ ποιότης τῶν συμφωνικῶν συγκροτημάτων τοῦ ὁποίου τὸν ἄφησαν κατάπληκτο. Ἀλλὰ θὰ τοῦ ἦταν ἀφόρητο νὰ δίνη δέκα φορὲς μιὰ συναυλία. «Ὅλα στὴν ζωὴ χρειάζονται ἀλλαγή, ἀλλαγὴ ποὺ νὰ σκοτώνη τὴν ἀνία τὸ μεγαλύτερο ἀπὸ τὰ δεινὰ τοῦ ἀνθρώπου. Τὸν ἔρωτα, τὸν πνίγει ἡ ἀνία. Γι' αὐτὸ καὶ στὸν γάμο θὰ ἔπρεπε νὰ ὑπάρχουν κατὰ τακτικὰ διαστήματα, μικρὲς διακοπές», συμπεραίνει μ' ἕνα παράδοξο χιοῦμορ.

Ἡ ἀπάντησι σὲ κάποια ἐρώτησι γιὰ τὴν ἑλληνικὴ μουσικὴ στὸ ἐξωτερικὸ καὶ γιὰ τὴν ἀμερικανικὴ μουσική, κατέληξε, ὅσο καὶ ἂν φανῆ ἀπίθανο, σὲ μιὰ πρωτοφανῆ Ἱερεμιάδα ἐναντίον τοῦ Τύπου. Ἱερεμιάδα ποὺ θύμιζε μερικὲς σελίδες τοῦ «Ἡμερολογίου» τοῦ Σαῖρεν Κίρκεγκωρντ, τοῦ μεγάλου Δανοῦ προδρόμου τῆς ὑπαρξιακῆς φιλοσοφίας. Οἱ συνθέτες, ἀπήντησε ὁ Μητρόπουλος, σπανιώτατα κατορθώνουν σήμερα νὰ ξεπεράσουν τὰ σύνορα τῆς χώρας των. Ἀλλὰ καὶ ὅταν αὐτὸ συμβαίνη, εἶναι ἐκτεθειμένοι στὴν παρεξήγησι, ὅπως ἔγινε μὲ τὸν φίλο του Σάμουελ Μπάρμπερ, τοῦ ὁποίου τὴν ὄπερα «Βανέσσα» διηύθυνε τελευταίως στὸ Ζάλτσμπουργκ. Τὸ κοινὸ στὴν ἀρχὴ ἐνθουσιάσθηκε μ' τὸ ἔργο. Τὴν ἄλλη μέρα, οἱ κριτικοὶ τὸ χτύπησαν, κατηγόρησαν τὸν Μπάρμπερ γιὰ ὀπισθοδρομικό. Τὸ κοινὸ ἔπεσευε τότε νὰ τοὺς παρακολουθήση στὴν ἀντίδρασί τους. Καὶ ἀπὸ τὸ σημεῖο αὐτὸ ὁ Μητρόπουλος ἄρχισε τοὺς μύδρους κατὰ τοῦ Τύπου. Κατὰ τῆς κακῆς ἐκείνης δημοσιογραφίας, ποὺ δημιουργεῖ ἐπικαιρότητες ἐκ τοῦ μὴ ὄντος καὶ κάποιος ἐκπρόσωπός της, ὅταν κάποτε πληροφορήθηκε ὅτι ὁ Μητρόπουλος ὑπέφερε ἀπὸ πονοκέφαλο, ἔσπευσε νὰ συντάξη τὴν... νεκρολογία του! Οἱ κριτικοί, συνεχίζει, γράφουν τὴ γνώμη τους, ὄχι γιὰ νὰ κατατοπίσουν τὸ κοινό, ἀλλὰ μᾶλλον γιὰ νὰ πείσουν τὸν ἑαυτό τους κλπ. κλπ. Τελειώνοντας, ὁ Δημήτρης Μητρόπουλος πλέκει τὸ ἐγκώμιο τοῦ νέου διευθυντοῦ τῆς Λυρικῆς Σκηνῆς Ντίνου Γιαννόπουλου καὶ κάνει μιὰ ἔκκλησι πρὸς τὸ ἑλληνικὸ κράτος, ζητώντας νὰ ἐνισχυθοῦν οἱ νέοι. Πρόκειται γιὰ μιὰ ἔκκλησι πραγματικὰ συγκινητική, ἂν καὶ θὰ πρέπει νὰ ὁμολογήσουμε ὅτι τὰ μέχρι στιγμῆς δεδομένα δὲν μᾶς ἐξουσιοδοτοῦν νὰ πιστέψουμε ὅτι θὰ βρῆ εὐήκοα ὦτα...

Ἡ σημερινὴ συνάντησι μὲ τὸν Δημήτρη Μητρόπουλο στάθηκε μιὰ ἐκπληξι κάπως πικρή. Γιατὶ εἶναι πάντα πικρὸ νὰ βλέπη κανεὶς μιὰ διάνοια νὰ προβληματίζεται στὴν ἡλικία ἐκείνη ποὺ ἀποτελεῖ τὸ διεῖρο ὅλων τῶν ἐκκολαπτομένων ἰδιοφυΐων, ἐνῶ ἀγωνίζονται γιὰ ἐπιβολή, γιὰ τὴν ἀπουσία προβλημάτων ποὺ τὴν χαρακτηρίζει. Καὶ γι' αὐτὸ τὸ λόγο, τὸ πλῆθος ποὺ τὶς ἑπόμενες τέσσερις βραδυὲς θὰ κατακλύση τὴν ρωμαϊκὴ ἀρένα τῆς ὁδοῦ Διονυσίου τοῦ Ἀρεοπαγίτου, γιὰ νὰ χειροκροτήση ἕναν ἑλληνόφωνο πρωταθλητὴ τῆς μπαγκέττας, ταυτίζοντας μέσα στὴ νόμιμα ἁπλοϊκή του μέθη τὸν ἀρχιερέα μὲ τὸ εἴδωλο — τὸν ἐκτελεστὴ μὲ τὴν προσφορά του — θὰ ἔπρεπε νὰ δείξη ἕνα κάποιο μεγαλύτερο σεβασμό, μιὰ μεγαλύτερη, ἂν εἶναι δυνατόν, κατανόησι. Μπορεῖ ἡ τέχνη νὰ εἶναι «τὸ φαρδύτερο μονοπάτι ποὺ ὁδηγεῖ μακρυὰ ἀπὸ τὴ λύτρωσι», σύμφωνα μὲ τὸν ἀφορισμὸ τοῦ Γκοτάμα Σιντάρτα. Ἀλλὰ εἶναι ἀπίστευτα ὀδυνηρὸ νὰ βλέπη κανεὶς νὰ χάνεται κάτω ἀπὸ τὰ πόδια του αὐτὸ τὸ μονοπάτι πάνω στὸ ὁποῖο εἶχε βαδίσει ἐπὶ τόσα χρόνια...

ΔΗΜ. ΜΗΤΡΟΠΟΥΛΟΣ ΦΙΛΑΡΜΟΝΙΚΗ ΤΗΣ ΒΙΕΝΝΗΣ

Τοῦ κ. ΠΕΤΡΟΥ ΠΕΤΡΙΔΗ

Σταθμὸν ἐκλαμπρον ἀποτελεῖ, δίχως ἀμφιβολίαι, ἡ ἐμφάνισις τοῦ διασήμου Ἕλληνος μαέστρου κ. Δημ. Μητροπούλου ἐπὶ κεφαλῆς τῆς φημισμένης Φιλαρμονικῆς Ὀρχήστρας τῆς Βιέννης μέσα στὸ πλαίσιο τοῦ Φεστιβὰλ Ἀθηνῶν. Χάριτες ὀφείλονται στὸν Ἑλληνικὸ Ὀργανισμὸ Τουρισμοῦ καὶ στοὺς ὀργανωτὲς τοῦ Φεστιβὰλ γιὰ τὴν πρωτοβουλία μετακλήσεως μαέστρου καὶ ὀρχήστρας πού, μὲ τὴν πρώτη κι ὅλας συναυλία, προσέδωσαν αἴγλην ὑπέροχη στὶς ἐτήσιες αὐτὲς καλλιτεχνικὲς ἐκδηλώσεις.

Ἀπὸ τὶς τέσσερις εἰσαγωγὲς ποὺ ἔγραψεν ὁ Μπετόβεν γιὰ τὴν ὄπερα «Φιντέλιο», παίζεται συνήθως ἡ ὑπ' ἀριθ. 3. Ὁ κ. Μητρόπουλος ἐνέγραψε στὴν ἀρχὴ τοῦ προγράμματος τὴν φέρουσα τὸν ἀρ. 2, γραμμένη πάνω σὲ ταυτούσια σχεδὸν θεματικὰ ὑλικὰ μὲ τὴν τρίτη. Μᾶς ἔφανε μακροσκελέστερη, χαλαρώτερα ἀποκρυσταλλωμένη ὅσον ἀφορᾶ τὴν συμπάγεια τοῦ συμφωνικοῦ ὕφους. Ἴσως γιατὶ παρακολουθεῖ, στενώτερα ἀπὸ τὴν τρίτη, τὶς καθέκαστες πτυχὲς τοῦ ἐλισσομένου δράματος. Μ' ἀριστοτεχνικὴ κατοχὴ τοῦ ἔργου, μὲ θαυμαστὴ ποικιλία κι ἐναλλαγὴ δυναμικῶν χρωματισμῶν, μὲ τεχνικὴν ἐντέλεια δυσπέρβλητη καθωδήγησεν ὁ κ. Μητρόπουλος τὴν εἰσαγωγή, ἐνῶ οἱ ἄριστοι καλλιτέχνες τῆς ὀρχήστρας ἀνταπεκρίνοντο καὶ στὶς ἀπειροελάχιστες προθέσεις τοῦ μαέστρου μὲ θέρμη κι εὐχέρεια προσφορᾶς.

Ἡ συμφωνία ἀριθ. 2 τοῦ Μπετόβεν ἄνοιξεν ἄλλους ὁρίζοντες, τοὺς καθαρὰ συμφωνικούς, ὁρίζοντες πιὸ οἰκείους πρὸς τὴν πηγαία δημιουργικὴν ἰδιοφυΐα τοῦ μουσουργοῦ. Ρυθμικὰ καλοστρωμένος ὁ βραδὺς πρόλογος, ἀντάξιο μόλιστα, ποὺ περιέχει, ὅπως ἄλλοτε ἀναφέραμε, πρωτοκυτταρικὰ στοιχεῖα, τὰ ὁποῖα εἴκοσι περίπου χρόνια ἀργότερα θὰ ἐμφανισθοῦν ὥριμα κι ἐπιβλητικὰ στὴν συμφωνίαι ἀριθ. 9. Σφριγηλό, συναρπαστικὸ τὸ γοργὸ κίνημα, ἀλλέγκρο κὸν μπρίο, στὸ δεύτερο θέμα τοῦ ὁποίου, εἶδος ἡρωϊκοῦ

Τὸ κοινὸν προτιμᾶ τοὺς κλασσικούς. — Οἱ μοντέρνοι συνθέται πειραματίζονται μὲ τὶς νότες ὅπως οἱ μικροβιολόγοι μὲ τὰ μικρόβια. — Ὁ ἴδιος ἔπαψε τοὺς ἡρωϊσμοὺς καὶ παρουσιάζει τώρα κλασικοὺς συνθέτας.

ΟΙ ΞΕΝΟΙ ΜΙΛΟΥΝ ΠΟΛΥ ΑΣΧΗΜΑ ΓΙΑ ΤΟ ΦΕΣΤΙΒΑΛ ΑΘΗΝΩΝ

«Ἐὰν βεβαιωθῶ ὅτι τὸ Ἑλληνικὸ Κράτος εἶναι ἀποφασισμένο νὰ διαθέσῃ ὅλα τὰ μέσα ποὺ χρειάζονται γιὰ νὰ δημιουργηθῇ καὶ νὰ κρατηθῇ στὴν Ἀθήνα μιὰ μεγάλη Συμφωνικὴ Ὀρχήστρα, τότε θὰ ἔλθω νὰ μείνω γιὰ πάντα ἐδῶ!». Αὐτὴ ἦταν ἡ ἀπάντησις τοῦ Δημήτρη Μητροπούλου σὲ σχετικὴ ἐρώτησι τοῦ ὑποφαινομένου κατὰ τὴν χθεσινὴ «πρὲς - κόνφερενς» μὲ τὸν διάσημο Ἕλληνα ἀρχιμουσικό.

— Ἀλλὰ — προσθέτει ὁ Δημήτρης Μητρόπουλος — καὶ χωρὶς ἐμένα, μὲ λιγώτερα μέσα ποὺ ἐπιβάλλεται νὰ διαθέσῃ τὸ Κράτος, ἡ σημερινὴ Κρατικὴ Ὀρχήστρα, μὲ τὴν ἐνίσχυσι μερικῶν καλῶν ξένων μουσικῶν καὶ τοὺς ὑπάρχοντας μαέστρους, τοὺς ὁποίους θεωρῶ ἱκανωτάτους, μπορεῖ νὰ θαυματοῦ σι μὲ τὴν συμπαράστασι καὶ τοῦ ἑλληνικοῦ μουσικοῦ κοινοῦ, ποὺ εἶναι ἀπὸ τὰ καλύτερα στὸν κόσμο.

Πρὶν ἀπὸ τὴν τόσο ἐνδιαφέρουσα αὐτὴ ἀπάντησι, ὁ Δημήτρης Μητρόπουλος ἱκανοποίησε χωρὶς καμμιὰ περιστροφὴ ἕνα πλῆθος ἐρωτήματα γύρω ἀπὸ τὴν μουσική, τὸ προσεχὲς πρόγραμμά του, τὸ Φεστιβὰλ Ἀθηνῶν.

Στὸ ἐρώτημα «Ποιὸ εἶδος μουσικῆς προτιμᾶ ἢ πρέπει νὰ προτιμᾶ τὸ κοινόν», ὁ διάσημος ἀρχιμουσικὸς ἔδωσε τὴν ἑξῆς ἀπάντησι:

«Τὸ κοινὸν πληρώνει τὸ εἰσιτήριο τῆς συναυλίας ὄχι γιὰ νὰ κουράσῃ τὸ μυαλό του νὰ κατανοήσῃ ἕνα ἔργο, ἀλλὰ γιὰ νὰ εὐχαριστήσῃ τὴν ἀκοή του καὶ δυὸ δοκιμές, λόγῳ τῶν συχνῶν ἐπαναλήψεων, γιὰ ἕνα ἄγνωστο ἔργο ἑνὸς ξένου συνθέτου μπορεῖ νὰ χρειασθῇ καὶ 40 δοκιμές, ὅπως συνέβη μὲ ἔργα τοῦ Μπουλαὶζ καὶ τοῦ Στοκχάους! Ποιὸς πληρώνει 40 δοκιμὲς σὲ μιὰ ὀρχήστρα γιὰ νὰ ἐκτελεσθῇ ἕνα ἄγνωστο νέο ἔργο κατ' ἐπέκτασιν τὴν ψυχή του. Γι' αὐτὸ καὶ κατὰ πλειονότητα τὸ κοινὸν παραμένει πιστὸ στὸν Μπετόβεν, τὸν Μπράμς, τὸν Τσαϊκόφσκυ καὶ τοὺς ἄλλους συνθέτες ποὺ τὰ ἔργα τους συγγενεύουν ἀπὸ πλευρᾶς φόρμας μὲ τὰ ἔργα τῶν προηγουμένων. Γι' αὐτὸ οἱ προσπάθειες τῶν συγχρόνων μοντέρνων συνθετῶν, δωδεκαφθογγιστῶν καὶ ἄλλων, πέφτουν κατὰ κανόνα στὸ κενό, μὲ ἐξαίρεσι δύο τρία ὀνόματα. Καὶ ἡ γνώμη μου εἶναι ὅτι ἀξίζουν αὐτὴ τὴν τύχη οἱ μοντέρνοι συνθέται, οἱ ὁποῖοι ἀξιοῦν νὰ κατανοήσῃ καὶ ν' ἀγαπήσῃ τὸ κοινὸν τοὺς θορύβους τους, τοὺς ὁποίους μόνον ἐμεῖς οἱ μουσικοὶ μὲ δυσκολία μποροῦμε νὰ ξεχωρίσουμε καὶ νὰ τοὺς κατατάξουμε. Οἱ συνθέται αὐτοὶ δὲν γράφουν μουσική, ἀλλὰ πειραματίζονται μὲ τὶς μουσικὲς νότες ὅπως οἱ μικροβιολόγοι στὸ ἐργαστήριό τους μὲ τὰ διάφορα μικρόβια. Ἡ διαφορὰ εἶναι ὅτι οἱ πρῶτοι θέλουν τὴν παρουσία τοῦ κοινοῦ στὰ πειράματά τους, ἐνῶ οἱ δεύτεροι δὲν ἐνοχλοῦν παρὰ μόνον τὸν ἑαυτό τους μὲ τά... μικρόβια. Ἐξαίρεσι στὴν τάσι αὐτὴ ποὺ ἀκολουθοῦν οἱ σύγχρονοι συνθέται, ἀποτελοῦν οἱ Ρῶσοι μουσουργοί, ὅπως ὁ Σοστάκοβιτς, ὁ Καμπαλέφσκυ καὶ ἄλλοι ποὺ μὲ τὴν προτροπὴ ἴσως καὶ τοῦ Κράτους γράφουν μουσικὴ γιὰ τὸ Λαό. Ἔτσι, παρατηρεῖται τὸ φαινόμενο ὅταν παίζωνται συνθέσεις τῶν Ρώσων αὐτῶν συνθετῶν στὶς χῶρες τῆς Δύσεως καὶ ἰδιαίτερα στὴν Ἀμερική, τὸ κοινὸν ὄχι μόνον νὰ προσέρχεται ἅθρόως στὶς συναυλίες, ἀλλὰ νὰ ἐπιφυλάσσῃ ἐνθουσιώδη ὑποδοχὴ στὰ ἔργα αὐτά. Ἐντελῶς τὸ ἀντίθετο συμβαίνει στὶς συναυλίες μὲ τὰ ἔργα τῶν Δυτικῶν μοντέρνων συνθετῶν, ὅπως π. χ. τοῦ Μπουλαὶζ ἢ τοῦ Γερμανοῦ Στοκχάους, ὅπου τὸ κοινὸν ἄλλο καὶ γίνεται ἀραιότερο. Αὐτὸ σημαίνει ὅτι ὁ κόσμος μᾶς ξεχνάει ὅταν τὸν ξεχνᾶμε. Καὶ ἀσφαλῶς ἀποτελεῖ τὴν βασικώτερη αἰτία στὴν κρίσι τῆς μοντέρνας μουσικῆς.

Τρεῖς χαρακτηριστικὲς φωτογραφίες τοῦ διασήμου Ἕλληνος ἀρχιμουσικοῦ Δημήτρη Μητρόπουλου κατὰ τὴν χθεσινὴ συνομιλία του μὲ τοὺς ἀντιπροσώπους τοῦ Τύπου.

Ἄλλη ἐπίσης βασικὴ αἰτία, συνέχισε ὁ Δ. Μητρόπουλος, τῆς περιωρισμένης κινήσεως τῶν συγχρόνων συνθετῶν εἶναι τὸ οἰκονομικὸ πρόβλημα ποὺ συναντᾶ κάθε συνθέτης ἀπὸ αὐτοὺς στὴν προσπάθειά του νὰ γνωρίσῃ τὸ ἔργο του καὶ πέρα ἀπὸ τὰ σύνορα τῆς πατρίδας του. Καὶ ἐξηγοῦμαι: Ἐνῶ π. χ. γιὰ μιὰ συμφωνία τοῦ Μπετόβεν ἢ ἕνα κοντέρτο τοῦ Μπράμς, μιὰ ὀρχήστρα, ὁπουδήποτε, χρειάζεται μιὰ ἢ δύο πρόβες, γιὰ ἕνα ἔργο τοῦ Μπουλαὶζ ἢ τοῦ Στοκχάους χρειάζονται τουλάχιστον 40 πρόβες. Ποιὸς μαέστρος θὰ δεχθῇ νὰ ὑποβληθῇ σὲ τόσο κόπο, ὅταν μὲ τὰ κλασσικὰ ἔργα κάνει ξεκούραστη καὶ ἐξησφαλισμένη ἐπιτυχία; Μόνον μερικοὶ τρελλοὶ βρίσκονται πότε - πότε κι' ἔτσι γνωρίζει ὁ κόσμος καὶ νέα ὀνόματα. Ἕνας ἀπὸ τοὺς τρελλοὺς αὐτοὺς ὑπῆρξα κι' ἐγώ, ποὺ κατέστρεψα τὴν ὑγεία μου γιὰ νὰ γνωρίσω καὶ νὰ ἐπιβάλω στὸ «κοινὸν μερικοὺς νέες συνθέτες, ὅπως εἶναι ὁ ἄξιος Ἀμερικανὸς Σάμουελ Μπάρμτερ κι' ὁ δικός μας ὁ Σκαλκώτας. Δὲν μπορῶ ὅμως νὰ ἐξακολουθήσω αὐτοῦ τοῦ εἴδους τοὺς ἡρωϊσμοὺς γι' αὐτὸ καὶ τὰ προγράμματα τῶν συναυλιῶν μου πυκνώνονται ὅλο καὶ περισσότερο μὲ ἔργα κλασσικῶν συνθετῶν».

— Σὲ ἐρώτησι «Ποιὸ θὰ εἶναι τὸ ἀκριβὲς πρόγραμμά του γιὰ τὴν τελευταία καὶ τὴν ἄλλη περίοδο», ὁ Δημήτρης Μητρόπουλος ἀπήντησε:

— Δουλειά, πολλὴ δουλειά, χωρὶς διακοπή, χωρὶς ἀνάπαυσι. Ἔχω νὰ διευθύνω 80 παραστάσεις μελοδραματικῶν ἔργων στὴν Μετροπόλιταν Ὄπερα τῆς Νέας Ὑόρκης. Θὰ ἀρχίσω στὶς 26 Ὀκτωβρίου μὲ τὴν «Τόσκα» τοῦ Πουτσίνι, ὅπου θὰ τραγουδήσουν ἡ Τεμπάλντι, ὁ Τάκερ καὶ ὁ Τζὼρτζ Λόντοι. Θὰ συνεχίσω μὲ τὸν «Μάκβεθ» καὶ ἄλλα ἔργα καὶ θὰ τελειώσω ἀρχὲς Ἰουνίου. Ἐνδιαμέσως, θὰ ξοδέψω χρόνο ὁ ἑβδομάδων γιὰ συναυλίες μὲ τὴν Φιλαρμονικὴ Ὀρχήστρα τῆς Βιέννης. Ὁ Ἰούλιος καὶ ὁ Ἰούνιος τοῦ 1959 θὰ μὲ βροῦν στὸ Ἰσραήλ, ὅπου ἔχω νὰ διευθύνω 40 κοντσέρτα. Ἀμέσως μετά, τὸν Αὔγουστο, θὰ ξαναπάω στὸ Σάλτσμπουργκ γιὰ δύο - τρεῖς συναυλίες μὲ τὴν Φιλαρμονικὴ τῆς Βιέννης καὶ ἐν συνεχείᾳ στὴν Βιέννη ὅπου θὰ διευθύνω ἕνα ἢ δύο μελοδραματικὰ ἔργα στὴν ἐνεῖ Κρατικὴ Ὄπερα. Τὸ 1960 θὰ μὲ βρῇ καὶ πάλι στὴν Μετροπόλιταν Ὄπερα.

— Καὶ ἡ «πρὲς - κόνφερενς» ἔκλεισε μὲ τὴν ἑξῆς χαρακτηριστικὴ ἀπάντησι τοῦ Δημήτρη Μητροπούλου στὸ ἐρώτημα «Τί φρονοῦν οἱ ξένοι γιὰ τὸ Φεστιβὰλ Ἀθηνῶν»:

— Μόνον οἱ παραστάσεις ἀρχαίων τραγωδιῶν ἀπὸ τὸ Ἐθνικὸ Θέατρο ἔδωσαν κάποια ὑπόστασι στὸ Φεστιβὰλ Ἀθηνῶν. Ὅσο γιὰ τὶς ἄλλες ἐκδηλώσεις, καλύτερα νὰ μὴν ἀναφέρω πῶς τὶς χαρακτηρίζουν οἱ ξένοι. Μιλοῦν πολὺ ἄσχημα γι' αὐτές!...

Η ΧΘΕΣΙΝΗ «ΠΡΕΣ ΚΟΝΦΕΡΑΝΣ» ΤΟΥ Δ. ΜΗΤΡΟΠΟΥΛΟΥ

ΤΟ ΦΙΛΟΜΟΥΣΟ ΚΟΙΝΟ Σ' ΟΛΟ ΤΟΝ ΚΟΣΜΟ ΑΠΟΔΟΚΙΜΑΖΕΙ ΤΗ ΜΟΝΤΕΡΝΑ ΜΟΥΣΙΚΗ

Οἱ παλιότεροι καὶ οἱ σύγχρονοι Ρῶσοι συνθέτες κρατοῦν τὰ σκῆπτρα στὴν Ἀμερικὴ καὶ παντοῦ

ΑΝΑΓΚΗ ΝΑ ΕΝΙΣΧΥΘΟΥΝ ΟΙ ΕΛΛΗΝΕΣ ΜΟΥΣΙΚΟΙ

Τὸ φιλόμουσο κοινὸ σὲ ὅλο τὸν κόσμο ἀποδοκιμάζει τὴ μοντέρνα δυτικὴ μουσικὴ μὲ τοὺς ἐναλασσόμενους πειραματισμοὺς καὶ μένει πιστὸ στὴν κλασσικὴ καὶ γενικὰ στὴ μουσικὴ ποὺ δὲν ξεκόβει ἀπὸ τὴν παράδοση, ὅπως ἡ ρωσική. Τὰ προγράμματα τῶν συναυλιῶν σ' ὅλο τὸν κόσμο περιέχουν κατὰ 50% παλαιοὺς καὶ νέους Ρώσους συνθέτες καὶ εἰδικὰ στὴν Ἀμερικὴ ἡ ρωσικὴ μουσικὴ κατέχει τὰ σκῆπτρα στὶς μουσικὲς ἐκδηλώσεις. Αὐτὲς εἶναι οἱ πιὸ ἐντυπωσιακὲς διαπιστώσεις γιὰ τὴν πορεία τῆς μουσικῆς ποὺ ἔκανε στὴ χθεσινὴ του συνέντευξη πρὸς τοὺς Ἕλληνες καὶ ξένους δημοσιογράφους ὁ παγκοσμίου φήμης Ἕλληνας μαέστρος Δημήτρης Μητρόπουλος.

Η «ΠΡΕΣ ΚΟΝΦΕΡΑΝΣ»

Ὁ διάσημος ἀρχιμουσικὸς δέχθηκε τοὺς ἀντιπροσώπους τοῦ ἑλληνικοῦ καὶ ξένου τύπου χθὲς τὸ μεσημέρι σὲ αἴθουσα τοῦ ξενοδοχείου «Πτί

Ὁ Δημ. Μητρόπουλος κατὰ τὴ χθεσινὴ του «πρὲς - κόνφερανς»

Παλαί» («Μεγ. Βρεταννία»).

Ἡ συνέντευξη αὐτὴ ξέφυγε ἀπὸ τὰ συνηθισμένα πλαίσια μιᾶς ἁπλῆς «πρὲς κόνφερανς», ποὺ τὶς περισσότερες φορές, παίρνει χαρακτήρα κοσμικῆς κίνησης καὶ δίνει τὴν εὐκαιρία στὸ φιλοξενούμενο καλλιτέχνη, νὰ σταθεῖ γύρω ἀπὸ τὰ ἐντελῶς προσωπικά του ἐνδιαφέροντα. Ἀντίθετα ὁ Ἕλληνας μαέστρος στάθηκε φειδωλὸς στὶς πληροφορίες σ' ὅ,τι ἀφορᾶ τὸ ἄτομό του, καὶ ἐπεκτάθηκε πολὺ περισσότερο σὲ γενικώτερης φύσης ζητήματα. Τὰ προβλήματα τῆς σύγχρονης μουσικῆς ἦταν τὸ κυριώτερο θέμα τῆς συνέντευξης. Παρὰ τὶς γνωστὲς αἰσθητικὲς του ἀντιλήψεις—ἦταν ἀνέκαθεν ὑπέρμαχος τῆς μοντέρνας τεχνοτροπίας — ὁ Μητρόπουλος δὲ δίστασε νὰ ὁμολογήσει, ὅτι σήμερα ἡ σύγχρονη δυτικὴ μουσικὴ μὲ τοὺς ἐναλλασσόμενους πειραματισμούς της, βρίσκεται σὲ πλήρη διάσταση μὲ τὸ φιλόμουσο κοινό. Ὁ κόσμος ποὺ ἀγαπάει τὴ μουσική, τόνισε ὁ μαέστρος, ἐξακολουθεῖ νὰ παραμένει πιστὸς θιασώτης τῆς κλασσικῆς μουσικῆς καὶ τοῦ μουσικοῦ ρομαντισμοῦ, ἀκόμη καὶ τῆς μουσικῆς ἐκείνης ποὺ βασικὰ δὲν ξεστρατίζει ἀπὸ τὴν παράδοση, ὅπως ἡ σύγχρονη σοβιετικὴ μουσική. Τὰ αἴτια ποὺ ὁδήγησαν τὴ μοντέρνα μουσικὴ στὴ Δύση, σὲ πλήρη ἀπομόνωση ἀπὸ τὸ εὐρύτερο φιλόμουσο κοινὸ ποὺ τῆς στρέφει τὰ νῶτα, εἶναι — κατὰ τὴ γνώμη πάντοτε τοῦ Μητροπούλου — πολλὰ καὶ διάφορα. Πρὶν ἀπ' ὅλα ἡ ἀλματώδης μηχανικὴ ἐξέλιξη εἶχε σοβαρὴ ἐπίδραση πάνω στὴ σύγχρονη μουσικὴ δημιουργία. Τὸ ἕνα μουσικὸ σύστημα διαδέχεται τὸ ἄλλο μὲ τόσο γοργὸ ρυθμὸ ὥστε ἡ μουσικὴ ποὺ μόλις χθὲς ἐθεωρεῖτο οὔλτρα μοντέρνα, σήμερα νὰ παίρνει θέση ξεπερασμένου εἴδους. Χαρακτηριστικὸ παράδειγμα ὁ Σένμπεργκ καὶ ἡ σχολή του, ποὺ λογαριάζεται πιὰ σὰν «πεπαλαιωμένο μουσικὸ σύστημα» ἀπὸ τοὺς ὀπαδοὺς τῆς πιὸ «προχωρημένης» μουσικῆς. Ἔτσι, κατέληξε ὁ μαέστρος, εἶναι ἀδύνατο τὸ φιλόμουσο κοινὸ ποὺ δὲν ἔχει σπουδάσει εἰδικὰ τὴ μουσικὴ καὶ δὲ μπορεῖ νὰ κατανοήσει τὴν ἀλχημεία τῶν ἤχων, νὰ παρακολουθήσει αὐτὴ τὴ φρενήρη ἐξέλιξη τῆς μοντέρνας δυτικῆς μουσικῆς.

Η ΡΩΣΙΚΗ ΜΟΥΣΙΚΗ

Σ' ἐρώτηση πῶς μπορεῖ νὰ σταματήσει τὸ κακὸ ποὺ ἔχει ὁδηγήσει τὴ μουσικὴ σὲ ἀδιέξοδο, ὁ Μητρόπουλος ἀπάντησε ὅτι ἐκεῖ ὅπου τὸ κράτος, ὅπως στὴ Σοβιετικὴ Ἕνωση, ἀκολουθεῖ ἕνα προδιαγεγραμμένο σχέδιο σ' ὅ,τι ἀφορᾶ τὴ γενικώτερη πολιτιστικὴ ἀνάπτυξη καὶ τὸ θεμέλιωμα μιᾶς τέχνης ποὺ οὐσιαστικὰ νὰ μὴν ξεκόβει ἀπὸ τὶς ὑγιεῖς παραδόσεις, φυσικὰ εἶναι ὅτι καὶ ἡ μουσικὴ ἐμφανίζεται μὲ ἄλλη ὄψη. Ἄλλωστε, συνέχισε ὁ μαέστρος, ὁ ρωσικὸς λαὸς εἶναι ὁ πιὸ προικισμένος μουσικὰ λαὸς τοῦ κόσμου. Οἱ Ρῶσοι συνθέτες ἀπὸ τοὺς παλαιότερους μέχρι τὸν Προκόφιεφ, τὸ Σοστάκοβιτς, τὸν Καμπαλέφσκυ, γοητεύουν καὶ συναρπάζουν τὰ πλήθη τῶν πιστῶν τῆς τέχνης, σ' ὁλόκληρη τὴν ὑφήλιο. Τὰ 50% στὰ προγράμματα τῶν συναυλιῶν εἶναι ρωσικὴ μουσική. Στὴν Ἀμερικὴ πού, ὡς γνωστό,— ὑπογραμμίζει ὁ μαέστρος — ὑπάρχει τόση ἰδεολογικὴ ἀντίθεση μὲ τὴ Ρωσία, ἡ ρωσικὴ μουσικὴ κατέχει τὰ σκῆπτρα στὶς μουσικὲς ἐκδηλώσεις. Καὶ διερωτᾶται: «Τί εἶναι ἐκεῖνο ποὺ κάνει τὸν κόσμο νὰ συρρέει στὰ κοντσέρτα μου ὅταν παίζω Τσαϊκόφσκυ ἢ Σοστάκοβιτς ἢ Καμπαλέφσκυ; Τί εἶναι ἐκεῖνο ποὺ τὸν συγκινεῖ;». Καὶ προσθέτει: Τὸ περίεργο εἶναι ὅτι λ.χ. ὁ Καμπαλέφσκυ κάθε ἄλλο παρὰ μοντέρνος εἶναι.

Κλείνοντας τὴ συζήτηση γύρω ἀπὸ τὴ μοντέρνα μουσικὴ ὁ Μητρόπουλος, κατέληξε στὸ συμπέρασμα ὅτι εἶναι καιρὸς πιὰ νὰ σταματήσει αὐτὸς ὁ φρενήρης δρόμος, καὶ νὰ σταθοῦμε μέχρι τὸν Σένμπεργκ.

ΟΙ ΠΡΟΣΦΑΤΕΣ ΠΕΡΙΟΔΕΙΕΣ ΤΟΥ

Σχετικὰ μὲ τὴν ὅπερα «Βανέσσα» τοῦ Ἀμερικανοῦ συνθέτη Σάμουελ Μπάρμπερ ποὺ ὁ Μητρόπουλος παρουσίασε στὶς ἐφετεινὲς μουσικὲς γιορτὲς τοῦ Σάλτσμπουργκ μὲ σκηνοθεσία τοῦ Μενόττι, ὁ μαέστρος εἶπε ὅτι πρόκειται «γιὰ ὡραιότατο ἔργο, πραγματικὴ ὅπερα».

Ἐνθουσιαστικὲς οἱ ἐντυπώσεις τοῦ Μητροπούλου ἀπὸ τὶς καλλιτεχνικὲς του ἐμφανίσεις στὸ Ἰσραήλ. «Σωστὸ θαῦμα» εἶπε ὅ,τι ἔχει ἐπιτευχθεῖ ὄχι μόνο στὸ μουσικὸ τομέα, ἀλλὰ σ' ὅλες τὶς ἐκδηλώσεις στὸ νέο αὐτὸ κράτος.

Γνώστης ὁ μαέστρος τῶν προβλημάτων ποὺ ἀντιμετωπίζει ἡ ἑλληνικὴ μουσικὴ γενικώτερα, ὅπως καὶ οἱ Ἕλληνες μουσικοί, εἶπε ὅτι δίχως τὴ μέριμνα καὶ τὴν οἰκονομικὴ βοήθεια τοῦ κράτους, εἶναι μοιραῖο νὰ προσκόπτει καὶ νὰ ναυαγεῖ κάθε εὐγενικὴ προσπάθεια. Καὶ κατέληξε: «Ὅταν πρόκειται γιὰ μουσικὴ μόνο ὑποσχέσεις δίνονται!»

Κάπου μιὰ ὥρα κράτησε ἡ τόσο ἐνδιαφέρουσα συνέντευξη μὲ τὸ Μητρόπουλο. Στὴν εὐγενικὴ φυσιογνωμία τοῦ μαέστρου ἦταν ἀποτυπωμένη ἡ κούραση. Καὶ νὰ σκεφθεῖ κανεὶς ὅτι τὸ βράδυ θὰ βρισκόταν στὸ ἀναλόγιο τοῦ ἀρχιμουσικοῦ, ἐπὶ κεφαλῆς ἑνὸς φημισμένου συμφωνικοῦ συγκροτήματος, τῆς βιεννέζικης φιλαρμονικῆς.

ΟΙ ΑΘΗΝΑΙΟΙ ΑΠΕΘΕΩΣΑΝ ΧΘΕΣ ΤΟΝ ΜΗΤΡΟΠΟΥΛΟΝ

Ἡ ἀνυπομονησία τοῦ κοινοῦ. - Ὁλόκληρος ὁ χῶρος τοῦ ἀρχαίου θεάτρου κατεκλύσθη ἀπὸ κόσμον. Ποῖοι παρέστησαν

ΤΟΥ ΣΥΝΕΡΓΑΤΟΥ ΜΑΣ κ. ΓΕΩΡΓΙΟΥ ΒΩΚΟΥ

Ἀπὸ τὸ περασμένο Σάββατο ποὺ ὁ παγκοσμίου φήμης Ἕλλην μαέστρος Δημήτρης Μητρόπουλος ἔφθασε στὴν Ἑλλάδα, ὅλη ἡ μουσικὴ Ἀθήνα εἶχε καταληφθῆ ἀπὸ εὐλογη καλλιτεχνικὴ συγκίνησι, περιμένοντας μ' ἀνυπομονησία νὰ τὸν δῆ στὸ ἀναλόγιο τοῦ μαέστρου, νὰ διευθύνη μὲ τὸν ἀπαράμιλλο ἐκεῖνο τρόπο, μὲ τὸν ὁποῖον καὶ τοῦ ἀνοίχθηκαν διάπλατα οἱ πόρτες τῶν μεγαλυτέρων διεθνῶν μουσικῶν κέντρων.

Γιατί σήμερα, κάθε ἐμφάνισις τοῦ Μητροπούλου στὴν διεύθυνσι συμφωνικῆς ὀρχήστρας ἢ ὅπερας θεωρεῖται — καὶ δικαίως — μέγιστο μουσικὸν γεγονός.

Τὸ Ὠδεῖον Ἡρώδου γνώρισε χθὲς ἀσφυκτικὴ κοσμοσυρροή. Ἀπὸ τὶς 6 καὶ 30 τ' ἀπόγευμα, μισὴ ὥρα πρὶν ἀνοίξουν οἱ πόρτες, ἄρχισε νὰ μαζεύεται ὁ κόσμος.

Ἐκτὸς ἀπ' τοὺς ἔχοντας εἰσιτήρια, τὰ ἔξω τοῦ Ὠδείου «πεζουλάκια» εἶχαν καταληφθῆ ἀπὸ ἐνθέρμους φιλομούσους ἀκροατάς, ἀναμένοντας καρτερικὰ γιὰ νὰ γευθοῦν ἔστω καὶ κάτι ἐλάχιστο ἀπ' τὴν μουσικὴ ἀμβροσία ποὺ θὰ προσφερε ὁ Μητρόπουλος.

Αὐτὸ δείχνει πόσο λατρεμένο παιδὶ εἶναι ὁ Μητρόπουλος ἀπὸ ὅλους.

Ἀπὸ τὶς 7.30 τὸ κοινὸ ἄρχισε νὰ καταφθάνη πυκνότερο μέχρι ποὺ στὶς 8.20 τὸ ἀρχαῖο Ὠδεῖο —ὁ ἱερὸς αὐτὸς τόπος καλλιτεχνικοῦ προσκυνήματος — ἦταν κατάμεστος.

Στὶς θέσεις τῶν ἐπισήμων διακρίνουμε τὸν Μέγαν Αὐλάρχην καὶ τὴν Καν Δ. Λεβίδη, τὴν σύζυγον τοῦ Προέδρου τῆς Κυβερνήσεως Καν Ἀμαλίαν Καραμανλῆ, τοὺς ὑπουργοὺς Ἐξωτερικῶν κ. Ἀβέρωφ, Προεδρίας Κυβερνήσεως κ. Τσάτσον, Παιδείας κ. Βογιατζῆν, Ἐμπορίου κ. Δερτιλῆν, Ἐμπορικῆς Ναυτιλίας κ. Ἀνδριανόπουλον, τὸν ὑφυπουργὸν τῶν Ἐσωτερικῶν κ. Καλαντζῆν, τὸν ὑπουργὸ τῆς Δικαιοσύνης κ. Καλλίαν, τὸν πρεσβευτὴ τῶν Ἡνωμένων Πολιτειῶν κ. Ρίντλμπέργκερ, τὸν μορφωτικὸ ἀκόλουθο τῆς ἀμερικανικῆς πρεσβείας κ. Ἔμριχ, πολλοὺς ξένους διπλωμάτας κ.ἄ.

Ἔχουν τόσα πολλὰ εἰπωθῆ καὶ γραφῆ γιὰ τὸν Μητρόπουλο, καὶ τόσο ἔντονες παραμένουν οἱ ἐντυπώσεις μας ὅταν πρὶν τρία χρόνια εἶχε ἔλθει μὲ τὴν Φιλαρμονικὴ τῆς Νέας Ὑόρκης, ὥστε κάθε λεπτὸ ποὺ περνάει νὰ προσθέτη καὶ κάτι στὴν δίκαιη ἀνυπομονησία μας.

Ὅλοι περιμένουμε νὰ τὸν δοῦμε καὶ νὰ τὸν χειροκροτήσουμε ὅπως τοῦ ἀξίζει.

Γιατὶ τέτοια μπαγκέττα, τὸ ὁμολογοῦν, ἄλλως τε, οἱ παγκόσμιοι μουσικοὶ κύκλοι, δὲν ὑπάρχει σήμερα στὸν κόσμο.

Αὐτὸς ὁ ἄνθρωπος ἀσκεῖ μιὰ τέτοια ἀκαταμάχητη γοητεία στοὺς μουσικοὺς τῆς ὀρχήστρας ποὺ διευθύνει, ὥστε καὶ τὴν πιὸ ἀσήμαντη σύνθεσι νὰ τὴν μεταβάλλη σὲ ἀριστούργημα.

Ὁ Μητρόπουλος εἶναι μιὰ φωτεινὴ φυσιογνωμία, ποὺ ἡ λάμψις του καταυγάζει σήμερα ὁλόκληρη τὴν ὑδρόγειο.

Ἐπὶ τέλους ἡ ποθητὴ στιγμὴ πλησιάζει. Τὸ σύνθημα ὅτι σὲ λίγο θ' ἀρχίση ἡ μουσικὴ ἱεροτελεστία τὸ δίνουν οἱ μουσικοὶ τῆς ὀρχήστρας, οἱ ὁποῖοι βγαίνουν ἀπ' τὰ δεξιὰ καὶ μὲ τάξι προχωρώντας παίρνουν τὶς θέσεις των. Φοροῦν ἄσπρα πουκάμισα, μαῦρες γραβάτες καὶ μαῦρα παντελόνια.

Ὅλων τὰ μάτια στρέφονται πρὸς τὴν πλευρά, ἀπ' τὴν ὁποία πρόκειται νὰ φανῆ ὁ μάγος τῆς μπαγκέττας.

Ἐν τῷ μεταξὺ καταφθάνουν μερικοὶ καθυστερημένοι τρέχοντας γρήγορα νὰ βροῦν τὶς θέσεις τους.

Ρίχνω μιὰ ματιὰ γύρω μου. Τίποτε δὲν ἔχει μείνει ἄδειο: Στὰ ρομαντικὰ βραχάκια, οἱ πιστοὶ τῆς θείας τῶν ἤχων τέχνης, σὰν σὲ προσευχὴ περιμένουν τὸ ἄρχισμα τῆς μουσικῆς μυσταγωγίας.

Καὶ σὲ μιὰ στιγμὴ ὁ μαέστρος προβάλλει. Κι' ἡ ἀδημονία ξεσπάει σὲ ἕνα ἀκράτητο ἐνθουσιασμό.

Συγκινημένος εἶναι ὁ Μητρόπουλος. Ὑποκλίνεται καὶ χαιρετᾶ πρῶτα τὰ δύο κοντσερτίνα βιολιά, ὕστερα τοὺς μουσικοὺς τῆς ὀρχήστρας καὶ ἐν συνεχείᾳ τὸ κοινόν. Ὅμως τὰ χειροκροτήματα ἐξακολουθοῦν καὶ ὁ Μητρόπουλος ξαναχαιρετᾶ, γυρνώντας πάλι ρπὸς τοὺς μουσικοὺς τῆς ὀρχήστρας του.

Μιὰ ματιὰ σ' ὅλους: Προοίμιον: «προσέχετε ἀττακάρουμε».

Κι' οἱ μουσικοὶ τὸ ἀντιλαμβάνονται: τὰ βιολιὰ φέρονται ἐπὶ τῶν ὤμων, τὰ δοξάρια ἕτοιμα νὰ δονήσουν τὶς χορδές...

Νεκρικὴ σιγὴ ἀπ' ὅλη τὴν ἀνθρωποθάλασσα. Ἡ μπαγκέττα σηκώνεται: Κι' ἡ μουσικὴ μαγεία ἀρχίζει. Ἀλήθεια! Ποιὰ δύναμις πλαισιώθηκε μὲ κάθε στοιχεῖο ὡραιότητος, αὐτὸ ποὺ πιστοποιεῖ τὴν κατάκτησι τοῦ καλλιτεχνήματος στὴν ὁλοκληρωμένη του μορφή.

Ἀπαράμιλλος ἀρχιτέκτων ὁ Μητρόπουλος, μεταβάλλει σὲ ἀραβούργημα τὴν ὀρχήστρα του. Ἐκεῖνα τὰ χέρια του, ἀληθινὰ μαγητίζουν, καθὼς προβάλλονται πότε πρὸς τὰ ἐμπρός, πότε πλάγια, ἢ ὅταν διαγράφουν τοὺς ἰλιγγιώδεις κύκλους, ὅταν προτείνωνται καὶ νευρώδη ἢ μειλίχια, ἄλλοτε νὰ ὁδηγήσουν τὴν ὀρχήστρα σ' ἕνα τρομακτικὸ ἠχητικὸ καταιγισμὸ ἢ σὲ μιὰ ἁπαλὴ ἔκφρασι, γεμάτη λυρισμὸ καὶ τρυφερότητα.

Ἡ ὀρχήστρα συντρίβεται πρὸ τῆς τρομακτικῆς μουσικῆς του ρώμης καὶ ἐπιβολῆς. Ὁποιαδήποτε ὀρχήστρα κι' ἂν εἶναι αὐτή.

Καὶ ἀπαιτεῖται νὰ καταβληθῆ μεγάλη ἀντίδρασις ἐκ μέρους τῶν μουσικῶν, γιὰ νὰ ἀνθέξουν... Κι' ὅταν τὸ κατορθώσουν, τότε ἐπιτυγχάνεται τὸ θαυμαστὸ ἑρμηνευτικὸ ἀποτέλεσμα.

'Η ὑπερμοντέρνα «ἠλεκτρονικὴ μουσική»

ΟΑΦΙΧΘΕΙΣ τὸ Σάββατον διάσημος Ἕλλην ἀρχιμουσικὸς Δημήτρης Μητρόπουλος ἔδωσε χθὲς τὸ μεσημέρι εἰς τὸ ξενοδοχεῖον τῆς «Μεγάλης Βρεταννίας» ἐνδιαφέρουσα πρὲς κόνφερανς πρὸς τοὺς ἀντιπροσώπους τοῦ ἀθηναϊκοῦ Τύπου, ἀπὸ τὴν ὁποίαν παραθέτομεν τὸ κατωτέρω σημείωμα τῆς εἰδικῆς συνεργάτιδός μας:

'Ο Μητρόπουλος, ὁ «μεγάλος» αὐτὸς τῆς διεθνοῦς μουσικῆς ζωῆς, εἶναι καὶ πάλι μαζί μας. Χθὲς τὸν εἴδαμε στὴν «Μεγάλη Βρετανία», λίγες ὧρες πρὶν τὸν θαυμάσουμε στὸ 'Ωδεῖο 'Ηρώδου. Ψηλός, λεπτός, μὲ σκοῦρο πρόσωπο, ἀεικίνητος, γεμάτος ἐσωτερικὴ ζωντάνια καὶ ἀνησυχία. Κατὰ τὴν χθεσινὴν πρὲς-κόνφερανς ὡμίλησε κατ' ἀρχὰς διὰ τὸν Ραδιοσταθμὸ καὶ δὲν ἐδίστασε νὰ καυτηριάσῃ τὴν πολιτικὴν τῆς ἀδρανείας, ποὺ ἀκολουθεῖ τὸ Ἵδρυμα μπροστὰ στὴν ἀνάγκη γιὰ τὴν πρόοδο τῆς σοβαρᾶς μουσικῆς στὴ χώρα μας.

'Ακολούθως ἐξήγησε γιατί εἶναι δύσκολη ἡ διάδοσι τῶν 'Ελλήνων συνθετῶν ὅπως καὶ τόσων ἄλλων σχετικὰ «ἀγνώστων» στὶς μεγάλες χῶρες τοῦ ἐξωτερικοῦ.

— Τὸ κοινό, εἶπε, θέλει νὰ ἀκούσῃ αὐτὰ ποὺ ξέρει καὶ ἔπειτα ἕνα καινούριο ἔργο θέλει πρόβες καὶ φυσικὰ ἔξοδα, ποὺ συνήθως δὲν βρίσκονται.

Η ὑπερμοντέρνα μουσική

ΣΤΟ σημεῖο αὐτὸ τὸ ἐνδιαφέρον τῆς πρὲς κόνφερανς συνεκεντρώθη στὸ πῶς βλέπει ὁ διάσημος ἀρχιμουσικὸς τὴν ὑπερμοντέρνα μουσικὴ καὶ τὴν ἀπήχησί της ἀνὰ τὸν κόσμο. Εἶπε πῶς οἱ νέοι κυνηγώντας τώρα διαρκῶς νέους συνδυασμοὺς ἀπὸ νότες καὶ ἤχους, ἀπέβαλαν ἀπὸ τὴ μουσικὴ τὸν Ἔρωτα, τὸ θέμα, τὴ μελῳδία· καὶ κατήντησαν τὸ μαέστρο νὰ μὴ ἔχῃ ἄλλο λόγο ὑπάρξεως παρὰ νὰ «κάνῃ τὸν ἀστυνόμο», δηλαδὴ νὰ προσέχῃ πότε θὰ μπῇ τὸ ἕνα ἢ τὸ ἄλλο ὄργανο. Ἂς ἦταν τουλάχιστο τὰ ἀπαιτέλεσμα πάντα εὐχάριστο!

"Ἐχουμε λίγει ξεχάσει τὸν κόσμο καὶ γι' αὐτὸ ὁ κόσμος μᾶς ξέχασε καὶ ὅσο πάμε λιγώτεροι μαθαίνουν μουσικοί. Καὶ ἂν συντηροῦνται οἱ συναυλίες εἶναι μὲ τὰ γνωστὰ καθιερωμένα ἔργα. Οἱ ἀναζητήσεις, οἱ ἀπόπειρες εἶναι, βέβαια, χρήσιμες. Νὰ μὴν ἐνοχλοῦν ὅμως τὸν κόσμο. Ἂς κάνουν χωριστὲς σειρὲς συναυλιῶν (ὅπως ἐκάναμε στὴν 'Αμερική) ὅπου παίζαμε ὅλο τέτοια ἔργα. Εἶναι πολλοὶ ποὺ ἐνδιαφέρονται νὰ τ' ἀκοῦν. 'Αλλὰ αὐτοὶ εἶναι οἱ λίγοι. 'Ο κόσμος θέλει — καὶ δὲν ἔχει ἄδικο— νὰ δρῇ στὴ μουσικὴ μιὰ ἀπόλαυσι ποὺ νὰ τὸν τραβήξῃ δύο ὧρες ἀπὸ τὴ ρουτίνα καὶ δὲν ἔχει δρεξη — ἢ δὲν μπρεῖ — ν' ἀκολουθῇ τὸ ρυθμὸ τῶν ἀναζητήσεων τῶν συνθετῶν. Π.χ. ὁ θαυμάσιος, ὁ ἐξαιρετικὸς "Αλμπαν Μπέργκ ξεπεράστηκε, ἀλλὰ ὁ κόσμος δὲν τὸν ἔφτασε ἀκόμα. «'Εγὼ προσωπικά, εἶπε, ἠνάλωσα τὰ νειάτα μου καὶ τὸ μεγαλύτερο μέρος τῆς ζωῆς μου στὴν παρουσίασι καὶ στὴν ἐπιβολὴ τῆς μοντέρνας μουσικῆς. 'Η πεῖρα μοῦ ἀπέδειξε πὼς πρέπει νὰ μὴν ἀναγκάζωμε τὸ κοινὸν ν' ἀκούσῃ ὅτι δὲν τοῦ ἀρέσει γιὰ νὰ μὴ τὸ ἀναγκάσουμε νὰ μᾶς ἀφίσῃ».

Μόνον ἡ Ρωσία ἐνδιαφέρθηκε γιὰ τὸ κοινόν της καὶ ἐπέβαλε στοὺς συνθέτες της νὰ γράφουν γιὰ αὐτοὺς ποὺ τ' ἀκοῦνε καὶ ὄχι μόνον γιὰ τὸν ἑαυτόν τους. Τὸ ἀποτέλεσμα ἦταν ἄριστο: ὁ κόσμος ἀγαπᾶ τὴ μουσική, τρέχει στὰ ὠδεῖα καὶ στὰ κοντσέρτα, συνεπῶς ἔχει μουσικὴ ἀγωγή, καὶ πολλὰ μοντέρνα ἔργα ποὺ τοὺς ἔπαιξα (διαλεγμένα φυσικά) τὰ κατάλαβαν καὶ ἐνθουσιάστηκαν. Βέβαια ἡ ἐπέμβασις στὴν ἐλευθερία τῆς δημιουργίας εἶναι κακό. 'Η ἀσυδοσία ὅμως ποὺ ἔχουμε εἶναι ἐπίσης κακό, ἔχει ἀρνητικὰ ἀποτελέσματα καὶ ἡ μουσικὴ ἔχει καταντήσει μηχανική. "Ολα λοιπὸν χρειάζονται μέτρο.

ΤΟ ΦΕΣΤΙΒΑΛ

'Ακολούθως ὁ μεγάλος μαέστρος μᾶς ἀμίλησε γιὰ τὴν ἐντύπωσι ποὺ ἔχει δημιουργήσει ἔξω τὸ Φεστιβὰλ 'Αθηνῶν.

— Συζητοῦνται πολὺ οἱ τραγωδίες, λέγει, ποὺ ἀποτελοῦν καὶ τὴν μόνη προσφορά του γιατὶ διὰ τὰ ἄλλα κατὰ κανόνα θεωροῦνται ὡς παθητικά.

Α. ΣΥΜΕΡΙΝΗ

ΑΠΑΝΤ.: Δὲν νομίζω ὅτι κατ' αὐτὸν τὸν τρόπον θὰ συνέβαλα εἰς τὴν ἐξύψωσιν τῆς μουσικῆς εἰς τὸν τόπον μας. Μὲ τὴν φήμην τὴν ὁποίαν ἔχω ἀποκτήσει θὰ ἐπεσκίαζα χωρὶς καὶ ὁ ἴδιος νὰ τὸ θέλω ὅλους τοὺς ἄλλους μαέστρους — ἐφ' ὅσον ὅλη ἡ προσπάθεια θὰ εἶχε συγκεντρωθῇ διὰ τὴν δημιουργίαν τῆς δικῆς μου ὀρχήστρας — καὶ δὲν θὰ εἶχον πλέον τὰ μέσα νὰ ἐργασθοῦν καὶ νὰ ἐξελιχθοῦν πρᾶγμα ποὺ δὲν θὰ ἐδεχόμουν ποτέ. Μὴ μοῦ ζητεῖτε λοιπὸν νὰ ἔλθω ἐγὼ ἐδῶ, ἀλλὰ ὑποσχεθῆτε μου ὅτι θὰ βοηθήσετε τοὺς μαέστρους μας νὰ ἀξιοποιήσουν τὶς δυνατότες τους καὶ νὰ προοδεύσουν. "Υστερα θὰ σᾶς ἐξομολογηθῶ καὶ κάτι. 'Εὰν μὲ διορίσετε μόνιμο διευθυντὴ μιᾶς ὀρχήστρας μὲ τὴν ὑποχρέωσι νὰ μένω δώδεκα μῆνες τὸ χρόνο εἰς ἕνα τόπο δὲν θὰ μπορέσω νὰ ἀποδώσω. Καὶ αὐτό, διότι εἶμαι ἐχθρὸς τῶν μονίμων καταστάσεων. 'Η ρουτίνα μὲ κουράζει περισσότερο καὶ ἀπὸ τὴν ἐξαντλητικὴ δουλειά. Νομίζω δὲ πὼς καὶ γενικώτερα ἡ μονοτονία καὶ ἡ ἀνία ἡ ὁποία τὴν ἀκολουθεῖ εἶναι οἱ μεγαλύτεροι ἐχθροὶ τῆς ἀνθρωπότητος.

Εἰς τὸ σημεῖον αὐτό, ἐτελείωσεν ἡ συνέντευξις τοῦ μαέστρου μὲ τὴν ἀποστολικὴ ἐμφάνισι καὶ τὴν εὐγενικὴ καὶ εὐχάριστη ἔκφρασι, διὰ τὸν ὁποῖον οἱ «Τάϊμς τῆς Ν. 'Υόρκης» ἔγραψαν κάποτε: «Σὲ μία ἐποχή, ὅπου ὁ θόρυβος ποὺ γίνεται γύρω ἀπὸ τὰ ὀνόματα τῶν μεγάλων μαέστρων εἶναι μεγαλύτερος ἀπὸ τὸν θόρυβο ποὺ γινόταν γιὰ τοὺς μεγάλους καλλιτέχνες τοῦ τραγουδιοῦ στὸν 19ο αἰῶνα, ὁ Δημήτρης Μητρόπουλος φαίνεται σὰν νὰ μὴν ἔχῃ τὴν θέσι του. 'Ο ἄνθρωπος ποὺ ἀνέλαβε τὴ θέσι τοῦ μονίμου διευθυντοῦ τῆς Φιλαρμονικῆς Συμφωνικῆς 'Ορχήστρας τῆς Ν. 'Υόρκης δὲν ἀρέσκεται σὲ ἐκρηκτικὲς ἐξάρσεις καὶ δὲν ἀγαπᾶ τὶς κομφὲς καὶ ὑπεροπτικὲς πόζες. Εἴτε εἰς τὸ βάθρο τοῦ μαέστρου εἴτε μακρυὰ ἀπὸ αὐτό, εἶναι γλυκομίλητος, μετρημένος καὶ ἐντελῶς ἀνεπηρέαστος ἀπὸ τὴν ρεκλάμα».

Τὸ πρᾶγμα δὲν φαίνεται ἀνεξήγητο σὲ ὅσους γνωρίζουν πόσο βαθὺ σεβασμὸ πρὸς τὸν ἄνθρωπο καὶ τὶς ἠθικὲς ἀξίες, τρέφει ὁ Μητρόπουλος.

— Εἶχα πάντοτε κάποιαν ἀμφιβολία — ὑπεγράμμισε εἰς μίαν συνέντευξίν του πρὸς τοὺς δημοσιογράφους — ἂν τὸ καλλιτεχνικό μου ἔργο ἔχῃ πραγματικὰ κάποιαν ἀξία σὰν μιὰ ὑπηρεσία πρὸς τὸν κόσμο. 'Εμεῖς οἱ διανοούμενοι καὶ καλλιτέχνες κινδυνεύουμε νὰ χάσουμε τὴν ἐπαφὴ μὲ τὸν καλούμενο μέσον ἄνθρωπο.

"Ισως τὴν ἀγάπην του αὐτὴν πρὸς τὸν ἄνθρωπο, νὰ τοῦ τὴν ἐνέπνευσε τὸ θρησκευτικὸν συναίσθημα τὸ ὁποῖον πολὺ ἐνωρὶς ἀνεπτύχθη μέσα του. Μικρὸ παιδὶ ἀκόμη ἀπεφάσισε νὰ γίνῃ μοναχὸς καὶ ἂν τελικὰ δὲν ἐφόρεσε τὸ ἱερατικὸν σχῆμα, εἶναι διότι τὸν ἐπληροφόρησαν ὅτι εἰς τὸ μοναστήρι δὲν θὰ τοῦ ἐπέτρεπαν νὰ ἔχῃ ἕνα μικρὸ ἁρμόνιο. 'Η κλίσις του πρὸς τὴν μεταφυσικὴ τὸν ἔκανε νὰ μελετήσῃ τὸ ἔργο τοῦ Σόρεν Κίρκεργκαρντ καὶ νὰ ἐνδιαφερθῇ σοβαρὰ γιὰ τὰ πολύπλοκα μουσικὰ συστήματα τῶν Μπουζόνι καὶ Σαῖμπεργκ.

Παρ' ὅλον τὸν σεβασμὸ του ὅμως πρὸς τὸν μέσον ἄνθρωπο καὶ τὸ εὐρὺ κοινόν, ὁ Μητρόπουλος — ὅπως ἄλλως τε ἐτόνισε καὶ εἰς τὴν χθεσινήν του συνέντευξιν — ἐπιμένει νὰ παίζῃ σύγχρονη μουσική, ποὺ εἶναι ὄχι μόνον δυσκολονόητη ἀλλὰ καὶ ἀποκρουστικὴ κάποτε εἰς τὸν πολὺ κόσμο. Καὶ αὐτὸ διότι — ὅπως ἔγραψε ὁ Χάουαρντ Τώμπμαν: «'Ο Δημήτρης Μητρόπουλος θυμᾶται πάντοτε ὅτι ὅταν παίζῃ μουσικὴ εἶναι πρὶν ἀπὸ κάθε ἄλλο, ὑπηρέτης τῆς τέχνης».

Σ. ΜΑΛΤΕΖΟΥ

Ο ΜΕΓΑΛΟΣ ΑΡΧΙΜΟΥΣΙΚΟΣ ΜΑΣ

«Δὲν θὰ ἤθελα ποτὲ νὰ ἐπισκιάσω τοὺς νέους μου συναδέλφους», τόνισε χθὲς στοὺς δημοσιογράφους ὁ Μητρόπουλος ὅταν τὸν ρώτησαν γιατὶ δὲν μένει νὰ διευθύνῃ ὀρχήστρα στὴν Ἑλλάδα.

ΜΕ ΤΗΝ ΠΡΩΤΗ ΤΟΥ ΣΥΝΑΥΛΙΑ ΣΤΟ ΩΔΕΙΟΝ ΗΡΩΔΟΥ

ΜΙΑ ΑΛΗΘΙΝΑ ΕΞΑΥΛΩΜΕΝΗ ΝΥΧΤΑ ΧΑΡΙΣΕ ΧΘΕΣ ΒΡΑΔΥ ΣΤΗΝ ΑΘΗΝΑ Ο ΜΗΤΡΟΠΟΥΛΟΣ

«ΝΑ ΜΑΣ ΖΗΣΗΣ ΜΑΕΣΤΡΟ», ΦΩΝΑΖΟΥΝ ΟΙ ΧΙΛΙΑΔΕΣ ΤΩΝ ΑΚΡΟΑΤΩΝ. — ΚΑΙ ΠΛΗΘΗ ΠΕΡΙΜΕΝΟΥΝ ΑΠ' ΕΞΩ ΝΑ ΤΟΝ ΙΔΟΥΝ ΚΑΙ ΝΑ ΤΟΝ ΕΠΕΥΦΗΜΗΣΟΥΝ

Η ΑΠΟΨΙΝΗ ΣΥΝΑΥΛΙΑ ΕΙΝΑΙ ΑΦΙΕΡΩΜΕΝΗ ΣΤΟΝ ΣΤΡΑΟΥΣ

Μιὰ ξεχωριστὴ βραδυά, μιὰ ἀπ' τὶς σπάνιες, τὶς «μεγάλες» βραδυὲς τῆς 'Αθήνας, ἡ χθεσινὴ πρώτη συναυλία τῆς Φιλαρμονικῆς 'Ορχήστρας τῆς Βιέννης μὲ τὸν "Ελληνα μαέστρο Δημήτρη Μητρόπουλο ἐπὶ κεφαλῆς. Τὸ ὠδεῖον 'Ηρώδου κατάμεστο ὡς τὴν τελευταία του θέσι, ὡς τὸ ἀκρότατο σημεῖο του ἀπὸ κόσμο ὅπου ἀντιπροσωπεύονταν ὅλες οἱ τάξεις, ἀπὸ τοὺς πιὸ «ἐπίσημους» ὡς τὸν πιὸ λαϊκὸ ἀνθρωπάκο, ποὺ ὅλοι τους εἶχαν τρέξει γιὰ νὰ ἐκφράσουν τὸν θαυμασμό τους καὶ τὴν εὐγνωμοσύνη τους στὸν "Ελληνα μουσικὸ ποὺ τόσο δόξασε καὶ δοξάζει τὴ μικρὴ μας πατρίδα σ' ὅλο τὸν κόσμο, γιὰ νὰ χαροῦν συνάμα μιὰ ἀληθινὴ καλλιτεχνικὴ ἀπόλαυσι.

"Ηταν ἐκεῖ ἀντιπρόσωποι τῶν Βασιλέων μας —ὁ μέγας αὐλάρχης καὶ ἡ κυρία Λεβίδη— ὅλοι σχεδὸν οἱ ὑπουργοὶ μὲ τὶς κυρίες τους, ἄλλοι πολιτικοί, πολλοὶ ξένοι διπλωμάτες, ἄπειροι ξένοι ἐπισκέπτες, ὅλος ὁ καλλιτεχνικὸς μας κόσμος, οἱ μαέστροι καὶ οἱ μουσικοί μας, ἀντιπρόσωποι τοῦ πνεύματος καὶ τῆς τέχνης, ἀλλὰ καὶ πλῆθος ἀπὸ ἁπλοὺς ἀνθρώπους ποὺ ἀγαποῦν τὴ μουσικὴ καὶ ποὺ πολλοὶ τους ἔχουν γνωρίσει τὸν Μητρόπουλο νέο, παιδὶ ἀκόμα, στὰ πρῶτα του βήματα, ὅταν ἀποφοιτοῦσε ἀπὸ τὸ 'Ωδεῖον 'Αθηνῶν καὶ ἀποτελοῦσε μέλος τῆς τότε ὀρχήστρας του...

Μέσα στὰ ἀποθεωτικὰ χειροκροτήματα ποὺ χαιρέτησαν τὴν ἐμφάνισι τοῦ Δημήτρη Μητροπούλου καὶ ποὺ γιὰ πολλὰ λεπτὰ τῆς ὥρας δὲν τὸν ἄφηναν ν' ἀρχίσῃ, ἀκριβῶς ἀπ' αὐτὸ τὸ ἀνώνυμο πλῆθος, ἀπὸ τὰ ὕψη τοῦ ἀρχαίου θεάτρου, ἀντήχησε μιὰ κραυγή: «Νὰ μᾶς ζήσῃς μαέστρο!», κραυγὴ ποὺ ἐξέφραζε τὴν εὐχὴ ὅλων.

Θαυμάσια ἡ ὀρχήστρα, κάτω ἀπὸ ἕναν τέτοιον ἀρχιμουσικὸ μάλιστα, ἔδωσε θαυμάσιες ἐκτελέσεις: Τὴν εἰσαγωγὴ τῆς Λεονώρας ὑπ' ἀριθ. 2 καὶ τὴ Δεύτερη Συμφωνία τοῦ Μπετόβεν στὸ πρῶτο μέρος, τὸ Συμφωνικὸ Ποίημα τοῦ "Αρνολντ Σένμπεργκ «'Εξαϋλωμένη Νύχτα» καὶ τὴν «Φαντασία καὶ Φούγκα» σὲ σόλ ἐλ. τοῦ Μπάχ κατὰ μεταγραφὴ γιὰ μεγάλη ὀρχήστρα ἀπὸ τὸν ἴδιο τὸν Μητρόπουλο. Κάθε ἐκτέλεσις προκαλοῦσε θύελλα ἐνθουσιασμοῦ καὶ στὸ τέλος, κανένας δὲν ἤθελε νὰ φύγῃ. "Ολοι ἔμεναν ἐκεῖ ἀνακαλώντας συνεχῶς ἐκεῖνον ποὺ τοὺς εἶχε χαρίσει αὐτὲς τὶς μαγικὲς ὧρες. Μιὰ νύχτα ἀληθινὰ «ἐξαϋλωμένη»....

"Εξω ἀπὸ τὸ ἀρχαῖο θέατρο, ἄλλο πλῆθος ποὺ δὲν εἶχε πετύχει εἰσιτήριο, κοσμάκης, ἄνθρωποι τοῦ λαοῦ, περίμεναν γιὰ νὰ ἰδοῦν τουλάχιστον τὸν μεγάλον "Ελληνα καλλιτέχνη. "Αλλα χειροκροτήματα, ἐπευφημίες, νέα ἔκρηξις ἐνθουσιασμοῦ.

'Απόψε, στὴ δεύτερη συναυλία τὸ πρόγραμμα εἶναι ἀφιερωμένο στὸν Ρίχαρντ Στράους: «Δὸν Ζουὰν» καὶ «Θάνατος καὶ Ἐξαΰλωσις» —Συμφωνικὰ Ποιήματα— καὶ ἡ «Συμφωνία Ντομέστικα».

Ο ΔΗΜΗΤΡΗΣ ΜΗΤΡΟΠΟΥΛΟΣ ΟΜΙΛΕΙ ΜΕ ΤΟΥΣ ΕΛΛΗΝΕΣ ΚΑΙ ΞΕΝΟΥΣ ΔΗΜΟΣΙΟΓΡΑΦΟΥΣ

ΤΗΣ κ. ΑΛΕΞΑΝΔΡΑΣ ΛΑΛΑΟΥΝΗ

Πολυσύνθετη είναι ἡ φυσιογνωμία τοῦ Δημήτρη Μητροπούλου; Δὲν εἶναι μόνο ὁ «μουσικὸς» κι' οὔτε μόνο ὁ «δεξιοτέχνης» τῆς ὀρχήστρας, ἀλλὰ παράλληλα εἶναι κι' ὁ πνευματικὸς ἄνθρωπος, ὁ «διανοητὴς» ποὺ ξέρει — καὶ μπορεῖ — νὰ ἐμβαθύνῃ σ' ὅλα τὰ προβλήματα τῆς τέχνης του, νὰ ἀντιμετωπίζῃ τὴ Μουσικὴ σ' ὅλες της τὶς ἐκφάνσεις, ὄχι μονάχα σὰν Τέχνη γιὰ τὴν Τέχνη, ἀλλὰ καὶ σὰν μιὰ τέχνη «κοινωνική», στὶς σχέσεις της μὲ τοὺς μουσικούς, μὲ τὴν κοινωνία, μὲ τὸν ἄνθρωπο. Κι' ἂν σ' αὐτὰ προσθέσῃς καὶ τὸν ἀπαράμιλλο «ὁμιλητὴ Μητρόπουλο» ποὺ ξέρει νὰ ἐκθέτῃ τὶς σκέψεις καὶ τὶς ἰδέες του μὲ ἁπλότητα καὶ σαφήνεια, ὅσο καὶ ἑτοιμότητα— ὅταν πρόκειται ν' ἀπαντήσῃ σ' ἐρωτήσεις — τότε ἔχεις μιὰ πλήρη εἰκόνα τῆς μεγαλοφυΐας του καὶ νοιώθεις γιατί, ξεκινώντας σὰν ἄγνωστος νέος ἀπ' τὴ μικρή μας Ἑλλάδα, κατώρθωσε νὰ κατακτήσῃ τὸν κόσμο καὶ νὰ καιρφώσῃ στὸ διεθνὲς μουσικὸ στερέωμα τ' ὄνομά του — τὸ ἑλληνικό του ὄνομα — σὰν ἕνα ἀστέρι πρώτου μεγέθους.

Δέχθηκε τοὺς Ἕλληνες καὶ ξένους δημοσιογράφους χθὲς στὸ σαλόνι τῆς Μεγάλης Βρεταννίας, καθὼς καὶ μερικοὺς ἀπ'τοὺς θαυμαστές του καί μ' ὅλο ποὺ φαινόταν ἀρκετὰ κουρασμένος, δὲν ἄφησε καμμιὰ ἐρώτησι ἀναπάντητη, ἁπλώνοντας μάλιστα συχνὰ τὴν ἀπάντησί του σὲ μιὰ ἀληθινὴ διαφωτιστικὴ διάλεξι. Στὴν ἀρχὴ τοῦ ζήτησαν νὰ πῇ κάτι γιὰ τὸ Ραδιοφωνικό μας Σταθμό: «Νομίζω, εἶπε, πὼς τὸ E.I.P. ἐκτελεῖ τὸ καθήκον του ὡς πρὸς τὶς εἰδήσεις καὶ τὶς ἄλλες του ὑποχρεώσεις κατατοπίσεως τῶν ἀκροατῶν, ἀλλὰ θὰ πρέπει νὰ ἐντείνῃ τὶς προσπάθειές του καὶ στὴ Μουσική, καλλιεργῶντας την καὶ ἐνισχύοντάς την ὅσο τὸ δυνατὸ περισσότερο γιατί, ἐνῶ ἡ Ἑλλὰς εἶναι τόσο προωδευμένη ἀπὸ ἀπόψεως κοινοῦ, ἐνῶ ἔχει τόσους καλοὺς μαέστρους, παρουσιάζει τόσες ἄλλες ἐλλείψεις...».

Κάποιος ρωτάει γιὰ τὰ ἔργα τῶν Ἑλλήνων συνθετῶν, ἂν μποροῦν νὰ σταθοῦν στὸ ἐξωτερικό, ἂν παίζωνται. Καὶ ὁ Μητρόπουλος ἀπαντάει:

—Κανένας συνθέτης ἀπὸ καμμιὰ χώρα δὲν βγαίνει εὔκολα ἀπ' τὰ σύνορα τῆς χώρας του. Καὶ τὸ πρόβλημα ἔγκειται ἀφ' ἑνὸς στὸ ζήτημα τῶν δοκιμῶν —κάθε ὀρχήστρα θέλει πολλὲς δοκιμὲς γιὰ ἕνα ἄγνωστό της ἔργο, δηλαδὴ ἀπαιτοῦνται πολλὰ χρήματα — ἀπ' τὴν ἄλλη στὸ κοινό, στοὺς ἀκροατάς, ποὺ θέλει ν' ἀκούῃ ἔργα γνωστά, ἔργα ποὺ ξέρει κι' ἀγαπάει. 'Εγὼ ὁ ἴδιος ἔδωσα στὸ Σάλτσμπουργκ πέρυσι μιὰ συναυλία μὲ ἔργα Ἀμερικανῶν συνθετῶν ποὺ ἐσημείωσε ἀποτυχία.

'Εδῶ ἀνοίγει ἡ συζήτησις γιὰ τὴ νέα, τὴ σύγχρονη μουσική. 'Ο Δωδεκαφθογγισμὸς εἶναι πιὰ ξεπερασμένος, ἡ Μουσικὴ ἔχει πάει τόσο πολὺ μπροστὰ ποὺ δὲν ξέρεις πιὰ ποῦ θὰ καταλήξῃ. Συνάμα προβάλλει ἡ «ἠλεκτρονικὴ» Μουσική, ἐντελῶς πιὰ μηχανικὴ ποὺ θὰ καθιστᾷ... περιττὸ τὸν μαέστρο!

—Σᾶς ἐνδιαφέρει αὐτὴ ἡ Μουσική;

— Ναί, μ' ἐνδιαφέρει, ἀλλὰ πρέπει νἄναι κανένας παλαβὸς γιὰ νὰ δοθῇ σ' αὐτήν. Νοιώθω πὼς ἂν δοθῶ σ' αὐτὴ τὴ Μουσικὴ θὰ χάσω τὴν ψυχή μου. "Οχι, δὲν νομίζω πὼς μπορῶ νὰ ὑπηρετήσω αὐτὴ τὴ Μουσική. 'Αλλὰ θἄπρεπε τὸ κοινὸ νὰ ἐνδιαφερθῇ γιὰ τοὺς «μοντέρνους» συνθέτες καὶ σ' αὐτὸ πρέπει νὰ βοηθήσουν οἱ ἐφημερίδες καὶ ἰδίως οἱ μουσικοκριτικοὶ ποὺ πρέπει νὰ γίνουν οἱ ὁδηγοί, ἐνῶ οἱ περισσότεροί τους ἢ εἶναι φανατικοὶ ὀπαδοὶ τῆς παληᾶς μουσικῆς ἢ ἁπλούστατα, γράφοντας, ἀντὶ νὰ ἐξηγοῦν στὸ κοινὸ καὶ νὰ τὸ ἑλκύουν στὴ Μουσική, γράφουν γιὰ τὸν ἑαυτό τους, δείχνοντας τὶς γνώσεις τους... "Ετσι, ἐνῶ στὴ Γαλλία ὁ Μπουλέζ, στὴ Γερμανία ὁ Στοκχάουζεν, μὲ τὰ ἔργα τους φθάνουν τόσο μακρυά, ὥστε νὰ καταργοῦν κι' ὅλους τοὺς «μοντέρνους», τὸ κοινὸ μένει κολλημένο στὰ παληά.

'Ο Δημήτρης Μητρόπουλος, ἐνῶ ὁμιλεῖ στοὺς δημοσιογράφους. "Ορθια, ἡ μουσικοκριτικὸς τῆς «Βραδυνῆς» κ. 'Αλεξάνδρα Λαλαούνη.

'Ο Μητρόπουλος μιλάει μ' ἐνθουσιασμὸ γιὰ τὸ 'Ισραὴλ ὅπου διηύθυνε τελευταῖα : Θαυμάσια ὀρχήστρα, θαυμάσια αἴθουσα, 24 χιλιάδες συνδρομητὲς τῶν συναυλιῶν, ἔτσι ποὺ κάθε πρόγραμμα πρέπει νὰ ἐπαναλαμβάνεται 8 φορές! Στὸ 'Ισραὴλ τοῦ προσέφεραν τὴ θέσι τοῦ γενικοῦ ἀρχιμουσικοῦ τῆς 'Ορχήστρας, ἀλλὰ δὲν τὴν δέχθηκε κι' ἕνας ἀπ' τοὺς πολλοὺς λόγους τῆς ἀρνήσεώς του ἦταν κι' αὐτὴ ἡ ἐπανάληψις: «Μοῦ εἶναι ἀδύνατο νὰ ξαναδίνω τὸ ἴδιο πρόγραμμα τόσες φορές»!

Ρωτοῦμε τὸν Μητρόπουλο ἂν θὰ δεχότανε νὰ μείνῃ στὴν 'Ελλάδα μὲ τὴν προϋπόθεσι ὅτι θὰ τοῦ παρεῖχαν ὅλα τὰ μέσα μιᾶς τέλειας ὀρχήστρας κ. ἄ.

—"Οχι, δὲν θὰ δεχόμουνα. Δὲν θὰ ἤθελα ποτὲ νὰ ἐπισκιάσω τοὺς νέους μου συναδέλφους ποὺ πρέπει νὰ προοδεύσουν καὶ νὰ ἐξελιγθοῦν διευθύνοντας τακτικά. Κανένας «δὲν βγαίνει» μαέστρος ἂν δὲν ἀποκτήσῃ τὴν πεῖρα πάνω στὴν ὀρχήστρα. Καὶ γι' αὐτὸ πρέπει ὄχι μόνο ἡ Κοατικὴ 'Ορχήστρα νὰ τελειοποιηθῇ μὲ τὴν πρόσληψι νέων μουσικῶν, ἐν ἀνάγκη καὶ ξένων, ἀλλὰ νὰ δημιουργηθοῦν καὶ ἄλλες ὀρχήστρες καὶ τὰ 'Ωδεῖα νὰ μορφώνουν, νὰ πλάθουν νέα στελέχη ποὺ θὰ πλουτίζουν αὐτὲς τὶς ὀρχήστρες.

Σὲ σχετικὴ ἐρώτησι, ὁ μεγάλος ἀρχιμουσικὸς μᾶς λέει ὅτι εἶναι πολὺ κουρασμένος καὶ ὅτι δὲν ποθκειται ν' ἀναπαυθῇ πρὶν ἀπ' τὰ τέλη Αὐγούστου τοῦ προσεχοῦς Ἐτους! Φεύγοντας ἀπ' ἐδῶ, ἔχει νὰ διευθύνῃ 14 παραστάσεις στὴν Κρατικὴ "Οπερα τῆς Βιέννης, Ἔπειτα 80 προγράμματα στὸ 'Ισραήλ, Ἔπειτα στὴν Μετροπόλιταν τῆς Νέας Υόρκης, Ἔπειτα... Ἔπειτα...

'Αλλὰ τὸ βλέπουμε πὼς εἶναι πολὺ κουρασμένος καὶ μ' ὅλο ποὺ θὰ θέλαμε νὰ τὸν ἀκοῦμε ὧρες, καταλαβαίνουμε πὼς πρέπει νὰ τὸν... ἐλευθερώσουμε ἀπὸ τὴν ἄπληστη περιέργειά μας.

ΟΙ ΑΠΟΨΕΙΣ ΕΝΟΣ ΜΕΓΑΛΟΥ ΚΑΛΛΙΤΕΧΝΗ

Ο ΔΗΜΗΤΡΗΣ ΜΗΤΡΟΠΟΥΛΟΣ ΟΜΙΛΕΙ ΓΙΑ ΤΗ ΜΟΥΣΙΚΗ

«ΤΙ ΝΑ ΚΑΝΩ ΣΤΗΝ ΕΛΛΑΔΑ; ΘΑ ΕΠΙΣΚΙΑΣΩ ΟΛΟΥΣ ΤΟΥΣ ΑΛΛΟΥΣ...»

ΜΙΑ συνέντευξις μὲ τὸν Δημήτρη Μητρόπουλο, ἔστω κι' ἂν δημοσιεύεται μετὰ τὴν πρώτη συναυλία του, ἔχει πάντοτε ἐνδιαφέρον, γιατὶ οἱ γνῶμες καὶ οἱ σκέψεις του ἐπάνω στὰ μουσικὰ προβλήματα, ἑλληνικὰ καὶ διεθνῆ, εἶναι ἀναμφισβήτητα βαρύνουσες.

Ὁ διασμὸς ἀρχιμουσικὸς ἐδέχθη χθὲς τοὺς "Ελληνας καὶ ξένους δημοσιογράφους εἰς εἰδικὴν «πρὲς κόμφερανς» στὴν αἴθουσα τοῦ ξενοδοχείου «Πτὶ Παλαὶ» καὶ ἀπήντησε σὲ πλῆθος ἐρωτήσεων, ἐνῶ συγχρόνως τοῦ ἐδόθη ἡ εὐκαιρία νὰ ἀναπτύξῃ καὶ τὶς δικές του ἀπόψεις.

Τὸ πρῶτον πρᾶγμα ποὺ διεπίστωσε κατὰ τὴν ὀλιγοήμερο διαμονή του στὴν 'Αθήνα, εἶναι ὅτι «οἱ μουσικοὶ ἐργάζονται κάτω ἀπὸ φρικτὲς συνθῆκες».

— "Εχουμε μαέστρους, ἀλλὰ δὲν ἔχουν τὰ μέσα, λείπουν τὰ χρήματα, ἐτόνισε ὁ διασκεκριμένος καλλιτέχνης. Εἶναι κρίμα νὰ μένῃ ἡ Ἑλλὰς πίσω στὴν μουσική, ἐνῶ ὑπάρχει ἕνα ἀξιόλογο κοινὸν καλλιεργημένο μουσικά.

Γιὰ τοὺς "Ελληνας μουσικοὺς τοῦ ἐξωτερικοῦ εἶπεν ὅτι εἶναι πολὺ δύσκολο νὰ κατακτήσουν ἔδαφος, ἐνῶ μπορεῖ νὰ ἔχουν τὶς ἱκανότητες. Κι' αὐτὸ γιατὶ «κάθε κοινὸν ἀγαπᾷ τὰ ἔργα ποὺ ξέρει. Προτιμᾷ νὰ ἀκούσῃ μιὰ γνωστὴ μελωδία τοῦ Μπετόβεν, παρὰ νὰ παραστῇ σ' ἕνα νέο ἔργο ποὺ δὲν τὸ γνωρίζει. 'Απὸ τὴν ἐποχὴ τοῦ Μπετόβεν δὲν ἔχουμε προχωρήσει καθόλου, γιατὶ τὸ κοινὸν συνήθισε πλέον στὰ κλασικὰ κομμάτια καὶ δύσκολα τὰ ἀποχωρίζεται».

'Αλλὰ ὑπάρχει κι' ἕνας ἄλλος, ἐξ ἴσου σοβαρὸς λόγος, ποὺ ἀπογοητεύει τοὺς νέους συνθέτες. Τὸν ἐτόνισε κι' αὐτὸν ὁ κ. Μητρόπουλος.

— Κάθε καινούργιο ἔργο, ὅπως π.χ. τοῦ Μπλαὶζ, γιὰ νὰ παιχθῇ χρειάζεται τοὐλάχιστον 40 πρόβες. Αὐτὲς ἀπαιτοῦν χρόνο καὶ χρήματα. Ποιός, λοιπόν, θὰ τολμήσῃ νὰ παρουσιάσῃ μιὰ νέα σύνθεσι, ἀφοῦ μὲ 1 - 2 πρόβες μπορεῖ νὰ προσφέρῃ τὰ γνωστὰ κλασικὰ κομμάτια;

Καὶ δὲν ὑπάρχει ἀμφιβολία πὼς ἔχει δίκιο. Οἱ νέοι δύσκολα μποροῦν νὰ προχωρήσουν, μ' αὐτὲς τὶς συνθῆκες. «Κατέστρεψα τὴν ὑγεία μου —πρόσθεσε ὁ μεγάλος μαέστρος— γιὰ νὰ βοηθήσω τοὺς νέους νὰ προχωρήσουν πέρα ἀπὸ τὸν Σαίμπεργκ, ἀλλὰ δὲν ἐπέτυχα τίποτε, γιατὶ στὸ κοινὸν —κάθε χώρας— μόνον μιὰ μειοψηφία ἐνδιαφέρεται γιὰ τὴν καλὴ μουσική».

Στὸ σημεῖο αὐτὸ ὁ "Ελλην ἀρχιμουσικός, κάνοντας τὴν παρένθεσι ὅτι δὲν θέλει νὰ ἐξυμνήσῃ τὴν χώρα, ὑπεγράμμισε ὅτι «μόνον στὴ Ρωσία οἱ συνθέται γράφουν μουσικὴ γιὰ τὸ λαὸ καὶ ἔχουν ἀπήχησι τόσον τὰ νέα ὅσο καὶ τὰ παλαιὰ ἔργα. 'Αλλὰ στὴν Ρωσία καὶ τὸ γῶμα ἀκόμη μυρίζει μουσική».

Σὲ παρατήρησι ὅτι στὴν Ρωσία γράφουν κατὰ παραγγελίαν κι' ἂν τὰ ἔργα δὲν εἶναι σύμφωνα μὲ τὴν πολιτικὴ γραμμή, ὁ κ. Μητρόπουλος ἀπήντησε:

— Αὐτὸ εἶναι τὸ ἕνα ἄκρον. Τὸ ἄλλο εἶναι νὰ μὴ γράφῃ κανεὶς καθόλου. Καὶ τὰ δυὸ εἶναι ἀσυντικὰ γι' αὐτὸ καὶ ὁ μέσος δρόμος εἶναι ὁ καλύτερος.

Γιὰ τὴν σύγχρονη κατάστασι τῆς μουσικῆς ὁ κορυφαῖος μουσικὸς δὲν ἐκφράσθηκε μὲ αἰσιοδοξία.

— 'Η μουσικὴ δυστυχῶς —εἶπε— ἀκολουθεῖ τὴν μηχανικὴ ἐξέλιξι. Γίνεται κι' αὐτὴ αὐτόματη καὶ ἠλεκτρονική. Πρὸ ἡμερῶν ἔκανα μιὰ ἠχογράφησι σὲ στούντιο κι' ἐνοιωσα αὐτὴν τὴν ἐξέλιξι. 'Η ὀρχήστρα μου ἦταν χωρισμένη μέσα σὲ γυάλινα δωμάτια, ἀλλοῦ τὰ βιολιά, ἀλλοῦ τὰ τσομπόνια, ἀλλοῦ ἐνῶ, καὶ νόμιζα πὼς ἤμουν ἕνας ξένος... Δὲν εἶχα καμμιὰ συγδὸν ψυχικὴ ἐπαφὴ μὲ τοὺς ἀνθρώπους μου».

Κι' ἔκλεισε τὴν γνώμη του αὐτὴ μὲ τὴν χιουμοριστικὴ παρατήρησι: «'Ο μαέστρος σήμερα κατήντησε νὰ μὴν εἶναι ὁ ἀναδημιουργός, ποὺ μὲ τὴν μπακέττα του δίνει τὸ πνεῦμα τοῦ συνθέτη. ἀλλὰ ὁ... ἀστυνομικὸς τῆς ὀρχήστρας»!

Σὲ ἐρώτησι ἂν θὰ ἦταν διατεθειμένος νὰ ἐγκατασταθῇ μονίμως στὴν 'Ελλάδα, ἐφ' ὅσον τὸ κράτος θὰ τοῦ ἔδινε τὰ ἀναγκαῖα μέσα καὶ ἀπαραίτητα χρήματα, ὁ ἀπαράμιλλος μαέστρος ἐξέφρασε ἀμφιβολία ἂν μποροῦσε νὰ γίνῃ αὐτὸ καὶ ἀπήντησε «πιθανόν». "Οταν, ὅμως, τοῦ ὑπεβλήθη ἡ ἴδια ἐρώτησις ἀργότερα, ἐλαφρῶς τροποποιημένη, ἀπήντησε ἀρνητικῶς:

— Τί νὰ κάνω στὴν 'Ελλάδα; ἐρώτησε. Θὰ ἐπισκιάσω ὅλους τοὺς ἄλλους, θὰ μείνω ἐγὼ μόνος κι' ὅταν καμμιὰ φορὰ φύγω, οἱ νέοι ἢ οἱ παλαιοὶ ποὺ θὰ ὑπάρχουν τότε θὰ ἀρχίσουν ἀπὸ τὴν ἀρχή...

Καὶ ἀπεκάλυψε ἐν συνεχείᾳ ὅτι σχετικὴ πρότασι τοῦ ἔγινε στὸ 'Ισραὴλ πρὸ καιροῦ, ἀλλὰ δὲν ἐδέχθη τὴν θέσι.

'Ολίγον πρὶν κλείσῃ τὴν τόσον ἐνδιαφέρουσα συνέντευξί του, ὁ διεθνοῦς φήμης ἀρχιμουσικὸς εἶπε μερικὰ λόγια καὶ γιὰ τοὺς μουσικοκριτικοὺς τῶν ἐφημερίδων:

— Σέβομαι, ἐτόνισε, τὶς κρίσεις τῶν ἄλλων, γιατὶ ἀπ' αὐτὲς καὶ τὴν συζήτησι μπορεῖ νὰ βγῇ καλόν. 'Αλλὰ οἱ ἐφημερίδες ἔχουν εὐθύνες ἀπέναντι τοῦ κοινοῦ. Οἱ κριτικοὶ πρέπει νὰ φροντίζουν νὰ ἐκλαϊκεύουν τὴν μουσικὴ καὶ νὰ ἀνεβάζουν τὸ ἐπίπεδο τοῦ κοινοῦ. Δέχομαι ἀκόμη καὶ νὰ μὲ καταστρέψουν, ἀλλὰ νὰ τὸ ποῦν καθαρά, ὅτι οἱ γνῶμες τους εἶναι δικές τους καὶ οἱ κρίσεις τους ὑποκειμενικές. Διαφορετικὰ δὲν προσφέρουν ὑπηρεσίες στὴν μεγάλη ἀποστολή τους. "Οταν ἤμουν στὸ 'Ισραήλ, οἱ ἀμερικανικὲς ἐφημερίδες ἔγραψαν ὅτι ἀρρώστησα βαρειά, ἄλλες προχώρησαν παραπέρα... Ξέρετε τί εἶχα; "Ενα ἁπλὸ πονοκέφαλο!...

Καὶ μ' αὐτὰ τὰ λόγια ἐτελείωσε ὁ "Ελλην ἀρχιμουσικὸς τὴν «πρὲς κόμφερανς», λησμονώντας ὅτι εἶναι μεγάλος καλλιτέχνης καὶ ὅτι τὸ πλατὺ κοινὸν ἐνδιαφέρεται γιὰ κάθε τι ποὺ τὸν ἀφορᾷ, ἔστω κι' ἂν αὐτὸ εἶναι πονοκέφαλος...

Γ. ΠΑΝΤΟΥΡΗΣ

'Ο Δημήτρης Μητρόπουλος διαλέγεται πρὸς τοὺς δημοσιογράφους κατὰ τὴν χθεσινὴν «πρὲς κόμφερανς».

"Ενας σπάνιος, ἕνας μοναδικὸς θρίαμβος ὑπῆρξεν ἡ χθεσινοβραδυνὴ ἐναρκτήριος συναυλία τῆς Φιλαρμονικῆς 'Ορχήστρας τῆς Βιέννης, ποὺ διηύθυνεν ὁ Δημήτρης Μητρόπουλος στὸ 'Ωδεῖον 'Ηρῴδου τοῦ 'Αττικοῦ. 'Ασφυκτικὰ γεμάτο ἀπὸ κόσμο τὸ ἀρχαῖον 'Ωδεῖον ἐγνώρισε μιὰ πιένα ἀληθινὰ μοναδικὴ καὶ ἐπλημμύρησεν ἀπὸ ἕνα διαλεκτὸ Κοινόν, ποὺ κυριολεκτικὰ ἀπεθέωσε τὸν μεγάλον "Ελληνα ἀρχιμουσικὸν καὶ τοὺς θαυμάσιους Βιεννέζους καλλιτέχνας ποὺ ἀποτελοῦν τὴν ἔξοχη ὀρχήστρα ποὺ φιλοξενοῦμε. Συγκινημένος βαθύτατα καὶ ὁ κ. Μητρόπουλος. Στὰ «παρασκήνια», στὸ διάλειμμα τοῦ πρώτου μέρους, συντροφευμένος ἀπὸ τὸν διευθυντὴν τοῦ Φεστιβὰλ 'Αθηνῶν κ. Λόντον, τὸν ἐπεσκέφθησαν καὶ τὸν συνεχάρησαν οἱ ὑπουργοὶ κ.κ. Τσάτσος, Βογιατζῆς, Καλλίας καὶ Στρᾶτος, ὁ γενικὸς γραμματεὺς τοῦ Τουρισμοῦ κ. Λογοθέτης κ. ἄ. Λιγόλαγος εἶχε ἐκδηλη τὴν σφραγῖδα τῆς ἔντονης συγκινήσεως ἀπὸ τὶς ἀποθεωτικὲς ἐκδηλώσεις τοῦ πλήθους, ποὺ εἶχαν προηγηθῇ. Πρὶν ἀρχίσῃ, ἄλλως τε, τὴν εἰσαγωγὴ «Λεονώρα ἀριθμ. 2» τοῦ Μπετόβεν, ἕνας ἀπὸ τοὺς ἀκροατὰς τοῦ φώναξε «Νὰ μᾶς ζήσῃς μαέστρο» καὶ ὁ ἄλλος κόσμος ἔξεσπασε σὲ ἐνθουσιώδεις ἐπευφημίες. "Οταν τελείωσεν ἡ συναυλία ἦταν παράλληλα καὶ καταφανῶς κουρασμένος. 'Υπέγραψε γρήγορα - γρήγορα μερικὰ αὐτόγραφα καὶ συντροφευμένος ἀπὸ τὸν ἀρχιμουσικὸν Θεόδωρον Βαβαγιάννην ἀπεχώρησεν ἐνῶ μιὰ ἀσφυκτικὴ συγκέντρωσις ἔζωνε τὸ αὐτοκίνητόν του καὶ τὸν ἐπευφημοῦσε ξανὰ μ' ἀπερίγραπτον ἐνθουσιασμόν. "Ηταν μιὰ νύχτα δυαξυά.

'Αλλ' ἦταν ἀλησμόνητο καὶ τὸ μεσημέρι. Τὸ μεσημέρι ὅπου ὁ Δημήτρης Μητρόπουλος μίλησε στοὺς "Ελληνας καὶ ξένους δημοσιογράφους καὶ ἀπήντησε ἐπὶ μιὰ ὁλόκληρη ὥρα στὰ ἐρωτήματα ποὺ τοῦ ὑπεβλήθησαν. Στάθηκε ἐπίσης ἕνα γεγονὸς ξεχωριστοῦ ἐνδιαφέροντος αὐτὴ ἡ συνέντευξις γιατὶ ὁ διάσημος καλλιτέχνης μίλησε τὴν γλῶσσα τῆς ἀλήθειας καὶ εἶπε τὰ «σοῦκα - σοῦκα» καὶ τὴν «σκάφη - σκάφη» διατυπώνοντας ἀδίστακτα, κατηγορηματικά, ἀπερίφραστα τὶς γνῶμές του στὸ κάθε τι διὰ τὸ ὁποῖον ἠρωτήθη. "Εβαλε ἀπὸ τὴν καλὴ τῆς κριτικῆς, δὲν ἐδίστασε νὰ ξεσπάσῃ σὲ μιὰ καυστικὴ ἱερεμιάδα κατὰ τοῦ Τύπου, διότι παρασύρει τὸ Κοινὸν σὲ ὀλισθηροὺς δρόμους κρίσεως, ἀνέπτυξε τὴν προτίμησί του γιὰ τοὺς συγχρόνους δημιουργοὺς τῆς μουσικῆς, ἀλλὰ παράλληλα κατεδίκασε καὶ καυτηρίασε τοὺς ἐξωφρενισμοὺς τῶν ὑπερμοντέρνων συνθετῶν καὶ ὑπῆρξε δριμύτατα καταδικαστικὸς γιὰ τὶς ὑπερβολὲς τεχνικῆς, ποὺ ἔφθασαν μέχρι τοῦ νὰ τοῦ προταθῇ νὰ διευθύνῃ στὴν Τηλεόρασι.. χωρὶς νὰ βλέπῃ τοὺς μουσικοὺς ποὺ θὰ ἐκτελοῦσαν τὸ πρόγραμμα! Τὰ εἶπε ἕνα γεράκι γιὰ τοὺς "Ελληνας τῆς 'Αμερικῆς, ἔβαλε τὸν ἀναβολλόμενο στοὺς εἰδικοὺς ποὺ παρασύρουν τοὺς ἀνίδεους — ὅπως τελευταῖα στὸ Σάλτσμπουργκ ὅπου ἄρεσε πολὺ ἡ «Βανέσσα» τοῦ Μπάρμπερ. ποὺ διηύθυνε καὶ ἐκ... τῶν ὑστέρων τὸ Κοινόν... ἐπείσθη ἀπὸ τοὺς κριτικοὺς ὅτι τὸ ἔργο δὲν ἦταν καλό! — καὶ ἐξαπέλυσε τοὺς μύδρους του γιὰ τὸ κάθε τι ποὺ δὲν τὸν προσελκύει. "Εκανε συστάσεις στὸν ραδιοφωνικὸ σταθμὸ νὰ προσέξῃ τὰ μουσικά του προγράμματα, εἶπεν ὅτι οἱ παραστάσεις τραγῳδιῶν στὸ Φεστιβὰλ 'Αθηνῶν εἶναι ἐξαίρετες, ἀλλὰ ἡ μουσικὴ ποὺ ποσοφέρει δὲν εἶναι ἱκανοποιητικὴ καὶ γενικὰ εἰς ὅ,τι ἠρωτήθη ἀπήντησε μὲ ὠμὴ εἰλικρίνεια καὶ χαρακτηριστικὴ παρρησία. Δὲν ἐδίστασε νὰ πλέξῃ τὸ ἐγκώμιο τῆς Ρωσίας γιὰ τὴν κρατικὴ στοργὴ στὸν τομέα τῆς μουσικῆς ζωῆς. 'Αναφέροντας ὅτι δὲν τὸν εὑρίσκει σύμφωνα τὸ σύστημα τῆς δικτατορίας ὑπεγράμμισεν ὅμως παράλληλα τὸ πόσον ἀνθεῖ ἡ μουσικὴ στὴν Ρωσία καὶ ὅτι καὶ στὴν 'Αμερικὴ οἱ Ρῶσοι συνθέτες ἀποτελοῦν μεγάλη ἀδυναμία τοῦ Κοινοῦ. «"Αλλως τε — προσέθεσε — πάντα στὴν Ρωσία ὡς καὶ τὸ χῶμα μυρίζει μουσική».

'Ο Μητρόπουλος δὲν παρέλειψε ἀκόμη νὰ ὑπογραμμίσῃ τὸ πόσο σπουδαῖο ρόλο παίζει ὁ οἰκονομικὸς παράγων στὴν ἐξέλιξι τῆς μουσικῆς καὶ πόσο δύσκολο εἶναι νὰ ἐπιβληθοῦν οἱ σύγχρονοι δημιουργοὶ διότι χρειάζονται σημαντικὰ χρηματικὰ μέσα γιὰ νὰ ἐμφανισθοῦν τὰ ἔργα τους. Τὸ Κοινὸ προτιμᾷ τοὺς κλασικούς. Θέλει Μπετόβεν, Μπράμς, Μπάχ. Κ' ἡ παρουσίασις ἔργων τους δὲν εἶναι δαπανηρὰ γιατὶ εἶναι δημιουργίες γνωστὲς ποὺ δὲν ἀπαιτοῦν τὶς δοκιμὲς ποὺ χρειάζονται οἱ καινούργιες καὶ ἄγνωστες συνθέσεις. "Ενας Μπουλὲζ γιὰ νὰ παιχθῇ ὅπως πρέπει εἶναι ἀνάγκη νὰ γίνουν καὶ σαράντα πρόβες καὶ ὁ Στοχάουζεν ἔχει γράψει συνθέσεις ποὺ ἀπαιτοῦν τρεῖς ὀρχήστρες... Αὐτὰ καθιστοῦν προβληματικὴ τὴν παρουσιὰ δὲν εἶναι δυνατὸν καὶ οἱ καλοὶ σἰασι τῶν καινούργιων καὶ γι' αὐτὸ "Ελληνες συνθέτες νὰ παιχθοῦν εἰς τὴν 'Αμερική. "Ομως ὁ διάσημος ἀρχιμουσικὸς δὲν παρέλειψε νὰ τονίσῃ ὅτι κατὰ τὴν ἀντίληψί του ὁ τόπος μας διαθέτει λαμπρὸ ἐμψυχο ὑλικὸ καὶ θὰ ἦταν εὐκταῖο νὰ τοῦ ἐδίδοντο τὰ μέσα νὰ ἐργασθῇ, νὰ βρῇ τὸν δρόμο του καὶ νὰ ἐπιτύχῃ τὴν ἄνοδο τῆς μουσικῆς στάθμης τοῦ τόπου. 'Ο Μητρόπουλος ἔπλεξε μεταξὺ ἄλλων τὸ ἐγκώμιο τοῦ Ντίνου Γιαννόπουλου καὶ σ' ἐρώτησι ἂν θὰ ἦταν διατεθειμένος — ὑπὸ τὴν προϋπόθεσι ὅτι θὰ τοῦ παρείχοντο τὰ οἰκονομικὰ μέσα — νὰ ἔλθῃ νὰ μείνῃ ἐδῶ καὶ νὰ ἡγηθῇ τῆς ἀναδιοργανώσεως τῶν μουσικῶν μας πραγμάτων ἀπήντησε «πιθανόν». Συνεχίζοντας ὅμως ἀναλογίσθηκε τὸ τί χάος θὰ ἐδημιουργεῖτο μὲ τὶς συγκρίσεις ποὺ θὰ ἐγίνοντο ὅταν θὰ ξαναέφευγε καὶ βρήκε πὼς τὸ πρᾶγμα δὲν θὰ ἦταν σκόπιμο. Εἶπεν ὅτι τοῦ ἔγινε μιὰ παρόμοια πρόταση καὶ στὸ 'Ισραὴλ, ποὺ ἦταν — κ' ἔμεινε γοητευμένος ἀπὸ τὴν γνωριμία του — καὶ ξαναγυρίζοντας στὰ δικά μας πράγματα μίλησε κολακευτικὰ γιὰ τοὺς βασικοὺς ἐκπροσώπους-ρυθμιστὰς τῆς μουσικῆς μας κινήσεως. Τελειώνοντας εἶπεν ὅτι ἔπαυσε πιὰ νὰ συνθέτῃ, ἔπαυσε νὰ παίζῃ πιάνο, ἔχει πάντα γιὰ προσωπικὸ «χόμπυ» τὴν ἐνασχόλησι στὴν φιλοσοφία, ἀλλὰ συγχρόνως δὲν ἔχει περίπου καιρὸ γιὰ τίποτε διότι εἶναι πάντοτε κατάφορτος ἀπὸ ὑποχρεώσεις.

— Φεύγω, εἶπε τελειώνοντας, τὴν Κυριακὴ τὸ πρωῒ γιὰ τὴν Βιέννη. "Εχω νὰ διευθύνω ἐκεῖ 11 μελοδραματικὲς παραστάσεις καὶ δυὸ συναυλίες μέσα σ' ἕνα μήνα. Κατόπιν στὶς 9 'Οκτωβρίου θὰ ξαναγυρίσω στὴν 'Αμερικὴ γιὰ ν' ἀρχίσω ἀμέσως δοκιμὲς στὴν «Μετροπόλιταν». Πρέπει ὡς τὸν Μάϊο νὰ διευθύνω 80 παραστάσεις ὅπερας. Καὶ κατόπιν τὸν 'Ιούνιο τοῦ 1959 νὰ ξαναπάω στὸ 'Ισραὴλ ὅπου θὰ μείνω δυὸ μῆνες. 'Ανέλαβα τὴν ὑποχρέωσι νὰ διευθύνω ἐκεῖ 40 συναυλίες. Εὐτυχῶς ὅμως τὰ προγράμματα θὰ εἶναι μόνο δύο καὶ θὰ ἐπαναληφθῇ τὸ καθένα ἀπὸ 20 φορές...

Κ' ἡ «πρὲς κόνφερανς» ἔκλεισε ἀφοῦ οἱ νεώτεροι τῶν συναδέλφων τὸν ἐταλαιπώρησαν λίγο ἀκόμη γιὰ νὰ τοὺς ὑπογράψῃ μερικὰ αὐτόγραφα, ὅπου εἰκφράζει εὐχὲς, συμπάθεια καὶ εὔνοια πρὸς ἐφημερίδες πού... δὲν εἶδε ποτὲ στὴν ζωή του!...

ΜΟΥΣΙΚΟΚΡΙΤΙΚΑ ΣΗΜΕΙΩΜΑΤΑ

ΣΤΡΑΟΥΣ – ΜΗΤΡΟΠΟΥΛΟΣ
ΦΙΛΑΡΜΟΝΙΚΗ ΒΙΕΝΝΗΣ

Ὑπὸ τοῦ κ. ΠΕΤΡΟΥ ΠΕΤΡΙΔΗ

Τὸ δεύτερο πρόγραμμα τῆς Φιλαρμονικῆς Ὀρχήστρας τῆς Βιέννης ὑπὸ τὸν κ. Μητρόπουλο, ἦταν ἐξ ὁλοκλήρου ἀφιερωμένο σὲ ἔργα τοῦ Ρίχαρδ Στράους πρώτης καὶ μέσης περιόδου, «Ντὸν Ζουάν», «Θάνατος καὶ Ἐξαΰλωσις» καὶ «Συμφωνία Ντομέστικα». Μουσικὴ γραμμένη στὴν κατ' εὐφημισμὸ φόρμα τοῦ συμφωνικοῦ ποιήματος, τὶς βασικὲς κατευθυντήριες γραμμὲς τοῦ ὁποίου ἔθεσαν ὁ Μπερλιὸζ καὶ ὁ Λίστ, κατὰ τὰ μέσα περίπου τοῦ περασμένου αἰῶνος. Στέκεται, ἐπομένως, ἀπαράίτητο ὁ μέσος ἀκροατὴς νὰ σκύβη ἀπὸ καιροῦ σὲ καιρὸ στὸ ἀναλυτικὸ κείμενο τοῦ προγράμματος γιὰ νὰ παρακολουθήση καὶ νὰ ἀπολαύση τὶς πλουσιοπάροχες εὐφράδειες τοῦ συμφωνικοῦ ποιήματος.

Τὸ πρῶτο, ὁ «Ντὸν Ζουάν», ἐξιστορεῖ τοὺς ἐρωτικοὺς ἄθλους τοῦ θρυλικοῦ κατακτητῆ γυναικείων καρδιῶν. Ὅπως καὶ στὴν καθαρὰ συμφωνία τοῦ Μπετόβεν, ἔχουμε κι ἐδῶ τὰ δυὸ θέματα, τὸ ἀνδρικὸ καὶ τὸ θηλυκό. Ἀλλ' ἐνῶ στὴν συμφωνία τὰ σχετικὰ θέματα διατηροῦν ἀλώβητη τὴν πνευματική τους ὑφή, ἡ μουσικὴ τοῦ Ρίχαρδ Στράους, ὑλιστικώτερη, ἡδονικώτερη, ζυμωμένη μὲ ρωμαντικὸν αἰσθησιασμὸ μισοῦ τουλαχίστον αἰῶνος, μεταθέτει τὰ θέματα στὸ ἐπίπεδο τῆς αἰσθητικῆς ἡδυπαθείας. Τὰ θέματα αὐτὰ φέρουν ἀναγλυφη τὴν σφραγίδα τῆς νεανικῆς, ἀλλ' ἀδρῆς προσωπικότητος τοῦ μουσουργοῦ. Ἡ ὀρμητική, εἰρωνική, τρυφερὴ κάποτε ἐπεξεργασία τοῦ θεματικοῦ ὑλικοῦ, ἐπεξεργασία ποὺ ἐπιμαρτυρεῖ τὴν πρώιμη ἐνορχηστρωτικὴ μαεστρία τοῦ Στράους, ἔθεσε ταχύτατα τὸν συνθέτη στὴν κατηγορία τῶν ἐξεχουσῶν φυσιογνωμιῶν τῆς μουσικῆς τέχνης τοῦ τέλους τοῦ προηγουμένου καὶ τῶν ἀρχῶν τοῦ εἰκοστοῦ αἰῶνος. Ἀνεμέναμε ἀριστοτεχνικὴ τὴν ἑρμηνεία τοῦ ἔργου ἀπὸ τὸν κ. Μητρόπουλο καὶ τὴν Φιλαρμονική. Τεχνικὰ στάθηκε πράγματι ἄρτια, ἡ πληθωρικὴ ποικιλία θεμάτων, μελῳδιῶν, ἡχοχρωμάτων, διεπλάσθη ἀπὸ τὸν μεγάλο μας ἀρχιμουσικὸ σ' ὅλη της τὴν φαντασμαγορικὴ ἐντέλεια. Ἡ ὅλη ἀπόδοσις, μολαταῦτα, παρήλασε σ' ἀτμόσφαιρα αἰσθητῆς δυναμικῆς ὑποτάσεως, ὀφειλομένης προφανῶς σὲ κόπωσι, σὲ θερμομετρικὲς συνθῆκες χαλαρωτικὲς τοῦ νευρικοῦ σφρίγους.

Τὸ δεύτερο συμφωνικὸ ποίημα, «Θάνατος καὶ Ἐξαΰλωσις», μᾶς παρουσιάζει τὸν νεαρὸ Στράους πρόωρα ἐμπλεγμένο σὲ θέματα φιλοσοφικῆς ὑφῆς, πιθανῶς ὑπὸ τὴν ἐπίδρασι τοῦ Νίτσε. Κι ἐδῶ ἡ συμφωνικὴ σύνθεσις ἐξαφανίζεται μὲ δυὸ θέματα ἀντιθέτου χαρακτῆρος, τὸ θέμα τοῦ θανάτου καὶ τὸ τῆς νιότης, τῆς ζωῆς. Πολλὲς γραφικὲς ἐναλλαγὲς στὸν ἀγῶνα μεταξὺ ζωῆς καὶ θανάτου μὲ τελικὴν ἐπικράτησι τοῦ δεύτερου. Ἡ ἐξαγγιστικὴ ἐξαΰλωσις φθάνει σὰν κατακλεὶς τοῦ ὅλου ἔργου σὲ φόρμα «θριαμβευτικοῦ ὕμνου», ὅπως τονίζει τὸ ἀναλυτικὸ πρόγραμμα. Ἀξίζει νὰ σημειώσουμε ἐδῶ τὴν ἁπλῆ μὲν ἀλλὰ τόσο ἐπίκαιρη μελῳδικὴ ἐπινόησι πρὸς χαρακτηρισμὸ τῆς ἐκ βαθέων πρὸς τὰ ὕψη ἀνατάσεως. Ἡ μελῳδία ξεκινᾶ μὲ τρεῖς διαδοχικὲς νότες κι ἀπὸ ἐκεῖ πηδᾶ ὁλόκληρη ὀκτάβα, διάστημα ὀγδόης δηλαδή, γιὰ νὰ ἐξακολουθήση τὴν περαιτέρω ἀνέλιξί της. Ὡς γνωστόν, τὸ διάστημα ὀγδόης εἶναι τὸ μεγαλύτερο μέσα στὴν κλίμακα. Τὰ διαδοχικὰ τέτοια ἅλματα τῆς μελῳδίας, περνώντας ἀπὸ τὰ διάφορα συγκροτήματα τῆς ὀρχήστρας, δημιουργοῦν μιὰν ὑπέροχη ψυχικὴν ἀνάτασι. Ἡ ἐνορχήστρωσις ἔρχεται νὰ ἐνισχύση ἐντατικὰ τὴν ἄνοδο τῶν ἁρμονικῶν ὄγκων. Ἡ ἐντύπωσις γίνεται αὐτόχρημα ἀποθεωτική. Ἡ ἐκτέλεσις ὑπὸ τῆς ὀρχήστρας ὑπὸ τὴν καθοδήγησι τοῦ κ. Μητροπούλου ἄριστη, ἠχητικὰ ἐκλαμπρη, δυναμικὰ συναρπαστικὴ ἰδίως ἀπὸ τὸ μέσον καὶ μέχρι τέλους τοῦ ἔργου.

Τὸ τρίτο συμφωνικὸ ποίημα, «Συμφωνία Ντομέστικα», περιγράφει τὴν οἰκογενειακὴ ζωὴ τοῦ συνθέτη, μὲ κύρια πρόσωπα τὸν ἄνδρα, τὴν γυναῖκα, τὸ παιδί. Ἡ μακροσκελὴς αὐτὴ σύνθεσις, παρὰ τὸν μεγάλον ἐξωτερικὸ πλοῦτο ἐπενδύσεως ποὺ παρουσιάζει, ὑστερεῖ σημαντικὰ σὲ πρωτοτυπία ἐμπνεύσεως. Στερεῖται τῆς αἰχμῆς τῆς δημιουργικῆς ἰδιοτυπίας. Τὸ γενικὸ ὕφος πηγάζει ἀπὸ κλίμα μεγαλοαστικῆς εὐφορίας, ἀπηλλαγμένης ὑλικῶν στερήσεων, ψυχικῶν ἀνησυχιῶν, μεταφυσικῶν ἀμφιβολιῶν. Οἱ διάφορες οἰκογενειακὲς ἀνωμαλίες ἀντιστοιχοῦν σὲ «τρικυμίες σ' ἕνα ποτήρι νερὸ» κατὰ τὴν γνωστὴ γαλλικὴ ἔκφρασι. Ἡ διεξοδικὴ μουσικὴ ρητορεία δὲν παρασύρει, μόλις ξύπνησα μᾶς ἐνδιαφέρει σήμερα. Σπανιώτατα ἔχω ἀκούσει ἐκτελούμενο τὸ ἔργο. Διψάμε ἀπόλυτης ἐμπιστοσύνης στὸν κ. Μητρόπουλο καὶ στὴν Φιλαρμονικὴ τῆς Βιέννης, συμπεραίνω ὅτι ἡ ἐκτέλεσις στάθηκε κοπιώδης στὸ ἔπακρο γιὰ τοὺς ἡρωϊκοὺς μοχθήσαντες, ἀλλ' ἱκανοποιητικὴ γιὰ τοὺς ἀκροατὲς μὲ τὴν ἐπιφύλαξι τῆς ὑπερβολικῆς μακρηγορίας τοῦ ἐν εὐμαρείᾳ διαπρέψαντος μουσουργοῦ.

Κοούφωμα αἰχμηρὸ κατ' ἐξοχήν, σπινθηροβόλο, ἡδονικὸ καὶ λάγνο, σαρκαστικὸ ἐδῶ κι ἐκεῖ' ἀλλὰ φαντασμαγορικὸ σὲ ρυθμικὸ καὶ ἠχητικὸ πανηγύρι, ἀνεπήδησεν ὁ διαβολικὸς «χορὸς τῆς Σαλώμης», ποὺ εἶχε τὴν ἱπποτικὴ πρωτοβουλία νὰ προσθέση ὁ κ. Μητρόπουλος στὸ τόσο ἔμφορτο πρόγραμμα. Ἄξιος πληρέστατα ὁ μισθός του. Ἡ ἐκτέλεσις ἀριστουργηματικὴ ἀπὸ πάσης πλευρᾶς, τὸ δὲ κοινό, ἀκόρεστο ἀπὸ τὴν δίωρη πανδαισία, ἐπευφήμησε ἀποθεωτικὰ μαέστρο καὶ μουσικοὺς τῆς ἀγνώστου.

Η ΠΡΩΤΗ ΣΥΝΑΥΛΙΑ ΤΗΣ ΦΙΛΑΡΜΟΝΙΚΗΣ ΤΗΣ ΒΙΕΝΝΗΣ ΜΕ ΤΟ ΔΗΜΗΤΡΗ ΜΗΤΡΟΠΟΥΛΟ

Μὲ μεγάλη χαρὰ εἶδαν καὶ πάλι οἱ Ἀθηναῖοι φιλόμουσοι, ὕστερο ἀπὸ τρία χρόνια, τὸ Δημήτρη Μητρόπουλο στὸ ἀναλόγιο τοῦ ἀρχιμουσικοῦ. Μαζὶ μὲ τὸ μεγάλο καὶ ἀγαπημένο τους μαέστρο, χάρηκαν ἀκόμη καὶ ἕνα θαυμαστὸ καὶ φημισμένο συμφωνικὸ συγκρότημα, τὴ Φιλαρμονικὴ τῆς Βιέννης. Ἀναμφισβήτητα ὁ Μητρόπουλος, ὅπως καὶ ἄλλοτε ἔχουμε γράψει, εἶναι ἕνα ἀπὸ τὰ θαυμαστὰ μουσικὰ φαινόμενα τοῦ αἰώνα μας. Βαδίζοντας διαρκῶς, δίχως ἀνάπαυλα, τὸν ἀνηφορικὸ δρόμο τῆς τέχνης, προχωρεῖ ἀπὸ θρίαμβο σὲ θρίαμβο, δίχως νὰ θαμπώνεται ἀπὸ τὴ δόξα. Τὸ μεγάλο πάθος τῆς ζωῆς του, ἡ Μουσική, τὸν ὁδήγησε ἀπὸ τὰ δύσβατα καὶ ἀνηφορικὰ μονοπάτια, στοὺς ἀνοιχτοὺς καὶ ὁλόφωτους ὁρίζοντες. Βαρύ, ὅμως, τὸ τίμημα μιᾶς τέτοιας δόξας, ποὺ ἔρχεται νὰ ἐπιβραβεύσει τὸ ὁλοκαύτωμα τῆς ζωῆς πάνω στὸ βωμὸ τῆς μεγάλης τέχνης. Ὅσοι χαίρονται σήμερα τὴν καλλιτεχνικὴ ὡριμότητα τοῦ Μητροπούλου ποὺ ἤδη δίνει τόσο πλούσιους καρπούς, δὲν ἀναλογίζονται ἴσως, πόσοι κόποι, μόχθοι καὶ θυσίες χρειάστηκαν γιὰ νὰ ἐγγίσει κάποτε ὁ μεγάλος μύστης, τὸ ἰδεῶδες τῆς τέχνης. Ἀπαρνήθηκε καὶ τὸν ἴδιο τὸν ἑαυτό του, στερήθηκε ἀκόμη καὶ τὶς μικροχαρὲς τῆς ζωῆς ποὺ τὶς ἀπολαμβάνει καὶ ὁ ἁπλὸς ἄνθρωπος, δὲ γνώρισε τὴν ἀνάπαυση, δέσμιος πάντα ἀπέναντι τῆς τέχνης. Ἀμείλικτος ἐχθρὸς τῆς ρουτίνας ὁ Μητρόπουλος, δὲν ἔκανε ποτὲ συμβιβασμοὺς μ' αὐτὸ ποὺ λέγεται καλλιτεχνικὴ συνείδηση. Γι' αὐτὸ τὸν βλέπουμε νὰ ἐγκαταλείπει μόνιμες προσοδοφόρες θέσεις, νὰ βρίσκεται σὲ ἀέναη κίνηση ἀπὸ τὸ ἕνα μουσικὸ κέντρο στὸ ἄλλο.

Ἐκπληκτικὸ σὲ ὁμοιογένεια καὶ συνοχὴ ἐμφανίσθηκε τὸ βιεννέζικο συμφωνικὸ συγκρότημα. Ἡ λαμπρὴ σταδιοδρομία τοῦ ὀργανικοῦ αὐτοῦ συνόλου, εἶναι συνυφασμένη μὲ τὴν πλούσια μουσικὴ παράδοση τῆς πόλης ποὺ ἐξέθρεψε τὴν κλασσικὴ τριάδα Χάϋδν — Μότσαρτ — Μπετόβεν, τὸν ἀνυπέρβλητο Σοῦμπερτ, καὶ φημίζεται ἀπὸ τὰ παλαιότερα χρόνια σὰν ἕνα μεγάλο καὶ ἔνδοξο μουσικὸ κέντρο. Τὸ πρόγραμμα τῆς πρώτης συναυλίας — τοποθετημένης, ὡς γνωστό, στὰ πλαίσια τοῦ Φεστιβὰλ Ἀθηνῶν — ἦταν ἀφιερωμένο στὸ πρῶτο μέρος σὲ δύο Μπετοβενικὰ ἔργα («Λεονώρα No 2», «Δεύτερη Συμφωνία»). Ἀκολούθησαν ἡ «Ἐξαΰλωμένη νύχτα» τοῦ Σένμπεργκ καὶ ἡ «Φαντασία καὶ Φούγκα» Μπὰχ — Μητρόπουλου. Ἡ Εἰσαγωγὴ «Λεονώρα No 2» ὅπως καὶ ἡ «Τρίτη Λεονώρα», εἶναι δύο ἀριστουργήματα, δύο γιγάντιες συμφωνικὲς εἰσαγωγές, κατάλληλες περισσότερο γιὰ τὶς αἴθουσες συναυλιῶν. Ἡ μία συμπληρώνει τὴν ἄλλη. Ἕνα δράμα μὲ πλῆρες νόημα εἶναι ἡ εἰσαγωγὴ ἀριθ. 2, ἐνῶ ἡ τρίτη «Λεονώρα» ἐμφανίζεται σὰν λυρικὸ ἀπάνθισμα τοῦ μουσικοῦ δράματος «Φιντέλιο». Ὁ μαέστρος Μητρόπουλος ἐξέλεξε τὴ 2η, γιὰ νὰ μᾶς δώσει τὸ ἀπόσταγμα τῆς δραματικῆς ἀτμόσφαιρας τοῦ ἔργου. Ἀπὸ τὰ πρῶτα κιόλας μέτρα μᾶς ἔμπασε στὴν οὐσία τοῦ δράματος. Τὸ μισοσκόταδο τῆς φυλακῆς μὲ τὸ σιωπηλὸ παράπονο τοῦ ἀλυσοδεμένου Φλορεστάν, προβάλλει ἀνάγλυφο. Ποτὲ δὲ μᾶς εἶχε συγκλονίσει τόσο πολὺ τὸ Adajio αὐτῆς τῆς εἰσαγωγῆς, ποὺ μᾶς ὁδηγεῖ σὲ λίγο στὸ φλογισμένο allegro ποὺ ἀκάθεκτα ἐξορμάει. Ἐδῶ ὁ μαέστρος μᾶς ἔδωσε τὰ ἀντιμέτωπα δραματικὰ στοιχεῖα — τὶς ἀντιθέμενες θεματικὲς ἰδέες — σ' ὅλο τὸν τραγικό τους ἀνταγωνισμό. Κι' ὅταν κορυφώθηκε ἡ βιαιότητα τῶν ἀντιθέσεων, ἀκούστηκε ἀπὸ μακρυά, σὰν ἀπολυτρωτικὸ μήνυμα, τὸ σάλπισμα τῆς τρόμπας, ποὺ μᾶς φέρνει λίγο-λίγο στὴ θριαμβευτικὴ καὶ ἀκτινοβόλα κατακλεῖδα τοῦ ἔργου.

Τὴν ἴδια ἑρμηνευτικὴ ἐπιτυχία σημείωσε καὶ ἡ «Συμφωνία ἀριθ. 2» τοῦ Μπετόβεν. Ὁ μαέστρος ἔδω μιᾶς μετέφερε σ' ἄλλους κόσμους. Στὸ γεμᾶτο αἰσιοδοξία αὐτὸ ἔργο, ἀντικαθρεφτίζεται ἡ δύναμη τῆς θέλησης τοῦ Μπετόβεν. Ἀπὸ τὰ σκοτάδια τῆς ἀπελπισίας ποὺ τὸν εἶχαν ρίξει διάφορα θλιβερὰ περιστατικὰ τῆς ζωῆς του — ἰδιαίτερα ἡ πάθηση τῆς ἀκοῆς — κατορθώνει ν' ἀνέβει στὸν ὁλόφωτο ὁρίζοντα τῆς αἰσιοδοξίας. Θἄπρεπε νὰ παρακολουθήσει κανεὶς μὲ ἐντατικὴ προσοχὴ τὴν ἠχητικὴ προβολὴ τοῦ ἔργου, γιὰ νὰ νοιώσει τί θὰ πεῖ ἐμπνευσμένη ἀναδημιουργία μαέστρου καὶ νὰ χαρεῖ ἕνα ὀργανικὸ σύνολο στὴν τελειότητα τῆς μουσικῆς του ἀπόδοσης. Ἄλλο ἐντελῶς πρᾶγμα ἀπ' ὅ,τι συχνὰ μᾶς προσφέρουν μέτριες ἑρμηνεῖες. Καὶ ἡ ἐλάχιστη λεπτομέρεια δοσμένη στὴν ἐντέλεια. Ἀπὸ τὴν ἀρχὴ εἰσαγωγὴ

ΜΠΡΑΜΣ – ΜΗΤΡΟΠΟΥΛΟΣ
ΦΙΛΑΡΜΟΝΙΚΗ ΒΙΕΝΝΗΣ

Τοῦ κ. ΠΕΤΡΟΥ ΠΕΤΡΙΔΗ

Οὐσιαστικώτερη σὲ περιεχόμενο καὶ σὲ ποιότητα ἡ τρίτη συναυλία τῆς Φιλαρμονικῆς τῆς Βιέννης ὑπὸ τὴν διεύθυνσι τοῦ κ. Μητροπούλου. Τὸ πρόγραμμα, ἐξ ὁλοκλήρου ἀφιερωμένο στὸν Μπράμς, παρουσίαζεν ἀγαστὴν ὁμοιογένεια ὕφους, ἐνθερμην ἀτμόσφαιρα, ἀδιάλειπτην ἀλληλουχία πάθους καὶ ποιήσεως, πλεονεκτήματα ὅλα, ποὺ ἔθεσαν τὴ συναυλία σὲ θαυμαστὸ ἐπίπεδο ἀνώτερης πνευματικῆς ἱεροτελεστίας.

Ἡ «Ἀκαδημαϊκὴ Εἰσαγωγὴ» φέρει τίτλο ποὺ ἐπεξηγεῖ τὰ τελούμενα. Τιμηθεὶς ὁ συνθέτης μὲ τὸν βαθμὸ τοῦ Ἐπιτίμου Διδάκτορος τῆς Φιλοσοφίας ἀπὸ τὸ Πανεπιστήμιο τοῦ Μπρέσλαου, ἀνταπέδωσε τὴν ἀκαδημαϊκὴ φιλοφρόνησι γράφοντας, τὸ καλοκαίρι τοῦ 1880, τὴν εἰσαγωγή. Προσφιλῆ φοιτητικὰ τραγούδια παρελαύνουν εὐθυμα, ζωηρά, ἀνάμεσα στὰ ὁποῖα βροντάζει, νομίζω, τὸ πολυθρύλητο «Γκαουντεάμους». Ὁ συμφωνικὸς χειρισμὸς φέρει τὴν σφραγῖδα τῆς ἠθελημένης, σὺμοριστικῆς πανεπιστημιακῆς σοβαροφανείας, ποὺ μετὰ δίας συγκρατεῖται ἀνάμεσα στὶς παρδαλὲς φοιτητικὲς συμπαιγνίες. Ἡ ἐκτέλεσις στάθηκε σφριγηλή, χαρωπή, «κορακιστικά» ἀξιοπρεπὴς ὡς ἐπιτάσσει ὁ «ἀκαδημαϊκὸς» χαρακτὴρ τῆς ὑποθέσεως.

Μὲ τὴν ἀκολουθοῦσα συμφωνία ἀριθ. 3, εἰς φὰ μεῖζον, ὁ κ. Μητρόπουλος ἐγκατέστησε κλίμα εὐφρόσυνης θαλπωρῆς, ποὺ ἀδιάπτωτο περιέβαλε τὸ μαγευμένο ἀκροατήριο ἐπὶ μιάμιση περίπου ὥρα, τὴν διάρκεια δηλαδὴ τῶν δύο συμφωνιῶν. Ὀρμητικὴ κάπως ἀνεπήδησεν ἡ ἀτάκα τοῦ πρώτου μέρους, ἀλλέγκρο κὸν μπριό, σὲ ρυθμὸ ἕξη τετάρτων. Μὲ τὴν εἴσοδο τοῦ δευτέρου θέματος, ποὺ τόσο θελκτικὰ ἐκθέτει ἡ κλαρινέττα, ὁ κατάπληκτικὸς ἀρχιμουσικὸς εἶχε κι ὅλας στὰ στιβαρά του χέρια τὴν ἀπόλυτη κυριαρχία τοῦ συμφωνικοῦ λόγου. Αὐτὴ αὕτη ἡ ὑπέροχη πλαστικότης τῶν θεμάτων τοῦ Μπράμς κατακτᾶ τὸν ἀκροατή. Ἡ ἐκ βαθέων ἑρμηνεία τοῦ κ. Μητροπούλου τοὺς προσδίδει μιὰ πρόσθετη ἀναγλυφικότητα, ποὺ σπάνια ἔχει τὴν καλὴ τύχη νὰ χαίρεται ὁ φιλόμουσος ἀκροατής. Ἀναγλυφικότης «χειροπιαστὴ» θὰ ἔγραφα ἂν δὲν ὑπῆρχε κίνδυνος νὰ ἐκτροχιασθῆ ἡ ἔκφρασις σὲ κοινοτοπία. Στὸ ἑπόμενο μέρος, ἀντάντε, βρίσκουμε τὸν πηγαιότερο Μπράμς. Οἱ δύο κύριοι πόλοι τῆς μουσικῆς τοῦ Βιεννέζου μουσουργοῦ εἶναι τὸ πάθος κι ἡ ποίησις. Ἀντίθετα ὅμως μὲ τοὺς προηγηθέντας ρωμαντικούς, ἕναν Βάγνερ, ἕναν Λίστ, ἕναν Τσαϊκόφσκυ, τὸ πάθος στὸν Μπράμς σπάνια ἐμφανίζεται γυμνό. Συνεστραλμένο σὰν τὸν ἴδιο τὸν συνθέτη, τὸ πάθος τοῦ Μπράμς φέρει πάντα γύρω του τὸ μελαγχολικὸ νεφέλωμα τῆς νοσταλγικῆς, τῆς κάποτε εἰδυλλιακῆς, συχνότερα ἐλεγειακῆς ποιήσεως. Μὲ τὴν σαγηνευτική του μαεστρία διέπλαθεν ὁ κ. Μητρόπουλος ἐναλλὰξ τὸ μὲν ἢ τὴν δέ, πότε ἀνέσκαπτε μὲ δραματικὴν ἔντασι τὸ πάθος τὸ φλογερό, μὰ δὲν ἀργοῦσε νὰ ἁπλώση διάπλατα τὸν Ἰριδίζοντα πέπλο τῆς ποιητικῆς ἐξάρσεως. Ἐναλλαγὴ φαντασμαγορικῆ συμφωνικῶν ὄγκων κι ἐπιπέδων, τὴν ἐναργέστατη διαμόρφωσι τῶν ὁποίων τοῦ προσέφερεν ἄπταιστα κατὰ τὸ ἄριστο τῆς ἐπιδόσεως ἡ θαυμαστὴ φάλαγξ τῶν Βιεννέζων καλλιτεχνῶν.

Τὸ ἀρχικὸ ἀλλέγκρο νὸν τρόπιο τῆς συμφωνίας ἀριθ. 2, σὲ ρὲ μεῖζον, ξεκίνησε σὲ τόνο ἀπαλοῦ μυστηρίου, ποὺ ἦλθε νὰ στεφανώση τὸ ὡραῖο δεύτερο θέμα. Οἱ διεξοδικὲς συμφωνικὲς ἀναπτύξεις, ποὺ στὴν περίπτωσι τοῦ Μπράμς συχνὰ ἐντρυφοῦν σὲ περίπλοκες, κάποτε καὶ στρυφνὲς διαστροφὲς τῆς σαφοῦς θεματικῆς λογικῆς, παρήλασαν διαυγεῖς, εὐχερῶς ἀντιληπτὲς στὴν λογικὴ τους πορεία, πρᾶγμα ποὺ μαρτυρεῖ μὲ πόση βαθειὰ κατανόησι ὁ μαέστρος παρακολουθεῖ τὴν σκέψι τοῦ μουσουργοῦ, τὴν οἰκειοποιεῖται διανοητικὰ κι αἰσθηματικά, τὴν στήνει μὲ πειστικὴν ἀντικειμενικότητα μπρὸς στὸν ἑαυτό του, μπρὸς στὴν ὀρχήστρα καὶ δι' αὐτῆς μπρὸς στὸ ἀκροατήριο. Θὰ παρακάμψουμε τὸ δεύτερο μέρος, ἀντάτζιο κὸν μότο, κείμενο μουσικὸ ὄχι ἐκ τῶν διαπρεπεστέρων τοῦ συνθέτη. Μᾶς ἀνταμείβει μὲ περισσὴ προθυμία ὁ Μπράμς μὲ τὸ τρίτο κομμάτι, τὸ ἀλλεγκρέττο τζιοκόζο, σκάρτσο χαριτωμένο, πετούμενο ἀνάλαφρα στὰ φτερὰ μιᾶς αἰθέριας φαντασίας. Ἐκτέλεσις ἀρίστη, ποὺ θὰ ἐξαπέλυεν ἄμεσο τὸν ἐνθουσιασμὸ ἂν δὲν παραμόνευεν ἡ ἐπιβλητικὴ συνέχεια τοῦ τετάρτου μέρους, ἀλλέγκρο κὸν σπίριτο. Κομμάτι ἀπὸ τὰ σφριγηλότερα ποὺ ἔχει συνθέσει ὁ Μπράμς. Συνεπήραν κυριολεκτικὰ τοὺς ἀκροατὲς ὁ κ. Μητρόπουλος κι ἡ Φιλαρμονική, ἰδίᾳ μὲ τὴν μεγαλειώδη κλίμακα τοῦ ἐπιλόγου.

Ἐκτὸς προγράμματος ἡ εἰσαγωγὴ τοῦ «Τάνχοϊζερ» δὲν ἤρκεσε νὰ κορέση τὴν ἐξαλλη μουσόληπτη βουλιμία τοῦ κοινοῦ. Ἀποθεωτικὲς ἐκδηλώσεις μετὰ ζητωκραυγῶν ἐξέφρασαν τὴν χαρὰ καὶ τὴν εὐγνωμοσύνη τοῦ ἀθηναϊκοῦ κοινοῦ πρὸς τὸν ἐν μεστῇ ὡριμότητι ἀριστεύοντα Ἕλληνα ὀρχηστικὸ, πρὸς τοὺς ἐξόχους μουσικοὺς τῆς Φιλαρμονικῆς Βιέννης, μὲ τὸν λαμπρὸ κ. Μπερνλλὺ στὸ ἀναλόγιο τοῦ πρώτου βιολιοῦ κοντσερτίνου. Τρισευλογημένη ἂς εἶναι πάντα ἡ ἀξιαγάπητη Βιέννη, ποὺ ἐξέθρεψε τοὺς Χάϋντεν, Μότσαρτ, Μπετόβεν, Σοῦμπερτ, Ὄττγκο Βόλφ, Μπρούκνερ, Μπράμς, καὶ ποὺ μᾶς στέλνει σήμερα μιὰν ἀπὸ τὶς ἐκλαμπρότερες ὀρχήστρες, ἔμφορτη μὲ οὐράνια μηνύματα ἀπὸ τὸν κόσμο τῆς θεϊκῆς μας τέννης.

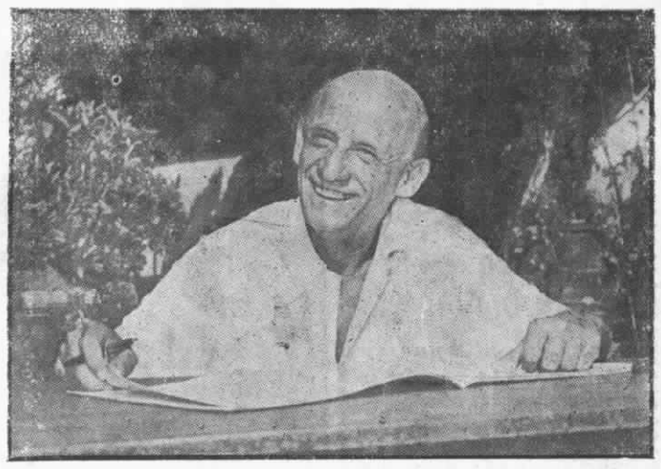
Ο ΜΗΤΡΟΠΟΥΛΟΣ ΑΝΕΧΩΡΗΣΕ ΧΘΕΣ ΤΙ ΕΙΠΕ ΠΡΙΝ ΦΥΓΗ

"ΘΑ ΕΡΧΩΜΑΙ ΣΥΧΝΟΤΕΡΑ"

Ὁ Δημήτρης Μητρόπουλος ἀνεχώρησε χθὲς τὴν νεσημερίαν ἀεροπορικῶς ἐπιστρέφων εἰς Βιέννην. Προηγουμένως τὴν 10ην πρωϊνὴν ἔφυγαν διὰ τὴν αὐστριακὴν πρωτεύουσαν τὰ 99 στελέχη τῆς Φιλαρμονικῆς Ὀρχήστρας τῆς Βιέννης, ποὺ τὸ Σάββατον τὸ βράδυ ἔδωσεν ὑπὸ τὴν διεύθυνσιν τοῦ διασήμου Ἕλληνος ἀρχιμουσικοῦ τὴν προτελευταίαν συναυλίαν της. Καὶ ἡ συναυλία αὐτὴ ἐγνώρισε μοναδικὴν ἐπιτυχίαν, τὸ δὲ πολυπληθὲς Κοινὸν ἐπεφύλαξεν ἀποθεωτικὰς ἐκδηλώσεις εἰς τὸν μεγάλον καλλιτέχνην, ὁ ὁποῖος ἔπαιξε καὶ αὐτὴν τὴν φοράν ἕνα «μπὶς» ἐκτὸς προγράμματος. Πρὸς στιγμὴν μετὰ τὴν ἐκτέλεσιν τῆς εἰσαγωγῆς «Λεονώρας ἀριθ. 2» τοῦ Μπετόβεν ἤρχισε νὰ ψιχαλίζῃ, οἱ μουσικοὶ ἀπεχώρησαν διὰ νὰ προφυλάξουν τὰ ὄργανά των καὶ ἤρχισε νὰ γεννᾶται ἡ ἐντύπωσις ὅτι τὸ κοντσέρτο θὰ διεκόπτετο. Εὐτυχῶς ὅμως τελικῶς ἐδικαιώθησαν τὰ προγνωστικὰ τῆς Μετεωρολογικῆς Ὑπηρεσίας καὶ τὸ κακὸν περιωρίσθη εἰς τὴν ὀλιγόλεπτον ψιγάλα. Συνωνάτης μας, ποὺ συνωμίλησε μὲ τὸν Δημήτρη Μητρόπουλον κατὰ τὴν ἀπογευματινὴν πρόβαν αὐτὴν συναυλίαν τοῦ Σαββάτου, εἶχε τὴν εὐκαιρίαν νὰ διαπιστώσῃ τὴν ζωηρότητα συγκίνησιν τοῦ διασήμου καλλιτέχνου ἀπὸ τὴν ὑποδοχὴν ποὺ τοῦ ἐπεφύλαξε τὸ Κοινὸν τῆς πρωτευούσης.

— Δὲν εἶναι σχῆμα λόγου καὶ τρόπος τοῦ λέγειν, εἶπεν ὁ Δημήτρης Μητρόπουλος, ἐὰν πῶ ὅτι ἡ ὑποδοχὴ τῆς Ἀθήνας θὰ μοῦ μείνῃ ἀξέχαστη. Βέβαια ἐδῶ δινήθυνα μὲ περισσότερη διάθεσι καὶ μὲ μεγαλύτερη συγκίνησι ἀπὸ ἄλλα μέρη, γιατί ἐδῶ εἶναι ὁ τόπος μου, ὁ τόπος ποὺ ἔζησα, μεγάλωσα καὶ εἶχα τὶς πρῶτες καλλιτεχνικὲς ἐμφανίσεις καὶ ἐπιτυχίες μου. Ἀλλὰ ἐκτὸς ἀπὸ αὐτὸν τὸν παράγοντα ἔνοιωσα ἐδῶ καὶ τὸν κόσμο ἀλλοιώτικο. Σ' ὅλα τὰ μέρη τὸ Κοινὸν εἶναι πολὺ θερμὸ καὶ παντοῦ γνωρίζω ὑποδοχὲς πλημμυρισμένες ἀπὸ ζωηρὸ ἐνθουσιασμό. Τὰ χειροκροτήματα ὅμως καὶ οἱ ἐκδηλώσεις τῆς Ἀθήνας εἶχαν κάτι τὸ ξεχωριστὰ ἐγκάρδιο κάτι τὸ ἰδιαίτερο, κάτι ποὺ θὰ μοῦ μείνῃ ἀξέχαστο. Κάτι ποὺ θὰ ἤθελα νὰ ξαναδοκιμάσω γρήγορα...



Καὶ συνέχισεν ὁ Μητρόπουλος:

— Θὰ ξανάρθω. Μπορεῖτε νὰ δώσετε ἀπὸ μέρους μου αὐτὴ τὴν ὑπόσχεσι στὸ ἀγαπημένο αὐτὸ Κοινὸ ποὺ γάρισε τὶς ἀλησμόνητες στιγμὲς ποὺ ἔζησα στὰ τέσσερα κοντσέρτα τοῦ Ὠδείου Ἡρώδου. Δυστυχῶς τοῦ χρόνου εἶμαι τόσο κλεισμένος ποὺ δὲν εἶναι δυνατὸν νὰ εὕρω τὴν εὐκαιρία γιὰ τὴν προσεχῆ αὐτὴν ἐπίσκεψι ποὺ τόσο πολὺ θὰ ἤθελα. Πάντως θὰ ξανάρθω μὲ πρώτη εὐκαιρία ποὺ θὰ ἔρχωμαι — τὸ ὑπόσχομαι κι' αὐτὸ — συχνότερα, ἀφοῦ αὐτὸ εἶναι ἕνα πρᾶγμα ποὺ εἶνει πρῶτα σὲ μένα μεγάλη χαρά..

Προεμφερεῖς δηλώσεις ἔκαμεν ὁ Δημήτρης Μητρόπουλος καὶ εἰς τὸν κύκλον τῶν προσωπικῶν φίλων του, ὁ ὁποῖος τὸν συνώδευσε χθὲς καὶ τὸν ἀπεχαιρέτησεν εἰς τὸ ἀεροδρόμιον τοῦ Ἑλληνικοῦ κατὰ τὴν ἀναχώρησίν του διὰ Βιέννην. Ἐκ μέσου τοῦ Φεστιβὰλ

MITROPOULOS... SOME RECOLLECTIONS OF A LIFE-LONG FRIENDSHIP

By Trudy Goth

It was in the middle twenties that Mitropoulos entered my family's home and, though a mere child then, I remember the young, thin, shy Greek student who came to play the piano, four hands, with Bela Bartok, the Hungarian composer, who had just started to attract the attention of the progressive musical world, especially in Berlin — in those years the center of new, unusual, fascinating music.

Bartok was used to making his own piano arrangements of his orchestral scores, but he was at a loss to find a partner sufficiently familiar with his technique. He had asked my mother — a composition student of his and a close friend of Feruccio Busoni the eminent Italian composer and master pianist — to find someone who could muster the necessary qualifications, and the Master mentioned the name of a young, shy, close-mouthed Greek student of his who had the knack for performing anything, however impracticable or crazy.

Bartok sat down with him at the piano rather skeptically. After a dozen bars he stopped and said quietly: «This man is all right, he will go far.»

This was the beginning of a long friendship, which — although interrupted by many separations and our meeting again only after I had well outgrown children's clothes and habits, — has lasted until this day.

After completing his studies in Germany — which laid the foundations of his manifold musical activities and developing the phenomenal memory which has remained an object of marvel to all — Mitropoulos returned to his native country and (except for occasional visits to Italy where we were then living and where he conducted several orchestras,) little was heard of him.

TO U.S.A.

Everyone knows how the call to lead the Minneapolis Symphony in the USA, which he developed into one of the outstanding orchestras of the country, made him rise eventually to the position as artistic director of the New York Philarmonic. Few know that in order to follow the Minneapolis invitation in 1938, when the war scare had gripped Europe and American tourists were feeling home in drives, Mitropoulos got a special pass to board the ship and was assigned a matress in the ship's ballroom my special arrangement of the U.S.A. Embassy. Significantly enough this matress was placed under the Ship's grand piano — and that is how the Maestro reached the shores of the country which was to be his home for the next twenty and more years to come.

With ever-growing success Mitropoulos performed thousand of concert programs of old and new music — sometimes too new for the taste of those who are watching the reaction of the public which buys its tickets for unruffled enjoyment.

As of this year the Maestro has resigned from the post in New York which he held for many years, in order to devote more time to conducting opera and some of the orchestras abroad who have been clamoring for him (as well as the public in many an internationally renowned center for music making.) His latest ttriumphal visit to Israel, in which he conducted twenty performances in four weeks, has been greeted in the Holy Land in such a way as can only a people to whom music seems to be of no less importance than daily bread.

PERSONAL HYPNOTISM

The uniform enthusiasm for the Maestro is not alone due to his deep musical knowledge, his fiery temperament and exhausting devotion to his work, but also to the human qualities which make him beloved, adored and respected everywhere. When he raises his baton, no other conductor seems able to so hypnotize his orchestra with his own passion and fervor.

The fame of Dimitri Mitropoulos as an exceptionally generous personality has spread wide and far — and at times too far. His magnanimity in helping young musicians to make their way, oi contributing everywhere he senses a real need, produces the strangest appeals for assistance. Musicians of all kinds, ages, qualifications ask for financial help, for pianos, violins or trombones (a letter once said: music and flowers are the greatest thing God has created, but the flowers you can admire everywhere whereas to study music you need a piano; could you please send me a piano, even if it is a second hand one...?) and letters of introduction and — of course! — for examination of their compositions in the hope that they might be deemed worthy by the Maestro to be performed in his concerts.

Reporters pester him for interviews; photographers, painters and sculptors for sittings; people of all kinds and ages for autographs and the opportunity to make his acquaintance.

THE LEGEND

His somewhat ascetic face and stature. his deep interest in S. Francis of Assisi, his reverence for religion — all have given rise to legends of his monastic inclinations. Sensational tabloid papers and illustrated magazines have described him as disdaining all earthly goods, practising self-abnegation in front of any pleasures, and living in a cell furnished only with an iron bedstead, a piano and a candle.

Other legends tell of a fabulous income which is given away to charitable institutions in such a way that the donor himself has to depend on the charity of friends. There is a continuous stream of letters asking for donations of money to build chapels or orphan homes («Over which your name in gold will be resplendent as well as in the heart of those who pass its doors») or creation centers («so that the percentage of communists may decrease as it will in a village which has a movie house and a pool room»)...

In all honesty it must be said that Mitropoulos, wherever his complete dedication to work and his discipline allows it, partakes of the pleasures of living, enjoying particularly choice food in considerable quantities, well cut clothes and reasonable comfort of living.

WISH FULFILLED

The applause which greeted the Maestro at his first appearance at the Herodus Atticus Theater should have convince him once again of the appreciation of Athens music lovers and the pride everyone feels in having back the native son who brought so much fame and recognition to his country. Mitropoulos himself is fullfilling an old wish: to bring his music-making back to Athens and in the shadow of the Acropolis.

Ο ΔΗΜΗΤΡΗΣ ΜΗΤΡΟΠΟΥΛΟΣ ΚΑΙ Η ΦΙΛΑΡΜΟΝΙΚΗ ΤΗΣ ΒΙΕΝΝΗΣ

ΤΗΣ κ. ΑΛΕΞΑΝΔΡΑΣ ΛΑΛΑΟΥΝΗ

Ἦταν ἕνα ὄνειρο αὐτὸ ποὺ ζήσαμε τέσσερης βραδυές, τέσσερης εὐλογημένες βραδυές: Ἡ Βιέννη, ἡ πολυαγαπημένη καὶ χιλιονοσταλγημένη Βιέννη μᾶς ἔστελνε τὴν φημισμένη της «Ὀρχήστρα τῶν Φιλαρμόνικερ» κι' ἦταν στιγμὲς ποὺ θαρροῦσα πὼς βρισκόμουνα χρόνια πίσω, ἐκεῖ, στὴ σάλα τοῦ Μπουζίκφεράϊν» ἢ τοῦ «Κοντσερτχάουζ», μπροστὰ στὴ λαμπρὴ φάλαγγα τῶν ἴδιων αὐτῶν μουσικῶν, περιμένοντας τὴν ἐμφάνισι τοῦ μαέστρου, τοῦ μάγου πού, ἐξορκίζοντας ἄγνωστες, μυστηριώδεις δυνάμεις πάνω ἀπ' τὴν ὀρχήστρα του, θὰ ξεσήκωνε κι' αὐτὴν κι' ἐμᾶς ὡς τὸν οὐρανό...

Οἱ ἴδιοι μουσικοί ; Ἔ, ναί, μέσα σὲ εἴκοσι ἑπτά, σὲ τριάντα χρόνια, τὰ πρόσωπα ἀλλάζουν— μήπως δὲν ἄλλαξαν μέσ' στὰ ἑκατὸ τόσα χρόνια ποὺ ἀριθμεῖ ἡ ζωὴ αὐτῆς τῆς ὀρχήστρας; Ἀλλὰ τί σημασία ἔχουν τὰ πρόσωπα... Ὅσο κι' ἂν ἀλλάζουν, ὅσο κι' ἂν οἱ νέοι διαδέχονται τοὺς παληούς, εἶναι πάντα τὸ ἴδιο πνεῦμα ποὺ τοὺς ὁδηγεῖ καὶ τοὺς ἐμπνέει, εἶναι πάντα ἡ μεγάλη Βιεννέζικη παράδοσις, γύρω τους καὶ μέσ' στὴν ψυχή τους ζοῦν ὁλοζώντανες οἱ μορφὲς τῶν Χάϋντ καὶ Μότσαρτ, Σοῦμπερτ καὶ Μπετόβεν, Μπράμς καὶ Μπροῦκνερ καὶ Μάλερ καὶ τόσων ἄλλων μουσικῶν ποὺ χάρισε στὸν κόσμο ἡ ἀθάνατη Βιέννη. Ποιὰ ὀρχήστρα στὸν κόσμο μπορεῖ νὰ καυχηθῇ πὼς πλάστηκε ἀπὸ τέτοια παράδοσι, πὼς κρατάει τέτοια περίλαμπρη κληρονομιά;

Ζαρωμένη σὲ μιὰ γωνιὰ τοῦ Ὠδείου Ἡρώδου, τσιμπώντας ἀπὸ συγκίνησι, ἀναπολοῦσα τοὺς μεγάλους ἀρχιμουσικοὺς ποὺ ἀξιώθηκα νὰ χαρῶ ἐπὶ κεφαλῆς τῶν «Φιλαρμόνικερ»: Ἕναν Ρίχαρντ Στράους, Ἕναν Φουρτβαῒνγκλερ, Ἕναν Μπροῦνο Βάλτερ, Ἕναν Κλέμενς Κράους... Καὶ τώρα θὰ ἦταν ὁ Ἕλληνας, τὸ δοξασμένο παιδὶ τῆς Ἀθήνας, ὁ Δημήτρης Μητρόπουλος ποὺ θὰ κρατοῦσε στὰ χέρια του αὐτὸ τὸ θαυμάσιο σύνολο. Καὶ ἡ συγκίνησίς μου γινόταν ἀκόμα πιὸ βαθειά...

Καὶ κράτησε ἀληθινὰ στὰ χέρια του ὅλο αὐτὸ τὸ πολυπρόσωπο σύνολο ὁ Μητρόπουλος, κάτω ἀπ' τὴν ἐπιβολὴ τῆς προσωπικότητάς του, ἠλεκτρίζοντας τοὺς μουσικούς του, μεταβάλλοντάς τους σ' ἕνα καὶ μόνο ὄργανο, πειθήνιο στὶς παραμικρὲς του θελήσεις, στὶς πιὸ παραμικρές του προθέσεις. Δὲν νομίζω πὼς ἔνοιωσα ποτὲ τέτοια ἄμεση ψυχικὴ ἐπαφὴ μαέστρου καὶ μουσικῆς, ἀλλὰ καὶ ἀκροατῶν.

Κάθε ἐκτέλεσις τοῦ Μητρόπουλου εἶναι καὶ μιὰ ἀναδημιουργία. Ἔργα χιλιοπαιγμένα καὶ γνωστότατα παίρνουν καινούργια ὄψι, ἔτσι ὅπως ὁ ἀρχιμουσικὸς εἰσχωρεῖ σὲ κάθε λεπτο μέρεια, φωτίζει κάθε μυστικὴ γωνιά, ξεδιπλώνει κι' ἀναπλάθει τὶς πιὸ μύνιες σκέψεις, τὰ πιὸ κρυφὰ αἰσθήματα τοῦ δημιουργοῦ τους, βάζοντας ὡς τόσο παντοῦ τὴ σφραγῖδα τῆς δικῆς του προσωπικότητας. Κι' αὐτὸ εἶναι τὸ μυστικὸ τοῦ μεγάλου ἑρμηνευτῆ: νἄναι πιστὸς στὸ κείμενο καὶ ὅμως ἡ ἑρμηνεία του νἄναι προσωπικὴ καὶ πειστική.

Μᾶς ἔδωσε Ἕναν Μπετόβεν— Λεονώρα ἀριθ. 2 καὶ 2η Συμφωνία — μὲ μιὰ νέα, ἄγνωστη λάμψι, μὲ μιὰ πνοὴ ρωμαντισμοῦ ποὺ ἴσως δὲν θὰ φανταζόμασταν ποτὲ στὸν κλασικὸ Μπετόβεν, ἀλλὰ καὶ μὲ τόση λογικὴ καὶ συνέπεια ποὺ μᾶς ἔπειθε ἀπόλυτα καὶ μᾶς συγκλόνιζε.

Ὁ Μπράμς δὲν εἶχε πιὰ κανένα μυστικό, καμμιὰ στρυφνότητα, τίποτα τὸ περίπλοκο. Ὅλα ξεδιπλώνονταν ὁλόφωτα, τυλιγμένα ὡς τόσο μὲ τὸν ἀνάλαφρο ἐκεῖνον πέπλο τῆς μελαγχολίας ποὺ χαρακτηρίζει γενικὰ τὸν Μπράμς, Ἕναν πέπλο ποὺ ἐσκίζεται ὅμως ἀπὸ ἐκρήξεις πάθους, ἑνὸς πάθους συγκρατημένου ποὺ ξαναθρίζει στὴν πιὸ λεπτὴ εἰδυλλιακὴ καὶ συχνὰ ἐλεγειακὴ ποίησι. Χαρούμενη καὶ ζωντανὴ δόθηκε ἡ «Ἀκαδημαϊκὴ Εἰσαγωγὴ» γραμμένη ἀπὸ τὸν Μπράμς τὸ 1880 σὰν προσφορὰ εὐχαριστήρια γιὰ τὸ Πανεπιστήμιο τοῦ Μπρεσλάου ποὺ τὸν εἶχε ἀνακηρύξει ἐπίτιμο διδάκτορά του. Στὶς Συμφωνίες ἀριθ. 3 καὶ 2, ἦταν κάτι τὸ πρωτάκουστο ὁ τρόπος ποὺ ὁ Μητρόπουλος ἀνάδειχνε ἀνάγλυφα τὰ θέματα ἀνάμεσα ἀπ' τὸ συμφωνικό τους πλέγμα, πλάθοντας τὸν ἦχο μὲ μοναδικὴ πληρότητα καὶ ὁμορφιὰ συνεπαίρνοντας τὴν ὀρχήστρα του πότε σὲ δραματικὰ ξεσπάσματα καὶ πότε σὲ ποιητικὲς ἐξάρσεις.

Καὶ τί θὰ μποροῦσε νὰ πῇ κανεὶς γιὰ τὶς ἑρμηνεῖες τοῦ Στράους... Δὲν φαντάζομαι τὸ Συμφωνικὸ ποίημα «Δὸν Ζουὰν» νὰ μπορῇ νὰ δοθῇ μὲ περισσότερο πάθος καὶ περισσότερη ποιητικὴ ὁρμή, οὔτε τὸ ἄλλο, τὸ «Θάνατος καὶ Ἐξαύλωσις» μὲ περισσότερη ὑποβλητικὴ δύναμι. Στὸ ἴδιο αὐτὸ πρόγραμμα, ὁ Μητρόπουλος μᾶς ἔδωσε κι' Ἕνα Ἔργο λιγώτερο γνωστὸ στοὺς νεώτερους, τὴν «Συμφωνία Ντομέστικα», Ἔργο τόσο χαρακτηριστικὸ τοῦ Στράους (ἀνάλυσι εἶχα δώσει πρὶν μέρες σ' αὐτὴν ἐδῶ τὴ στήλη) ὅπου ἡ ποίησις διαδάχεται τὸ χιοῦμορ, ἡ τρυφερότης τὴ λεπτὴ εἰρωνεία, ὁ λυρισμὸς τὸ πάθος, μέσα σ' Ἕναν ἀφάνταστο συμφωνικὸ πλοῦτο, σὲ μύρια ἠχητικὰ χρώματα —ἡ τέχνη τοῦ Στράους—καὶ ποὺ ὁ Μητρόπουλος μὲ τὴν λαμπρή του ὀρχήστρα ἔδωσε μιὰ πλαστικωτάτη καὶ ἐκφραστικώτατη ἑρμηνεία. Στὸ ἴδιο αὐτὸ πρόγραμμα, ὑπείκοντας στὶς ἀπαιτήσεις τοῦ κόσμου ποὺ παραληροῦσε ἀπὸ ἐνθουσιασμό, ὁ Μητρόπουλος μᾶς ἔδωσε κι' ἕνα μέρος ἀπ' τὴ μουσικὴ τραγωδία «Σαλώμη» τοῦ Στράους, τὸ «Χορὸ τῆς Σαλώμης», ἐξαπολύοντας ὠιεανοὺς πάθους, δίνοντας ὅλον τὸν δαιμονικὸ χαρακτῆρα αὐτῆς τῆς μουσικῆς κι' ὅλη της τὴν τραγικότητα.

Ἀπομένει νὰ μιλήσω γιὰ τὴν «Ἐξαϋλωμένη Νύχτα» τοῦ Σέμπεργκ — ποὺ πλατειὰ της ἀνάλυσι ἔδωσε ἐπίσης — καὶ γιὰ τὴ μεταγραφὴ τῆς «Χρωματικῆς Φαντασίας καὶ Φούγκας» τοῦ Μπὰχ σὲ σόλ ἐλάσσονα ἀπὸ τὸν ἴδιο τὸν Μητρόπουλο. Παιδὶ τῆς Βιέννης καὶ ὁ Σέμπεργκ, στὸ νεανικό του αὐτὸ ἔργο, κάτω ἀκόμα ἀπ' τὴν ἐπιρροὴ τοῦ Βάγκνερ, ἐμπνευσμένος ἀπὸ Ἕνα ποίημα τοῦ Ντέμελ, περιγράφει μιὰ φεγγαρόλουστη νύχτα μέσα σ' ἕνα παγωμένο δάσος ὅπου δυὸ θνητοί, Ἕνας ἄντρας καὶ μιὰ γυναῖκα, ἐξαϋλώνονται μὲ τὴν ἀγάπη ποὺ συγχωρεῖ καὶ συμφιλιώνει. Μιὰ μουσικὴ ὅλη φλόγα καὶ συγκίνησι, ἕνας κόσμος ἀπὸ αἰσθήματα, ποὺ βρίσκει στὸν Μητρόπουλο τὸν πιὸ ἰδεώδη ἑρμηνευτή.

Ὅσο γιὰ τὴν μεταγραφὴ τοῦ ἔργου τοῦ Μπάχ, πρέπει ν' ἀναγνωρίσω πὼς ὁ μεγαλοφυὴς μαέστρος τὸ ἀντιμετώπισε μὲ τὸν πιὸ μεγαλοφυῆ τρόπο πλαταίνοντας τὰ θέματα καὶ μεταβάλλοντας τὴν ὀρχήστρα του σ' ἕνα τεράστιο ἐκκλησιαστικὸ ὄργανο, μὲ μιὰ ἀφάνταστη ποικιλία χρωμάτων. Παραξενεύει, ἴσως, ἡ ἰδέα τῆς μεταγραφῆς ἑνὸς τέτοιου ἔργου ποὺ γράφτηκε ἀρχικὰ γιὰ ἐκκλησιαστικὸ ὄργανο. Ἀλλὰ ὅταν τ' ἀκούς δοσμένο ἀπ' τὸν Μητρόπουλο καὶ τὴν διεννέζικη ὀρχήστρα, κάμπτεσαι μπροστὰ στὸ μεγαλεῖο του καὶ παρακολουθεῖς ἐκθαμβος αὐτὴ τὴ θύελλα τῶν ἤχων τέλεια ἐξουθενωμένος. Περιττὸ νὰ πῶ τί θύελλα ἐνθουσιασμοῦ ξεσήκωσε, τόσο στὴν πρώτη συναυλία, ὅσο καὶ στὴν τελευταία ποὺ ὁ Μητρόπουλος τὸ ξανάδωσε ὡς «μπίς». Μὰ πῶς ξέχασα καὶ τὴν ὑπέροχη ἐρμηνεία τῆς εἰσαγωγῆς τοῦ Ταγκόϋζερ» ποὺ δόθηκε ἐκτὸς προγράμματος μετὰ τὸν Μπράμς;... Ἆ!, ἡ Ἀθήνα δὲν θὰ ξενάση αὐτὲς τὶς τέσσερης μαγικὲς βραδυὲς καὶ θὰ παρακαλῇ νὰ τὶς ξαναζήση, νὰ ξαναϊδῇ γρήγορα τὸν δοξασμένο μας μαέστρο Δημήτρη Μητρόπουλο.

ΕΝΤΥΠΩΣΕΙΣ...

Στὸ δρόμο ΤΗΣ ΖΩΗΣ

Μὲ τὴν παρουσία τοῦ Δημήτρη Μητροπούλου καὶ τῆς Φιλαρμονικῆς τῆς Βιέννης στὴν Ἀθήνα, ζήσαμε τέσσερις μέρες μέσα σὲ μιὰν ἔντονη μουσικὴ ἀπόλαυσι. Κι' εἶναι φυσικὸ ἡ συζήτησι νὰ συνεχίζεται γιὰ καιρὸ ἀκόμα γύρω ἀπὸ ἕνα γεγονὸς ποὺ μᾶς ἄφησε μιὰν ἀνάμνησι τόσο βαθειὰ καὶ ζωηρή.

Ὑπάρχουν τόσες ἐντυπώσεις ποὺ ζητᾶν νὰ ξεχυθοῦν στὸ χαρτὶ καὶ ποὺ θὰ μποροῦσαν νὰ καλύψουν ἕνα χῶρο πολὺ μεγαλύτερο ἀπ' αὐτῆς τῆς στήλης.

Καὶ πρῶτα-πρῶτα θάθελα νὰ ρωτήσω, θυμᾶται ἄραγε κανένας πολλὰ περιστατικὰ ποὺ νὰ συναντήσαν τέτοια ὁμοφωνία στὸν τόπο μας;

«Ἡ ἐθνικὴ περηφάνεια — εἶπε κάποιος προσπαθώντας νὰ ἐξηγήσῃ τὸ φαινόμενο — δὲν εἶναι μικρὸ πρᾶγμα, βλέπετε, ἕνας ἀπὸ τοὺς δυό-τρεῖς μεγάλους μαέστρους τοῦ κόσμου νὰ εἶναι "Ἕλληνας».

Νομίζω ὅμως πὼς πέρα κι' ἀπ' αὐτό, εἶναι κάτι ἀκόμα βαθύτερο, κάτι πανανθρώπινο, ποὺ μᾶς κράτησε ἔτσι ἑνωμένους αὐτὴ τὴ φορά.

Στὴ χαρὰ ἀποδίδει ὁ Σίλλερ τὴ δύναμι ν' ἀδελφώνῃ τοὺς λαούς. Κι' ἡ Μουσικὴ σὰν ἔρχεται ἔτσι ἁγνὴ κι' ὁλοκάθαρη, Χαρὰ εἶναι π' ἀγγίζει τοὺς ἀνθρώπους μὲ τὸ μαγικὸ φτερό της γιὰ νὰ τοὺς κάνῃ ἀδέλφια.

Δὲν εἶχε παρὰ νὰ προσέξῃ κανένας τὰ πρόσωπα γύρω του. Κουρασμένα, μὲ τὶς σκιὲς ποὺ σχεδιάζει ἡ ἔγνοια τῆς καθημερινῆς ζωῆς, στηνάρχη τῆς συναυλίας, πλημμύριζαν φῶς καὶ χαμογέλαγαν τὸ ἕνα στ' ἄλλο, μετὰ τὸ τέλος τοῦ πρώτου κι' ὅλας κομματιοῦ.

Ἀλήθεια, περισσότερο κι' ἀπ' τὰ χειροκροτήματα κι' ἀπ' τὶς ἐπευφημίες κι' ἀπ' αὐτὲς τὶς ἐξαλλες φωνές. Ἡ ἔκφρασι πάνω στὰ πρόσωπα ἔδινε τὸ μέτρο τοῦ ἐνθουσιασμοῦ, τῆς μαγείας..

Αὐτὴ φανέρωνε τὴν ἀναστάτωσι ποὺ εἶχε γίνει στὸν ψυχικὸ κόσμο τοῦ καθενός. Θἄλεγες πὼς τὰ κύματα τῆς μουσικῆς περνώντας μέσα μας εἶχαν παρασύρει ὅλες τὶς κακίες καὶ τὶς μικρότητες. Καὶ τώρα, ἔτσι δίχως λόγο, γνωστοὶ κι' ἄγνωστοι κυττάζαμε ὁ ἕνας τὸν ἄλλο μ' ἀγάπη, μὲ καλωσύνη.

Κι' ἔτσι ἕνα παράξενο «κύκλωμα» εἶχε σχηματισθῆ. Τὸ ἀκροατήριο ξανάστελνε πίσω στὸν ἀρχιμουσικὸ τὴ μαγνητικὴ ἐπίδρασι ποὺ εἶχε δεχθῆ ἀπὸ κεῖνον τὸν ἴδιο, διὰ μέσου τῆς ὀρχήστρας.

Γιατὶ εἶναι βέβαιο πὼς αὐτὴ ἡ «ἀνταπόκρισι» ἐκ μέρους τοῦ Ἑλληνικοῦ κοινοῦ εἶχε κατασυγκινήσει τὸ Μητρόπουλο καὶ τὸν ἔκανε νὰ ξεπεράσῃ τὸν ἑαυτό του, θὰ μποροῦσε νὰ πῇ κανείς. Ἂν καὶ δίχως ἀμφιβολία ἔχει συμβῆ καὶ κάτι ἄλλο ἀκόμα, ποὺ οἱ ἑρμηνεῖες του πρὶν λίγα χρόνια δὲν θὰ μᾶς ἄφηναν νὰ τὸ φαντασθοῦμε : Ὁ Μητρόπουλος ἐξελίσσεται πάντοτε. Σὰν γνήσιος καλλιτέχνης, ποὺ δὲν μένει ποτὲ ἀπόλυτα ἱκανοποιημένος ἀπ' τὸν ἑαυτό του, δὲν σταματάει πουθενά.

«Ὅλο πιὸ ψηλὰ πρέπει ν' ἀνεβαίνω
Ὅλο πιὸ μακρυὰ πρέπει νὰ βλέπω»

εἶπε ὁ Γκαῖτε.

Κι' ὁ ὑπέροχος Ἕλληνας ἀρχιμουσικὸς εἶναι μιὰ ζωντανὴ ἑρμηνεία αὐτῶν τῶν στίχων.

«Η ΦΩΝΗ ΤΟΥ ΠΕΙΡΑΙΩΣ»

ΔΙΑΦΟΡΑ ΜΟΥΣΙΚΑ ΝΕΑ

Ο ΔΗΜΗΤΡΗΣ ΜΗΤΡΟΠΟΥΛΟΣ

ΤΟΥ κ. ΙΩΑΝΝΟΥ ΓΙΑΝΝΟΥΛΗ

Ἐπὶ τέσσερα βράδυα, τὴν περασμένη βδομάδα, ἡ μητέρα τῶν Τεχνῶν καὶ τῆς ρητορικῆς, ἡ γεννήτρα τῆς φιλοξενείας, τῶν ξακουστῶν πνευμάτων καὶ τοῦ φωτὸς, ἡ Ἀθήνα μας, ἔζησε τὸ πιὸ καταπληκτικὸ καὶ ἐπιβλητικὸ καλλιτεχνικὸ γεγονὸς, ποὺ γνώρισε ἀπὸ τῆς συστάσεώς της.

Ὁ ἐρχομὸς στὴν πρωτεύουσα ἑνὸς μεγαλοφυοῦς φλογεροῦ ὁδηγοῦ, ἑνὸς φιλοσόφου τῆς τέχνης τῶν ἤχων καὶ τῶν ρυθμῶν, ἑνὸς ἡμίθεου τῆς μπαγκέττας, καθὼς εἶνε ὁ Δημήτρης Μητρόπουλος καὶ τῆς ἀρχαιοτάτης φιλαρμονικῆς ὀρχήστρας τῆς Βιέννης, ποὺ θεωρεῖται σήμερα σὰν μιὰ ἀπὸ τὶς καλύτερες συμφωνικὲς ἀρχῆστρες τῆς Εὐρώπης, ἦτανε τὸ μεγάλο γεγονὸς, ποὺ δημιούργησε τὴν γιγάντια καὶ ἐκπληκτικὴ ἐντύπωση καὶ τὴν ἀτμόσφαιρα ἀποθεώσεως στὸν ἱερὸ χῶρο τῆς ὀρχήστρας τοῦ ἀρχαίου μας Ὠδείου, κάτω ἀπὸ τὴν σκιὰ τῆς Ἀκροπόλεως καὶ τὶς χρυσωμένες κολῶνες τοῦ Παρθενῶνα, σιμὰ στὴν Πνύκα, ποὺ ἐκήρυξε ὁ Ἀπόστολος τῶν ἐθνῶν Παῦλος.

Ἔτσι καὶ ὁ μάγος τῆς μπαγκέττας Μητρόπουλος, σὰν ἄλλος Παῦλος, μᾶς διδάσκει τὴ δική του θρησκεία καὶ μᾶς προσφέρει — ἀρχιερεὺς αὐτὸς καὶ συλλειτουργοὶ οἱ ἑκατὸ «συνάδελφοί του», οἱ ἐκτελεσταί του — τὴν ἁγια κοινωνία καὶ τ' ὀβάντίδωρο καὶ μᾶς μεταρσιώνει καὶ μᾶς κάνει νὰ νοιώθουμε τὴν πιὸ ἰδανική, τὴν πιὸ ἐξαϋλωμένη θρησκευτικὴ ἀνάταση, μὲ τὴν ἀπροσμέτρητη αὐτὴ μουσικὴ ἀπόλαυση, ποὺ μᾶς χαρίζει.

Ἱεροτελεστεία...

Ὅμως, μιὰ τέτοια ἱεροτελεστεία, μιὰ ἀληθινὴ θρησκευτικὴ τελετουργία, ποὺ συχνὰ μᾶς δημιουργοῦσε τὴν ἐντύπωση, ὅτι προσευχόμεθα σὲ χῶρο ἐκκλησιαστικό, δὲν δέχεται κριτική. Γιατὶ κάτι τέτοιο θὰ ἦτανε μιὰ ἀσυγχώρητη ἀσέβεια. Μιὰ ἱερὴ συλεία.

Ὁ Μητρόπουλος, ὁ μάγος τῆς μαγκέττας, ποὺ μὲ τὰ ρυθμικά του σχήματα μαγνητίζει καὶ παρασύρει μουσικοὺς καὶ ἀκροατήρια καὶ τοὺς κάνει νὰ νοιώθουν τὸ αἴσθημα τοῦ καλλιτεχνικοῦ σεισμοῦ, ὁ ὑπερούσιος ἀναδημιουργὸς, ποὺ ἀγάπησε τοὺς ἀνθρώπους καὶ θέλει νὰ τοὺς παρηγορῇ καὶ νὰ δροσίζῃ τὶς φλογισμένες καρδιές τους, δὲν μπορεῖ νὰ κρυβῇ στὴν Ἀθήνα.

Ὁ Ἡμίθεος τῆς μπαγκέττας, ὁ φλογερὸς ὁδηγὸς, καθηλώνει, ἐξευγενίζει, μαγεύει καὶ μεταρσιώνει,μὲ τὴν ἀπεριόριστη γοητεία, ποὺ ἀσκεῖ ἡ προσωπικότης του, μὲ τὴν λεπτότητα, τὴν διαύγεια, τὴ βαθειὰ κατανόηση, τὴν ἀγάπη καὶ τὴ φλόγα κάθε ἑρμηνείας του, ποὺ εἶνε γεμάτη ποίηση, θελκτικότητα, φῶς, μαγεία.

Ἡ φλογερὴ ἰδιοσυγκρασία τοῦ χειμαρρώδους ὁδηγοῦ, τοῦ ἀγαπημένου τῶν ὡεῶν, μᾶς ὁδηγεῖ καὶ ἐπικοινωνοῦμε μὲ τὸν Θεό!

Καὶ ὕστερα, ἡ ὀρχήστρα. Τὸ θαυμάσιο αὐτὸ συμφωνικὸ σύνολο, ποὺ ἀριθμεῖ μιὰ μακρὰ ζωὴ 113 χρόνων — ἱδρύθηκε ἀπὸ τὸν Ὄττο Νικολάϊ στὶς 20 Μαρτίου 1842 — καὶ ποὺ τὰ παράδοση εἶνε οἱ ἐκτελεσταί της ν' ἀκολουθοῦν ἀπὸ πατέρα σὲ παιδὶ κι' ἀπὸ παιδὶ σ' ἐγγόνι, πόση ἁρμονία, πόση γλυκύτητα, πόση μαγεία δὲν παράγουν τὰ ἔγχορδα καὶ πόσο ἁρμονικὸ τραγοῦδι δὲν μᾶς χαρίζουν τὰ ξύλινα καὶ χάλκινα πνευστά...Καὶ τὰ βαθύμολπα κόντρα - μπάσα καὶ τὰ κρουστά, τί ἦχο δὲν ἐκπέμπουν, τί ρυθμό... Πόσον κάλλος!

Ὁ ἀσυναγώνιστος ἀρχιμουσικὸς μᾶς χαρίζει ἔργα Μπετόβεν : Λεονώρα ἀρ. 2 καὶ Συμφωνία ἀρ. 2 καὶ μᾶς ἀποκαλύπτει ὁλόκληρους θησαυρούς. Μᾶς μαγεύει καὶ μᾶς συνεπαίρνει κυριολεκτικὰ μὲ τὰ μουσουργήματα τοῦ μεγάλου τραγουδιστὴ Μπράμς : Ἀκαδημαϊκὴ Εἰσαγωγὴ καὶ Συμφωνίε- 3 καὶ 2. Ὁ μεγάλος μαέστρος ἀναδημιουργεῖ, ἀναπλάσσει καὶ ἐκπλήσσει μὲ τὴν ἀποκάλυψη ὅλου τοῦ μεγαλεῖου καὶ τῆς ποιήσεως τῶν ἄγνωστων αὐτῶν θησαυρῶν — σελίδων τοῦ μεγαλοφυοῦς Μπράμς.

Ἀπὸ τὴν δεξίωσιν τοῦ πρέσβεως τῆς Αὐστρία- κ. Πράντερ εἰς τὸ ἐντευκτήριον τοῦ Α.Ο. Κηφισίας, πρὸς τιμὴν τοῦ διασήμου μαέστρου καὶ τῶν μελῶν τῆς Φιλαρμονικῆς τῆς Βιέννης. Εἰς τὴν φωτογραφίαν μας ὁ ἡμίθεος τῆς μπαγκέττας Δ. Μητρόπουλος (δεξιὰ) καὶ ὁ μουσικολογικὸς συνεργάτης μας κ. Ι. Γιαννούλης, ἔχοντες εἰς τὸ μέσον τὴν δίδα Γιώτα Γιαννούλη.

Στὴ συνέχεια τῶν ἐκδηλώσεων αὐτῶν τοῦ ἐφετεινοῦ Φεστιβάλ, χαιρόμαστε μὲ τὴν καρδιά μας καὶ συνθέσεις Ριχάρδου Στράους : «Ντὸν Ζουὰν», «Θάνατος καὶ ἐξαΰλωσις»— συμφωνικὰ ποιήματα — καὶ «Συμφωνία Ντομέστικα» (Οἰκιακὴ Συμφωνία). Ἐδῶ ὁ ζωοδότης «μαίτρ» τῆς μπαγκέττας ἀντιμετωπίζει ἕνα δαιδαλώδη ρυθμικὸ λαβύρινθον, κυκεῶνα μετατονισμῶν, καὶ ἀπειρία γραφικῶν ἐναλλαγῶν καὶ ἀντιθέσεων καὶ καταυγάζει μὲ ἄπλετο φῶς ὅλα τὰ «ἐφεῦρε» καὶ τοὺς θησαυροὺς τῆς περίφημης τεχνοτροπίας τοῦ Στράους.

Χαρήκαμε, ὅμως, ἀκόμη τὴν «Νύχτα ἐξαϊλώσεως» τοῦ Σένμπεργκ, γιὰ τὴν ὁποία, μαζὶ μὲ τὴν «Συμφωνία Ντομέστικα» θὰ μιλήσω σ' ἕνα ἄλλο σημείωμά μου, τὴν εἰσαγωγὴ στὸν «Ταγχώϋζερ» τοῦ Βάγνερ, τὴ «Φαντασία καὶ Φούγκα» τοῦ Μπάχ, σὲ ἐνορχήστρωση Μητρόπου

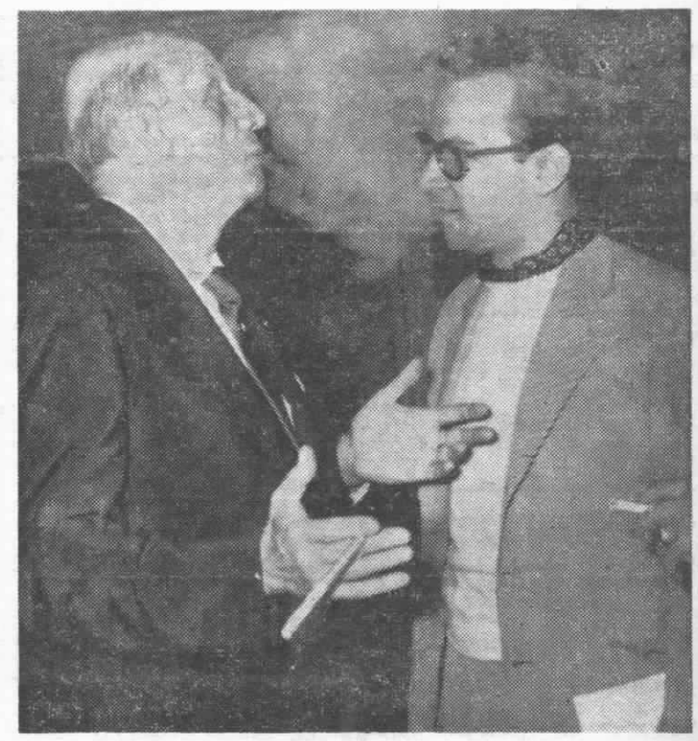
Ο ΔΗΜΗΤΡΗΣ ΜΗΤΡΟΠΟΥΛΟΣ ΚΑΤΩ ΑΠΟ ΤΟ ΠΟΝΤΙΟΥΜ

Μιὰ ἀποκλειστικὴ συνέντευξη τοῦ μεγάλου Ἕλληνα μαέστρου πρὸς τὸν «Ταχυδρόμο»

«Φθάνω ἀπόψε 22.30 μὲ Sabena. Σάμουελ Μπάριμπερ».

Μὲ αὐτὲς τὶς λέξεις ἔφθασε ἀπὸ τὴν Βιέννη ἕνα τηλεγράφημα, τὸ ἀπόγευμα τοῦ προπερασμένου Σαββάτου, 30 Αὐγούστου, μὲ παραλήπτη τὴν γνωστὴ Ἀθηναία κ. Καίτη Κατσογιάννη ποὺ διαμένει σὲ μιὰ ἔπαυλι στὴν Κηφισιά. Στὴν ὡρισμένη ὥρα ἕνα ταξὶ μὲ τὴν κυρία Κατσογιάννη περίμενε στὸ ἀεροδρόμιο γιὰ νὰ παραλάβῃ ὄχι τὸν διάσημο Ἀμερικανὸ συνθέτη Σάμουελ Μπάριμπερ, ἀλλὰ τὸν διάσημο Ἕλληνα μαέστρο Δημήτρη Μητρόπουλο, ποὺ περιέργως ἔφθανε στὴν Ἀθήνα, ἔτσι ἀθόρυβα δύο ἡμέρες νωρίτερα ἀπ' ὅ,τι ἀνεμένετο. Τί εἶχε συμβῆ;

—Ἤμουν πολὺ κουρασμένος ἀπὸ τὶς συναυλίες τοῦ Σάλτσμπουργκ καὶ τῆς Βιέννης — ἐξηγεῖ ὁ Δημήτρης Μητρόπουλος — γι' αὐτὸ σκέφθηκα νάρθω δυὸ μέρες νωρίτερα, ἔτσι ἀθόρυβα, χωρὶς φλάς, χωρὶς δημοσιογραφικὲς καὶ ἄλλες ὑποδοχές, ὥστε νὰ βρισκόμουν μὲ τὶς δυνάμεις μου ἀνανεωμένες γιὰ τὶς 4 συναυλίες ποὺ εἶχα νὰ διευθύνω στὴν Ἀθήνα. Οὔτε τὸ τηλεγραφεῖο δὲν ἤθελα νὰ γνωρίζῃ τὴν ἄφιξή μου γι' αὐτὸ ἔστειλα συνθηματικὸ τηλεγράφημα στὴν ἀγαπητή μου φίλη κ. Κατσογιάννη, ἡ ὁποία ἦταν καὶ ἡ μόνη ποὺ ἤξερε ὅ,τι τὸ «Μπάριμπερ» σημαίνει Μητρόπουλος.



Ἀλλὰ ἐνῷ ὅλα εἶχαν μελετηθῆ μὲ τόση ἀκρίβεια ὥστε κανεὶς ἄλλος νὰ μὴ μάθῃ τὴν πρόωρη ἄφιξη τοῦ Δημήτρη Μητρόπουλου στὴν Ἀθήνα — ἐκτὸς ἀπὸ τὴν κ. Κατσογιάννη ποὺ θὰ τὸν φιλοξενοῦσε στὴν ἔπαυλί της στὴν Κηφισιὰ — τὸ «μυστικὸ» διέρρευσε τὴν ἑπομένη τὸ πρωῒ ὡς τὰ δημοσιογραφικὰ γραφεῖα: Ὁ Μητρόπουλος εἶχε ἀναγνωρισθῆ, παρὰ τὶς προφυλάξεις του, ἀπὸ τοὺς ὑπαλλήλους τοῦ ἀεροδρομίου. Τότε ἄρχισε ὁ «μεγάλος ἀγώνας» τῶν θεατρικῶν ρεπόρτερς γιὰ τὴν ἀνακάλυψή του κι' ἐπειδὴ ἦταν γνωστὸ ὅτι ὁ μεγάλος μαέστρος φιλοξενεῖται πάντα στὴν ἔπαυλι Κατσογιάννη τῆς Κηφισιᾶς ὅταν φθάνῃ στὴν Ἀθήνα, ἡ πολιορκία τῆς ἐπαύλεως ἀπὸ τοὺς δημοσιογράφους ὑπῆρξε ἀναπόφευκτη...

— Σᾶς εἶπαν ψέματα — ἀπαντοῦσαν στὶς ἐκκλήσεις τῶν δημοσιογράφων νὰ δοῦν τὸν μαέστρο, ἡ κ. Καίτη Κατσογιάννη καὶ ἡ ἀδελφή της — δὲν μένει ἐδῶ ὁ Μητρόπουλος. Δὲν ἤρθε ἀκόμα. Τὸν περιμένουμε τὴν Δευτέρα...

Ἐπέμειναν οἱ δημοσιογράφοι νὰ δοῦν τὸν Μητρόπουλο, ἀλλὰ περισσότερο ἐπέμεναν οἱ ἀδελφὲς Κατσογιάννη στὴν δήλωσή τους ὅτι ὁ Μητρόπουλος δὲν βρισκόταν στὸ σπίτι τους. Κατόπιν αὐτοῦ ἑπόμενο ἦταν νὰ λυθῇ ἡ πολιορκία καὶ νὰ ἀναπνεύσουν μὲ ἀνακούφιση οἱ πολιορκούμενοι. Τὴν στιγμὴ αὐτῆς τῆς ἀνακουφίσεως ἔφθασε καὶ ὁ ὑποφαινόμενος στὴν μανδροπεριτριγυρισμένη ἔπαυλι τῆς κ. Κατσογιάννη. Εἶχε σκοτεινιάσει καὶ οἱ σκιὲς τῶν πανύψηλων πεύκων τῆς βίλλας ἔπεφταν προστατευτικὰ ὡς τὴν ἀνατολικὴ βεράντα τῆς ἐπαύλεως. Τότε ἀκούστηκαν μερικὲς φωνές, ἀπὸ τὶς ὁποῖες εὔκολα μποροῦσες νὰ ξεχωρίσῃς τὴν βροντώδη χαρακτηριστικὴ φωνὴ τοῦ Δημήτρη Μητρόπουλου. Ὁ πειρασμὸς ἦταν μεγάλος καὶ τὸ δρασκέλισμα τοῦ μαντρότοιχου ὄχι καὶ τόσο δύσκολο. Σὲ λίγο βρισκόμουν στὴ φωτισμένη δυτικὴ βεράντα τῆς βίλλας μπροστὰ στὰ ἔκπληκτα μάτια τοῦ μεγάλου μαέστρου. Δίπλα του ἡ κ. Καίτη Κατσογιάννη καὶ ἀντίκρυ του ὁ γνωστὸς στὸ Ἀθηναϊκὸ κοινὸ νεαρὸς Ἀμερικανὸς μαέστρος

Ὁ Δημήτρης Μητρόπουλος τὴν ὥρα ποὺ παραδίδει στὸν συνεργάτη μας τὴν ἀφιέρωσή του πρὸς τοὺς ἀναγνῶστες τοῦ «Ταχυδρόμου», τὴν ὁποία καὶ δημοσιεύωμε δεξιά. Χαρακτηριστικὸ εἶναι ὅτι ὁ Μητρόπουλος ἄρχισε νὰ ὑπογράφῃ μὲ λατινικοὺς χαρακτῆρες καὶ μετὰ διόρθωσε τὸ ὄνομά του μὲ τοὺς Ἑλληνικούς.

Σὲ ὅλη τὴν διάρκεια τῆς συνεντεύξεως, ὁ Μητρόπουλος δὲν σταμάτησε καθόλου νὰ καπνίζῃ.

Ντὶξον. Σ' ἕνα στρογγυλὸ τραπεζάκι βρίσκονταν ἕνα μπουκάλι μὲ κονιάκ, δυὸ ποτήρια καὶ μιὰ φρουτιέρα γεμάτη σῦκα.

— Δὲν ἔπρεπε νὰ τὸ κάνῃς αὐτὸ — διεμαρτυρήθη ὁ Δημήτρης Μητρόπουλος ἀπευθυνόμενος στὸν ὑποφαινόμενο μὲ ὕφος λίγο θυμωμένο — γιατὶ θὰ δημιουργηθοῦν παρεξηγήσεις μὲ τοὺς συναδέλφους σου τῶν ἄλλων ἐφημερίδων. Εἶμαι ἀποφασισμένος νὰ μὴ δεχθῶ καὶ νὰ μὴν πῶ τίποτα σὲ κανέναν πρὶν ἀπὸ τὴν «πρὲς - κόνφερενς» τῆς Τρίτης. Νὰ μοῦ ὑποσχεθῇς τοὐλάχιστον ὅτι δὲν θὰ γράψῃς οὔτε ὅτι μὲ εἶδες, οὔτε ὅτι μίλησες μαζί μου...

Ἔδωσα στὸν μεγάλο μαέστρο τὴν ὑπόσχεση ποὺ μοῦ ζήτησε κι' ἐκεῖνος τότε μοῦ πρόσφερε μιὰ καρέκλα πλάϊ του. Τὴν ἴδια στιγμὴ τὸ πρόσωπό του ἀνέκτησε τὴν χαμένη ἡρεμία του καὶ σχεδὸν γελαστὰ μοῦ εἶπε:

— Καὶ τώρα θὰ μοῦ ἐπιτρέψῃς νὰ συνεχίσω τὴν ἐπαφή μου μὲ τὴν φρουτιέρα. Τὰ σῦκα εἶναι τὰ φροῦτα ποὺ μοῦ ἀρέσουν περισσότερο ἀπὸ ὅλα τ' ἄλλα, κι' ἴσως τὰ μόνα ποὺ τρώω. Ἀπὸ τὴν ἀρχὴ ποὺ βγαίνουν ὡς τὸ τέλος τους τὰ τρώγω μὲ πάθος.

Καὶ ἀφοῦ ὁ λόγος περὶ στομάχου, ρώτησα τὸν Δημήτρη Μητρόπουλο ποιὰ δίαιτα ἀκολουθεῖ καὶ διατηρεῖ πάντα δυνατὴ καὶ νεανικὴ τὴ φόρμα του. Ἰδοὺ ἡ ἀπάντηση:

— Τρώγω μόνο μιὰ φορὰ τὴν ἡμέρα, τὸ μεσημέρι γύρω στὶς 12.30 — 1. Τὸ βράδυ, τὶς περισσότερες φορές, δὲν τρώγω τίποτα. Καμμιὰ φορὰ ἕνα γιαουρτι ἢ ἕνα φροῦτο ἀποτελοῦν παράβαση στὸν κανόνα. Πάντως μόνο ἐδῶ στὴν Ἀθήνα μπορῶ νὰ γευθῶ τ' ἀγαπημένα φαγητά μου: φασολάδα, φακὲς μὲ σκόρδο καὶ ξύδι καὶ μουσακά. Ἤδη τὸ μεσημέρι μὲ περίμενε μιὰ ὑπέροχη φασολάδα!...

Ὁ Δημήτρης Μητρόπουλος ἐνῷ δὲν πίνει οὔτε κρασί, οὔτε ἄλλα ποτὰ — ἐκτὸς ἀπὸ ἕνα μικρὸ ποτῆρι κονιὰκ κάποτε - κάποτε γιὰ τονωτικὸ — καπνίζει μὲ πάθος πάνω ἀπὸ 40 — 50 τσιγάρα τὴν ἡμέρα. Προτιμάει τὰ «Γκουλουάζ - μπλὲ» καρφωμένα πάντα στὴν ἄκρη μιᾶς μαύρης πίπας μὲ ἀσημένιο στόμιο. Ἄλλες συνήθειές του; Φοράει πάντα μαῦρα ἢ μπλὲ σκοῦρα κοστούμια, ἄσπρα πουκάμισα καὶ πολὺ φαρδειὰ παπούτσια.

—Ἡ συνήθειά μου νὰ φοράω πάντα φαρδειὰ παπούτσια — ἐξηγεῖ ὁ Δημήτρης Μητρόπουλος — ξεκινάει ἀπὸ τὴν ἐποχὴ τῆς νειότης μου, τότε ποὺ φανατικὸς ὀρειβάτης σκαρφάλωνα στὰ βουνὰ μὲ τὶς φαρδειὲς ὀρειβατικὲς ἀρβύλλες. Σήμερα ἐξακολουθῶ νὰ φοράω φαρδειὰ παπούτσια, γιατὶ τὰ βρίσκω ξεκούραστα καὶ μπορῶ μ' αὐτὰ νὰ πατάω πιὸ σίγουρα καρφωμένος πάνω στὸ πόντιουμ ὅταν διευθύνω, σὲ σημεῖο νὰ μὴ χρειάζομαι πίσω μου τὰ προστατευτικὰ κάγκελλα ποὺ πολλοὶ μαέστροι τὰ θέλουν γιὰ σιγουριά.

Ὕστερα ὁ μαέστρος σηκώθηκε, ἔκανε δυὸ - τρία βήματα στὴ μικρὴ βεράντα καὶ σφίγγοντάς μου τὸ χέρι μὲ καληνύχτησε. Μαζί μοῦ ἔδωσε καὶ τὴν ὑπόσχεση νὰ τὰ ξαναποῦμε τὴν τελευταία μέρα τῆς παραμονῆς του στὴν Ἀθήνα.

Ἔτσι, τὴν περασμένη Κυριακὴ τὸ πρωῒ ξανασυνάντησα τὸν Δημήτρη Μητρόπουλο στὸ ἀεροδρόμιο τοῦ Ἑλληνικοῦ. Ἐκεῖ, μισὴ ὥρα πρὶν φύγῃ μὲ τὸ ἀεροπλάνο γιὰ τὴν Βιέννη, συνέχισε τὴν διακοπεῖσα συζήτησή μας.

Πρὶν ἀπὸ κάθε ἐρώτηση, ἐξέφρασα στὸ μεγάλο μαέστρο τὸ παράπονό μου — ποὺ ἦταν καὶ παράπονο πολλῶν συναδέλφων — γιατί, ἐνῷ εἶχε ἀποφασίσει νὰ μὴ δώσῃ συνέντευξη πρὶν ἀπὸ τὴν «πρὲς - κόνφερενς» τῆς 2ας Σεπτεμβρίου, ἔκαμε ἐν τούτοις ἐξαίρεση γιὰ τὸν θεατρικὸ ρεπόρτερ μιᾶς ἀπογευματινῆς ἐφημερίδος, ποὺ δημοσίευσε στὸ φύλλο τῆς 1ης Σεπτεμβρίου συνέντευξη μαζί του. Ἡ ἀπάντηση τοῦ Δημήτρη Μητρόπουλου ὑπῆρξε κατηγορηματική:

— Σᾶς δίδω τὸν λόγο μου ὅτι πρὶν ἀπὸ τὴν «πρὲς - κόνφερενς» τῆς 2ας Σεπτεμβρίου δὲν εἶδα κανέναν δημοσιογράφο, ἐκτὸς ἀπὸ σᾶς. Οὔτε τηλεφωνικῶς μίλησε κανεὶς μαζί μου. Ὁ δημοσιογράφος ποὺ δημοσίευσε αὐτὴ τὴν δῆθεν συνέντευξή μου, μὲ ἐζήτησε στὸ τηλέφωνο, πλὴν ὅμως δὲν τοῦ μίλησα ἐγώ, ἀλλὰ ἡ κ. Κατσογιάννη. Συνεπῶς τὸ παράπονό σας δὲν εὐσταθεῖ...

Μετὰ τὴν συντριπτικὴ αὐτὴ ἀπάντηση τοῦ Δημήτρη Μητροπούλου γιὰ τοὺς κατασκευαστὲς τῶν φανταστικῶν συνεντεύξεων, ἡ συζήτηση περιεστράφη γύρω ἀπὸ τὶς ἐντυπώσεις τοῦ ἄφθαστου μαέστρου ἀπὸ τὴν ὑποδοχὴ ποὺ τοῦ ἐπεφύλαξε τὸ Ἀθηναϊκὸ κοινὸ στὶς 4 συναυλίες του.

— Φεύγω πάρα πολὺ εὐχαριστημένος — λέει καὶ στὴ φωνή του διακρίνεις ἕνα τόνο συγκινήσεως — γιατὶ αὐτὴ τὴ φορὰ τὸ Ἀθηναϊκὸ κοινὸ μοῦ ἔδειξε τόση θέρμη, τόση ἀγάπη καὶ τόσο ἐνθουσιασμὸ ποὺ ποτὲ ἄλλοτε στὴ ζωή μου δὲν εἶχα δοκιμάσει. Ἀπὸ τὴν ἄλλη μεριὰ οἱ φίλοι μου καὶ ἰδιαίτερα οἱ ἀγαπημένες μου κυρίες Κατσογιάννη μὲ περιποιήθηκαν ἀκούραστα καὶ μὲ τὸ παραπάνω. Τὴ φορὰ αὐτὴ ἔφαγα ἕνα μουσακὰ ἀριστούργημα κι' ἀπήλαυσα τὸ θέαμα τῆς ἀγαπημένης μου Ἀθήνας ἀπὸ τὴν κορυφὴ τοῦ Ὑμηττοῦ, ὅπου ἀνέβηκα χθὲς τὸ πρωῒ. Ἄλλες ἐκδρομὲς δὲν ἔκανα, ἐκτὸς ἀπὸ μιὰ σύντομη ἐπίσκεψη στὸν λόφο τοῦ Φιλοπάππου πρὶν ἀπὸ τὸ κοντσέρτο τῆς Τετάρτης. Βλέπετε, δὲν εἶχα νὰ διευθύνω μόνο τὶς 4 συναυλίες στὴν Ἀθήνα. Τώρα στὴν Βιέννη μὲ περιμένουν ἄλλες τέσσερις συναυλίες καὶ 4 ὅπερες ἀπὸ τρεῖς παραστάσεις ἡ κάθε μιὰ τους. Ἔτσι ἤμουν ὑποχρεωμένος νὰ κάθωμαι τὶς περισσότερες ὧρες στὸ σπίτι γιὰ νὰ μελετῶ. Σηκωνόμουν κάθε πρωῒ στὶς 6 καὶ ὡς τὶς 10 δὲν σήκωνα κεφάλι ἀπὸ τὶς παρτιτοῦρες. Ἀπὸ τὶς 10 ὡς τὶς 12 ξεκουραζόμουν λίγο μ' ἕνα περίπατο κάτω ἀπὸ τὰ πεῦκα τῆς Κηφισιᾶς ἢ μὲ μιὰ ὁριζοντίωση στὸ κρεβάτι μου, στὸ ὁποῖο ἀπαραιτήτως ἡσυχάζω μιὰ ὥρα τὸ ἀπόγευμα, πρὶν ἀπὸ τὴν μελέτη ἢ τὸ κοντσέρτο. Τὸ βράδυ, ὅταν δὲν ἔχω νὰ διευθύνω, βρίσκομαι στὸ κρεβάτι μου πρὶν ἀπὸ τὶς 11.

Αὐτὸ ὑπῆρξε τὸ ἐπταήμερο τοῦ Δημήτρη Μητρόπουλου στὴν Ἀθήνα. Ἀλλὰ ὁ διάσημος μαέστρος ποὺ ἀπερίφραστα ὁμολογεῖ ὅτι εἶναι λάτρης κάθε ὁμορφιᾶς, ἐξήγησε ἐν συνεχείᾳ ὅτι στὴ Νέα Ὑόρκη ὅπου μένει τὸν περισσότερο καιρό, βρίσκει καὶ μιὰν ἄλλη ἀπόλαυση.

— Λατρεύω τὸν κινηματογράφο — ἐξομολογεῖται μὲ παιδιάστικο ἐνθουσιασμὸ ὁ διάσημος μαέστρος — καὶ πηγαίνω πάντα ὅταν βρίσκω καιρὸ νὰ δῶ κάθε εἴδους φίλμ, φθάνει νὰ διαθέτῃ νέους κι' ὁμορφους πρωταγωνιστὲς καὶ πρωταγωνίστριες. Μὲ τὸν τρόπο αὐτὸ ἔχω τὴν ψευδαίσθηση ὅτι ἀπολαμβάνω ὅ,τι δὲν ζῶ στὴν πραγματικότητα. Γι' αὐτὸ καὶ θεωρῶ τὸν κινηματογράφο θαυμάσιο μέσο ψυχαγωγίας γιὰ ἀνθρώπους σὰν καὶ μένα ποὺ ξοδεύουμε τὴν ζωή μας στὴν ὑπηρεσία τῆς Τέχνης, ἢ σὲ ἄλλους τομεῖς, χωρὶς νὰ ἔχουμε περιθώρια ἀπολαύσεως τῆς ζωῆς ἐκ τοῦ φυσικοῦ.

Μαζὶ μὲ τὴν ἀδυναμία του γιὰ τὰ φιλοσοφικὰ συγγράμματα, ὁ Δημήτρης Μητρόπουλος δὲν εἶναι διαφορετικὸς ἀπ' ὅ,τι σᾶς τὸν παρουσιάζουμε ἐμεῖς σ' αὐτὸ τὸ ἄρθρο καὶ ἀπὸ ὅ,τι ὁ ἴδιος παρουσιάζει τὸν ἑαυτό του. Πέρα, ὅμως, ἀπὸ τὶς ἀδυναμίες καὶ τὶς προτιμήσεις του ὁ Δημήτρης Μητρόπουλος παραμένει ὁ θαυμάσιος ἄνθρωπος καὶ ὁ μέγας καλλιτέχνης.

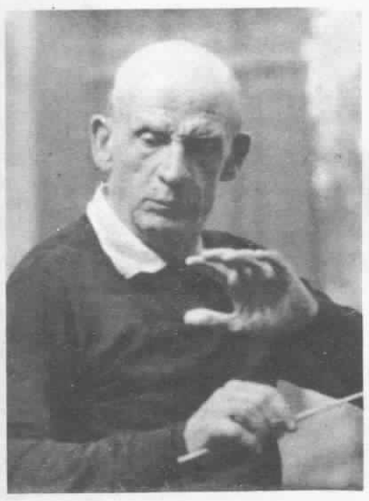
«Ο ΤΑΧΥΔΡΟΜΟΣ»

Ο... ΒΡΟΧΟΠΟΙΟΣ

Τὸν ἀπεκάλεσαν βροχοποιό! Κάθε φορὰ ποὺ ἔρχεται νὰ διευθύνῃ στὴν Ἑλλάδα, ὁ Ἀττικὸς οὐρανὸς θυσιάται πὼς πρέπει κάποτε νὰ βρέξῃ. Ἔξη περίπου μῆνες εἶχε νὰ πέσῃ σταγόνα βροχῆς. Κι' ἄνοιξαν οἱ οὐρανοὶ μόλις ἔφθασε ὁ Μητρόπουλος μὲ τὴν Φιλαρμονικὴ τῆς Βιέννης. Τὸ γεγονὸς εἶναι πὼς εἴτε μὲ βροχὴ εἴτε χωρὶς, ἡ μουσικὴ πανδαισία ποὺ προσέφερε στοὺς Ἀθηναίους ἦταν πολὺ μεγάλη καὶ ἡ ἀνάμνηση θὰ παραμείνῃ ἀναλοίωτη.



Ὁ ἴδιος ὁ Μητρόπουλος ἀποστρέφεται τὸ ὕπαιθρο. Σὲ συνομιλίες του δὲν τὸ κρύβει. Ἰσχυρίζεται πὼς τὸ Ἀρχαῖο Ὠδεῖο ἐπιβλητικώτατο, γραφικώτατο ἂν θέλετε, δὲν προσφέρεται ἀκουστικῶς γιὰ σοβαρὴ μουσική. Εἰς τὸν ἀνοικτὸ χῶρο δὲν μπορεῖ νὰ γίνῃ ἡ ἀπαραίτητη συγκέντρωσι καὶ τοῦ μαέστρου καὶ τῶν μουσικῶν τῆς ὀρχήστρας. Ὁ ἦχος διαφεύγει καὶ αὐτὸ εἶναι εἰς βάρος τοῦ ἀποτελέσματος.

Βέβαια, λόγοι εἰσπρακτικοὶ τοῦ Φεστιβὰλ προτιμοῦν τὸ ὕπαιθρο καὶ τὰ πράγματα θὰ πήγαιναν πολὺ καλύτερα ἀπὸ οἰκονομικῆς ἀπόψεως, ἐὰν ὅλες οἱ συναυλίες ἐδίδοντο εἰς τὸ Ἡρώδειον. Αὐτὸ πάντως δὲν σημαίνει πὼς ἡ μουσικὴ δὲν δεινοπαθεῖ ἔξω τῶν εἰδικῶν αἰθουσῶν. Καὶ αὐτὰ σὲ ὅ,τι ἀφορᾶ τὴν μουσική, τὴν βροχὴ καὶ τὸ ὕπαιθρο. Κατὰ τὰ ἄλλα οἱ Ἀθηναῖοι χειροκρότησαν καὶ καμάρωσαν τὸν διάσημο ἀρχιμουσικό, ποὺ μᾶς ἦλθε σὲ θαυμάσια φόρμα καὶ μᾶς χάρισε ὑπέρτατες συγκινήσεις. Ἔφυγε πάλι μακρυά, σκλάβος τῆς μεγάλης του φήμης καὶ τῶν ἀπείρων συμβατικῶν του ὑποχρεώσεων ποὺ τὸν καλοῦν στὴν Εὐρώπη καὶ στὴν Ἀμερικὴ στὰ μεγαλύτερα μουσικὰ κέντρα. Ἡ εὐχή μας εἶναι νὰ τὸν ξαναδοῦμε γρήγορα.

Ο ΟΜΟΦΩΝΟΣ ἐνθουσιασμὸς μὲ τὸν ὁποῖο γίνεται δεκτὸς σὲ κάθε ἐμφάνισή του ὁ Μητρόπουλος, δὲν ὀφείλεται μόνο στὴν βαθειὰ μουσική του γνώση καὶ στὸ ἐκρηκτικὸ ταμπεραμέντο του σὰν μαέστρου, ἀλλὰ καὶ στὴν ὅλη ὑφὴ τῆς προσωπικότητάς του ποὺ καταακτᾶ ἀμέσως ὅσους τὸν πλησιάζουν. Ὅποτε ὑψώσει τὴν μπαγκέττα, ἡ ὀρχήστρα κυριολεκτικὰ ὑπνωτίζεται ἀπὸ τὸ ἔνθεο πάθος ποὺ κατέχει τὴν πλούσια ψυχή του.

Ο ΜΑΕΣΤΡΟΣ

Ο ΔΗΜΗΤΡΗΣ ΜΗΤΡΟΠΟΥΛΟΣ ΒΡΙΣΚΕΤΑΙ ΠΑΛΙ ΣΤΗΝ ΑΘΗΝΑ

Ἀσφαλῶς τὸ μεγαλύτερο μεταπολεμικὸ μουσικὸ γεγονὸς στὴν Ἑλλάδα, εἶναι οἱ τέσσερις συναυλίες τῆς Φιλαρμονικῆς Ὀρχήστρας τῆς Βιέννης, μὲ μαέστρο τὸν Δημήτρη Μητρόπουλο, ποὺ κλείνουν καὶ τὸ ἐφετεινὸ Φεστιβὰλ Ἀθηνῶν. Εἶναι τόση ἡ φήμη τοῦ μεγάλου μαέστρου, ὥστε καὶ μόνο ἡ ἀναγγελία μιᾶς συναυλίας του προκαλεῖ πραγματικὸ συναγερμὸ στοὺς φιλομούσους κύκλους σ' ὅλα τὰ μέρη τῆς γῆς. Ἡ ἐφετεινὴ περιοδεία του στὴ Νότιο Ἀμερική, στὸ Ἰσραὴλ (ὅπου ἔδωσε 20 συναυλίες) καὶ στὴν Εὐρώπη, ξεπέρασε κάθε προηγούμενο θρίαμβο. Ὁ Μητρόπουλος, ἀκριβῶς γιὰ ν' ἀνταποκριθῆ στὶς ἀπαιτήσεις τοῦ διεθνοῦς κοινοῦ, παραιτήθηκε πρὸ ὀλίγου ἀπὸ τὴ διεύθυνση τῆς Φιλαρμονικῆς τῆς Νέας Ὑόρκης, τὴν ὁποία κατεῖχε ἀπὸ τὸ 1950, καὶ ἀνέλαβε περιοδεῖες σὲ διάφορα μουσικὰ κέντρα τοῦ κόσμου. Ἡ ἀπόφασή του νὰ ἔλθη καὶ στὴν γενέτειρα Ἀθήνα, προσέδωσε ἀναμφίβολα διεθνῆ προβολὴ καὶ στὸ ἐτήσιο Φεστιβάλ μας. Ἡ ἀποθεωτικὴ ὑποδοχὴ ποὺ τοῦ ἐπεφύλαξε τὸ ἀθηναϊκὸ κοινὸ ἦταν ὀφειλόμενος φόρος τιμῆς στὴ μεγαλύτερη μουσικὴ μορφὴ τοῦ τόπου μας. ■■■

Η ΜΟΥΣΙΚΗ ΕΒΔΟΜΑΣ

Ὁ Δημήτρης Μητρόπουλος καὶ ἡ φιλαρμονικὴ Ὀρχήστρα τῆς Βιέννης.

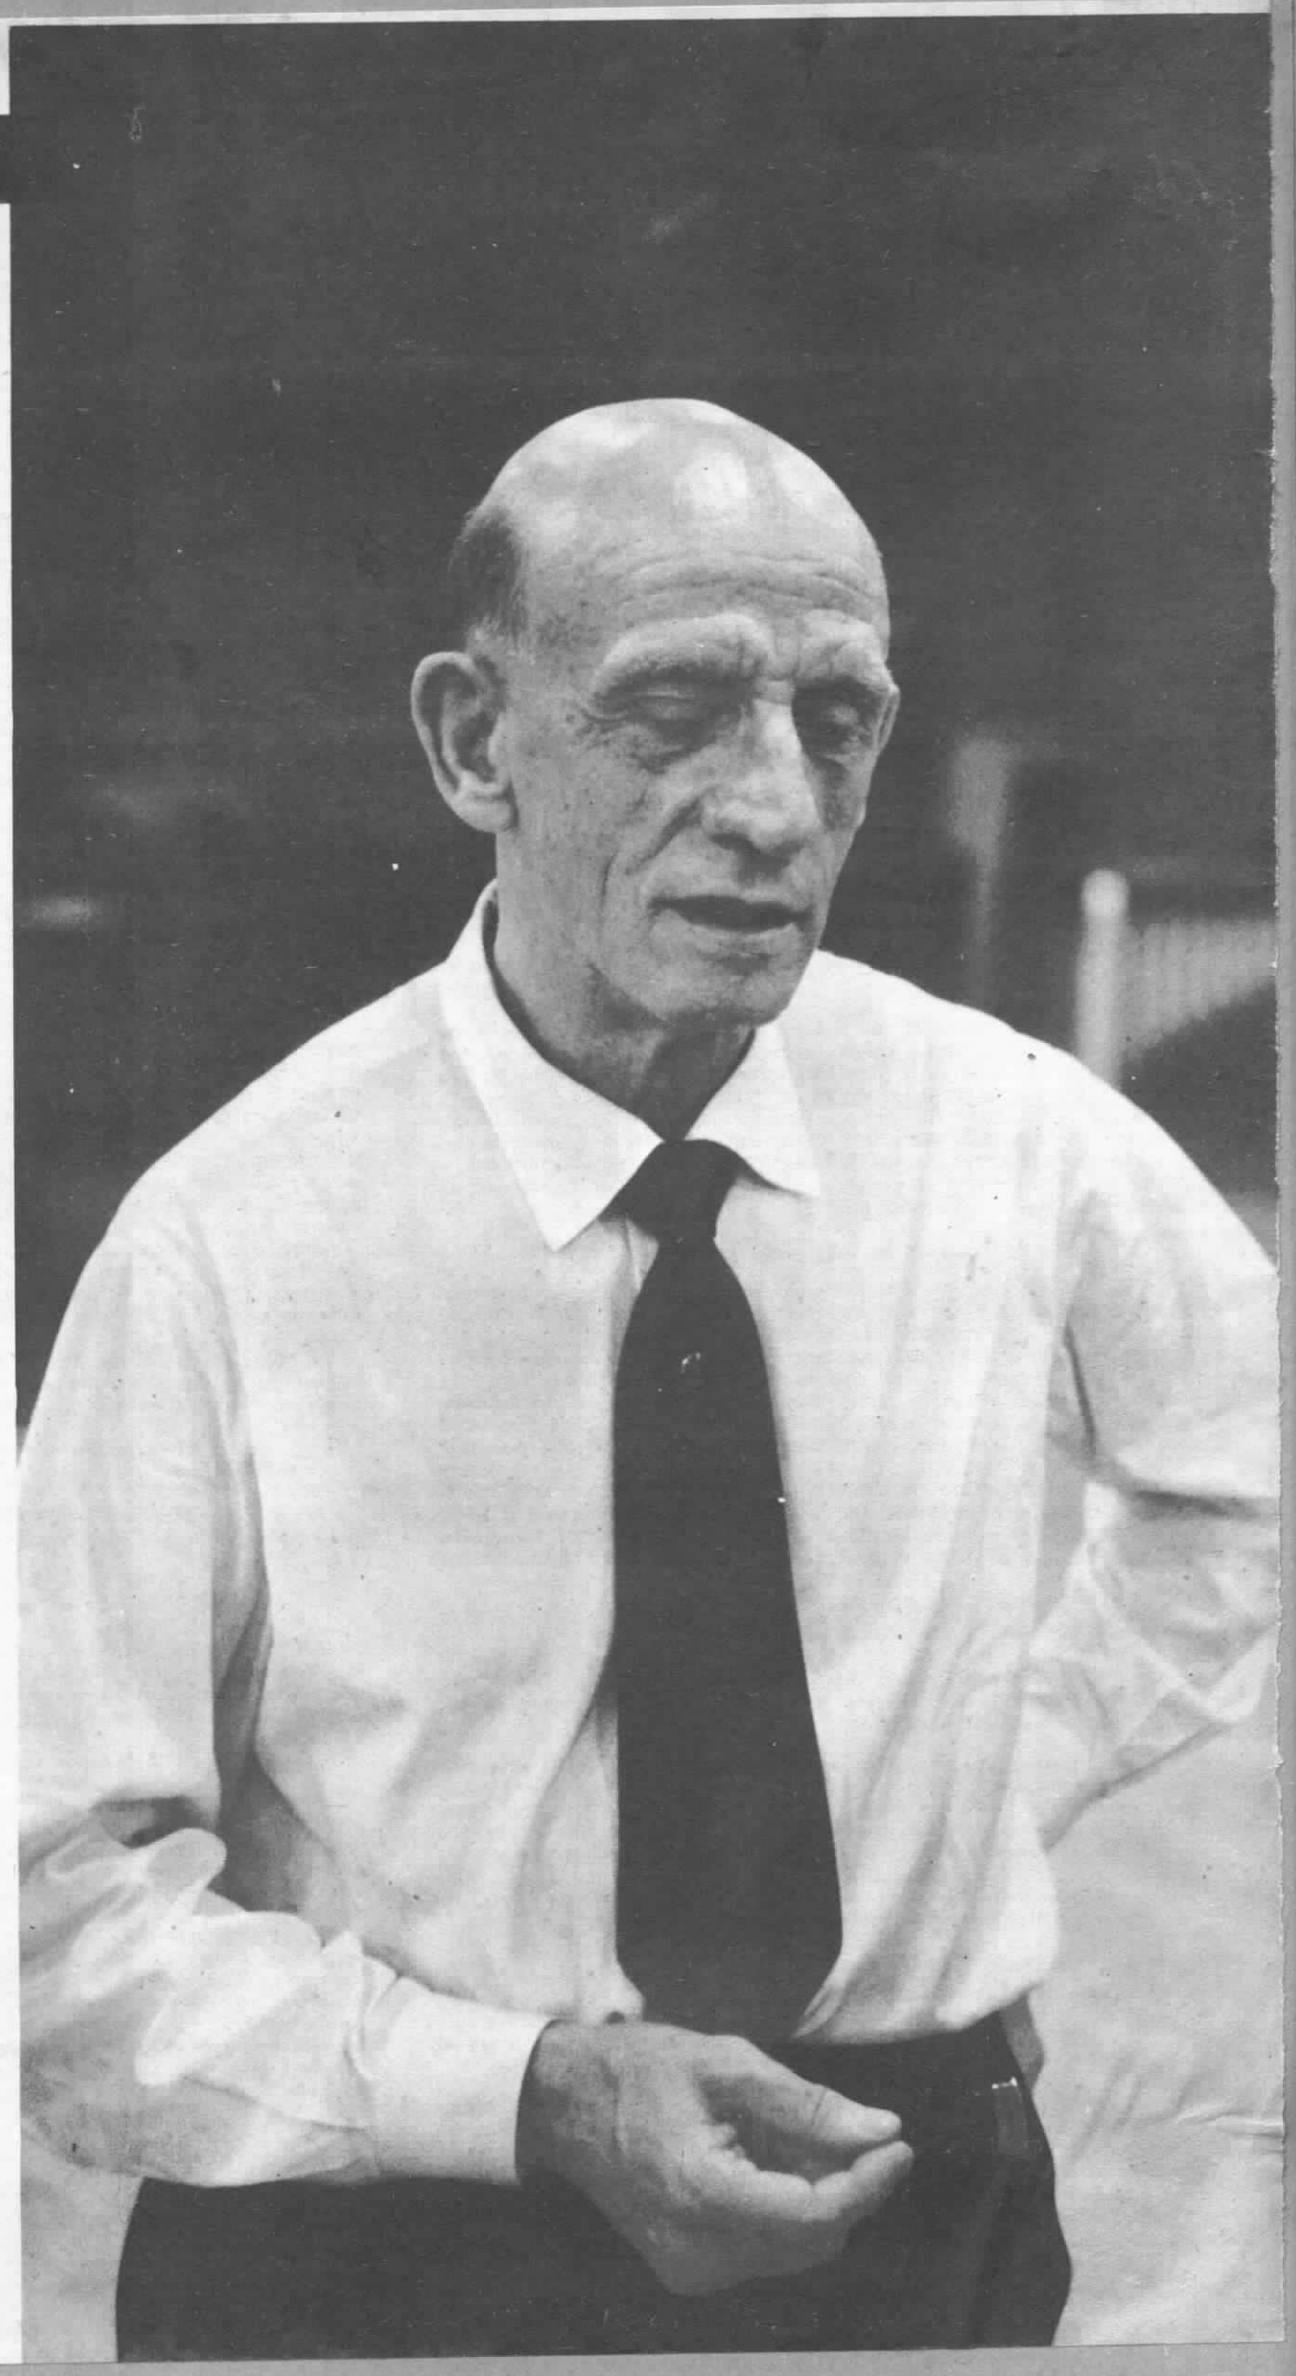
Ὑπὸ τοῦ συνεργάτου μας κ. ΜΙΝ. ΔΟΥΝΙΑ

Τὸ ἐφετεινὸ Φεστιβὰλ Ἀθηνῶν ἔφθασε τὸ μουσικό του κορύφωμα στὶς τέσσερες συναυλίες τοῦ Μητροπούλου μὲ τὴν Φιλαρμονικὴ τῆς Βιέννης. Παρὰ τὴν μεταφορὰν, ἐξ αἰτίας ἀπροόπτων καιρικῶν συνθηκῶν, δύο ἐκ τῶν προβλεφθεισῶν τεσσάρων ὑπαιθρίων συναυλιῶν στὸν ἀσφυκτικὸ χῶρο τοῦ «Ὀρφέως» — δυστυχῶς εἰς βάρος μιᾶς μεγάλης μερίδος Ἀθηναίων ποὺ ἔμειναν ἐκτὸς τῶν πυλῶν — ἡ ὀργανωτικὴ καὶ καλλιτεχνικὴ ἐπιτυχία, μπορεῖ νὰ θεωρηθῆ θριαμβευτική. Δὲν ξεύρω ποιὸ ἄλλο διεθνὲς φεστιβὰλ θὰ εἶχε τὴν εὐκαιρία νὰ παρουσιάση μουσικὸ γεγονὸς ἐλκυστικώτερο καὶ σημαντικώτερο. Δὲν ἀναφέρομαι μόνον στὴν αἴγλη τοῦ μαέστρου ἢ τὸ κῦρος τῆς ὀρχήστρας· ὑπογραμμίζω ἰδιαιτέρως καὶ τὴν ἐξαίρετη ποιότητα τῆς προσφορᾶς.

Ἡ ἐκλογὴ τοῦ προγράμματος στάθηκε σὲ ἀξιόλογο ὕψος. Ἀρχικὰ νομίσαμε πὼς ἡ δεύτερη ἔραδυὰ ἀφιερωμένη ἀποκλειστικὰ στὸν Στράους καὶ ἡ τρίτη στὸν Μπράμς θὰ ἦσαν ἐξαντλητικές. Τὰ πράγματα ἀπέδειξαν ἀκριβῶς τὸ ἀντίθετον, ἐπικυρώνοντας ἄλλη μιὰ φορὰ τὸν κανόνα πὼς στὰ ζητήματα τῆς τέχνης ἀποφασίζει μόνον ἡ ποιότης. Ὁ Μητρόπουλος μᾶς ἔδωσε στὶς μνημειώδεις ἐκτελέσεις του μία σαφῆ, ὁλοκληρωμένη ἐντύπωσι τοῦ συμφωνικοῦ ὕφους τῶν Στράους καὶ Μπράμς μὲ τὴν παραστατικὴ τομὴ ἀπὸ τὴν δημιουργία ἑκάστου.

Ἡ συναυλία μὲ ἔργα Στράους ἔφθασε σὲ ἀνώτατα ἐπίπεδα. Ἡ ὀργιαστικὴ αὐτὴ μουσικὴ ἀνταποκρίνεται ὁλοκληρωτικὰ στὴν νευρώδη εὐαισθησία τοῦ Μητροπούλου. Δὲν ὑπάρχει συναισθηματικὴ πτυχή, μελωδικὴ φινέτσα ἢ ρυθμικὸ σκίρτημα στὴν φαντασμαγορικὴ ὀρχήστρα τοῦ Στράους ποὺ διαφεύγει τὴν προσοχὴ τοῦ "Ἑλληνος μαέστρου. "Ἰσως ἐπειδὴ ἀφοσιώνεται μὲ τέτοιο πάθος στὸν κόσμο αὐτῶν τῶν κειμένων, οἱ ἑρμηνεῖες του παίρνουν μέσα στὴν δίνη τῶν ἤχων τὴν μορφὴ ἀνάγλυφης, κυριολεκτικὰ «ὁρατῆς», θά ἔλεγε, πραγματικότητος. Δὸν Ζουάν, Θάνατος καὶ ἐξαΰλωσις, Συμφωνία Ντομέστικα ἦταν ἡ ἀνιοῦσα εἰς ἔντασιν διαδοχὴ τῶν εἰκόνων ποὺ μᾶς παρουσίασε ὁ Μητρόπουλος. "Οταν ἔσβησε ἡ τελευταία φράσις της Ντομέστικα — δὲν ξεύρω γιατὶ τὸ ἔργο θεωρεῖται ἀπὸ πολλοὺς ἀνιαρὸ καὶ τετριμμένο — τὸ ἀθηναϊκὸ κοινὸ ξέσπασε ὑπὸ τὴν πίεσι συναισθηματικῆς ἐντάσεως σ' ἕνα παραλήρημα ἐνθουσιασμοῦ.

Σὲ ὑψηλὸ ἐπίπεδο στάθηκε καὶ ἡ ἔρδυὰ Μπράμς. Ἐδῶ τὸ περιεχόμενο τῆς μουσικῆς χαρακτηρίζεται ἀπὸ φιλοσοφικὴ διάθεσι, συχνὰ ἀπὸ μία αὐτοτυραννία τῆς σκέψεως ποὺ μόνον κατόπιν μακρᾶς ἀγωνίας φτάνει σὲ ἀπολυτρωτικὸ συμπέρασμα. Ματαίως θὰ ἀναζητήσωμε τὴν ἀγαλλίασι ἢ τὴν παραφορά, τὴν φραστικὴ δεξιοτεχνία τοῦ Στράους. "Ολα αὐτὰ ὑποχωροῦν ἐμπρὸς σ' ἕνα ἐνδόμυχο λυρισμό, ποὺ ἂν σποραδικὰ πέφτη σὲ μιὰ πικρὴ μελαγχολία ἢ βρίσκη διέξοδο σ' ἕνα τραγικὸ ξέσπασμα, στὴ βάσι του διατηρεῖ ὁλύμπια ψυχικὴ σταθερότητα. Ἦταν ἴσως φυσικὸ γιὰ τὸν ἐκστατικὸ Στράους νὰ μὴν βλέπη στὸ συγκρατημένο λυρικὸ πάθος τοῦ Βορειογερμανοῦ παρὰ μόνον μία «ψυχρὴ μίμησι τῶν Κλασσικῶν». Αὐτὴ ἦταν τοὐλάχιστον ἡ γνώμη του γύρω ἀπὸ τὸ 1900.



Ὁ Μητρόπουλος ἔχει ἐν τούτοις ριζικὰ ἀντίθετη γνώμη. Βλέπει στὴν μουσικὴ τοῦ Μπράμς τὴν ἐνσάρκωσι φλογεροῦ πάθους καὶ μὲ τὸ νεανικὸ σφρίγος ποὺ ἀκόμη διατηρεῖ, τὴν ἀντικρύζει μὲ πρωτάκουστο ἀναβρασμὸ ψυχῆς. Δὲν ὑπάρχει καμπὴ τῆς μελῳδίας, φωτοσκίασις τῆς ἁρμονίας, οἱαδήποτε μετατόπισις ρυθμοῦ ποὺ δὲν προκαλεῖ αὐτομάτως τὸν ἀνάλογο ἐκφραστικὸ ἀντίκτυπο στὴν ἀπόδοσι. Ἡ πυρέσσουσα ἑρμηνεία τοῦ Μητροπούλου εἶναι ἡ κυριώτερη ἴσως δύναμις ποὺ κρατᾶ τὰ ἀνὰ τὴν ὑφήλιο ἀκροατήρια του αἰχμάλωτα.
